I would suggest to you that what needs to happen is that you need to have a mandate, and the mandate is, in one case, thou shalt protect the environment and ensure that it is not compromised. Then you will have another organization with a mandate to build the economy, you know, to hand out money to the oil companies, to make sure that we've created jobs, to get energy to particular communities, whatever the mandate is. [interjection] What's that? Right. Was it Norman Wells? Right. That's fine, but if you've got one regulator horse-trading with itself, then what happens is that that fundamental mandate – don't do harm to the environment – gets compromised. What ought to happen is – you know what? – one regulator saying: "Our job is to protect the environment, and we can't turn the tap on until we know it's safe. Sorry."

Then what has to happen is that other strategies have to be developed around that mandate to get to the other issue of getting oil and gas up to Norman Wells. That's the way it should be because that's the way you protect the interests of both groups. If you horse-trade between yourselves there, then you're going to end up doing a bad job for both groups. That's the concern that I'm worried about, when you start mixing the mandates of different regulatory bodies, as is being proposed here.

In this particular bill one of the things that the bill purports to do is take away from the ERCB and move over to Environment the process of assessing – what is it called? – industrial development permits, which is something that the ERCB used to do. We're told: well, the ERCB doesn't need to do that anymore. It used to be that the ERCB would do that to make sure that particular industrial developments would not in a haphazard or irrational way suck all the energy into this one industrial development to the exclusion of the community, the municipality, or whatever and that the energy was properly distributed. That's what the ERCB used to do when it took a look at these IDPs.

Now we're told we don't need that because the market will fix it. Well, yeah, the market will fix it, and the market may fix it in that consumers adjacent to this new IDP will find themselves paying for water or some other source of energy at three or four times the rate that it used to be. Yeah, the market has fixed it, but it hasn't fixed it in the best interests of Alberta consumers, and that's why the ERCB was looking at it in the first place. So I'm concerned. I'm concerned that that's the way we want to go. I mean, I can think of a few industrial projects that might pop up adjacent to a water supply, for instance, which a municipality also relies upon.

Now, we're not looking at whether that industrial permit is appropriate anymore in terms of whether it meets the overarching public interest. We're just going to let the market deal with the outcome of that industrial development, and, you know, the community will just pay what they've got to pay. Well, I don't know that that's wise. I don't think that that's a good idea. I'm concerned about that because, again, what we're then going to do is we're going to take that process and it's apparently going to be partially replicated by the Ministry of Environment. I know that the Ministry of Environment does also assess these industrial developments, but currently they do it under a different mandate with different criteria, and it's not clear that the criteria are absolutely going to mesh when the Ministry of Environment is going through its process.

It really sounds to me like we're not taking a focused, rational, inclusive approach to ensure that best interests are met. We are blindly slashing and burning what we see as red tape, and we're not really thinking about what this means for the often conflicting interests in a particular community in the province between a variety of different groups. There's nothing wrong with there being conflicting interests. We don't have, you know, all the land in the world. We are, ultimately, going to have conflicting interests in terms of how we use and develop our environmental and natural resources, but we need to have a way of dealing with that that adheres to certain principles, certain priorities. By going through this process, we're just meshing it all together, and I don't believe that we have a refined, rational, well-thought-out system of prioritizing on behalf of Albertans.

That's the second concern, and that would have been one of the amendments that we would have made. We would have eliminated the provision that would have moved that function over to Environment from the ERCB without first ensuring that there was an entire making up for what we were losing by taking it away from the ERCB, which it's clear is not currently being contemplated in this act.

The second major thing that this act does, of course, is it enables in situ coal gasification processes. Again, that's fine. This is an area that has some potential. I think some people in industry and government are perhaps overstating its potential at this point. I think there are still a lot of legitimate questions to be asked about the future and the efficacy of this particular technology in the context of Alberta's future energy development. But it's certainly a promising area that, at least from a transitional point of view, may well be very valuable to us.

At this point what we have is two experimental in situ sites: Swan Hills, which received approval for an experimental scheme in June of 2008; and then Laurus Energy, which received its approval in March of this year, so really nothing has gone on there. We don't really know at this point what's happened in the last two years or three years nor do we know exactly where it's going. I'm a little curious as to how we did get those experimental sites approved if we're only now passing the legislation to enable it. Perhaps someone can let me know about that in the future.

At the end of the day my concern, again, with respect to this incredible potential development here is twofold. The first is that I don't see that we currently have an environmental assurance scheme that is adequately regulated or adequately resourced to oversee this grand development that is anticipated by this piece of legislation in a way that ensures the safety and the long-term sustainability of the industry and/or the community adjacent to the industry in this province. There are a number of legitimate issues and questions that arise with the in situ coal gas process, answers for which we do not have. We don't know yet exactly how this will implicate groundwater contamination issues. We haven't mapped adequately the areas that could be impacted through this process. We don't know yet what the process will do to ground subsidence in terms of what that will do, ultimately, to surface water flows and aquifers as well as ground infrastructure like roads and pipelines.

We don't know that yet, and I don't trust this government based on its record up to now to convince me that they are prepared to do the work that is necessary to keep us safe as we plow forward on this. We've got the enabling legislation to plow forward on this, but we haven't put an extra cent into the Ministry of Environment to make sure that we do it right. Quite the opposite. We've cut from the Ministry of Environment. So it's very clear that our intention is to plow forward on this without providing the adequate resources to ensure that we do it safely and responsibly in the best interests of all Albertans.

There are, ultimately, other land-use impacts that could arise from this process, which again we're not exactly sure what those will end up being. Then the whole question of air emissions. Yes, the greenhouse gas emissions from this process are about 25 per cent less than current coal production processes, and that's great. Twenty-five per cent is nothing to sneeze at. Down the line, 10, 15, 20 years from now – I can't remember what the Minister of Energy said one day in a moment of frankness – when we could actually expect to see something happening with carbon capture and storage, were it to actually happen, then carbon capture and storage has the capacity to reduce the greenhouse gas emissions more significantly.

Again, based on what we've seen this government do, based on the fact that we have copious numbers of tailings ponds around Fort McMurray where we have absolutely not one solution designed yet to deal with them, given that we develop first and then ask questions about the consequences later, my concern is that this piece of legislation is going to enable that rampant development without any of the answers to these important questions having been provided.

Those are the primary concerns. I guess the final concern that I will raise with respect to this bill relates to the section of amendments that address the Market Surveillance Administrator and provide to the Market Surveillance Administrator the opportunity to make complaints where they believe that the ISO, I believe, has adopted any type of rule that would impede the functioning of a proper market. I will say that this is a very complex area, and I'm the first to admit that I could easily spend six months learning about how all these organizations interact with each other. So I'm not going to get into an extensive discussion about this.

One thing that was brought to our attention, though, was that in that whole piece of legislation there ought to be some provision made – again, thinking to the future, not necessarily making it happen right now – for ensuring that we have an exception to that market rule where we might be looking at the whole issue of feed-in tariffs because, heaven forbid, even though this government right now is full speed ahead on a carbon only energy policy in the future, there may well be other people that will come forward that see the value in more aggressively pursuing a renewable energy industry in this province.

Feed-in tariffs are a component to that. Now, they're not a simple answer. There are cost implications to the consumer that arise with feed-in tariffs, and I'll be the first one to say that that needs to be fully examined and ways to ameliorate that need to be established before you go forward. But it is something that is a critical key to assisting in the development of the renewable energy industry, and the provision there does not allow for that to come forward.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for anyone for comments and questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on the bill.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I want to echo some of the concerns raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo as well as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. We have all noted that Bill 16 is a very complex piece of legislation that attempts to connect or tie together a variety of both energy and, on the other side of that coin, environmental concerns.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo pointed out this concern, and I just want to provide a little bit more background to it. Changes under Bill 16 to unify the gas and electric service standards are seen as helping to move along the harmonization of regulated rate option electric regulation and default gas supply gas regulation. The written decision of the Alberta Utilities Commission on regulation harmonization has not been released as of yet.

Now, I give the government credit, Mr. Speaker, for having hearings that basically began on July 6 of last year and ran through to November 8, and I am assuming that these intervention hearings were well publicized and anyone who wished to intervene had the opportunity to do so. Unfortunately, this all happened six months ago and the findings of the commission have yet to be realized. What we're doing today is that the government is asking us to approve the game without the rules. This happens, unfortunately, far too frequently. You know, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona said: trust us. That's frequently very hard to do.

I do believe, Mr. Speaker, in the intervenor process. I've been an intervenor when it came to natural gas increases. I was the last intervenor with regard to the Compton hearing regarding the sour gas wells that they wanted to drill faster within a kilometre of the southeast hospital. In that case the Compton hearing went on for almost two years. So trying to decide what is the appropriate amount of time can be a challenge.

The government, to its credit, allowed the process to go on. A couple of the major intervenors were the Calgary health board as well as the city of Calgary, and they put forward some very convincing arguments. I intervened on behalf of the Friends of Medicare. I was the Alberta chair at that time, and because the hearing overlapped with my election as the representative for Calgary-Varsity, I continued to pursue that hearing. The quote that sticks out in my mind from that particular hearing was that any chance of a sour gas release or explosion was the square root of zero, and that was said by one of the Compton executives. That kind of bravado makes you wonder about the interventions.

I also had the opportunity to participate in a Turner Valley environmental assessment that had to do with the area in which Turner Valley in conjunction with Black Diamond were creating a large retaining pool for their water. The complications that arose in Turner Valley – and it was quite a costly concern – were that there were not sufficient historical records as to where old gas and oil wells were located. It turned out that the engineering plans that were drawn up originally didn't take into account that there were actual wells in the midst of the water reservoir. So this caused great concern to a number of Turner Valley and Black Diamond residents. It was resolved. Again, to the Environment ministry's credit, expert witnesses were called, and the process provided constituents of Turner Valley and Black Diamond a degree of confidence because they had heard from a series of specialists.

Mr. Speaker, I give the government credit for having intervention processes and allowing people to participate in the discussion, whether they're amateurs like myself as a concerned citizen when it comes to oil and gas concerns or the experts.

Now, I share the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona's concerns about moving the oversight from the ERCB to Environment. I commented on one strong example of environmental oversight, and that was the hearings at Turner Valley. But I'm also very aware that the Environment ministry, because it is so short-staffed and underfunded, relies on industry to report problems. The example of the ducks landing in the tailings ponds: if that had not been, basically, witnessed by an independent citizen and then reported to Environment, it would have gone unnoticed.

This business of relying on industry to do the reporting, which frequently as in the case of the latest oil spill happened days after, when several thousand barrels of oil had leaked from the broken weld in the pipeline, and the concerns, as the hon. member indicated, with the folks from Norman Wells, who depend on that to create local energy, and the balance between the Lubicon nation, whose backyard was thoroughly interfered with by this major oil spill, is of great concern.

Now, another concern that has to be taken into account with Bill 16 is the balance between economic nonrenewable progress and environmental protection. I am hoping that this omnibus bill will start to equalize the standards. For example, the standard for reclamation for coal with the open pit mining, which I've witnessed in the area of Edson, is considerably stricter both in timelines and expectations than is the reclamation for the mining of bitumen north of Fort McMurray.

In the case of Edson they were very careful. They were required to set aside the topsoil and, basically, to the greatest extent possible recreate the type of environment that they disturbed. I would suggest that to a degree they even bonused it because when they put the soil back in those trenches with the open pit mining, there was sufficient soil to plant shrubs and trees that were common to the area, that were most likely to succeed and develop to maturity. Then because of the depth of the mining, when these areas were filled, they became little lakes that were sufficiently deep for trout to overwinter. So that was an example of reclamation, environmental expectations being realized.

Of course, north of Fort McMurray given the muskeg, given the peat bogs it's an entirely different circumstance. You can't restore the area to its original circumstance, but you can reclaim it, and the speed at which that reclamation occurs and certificates are awarded for that reclamation seems to be an awfully long process.

To the government's credit we wouldn't have the oil sands if Peter Lougheed back in the day, in the early '70s, hadn't provided incentives to companies to develop the oil sands. The government recognized just recently that they needed to provide similar incentives to nonrenewable energy sources. For a number of years the government had capped wind power, and they realized that that was kind of a regressive move, but the government has not provided anywhere near the types of incentives for clean energy, for renewable energy that it has provided for oil and gas and bitumen exploration.

So the government has a long way to go, and because of the complexity of Bill 16 I'm not sure that the incentives for energy development are inherent in this particular bill. I wouldn't want to use the expression "doubting Thomas" because it would potentially be associated with another member of this Assembly, but I will express some doubt as to the complexity of Bill 16 and whether it will achieve the balance that the Alberta Liberals have asked for in terms of sustainability and environmental protection as we move forward economically.

I want to just re-emphasize the point that I would like to see the same level of investment in nonrenewables as we move forward so that we can meet the world's demand when oil and gas, whether it's produced by coal or other means, is no longer as attractive or potentially as necessary as innovation improves our energy provisions.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to speak in third to Bill 16.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to speak on Bill 16 in third reading. I think this is a big bill, too, and it tries to amend a few acts. From the outset I was in support of this, but then when I read the whole bill, it gets complex as this act tries to create a framework for the Energy Resources Conservation Board to regulate in situ coal schemes in a similar fashion to conventional petroleum product deposits. It's trying to streamline the regulatory process for conventional coal deposit development. Further, it goes on to eliminate duplication in processes for investigative development that consumes large quantities of energy resources. I think that's a good thing, you know, if we're going to cut red tape and speed up the process.

That raises further questions about bringing on a boom and creating boom-and-bust cycles. How are we going to control the development? That remains to be seen. It will expand the oversight of gas distribution and default gas providers to both ensure systems safety and ensure consumer protection by harmonizing regulations with electric utilities.

It goes on to expand the oversight of the independent Alberta Electric System Operator by a Market Surveillance Administrator to ensure the safe operation of the Alberta electricity market. It's also going to reclassify downstream facilities that produce oil sands products as oil sands facilities to encourage investment in downstream activities beyond upgrading. So it will also bring some issues with the tax regime.

The bill is going to impact the amendments to the Coal Conservation Act and will create a regulatory framework for in situ coal schemes that will close a theoretical loophole that currently allows the operation of a scheme outside of the majority of the conventional petroleum regulatory framework. It will also create a regulatory framework for in situ coal schemes and may encourage investment, research, experimentation, and development that may evolve into more environmentally friendly alternatives to conventional coal used over time and, most likely, the generation of electricity.

It will also change the definition of coal in defining coal seams and may turn some marginal coal deposits from mineral resources to pore spaces, potentially changing the ownership if the mineral rights are owned by private interests and allowing the use of very low-quality coal formations as carbon capture and storage reservoirs. It is very important to raise this in the House, and I'm seeking clarification on this as well.

Eliminating the industrial development permits may allow irrational self-interest to overrule collective interests at times. For example, preventing the burning of ethane as a fuel versus reserving it for use as petrochemical feedstock may be more difficult under environmental regulations. Reclassifying downstream oil and processing facilities at oil sands processing facilities may change oil sands projects and create tax and royalty regime advantages, which may encourage more value-added industry to be placed in Alberta rather than in other jurisdictions.

This act, as I say, is a mixed bag, one that with amendments we could probably have made better. With the loss of industrial development permits, we'll lose an avenue for the rejection of large industrial facilities, that consume Alberta energy resources, by the Lieutenant Governor in Council outright under general public interest. That doesn't exist as broadly under environmental statute. This would be more significant if permits were ever rejected. While an Alberta Liberal government might wish to implement similar provisions that are being removed by this act, it is no significant loss to the public good under the current government.

The expansion of oversight by the independent Alberta Electric System Operator of gas distributors, gas default supply providers, and electric utilities will help to improve the function of the utility system as designed while increasing consumer protection. We might object to the fundamental design of the system, most notably permitted profit margins and distribution of capital costs among market participants. So it is marginal improvements to the existing system. A vote for marginal improvements is not a vote for endorsing the current system. This bill is trying to do much more, and I think it's complex. It just raises more questions about the tax regime, about the boom-and-bust cycle. I don't know. I'm just confused about this bill.

I'll leave it at that, Mr. Speaker. Thanks.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, do you wish to close debate?

Mrs. McQueen: No.

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a third time]

Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As you quite adeptly mentioned, I rise today on behalf of the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General to move third reading of Bill 19, the Miscellaneous Statutes Amendment Act, 2011.

Mr. Speaker, I'll just briefly review the list of all the acts that are affected by this particular bill. It affects the Emergency Management Act, the Family Support for Children with Disabilities Act, the Business Corporations Act, the Cooperatives Act, the Land Titles Act, and the Mobile Home Sites Tenancies Act. I think all of members of this Assembly know that miscellaneous statutes typically reflect provisions that are straightforward in a noncontentious nature.

I would encourage all members to support the passage of this act.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill 19 read a third time]

Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to move third reading of Bill 20, the Workers' Compensation Amendment Act, 2011.

I'd ask all members to support the passage of this bill.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Seeing that there is unanimous support in this House for Bill 20, I would like to call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 20 read a third time]

Private Bills Third Reading

Bill Pr. 1

Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Amendment Act, 2011

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed on behalf of the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move third reading of Bill Pr. 1, Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Amendment Act, 2011.

The Acting Speaker: Any members wishing to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Because of the nature of the private bills, that we are basically acting upon the requests of external organizations to let their will be done, so to speak, I would call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr.1 read a third time]

Bill Pr. 2

Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move third reading of Bill Pr. 2, Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act.

As just a bit of the history the Galt family had left money in 1913 to the old Galt hospital, and over time this money has been taken over and managed by the Galt nursing alumnae. This money now equals $144,000, and they have decided that it is time to transfer these funds to the University of Lethbridge for nursing scholarships. It's a wonderful gesture, and the Galt School of Nursing Alumnae Society are to be thanked and congratulated for keeping the trust of the Galt family. The Galt family, I'm sure, would be very satisfied.

I would ask that the question be called.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 2 read a third time]

Bill Pr. 7

Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2011

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move third reading of Bill Pr. 7, Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2011.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

Mr. Chase: Very, very briefly, and then I'll call the question. When my father retired from the services, he was a counsellor at Roper Hull Home, and I am very aware from my work with Children and Youth Services of the valued work that the Hull family services provides.

I'm very pleased with this piece of legislation and, therefore, call the question.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members wish to speak?

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 7 read a third time]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the business scheduled for today has concluded, I would move that we now stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:02 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, May 12, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier. And happy birthday, by the way. [applause]

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for your kind wishes. I wish to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly my family, and I'm going to go down in order of age: my wife, Marie; our son Les and his wife, Dr. Liza Stelmach, who is away; Ethan – give us a wave – Naomi; and then our son Terry. Seated next to him is our son Nathan with his wife, Carole, who is expecting in July, and, of course, our daughter Lynette with Michael. Her husband is working another shift at the Shell upgrader and couldn't be here. Thank you for all your support. Please give them a good traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my great honour to be able to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the woman who has stood behind our leader, Dr. Swann, and her name is Dr. Laureen Ross Swann. Please rise, Laureen, so that I may pay you some tribute. This is a woman of incredible strength, tough-mindedness, intelligence, generosity, great loving spirit, and patience for Dr. Swann, for all members of our caucus, and indeed for the political underpinning and process that we have in this province. I introduce to you Dr. Laureen Ross Swann. Please join me in welcoming her.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Ouellette: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's with great pleasure I rise today to make a very special introduction to you and through you to all members of this Assembly. Most of my colleagues know the very special woman in my life. Ms Jan Tremblay is seated in the Speaker's gallery. We all know how busy our lives can be, and to have such tremendous support and encouragement behind us is what keeps us trucking every day. So I'd like to send a big thanks out to the one who keeps me smiling. Thank you very much, Jan, and I would ask you to rise so all my colleagues can welcome you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it is my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Legislature my wife, Sherry Drysdale. Sherry is an amazing woman, and I'm honoured to have her join us in the House today as she wanted to witness our great leader's last day. Sherry is seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask her to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly an amazing class of students from the Veteran school. There are 21 students here with teachers and parent helpers. The teachers that are with them are James Matheson and Debbie Letniak. The helpers and parents are Marsha Tkach, Graham Schetzle, Darrel Durksen, and Melody Spencer. They're seated behind me in the gallery, and I would ask them now to rise and receive the welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a great honour for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members here in the Assembly four very special representatives from the pharmacy industry who are seated in your gallery. I would ask each of them to rise as I call their name and to remain standing until we've had a chance to say thank you to them: Donna Galvin, president of the council of the Alberta College of Pharmacists, from Okotoks; Greg Eberhart, registrar from the Alberta College of Pharmacists, from Edmonton; Margaret Wing, CEO, Alberta Pharmacists' Association, from Edmonton; and Jeff Whissell, chair of the Pharmacy Centennial Committee, from Edmonton.

Mr. Speaker, 2011 is a very special year because it marks the 100th anniversary of regulated pharmacy practice in Alberta. I know that everyone here wants to extend along with me a very sincere congratulations first of all to the Alberta College of Pharmacists, secondly to the Alberta Pharmacists' Association, and, of course, to all pharmacists for a century of outstanding service to Albertans. They have risen, and I would ask all members here to please join me in a resounding thank you and a warm, heartfelt thanks for being here and for what you've done.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is an honour to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly members of the southern Alberta irrigation districts. Representatives of the southern Alberta irrigation districts met today with myself, the hon. Minister of Environment, the hon. minister of agriculture, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, and the MLA for Cardston-Taber-Warner to discuss funding for infrastructure upgrades to the St. Mary River irrigation district system which would increase water storage and provide support for storm runoff during flood opportunities. I commend these gentlemen and am pleased to support them in managing their operations.

I would ask them to stand as I introduce them so that we can give them the warm round of this Assembly: Tom Crooks, general manager of the St. Mary River irrigation district; LeRon Torrie, chairman of the St. Mary River irrigation district; Keith Francis, main canal chair and chair of the Taber irrigation district; Kent Bullock, general manager of the Taber irrigation district; and Gord ZoBell, general manager of the Raymond irrigation district. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that we give them the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly three great members of the Filipino community: Rob Victoria, who is an insurance and investment consultant; Josephine Yee from Fat Jakks Asian Delight restaurant; and Phillip Aseron from Phillip Aseron financial services. They are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask that they rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all the members Mr. Patrick Cochrane, a STEP student working in my office for this summer. I've known Patrick since birth, and he's now a young, handsome, and scholarly student at Mount Royal University. He is the youngest son of my former neighbours, Mr. Dick and Mrs. Carla Cochrane. Please give him a great welcome to our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. First of all, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you a gentleman who was my chief financial officer and a very strong supporter in the last provincial election campaign, Mr. Derek Tsang. With him today is his daughter, Ashley Tsang, who was my absolutely key and staunch youth member and recruiter. With them today is Miss Cassandra Hutchings from Victoria, British Columbia. I'd ask them all now to rise to please receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, my second introduction today is of two people who, I'm sure, will be no strangers to this organization and certainly no strangers to the Progressive Conservative Party: Mr. David Despins, regional vice-president of the PC Party and a strong member of my board, and with him his mom, Mrs. Melida Despins, who is my board member and perhaps the person who has the greatest ability to tell me what she really thinks other than my mom. Both people are here today because they're very, very strong supporters of our Premier, and they've come here today to celebrate what may very well be his final day in this Assembly, so thank you very much. If they'd stand and receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today and welcome a large group of students from T.A. Norris middle school in Peace River, Alberta. They were running a bit late today, and I didn't get a chance to meet with them, so I'll take this opportunity to welcome them to the Legislature on this historic day and wish them all safe travels. I would ask that all the members join me in giving them the warm traditional welcome of the House.

The Speaker: Hon. members, this is a section of the Routine that normally provides for statements made by members of Executive Council and then responses as well. I'm going to exercise the privileges that I have vested in me as the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly to see two sections of tributes being provided today.

We have a unique situation in our province in that as we close this spring session of the Legislative Assembly and we look to the future, it appears that two of the leaders in the Assembly will not be returning to the Assembly this fall, when it reconvenes, in their capacity as leaders of their respective parties.

I think it would be very appropriate today if we heard some comments from a number of speakers in this Assembly. For the first segment I will call on the hon. Premier of the province of Alberta, and then I will ask for someone from the Official Opposition and someone from the third party and someone from the fourth party to participate, and then I will call on the hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations to begin a second segment.

Tribute to the Hon. Dr. David Swann Leader of the Official Opposition

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [applause] Thank you. I rise today in the Assembly to thank the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition for his many years of service to Albertans as the Leader of the Official Opposition. As we all know, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View has announced that he'll be stepping down as leader of his party this fall – that sounds kind of familiar – and when he does, it will bring an end to this particular chapter of his life of public service even though he will run for re-election again in Calgary-Mountain View.

The hon. member was first elected to this Assembly in 2004 and re-elected in 2008, and since 2008 he has been the Leader of the Official Opposition. Now, during his time as Leader of the Official Opposition the hon. member has shown himself to be an honourable, humble, and decent man. He is a man of deep religious faith, who is active in his church. That is something I understand, admire, and respect.

His career both inside and outside of this Assembly has shown him to be a man who has a heart for service, whether that was working in Africa in mission hospitals, doing public health work in the Philippines, raising issues of human rights across the globe, or serving the people of Calgary-Mountain View in this Assembly. He has spent much of his life in service to others, and we commend him for it.

Throughout his time as Leader of the Official Opposition, of course, we've always had some political differences and maybe have not seen eye to eye on many issues, but the hon. member has impressed me with his commitment to maintaining civil political discourse in the Assembly, and that gesture has been noticed and appreciated by me.

Mr. Speaker, I have spoken before about the sacrifices that all elected members make to sit in this Assembly. Sure, it's long hours, and many times we do it without complaint, but it is an honour and a privilege to serve the people of Alberta. We also know that the real sacrifices are made by our families. It is our spouses, children, grandchildren who truly have to sacrifice because of the long hours that we spend away from home and, really, a long time away from loved ones.

It is in that spirit that I'd also like to thank Dr. Laureen Ross. By the way, I can tell you how small Alberta is. I just found out from the hon. minister of finance that Laureen's dad owned a feed mill in Vermilion, and Dr. Ross and our daughter-in-law worked together in the same location in Calgary. So it is a small community of Alberta. We want to thank her for her continued support and dedication to her husband, who is an honourable member of this Assembly. We also want to thank their children and grandchildren for letting their dad, their grandfather serve in this Assembly.

I wish the hon. Leader of the Opposition a long life of health and happiness, and I urge all Members of this Legislative Assembly to show their respect to the Leader of the Official Opposition for his service to Albertans. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: On behalf of the Official Opposition the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Happy belated birthday, Mr. Premier.

Mr. Speaker, thank you to the Premier for those very kind words about a man whom I believe everyone in this Assembly and many, many more outside of these walls have come to admire. The Leader of the Official Opposition is known for his sincerity, his kindness, and perhaps especially his unparalleled commitment to public health and the environment. It's been said by many that perhaps the good doctor is one of those people that's too nice for politics although I think that in recent times we've seen the hon. leader toughened and honed by the crucible of question period, and certainly his language has grown a little saltier.

I've served with the hon. leader as an MLA since 2004, and over the years my admiration and respect for him have only grown, and I know my fellow Liberal caucus members feel the same. Once in a very long while you run into one of those truly great human beings, those people of integrity and principle who walk the talk. This man has travelled into hostile territory, risking life and limb to provide aid to some of the world's most desperate people. He put his own career at risk by speaking out for what he believed in. As a doctor and a humanitarian he has served more lives and in more places than anyone I have known. How lucky we are to have the privilege of serving with such a paragon of virtue, and I use that descriptor quite literally.

Albertans truly love and admire this man. I've seen it in their eyes, and I've felt it from their body language, from all strata of citizens and all ideologies and especially from anyone who has worked for him in his many roles. You even charmed me and reined me in, and that, sir, is no small feat.

My dear friend, it has been a tremendous honour to serve with you as a member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. You have been a credit to the office and an example to the countless Albertans who were looking for a different kind of politician. You gave us hope for democracy. Thank you for serving as our leader but, more importantly, as an example of honour and honesty in politics.

Thank you, Dr. Swann. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also am honoured to stand on behalf of the Wildrose caucus and pay tribute to the outgoing Leader of the Official Opposition. There is no question that the hon. member is a dedicated leader who served his constituents with integrity and courage during his seven years here in the Legislature.

Even before he entered politics, the hon. member stood firm on his convictions in the face of hostile opposition. He continued in this manner first as an MLA and then as the Leader of the Official Opposition. His legacy to the next generation of Albertans as leader will be one of hard work, dedication, and commitment, and we would all do well to remember this as we work towards improving our great province.

Passionate? He embodies passion. His list of service is impressive, and we would all do well to follow his example and give and care so much for the causes that we each believe in. He truly is his brother's keeper and has always put others first.

On behalf of our caucus I wish the hon. member and his wife, Laureen, the very best in the years ahead. Godspeed. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Leader of the Official Opposition came to this House having already demonstrated in his life as a citizen and as a public servant a commitment to speaking up clearly and courageously about things he believed to be important even if they were not always popular, and he has continued to do that here.

He has brought his passion about good health care in the province to debate in the Legislature and has been relentless in raising this issue. His training and experience as a physician have served him well in this regard, as his knowledge of anatomy has served him well in question period.

His personal integrity is unquestioned, and I admire his conviction that Alberta would be a better place if the government listened more to people's concerns. I thank him for his openness to work with other parties and members in the opposition to find common ground and to allow us to be more effective in challenging the government. Mr. Speaker, I've also noticed that the Liberal caucus Christmas videos have become much funnier under his leadership.

As I well know, leading an opposition party in Alberta is difficult and sometimes frustrating, and he has acquitted himself very well in this regard.

I want to thank Dr. Swann and his wife and his family for their collective contribution to public life in our province, and I want to particularly thank him as an Albertan who has acted selflessly and spoken articulately through the years. My best wishes are with him for what lies ahead.

Thank you. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My friends, thank you so much for these kind remarks on all sides of the House. Serving as Leader of the Official Opposition has been a supremely rewarding and challenging and humbling experience. When I think about how fortunate I've been to be elected to represent my fellow citizens in this great democracy, one thing comes to mind. We are all called to be leaders at times, and part of leadership is recognizing that this is service, public service. In a democracy every voice counts, and every voice must be heard.

During my time as leader I've tried to listen to Albertans, all Albertans, including the hon. members across the way. Sometimes I didn't like what they were saying and I didn't agree with what they were saying, but that's the heart and soul of democracy. We argue passionately because we care passionately about Alberta, and we struggle together to chart the best way forward for this society in this new world.

Through all of the trials and tribulations I've enjoyed and endured this House, and through it all my family has stood beside me. I want to acknowledge their perseverance and help. My long-suffering wife, Laureen, is here today, a wife of 32 years, the unsung hero of my life. As they say, behind every successful man is a surprised woman. No, she's not an unsung hero. She's a saint. She's always wanted to be a saint. She achieved it in my lifetime. Thank you so much, Laureen, for sticking with me through all of this. I'm standing here in front of all of Alberta saying: I love you. [applause]

Thank you again, to the Premier, to the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, my colleague, to the leaders of the Wildrose and the New Democratic parties, and to all of you for your good wishes to Laureen and me and our family for the future. [applause]

Tribute to the Hon. Ed Stelmach Premier of Alberta

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Ms Evans: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding Albertan, our beloved Premier, on this the last day that he will stand in this Assembly as leader of our government.

The hon. Premier was elected leader of the Progressive Conservative Party on December 2, 2006, and was sworn in as Alberta's 13th Premier on December 14, 2006. Prior to election as leader he served as MLA, Minister of Transportation, of Agriculture, of Infrastructure, and of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

He has earned the respect, admiration, and, yes, the love of his caucus. His integrity is beyond reproach, and his wisdom, compassion, and service to Albertans have been acknowledged by those here and far beyond our borders. People are impressed by the depth of his knowledge on many diverse subjects, and when they meet him face to face, all come away touched by his kindness and humility.

The Premier is very proud of his roots as the grandson of Ukrainian immigrants. We know of his love for his family: his wife, Marie, his three sons and his daughter, his joy with their spouses, and his pride in his four grandchildren. His decision to run for the leadership of the PC Party was inspired in part by the birth of his grandson Ethan, which solidified his desire to create a better Alberta for future generations.

He loves his farm, and we all know he wasn't too happy to give up his cattle when he became leader although he had long lamented that Marie likely had more experience in calving in recent years than he did.

Just as the Premier has made an indelible mark on our province, so too has his bride. Marie has been an active member of her community and enthusiastically accepted various positions with dozens of agencies across Alberta from the Canadian Red Cross to Kids Kottage. She accompanied our Premier everywhere and has been an angel among us. We will always remember the kindness and compassion of Marie Stelmach, Alberta's first lady. Thank you, Marie. Thank you. [applause]

There's not time here today to put into words what the Premier has done for Alberta. He did not seek applause or accolades; he just worked to make Alberta better, to make it stronger, and to keep us all safer. His vision is reflected in each advance that he led, a vision that in the case of the Premier's Council for Economic Strategy stretches out 30, 50, even 100 years from now, a bold idea that has sown seeds for the way Alberta could be with courageous leadership in the future. He wasn't satisfied with doing things by halves. He bravely pushed an agenda of positive change, doing more in his tenure than many leaders before him.

Since 2007 the Premier has carried out his duties in this House and attended over 1,400 events and delivered more than 1,240 speeches. He's travelled to every corner of this great province, including places no Premier in recent memory has ever been, places like New Norway, Carstairs, Wembley, Ainsworth, and several more like Beaverlodge and my hometown of Stavely, Alberta.

His support of rural Alberta and agriculture reflects the enormous pride in our farmers and ranchers. Consider also what he's done for education. He championed a five-year funding deal for teachers that further removed the unfunded liability of pensions and allowed for the focus to be on students and classrooms.

His bold vision for infrastructure was based on the belief during the economic downturn that it was the right time to build and to keep Albertans working. Under his leadership new schools, hospitals, health facilities were opened across the province, and our universities, colleges, and technical institutions grew both in size and reputation. We built more kilometres of roads and highways, many built through an innovative P3 model, something this Premier initiated with great resistance from others. He did it, and he brought it in to better connect our communities.

It was the Premier's vision for Alberta's future that led to Alberta Innovates, a system focused on solving the world's biggest problems with the best in research and innovation. As we see more growth in our knowledge economy, we will be seeing this Premier's legacy in action.

During the recession, when some called for deep cuts to social programs, the Premier was committed to preserving and growing the programs that protect Alberta's most vulnerable citizens. He passionately believed that every Albertan should have a home, a place to live in dignity. Today almost 4,000 more Albertans live in an affordable home and are receiving the support and the treatment that they need.

The Premier's vision for strong communities is reflected in the huge success of the safe communities initiative and increased support for the RCMP. He empowered local governments with the municipal sustainability initiative, the biggest boost local councils have ever had to fund their priority infrastructure projects. Our Premier also saw the soft spots in our fabric and reinforced support for communities with the greatest stress, Fort McMurray and Wood Buffalo, with the oil sands secretariat and a provincial energy strategy. In times of natural disasters he was there with dollars and moral support.

The Premier has challenged Albertans to define balanced and far-sighted policies for sustainable, environmentally superior resource management, and that's why we became the first jurisdiction in North America to limit carbon dioxide emissions through legislation and place a levy on carbon produced by the industry, resulting in year-over-year reductions in GHG emissions and over $250 million to support cleaner technology. His commitment of $2 billion to carbon capture and storage has been a world-class initiative, and the subsequent bitumen royalty in kind and value-added strategy will be meaningful for jobs for Albertans in the future as we continue to be a first-class world energy provider, a supplier, and a responsible environmental steward. Well done, Premier.

The Premier recently released the first of several regional plans that define lands for conservation and policies for the responsible management of industrial sites, and his love of the land and deep-rooted respect for landowners have guided this process and will set Alberta's land stewardship apart from all other jurisdictions well into the future.

One of the greatest challenges this Premier faced during his tenure was dealing with the worst economic downturn since the Great Depression. He displayed fiscal fortitude and developed policies to drive productivity and competitiveness so that today we're better positioned for the next boom.

The Premier has aggressively defended and advocated for Alberta's oil sands, and he introduced the concept of streamlining applications for responsible oil and gas projects. He's developed and nurtured relationships with elected officials and decision-makers to protect Alberta's energy exports to the U.S., including bringing U.S. Senators, White House officials, and legislators to Alberta to tour the oil sands.

He undertook international trade missions to China, India, and Europe to advance Alberta's trade and investment goals and has been a strong advocate for a new pipeline to the west coast that will greatly expand our markets. Mr. Speaker, right here at home the Premier championed the New West Partnership, an historic agreement between Alberta, B.C., and Saskatchewan, to create the largest barrier-free trade and investment market in Canada: 9 million people, $555 million.

Canadians have benefited from the dedication and vision of our Premier, as have the brave men and women, so near and dear to his heart, who serve in Canada's armed forces.

Within months of taking the leadership helm, the Premier went to work on initiatives to promote open, democratic debate and to increase transparency in this Legislature: four new all-party legislative policy committees, new conflict-of-interest legislation, and an established lobbyists' registry.

Mr. Speaker, a unanimous vote taken by our opposition in a private caucus meeting has been leaked to me. It has been confirmed that Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition has voted the hon. Premier the best dressed in this House. Their only question, confirmed to me, was: why has our Premier never appeared on the cover of GQ? A unanimous vote really is something to pay attention to, so we did.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I will remember these things and more about our Premier: his special grin, his famous giggle, his brave defence of what he believed was right. He never flinched when a flurry of attacks came his way. I know he truly loved people, all people in this House, particularly when we sought higher ideals for those we serve. Politics has a way of changing people. Not our Premier. He entered public life with integrity and honesty as his moral compass.

As this session of the Legislature winds down, we're all too aware that the next time we gather in this Chamber, it will be without the leadership of our friend, our Premier. I know I speak for everyone in expressing my deepest gratitude to our hon. Premier for all he has done. What an incredible honour it has been for me and for all of us to be a part of his team.

Mr. Premier, your mother and father must be so proud. You have honoured the name, the family name of Stelmach. We wish you, our leader Ed, full speed ahead and, in your words, safe travels.

Thank you, and God bless. [Standing ovation]

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, on behalf of the Official Opposition I'd like to extend my thanks and congratulations and best wishes to the Premier and his family. This man has devoted his life to public service. I think it's safe to say that I and all Albertans respect and admire the Premier's dedication.

When I was elected leader of the Alberta Liberals back in December of 2008, I knew that one of my very first jobs had to be to sit down with the Premier and hammer out a deal to clear the air in the Legislature. The Premier and I had a positive meeting about decorum and mutual respect and how the people of Alberta look to their representatives as role models. We agreed that from that moment forward Albertans would bear witness to a new atmosphere of respect, attacking issues, not people, and co-operation where possible. I enjoyed the consent of my caucus and pledged to end the traditional heckling, name-calling, and use of colourful metaphors, fondly referred to in Hansard as interjections.

If the members will turn their gaze to the ceiling of this hallowed Assembly, they might catch a glimpse of the stained glass window with rainbows and unicorns that has graced our presence since the Premier and I hammered out this accord, an historic accord to be sure. Well, at least that's how I wish things had turned out. As you know, Mr. Speaker, our good intentions lasted about five minutes. By the end of this session I surprised myself by hurling an anatomical reference across this aisle. How easily the passion of politics changes us.

In all seriousness, Mr. Speaker, while I may disagree with many of the decisions of the Premier, I've never once doubted his desire to lead Alberta into a better future. As a fellow grandfather and Christian and traveller on this Earth we have shared experiences that have helped us find common ground despite our differences, including his recent celebrated prayer breakfast.

I've been very moved by the Premier's obvious love for his family and for all Albertans. I'd like to think that I could call him up sometime and discuss the issues of Alberta. I hope he would be comfortable calling me up as well.

Premier, I hope that you and your wonderful wife, Marie, and all of your family have a wonderful future in your postpolitical years. Postpartisan years or postpolitical years? I pray for you all. A healthy and joyous retirement.

Thank you on behalf of the province. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I enjoyed that, and I think we know who won that deal they made.

I am pleased to stand here today on behalf of the Wildrose caucus to share a few words about the outgoing Premier. Mr. Speaker, leading this great province is indeed a tremendous privilege, something I know this Premier recognizes and did not ever take lightly. His time as Premier should serve as a reminder of the great challenges and personal sacrifices high office presents to those who hold it. This Premier served during a very interesting economic time in Alberta's history. Never did we doubt his intent in doing what he felt was right.

There is no one in this House, Mr. Speaker, who would claim that the Premier's job is easy. In fact, it may be one of the most difficult jobs that there is, and we hold the highest respect for this office.

When we talk about the sacrifices the Premier has made during his time in office, we cannot forget about his family, who also endured many challenges to support him through periods of emotional highs and lows, especially when he was required to be away from them. This bears heavily on loved ones, and for this sacrifice we will always be grateful. A simple thank you to his family is not enough, but I am sure the many fond and good memories will be.

To Marie: you have served this province with dignity and class. We wish you and your husband all the best in your lives after politics.

Thank you, Mr. Premier, and your family. God bless. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to join with others in this House and in the province to thank the Premier for his years of public service both municipally and here in the Alberta Legislature, and in particular for the heavy responsibilities he's carried in recent years as Premier. Although we were often in adversarial positions on debate around public issues in the province, I respect his energy and dedication to the things he believes in and his willingness to speak up and to work hard for them.

Public service is vital to the strength of a democracy, and we need models of people who are prepared to step forward and do their part. This Premier has been a role model for our youth in terms of the kinds of commitments that are necessary for our society to work well.

The Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville came into the Premier's office with an activist approach to his duties. He had things he wanted to get done, Mr. Speaker. The Premier was not content to let the province run on autopilot. He sought to find a positive role for government, one which would support safer communities and economic prosperity. He was willing to tackle difficult problems despite political risks. Although we differ on many of the policy decisions by his government, he saw that issues like natural resource royalties, infrastructure, health care, and homelessness are important questions that could no longer be ignored, and he tackled them without hesitation.

The Premier experienced some difficult challenges in his term. The significant economic downturn sidelined a number of plans and projects. It enabled the oil industry to blame the royalty regime for the economic problems in the oil patch when all along it was world oil prices that were really the culprit.

I want to pay tribute to the Premier's understanding of the legitimate and important role of the opposition. Under his leadership the role of the opposition was expanded, and its resources were increased.

Mr. Speaker, it's also important to express our deep appreciation for Marie Stelmach and her contribution. Her role is perhaps less visible than that of the Premier, but it is very important nonetheless. I want to thank her and her family for their contribution not only in support of the Premier but their own contribution to our public life.

I thank the Premier for his commitment to this House and to democratic government and to the people of our province. I extend my best wishes on behalf of my caucus and all New Democrats for some more peaceful yet no doubt very productive days ahead.

Thank you. [applause]

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier of the province of Alberta.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm truly humbled and moved by the kind words, and I really appreciate each hon. member for all the statements made. Thank you to the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations. Actually, I've got to mention this. When I first became minister, it was international and intergovernmental affairs, and I said: I'm not going to be responsible for affairs travelling around the country. We changed it to relations.

We all serve in this Assembly with the same goal, and that's really to ensure that the next generation enjoys a better life, a better quality of life even though all of us, especially my age, the baby boomers, have enjoyed an incredibly good life in the province of Alberta and the country of Canada. We were born and raised in good families, a stable economy, had electricity and running water. Well, not for the first two years, I think, did we have running water. But it was a good time because there were no external factors that played an important role in changing our quality of life in this country. The world is changing, and it's changing quickly.

I know that as elected members we all come here together: different ideas, different perspectives. We debate them. We may not agree at the end of the day on the decisions being made, but it is democracy, and as the Leader of the Official Opposition mentioned, it's really our role to represent our constituents and bring their views forward here and make a decision.

Being elected to office, obviously – and we all agreed on that – requires very strong family support. I'd like to thank Marie for her patience and support. [applause]

I'm going to share a little story that not too many people in this Assembly know. There are not too many people that have been married since August 11, 1973. And, remember, you only forget your anniversary date once. We first met at a wedding. Believe it or not, to show our love I used to pick her up in a one-ton Chev truck. Can you imagine anybody going to pick up his girlfriend in a one-ton Chev truck today? Maybe in the movies but not in real life. Also, to all of our children, who have all become very responsible citizens and are raising children of their own. Many of those years, unfortunately, as we all know as elected members, we're not there for them, but certainly Marie was.

It has been an honour and a privilege in this Assembly to represent my constituents. I have many fond memories of working in this House and also the late nights, you know, just working with all of the elected members both in opposition and in government.

The goals achieved by all of us in this Assembly, not just the Premier but all of us in this Assembly, are outstanding. I'm proud of a number of things, obviously, but first and foremost is the diversity of this Legislature, the people coming here from different backgrounds, different cultures, different colours, different countries. It speaks well for Alberta. [applause] Quite frankly, it is one of our greatest strengths because if we reach out to other markets, especially in Asia and South America, the representation that we have in this Assembly is going to help us access those markets and stabilize and cement a good quality of life for the next generation. [A baby chattered] I think Naomi is saying that I'm talking too long.

I also want to thank my staff. Some have been with me for 18 years, some for 18 months, but we have established more than a working relationship. It is like a family. We took care of each other. If I could just mention one person in the audience, Bev Homeniuk, who has been there from day one in the Vegreville constituency.

It wasn't easy. I remember, Mr. Speaker, in 1993, when we were making the changes, it was very difficult sitting in the office listening to people coming through when we were making significant changes, many times in the lives of many Albertans, to ensure that we worked toward balanced budgets and, of course, ensuring that we had a better quality of life.

There are two measurements, as far as I'm concerned, in political life. These are, perhaps, my measurements. One is to have your family at your side when you leave politics, and the other is to have your personal integrity. I think, Mr. Speaker, those are two very important measurements for all politicians either in this Assembly or across this great country to measure up to.

I just want to thank everybody for the kind words. We've together helped make a much stronger Alberta, and for that I am very proud of the contribution of everybody here.

Thank you so very much, and God bless. [Extended standing ovation]

The Speaker: You know, one of the options on a day like today is just to recognize the hon. Government House Leader, pass the motion, and we all go. Alas, I believe we're going to now move to the Oral Question Period.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: I'll call on the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition for the first Official Opposition main question.

Patient Advocacy by Health Professionals

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Lest this be confused for a baby boomer love-in, we'll get back to business. I'll challenge the Premier. I will step down if you do. [laughter] Well?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier?

Dr. Swann: No, that wasn't my question.

The Speaker: We do have a 35-second rule.

Dr. Swann: Albertans are concerned about health care. I thank the Premier for calling the Health Quality Council to review, and I agree that the Health Quality Council should review issues around emergency room wait times and cancer care. The Health Quality Council cannot, however, address the issue of intimidation of our health care workforce. Will the Premier call a public inquiry on the allegations of intimidation in our health care system?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I noted just a few minutes ago, I have great respect for this hon. member, and I know he brings great passion to this Assembly for all health care providers in the province and for all Albertans. He has done his job thoroughly and professionally.

I just want to reassure him that, yes, the Health Quality Council will continue to review waiting lists, improving cancer care, looking at other strategies to improve the delivery of health care in the province. I am confident that the review is independent. It will be thorough. I also as the Premier look forward to the interim reports that will come forward and to the final reports. I have great confidence in the Health Quality Council.

Dr. Swann: Given that key physicians have indicated that they're unwilling to participate in the Health Quality Council review, will the Premier concede that the Health Quality Council might not be able to give a full account of intimidation within the health care system?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe the Health Quality Council will do a good job in listening to all physicians or those that, you know, have alleged to have been intimidated. I think what we want to hear from everyone is: come to the Health Quality Council, explain the different situations, talk about how to improve the system. If there is intimidation anywhere, I'm sure that physicians that are on the Health Quality Council together with the good legal counsel that they have will bring about a good report and deal with this matter. I know the president of the AMA is travelling, talking to physicians. I do know that in putting those two together with the Health Quality Council, we will have a good report. We'll deal with this issue in all fairness to physicians.

Dr. Swann: Well, let me try a new tack, Mr. Speaker. Will the Premier encourage his successor to listen to the 30,000 health care professionals and call a public health inquiry to restore confidence in our system?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I will encourage my successor to ensure that Albertans have a good, publicly funded health care system and to continue on the good work that has been done in this Assembly by all parties: a five-year funding commitment, ensuring that we have very strict rules in terms of waiting lists, meeting the new guidelines. I'll also ensure that my successor maintains the commitment I made in 2008 to train more doctors and nurses, and we are meeting those goals by 2012. No problem about it at all.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Surgical Wait Times

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are for the minister of health. A tale of two cities' surgery wait times can best be described as, quote, the best of times and the worst of times. End quote. Where knee replacement surgery is done within 19 weeks in Bonnyville, it takes 69 weeks in Medicine Hat and 74 weeks at the Misericordia hospital in Edmonton. This is unacceptable. To the minister: how can patients have confidence in the health system when so much rests upon where they live in the province?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I suspect it depends much more on the severity of their need and on the consultation that they've done with their specialist. Let me just assure everyone that province-wide the wait times for hip surgery, for example, have been reduced by at least four weeks. There is a way to go yet, and we're aggressively pursuing that. The wait for knee operations has also been reduced by approximately four weeks. There are some challenges, obviously, but as we add more physicians and more specialists into the system, which we're doing, I think that people will start to see faster access and far greater reductions in wait times.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, the current target for knee replacement wait times is 42 weeks. Why is it acceptable to this minister of health that this target is being nearly doubled in major cities, including Medicine Hat and Edmonton?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's not at the acceptable level yet, but that's why we have under this Premier the fastest and most aggressive responses by budget, by plans, and by performance measures to health care in all of Canada. That's a legacy to the Premier we just saluted. We're making a difference, but it doesn't happen overnight, and I'm sure the hon. member would respect that.

Dr. Swann: Well, respectfully, yes, Mr. Speaker. The mismanagement of our health care system in Alberta has provided us the worst wait times in Canada in cataract surgery, in one case up to six years. What does the minister say to those losing their vision?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, actually, we've been looking at this issue quite a lot lately. I can tell you that we've added I think it's another 3,000 or so eye procedures just over the last short while to try and shorten some of those lists. But the discussion that we have to have with the ophthalmologists – and we're doing that – is: when is it that somebody formally and technically goes onto a wait-list versus a reservation list? That is something that is not easily answered, as we have all found, but improvements are being made, and wait times are coming down in the right way. The trend is in the right way, hon. member.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Deputy Leader of the Official Opposition.

Water Marketing

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta will face tough choices about water use in the coming years, but those choices should in no way include foreign ownership. This government has already sold our oil, and now it is flirting with foreign companies to sell our water. It's a very dangerous game, keeping the option of selling Alberta's water on the table. To the Minister of Environment. The minister says, "Not on his watch," but his watch could be over soon. So where is the proof that our water is protected? Where is the legislation? Where is it written that you cannot sell our water?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, any suggestion that water would be sold – and I'm not suggesting it; this member is, so let me make that abundantly clear – would require changes to our legislation. Those changes would have to be approved by the members in this House.

Ms Blakeman: No, it doesn't. The minister can do it himself.

Back to the same minister. Given that selling our water to foreign companies is contrary to action on conservation, what exactly was the minister suggesting when he stated in reference to the Nestlé comments that the formation of a market is an option?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I was referring to some of the documents, that have been part of the public domain for some time now, from three very qualified organizations within the province of Alberta that suggested that there may be some components of water allocation that would rely on certain aspects around a market-based system. But let me make it very, very clear that that doesn't apply to water that is necessary for maintaining a healthy aquatic ecosystem, and it doesn't apply to water that would be used to maintain human life and human needs within this province.

Ms Blakeman: Even an Alberta market still doesn't protect us.

Back to the same minister. Given that defining water in legislation as a public good would provide some protection against the sale of our water to foreign companies, why haven't the minister and this government taken that very simple step?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we have been talking now for some time about having a very honest-to-goodness public discussion around water allocation. The fact, whether this member wants to admit it or not, is that we have a fully allocated system in southern Alberta. That means that no new licences can be issued. There must be a process that we can agree upon to transfer some of these existing licence holders to new licence holders. That is something that Albertans need to have a discussion on, and this member doesn't want that discussion to take place.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Land Stewardship Legislation

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the government sent out a press release bragging about their amendments to Bill 36. The same day Rick Orman, a respected former PC cabinet minister, launched his leadership bid on a promise to repeal that very bill. He said that the law was unacceptable. Both Gary Mar and the former Justice minister have also promised to scrap the bill if they become Premier. To the Sustainable Resource Development minister: do you agree with what your potential future bosses are saying?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, there is no answer for me to give with respect to a question like that.

Mr. Boutilier: I'm not sure if that's a yes or a no.

Given the sheer number of lawyers from across the political spectrum who've spoken out against Bill 36 – Keith Wilson, Gary Mar, the former Justice minister, the members for Edmonton-Strathcona and Calgary-Buffalo, and my colleague from Airdrie-Chestermere – why are you ignoring such a broad base of legal opinion?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, I can tell you one thing. I have spoken to literally hundreds of Albertans across this province, and I have not found one – perhaps there's one – that disagrees with the fact that this is a busy province, a busy landscape, that we are growing by leaps and bounds, and this planning is forward-thinking. On behalf of the Premier I'm proud to stand here and say that we will continue with this project.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that PCs only speak out against Bill 36 and Bill 10 once they announce their leadership bids, and when they do, it's simply to say that they'll get rid of it, will you at least do your caucusmates a favour and your future boss a favour and, in fact, repeal the bill in this House yourself?

Mr. Knight: No.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The chairman of Nestlé has admitted that the for-profit market his company is discussing with the government to create a market will pit the water demands of big oil against the water needs of farmers and small business. He ought to know, Mr. Speaker, since he's also on the board of ExxonMobil. Will the Minister of Environment admit to Albertans that his government has gone behind the backs of Albertans to work with huge corporations to lay the foundation for a Nestlé-Tory water market that will benefit foreign multinationals at the expense of Alberta farmers and small businesses?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I indicated that I don't recall ever having a meeting with Nestlé to discuss anything that remotely resembles what this member is talking about. I asked my staff to go through my itineraries for the past two years. They confirm that I have never had such a meeting. So I say once again: put the conspiracy theories away. They don't exist. There are no such discussions taking place.

Mr. Mason: Well, then I'll go to the Premier because I think he might know. Given the fact that the chairman of Nestlé says that it has been in water market talks with this government and given that the minister has contradicted himself daily on the sale of Alberta's water, will the Premier agree to release all documents relating to its secret talks to enter into a Nestlé quick water market?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we'll release any documents the hon. member wants because there aren't any. There wasn't any meeting. Once again I'll make it very clear as someone that speaks in the Assembly who grew up in rural Alberta and is a farmer at heart that our water is not for sale. It's for growing our food in this province. It's for our generation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Premier's own council on economic development just released a report last week calling for the creation of a water market, how can the Premier stand in this House and tell us that there's not going to be any sale of water?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, again, most times the opposition tend to use the newspaper as their source of information and research.

In this case I wish the member had actually done that because, in fact, there was a story in the newspaper yesterday that talked about the fact that the gentleman in question was participating in a discussion that was hosted by the water institute. The water institute, as members have berated me on recently, was a free-standing institution within the province. That institute has become part of Innovates. They didn't like that. Maybe now they'll think better of it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Crime Prevention

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On Tuesday the Premier announced the release of the Alberta crime prevention framework, which is being described as a strategic road map for crime prevention. My first question is to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Since the safe communities initiative was introduced in 2007, why did it take over three years to produce this framework?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is correct in that the framework does flow out of a report from a task force in 2007, but it's not as if nothing has been done in the interim. Lots of action has been taken in terms of getting tougher on crime but, at the same time, taking a broader approach to fighting crime. I want to say that this all is mandated by the Premier, and as a new minister I'm very proud to have inherited the responsibility for moving this initiative along. It speaks to the Premier's vision for fighting crime on a long-term basis.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. My first supplemental is to the same minister. What assurance can you give Albertans that this approach will be successful?

Mr. Olson: Well, as I was saying, this is a long-term approach. Many of the initiatives that are being undertaken speak to getting to the roots of crime rather than just trying to put more people in jail. We're not afraid of putting people in jail, but in the long term we need a more nuanced, holistic approach. So there are many elements to this such as mental health, housing, literacy, many other things that we are attacking, and they are going to pay dividends in the long term.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. My third question is to the Solicitor General. What has your ministry done over the past three years to support the Premier's safe communities initiative?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to inform this House that the safe communities initiative has absolutely shaped and will continue to shape and guide my department for years to come. There were immediate changes: the Premier's initiative to hire 300 officers; we've added 110 probation officers; and we've integrated traffic sheriffs with the RCMP. A number of initiatives.

Going forward, Mr. Speaker, under the law enforcement framework we're producing infrastructure for a modern enforcement fleet with an API3 computer network, the radio network. We formed ALERT, ASIRT, a new college, and now we're ready to sign the RCMP contract.

Mr. Speaker, my department is focused on safe and secure communities, just as our Premier has been for his entire tenure.

Education Funding

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government first claimed that there wouldn't be cuts to education, then they said the cuts would be isolated, and then they said the cuts would be covered by utilizing their reserve funds. However, the truth is that this government has significantly cut funding, which will result in teacher layoffs, larger classes, and special-needs kids going without the supports they need. All the while this government stands by like a deer caught in the headlights, unwilling to act to correct their mistake. Accordingly, will the minister restore the grant funding to school boards in order that children will receive the quality education that they deserve?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, this government never said that it was going to cut funding to education. In fact, this government increased funding to education by 4.7 per cent this year, to $6.4 billion, which by any measure is a substantial amount of investment in the children of this province. Yes, when we brought the budget out, we indicated that we were increasing the per capita grant per student. We maintained the class size grant although we reformulated that to focus on K to 3, where it makes the most difference. Yes, we had to do away with some of the grants which were not achieving their purpose. Yes, that goes to the bottom line of school boards, and certainly it makes it difficult for school boards this year. Yes, it's going to have an impact, but we should be able to get through this year with our class size policy intact and, certainly, continue to have the best education system in the world.

Mr. Hehr: Well, given that Alberta has the highest dropout rate of any province, would the minister not admit that his cuts to grants, that have resulted in larger class sizes and fewer teachers in the classrooms, will not help him in eliminating this deficit?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, under this Premier's leadership this government has invested significant millions and millions and millions of dollars in class sizes over the last number of years.

Mr. Hehr: Under this government the minister has admitted that they're $110 million short this funding year. Will the government commit to restoring this funding to adequately fund our school kids?

Mr. Hancock: Every year this government looks at how much we need to invest to make sure that every child in this province has the opportunity to be the best that they can be and to maximize their potential.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Economic Competitiveness Initiatives

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the last three to five years we've seen significant changes across the world and have found out that here in Alberta we're not immune, but I would say: in what other place would you rather live? My question is to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Competitiveness is key for jurisdictions who want to continue to grow and thrive. What has this government been doing to enhance the competitiveness of our economy?

Mr. Snelgrove: Well, Mr. Speaker, internally Alberta businesses are among the most efficient and the most competitive in the world. We needed access to the world. Under this Premier's leadership he initiated the New West Partnership, that brought together our neighbours from each side, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, a population of 9 million hard-working people who together will have access to world markets with our very competitive business environment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is to the Minister of Energy. Given that not long ago oil prices were in a free fall and that natural gas prices continue to be in a prolonged slump, how are we managing to stay competitive in increased drilling activity, jobs, and mineral rights leases?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, shortly after the economic downturn in 2008 under this Premier's leadership we commenced something called the competitiveness review. There were two main recommendations that came out of that. As you remember, earlier this week in this House I tabled the work that's going to be done on regulatory streamlining. Under this Premier's leadership we changed the fiscal regime to the point now where last year we had record land sales in this province, we have almost a record number of wells being drilled, and the future in this province when it comes to competitiveness in the oil and gas industry is bright indeed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. We have a responsibility to Albertans, especially those with lower incomes and special needs and other vulnerabilities, to ensure that they have the same quality of life as all Albertans.

The Speaker: Yeah. But you can't have a preamble.

Mr. Fawcett: What is the minister doing to help these Albertans?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, every day this government is helping to support thousands of Albertans. I want to express my deepest appreciation for our Premier, who has made the support of Albertans in need and the most vulnerable a priority for this government. Alberta Supports is a visionary idea that is people-centred and provides a one-stop shop for information and supports in 34 programs and 120 services for Albertans. The official launch of Alberta Supports was just five months ago, but already we've had over 6,000 visits to the web portal and 25,000 calls monthly.

Though we're saying goodbye to our Premier, Alberta Supports will be his lasting legacy.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Continuing Care Costs

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Johanna Darwish was a resident of the Lynwood nursing home from 1994 until her death in '06. While preparing her estate tax returns, her son and executor, James, realized that the monthly accommodation charge Johanna had been paying was $800 higher than the price of her food, rent, and common area costs. Today we've learned that the Supreme Court of Canada sees the merit in the class action that

James and approximately 14,000 long-term care residents have brought. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: why must Albertans sue this government in order to get justice for those who built the province?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, obviously, the Supreme Court's decision will have to be reviewed, and it would simply be inappropriate for me to comment on anything that is before the Supreme Court. I think members here all understand how the rules work.

Ms Pastoor: I think that I'd like to know how we got to this point.

What guarantee can the minister provide that seniors in this province will not in the future be thus exploited?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, no one is exploiting anyone here. What we're doing is bringing in the most aggressive, the most robust health action plan, a vision and a dream and a commitment of our Premier, to improve services for seniors in their own communities, and that's what we're focused on doing.

Ms Pastoor: What should Albertans be expected to pay for continuing care for their aging loved ones? What should they be paying for?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of different packages, if you will, that apply in different circumstances. That is something that is available simply by contacting whichever particular long-term care facility or continuing-care facility you might wish to explore. In many cases it will cover some issues pertaining to medical needs, and others are to living and health-style needs. So it's all there. It's all available if you wish to look at it, and if you need help finding it, I'll be happy to assist.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Affordable Housing

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As we all know, the economy is bouncing back, and an increase in rental rates is sure to follow. My questions are for the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. The minister should be old enough to remember the last boom. I would like to ask him what mechanisms are in place to ensure that the housing built over the past three years stays as low-income housing.

Mr. Denis: Well, I want to assure the member, Mr. Speaker, that I am, in fact, old enough to remember the last boom. I'm sure this member is old enough to remember the first sitting of this Legislature about a hundred years ago.

I want to say that capital grants from my ministry, in fact, do provide for lower rents for 20 years, and our rents are 10 per cent below market rent for lower income Albertans but also 20 per cent for Albertans who have been homeless. Admittedly, we all have a long way to go when it comes to affordable housing and homelessness, but I am proud of our efforts, and I can assure you that we are on the right track as this program was started by the Premier in 2006.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I always say, older is wiser.

My next question is to the same minister. When external pressures such as condo conversions return and affect the rental market again, what checks and balances are in place to ensure that recipients of housing funding use it appropriately?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Older is often wiser, yes, but there are exceptions to every rule, I would remind this member.

I want to assure this member that all of our construction contracts work on a draw basis, so the money isn't provided right up front. It is provided over a period of time; it is staggered. If the expectations pursuant to the contracts are not actually adhered to as required by the contract, what ends up happening is that we can withdraw all or part of the money. That doesn't often happen, but that's important for good management of our tax dollars.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. With our seniors' population expected to exceed 500,000 by 2016, how are we going to meet the increased need for affordable supportive living accommodations?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, under the direction of this Premier we've had a long-term commitment to affordable supportive living housing for our seniors, providing over half a billion dollars for 10,000 spaces. One of the strongest visions that our Premier has expressed many times is to ensure that every senior in Alberta has a choice to remain close to family and friends in their own community when they need to go into continuing care. The Premier's passion for his own family has driven his vision of keeping spouses and families together even when the time comes for continuing care.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank this Premier for having the vision to prepare for the future.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Motor Vehicle Registry Database Access Fee

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government's current deficit is abysmal, and downloading their deficit onto municipalities and taxpayers goes against the Premier's promise not to raise taxes. The current budget raises taxes by jacking fees from 20 to as high as 300 per cent. Every time Albertans go to the registry this year, they'll be paying a lot more to help cover the government's excessive spending. To the Minister of Service Alberta. Your estimates show that you'll bring in an extra $77 million this year. How much of this is in the form of fee increases, and how much, in particular, is there in the new licence fee to charge municipalities for the lookup?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, it's going to bring in about $83 million, of which $12 million will affect municipalities, with a $15 fee for searches for delinquent photoradar and red-light tickets.

Mr. Hinman: To the same minister. Given that you are estimating $12 million in revenue for this new fee, will you please explain to the police and municipalities why your database is so outrageously expensive to run? It's starting to sound like a gun registry.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess at the end of the day it's really important to have technology to support the police in the work that they do. This is a system that runs 24 hours a day, seven days a week. We have to ensure that it's there for the police to use when they need it, so we want to make sure that the information is updated and kept there. We know that the access to information there is strictly to do with delinquent bills.

Mr. Hinman: That's ridiculous: a $12 million increase in one year. Given that you are saying that it costs $15 to get a name and an address and that Calgary has to pay a $7 million tax per year to use your system, how are the people of Calgary-Glenmore not to conclude that your government is once again downloading the cost of your incompetence onto cities, police forces, and individual Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the $15 fee it's very important that we make sure that access to the licence plate information is given to the police on a timely basis when tickets are sent out. That's why it's there. We also know that, again, going back to the system, it's the integrity of the system. We have not had a fee increase for nine years, so it's about taking the time now to do it and do it right.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

All-terrain Vehicle Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Every summer the use of ATVs causes too many accidents, injuries, and tragic deaths. A recent study estimates that injuries related to riding ATVs cost the Alberta health system more than $6 million a year. To the Minister of Transportation: why hasn't the minister, at the demand of health specialists and off-roading groups, implemented the much-needed legislation on mandatory helmets and banning drinking and driving?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt the hon. member is right that at this time of the year you get a lot more people out enjoying the wonderful province that we have here and the nature that we have here, and they go out and ride their ATVs. There's a lot more to this than just passing a law to say: you have to wear a helmet. When people are out there drinking and driving, which nobody condones, which nobody should be doing, do you think that because there's a law that says, "Strap on a helmet," they're going to do it? There's a lot more to it, and education is the answer.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think education is not working. To the minister again: why hasn't the minister initiated education programs and legislation specifically designed to target ATVs' more at-risk group; that is, 18- to 19-year-old men?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, there are a lot of programs going on. In fact, tourism is doing a pilot project in the schools right now for students from grades 1 to 12 to make sure that we're testing new ATV safety materials. We have more manuals coming out. We work every day trying to figure out what type of education will work. But let me tell you that a lot of ATVs are being ridden on private land, and we have no jurisdiction on that land.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister again: given that this issue has been raised many times in the last years, why isn't the minister acting to prevent these personal tragedies and this economic burden on our health care system?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, we are acting. We're acting by trying to educate people. We talk about it every chance we can. I want to give this hon. member kudos for bringing it forward in this Legislature. That's another way that people can hear that: "You know what? We're in ATV season. Let's be safe. Let's make sure our children are safe, and let's make sure that they obey the rules that are already there."

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Municipal Sustainability

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a former municipal leader I have to say that no celebration of the Premier's accomplishments could be complete without acknowledging the Premier's dedication to strong and sustainable communities. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: what are you doing to support the long-term viability and sustainability of municipalities in Alberta?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the government under our Premier's leadership has consistently demonstrated its commitment to building today for Alberta's tomorrow. The Premier initiated the $11.3 billion municipal sustainability initiative, a fund that has so far put $3.1 billion towards infrastructure and operating projects. Projects are chosen by municipalities, enabling them to build yet a much stronger Alberta. Albertans across the province are today enjoying new recreational facilities – roads, bridges, fire halls, just to name a few – thanks to the vision of our great Premier.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can the minister tell the House how the Premier's leadership has contributed to developing a strong strategy to plan for essential infrastructure and attract investment, in particular in the capital region?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the past few years the Capital Region Board has achieved great co-operative success on a historical long-term growth plan for the capital region. Just ask any member of the board. This could not have been accomplished without the guidance and direction of our Premier. The board is doing game-changing work on a number of regional opportunities that will benefit not only residents in metro Edmonton but all Albertans now and for many, many years to come. Many mayors thank me for that type of work.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Under Premier Stelmach's leadership what is your ministry doing to deliver on the Premier's commitment to building strong communities?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's a long list of accomplishments that our department has in fulfilling the Premier's commitment to families and communities: creating the Spirit of Alberta, our province's cultural policy with the four pillars of access, capacity, excellence, and cultural industry; providing a unique Alberta community spirit program that gave enhanced tax credits and donor dollars to 5,000 organizations, $53 million for voluntary, not-for-profit groups; strengthening our Human Rights Commission so that new Canadians can feel welcome in their communities; having Alberta Arts Days, that provide arts and entertainment and family-building activities through 681 events.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Surgical Wait Times for Children

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As its March 2011 performance report shows, Alberta Health Services continues to struggle unsuccessfully with reducing wait times for surgeries most important to aging Albertans: hip replacements, knee replacements, and cataract removal. Meanwhile there's a population for which delays in receiving surgery have dire, lifelong consequences. To the minister of health: what proportion of patients on the province's surgical wait-list are children?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't have an exact number, but I can tell you that what is probably more important right now is that those children who require the service are getting it within the recommended wait time. The last time I visited this issue, I believe I was told that they are.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm disappointed because I gave these questions to the minister ahead of time expecting to receive answers.

Given that a study recently published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal found that 27 per cent of patients 16 years of age and under received the procedures they needed well past pediatric Canadian access targets for surgery, what is the minister doing to reduce children's wait times specifically?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's true that the member did provide the questions a couple of hours ago, but it's just impossible to amalgamate as much information as would be required here within a couple of hours.

The short answer is that children are in fact receiving the care that they need within the appropriate time. In fact, 72 per cent of children do receive their surgeries within the recommended time frame. Alberta's two pediatric hospitals are also participating in the Canadian pediatric surgical wait time project, which will offer unprecedented access to data of the kind that he seeks.

Mr. Chase: Given that plastic surgeries such as that to correct cleft lip and palate are among the surgeries accounting for the highest percentages completed past target and given that cleft lip and palate surgeries must be performed at a critical developmental period in order to ensure optimal speech, can the minister tell us how long on average the wait time in Alberta is for cleft lip and palate surgery?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, with a couple of hours' notice it's difficult to get something very, very specific and that precise. But I would give the hon. member some credit for raising the issue because it will allow us to tell all Albertans that 63 per cent of the Stollery patients, for example, who are children, receive the surgery within the recommended target time. The national average is 25 per cent, so we're far, far ahead of the national average in that respect for.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Capital Infrastructure Funding

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under the Premier's leadership Alberta has seen its infrastructure investment grow to unprecedented levels. Can the Minister of Infrastructure explain why government has taken this approach?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, the Premier's vision and our mission has been to improve infrastructure across Alberta, a bold yet prudent approach. The Premier recognized the need to improve infrastructure, to address the infrastructure deficit, to address the pressure stemming from the incredible growth. In the midst of the global economic downturn our investment in infrastructure allowed us to capitalize on lower costs and to keep people working. Since the Premier took office, nearly $34 billion has been invested in capital projects.

Mr. Vandermeer: To the same minister: can you please provide more examples of where these investments have occurred?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, we are investing more than twice as much on infrastructure than any other province, and we are making a real difference in health and education and safety for Albertans. We are building 50 kindergarten to grade 12 schools, which means close to 16,000 spaces; more than 90 new post-secondary projects, 13,000 spaces; and currently 46 health facility projects are under way.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Minister of Transportation. Given that an effective transportation network is very important to this province, can the minister tell us what has been accomplished under this Premier's leadership?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I'll have to talk very, very fast because this Premier has accomplished so much that it's going to be hard to get it all in. I want to say that this Premier has always realized that transportation is the backbone of our economy and just how vital it is to Alberta's continuing prosperity. That's why this government has invested $19 billion in transportation in this Premier's tenure. This ongoing investment in all corners of this province has kept people working and positioned Alberta to meet future challenges, supporting industry and, of course, amazing communities. There is so much more.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

School Transportation Funding

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Premier, this afternoon I would like to ask the finance minister for a few dollars for some school boards that are struggling across the province. My first question is to the minister of finance. Given that school boards, including

Aspen View public schools, are having a great deal of difficulty making ends meet because the cost of gasoline and diesel is rising so rapidly, can the government please find some money so that those budgets can be adjusted to reflect those increased costs?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, one thing that we've learned from this Premier is that we listen to Albertans. The hon. member raises a very good point. We entrust the most precious commodity in Alberta every day to our school bus operators, and we want them to have the resources to provide safe transportation to their schools. I know they have been in touch with the Minister of Education and the Minister of Transportation, and we will do what we can to ensure they continue to provide that very necessary service to our children.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the minister of finance. Aspen View public schools calculates that they need an additional $317,000 to ensure that they can fully and safely transport their students. Will this government commit this afternoon to making the financial adjustment so that this can happen?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, one thing that we learned is that prices can go up and down quite rapidly. We've had a very, very steady hand on the financial purse strings of this province by a Premier who said: don't panic. We don't change everything after first-quarter results. We don't change everything after second quarter. We'll report it. We will watch the fuel prices. We will see if they stay at this high level all year long. Remember that two years ago they went from $34 a barrel to $147 a barrel in eight months. So prices can go down, and we need to look at it in the total year.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this has been done before whenever fuels costs have increased and that it's not unusual for this government to give contract increases – and I'm looking at the Alberta Gazette from last month, where we have seen a $6.4 million increase in contract amounts – if we have this money set aside for these contract amounts, surely we can find some money for school boards that need a few dollars.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, one thing that you need to do when you're dealing with large projects or anything is risk management. No one is going to accept long-term contracts if there aren't modifiers in the contract that reflect changes to the cost of doing business. That's just good business for both parties. We respect the work the bus drivers do, we understand the challenges that the school boards are faced with, and we will work with them on a go-forward basis.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the current session comes to a close and the Premier enjoys his last day in the hot seat, I think it's a good time to recap some of the important issues that were raised in this House over the last few months and years. One topic that has gotten a lot of attention is education, education in our schools and in our postsecondary institutions. Education is a key to our success and our continued prosperity both as a province and as individuals. To the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. We know that Alberta can't rely on its nonrenewable resources forever. What steps are being taken to build our human resources and foster a more sustainable and diversified knowledge base?

The Speaker: The hon. minister, please.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I'd like to thank this hard-working member for that great question. As important as our natural resources are, this Premier has always said that the most important thing in this province is our human resources. Everything that he has pushed for and supported is investing in our human resources. Within Advanced Education and Technology we have grown Campus Alberta and created new opportunities for young people, and the vision for Alberta Innovates came from this Premier. This is creating a world-class innovation opportunity and education opportunities for our young people.

Mr. Johnston: My first supplemental to the same minister: what are we doing to ensure that Alberta is educating enough of the skilled tradespeople? We need to take our ideas, apply them, build them, and put them to good use.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again we see that Alberta under the leadership of this Premier is starting to grow again, and we're seeing enhanced opportunities within the province. It is creating shortages of some workers. We see that looking into the future, we are going to need to train more, but we are doing that. With only 10 per cent of Canada's population here in Alberta, we are training 20 per cent of the apprentices. So we are doing the job. This Premier has created an opportunity for us to train the young people that will be needed to grow Alberta into the future.

Mr. Johnston: My last question is to the Minister of Education. What is the minister doing to ensure that we have a basic education system that will provide our children with the essential skills and learning opportunities they need to contribute to our province and a knowledge-based economy when they graduate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under this Premier we resolved a long-standing unfunded pension liability, which led to a five-year agreement and the best relations with teachers and the best relations with school boards that this province has ever had so that we can spend the time talking about the future of education, which we've done and we're implementing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Support for Agriculture

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We hear a great deal about promoting Alberta's oil and gas sector around the world, but we often forget that this province was built on and still has strong roots in the agricultural community. When you get outside the big cities, it becomes abundantly clear how important farming is to our province. In fact, there's an old saying that says: if you eat, you're involved in agriculture. That really is all of us. To the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations: how important is farming to our overall economy, and is she working with the agricultural community to increase their presence internationally?

Ms Evans: Mr. Speaker, our Premier has in fact opened up a lot of those markets, insisting that we pay attention to over 77,000 Albertans involved in agriculture. To do this, we have been doing more for Beijing and beef, we've been doing more in South Korea to press the case for Alberta beef, and we've even got beekeepers in Falher that are selling more honey in Japan because of the work there. There is a myriad of examples that I could use where we have increased our exports, and $7 billion of our exports are agriculture related.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you. My second question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. What new markets hold the most potential for Alberta's agricultural products?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are a number, but as the Premier said to me, it's not enough that we have the lowest tax rate both personally and businesswise and the highest investment in education and health care per capita of anywhere in the nation. We need to go out and get more markets so we can maintain that position. The Premier said to me: "There are 400 million Chinese under the age of 17. If we can just feed them a hamburger, away we go." The Premier said to me that there are a hundred million people in India that speak English. We need that market, too.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the Premier. How is Alberta working in partnership with other provinces to increase market access?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, a historical agreement with the provinces of British Columbia and Saskatchewan, which was referred to earlier as the New West Partnership, is co-ordinating and harmonizing all of our transportation routes and also working collectively to ensure that we have the pipeline capacity to the west coast, which will ensure greater access to Asia. I just think of the Premier's missions that we had. Shanghai: we now have opened an office that is jointly staffed by the three provinces. We're continuing to support the office in Beijing and have a new one to establish in India. These will all ensure that we have market access well into the future for the next generation. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the Oral Question Period for today. Eighteen members were recognized and 108 questions and responses were dealt with.

We now come to that point of the day under Standing Order 7(7), which says, "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." The Speaker chose not to interfere with the section in the Routine known as the Oral Question Period but now must ask the question. If we are to continue to conclude the Routine, we need unanimous consent of the members to do so. If we do not get unanimous consent, we hear a motion, and we go home. Just so you all understand this.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: We will now proceed with Members' Statements. Happy birthday to the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, who will be the first.

International Day of Families

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am honoured to rise and recognize Sunday, May 15, as International Day of Families. Strong, healthy, and nurturing families are the foundation of vibrant communities in this great province of ours. This year's theme for International Day of Families is Confronting Family Poverty and Social Exclusion.

With 10 per cent of children and youth in Alberta living in low-income households, we know that many families are facing significant challenges that affect their well-being. This government is committed to working with its community-based partners to ensure that families have the support they need to overcome those challenges and reach their full potential.

Mr. Speaker, creating strong families takes many hands working together. Everyone can lend their hearts and hands, either by supporting or volunteering with agencies that assist families in need.

I rise today not only to recognize International Day of Families and the importance of families in our great province but also to encourage all of us Albertans and all of us here today to celebrate and spend time with our own families this Sunday.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

3:20 Reliance on Nonrenewable Resources

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the next year Albertans will have the responsibility of making a choice between a green, progressive, forward-looking plan or a brown, backwards approach to Alberta's future.

A few days ago the Premier's Council for Economic Strategy issued a report that paints a bleak and unsustainable vision for the future. While Alberta is blessed with nonrenewable resources that have brought us great wealth, it is evident that carbon fuels are not the future. Yet this out-of-touch, out-of-ideas government endorses a brown future for Alberta.

The Premier's economic strategy turns Alberta down a reckless and unsustainable path, relying heavily on coal to power our future economy. The proposed centre for global energy's mandate is to make high-carbon energy more acceptable to foreign markets. They want to increase the use of coal as a power source. The idea that the PCs convince the world to keep using high-carbon fuels when it's already moving on to other alternatives is a disastrous economic future in the making. If Alberta goes down this path, promoting instead of moving away from high-carbon energy, this province will be left behind. This PC government is swimming against the tide of history.

Alberta's NDP wants to see this province become a source of solutions to climate change. Alberta can tap its vast stocks of natural gas, a cleaner fossil fuel, to phase out coal-powered plants and begin cutting emissions. Alberta has a wealth of renewable energy sources that we can develop and perfect: the winds of the foothills, our abundant solar energy, the geothermal energy beneath our feet.

Further, we have immense water resources, but those resources are under threat from climate changes as nurturing glaciers recede and dry up. Yet the Tories talk about opening a water market that could see our water exported. The economic council backs them, and the head of Nestlé, who also sits on the board of Exxon Mobil, is already talking with the PCs to get it under way. What it will do, in fact, is pit farmers against major oil companies, cities against industries, raise the cost of drinking water, and potentially send our water out of the province. The free market has its place managing an essential resource for life like... [Mr. Mason's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Red Deer College Athletics Leadership Fund

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Athletics are a key component of a vibrant college life, providing students with physical, social, and leadership opportunities. At Red Deer College an athletics leadership fund is being established with the goal of creating sustainability for athletic programs. The athletics leadership fund is a new initiative to provide teams, athletic programs, and student athletes support and resources that are sustainable year after year.

An exceptional donor, Doug Quinn of Quinn Pumps, has directed $250,000 to this exciting new initiative. Along with Jeremy Jablonski, chair of the fund committee, Melody Davidson and Mike Babcock believe in the initiative and support the committee as honorary co-chairs. They contribute valuable experience, Melody Davidson as head scout of Hockey Canada's women's national team programs and Mike Babcock as former RDC hockey coach and current head coach of the Detroit Red Wings.

Student athletes contribute to community spirit as they display leadership on campus and throughout our province, within their present teams, and in the future as employees, business owners, and leaders in our communities.

I am proud of Red Deer College athletes, coaches, and students as well as the athletics leadership fund committee for their excellence in representing Alberta values and their commitment to helping build a strong and bright athletics future for all generations.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Health Inspection Regulations

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to get on the record the fact that I believe our Public Health Act and, specifically, the regulations in the area of swimming pools, wading pools, and water parks as well as the food regulations are suffering from some challenges in which the Pizza Police and, in consultation with the Premier, the Perogy Police, quite frankly, are creating an adversarial relationship with community groups, with restaurant owners, with business owners. We have not been able to identify if this is an issue of application of regulations or if this is an issue of the regulations themselves. Therefore, at this point I would ask the Minister of Health and Wellness to indeed look into this matter, perhaps take a look at whether some revisions to the regulations are in order so that our community groups and our business owners are not subject to so many stringent, unrealistic obligations when they're putting on community events.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Cassandra Budd

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize both an outstanding individual and a wonderful scholarship program. The Persons Case scholarship program was established in 1979 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Persons Case, which allowed women to be considered persons under legal doctrine in Canada. These scholarships are funded by the Alberta heritage scholarship fund and are presented by Alberta Children and Youth Services. They are awarded to Alberta students each year whose studies and career goals contribute to the advancement of women or those studying in fields deemed non-traditional for their gender.

One such scholarship was awarded to a constituent of mine in Edmonton-Mill Woods, Miss Cassandra Budd. Cassandra was one of the 30 outstanding recipients whose tremendous efforts were recognized with this prestigious scholarship. Cassandra's application was selected as it demonstrated her commitment to exploring the field of environmental and engineering geophysics consulting as well as her desire to prove to young women that gender should not be a factor when pursuing a career.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to personally congratulate Cassandra Budd and wish her the very best in her studies and future endeavours. I would also like to thank the Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology and the Ministry of Children and Youth Services for making such a worthwhile scholarship possible.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Education Funding

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, the members of this government often look competent because oil and gas windfalls have allowed them to buy their way out of pretty much any problem. The mythology of sound fiscal management is just that, a myth. As the record clearly indicates, this government has blown through hundreds of billions of nonrenewable resource revenues, money that Albertans will never see again. It's one of the biggest opportunities blown by any government in recent memory.

The children and parents who rely on public education are the latest victims of this neo-con ideology, which regards taxes as inherently evil. The truth is that every citizen has a duty to contribute to things we do better collectively such as public education and public health care, which ensure equality of opportunity for everyone in our society. Rather than implementing a small liquor tax, dipping into the sustainability fund, or even, heaven forbid, cutting the number of cabinet ministers and government departments, this government will subject school children to larger class sizes, force special-needs students to flounder on their own, and deny English as a second language training to recent immigrants to our province. Even Saint Lougheed himself is now saying that reliance on nonrenewable resource revenues is unsustainable and that citizens and corporations alike must contribute more to the public purse.

Mr. Speaker, there is no such thing as a free lunch. Albertans have shown time and time again that they want quality public education, quality public health care, and all the other people programs that provide essential services. Albertans believe in paying their fair share for these services. I would like the government to have a little faith in the people of Alberta and understand that most people don't think of taxes as the ultimate evil, not when those taxes make it possible to provide core public services.

What this government needs to do right now in order to start steering our province in the right direction is commit to finding funding for education programs. This can come through a liquor tax, the sustainability fund, or from cutting government departments, whatever works, Mr. Speaker, to ensure that our kids continue to have the education they deserve.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Provincial Skills Canada Trades Competition

Mr. Elniski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, even though this may be my last member's statement of the year. Today I would like to recognize the competitors, sponsors, volunteers, and organizers of the 2011 provincial skills competition, which is entering its second and final day of competition today. More than 600 young people from every corner of our province are competing in 42 trades and technology events. From web design to carpentry to refrigeration and air conditioning it's impressive to see the drive, the technical expertise, and the problem-solving skills of these young competitors. These dedicated young men and women are gathered at the Edmonton Expo Centre in hopes of earning the opportunity to represent Team Alberta at the national skills competition in Quebec City next month.

Tradespersons and skilled workers are the foundation of Alberta's economy and are a critical element in our province's economic and fiscal turnaround. It should be noted that other important features of this event are Skill City, which will have a number of school tours, a series of Try-A-Trade demonstrations, and a girls exploring trades conference. Alberta's top employers, associations, labour groups, training institutions, and government partners make up Skill City.

These initiatives, like the overall competitions, are a tremendous way to engage young Albertans in rewarding and interesting careers in the trades. I would like to congratulate all of the volunteers and organizers and sponsors for making this event a reality.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a brief comment. On the night that he won the leadership of our party, our Premier had to leave early to go back to the farm and fix the furnace. The fact that he knew how to do this demonstrates that there is as much dignity and necessity in tilling a field, fixing a furnace, or driving a bus as there is in creating the laws to govern such things. This is a great example and legacy for the youth of this province.

Thank you, Premier. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have hundreds and hundreds of signatures from all over the province from people who are urging the government of Alberta to "consider increasing the funding to the Ministry of Education so that sustainable and adequate funding is provided to address the needs of every student, every day, no exceptions."

The Speaker: I have the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo identified. Is someone presenting a petition on his behalf? Okay.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that Motion for a Return 17 will be dealt with on – she thought I was going to say Monday – I will say the first Monday that this session resumes.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Energy.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to table the appropriate number of copies of an e-mail that went to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood and was leaked to me. It relates to a question that the member had asked me, and I responded that for every billion dollars in construction for electricity transmission $1 per month would be added to the bills. The member said that that answer was very difficult to understand, so this e-mail says, "I asked my 6th grade grandson what it meant to him," and he replied that for every billion dollars spent, that means $1 per month; in other words, $12 per year. The e-mail from Mr. Yurkowski concludes to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood: "Does that help you understand the Minister's response?"

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwodesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the required number of copies of two reports: first, the 2009-2010 annual report of the College and Association of Registered Nurses of Alberta and the second being the 2010 annual report of the Alberta College of Combined Laboratory and X-Ray Technologists.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two tablings. We've received a number of really beautifully designed cards in support of the arts, and I'm tabling a report from my office on the number of these received and from whom. The people want to make clear that they're in support of funding for the arts. This is from Luke Mohr, Jessica Telford, David Cook, Aspen Gainer, Erica Frank, Elizabeth Bore, Leslieanne Au, and Gina Vliet. That's the first tabling.

The second tabling is a report on the number of cards I've received on the future of Catholic education in the province, and those have been received from citizens who wanted me to convey a constitutional guarantee of Catholic education in Alberta be preserved in the new Education Act. There are a number of individuals who I received the cards from. They're included in the report.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have 10 copies of I Support the Arts cards with the appropriate number of copies. They're Alberta Craft Council cards.

I have a second tabling, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings on the future of Catholic education in Alberta. They're Edmonton Catholic schools cards, and I have the appropriate number of copies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Agriculture and horse racing are important parts of this province, and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview asked a very important question. Today I have a tabling and the appropriate number of copies of an e-mail addressed to myself and the members for Edmonton-Riverview and Lethbridge-East from a Max Gibb of the Rocky Mountain Turf Club answering part of that question asked by the Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, did I already get you, or do you have a tabling?

Ms Pastoor: No. I have tablings.

The Speaker: Proceed, please.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. I have two tablings today, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling five copies of e-mails from the following individuals who are very concerned about the funding cuts to education and the negative impact: Carol Sparks, David Redman, Kristina Koivisto, and Jessica Logan.

My second tabling, Mr. Speaker, is the copy of the GQ cover with the Premier on it. With all due respect to Marie, I've never seen the Premier without his tie, so this is really quite exciting.

The Speaker: Hon. member, please, please, please.

Ms Pastoor: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to put it up on my wall beside Johnny Depp.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Ady, the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, responses to questions raised by Mr. Chase, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity; Mr. Boutilier, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo; Ms Notley, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona; and Mr. Taylor, the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, on March 15, 2011, in Department of Tourism, Parks and Recreation main estimates debate.

On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Fritz, the Minister of Children and Youth Services, pursuant to the Social Care Facilities Review Committee Act the Social Care Facilities Review Committee annual report 2009-2010; the return to order of the Assembly MR 16, asked for by Mr. Chase on May 9, 2011; and responses to questions raised by Ms Notley, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, on March 16, 2011, in Department of Children and Youth Services main estimates debate.

Projected Government Business

Ms Blakeman: I look forward to the government sharing with us the projected government House business for when we return at the next opportunity, which I'm assuming is the fall. Please share away.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, at this time all I can say is that I project no government business for next week, and the Order Paper will disclose any business for the fall session if and when it convenes.

The Speaker: Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for squeezing one more in. It's a pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly my constituency association president, Sue Timanson. Sue also serves as regional director on our provincial executive and chaired my 2008 election campaign. Sue is an almost lifelong Strathcona resident with a long history of volunteer service in our community as well as coaching numerous soccer teams while managing a successful advertising career and raising a family. I am very proud to call her a friend. Sue is seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask her to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to my hon. colleagues for their indulgence. I have four people from my constituency who I'd like to introduce. They are all members of the Wetaskiwin city council. They came in today, and we had lunch. We talked about issues in Wetaskiwin that touch on the provincial government, and we talked about ways we might be able to work with them. I have to say that like many of my colleagues, if not all of my colleagues, we have great respect for people like municipal politicians who work on the front lines, and not only do I respect them, but I consider them to be good friends. If they would just rise as I call their names, they are Mark McFaul, Patricia MacQuarrie, Joe Branco, and Barry Hawkes. I'd ask my colleagues to give them a welcome.

Statement by the Speaker

Sessional Statistics

The Speaker: Hon. members, before I call on the hon. Government House Leader, just some statistics with respect to the Fourth Session of the 27th Legislature for the time frame essentially from February 22, 2011, to May 12, 2011.

The sitting days that we've had this spring are 34, including six evening sittings. Last year, in 2010, we had 31 days and one evening sitting. The number of minutes to the end of Wednesday's sitting: 9,190 compared to 7,039 for the 2010 spring sitting. The number of hours we've sat this spring was 153 hours and 10 minutes compared to 117 hours and 19 minutes for the 2010 spring sitting. The number of words spoken by members: 1,276,777 compared to 1,001,906 for the 2010 spring sitting. Number of Hansard pages for the House sittings we've had this year: 1,118 compared to 900 for the 2010 spring sitting.

This is a tough one. The number of words spoken by members in standing committee meetings this spring: 550,388 compared to 679,775 for the 2010 spring sitting. The reason for that: the number of hours spent in committees this year was 63 hours, 29 minutes compared to 84 hours and 16 minutes in 2010. Number of Hansard pages for committees: 498 compared to 672 for the 2010 spring sitting.

In terms of question period we've had 10 occasions, 10 days, in which there were 18 sets of questions and answers, 17 days where we had 19 sets of questions and answers, and two days with 20 sets of questions and answers. This compares to the 2010 spring sitting, which had 11 days with 18 sets of questions and answers, 14 days with 19 sets of questions and answers, and five days with 20 sets of questions and answers.

Total number of questions and answers for this spring not counting today: 3,530, or an average of 103.82 per day, keeping in mind that day 1 did not have an Oral Question Period. The total number of questions and answers for the 2010 spring sitting was 3,359. That was an average of 108.35 per day, keeping in mind that day 1 did not have a question period.

The number of government bills that have or will receive royal assent: 19 in 2011 compared to a total of 15 that received royal assent in the spring session of 2010. Private members' public bills that have or will receive royal assent: one compared to two for the spring session of 2010, and the private members' public bills that have or will receive royal assent since 1993, when the major changes to the standing orders affecting this item of business were implemented, has now reached 49.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, after that exhaustive list I would have to advise the House that, government business for the spring session now being completed, we would stand adjourned pursuant to Government Motion 16.

The Speaker: All members should be advised of the 2011 sessional calendar that was issued in January of this year, which calls for the return of the Legislative Assembly on the 24th day of October 2011.

Have a safe summer.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 3:43 p.m. pursuant to Government Motion 16]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 4th Session (2011)

Activity to May 12, 2011

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, October 24, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon, and welcome back.

On this day of new beginnings we ask for Your guidance in the responsibility we are undertaking and Your help in fulfilling our duties for the enduring benefit of all Albertans. As Members of this Legislative Assembly may we faithfully serve our province of Alberta. Amen.

Hon. members and ladies and gentlemen, would you now please join us in the signing of our national anthem. We'll be led today by Mr. Paul Lorieau. Feel free to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Statements by the Speaker

Welcome to the Premier

The Speaker: Hon. members, at the outset of today's Routine I'd like to welcome two members who return to this Assembly as leaders of their respective parties.

In 1916 the Legislative Assembly of Alberta passed legislation which gave the vote to women and, by extension, the right to serve. In a general election held on June 7, 1917, Louise McKinney became the first woman elected to a Legislature in the British Empire.

Two months later, on September 18, 1917, an extension of the June 7, 1917, election was held in the trenches of northern France and southern Belgium to elect two service people to serve as representatives at large for Alberta. Twenty-one candidates ran for two seats. Twenty candidates were men, and one was a woman, Roberta MacAdams from Stony Plain, who was serving as a sister, a nurse, in the trenches. With her campaign slogan Give One Vote to the Man of Your Choice and the Other to the Sister, Roberta MacAdams came in second in the 21-person race and became the other first woman to have been elected to a Legislature in the British Empire.

In 1921 Irene Parlby became the first woman cabinet minister in Alberta's history when she was appointed minister without portfolio.

Three women of the Famous Five served in the Legislative Assembly of Alberta: Nellie McClung, Louise McKinney, Irene Parlby.

The first woman granted full ministerial status in our history was Helen Hunley when she was appointed Solicitor General in 1973. Subsequently Helen Hunley was to become our first woman Lieutenant Governor and served from 1985 to 1991. The first woman recognized as Leader of the Opposition in this Legislative Assembly was Nancy MacBeth, who served from 1998 to 2001. The first woman to be appointed Minister of Justice and Attorney General was the hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow in 2008.

In Alberta's history 64 women have been elected to this Legislature. Twenty-one have served as cabinet ministers, and since October 7, 2011, one has served as Premier.

Welcome today to Alberta's 14th Premier, the first woman Premier in the 106-year history of Alberta, the hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow, the hon. Madam Premier. [Standing ovation]

Welcome to the Leader of the Official Opposition

The Speaker: Two sword-lengths away and across from the Premier sits the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. The position of Leader of the Opposition has evolved through custom, procedural interpretation by the Speaker, and governance by the Legislative Assembly. From 1905 until an amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act came into effect in 1972, the tenures of Leaders of the Official Opposition were based on actual session dates. In other words, Alberta had no Leader of the Official Opposition outside of session from 1905 to 1972. During that period Alberta had 19 different men serve as leader. For the periods 1926 to 1940, 1949 to 1951, and 1960 to 1963, no individual served as leader either in or out of session in the province of Alberta.

The Legislative Assembly Act of 1972 was the first legislation in Alberta's history to address the actual full-time tenure of the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition and was the first legislation to provide for an equitable stipend for the leader. A further amendment to the Legislative Assembly Act in 1983 clarified principles regarding the recognition of the Official Opposition that would be employed by the Speaker.

Since 1972 Alberta has had an additional 10 men and one woman serve as Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. From 1905 to 2011 we've had 30 different leaders. While Premier Peter Lougheed was the only Official Opposition Leader in Alberta's first 106 years to become a Premier, four former Official Opposition Leaders were to become Lieutenant Governors.

The Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark was recognized on September 13 as Alberta's 30th Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. Welcome to Alberta's new Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. [Standing ovation]

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a great honour for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly someone who is no stranger to this House, and that is my friend Karen Kryczka, a former member of this House from Calgary-West from 1997 to 2004 as well as a former Calgary board of education trustee from 2007 to 2010. Karen is a loyal community volunteer, a good friend of mine. We share a great friendship. We also shared a very close time this year with the passing of our mothers. It was wonderful for her to be able to come today. I'd like everyone in this House who knows her to give her a really warm round of applause and to welcome her back.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly someone who really needs no introduction as well. It's Denis Herard, the former member for my constituency, Calgary-Egmont, from 1993 to 2008. Mr. Herard also served as minister of advanced education and won four successive pluralities in that constituency. Denis and his wife, Rose, reside in Maple Ridge, a few minutes away from where I reside, and I was privileged to earn his support in the last election. Please join me in welcoming Denis Herard.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly an excellent Albertan, someone who for the past two years has been travelling through this great province of ours, listening to the concerns of all Albertans. Whether it has been through her time at the Fraser Institute, the Calgary Herald, or CFIB, she has always put the ideas and principles of Albertans first. She is seated in the Speaker's gallery, the leader of the Wildrose Party, Danielle Smith. With that, I would ask her to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two guests to introduce to the Assembly today. They are seated in the Speaker's gallery. The first is my wife, Mardell Olson. I had to clean my condo before she came up, and she is now here to finish the job. Our good friend Rhonda Harder Epp, a noted artist in western Canada, recently moved to Edmonton from Camrose, and I'm very pleased to have her here, too. I'd ask that they receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure of mine to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly four special guests, and I appreciate your accommodating them in your gallery. I'd ask them to rise as I introduce them. The first is Donna Bagdon, a very good friend of mine, and Brian Heidecker, as well a very good friend of mine; and then my parents, Keith and Maureen Griffiths. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly somebody very important to me, my better half, Sharon MacLean. She's been there with me through the tough times and the good times. I'd just ask her to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you my constituency staff, Margaret Thibault. Margaret is a great representative of the constituency of Whitecourt-St. Anne and does outstanding work for me. Not only do I want to introduce her; I want to thank her for all the great work that she does. Thank you, Margaret.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to members of the Assembly two schools from my constituency, grade 6 students. From the Monsignor Fee Otterson school in the Rutherford community there are 61 students with us, and they're accompanied by their teachers and parent helpers Miss Chantel Greskiuk and Mrs. Michelle Armstrong.

Also joining us today are 31 students from George H. Luck school. They're accompanied by their teacher, Ms Melissa Bruins, and parent helpers Mrs. Sherece Creasy, Mr. Sean Rickard, and Mrs. Susanne Mohler.

I usually, in introducing the students, reference the fact that they're among the best and the brightest students we have in this province, and I think that's true of these two schools in my constituency today. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased today to introduce to you and through you to all members a group of grade 9 students from the Ponoka composite high school. They're seated in the public gallery, right behind me. There are 32 grade 9 students, two teachers, and a bus driver. The teachers are Mr. Brady Teeling and Mrs. Maryann LaFrance, and the bus driver is Mrs. Linda Nobles. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm applause of all the members of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce some guests from the great institution in Edmonton-Riverview, the University of Alberta, and one of their schools, the School of Business, which is working to establish itself more and more strongly as a global school. The group today is connected with those global programs. There are 29 visitors. Twenty-four will be in the members' gallery and five in the public gallery, I understand. I'm not sure they're here yet, but if they are, I'd ask them to rise. Their group leaders are Jane Ji, Yu Bao, and George Zhang.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you today four people with the Edmonton-Calder based company Priority Printing. They are Tim Downey, the company president; Robin Chapelsky, production manager; Julie Lundy, their prepress manager; and Joanne Safron, a finishing technician. I'll tell you a little more about these fine folks in a member's statement shortly, but for now I would ask them to rise – I believe they're in the public gallery – and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege to rise this afternoon to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly eight special guests representing Alberta's Ukrainian community, who are in attendance on the members' side to commemorate the 20th anniversary of Ukraine's independence. I would ask each of these guests to please rise as I mention their name: Luba Feduschak, president, Ukrainian Canadian Congress, Edmonton branch; Roger Pullishy, president, the Friends of the Ukrainian Village Society; Steve Romaniuk, vice-president, Ukrainian Seniors' Club of Marko Boyeslaw; Serhiy Kostyuk, provincial co-ordinator, Ukrainian Canadian Congress Alberta Provincial Council; George Kotovych, director, Plast youth organization; Petro Dackiw, director, League of Ukrainian Canadians; Maria Romaniuk, League of Ukrainian Canadian Women; Motria Dackiw, League of Ukrainian Canadian Women. We are very honoured that they are with us today, and I would ask that they accept the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a fine group of constituents and community volunteers, starting with my lovely wife of 17 years, Fiona; our friend Roxanne McReavy; the constituency association president and regional director, Sue Timinson; the treasurer of our constituency association and local entrepreneur, Clinton Alexander; and Lorette Strong, our constituency office manager. They're seated in the public gallery, and I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce three guests today. First and foremost, this young man is the nominated candidate in Sherwood Park. He's finishing his master's degree at the London School of Economics, and he's lived in Sherwood Park for a considerable period of time. Garnett Genuis is in the gallery. I'd like to ask him to rise.

Also, my wife of 24 years and our four-year-old son are with us, but I've just been informed that he was making too much noise, so he just went outside but will continue making noise later on this afternoon, certainly, Mr. Speaker.

Finally, a lady who worked in my legislative office. She is the better half of the former minister of finance, Dr. Lyle Oberg. Evelyn Oberg is with us today, and I'd ask her to rise and receive the very warm welcome of all members of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly my guests from the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees. As Alberta's largest union AUPE represents 80,000 hard-working Albertans, your working people. President Guy Smith is here to show AUPE's commitment to the services those members provide to the public. The Alberta NDP is proud to stand with all AUPE members in protecting public services that benefit all Albertans. I would now ask my guests to rise as I call their names to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: Guy Smith, Tyler Bedford, and Mark Wells.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly my constituency assistant. Seated in the public gallery is Emma Ronan with her partner, Cole. I'd ask you to rise and enjoy the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? There being none, then four words – beautiful, intelligent, delightful, and loving – are words I use to describe my wife, Kristina, who also happens to be here.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Incremental Ethane Extraction Program

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The former Energy minister and current Finance minister gave two energy companies an inside track on an ethane program worth a third of a billion dollars before it was even approved by cabinet. To the Premier: is this the kind of change that the Premier promised Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This was information that was made available to us through the public today. It's certainly something that I've asked the Minister of Energy to take a look at. Our information to date is that this is a program that's open to all industry stakeholders, that absolutely no one was prejudiced with respect to this. However, what I will say is that I have asked the Minister of Energy to provide a full disclosure of the facts that will be made publicly available so that we can all review it.

Thank you.

Dr. Sherman: Again to the Premier: given that the Williams-NOVA partnership had the inside track on such a generous government program, how does the Premier explain to the taxpayers the $310 million head start the former Energy minister gave to his friends?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I wouldn't expect anything more from the hon. Leader of the Opposition, it is a characterization that still needs to be found to be conclusive or true. As I've said, the Minister of Energy will be providing a full set of facts that all Albertans will be able to scrutinize. What we will see from that is that this was an open, transparent process, open to anyone who is willing to participate and apply for the program, and that no one was prejudiced in any way.

Dr. Sherman: Finally, to the Premier: given that senior staff actually participated in the disclosure of insider information and ended up being promoted, is this the kind of behaviour that the Premier will continue to reward?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I've said, the hon. Leader of the Opposition has a characterization of a set of circumstances. We will have the facts before us. They will be publicly available. All Albertans will be able to assess whether or not anyone was prejudiced, and I assert that they weren't.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. NOVA Chemicals said that its deal with Williams couldn't have happened without the current Finance minister's help. To the Premier: if this happened in one department, how do we know that other departments are not leaking highly valuable information that will benefit their friends?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition can stand up 19 times and allege certain circumstances which I don't happen to agree with, but more importantly, as I've said, the facts will be made available. Albertans will judge.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: the facts will soon be out. In fact, they're out already. Given that her Finance minister clearly broke government confidentiality, what will the Premier do to hold her minister to account to get to the bottom of this scandal?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition keeps using the same words, so I will as well. These are characterizations and conclusions that are not warranted by the information that we have available. The full facts will be made available. If for any reason there is anyone who was prejudiced as a result of this, not only will Albertans know, but we will know in this House, and we will deal with it at that point.

Dr. Sherman: Finally, to the Premier: how many more scandals will we have to uncover before the Premier does something real to win back the trust of Albertans?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, again, these words are inflammatory. They're not necessary. The facts will be made available. We do not have a scandal here. What we have is a tempest in a teapot.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, given that Williams Energy retained the Lobbyists Act on their behalf in order to see changes to the ethane extraction program, a move that eventually paid off, getting Williams and NOVA on an inside track to receive up to $310 million in taxpayer subsidies, to the Energy minister: when does the minister plan to stop this unethical influence that lobbyists continue to have on his ministry?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the Official Opposition has clearly had a long time to build up their imagination over the last six months. Insider implies that somehow it was secret. Eighteen different companies consulted for 12 months on the development of this policy, plus trade associations. There was absolutely nothing secret about it whatsoever.

Mr. Hehr: Given that the facts speak for themselves and that Williams Energy has donated at least $12,500 to the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta in the last two years, how are the citizens of Alberta not to draw the conclusion that this government grants special access to PC Party contributors?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, again, the hon. member here is playing fast and loose with the facts. There was absolutely nothing time sensitive about this whatsoever. The program existed prior to this. The program exists today. There is still money in the program. Three other companies have taken advantage of it since then. There was no inside information. It was not time sensitive. In fact, it's a success story. We need more ethane for our petrochemical industry.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, here are the facts. Given that at least 12 days prior to cabinet even approving changes to the ethane incentive program the Energy ministry selectively informed their friends of a final decision while others were left in the dark, will the minister explain how this is not a good deal that gave Williams and NOVA an advantage in competing for these taxpayer dollars?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, it's obvious, with the Liberals not having been in government since 1921, they've forgotten the fact that policy development in the executive branch and in the administrative branch develop simultaneously. Otherwise, it would be hopelessly inefficient. As I said, there was absolutely nothing time sensitive about this whatsoever. There was money in the program before. There's money in the program today. Other companies have enrolled in the program. The good news here is that it is producing additional ethane for our petrochemical industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today we are supposed to receive a decision from the AUC on the fate of the heartland transmission line. Last week the Energy minister halted three major lines, including heartland. However, the Premier overruled him and said that she wanted heartland to proceed because she believes it's critical infrastructure. This blatant political interference destroys any credibility this process has left. To the Premier: will she admit that it was inappropriate for her as the Premier to declare the heartland line critical three days before the AUC decision?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, for eight months I've said that I believe that the heartland transmission line was critical. The AUC has undertaken their process. It's an independent process. They'll release their decision. I'm looking forward to seeing that decision. It's entirely appropriate for them to do that. I expect that if the AUC was in any way concerned about the compromising of their independence, they'd have commented on it.

Mr. Hinman: Well, given that the AUC is now delaying the release of their decision for a week because of the Premier and given that Albertans always wonder whether this decision is being changed to suit her declaration that it should go ahead, will she apologize to the AUC and to Albertans for her lack of judgment and inappropriate interference?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, one of the things that is quite disappointing in political debate right now in Alberta is that whenever political parties think they can make a political point, they undermine the integrity of the independent institutions, and we're not going to do that.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, she's the one who's undermining it.

Again to the Premier. Given that you refuse to answer my questions and do the right thing, let's get to the root of the issue, Bill 50, and the sweeping power that it gives the Premier and your cabinet. Will you repeal this legislation and reinstate a truly qualified, independent, and objective needs assessment for determining our transmission needs?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we've said that the heartland line was critical. We've also said, and we believe on this side of the House, that it's important to review the economic imperative of one of the north-south lines. It's going to be important to do that in order to ensure that we are making the best economic choices for Albertans, and we'll do that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Health Care Privatization

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On July 12, 2010, the current minister of health made a presentation on health care strategy to the PC caucus based on a report from May 2010 released today by the NDP. Proposals were made by the now minister of health and included delisting of insured services and more private insurance options, allowing a greater role for private hospitals and government-sponsored queue-jumping. My question is for the Premier. Why has she appointed an advocate for private health care as her minister of health?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I'll tell you that right now this government is committed to a public health care system that's accessible for all Albertans. That's the intention of everything we will do in the future.

Mr. Mason: Given that previous governments have made the same assertion before an election only to turn around and do the opposite or try to once they are elected and given that the current minister of health made health care privatization proposals to a closed-door meeting of the Tory caucus but omitted them from the public reports he issued, why has this Premier appointed a minister who hides his privatization agenda from the public?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we have one agenda for health care in this province. It's to have a publicly funded health care system that's accessible to all Albertans and to ensure that Albertans have confidence in that system. That's what our cabinet supports.

Mr. Mason: Two former Premiers gave exactly the same assertion. Given that the current minister of health has been an advocate of private hospitals, private insurance, government-sponsored queue-jumping, and more, why would this Premier appoint him as health minister if not because the privatization agenda of this progressive government, Progressive Conservative government has not changed?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, the leader of the third party is absolutely right. We are a progressive government. We are committed to public health care. We have been committed to that. We want Albertans to have confidence in that system, and everything we do is going to ensure that that is the case.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much. This government has a very long political history of interference with the electrical regulatory process in this province. The political interference has already cost electricity consumers in this province billions of dollars. My first question is to the Premier. What will this government's latest flip-flop on transmission infrastructure costs eventually cost ratepayers throughout this province?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I've been completely consistent with respect to my view on the heartland transmission line. I'm looking forward to the AUC decision. Once that decision is rendered, we will know what the costs are.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier. Given that less than two years ago electricity ratepayers in this province were forced to pay an additional $35 million for a transmission line that was never built, can the Premier guarantee that ratepayers will not have to pay for this latest transmission flip-flop by this government?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we've been entirely consistent with respect to our approach on these lines. There has been no change in policy. We are going to continue to ensure that any decisions that are made with respect to transmission are going to be in the best economic interests of this province.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the Premier. When did the Premier find out that the Minister of Energy wanted to suspend these three transmission projects that have been deemed by this government to be critical infrastructure?

Ms Redford: Well, first, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the hon. member read the letter. That isn't what the letter asked for, so that might be one thing you might want to take a look at.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, is that it was very clear – and I said this on Friday at my public comments about this for the first time – that I was made aware of that letter and the correspondence and the request on Friday morning at approximately 10 o'clock. I've been very clear about that. To be very clear, this is a position . . .

Mr. MacDonald: You sent the letter on Wednesday.

Ms Redford: That's not the question that I was asked.

Mr. Speaker, the question that needs to be answered here is what we are doing with respect to those lines, and I will tell you. I'm very proud of the fact that we're going to take a look at those north-south lines and take a look at what's in the best economic interests of this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Education Funding

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents were very pleased to learn that one of our new Premier's first actions was to provide additional education funds to local school boards. My first question is to the Minister of Education. Since the school year has already started, will it be too late for this funding to make a real difference this year?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, first, Mr. Speaker, no, it's not too late. School boards have been advised that this additional funding is to be directed to children. One of the requests upon the school board is to make sure that every single dollar of that $107 million will be directed directly into our classroom so that your child somewhere out there sitting in a school in Alberta will actually see a measurable difference in their quality of education.

Mrs. Leskiw: My next question is to the same minister. Can the minister tell us whether the school boards, the local authorities on the ground, have full discretion to use the funds, or are there going to be strings attached to these funds?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, every time we spend taxpayers' dollars, there are always strings attached, obviously, but one of the overarching requirements was, as I indicated in my previous answer, that the dollars find their way all the way down to the desks and the children in our classrooms. At the end of the day that was the Premier's commitment, and it is this government's commitment to make sure that education is there for our children, not for principals, not for teachers, not for the minister, not for government but for the children sitting in the desks.

Mrs. Leskiw: My last question is to the same minister. Flexibility is important. So is accountability. How will this government ensure that the dollars being used by the school boards are definitely going to benefit the students of Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, our school boards are under a scrupulous audit by the Auditor General and internal audits and audits by this ministry. In addition to the usual auditing process, which I don't believe leaves much to be desired, I have asked each and every school board to report to me so that I can report to you, hon. member, and to all Albertans on how these additional dollars were actually spent and what measurable differences they have made in the lives of our students.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this month the former minister of health cast further doubt on the Health Quality Council of Alberta's investigation into allegations of widespread political meddling, queue-jumping, and physician intimidation. He said that the investigation, quote, would be a waste of time and money that would ultimately conclude the allegations are frivolous. End quote. To the Premier: given the minister's attempts to influence the Health Quality Council report, will the Premier finally change the reporting relationship of the Health Quality Council from the minister to this Legislature?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I can assure this House – and I have no idea where the hon. member is getting his information – that no member of this government has attempted to influence in any way the review that is under way by the Health Quality Council. That being said, I think our Premier has been very clear over the last eight months. There is a desire on the part of this government to establish the Health Quality Council as an independent body reporting to this Legislature. We'll have a bit more to say about that in the next few weeks.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Good news.

Given such blatant interference by a senior minister will the Premier finally fulfill her campaign promise and immediately call a public inquiry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Again, without the benefit of any background as to the allegations that the hon. member is making – once again, the Premier has been very clear. This government is committed to a fully independent inquiry into the allegations that were raised. There is a review under way by the Health Quality Council at this time. We will wait to see the results of that review and in due course have more to say about the inquiry.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the minister clearly violated the Health Quality Council's own confidentiality rules, what did the Premier do to take action on this violation?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, if the opposition wants to inhabit the ground of conspiracy theories and characterizations, we'll leave that to them. Our commitment is to improving the performance of our publicly funded health care system. That means focusing on primary care, family care clinics, continuing care, and mental health. That's where our focus will be. These procedural matters will be explained in full as time goes on.

Thank you.

Slave Lake Fire Evacuation Order

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, on May 15 about 10,000 residents were evacuated due to the Slave Lake fire. Many residents have been frustrated and upset that an evacuation order came too late or never came at all. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: why wasn't one issued sooner or even at all?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to answer this question. I know that the Member for Lesser Slave Lake has a deep personal concern for the people in her constituency, and I know that she spent a lot of time there, dedicated to helping them in any way she could.

I'm very pleased to report, actually, that in Slave Lake we had municipal officials and emergency service workers that worked very quickly. We would have issued an emergency clearance order faster except that high winds caused the fire to spread very quickly.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, we in Lesser Slave Lake have learned the hard way about not receiving warnings to give us enough time to leave. It's just amazing how we were able to save the people that we did. I believe other Albertans want to know that they'll be given enough time to respond to the same situation. To the same minister: what are you doing to ensure Albertans get the warnings they need when seconds count so that they don't have to suffer like my constituents did?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We've actually moved to a new system called Alberta emergency alert. Not only are we still using ground staff to alert people and evacuate them in serious conditions; we're also utilizing Facebook and Twitter, a dedicated website, and still ground-to-ground face communications so that we can give staged or phased warnings, updates to people so that they can better prepare instead of just that emergency warning that says to clear out. They can actually prepare more and take care of their goods and move in a timely fashion. We're very proud of this new system.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, I'm really pleased to know that we are going to be doing it in a timely fashion.

What assurances can you give Albertans of any kind of new emergency alerts that will be used in the future for events like this so that we don't see this kind of thing happen again?

Mr. Griffiths: Well, Mr. Speaker, every municipality is responsible for emergencies such as this. We're training all of the staff on the ground, our municipal representatives as well as emergency personnel, so that they're fully aware of all of the degrees of alerts that could be sent out and how to best utilize them so that we have the best prepared staff on the ground.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Children in Care

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. An alarming number of the 50 children killed while in this government's care in the past decade were First Nations; 67 per cent of the children currently in care have been taken from First Nations families. The abuse of Alberta's First Nations children hasn't ended. Instead, it has shifted from residential schools to provincial custodial care. To the Minister of Human Services: how can the government claim it is being culturally sensitive and responsible when it dumps six young children on relatives' doorsteps without due diligence?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member alludes to a matter which is still before the courts. I will say in a general sense that kinship care is a very important part of the care process for children in need. It is important in circumstances where families are available to keep children together and to keep them with family. That's often a choice that parents want to have if their children are being apprehended. They want to have a say in that process, so it's an important part of the process. The characterization is overly dramatic. It is important that we take care of children in . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, I wouldn't suggest that 50 deaths is overly dramatic; it's a fact.

What efforts are being made to support children and their birth parents within their homes before forcing them into foster care or kinship care and fast-tracking the adoption process?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, there is no intention on behalf of this government to take children out of families where families can be supported to help those children. It is not the first thing that government wants to do. At the front end of the system social workers and caregivers work with families first to make sure there are appropriate care plans where there is any indication of concern, and only after that, if there is a problem that cannot be resolved by support, do they apprehend the child.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Given the supersizing of the new Human Services ministry, how is the minister going to ensure that vulnerable children and families don't get lost in this latest shuffle?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is a very important question and one that I want to answer by saying that I've worn this Children First pin since I was first appointed to the Ministry of Education, and I'm not taking it off any time soon. Children are going to be at the core of this ministry. You can support children by making sure that you support their families. You can support their families by making sure that they have the right links to education and skilling, the right links to a job, that there is a proper labour atmosphere. All of that comes together in a ministry that makes entirely good sense to support children and make sure that they get the opportunity to be successful in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Heartland Electricity Transmission Project

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There was a lot of confusion last Friday regarding the status of the heartland transmission project before the Alberta Utilities Commission. My question is to the Minister of Energy. What happened on Friday?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure I speak for many people in the Assembly here to say that I'm proud to work for a Premier that keeps her promises. She's kept her promises, her campaign promises, on more funding for education. As Albertans are going to see, she's keeping many more promises soon on other types of reforms. One of the promises was on a review of Bill 50 to ensure that it does not undermine the economic competitiveness of Albertans. Pursuant to that I sent a letter to the AUC on Thursday. There was a misunderstanding – a misunderstanding – of which projects were to be included or not.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: what is the status of this application? Is it going ahead or not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I was indicating, as soon as this misunderstanding was identified Friday morning, the Premier and I met. We corrected that immediately, and I have sent a letter today to the AUC requesting that they delete the heartland project from my request for delay. My understanding is that the AUC has indicated that they will issue a decision next week.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Minister of Energy. Many of my constituents have been advocating for burying the heartland transmission line. Is it being considered?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Dr. Morton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, the AUC heard compelling arguments on both sides of the issue, the advantages and disadvantages of burying the proposed line, but because that is part of their decision, it would be inappropriate for me to speculate on that in the Assembly today. We'll wait until next week and, when we hear the decision, proceed accordingly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Emergency Room Wait Times

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A year after the former minister of health, with much self-congratulatory fanfare, promised to fix our ERs, wait times are back to where they were last October, and our long-term care wait-lists are growing. Will the minister of health admit that until the government unbreaks its promise on real long-term care beds, Albertans have nothing more than chaotic crisis management and failed promises to look forward to in our hospitals' ERs?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. While I will be the first to say that we still continue to need to make progress on emergency department wait times, a lot of progress has been made in the last year. The number of Albertans waiting in acute-care beds for continuing care has fallen over the last year from just over 700 down to 500 today. If you look at not one month's but a year's worth of progress on emergency department wait times, you'll see that the average waiting time has come down considerably. That said, there is more to be done.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, given that, in fact, the number of people waiting in hospitals for proper long-term care is almost 40 per cent higher than the government's target, will the minister admit that their so-called continuing care strategy is failing to create the number of spaces that Albertans need for the level of care that they actually need?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Seniors and I are both concerned that the continuing care spaces that we're opening in Alberta are able to meet the needs of everyone who requires the level of care, including those who require long-term care. We'll be continuing to look at that. The goal of this government is to provide a range of housing options for seniors and for those who need a health care component, to provide that component in a form that meets their particular needs.

Thank you.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that less than one-third of emergency patients at the Royal Alex were treated in line with the minister's own emergency protocols, will the minister admit that until more long-term care spaces, not some other kind of hotel but long-term care spaces, are created, Albertans will continue to face unacceptable ER wait times?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of things that need to be done. Unfortunately, if the problem was as simple as adding additional long-term care beds, I'm sure we would have had it solved a long time ago. What, in fact, we need to do is make primary care, family care clinics more accessible to Albertans so that people who can avoid going to the emergency department have the opportunity to do so. We certainly need to look at the range of continuing care options and make sure that we're meeting needs on that side of the equation as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Water Management

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government's track record on water from monitoring in the oil sands to wetlands protection to commodifying water allocation frightens and puzzles Albertans. If they don't see concrete action taken quickly, then having added water to the ministry is a moot point. My questions today are to the new Minister of Environment and Water. If the Premier has stated that she isn't supportive of putting a price on water, then why does that option continue to be on the menu of choices available?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the hon. member for the question. As the Premier has highlighted it in our ministry, I'm glad to say that the ministry has been called Environment and Water. I like that highlight because we have the opportunity to discuss the ongoing issues, the needs and challenges within water. I want to make it abundantly clear in this House that water will not be for sale to other jurisdictions from Alberta.

Ms Blakeman: Well, that doesn't mean they're not going to let it be for sale inside.

All right. Back to the same minister. Previous ministers of environment have talked about and indeed the Premier has also talked about a consultation process happening on water. When would this consultation actually take place? There have been promises made since I was a starry-eyed optimist. When might it happen?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We will be consulting with Albertans with regard to water allocation as we move forward in the coming months to make sure that the priorities of Albertans are heard first and foremost. My job will be to make sure that I'm hearing all of the issues across this province, what the issues, concerns related to water allocation in this province are, having a good and wholesome discussion with Albertans on that, and then bringing back through the process the conversation that we're having.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Still no timing.

Well, back to the same minister, then: given that a procession of previous ministers have paid lip service to a permanent wetlands policy, for which we prefer a no-net-loss policy, where is the minister placing this issue on her list of priorities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again on the question from the member, all of the issues with regard to the wetlands policy are being closely reviewed right now. I can let the hon. member know and the House know that we are getting very close with regard to the wetlands policy, bringing that through the process. We do have some differences of opinion with regard to no net loss, but we are going to work and have a further discussion as I have as a new minister to go and have those conversations with people. I would say that the wetlands policy will be coming through the process in a short period of time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Royal Alberta Museum

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Arts and culture are a very important part of our society. Last spring it was announced that a new Royal Alberta Museum will be built in a downtown Edmonton location. Given that new ministers are now in place, there have been questions on whether the museum project is moving ahead. To the Minister of Infrastructure: is the project on hold?

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, I can confirm the project is still moving ahead. The new Royal Alberta Museum is an important project for the province and one that's been on the books for some time. It is a great opportunity, and we need to make it a reality. We're currently working with the successful proponent and working through some of the steps in the contract phase. I'm optimistic and confident that we'll begin construction in 2012 for a targeted completion in 2015.

Mr. Benito: My first supplemental, Mr. Speaker, is to the same minister. What are the next steps that need to be taken, then?

Mr. Johnson: Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of things we need to work through still, and we're working with the proponent. One is that we need to make sure that the postal workers have swing space in the interim so that they have a place to move to while we demolish the building. My department is working on that. The other is to work with the federal government and our federal minister of infrastructure to make sure the federal funding is forthcoming. We need to finalize those two things as we move through this contract process.

Mr. Benito: My second supplemental, Mr. Speaker, is to the Minister of Culture and Community Services. What can Albertans expect to see with the new museum?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Basically, the true measure of a great museum is what's inside. We all know that the museum will double the space of what was there previously. About 10 million artifacts that are currently in storage will be displayed. We'll have a suite of galleries with natural history, wildlife, cultural history as well as a children's pavilion with, of course, a signature bug room. We've recently issued an RFQ to help us secure an exhibit design consortium, and we are working with them and moving ahead. It's very exciting.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Alleged Intimidation of Physicians

Mr. Boutilier: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are wondering how the new minister of health can oversee a public inquiry, which he never supported with the previous Premier, when he is now at the centre of a scandal himself pertaining to intimidation of doctors when he called P.J. White, the president of the Alberta Medical Association? How can you do your job, Mr. Minister, in terms of the controversy that surrounds you?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last fall there was a lot of discussion in this House over many of the accusations that have been made by the opposition. With respect to the matter he mentioned, I made a very full statement in the House on November 29, 2010. It's well documented in Hansard.

The larger question and the allegation here that somehow myself or others would be involved in directing an inquiry is, frankly, absurd. Mr. Speaker, as I've said, we're fully committed to an independent inquiry. We'll have much more to say about that in the months to come.

Thank you.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, given that answer, through you to the minister of health, is the fox in the henhouse? In fact, you still have feathers in your mouth when it comes to what is going on in here. Will you apologize to doctors and the doctor in this Assembly, who are standing up for Albertans?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to the hon. member and to this House, I think there are some statements that you simply don't dignify with a response, and that would be one, sir.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, given that the feathers got in the way of the words, I'll ask him one more time. Will he apologize to the doctor in this House and to all Alberta doctors that you have played a role in intimidating relative to the health care of all Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness?
The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mountain Pine Beetle Control

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The pine beetle problem is not isolated to Alberta but is a cross-Canada issue that is now reaching epidemic proportions in our national parks and, in particular, in Jasper national park in my constituency of West Yellowhead. My question is to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. What is the current status of Alberta's fight against mountain pine beetle?

Mr. Oberle: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've just completed aerial surveys to determine the spread of the beetles that were hatched last summer, and I'm pleased to report that in the southwestern portion of the province things look good. We've got no significant new populations there and no new in-flights from British Columbia. I'm concerned to report that the situation is more serious in west-central Alberta. There are very large populations surviving there, and that will be the focus of our efforts this coming summer.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental question is to the same minister. How are we engaging the federal government in our campaign against beetles in Alberta and especially in Jasper and Banff national parks?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The efforts that we've undertaken on our provincial lands we're responsible for. We've worked very closely with the Canadian Forest Service and their tremendous research capacity. They've brought significant tools to bear in our fight against the pine beetle. We have discussions to take to determine whether we have a joint role within the parks, if there is any way Alberta can assist. I'm sure we'll find some synergies with the federal government.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental is to the same minister. The forest industry and the Alberta government are spending millions of dollars to fight this infestation. Is Alberta asking the federal government to provide funding in our fight against these beetles?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've not yet had the opportunity to discuss the funding issue with my federal counterpart. I will say, though, that the federal government already has been at the table with funding, significant amounts of funding, in dealing with the environmental impacts of the outbreak. As I said, we have now an issue within the national parks – I'm sure the federal government will be concerned about that – and that will underline for us that this is not just a provincial but a national issue, and we'll be speaking to the minister soon.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

International Trade Representatives

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans were appalled earlier this month when the newly minted Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations disregarded open and honest competition and unilaterally plucked Gary Mar into his latest pork-barrel position in Hong Kong. To the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations: will the minister table the evaluatory report card of Gary Mar's performance in Washington that eliminated the need for considering other candidates for the Hong Kong office?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise and take a question from the hon. member. We had an opportunity to position a candidate in the Hong Kong office to look after our Asian offices. We were very pleased to surface a candidate and took advantage of that.

2:30

Mr. Chase: Thank you. To the same minister: given the importance of the Keystone pipeline and foreign trade, how can the minister continue to favour government friends in our Washington office?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, our Washington office continues to be staffed and operated at full capacity. We have a fellow by the name of David Manning who is doing work for us there on an ongoing basis. Whether it's the Keystone XL project, low-carbon fuel standard, or a variety of border trade issues that we have, we're right on top of it in Washington.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm worried about the being right on top of it, what that connotes in this province.

Given the Premier's promise for openness and transparency in government, will the minister stop political patronage and commit to an open and competitive process for the appointment of Alberta's international trade representatives?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, what I would suggest is that finding the absolute best candidate for the job is paramount. Whether that entails a competition or that involves an appointment, that is the process that we will use.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays

Community Restorative Justice

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are all for the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. By all accounts the Alberta community restorative justice grant is a highly successful program that, unfortunately, was cut in the 2011-12 budget. After much public criticism this summer funding was found to restore the grants for these kinds of programs. Could the minister explain the flip-flop?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The previous Solicitor General, the minister responsible for Sustainable Resource Development, met in September with the Restorative Justice Association board and advised that the funding would be reinstated. I fully support this commitment. The request to relevant organizations went out in October. I'm looking forward, actually, to hearing some of the applications back under the restorative justice program.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental: how can this minister claim funding was found from within the department when this cut should not have happened in the first place?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Victims of Crime Act, which I believe was Bill 15 of this year, gives the office of the Solicitor General authority to make grants to areas involving victims, of course, and that includes the restorative justice program. There are some guidelines set under this, and we'll follow the guidelines, but I'm confident that this program's continuation is in the best interests of the victims of crime.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, how can this minister ensure that the victims of crime fund is used appropriately and is not a slush fund? What controls are in place to ensure that this important fund is spent responsibly?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, the Victims of Crime Act stipulates clear guidelines as to where funding under this act can actually go. We will be following that. It's not a slush fund. It's designed to support the victims of crime. That's why it's called the Victims of Crime Act.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In September 2010 Dr. Paul Parks, president of emergency medicine in the Alberta Medical Association, warned Alberta Health Services and the former health minister of the potential catastrophic collapse of timely emergency care delivery in the upcoming months. Over a year later the emergency room physicians at Alberta Health Services website are saying little has changed. To the minister: how does the minister explain the continued failure to meet your own targets?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, Dr. Felix Soibelman, who is the current chair of the section of emergency medicine at the Alberta Medical Association, has already been in touch with me. We discussed the meeting that they held over this past weekend and are arranging to meet together with Alberta Health Services and other stakeholders who are key to addressing this problem in the coming week.

Dr. Swann: So a non-answer if I've ever heard one, Mr. Speaker.

The minister says they're trying to meet all seniors' needs at the same time. Well, has he learned nothing from the H1N1 epidemic? You cannot meet all seniors' needs at all times. You have to prioritize the high-risk people first. When are you going to do that?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, in fact, the question was asked and answered earlier this afternoon. The fact of the matter is that we are experiencing a surge in emergency department wait times in the last month. However, that is consistent with the experience in the last few years. If you look at our year-over-year performance over the last few years, those waiting times have come down. Are they good enough yet? Absolutely not. Can we do better, and do we need to work with stakeholders in order to find the right strategies, including adding continuing care spaces and expanding primary care and family care clinics? Yes, we do, and we're doing that.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, with emergency rooms at or over capacity and flu season looming, will this minister now formally begin assessing patient outcomes, or are you going to wait for courageous ER physicians to again start collecting the data for you?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not a physician, and I am not in a position to stand here and comment on how or when or under what circumstances we assess patient outcomes. What I can say is that Alberta Health Services is working very closely with physicians and with nurses and with other professionals to identify what those outcomes would need to be. We're watching the situation very, very carefully.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Aboriginal and Métis Relations

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the hon. Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations. Now that aboriginal relations is no longer a stand-alone ministry, how can we be sure that First Nation issues remain a priority of the government of Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and to the hon. member for the question, indeed an important question that's been raised over the last couple of weeks. Certainly, the intergovernmental – government to government – relationship that we have with aboriginal nations, communities, and Métis in our province is extraordinarily important. I believe that it's been positioned so that the linkage with our federal partners, with the other ministries that we're going to work together with is ideally positioned. Important to remember, too, that all of the resources and budget are still within the department.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister: what about your relationships with the Métis leaders and their communities?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, just this morning I met with the Assembly of Treaty Chiefs, and I had an opportunity to speak with all of the chiefs, elders, and interested parties from throughout the province. We had a discussion about their vision for what we're going to be doing, going ahead together as a government and government, and I had an opportunity to share a little bit about myself and my interest and passion for outcomes in this area. So we're already dialoguing.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Minister, you mentioned that you met with the Assembly of Treaty Chiefs today. Firstly, does that include the Métis chiefs as well? And could you give us an update on how things went and what issues were addressed in that meeting?

Mr. Dallas: It doesn't include Métis, Mr. Speaker. That is another group that we'll be meeting with in the very near future. One of the things that I wanted to speak to is the importance of our protocol agreement and the fact that we've indicated that we're prepared to conduct a protocol meeting this fall. So we very much look forward to getting together with the grand chiefs, the vice-chiefs, ministers from the government and immediately engaging in a dialogue. We have initiated and are continuing our discussions with the Métis people on important considerations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Children's Services

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Government has gone through many significant reorganizations in the last few years, and one of the most dramatic that we have seen recently is, of course, the creation of the new Human Services ministry, a superministry as some would call it. It has been expressed to me by my constituents that we run the risk that services to very vulnerable children will be lost in this very big entity. To the Minister of Human Services: can you explain how these valuable services will be preserved for these children?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, it's really at the core of the concept of the Ministry of Human Services that we need to have a consolidated social policy framework which ensures that we start with the children. We make sure that the children are protected when they need protection, that their families are supported when they need support, that there's ability there to support adults to get job training when they need it so that they can access a good job, that the labour standards are in place. It all really does come together very strongly in a social policy framework which centres around children.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: can you assure the House, Mr. Minister, that as you work through this very significant reorganization, that the service levels will be maintained at the highest levels, that these vulnerable young Albertans can look to the highest level of services from you and your officials?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, just because there's a reorganization doesn't mean that the people that are on the ground have changed in any way. Those groups are still working, those people are still working, as we work to bring together the things that we can create with greater synergy and as we look to see what things we need to do better.

One of the critical pieces is that we have good people at the front end of the system. We need to empower them to use their judgment, and we need to make sure that they have the skills to be able to use that judgment in the most appropriate way.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: No. That's fine, Mr. Speaker.
Thank you.

The Speaker: That concludes the question period today, hon. members. Twenty-one members participated, with 123 questions and responses. That's a very large number, and I appreciate that. I want to say that I've looked forward to this question period for a long period of time.

Maybe there are going to be some new beginnings as well. I want to congratulate the Leader of the Official Opposition and the Premier for the brevity and the clarity in their questions and in their responses. By way of your examples today I hope that will set the tone for all other hon. members in raising questions and in responding to questions as we move into the future.

Secondly, I only received one note from one member, basically pointing out that members continue to use preambles in their second and third questions, and there are four or five members who actually did that today. You'll be guarded in your own comments and you'll have self-discipline with respect to this, I'm sure, as we go into the future.

I'm pleased that the leader of the Wildrose Party is in the Speaker's gallery today. This has been one of the better behaved sessions we've had with her members in the House, so I'd invite you to come back each and every day to assist the Speaker in his role in the Assembly in keeping decorum in place. [Disturbance in the gallery]

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order! Order in the gallery! You're not part of these proceedings.

The Speaker: Well, why not? It's the 24th day of October. We're one week from Halloween, so let's get into the spirit.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

20th Anniversary of Ukraine's Independence

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Two decades ago, on August 24, 1991, in a historic move the Parliament of Ukraine established Ukraine as an independent, sovereign, and democratic nation. Ukraine's road to democracy was not an easy one and was achieved after centuries of struggle filled with countless political and cultural repressions.

I'm proud to say that Canada was the first western nation, Mr. Speaker, to recognize Ukraine's independence, and our country continues to be a strong supporter of Ukraine's democratization. The future for Ukraine is unwritten, and I along with others are hopeful and optimistic that Ukraine will continue on the path to freedom.

Mr. Speaker, I rose earlier to introduce and welcome to the Assembly representatives from Alberta's Ukrainian community, here in recognition of the 20th anniversary of Ukraine's independence. It was my honour and privilege along with the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek to recognize and participate in the important milestone celebration hosted by the Ukrainian Canadian Congress, Edmonton branch, on August 28, 2011.

I commend the leadership of this important organization and its member organizations for their steadfast support to ensure that the cultural, political, and economic contributions of Ukrainian settlement and people in our province are recognized and cherished across generations. Truly this is a living example of the Alberta spirit, which is exemplified in many communities across our great province, including within the city of Edmonton. Please accept my heartfelt thanks for adding immeasurably to our city and great province.

Mr. Speaker, this also marks the 120th anniversary of Ukrainian settlement in Canada, and I urge our government to continue to stand strong with the Ukrainian people. Best wishes to all Albertans of Ukrainian heritage who celebrated the 20th anniversary of Ukraine's independence and settlement in our country. God bless Ukraine. God bless Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Human Services Ministry

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Superministry or megamistake? Attributing the term "super" to the new Ministry of Human Services provides little assurance when applied in the Alberta context. A $1.3 billion superboard cost overrun, the loss of local decision-making, governance infighting, ministerial revolving-door changes without improved results, longer surgical waiting lists, increased emergency waiting times, and large CEO severances for work not done are just a few of the superfailures associated with this multiflawed reorganizational attempt. Whose bright idea was it to superglue the two most spotted ministries of employment and children and youth services, with the highest combined casualty rate and least productivity in resolving human crises, into a megaministry?

Historically these ministries have failed to protect children and youth, particularly aboriginal children in care. They have neither ensured safe job sites for all working Albertans, nor have they guaranteed that families of workers injured or killed on the job would be fairly dealt with by the Workers' Compensation Board. Just as two wrongs don't make a right, how can the amalgamation of the two least productive ministries solve the problem of the inadequate provision and protection of human services?

A preferential solution would be in adapting Manitoba's Jordan's principle precedent, which ensures that the first level of government, whether federal or provincial, to be made aware of a service provision requirement is responsible for its successful resolution. Substitute "ministry" for "level of government." Ensure that regardless of which ministry receives the cry for help, it oversees the case through to its successful conclusion, not by ping-ponging the person requiring services from ministry to ministry nor by putting them on a super waiting list and certainly not by bonusing front-line caseworkers to arbitrarily reduce their most complex files. Instead, provide the front-line gatekeepers with the necessary training, support, salary, and authority to properly serve our most vulnerable.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Priority Printing Ltd.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know and indeed as everyone in this Assembly is aware by now, I am particularly fond of the slogan It's All in Calder. I'd like to talk about the businesses and people who are unique to my constituency.

Earlier I introduced four people from the company Priority Printing. This summer company owner Tim Downey and his staff celebrated 25 years in business, and what a remarkable business it is. Priority Printing is the company that prints, collates, folds, packages, and ships all of the documentation that we use to keep this Assembly functioning. Tim and his staff are keen businesspeople. Everyone knows full well that, frankly, the only risk to their business would be for us to stop talking. In other words, Mr. Speaker, it is reasonably certain that they will prosper for the foreseeable future. Because there is no other group of people with quite as great an interest in the things we say in this House, it seems only appropriate that after 25 years of reading about everyone and everything else in Hansard, they should have their opportunity to read about themselves in Hansard.

The staff at Priority can tell you exactly who said what and how many times they said it. They give you, Mr. Speaker, useful data like how many pages were printed, how much all of those pages weighed, and virtually anything else about turning the things we say into the things that we read in this Legislature. It is important and interesting stuff.

When I toured the plant, I was surprised and happy to be reacquainted with Joanne Safron, who is the younger sister of a schoolmate of mine, Rhonda Grywachski, that I had the pleasure of spending 12 years with. I always enjoy meeting people, someone like Joanne from so long ago, and it's even more fun when you find out, Mr. Speaker, that they're keeping an eye on you to this very day, much like her sister used to do so very long ago. Say hi to Rhonda for me, Joanne.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Grande Prairie Accident Victims

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great sadness that I rise today to comment on the terrible vehicle accident that occurred this weekend in Grande Prairie, which claimed the lives of four teenage boys and left one boy in critical yet stable condition. The loss of Matthew Deller, Vincent Stover, Walter Borden-Wilkins, and Tanner Hildebrand has left the community of Grande Prairie heartbroken and in a period of mourning.

Tragic accidents like this one are always difficult to comprehend as they affect many different people on many levels. That is why it is so important for the people of Alberta to provide comfort and support to those who have been greatly affected by this devastating incident. Mr. Speaker, our sincerest condolences go to the families of these young boys. As well, we stand behind Zach Judd, who is the lone survivor, and his family through these difficult times.

To the members of the Grande Prairie community, the Grande Prairie composite high school staff and students, and to the Warriors football team: we offer you our thoughts and prayers as you cope with this tragedy.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Great Kids Awards

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise in the Assembly today to congratulate Alberta's Great Kids. Our province is full of inspiring children and youth, who make a positive and lasting difference for others in their own special way at home, at school, and in their communities.

This past weekend at the 12th annual Great Kids awards ceremony in Edmonton the Minister of Human Services, the Hon. Dave Hancock, recognized 16 outstanding young people from across Alberta between the ages of five and 18 for their generosity, courage, and strong spirit. Their activities included volunteering, mentoring, and fundraising initiatives.

Award recipients were selected by a committee of community members and government staff. One example would be 16-year-old Dyllan Duperron from Valleyview, Alberta. In early 2011 he ran from the Jack Ady cancer centre in Lethbridge to the Grande Prairie cancer centre over the course of eight weeks to raise more than $15,000 for the Alberta Cancer Foundation in honour of his uncle, who passed away from cancer.

Joined by family and friends at the Fantasyland Hotel, each Great Kid received a laptop computer from IBM and attractions passes from West Edmonton Mall. More than 120 children and youth were nominated for the award by their teachers, parents, neighbours, and peers.

Alberta's Great Kids stand out as positive role models for all young people and people of all ages. I encourage everyone to visit greatkids.alberta.ca to read about the 2011 Great Kids program. Their stories of achievement and resilience make all of us proud. Alberta's future is bright thanks to the incredible talents and promise of our children and youth.

Thank you.

Slave Lake Fire

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, May 15, 2011, is a day my constituents and I will never forget. That day the forest fire east of Slave Lake jumped highway 88 and destroyed about 40 per cent of the town, the MD of Lesser Slave River, and Sawridge First Nation, leaving some 300-plus families homeless. The next day a second fire south of Slave Lake jumped highway 2, striking Wagner, Widewater, Canyon Creek, and Assinneau and burning many more homes. Within a few days nine jurisdictions in my constituency had declared a state of local emergency, with fires threatening Red Earth Creek, Gift Lake, Atikameg, Loon River, Cadotte Lake, Chisholm, and East Prairie.

Although this disaster is over and there are still residual effects today, I want to recognize the individuals, groups, and organizations who were involved in our unforgettable series of events. To our volunteer firemen, SRD, RCMP and peace officers, EMTs, and all the emergency responders from the surrounding jurisdictions and around the province: thank you.

Words cannot describe our thanks to the Red Cross workers and all the other volunteers who helped clothe, feed, and provide short-term financial assistance during and after the crisis.

To the citizens of the region, thank you for checking up on your neighbours to ensure everyone was safe and able to leave as you carried out an orderly evacuation of some 10,000 people, not knowing what you were driving into or through. You are my heroes.

To the people of Edmonton, Peace River, St. Isadore, Wabasca, High Prairie, Valleyview, Swan Hills, Whitecourt, Barrhead, Westlock, and Athabasca, you opened your arms and homes and facilities to provide emergency food and shelter on such short notice. You make me proud to be an Albertan.

I can't forget the tireless efforts of the employees of the POC in Edmonton, who immediately took action to guide, advise, and direct the overall management of the emergency. You worked 24/7. Thank you.

To the elected officials of the town, the MD, the First Nation, and all your employees who dealt with the crisis and are currently working on rebuilding our community: thank you.

My constituents and I are so grateful for the leadership demonstrated by then Premier Ed Stelmach and his cabinet in establishing a DM committee to help the elected officials deal with this disaster and providing much-needed assistance so fast. Big thanks.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Calgary Small Business Week

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. October 17 to 21 was Calgary Small Business Week. This week provided small businesses with opportunities to highlight and celebrate the success of small businesses in Alberta and in my constituency, which is home to about 200 small businesses. This Small Business Week also included a trade show, keynote luncheon speakers, and an awards celebration, which I had the pleasure of attending.

Small business is the backbone of Alberta's business sector, especially in Calgary. In 2010 95 per cent of all businesses in Calgary were classified as small, and they had the highest number of small businesses per capita of all the major Canadian cities. But despite these impressive figures challenges arise. Obstacles need to be overcome, and everyone could use a little help now and then. Alberta recognizes this and believes in supporting these growing businesses as best we can. This is why we have many outlets and services for small businesses in Alberta to take advantage of.

For instance, the government of Alberta has partnered with the government of Canada to offer Business Link, a website full of information, contacts, and tools for up-and-coming businesses in Alberta. We also offer the Alberta tax advantage. We have some of the lowest business taxes in Canada, allowing small businesses to get on their feet and grow. The Alberta government provides numerous grants and funds to various sectors of industry, from agriculture to science and technology.

This is a great province to start a business in, and this became very apparent to me when it took me three months to find an office space in my constituency when I first got elected.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta supports our small businesses in many, many ways, and in turn they support us, helping our province grow and keeping our economy strong.

Thank you.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on a Standing Order 15 motion.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with Standing Order 15(2) I am raising a point of privilege, that in November and December 2010 the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek interfered with the ability of members of this House to fulfill their duties when as Minister of Health and Wellness he made certain statements regarding the source of materials contained in a document titled Alberta's Health Legislation Moving Forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Pursuant to Standing Order 30, having provided your office the appropriate notice and having the required copies to be made for distribution, I wish to request of the House that upon completion of the daily Routine I be allowed to move to adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly in order that the House may debate a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the future direction and place and opportunity of Alberta in Canada and the world given the current economic uncertainty in Europe, the state of the U.S. economy, the importance of Asian growth and markets, and the impact of same on Alberta and Albertans.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table for the benefit of the House the appropriate number of copies of a memorandum which I wrote to yourself on October 20 and titled House Leaders Agreement, which deals with understandings that were made between House leaders relative to the debate that I just gave notice of this afternoon and the time parameters which we will be asking the House to agree to later on.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings. The first consists of five notebooks which were distributed this past week to supporters of the Alberta Association for Community Living at their fundraising breakfast at the Palliser Fairmont hotel, which the member for Calgary-Buffalo and I attended. The message on the cover by George Bernard Shaw states, "I am of the opinion that my life belongs to the community and as long as I live, it is my privilege to do for it whatever I can." AACL is frequently both the first hope and the last resort for disabled Alberta families.

My second tabling is the program for a fantastic, award-winning one-man play put on by Ghost River Theatre entitled The Highest Step in the World, which is currently running at Calgary's Pumphouse Theatre, upon whose stage I have thrice trod in Storybook Theatre productions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to have the opportunity in tablings to table three pieces of correspondence that I have received from my constituents. The first is from Edith Greene, who currently resides in Lions Village, which is a life lease facility. She is writing to me to ask the Assembly to please move forward on creating life lease legislation as soon as possible.

The second tabling I have is from Bev Burke, who for 27 years produced the English Express newspaper. She was writing to thank me for my efforts but also to remind the government that not all of the pieces that English Express used to cover have been picked up by other providers of the service.

Finally, an e-mail from Ron Howard, who is most vexed that every time there is a slight, small, tiny increase in seniors' benefits, there is a corresponding clawback in some way, shape, or form, in this particular instance in his subsidized rent.

Thank you very much.

3:00

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) says: "at 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly."

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, it's the first day back. I would ask the House for unanimous consent to suspend Standing Order 7(7) and allow the Routine to continue until completed.

The Speaker: All right. There's a request for unanimous consent to waive Standing Order 7(7). I will ask two questions. All members in favour of the waiver request, please say aye. Is anyone opposed? If so, say no.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, your plea has been heard.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much. I appreciate that, hon. member. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter dated October 19, last Wednesday, to the chair of the Alberta Utilities Commission from the current Minister of Energy regarding the four applications for critical transmission infrastructure.

The second tabling I have is a letter dated October 6, 2011, and it's from a distinguished resident of Strathcona county, John C. Murray, to the hon. Premier regarding the Keystone pipeline project.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Ms Blakeman: I'm sorry. If I could be allowed to table on behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition, I'd appreciate it.

The Speaker: Absolutely. Proceed.

Ms Blakeman: I have eight tablings that support the questions that he asked in question period today. I'm going to go through them as quickly as I can. One is e-mails, that were obtained through freedom of information, showing Energy ministry officials corresponding with Williams Energy and their lobbyist prior to the announcement.

The second is the Energy ministry news release announcing those changes to the IEEP.

The third is the Williams Energy news release announcing their partnership and how pleased they were with the government announcement. The drafting of this was actually done prior to the changes.

The fourth is the Williams Energy capital guidance filing from February 2011. This document was part of their planning process; therefore, they were working on it well before the date.

Fifth, NOVA Chemicals' news release on their partnership with Williams Energy in which they credit the IEEP with being instrumental in the partnership deal.

The order in council of March 23, 2011, approving the changes to the IEEP.

The provincial government news release announcing the creation of the Competitiveness Council, which recommended the changes to the IEEP.

Finally, the entry in the lobbyists registry showing that an individual, Walentin Mirosh, was a designated lobbyist for NOVA and was eventually taken off the lobbyists registry prior to his appointment to the Alberta Competitiveness Council.

Thank you for your patience, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a document titled Proposed Alberta Health Act, a document outlining options for privatization of health care by this government, including the tabling of contentious regulations involving privatization of health care and delaying them until fall 2012. I have the correct number to table with you.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others?

Hon. members, as required by Standing Order 114, I'm pleased to present you with the 2010 annual report of the Legislative Assembly Office and the 2010 annual report of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Alberta branch. The LAO annual report includes financial statements for the fiscal year ended March 31, 2010, and highlights the activities and achievements of the LAO for the calendar year ended December 31, 2010.

Privilege Misleading the House

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the Standing Order 15 application. Now, just in looking at the application in terms of what you provided to me earlier today and by brief comment, I understand that the comments will be made with respect to the former hon. Minister of Health and Wellness. That's correct. Okay. That gentleman is not here today. He advised me late last week that he was attending to a family matter.

As this is an application for a motion of privilege, I would view that to be the most sacred of all applications. The presence of a member, as per what our standing orders say, should be reviewed as part of this. So if the intent today with your application is to basically move a point of privilege against an hon. member, that's one thing. If it's simply to give notice, recognizing that when I had a brief discussion this morning with your leader, I advised him that the hon. member would not be here today nor tomorrow – I know that in a privilege the intent is to move it as quickly as possible, so there should be no delay in terms of when you receive certain information and you want to make a motion. So if the intent today is to move it but without major argument on it, I think that in all likelihood, in fairness – well, not knowing what you're going to say, perhaps I should just wait until I hear what you say, but I may be intervening as well.

Please proceed.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My understanding from your discussions with the leader of the NDP caucus is exactly what you've just stated in that I understood that you would most likely be asking that this matter be deferred to when the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek was back in the House. Without question, the nature of our concern revolves around simply our view that in that member's mischaracterizing the source of the information that is contained in the document Alberta's Health Legislation: Moving Forward, he interfered with the ability of members of this Assembly to hold the appropriate authors of that document accountable for the public policy decisions and directions that were implicit in that document.

My understanding, based on your discussions with the leader of the NDP caucus, is that further conversations or arguments around this point of privilege would be deferred until that member returned to the House. So based on that discussion, I understand that I will get into more detail about the nature of our concerns when that member is present.

The Speaker: I appreciate that, hon. member, and in fairness, I think, recognizing Standing Order 15(4), which also states:

If the Member whose conduct is called into question is not present, the matter shall be deferred to the next day that the Member is present unless the Speaker rules that, in the circumstances, the matter may be dealt with in the Member's absence.

Further, 15(3) states:

If the Speaker is of the opinion that the matter may not be fairly dealt with at that time, the Speaker may defer debate on the matter to a time when he or she determines it may be fairly dealt with.

My understanding from a conversation last week with the hon. member, the former Minister of Health and Wellness, is that he was away on important family matters and would not be returning till the House reconvenes on November 21.

You have given notice. It will be on the record that you want to make an application for this, and it will be one of the first orders of business after conclusion of the Routine when we reconvene. If I understand, it is November 21. Would that be fine?

Ms Notley: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I'm satisfied with that outcome.

The Speaker: Okay. I appreciate that.

Government House Leader, did you want to make a comment on this?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, Mr. Speaker. If I may, I would also note that the letter to yourself, a copy of which had been provided to us, is excessively vague with respect to the nature of the documents. I'm wondering if it might be appropriate to ask that the particular documents being referred to in the letter also be provided so that a proper response might be available to the member.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, as the House leader may not have noticed, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood just tabled that document. The document itself is one which specifically outlines a number of issues, clearly drafted by public officials within the ministry of health, shared with the minister of health, and dated well before the public hearings which previously the minister of health had suggested were the source of the information that was in the subsequent document, which was the subject of his statements last fall, last November. So it is an analysis of the document which the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood tabled today, which contradicts very clearly the statements made in this Assembly last November.

Emergency Debate

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. Government House Leader, on your Standing Order 30 application.

Alberta's Place in the Global Economy

Mr. Hancock: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to rise today to move pursuant to Standing Order 30:

Be it resolved that the ordinary business of the Legislative Assembly be adjourned to discuss a matter of urgent public importance, namely the future direction, place, and opportunity of Alberta in Canada and the world given the current economic uncertainty in Europe, the state of the U.S. economy, the importance of Asian growth and markets, and the impact of same on Alberta and Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, we have requested the opportunity to bring forward a Standing Order 30, which is to allow the discussion of a matter of urgent public importance. Nothing could be more important at this moment in time to Albertans than to hear from their leadership, the Premier and the leaders of the opposition parties in this House, about issues that concern them because Alberta trades out into the world. We are a trading province. We sell our products, whether they be oil and gas, agriculture, or forestry, into world markets, and the world markets are in an incredible state of disarray.

Nothing could be more important to the future of the province right now than to hear from our leaders with respect to that direction of Alberta and Alberta's place and what we can do in the context of what is happening in the global climate. It's particularly important, Mr. Speaker, because both the leadership of the government and the leadership of the Official Opposition have changed since we last sat, and the province has been party to and participants in leadership processes to select new leadership, to select new direction, and to have that new leadership explain that new direction to Albertans and clearly enunciate a way forward.

It couldn't be more important to Albertans right now to hear what that way forward would be given that seniors and those approaching retirement are concerned about their investments; our farmers, who have just had one of their best years ever, are concerned about the ability to sell; and the forestry industry is still in a state of flux. All of those things that we do in this province trade out into the world, and our economy, our livelihood, and our quality of life depend on that.

We have new leadership in the province: a new Premier, as you so eloquently pointed out today, and a new leader of the Official Opposition, as you eloquently pointed out earlier today. Nothing could be more urgent for this House to discuss than the future direction of the province given the state of the climate of the world.

I would also point out, Mr. Speaker, that by my memo to you of October 20 House leaders have agreed that this is an appropriate way to frame a discussion for this afternoon in this House and that all parties, therefore, would seemingly request. I have provided you with the memo, and I can assure you – I have e-mails from each of the other House leaders indicating that the memo accurately describes our conversation and agreement – that we would agree, then, as House leaders that this matter should go forward in this manner.

I would just end by saying, Mr. Speaker, that if, indeed, you and the House agree that we should proceed, we would then be asking you to request unanimous consent with respect to the speaking times and the end-of-day standing orders so that we can conform to the terms of the agreement with respect to allowing the Premier, the Opposition House Leader, and other leaders to speak to this very urgent matter.

The Speaker: Just a second, hon. member. The rules clearly state that under Standing Order 30(2), one "Member may briefly state the arguments in favour of the request for leave and the Speaker may allow such debate as [the Speaker] considers relevant to the question of urgency of debate" and then rule on it. As I have heard the submission, I've also had access now to documents that basically confirm that leaders of the other parties in the Assembly have at least agreed to this.

In terms of argument with respect to urgency, they can be very limited. I'm quite prepared to move this along. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What I would like to say about the government's Standing Order 30 application is that, frankly, I'm not over the moon about the use of the Standing Order 30, particularly the possible precedents that can be taken from this.

I am particularly disappointed in the substitution or subsuming of private members' business, the pre-empting of private members' business for government business. The government has more than sufficient control of the agenda. I will state very firmly on behalf of my caucus and other opposition caucuses that we were not in favour of the adjournment. Our agreement was very much limited in how the presentations would proceed and the time limits that we would honour given those presentations. We have agreed to that. We will stand behind it.

I really ask the government, with all the parliamentary tools available at their disposal, to find a replacement time for the private members' business which has been lost today. I would like to see it recovered. We don't get a lot of private members' business time in this House, and I would not like to end this session and this year with one less day than we were entitled to.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll keep this very brief, from what you said.

We did agree, as the House leader pointed out, to the business of the day and adjourning the regular business to talk about and debate the issue of the world financial crisis and some of the issues related to it and how it will affect Alberta and what we can do going forward to lessen its impact on us and so forth.

I also want to make it clear that we did not as a caucus agree at all to this disrespectful, frankly, two-day session in the Legislature. It needs to be very clear that we feel that this was a huge slap in the face of democracy and something that, specifically with this Premier and her record of advocating for democracy overseas,

I wouldn't expect from her. She needs to conduct herself better in that regard.

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. members, the chair is prepared to rule on whether the request for leave for this motion to proceed is in order under Standing Order 30. Notice of the application was received in the Speaker's office on Friday, October 21, at 11:08 a.m., so the time limit of two hours prior to the start of the session has been met.

The chair wants to say that this is a unique moment for the Assembly and for the province of Alberta because there is not only a new Premier but a new Leader of the Official Opposition as well.

It is clear to the chair that there is no opportunity given the matters on the Order Paper for these individuals to address the Assembly, let alone the province of Alberta, on the current global economic condition. The chair has the duty as your Speaker to ensure that the Assembly retains its position as the focus for debate by the democratically elected representatives in this province.

Furthermore – and this is very important – the fact that House leaders have come to an agreement concerning the need for this discussion is a clear indication of the will of the Assembly, which a Speaker can take into consideration. House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, states at page 695:

The Speaker may take into account the general wish of the House to have an emergency debate and grant a request for an emergency debate.

It goes on to say:

Similarly, the Chair has periodically allowed an emergency debate on an issue which was not necessarily urgent within the meaning conferred by the rule, but was one on which the House of Commons timetable prevented any discussion in a timely manner.

The chair is of the view that this quotation reflects the unique situation that exists today. Accordingly, the chair finds the application to be in order and shall put the question. Shall the debate on the urgent matter proceed?

The Speaker: Okay. Having done that, we now have a successful Standing Order 30 application. However, there has to be a whole series of rules that now have to be waived. The debate in the matter put forward by the Government House Leader will proceed, but in order to apply the desired rules agreed to by the House leaders, there has to be support by the members of the Assembly. Before the debate proceeds, everyone needs to be clear about the rules.

Under the House leaders' agreement – and I'm assuming that every member in this Assembly has seen such agreement, has a copy of such agreement, is cognizant of the details of such agreement, but I'll just repeat these very briefly – the Premier and the Leader of the Official Opposition are entitled to speak for one hour each. The representative of the Wildrose caucus, the leader of the New Democratic caucus, and the Alberta caucus representative are entitled to 30 minutes each. If any of these individuals does not use his or her allotted time, then after all these individuals have spoken, another member of the respective caucus may speak in the same rotation, but the cumulative total must not exceed the time limits just mentioned.

If everyone uses the allotted time, then the Assembly will continue past the normal adjournment hour of 6 p.m., stipulated in standing orders 3(1) and 4(2). Under the House leaders' agreement the debate would continue until the speaking times have been reached, which could be three and one-half hours after the Premier starts speaking. Furthermore, the allocation of time departs from the time limits for speaking found in Standing Order 30(5). Also, there is a limitation on the number of members who will be speaking.

The chair will thus ask two questions to cover all the procedural issues associated with conducting this unique, historic debate. The rulings of such will have no precedent in future discussion by future Speakers in future Assemblies.

There will be two questions, as I said. Is there unanimous consent to waive the necessary standing orders in order to conduct the emergency debate as indicated in the House leaders' agreement of October 20, 2011? All those in favour, please say yes. If a member is opposed, please say no.

The Speaker: All right. Let's see. Three and a half hours from now will take us through. Clerk, you will keep time. Any time left over in the one-hour allocation for the Premier – if the Premier speaks for 60 minutes, well, then, that's it. If the Premier speaks for 50 minutes, then after the Leader of the Official Opposition, the leader of the Wildrose caucus, the leader of the ND caucus, the independent member, a government member can come back in the rotation as we go through.

Hon. Madam Premier, just before you begin, we haven't said "Orders of the Day," but we can have coffee and other refreshments brought in.

Ms Redford: Well, good afternoon, Mr. Speaker, ministers, hon. Members of the Legislative Assembly, and Albertans. It is an honour to stand before you today for the first time as Alberta's Premier. I'm so proud of our home, a great province that is doubly blessed. We have an astounding wealth of resources, more than enough to sustain our families and crown our communities, and we have an extraordinary natural heritage, timelessly beautiful landscapes that stir the soul and linger in the mind's eye. Albertans understand that we have the best of both worlds. That is why we take such a fierce pride in our province. I know that for each of us and for generations to come, we can leave Alberta better than we found it.

I requested that the Legislative Assembly's ordinary business be adjourned in order to speak to Albertans. I believe it is important to keep them informed about their government's plan for Alberta's future in the face of ongoing global economic difficulties. This is not just about the need to build prosperity. It's about anticipating our province's needs amid great uncertainty in the world around us.

This government has two basic responsibilities. We must shield Alberta from the hazards of challenging times in which we live, and we must help the province adapt to make the most of the opportunities that these same challenges offer, rising where others falter. We must keep the economy free and unfettered. We must maintain steady job growth and provide Albertans with the opportunities that they expect. We must offer high-quality and far-reaching public services, and we must preserve the province's finances. We must define where we are, where we are going, and where we want to be in a fast-changing and unpredictable world. With this government's guidance we will work together to strengthen Alberta and prepare it to overcome every obstacle.

Today I want to explain what we are doing about our place in the world in light of these circumstances. I also want to explain this government's stand so you can understand what we have set out to do and why. Understanding is the key to effective co-operation, and only close collaboration in this Assembly will see Alberta safely through. We need a session built on thoughtful legislation and constructive debate, one that creates sensible solutions to improve Alberta's quality of life. The decisions we make together now will shape the province for a long time to come.

We have all heard of the crises in Europe. Debt is the trap that has caught so many struggling governments. Debt has proven the death of countless dreams. Many European countries are struggling with debt burdens that in some cases exceed a hundred per cent of GDP. Those unfortunate nations spent too much and took in too little. Now they are faced with hard choices: raise taxes and kill jobs, cut spending and devastate the social safety net, or both. Their citizens are paying the price. The homes they loved have changed beyond all recognition.

Alberta has no net debt. In fact, we have $5,700 in assets per person and the highest credit rating available. We have the lowest overall taxes in Canada. We have disciplined spending priorities and no long-term debt. We are blessed with a strong economy built on a powerful industrial base and a young population. We have one of the greatest energy sectors in the world. We are better off than many other places, and we have a future anyone else would envy, one this government will work to make better still.

But we can't take this for granted. Good fortune will not fall into our laps because we ask for it or think we're entitled to it. We have to earn it. We can stay safe from these threats. This government will protect and strengthen our province. We will make it better. We will make the tough decisions. We will spend wisely and save intelligently, managing our finances to protect future Albertans from debt. We will introduce the necessary reforms to make sure that this province keeps growing. There is no other way.

It is normal to want the good times to last forever, and it is natural to hope that larger jurisdictions will get things back on track. This is the sort of thinking we must avoid because in this day and age we are all defined not by our hopes and wants but by our actions. To prosper, we must seize opportunity wherever we find it. We must open up new avenues of growth. We can become the lead driver in North America's economy.

The United States is and will remain our biggest customer, but their recovery is slow. They are struggling with crushing debt and political divisions on a number of fronts. We must search for new partners in foreign markets. Our prosperity depends on our ability to promote Alberta on a world stage. We must be bold. If we do this right, we can become the world's preferred supplier in food, energy, and innovation and realize the incredible future that comes with this status. But, above all, we must be disciplined, watching closely and working together to insulate Alberta from harm.

Our success at home and abroad is ultimately driven by people. The government will make maintaining Alberta's quality of life its highest priority for Albertans. We will continue to help Albertans excel because a strong economy depends on stronger people, and strong people depend on essential services that keep up with their needs. This means supporting a strong social network to protect our most vulnerable and to support families. We are committed to maintaining programs and services for vulnerable Albertans while ensuring long-term program sustainability.

Nonprofits have a major role to play. Albertans are passionate volunteers, and my government will support them in their efforts to reach out to those who need it most, especially during difficult economic times. Over the past four years the government has devoted nearly $300 million to help nonprofits with capital and operating costs. Through the community spirit program, as one example, the government offers tax credits and matching donations to encourage private philanthropy. Since 2008 eligible nonprofits have divided $52.9 million in donation grants. We are changing lives community by community.

One example of that is a program that started in February 2009. The Strathmore branch of the Foothills Advocacy in Motion Society opened. It has since helped Albertans with developmental disabilities find and maintain full- or part-time employment. That's nine more Albertans who have enriched our communities and their own lives and their families' through fulfilling jobs and personal independence, and that must happen across the province.

This government will continue to support and work with our nonprofit organizations to assist them in long-term budget planning by providing more stable multiyear granting opportunities and more predictable accountability requirements for the government grants that they receive. We will encourage our nonprofits to look for ways to increase salaries for their staff and make them comparable to those in the public sector. This will attract quality staff and make it easier to retain them. We will increase the employment income exemptions for assured income for the severely handicapped clients to encourage persons with disabilities to work to the extent that they are able.

Albertans told me through the recent campaign that the future of our health care system is their number one priority. As Premier and an Albertan I share this view, and we will be introducing a series of initiatives in the coming months that reflect this importance and the need to make our system among the very best in the world without commercializing it or compromising our values.

Innovation is already under way. Since last year the government has been funding a new procedure called the transcatheter aortic valve implantation, the TAVI, at Foothills hospital, which sees critically ill Albertans suffering from faulty heart valves get replacements made from cow tissue. Recuperation time is half that of conventional open-heart surgery. Patients too sick for open-heart surgery have received a new lease on life. To help northern Albertans and rural communities get cutting-edge cardiac care, this government is funding digital stethoscopes. Albertans can now consult with a specialist at the Mazankowski Heart Institute through secure video links even as the digital stethoscope streams their vitals in real time.

Our province has the means to provide Albertans with the care that they need in an innovative way when they need it. By putting health care on a five-year budget plan, we have allowed institutions to plan for the future with confidence, making the best use of their available resources. We will get patients the treatment they need fast and efficiently, and we will prove that providing them with regular and honest updates so that they understand the developments in our health care system will allow us to work with them and to know that the system is improving. We will invest in the health infrastructure that's needed to keep all Albertans healthy, happy, and productive.

We will establish family care clinics in communities across the province. Each clinic will be staffed by multidisciplinary teams of health care professionals, who will ease doctors' workloads. No matter what your schedule is like, no matter how busy your kids are, your family will get the care that it needs.

Seniors are among those who need the government's support the most. The government will remove the cap on seniors' housing costs and work with the home-building industry to provide seniors with the spaces they need in assisted living and continuing care facilities, ending the bed shortage. Seniors will be able to choose from a wide variety of safe, comfortable accommodations that suit their incomes, lifestyle, and family structures. Couples that have loved and depended on each other for decades will no longer be split up.

To get things started, this government will add a thousand new continuing care beds to the system through public-private partnerships. Allowing private industry to meet seniors' needs will create more jobs in many different sectors and steady growth for our economy. To help seniors who are able to live independently, we will provide increased funding for home care, saving them from stressful trips to the hospital.

Through income supplement, housing, and home care Alberta's seniors will have access to a range of affordable housing options that address their housing and health needs as they age. Quota systems for low- and middle-income seniors will guarantee them access to the continuing care system, ensuring they have the comfortable and dignified accommodations that they deserve. Our government will do its best to ensure that all seniors stay happier and healthier for longer in their final years.

Keeping Alberta strong involves investing in our engine of innovation, people. World-class output requires world-class input. Our economy depends on intelligent, capable, and productive people, and Albertans are gifted in these areas. We have a labour pool over 2 million strong, with 64 per cent of all workers 25 and up reporting postsecondary credentials. Despite having only 11 per cent of Canada's labour force, we train 20 per cent of its apprentices. Alberta's workers are young, well educated, and highly motivated, and we're lucky to have them.

We have great foundations that our government will build on. There is no better investment of public funds than in learning and training. Without a skilled and highly educated workforce we will not attract the cutting-edge companies to carry out research and development, much less the finest minds to lead it.

We need outstanding schools and postsecondary institutions, and that means we need the most committed teachers and flexible curriculum suited to every one of our most diverse students' needs. We need an inclusive system, one that lets students from Alberta's rainbow of ethnic communities get the attention and resources that they need to excel in their adopted home.

By restoring $107 million in funding, we have taken a first step toward reducing class sizes and restoring quality education. Now it's time to start sprinting. We will provide students with increased opportunities for apprenticeships to alleviate shortages in the trades and get teens started on the path to success and stability early. We'll put the entire education system on a three-year funding plan, ending uncertainty over budgets and providing schools with the resources that they need to meet demand from a growing population.

Our government is committed to strengthening our universities and postsecondary institutions through the creation of new initiatives that will attract the world's best scholars, researchers, teachers, and innovators to this province. We want them to stay in Alberta and train and educate future generations, who in turn will build and grow our knowledge-based industries and professions and lead new discoveries.

To enhance our leadership role further, because we've had tremendous success in that area, this government will also negotiate what we're calling externships, which are competitive placements for talented young Albertans with energy-focused organizations around the world. This will help recent graduates jump-start their careers and put Albertans at the forefront of innovation in every aspect of energy, from compliance and monitoring to research and development, and then we want them to come back to Alberta. There will be more announced about these initiatives in the coming months.

We will ensure that all Albertans have the skills and experience to take part in the economy. We must expand the recruitment of students in rural areas and among Métis and First Nations communities. It's not enough for us to simply have statistics that say that people who come from those communities have enrolled in postsecondary institutions. We will make sure that they can access the mentorship and support programs that they need to excel.

The most enduring prosperity is spread as widely as possible. This government will make sure that every Albertan in every corner of our province has the chance to contribute. We will invest in Albertans, in their sense of discovery, in their entrepreneurial spirit, and in their hopes and dreams for them and their family. We will pass these qualities on to our children so that they also can make their futures brighter.

Much of the revenue that we use to keep our public services running comes from the energy sector. Alberta plays host to one of the most innovative and responsible energy sectors on Earth. It remains a critical part of our economy, one that can make life better for all Albertans. It supports countless additional industries and maintains hundreds of thousands of jobs, with the potential to add even more. Future projects announced for the oil sands at the moment amount to $112 billion, and production is slated to increase 3.5 million barrels per day by 2020, and we should be excited about that.

But with our great blessings comes the responsibility to properly manage them. Our environment must be protected. Albertans have a deep respect for nature, and they have the right to be able to enjoy the natural beauties of their home, pristine and unspoiled. We as Albertans want to be proud of what's going on in our province. When we talk about what's happening around the world, we want people to know that we're good stewards of the environment. We expect to live and raise our families in healthy conditions.

Future Albertans are counting on us to keep the province's incredible biodiversity intact, and this government will. Together with our industry partners we are moving beyond monitoring to cumulative effects management, a holistic approach that considers the combined impacts of existing and proposed developments on all aspects of the environment.

When it comes to our most precious resource of all, we are going still further. The addition of "water" into the official title of the ministry of environment is more than cosmetic. Through groundwater mapping this government is developing a better understanding of water resources across the province so that we can make better water management decisions for every region. We are using the water for life strategy in working with land-use planners, watershed councils, and environmental groups across the province to develop best practices, to increase conservation, to educate Albertans, and to manage our most precious resource today, tomorrow, and for future generations.

We will accomplish this while keeping the energy sector in full bloom, partnering with the sector to find solutions to reduce its footprint. Alberta's success also requires the industry to sustainably expand. Market diversification is critical to our long-term prosperity. Global demand for energy is growing. Our production is rising. New customers are within our reach, and we have to connect with them.

Over 99 per cent of our crude exports go to the United States, but we can find more outlets. This government will support the proposed Northern Gateway pipeline to Canada's west coast, opening up Asia to our oil. China is already our second-largest export market, and they along with many neighbours are rapidly modernizing. This government will reach out to potential Asian partners and guarantee Alberta's prosperity for decades to come.

The supereconomies of the 21st century will be those that can strategically align themselves with Asia. Alberta has a great interest in forging stronger economic links to countries like China, India, and Japan. Asia is a lucrative market of 4 billion people, and we're one of the many jurisdictions competing for market share in the Far East. How important is the Asian market? When taken together, China, Japan, Korea, and India are Alberta's second-largest export market, accounting for about $8 billion in 2010. Alberta's trade with China alone has tripled since 2003, and that's a success.

Infrastructure improvements to ports and rails, new pipelines for bitumen and natural gas: these will help us to export more agrifood and forest products and open new markets for energy products.

Another key is Alberta's relationship with Saskatchewan and British Columbia. The New West Partnership between the three provinces allows us to market our part of Canada as one large economic trading block. Last fall the three westernmost provinces signed a memorandum of understanding to work together on issues such as seeking new market investments and new markets, especially in Asia.

The world's population is growing, and demand for our agricultural commodities is only going to grow with it. This government will work to make Alberta a dominant global supplier in an increasingly hungry world. We must raise our yield sustainably, be leaders in research, turn provincial producers into preferred global suppliers, and strengthen Alberta's ability to compete with the best in the world. Our government will provide Alberta-based producers with the financing guidance and diplomatic support to make all of this happen.

Markets are already opening up to us. In June 2010 the federal government signed off on a co-operative agreement with China that allows expanded access to Chinese markets for Canadian beef and beef products, and we can take advantage of that. Other high-priority markets include the United States, Japan, Mexico, India, and the Middle East. Our government will do everything possible to open doors further, maximizing the market access for Alberta-based producers. Agriculture and Rural Development is co-operating with the federal government, and Alberta's Ministry of Intergovernmental, International, and Aboriginal Relations will nurture relationships with foreign customers through both executive and political missions.

This government will provide incentives to help producers excel, and we've made an excellent start. Since 2009 the Alberta Livestock and Meat Agency, ALMA, has provided almost $80 million to support industry projects, projects with a projected value of over $249 million. We will continue to support the Growing Forward initiative, a partnership with Ottawa that aims to address provincial agriculture and agribusiness by investing $273 million in the industry. This initiative has allowed Alberta to become the only province in Canada offering programs for livestock welfare, automation, lean manufacturing, and market development.

We will not overlook the market here at home. Growing local demand for Alberta-based agricultural products is the key to building new businesses, to building stronger communities and businesses that will result in increased investment, employment, and manufacturing capacity in the province. Our government will continue to back the Agriculture Financial Services Corporation, a reliable source of capital for agribusiness ventures considered too risky by private-sector lenders. Through the Agrivalue Processing Business Incubator in Leduc we will continue to provide agrifood entrepreneurs with the business guidance and assistance that they need to grow their enterprises and to stay viable. This government will go to the wall for Alberta's agricultural sector and ensure our farmers are the best in the world.

This past June 22,000 new jobs were created in Alberta, more than in the entire United States. The reason Alberta has been so successful is because it has maintained a business-friendly environment thanks to public investment and firm support for entrepreneurs. Over the past two decades Alberta has topped the country in average economic growth and is poised to regain that spot again in 2012. At the same time we continue to lead Canada in per capita investment at almost twice the national average. Government is investing in this province using savings from the good times and taking advantage of a competitive market in bad times to deliver the infrastructure that's critical to Alberta growth and to sustain Alberta communities.

We are investing $17.6 billion to 2014, keeping over 70,000 Albertans employed during the downturn and retaining skilled workers who will be needed in the years ahead. Quality infrastructure in every community is helping local businesses grow and create jobs, and private-sector job creation is the major contributor to Albertans' quality of life.

Alberta has the largest number of small businesses per capita in Canada. They have an impact on our province completely out of proportion to their size. They contribute almost a third of our GDP, provide 37 per cent of private-sector jobs, and make up 96 per cent of all businesses in the province. Small businesses build and maintain our communities, produce our basic commodities, and pour their passion into making our lives easier every day. More than any other sector small businesses are the glue that hold Alberta together, and this government will never hesitate to defend their interests.

About 700 full-time jobs are supported by organizations that are funded through the Alberta Foundation for the Arts, for example, and support through the AFA helps ensure that our artists and cultural industries continue to have access to quality content as the sector grows. In fact, more than $246 million was spent in Alberta over the last three years as a result of film and TV productions supported by the Alberta multimedia development fund. Alberta's film industry employs roughly 3,000 Albertans in supporting industries. It has amassed 56 Oscar and 92 Emmy nominations since 1948, and we have to keep it going, Mr. Speaker.

Small businesses do more than add to our net worth; they nurture our cultural and artistic diversity, they boost tourism, and they promote our values. This should come as no surprise because small-business owners reflect Albertans' deepest values. They are independent-minded, courageous individuals, each with a unique vision of their respective enterprises, which, taken together, make up a major part of our economy.

Entrepreneurship is one of our core values, and this government will promote it. We will establish a task force that is charged with finding ways to slash red tape and to reduce the regulatory burden that constrains small-business owners. This group will have a firm deadline, and when this government has received its final report, it will put the task force's recommendations into action.

Antibusiness protests are attracting a lot of attention in the media right now, Mr. Speaker, and very close to home, but they hide a basic fact: our wealth and freedom depend on the individual right to free enterprise. From Jade Homes in Bow Island, which builds custom homes for shipment across the province and supports a local network of contractors, to the award-winning Birds & Bees organic winery in Two Hills small businesses are an integral part of Alberta's economic landscape. They make a difference every day, growing our economy in new and exciting ways. It is time the government gets out of their way and gives them the room they need to spread their wings.

At the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, all of our plans for a stronger Alberta must come back to finance. A healthy treasury is at the heart of any strong economy, and that's where we started today. Albertans must have a say in these plans. They must understand the government's spending priorities and have a voice in shaping them. Our government will consult with Albertans in November through public round-tables with ministers, followed by a public survey and requests for submissions. We will use the resulting feedback as we prepare our budget for 2012, so it reflects Albertans' priorities.

Let us be clear. We have some tough decisions ahead, Mr. Speaker, but Albertans have the intellect, the fortitude, the intelligence, and the entrepreneurial spirit to make the decisions that are right for the times and right for them. We must make better use of the funds we have, and we must grow our economy and our revenue base without job-killing taxes or legislation.

Albertans themselves are best equipped to guarantee the province's prosperity. The government's job is to create the conditions to let them do so and then get out of the way. Albertans expect no less from us. This means no provincial sales tax and as little public interference as possible in Albertans' rights to earn a living, start a business, and make a profit.

Sound financial habits also involve sensible budgeting. We must spend smarter and avoid the path of least resistance. Simplistic solutions and wide-eyed spending promises are not the answer, but neither are purely ideological positions, Mr. Speaker. Our plans for stable, multiyear budgets for essential public services will bring unprecedented discipline and accountability to public spending. Other governments have talked about doing it; we will make it happen.

Department budgets will only grow when there is a clear need, and we will conduct regulatory budgetary reviews to find savings and approve budgets wherever possible within the year. Albertans want government to be more responsible about spending, and we will be. We will treat taxpayers' money with the same respect that they do. The effort to keep spending in check will not stop there. Albertans expect their government to plan for the future, and we will not let them down. We will balance the budget by 2013-14, and we will plan ahead, Mr. Speaker.

To further protect Alberta's finances, we will keep the sustainability and heritage funds topped up. Parents do not leave their children with debt. They invest in their children's future, passing on a responsible legacy that allows their children to live their own lives and to realize their own dreams. We will keep the province's coffers full and its outlooks bright no matter what the world economy throws our way, and we will understand where we are going as well as Albertans because they share these same values.

Alberta equals opportunity, and this government must do everything it can to promote this simple fact. We have the means and the resources to make it truer than ever. We have the skills and the abilities. We have what we need. We have the will, and we will act.

Alberta has a vibrant economy built on dedicated small businesses and thriving industries. Our government will work with them to grow our prosperity even more. Alberta has no shortage of incredible people dedicated to doing everything they can to make

Alberta caring, compassionate, and fair. Our government will help them realize that goal. Our goal is to ensure economic success and a great quality of life for everyone in a province where hard work is rewarded and no one turns a blind eye to want or hardship. Together we will build a province where world-class, fully funded public services are there when you need them. We will insulate this province from the shocks of the global economy and build the best Alberta possible. We are already headed in this direction, Mr. Speaker. This government working together with Albertans will get us there.

This is not a partisan project. Fellow Members of the Legislative Assembly, you sit in this Assembly for one reason and one reason only as we all do: because we believe in Alberta. You want what's best for this province and its people. Every single one of us ran for office on this platform, and every single one of us comes to work each and every day knowing that we have another chance to make things better for Alberta. We will always be divided to some extent by our different visions, but in our hearts we want the same thing. I know that with a little goodwill, we can see past some of our differences. With a little effort we can come together for Alberta. We are incomparably stronger together than apart. We can give Albertans the exceptional government and outstanding public services that they expect. We can make Alberta the best place in the world to live, to start a business, to raise a family, and to retire. We can ensure that Alberta continues to be the best place in the world to live. Period. Together we can achieve amazing things.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I'll now recognize the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition. My understanding is that there remain about 24 minutes available for additional speakers from the government side on a rotation basis.

The hon. leader of the official and loyal opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, thank you and thank you to all Albertans. On behalf of the great province of Alberta I'd like to first congratulate our new Premier for making history as the first woman Premier of this wonderful province.

I would also like to express my deepest gratitude to Albertans for the privilege of addressing the Assembly as Leader of the Official Opposition, as leader of the party upon which this great province was founded, the party of Premier Rutherford, which sat on March 15, 1906 – the same birth date as my daughter, the same date upon which I joined this party, the same party that allowed women the right to vote – the Alberta Liberal Party.

Mr. Speaker, we didn't all get here by ourselves. Please allow me to share with you an unlikely story of hope, a Canadian story and an Albertan story. My grandfather came here at the age of 17 in 1906. He came here for adventure and in search of a better opportunity for his family. He showed up on a ship in Vancouver. He worked on the railway. He went to school, became a sawmill engineer, and was an integral part of building the logging industry in British Columbia. One thing he didn't have: freedom in his home nation of India. He was an integral part of freedom of the biggest functioning, youngest democracy on the planet today.

When India gained democracy, unfortunately it was good for some, not good for others as millions were displaced along the northern frontier. My mother's grandfather: his family became refugees. My mother as an eight-year-old child was raised in a refugee village. I was born in that little town in the middle of nowhere in the Thar Desert.

In 1965 on September 1 – on the same day, September 1, Alberta was founded – my father left India for Canada, when I was two months old, to make a better life for his young wife and three young boys. Times were tough, Mr. Speaker. Wages were low. He was a teacher by trade, but he had to work as a labourer in the lumber industry.

He first worked as a mailman, and then he worked as a prison guard in Oakalla penitentiary, and then he worked in the mills that his father had built. He couldn't afford to visit his family because flights were expensive, so instead he sent enough money for food at home, and finally seven years later he was reunited with his family.

Dad brought us to this country, and it was different. We didn't have our social network, and times were tough. I remember my mother taking us three boys and a new baby to the farms in the Fraser Valley and picking strawberries 14 hours a day every summer as our summer holiday. She grew up on a farm, and she knew the value of hard work and the importance of teaching her children how to work honestly and how to work hard.

My father worked in the mill. My mother got a job sewing clothes. Interestingly enough, she was a seamstress for the Oilers' uniforms in the early '80s, when they won all those Stanley Cups. We had Wayne Gretzky's uniforms in my house, and she couldn't pronounce his name, but she marvelled about why this one player had so many uniforms. Then our mother cleaned toilets and hotel rooms to make a better life for us.

Mr. Speaker, this is a story unlike most Albertans' and most Canadians'. Our parents came from lands far and away, from every different country in search of opportunity, and they worked hard. They worked beneath their education and skill level so their children would have a better chance, and their dreams are reflected in their children and their grandchildren. What they taught us was the value of hard work, honesty, and an education, a good public education. It was a way out of poverty.

Mr. Speaker, today we are talking about an urgent matter of public importance. The government has decided that there's an emergency in the global economy and that we should talk about it. As an emergency physician I would say that this emergency has been going on for a long time in the global economy, and it causes me due concern that we're discussing such emergent issues and going on vacation in 24 hours.

"The future direction, place, and opportunity of Alberta in Canada and the world given the current economic uncertainty in Europe, the state of the U.S. economy, the importance of Asian growth and markets, and the impact of the same on Alberta and Albertans": that's the question posed before us today.

Mr. Speaker, there is much uncertainty across the world. Why? Because it's caused by governments who place their needs and the needs of their friends above those of the people they are supposed to represent. The truth is that more than a billion people in the world today live on less than $1 a day. I know that because I used to live that life as a child. Infant mortality rates are high, life expectancy and quality of life are low, and diseases run rampant because drugs are too expensive and poorly distributed.

But we here in the modern westernized world don't care enough to do anything about those emergencies unless our own economic stability is threatened. We are quick to act to shore up potential problems in our own interests, but we hesitate to prevent human suffering in lands abroad.

It's the same reason we don't have adequate investment into prevention and wellness in Alberta. We refuse to see the bigger picture, and we forget that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure or a few billion dollars' worth of cure. Those of us who have worked or lived through these conditions understand true poverty and true struggle and the real value of life because we've lived it and we've experienced it.

In the humanitarian missions abroad the Premier and my hon. colleague from Calgary-Mountain View and many of you have seen first-hand the devastating effects of abject poverty and social injustice, so I would ask all of us here to maintain some perspective. Alberta is still the best province in the best country in the world despite what others may say. A bad day in Alberta is still better than the best day in the majority of places on the planet. We are truly blessed to be living in the best province in the best country in the world.

It's ironic that Albertans, living in one of the most wealthy, stable jurisdictions, are being told that economic problems outside take precedence over so many more important opportunities right here at home within our own borders, opportunities such as good public health care; a quality education system for all regardless of ability to pay; restoring dignity to our seniors, who built this province with the sweat of their brow and the toil of their hands; opportunities to support our aboriginal communities, so long neglected by government; and to protect our water and environment for the future.

When I look at the protests in the streets of other countries, it seems to me that many problems of the global economy are caused when governments lose their perspective, when they forget their purpose, when they ignore the people that they are supposed to serve and, instead, begin to serve a rich, powerful few, the influential and the connected. This is the real crisis, Mr. Speaker. This is the real emergency that this planet and at times this province face.

When connected individuals circumnavigate the rules with inside help from government ministries, the people are the ones who pay the price, the hard-working people who built this province. Thomas Jefferson once said: "When governments fear the people, there is liberty. When the people fear the government, there is tyranny." That's what's happening across the world. Tyrants are being removed by the people because they have failed the people.

I want every company, every municipality, and every Albertan to remember that next election. They should remember that. Ask yourself what kind of society you want to live in, in the same old company town or in a truly free and democratic society with justice and opportunity for all, where freedom of speech is truly respected as freedom of speech, a society where you're judged by the content of your character and the merit of your actions, not by the size of your political donation to the governing party.

Do you want responsible and effective use of your money, or do you want to keep throwing it into a bottomless pit? That's a question we need to ask. These are the kinds of misaligned priorities, Mr. Speaker, that are so dangerous to competitive economies and the citizens who work and live within them. These are the reasons why I am on this side along with my new colleagues and friends here instead of on that side. My old friends there believe that the people of this province exist to give the government and those connected to it wealth and power. We believe that the government's wealth and power exist to serve the people.

Let's talk about Canada, Mr. Speaker. This is the best country in the world. Why? Good government. We had a really good government that paid down the deficits, paid down the debt. We had a really good government that represented all Canadians, a really good government that worked in partnership with Albertans to develop the oil sands.

I recently went to the Syncrude pit. There is something called Chrétien Point. A Liberal government helped develop it in partnership with Albertans and signed the declaration of opportunity to develop the goose that lays the golden egg not only for Alberta but the nation, a nation that today in the face of an international crisis is actually a safe haven. I will say that everyone in the world would love to come to Canada if they had the chance.

Since we're talking about the global economy, it was actually the global economy that brought all of our parents and grandparents here from across the world in search of a better life.

Let's talk about Alberta. There are many unparalleled advantages in this great province, many advantages that we actually used to have and still could possibly have, advantages that led me and my family to move here so many years ago. But it's the caring, determined, and principled people who live in Alberta – not the government; it's the people – who make it easy to call this place home.

You see, Albertans' values are the same values of all of our families: the importance of a good education, hard work, and belief in oneself, that you play by the rules and always tell the truth, that you always aim to reach the stars. Actually, you don't talk about it. You just get out and do it. That's what Albertans do. We're doers.

My early years weren't easy, and neither were the early years of many in this House: poverty, hunger, for me personally intolerance, discrimination. Many in this House took any jobs that they could, whether it was paper routes, picking berries, cleaning hotel rooms, working in the mill, driving taxi, working construction, or working in professions: you name it. Our story is not unique. It's shared by many millions of Albertans and Canadians right across this great nation. It is a part of our identity. It's who we are. Albertans work hard. We play by the rules, and we know the value of a dollar. We believe that all things are possible.

Albertans just want a simple life. We want good jobs for our families, whether it's in farming, the oil and gas industry, forestry, or the knowledge-based economy. We want to maintain those same values and the sense of community, that we care for one another when we can't care for ourselves. We want to make sure that all our children have a chance to get an education, that the size of your wallet does not determine access to good public education or postsecondary education, that if you're sick and you're vulnerable, you will be looked after without reaching inside your savings account or your wallet, and that once you've built this great province, we will treat you with dignity and respect.

Government's role in our lives. The government's job is to pass rules and laws, fewer rules and laws but good rules and laws, that encourage amazing, beautiful things to happen when an Albertan has an idea and they want to take a risk and want to start a business, but those same rules and laws must also protect the people and the environment as well as industry.

Governments don't have all the solutions and all the answers. Albertans have the solutions. They have the answers to all their problems. They don't expect governments to solve all their problems. They know that they have to work hard, but they want government to create that great atmosphere I talked about for great things to happen. They want government to get out of the way, and they want government to stop taking credit for what they've actually done. We are living here in this place and time, and it's our turn now. We're doers. We see problems, we analyze them, and we find the best possible solutions. We crank up a full head of steam and face the challenges head-on.

Mr. Speaker, Premier Peter Lougheed was a doer. He was a Premier who truly understood the global economy and his people. He was bold and creative. He started the heritage savings trust fund. He made sure that we had community-based hospital boards and school boards. He made sure that there were local solutions to local problems. He made sure that every child had an opportunity to get an education; it didn't matter where they were from or how much their parents had. He made sure that every senior was looked after, that everyone had good health care. He made sure that every Albertan had a family doctor.

Not only did he balance the books after looking after the people; he put billions upon billions upon billions in the bank. He created great infrastructure. He invested in arts and culture, a story that is still told today that Albertans can be proud of. Under him people who needed help got it. Civil servants had the freedom to do their jobs and to do them well without political interference. People who experienced Premier Lougheed as their Premier say that he made them proud to be an Albertan. I am still proud to be an Albertan because of Premier Lougheed.

Mr. Speaker, what's happened to our province since he departed public service? We've been given three big booms, three of the biggest lottery tickets on the planet, yet we have a deficit. Where did our money go? Where did it go? Another country has put hundreds of billions in the bank, and they're living off the interest. We have the lowest high school completion rate in the nation. We have the highest university tuition fees in the nation and the lowest university participation rate in the nation. We're nickel and diming our seniors. Hard-working, middle-class Alberta families are being nickelled and dimed to death for school fees. Jobs: we're still dependent on the boom-bust cycle. When the economy is good, you've got to work too much. When it's bad, you're not working at all.

It's the centralization of power in the hands of a powerful few that Premier Lougheed fought. He returned power to the people, and that's the power that's been taken away from the people by the people who pretend to live by the vision of Premier Lougheed. That's what we must return to.

Management. Mr. Speaker, did you know that total personal and corporate income tax account for $12 billion of income, yet health care alone costs $15 billion? Why do we have the highest funded, second-worst performing health care system in the nation when under Premier Lougheed it was one of the best performing systems in the nation?

How long has it been since we've heard people say: "Wow. What a great idea from the government. What a great government program"? How long since we have heard good news, good, brand new, fresh ideas from the government? It's no wonder that people don't take part in the democratic system. Sixty per cent of Albertans did not vote, and that's a shame in a democratic country after our young men and women years ago, in fact many of our seniors, fought for the right to have the vote. There's a whole generation that has never seen a different kind of government or heard a single new creative idea.

Generally, it seems that when I was in government they weren't doers; they were don't-ers. More often than not the current government are the ideologically driven slashers, cutters, downsizers, centralizers, privatizers after the election, but the funny thing is that before the election the government has been whatever you want them to be to get your vote. After the election it's the opposite. The same thing is being said again. We need a government that does what it says and says what it does.

These are the people who actually believe that if you cut environmental enforcement officers, polluters will actually naturally take a step. They'll step up to the plate, and they will report their transgressions and fix things on their own. They think it's okay to bully municipalities to support a political party or they'll get their funding cut off or that a good business practice is to alter government programs so that your buddies get exclusive access to hundreds of millions of taxpayer dollars and our resource dollars.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, there is a view of government that is of cold administrative cost efficiency, yet I would say that it's cost inefficiency rather than proper delivery of services, which makes people's lives richer, fuller, and more hopeful.

The real emergency is that we've got bad government. That's the real emergency. We affect the lives of many not only here but in the nation and abroad. Imagine the tremendous amount of good we could do on this planet if we could get our house in order. We need good government decisions. We've been changing leaders when they're about to lose an election by saying that this is change when it's the same backroom boys making the same bad, old decisions.

We have deficit after deficit. What we really have is a deficit in democracy. More and more citizens are viewed as a set of costs rather than human beings with infinite and amazing potential. They have become experts in saying no. No to public home care; no to public lodges; no to public long-term care, community based; no to predictable and sustainable funding for municipalities or important social programs; no to our teachers; no to our nurses and no to our doctors and no to our patients; no to Albertans; no to respecting human rights and the rights of the landowners: no to this and no to that and less of more and more.

They forgot what an enlightened government is about. An enlightened government is about investment in a better society. It's a way of improving the experience of the people, a way that people just like you and me can live normal and good lives and achieve our potential.

Instead of talking about wasted potential, I'd like to talk about unrealized potential. This government has politicized far too much a civil service and demoralized some of the best and most brilliant civil servants on the planet. They've either silenced them or driven them out of their jobs. In the middle and lower ranks of the provincial civil service talented, highly skilled individuals, people educated here who really know what to do and how to do it, are muzzled or silenced and intimidated into humiliating silence. It's bullying, and it's wrong, Mr. Speaker. It's undemocratic, and it's un-Albertan.

Nobody truly respects or likes a bully. As we've seen recently, the brand of political bullying has gone much further. Threats are made or implied through spending of public money, and presto, volunteers and healthy political donations magically appear. This is wrong, and it must stop. Even private-sector companies and consultants in a province of a country that respects competition and free markets know that their chances of landing a provincial contract increase if they go to a golf tournament of the governing party. People's livelihoods are being affected by what political party they belong to and what signs they have on their lawns. This must stop. It's twisted, and it's wrong. It's the very opposite of what Albertans value, of what Premier Peter Lougheed valued.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to talk about solutions, solutions and what Albertans value, about individualism and community. We believe in the rights of the individual in this province, but we also share their common sense of purpose of a community. If we want to fix our province, we need true open, honest, accountable government. We need government that will do what it says and say what it does. We need government ministries that will effectively and efficiently use your tax dollars and get you the best value for your service. We need ministries that naturally work together, fewer ministries, not make-work projects for too many elected officials on one side of the aisle here. If you want health care to function, you actually need to deal with seniors' housing. Infrastructure and transportation should be together. Finance and Treasury Board should be together. Let's get down to 16 ministries.

We need better management, better fiscal management. It's about value. What are we getting for our tax dollar? I would argue that we can do much better than we're currently doing. We need to do it, and we should. Albertans expect much more of us.

Let's talk about the economy. We've gone through these boom-bust cycles. Let's talk about the energy economy. It is the goose that lays the golden egg, and we must protect it. Natural gas was in the boots for a while, but my understanding is that liquefied natural gas, if we export it to the west coast to other markets, fetches us triple the price. Let's get it out there to the west coast. Our best friend and neighbour, the greatest risk, the U.S., is on the verge of bankruptcy. They can't afford our product. We sell 80 per cent of our product there.

Our oil industry. Let's export our oil to the west coast, and let's make sure that we protect the pristine coast of British Columbia, ensuring that the environmental regulations are enforced, making sure that the tankers are safe, that we have double-hull tankers taking our product. But before we export our product out of our province, let's make sure we upgrade more of it at home. It's not going to be easy to do because of the cost of upgrading, but let's work with industry to build value, better jobs. What's the rush? We're already so short of labour.

Also, we must deal with the very real environmental issues. The greatest threat to our economy not only is our best friend and neighbour not having enough money; it's international policies on carbon. Our economy is overly intensive on carbon. We must decrease our carbon footprint. We must deal with the water issues. We must have good monitoring and not self-monitoring.

Beyond energy, let's work with agriculture and the forestry sector. Like my grandfather did, let's go sell our food abroad. We've got the best and safest soil on the planet.

Health care. Health care can be part of the economy of the future, the knowledge-based economy. Let's invest in good public education. In order to fix health care, you actually have to fix education and have good jobs. On a microscopic level to fix the ER wait time, the reason we still have problems year after year is because we haven't dealt with public home care and nonprofit public long-term care and subacute care and rehab care and palliative care for our seniors and those dying at home or dying in the hallways of the hospitals. Well, that can be fixed. That has to be fixed by getting rid of the faulty for-profit seniors' policy. We need to go back to the community.

We need to get every Albertan a family doctor that works with a team of professionals. When 70 per cent of our students want to become specialists because of the money made by the overprivatization of health care, that's the problem. Let's build our system and be a world-wide centre on primary care and prevention. Let's bring in the medical home model. Let's bring the care to you in your home. That's what the Europeans do, and that's why their system works well.

Let's use our community schools as community hubs. Let's stop using our schools as rental properties for our private buddies. Schools should belong to the community 24 hours a day. Let's connect our seniors and junior daycares to the schools, put a public health clinic in there. Not only do we need more teachers; the $170 million funding didn't fix the school system. That just restored it back to where it was, when 30 per cent of our kids are dropping out. We've got to do much more. Put in the supports that the teachers need to educate our children. Let's look after our seniors. We must treat them with the dignity and respect that they deserve.

I'd like to talk about the politics of hope, not the politics of cynicism. Mr. Speaker, I'm the new guy on this side of the House. All we did over there last year was have a cabinet shuffle. That didn't change. Don't be fooled. Nothing has fundamentally changed in the economy or the way the government does business. Everyone over there on that side of the House knows it, and they believe passionately in what they're doing.

I believe passionately that this province needs to change our government, so today I'm going to ask Albertans to watch us, watch us and participate in the politics of yes. On this side it's about: yes, we will support an open, honest, and accountable government; yes for respect for your hard-earned tax dollars; yes to better jobs for all Albertans; yes to true market competition, where contracts are based on merit and negotiated in public; yes to view municipalities as full and equal partners, not just wards of the state; yes to government that respects its professionals and civil service; yes to a supportive new approach to performing and visual arts funding so that after a hard day at work Albertans can relax and enjoy themselves; yes to a government that wants to restore a good Samaritan and neighbour as a core value to being Albertans; yes to fixing public health care and public education, not selling it off to the private buddies like it was done before. You won't have to take your credit card out or be nickelled and dined for fees while you get less.

Remember, Mr. Speaker, that we need to be doers and not don't-ers. So please watch our party and watch our friends. Watch this province as it changes.

Mr. MacDonald: And watch your wallet.

Dr. Sherman: Watch your wallet with these guys in power, and watch your back. We're going to watch your back. We're going to stand up for you. We're going to fight for you. We're going to fight for what's right when you're being wronged. We're going to make a commitment to educate all of our children, leave no child behind. Every Alberta child should expect to graduate from high school. Every Alberta child who wants to go to a postsecondary or get a trade or get a skill should have that opportunity.

We say yes to our seniors. We say yes to every Albertan who wants a family doctor. We say yes to dignity. And you know what else, Mr. Speaker? Above all we say yes to telling the truth, to always being honest. If there are mistakes to be made, they will be honest mistakes, not dishonest mistakes.

In summary, I'd like to say that the most precious resource in Alberta isn't what's in the ground, what's on the ground. It's the people, the hardworking, industrious people and their children and grandchildren, people who have come from afar in search of a better life and hope and dream to be the best that they can be. That hope is embodied in our children, and that's what we propose to do. We propose that we put power back in the hands of the people. That's what needs to be done, the same thing Peter Lougheed did 40 years ago.

Mr. Speaker, change is in the air, and it's time – it's time – that there's a real choice for a real chance for real change. It's time for Albertans to change their government. Alberta, all you have to do is get out and vote. If 80 per cent of Albertans vote, they will change their government. In the words of Gandhi: Alberta, you must be the change that you want to see in the world.

Mr. Speaker, thank you very much for this opportunity. It's truly an honour to be here as a public servant of Her Majesty's opposition fighting for Albertans alongside my colleagues. May God bless Alberta. God bless Canada.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, that was 32 minutes. There will be 28 minutes left to carry on.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Congratulations to the Premier on her leadership victory. Although it was not a mandate from all Albertans, her actions will now affect Albertans greatly, and because of that I wish her the very best in good judgment.

Today I have a few tough words – I know that's a surprise – but these are words that need to be spoken. They're from the heart because like everyone in this House I love this province, and I'm worried about the direction she's heading right now. Mr. Speaker, the world is indeed experiencing troubled times, and although the blessing of abundant resources and still-record-high oil prices has insulated us more than almost any place on earth, we are certainly not immune to the turmoil outside our borders.

There are several causes of this turmoil, but the main ones are these: corruption and a lack of ethics in government and around corporate boardroom tables, fiscal irresponsibility by governments and individuals, and a culture of "What's in it for me?" that is becoming far too common among far too many in society. In one word our problem is selfishness and its siblings greed and corruption.

What the world so desperately needs and what this province needs to avoid disaster is leaders and role models and parents with the integrity, courage, and wisdom to stand up and do and say what is right when it's hard, not just when it's easy and convenient. Unfortunately, I fear our new Premier does not understand the need for such leadership. I fear that because her actions over the last three weeks have shouted down her increasingly hollow words and promises of change.

Alberta needs a leader to end the era of fear and intimidation that has become so prevalent in this province. We need a leader who shows by her actions that government funding for community services and infrastructure isn't dependent on a town council's or an individual's support for the PC Party. We need a leader who will tell her cabinet and caucus that if it is confirmed that any of them have been undertaking actions to intimidate or remove from their jobs potential candidates of other parties or health workers or others, those intimidators and bullies will be kicked out of her party without any hesitation. We need a leader who sees the outright corruption that is the Bill 50 transmission lines project, repeals the bill fully, and starts over with an independent needs assessment so that ratepayers are protected from billions in unnecessary costs.

We need a leader who shows by her actions, not just her words, that she is committed to democracy and to following through with commitments made by keeping and not flip-flopping on her promise of fixed election dates, one that doesn't cancel the fall sitting of the Legislature, then restart it for two days, take a month off, then come back for a week, and in justifying it says, "It's not necessary for us to be in the house to make government decision – that is the job of the cabinet of the premier." Sorry, Premier. You're wrong. Legislation and policy decisions proposed by government are to be debated and passed by the peoples' representatives, not by cabinet fiat, and this Premier should be ashamed of suggesting otherwise, particularly with her background and good work in advocating for democracy in other countries.

We need a leader who demands integrity and competence from those that surround her rather than appointing as the most powerful civil servant in a $40 billion government an individual whose company won't pay its creditors despite repeated court judgments to do so. How can one promise to govern with fiscal competence when her first move is to appoint someone who represents the very opposite of that? We need a leader who selects government appointments based on merit, after a full and open competition of the best and brightest of Alberta, not one who appoints her biggest leadership rival because it's a politically convenient way to get him out of sight and out of mind.

We need a leader who understands that Alberta has a spending problem and doesn't promise billions of taxpayer dollars for the purposes of blatantly buying votes, a leader who is committed to balancing the budget now, that won't mortgage the future of our kids to try and save her party's political hide. In short, we need a leader with the ethics and thoughtfulness of Preston Manning, not a reincarnation of Joe Clark.

Mr. Speaker, I love this province like everyone here. We have such amazing people and potential. I sometimes sit in wonderment as I think about the opportunities that we have at our fingertips right now. But we are selling ourselves short. Our new Premier has not been up to the challenge during her first three weeks. I hope that changes. Albertans expect better, Madam Premier. My four sons and every child in Alberta deserve better. What is happening in this province right now is unacceptable. I hope you realize that it isn't just about winning; it's about doing the right thing for the right reasons. There's a lot of time to still change and to get back on the right track, away from what's happened over this first three weeks of your administration. Let's see you do what you said you would do and advocate for true change.

On behalf of the Wildrose caucus and our leader, Danielle Smith, let me assure all Albertans that the Wildrose stands ready to govern if called upon. We can't and won't promise the world, but in these unsettled times we do promise this: we will bring accountability to government by mandating free votes, fixed elections, and voter recall; we will end the culture of fear and intimidation that currently permeates our business, health, and political communities; we will shine a bright light of transparency in every corner and closet of government; and we will work to clean out the skeletons and the cobwebs that we find.

We will balance the budget and start saving some of our oil wealth without delay because we owe it to our children to do so. We will target Albertans' tax dollars for the things that matter most to them like health and education, teachers and doctors, and seniors. And we will cut without any reservation the PC corporate welfare handouts, the pet projects, the executive bonuses, the new MLA offices, the replacement museums, the cabinet salary increases, the golden handshakes, and all of the deals behind closed doors that cost Albertans millions.

We will defend Alberta's largest industry aggressively and competently. We are proud of producing the most ethical oil on earth and will work with our energy entrepreneurs to continually improve upon their already strong track record of environmental stewardship. There's always room to do better.

This is what the Wildrose has been and will continue to fight for. Whether Albertans give us 16 or 60 seats in the next election, our principles will remain unchanged: fiscally conservative, pro-entrepreneur, democratic and transparent, giving a hand up and not a handout, respect for local decision-making, and the protection of the liberties of families and individuals. These principles reflect the values of Albertans. If we as a province adhere to them, we will weather the global economic storm and become a true beacon of prosperity and freedom in all the world. If we continue to abandon these principles as so many in this House and around the world have done, we will become a tragic and forgotten footnote in history. It's time for Alberta to stand back up and lead the way again.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: That was eight minutes.

Our next speaker is the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to begin by offering my congratulations to our new Premier. That was amazing. I watched the campaign quite closely, and I think it was an extremely interesting and well-executed win. Congratulations.

Mr. Speaker, usually on the first day of a new Premier and the last day I try to just say really nice things, but because we only have a two-day session, I'm very much constrained with regard to that rule. So people will have to forgive me, but I want to talk a little bit and respond to some of the things that the Premier has said. I think, first of all, that what was going to be a speech about international opportunities and the international situation actually turned into a bit of a bait and switch. We've got now a faux throne speech to respond to, so I'm going to try my very best to do that.

I know that the Premier has talked about the debt crisis internationally and its impact on the world. But I don't accept her characterization of this debt crisis as something where these countries in Europe were just spending way too much money, you know, and now they've got themselves in a real mess. That does not get down to what's really gone on and the role of the banking industry internationally in creating this situation for these countries like the banking industry did for people who had properties in the United States a couple of years ago or who invested in retirement products and so on. They've ensnared countries, and now the people who work for a living – the low-income people, the seniors, the young people – are the ones that are being forced to bear the brunt of it through cuts to the services that they depend on. They had nothing to do with the creation of this crisis, Mr. Speaker.

We've seen around the world that the Occupy Wall Street movement, for all its flaws, has really given a voice to the fact that the interests internationally of the very wealthiest people in the world are being put ahead of the vast majority of people in the world who are being asked to pay the price.

We were asking our schoolchildren to pay the price for this government's financial mismanagement. Now because of public pressure the government has reversed itself but has said that the hundred million dollars that they need in order to re-fund the education system will come from in-house or in-year savings. In other words, they are going to transfer these cuts from schoolchildren to others. We don't know who it's going to be, but it's clear that they're going to expect the people of Alberta, not their friends in the banking industry and the oil industry, to pay the price.

The Premier talked about health care when you need it. I want to talk a little bit about health care in the province, Mr. Speaker, because I haven't heard some of the things that I think we need to hear. We need to hear about a long-term care strategy that properly funds long-term care, which is part of the health system, because that is one of the key reasons why we have such a shortage of acute-care beds. The government is going ahead to build more expensive acute-care beds instead of solving the problem by reversing its strategy of private delivery for long-term care, which will never work and which will not solve the problems of the seniors in our province.

Similarly with mental health care, Mr. Speaker. There is a severe shortage of mental health beds, and people who need mental health care are occupying much more expensive acute-care beds. Then those beds are not available to people who are discharged from emergency rooms, which backs everything up into the waiting rooms and out onto the street.

The Premier wants to build trust, but she has appointed as minister of health someone who has been piloting the privatization strategy of this government for years, someone who presented this strategy to the Conservative caucus, and someone who I think is the genius, if you could call it that, behind this government's plans to delist services, introduce private insurance options for people because they'll no longer be covered by medicare, increase the role of private hospitals, allow doctors to operate both in the public and the private system; in other words, a very, very serious blow to our publicly delivered and publicly funded health care system.

Mr. Speaker, instead, I think this Legislature should be debating the NDP's Bill 208, a private member's bill. Some of that private members' time has been lost to have this debate today, so I want to mention Bill 208, which would prohibit the delivery of surgical services in private facilities, which would ensure that all services are properly funded and which would extend coverage in medicare, not remove coverage, not retreat but advance and extend our medicare system to cover things like dental care for kids. There are tens of thousands of kids who have no dental care in this province, and the government has no plan to deal with that.

Seniors' drug plan: two strikes on this government. They've completely failed to come up with an alternative, and there are many seniors that cannot afford the drugs in this province because they have so many prescriptions and it's $25 per prescription. There are no answers in that speech for the people of this province.

Mr. Speaker, the Premier talked about a smarter future. I mentioned the reversal on the education cuts, which are exactly the cuts that were made by this government, of which the Premier was a member, and nobody stood up and said: I disagree with it. I asked the Minister of Education at the time repeatedly to do something about it, and all I got were excuses and obfuscation. Those cuts are going to be reversed at the expense of some other program cuts because they're not prepared to use the sustainability fund or other options available to them.

Alberta continues to have some of the highest dropout rates in the country. We have school fees that are charged across the board to kids to go to school. Differential tuition for professional faculties are far too high, and the government continues to allow postsecondary institutions to charge noninstructional fees, really tuition fees, just a loophole that's created for those institutions because they haven't been funded adequately. They're going to get the funding that they need on the backs of their students.

All of this creates inequality in access to education, Mr. Speaker. The government likes to talk about its wonderful student aid program, but I can tell you that there are debts in excess of $100,000. I met with some medical students not too long ago, and they talked about their debt upon graduation being somewhere in the range of $200,000. It may be that as a doctor they'll be able to pay that off, but that is something that is a huge barrier to kids from modest-income families, who will not even imagine being able to run up a debt like that. So we have a real problem with accessibility and equality of opportunity in our education system. An NDP government will fight for and will bring forward programs to make sure that accessibility is, in fact, a key priority of the government of Alberta.

The speech dealt with energy and the environment. Mr. Speaker, I think there are very different visions between this Progressive Conservative government and the NDP with regard to this. We continue to charge some of the lowest royalties in the world, and we are sitting on perhaps the most valuable strategic petroleum resource in the world with a ready-made market, and we are getting pennies on the dollar for what that is actually worth to the owners of that resource, which is the people of Alberta. We're continuing to ramp up the export of unprocessed bitumen and letting the jobs that go with upgrading that and refining it go down the pipeline to the United States, and the government does nothing.

They support the Keystone pipeline upgrade even though a U.S. State Department report clearly says that if that upgrade to that pipeline is not built, more investment and jobs will be created in Canada than in the United States. That's why the United States wants it, and that's why we are so, so foolish in allowing that pipeline to go ahead with our blessing.

Mr. Speaker, the government has brought no plan to clean up the settling ponds, which are an international black eye for our province, and it's high time that we did that. It's high time we made sure that there is no downstream contamination affecting the people at Fort Chip and other places where people live. The effect on cancer rates is unacceptable, and it should not be tolerated by this government.

Mr. Speaker, I want to talk a little bit about the water market. Although today they ruled out the export of water from the province, they are still determined to bring about a water market in this province. There has been no analysis of what that market would actually look like, who the players are and the financial resources that they have that they could bring to bear in terms of that and the distortions that would be created, for example, by large oil companies or companies like Nestlé, who wanted to buy up water resources and then sell them back to people. The effect of a water market on water prices in this province, I think, will be dramatic. It's going to go nowhere but up if the government continues with this misguided, right-wing ideological approach to our most precious resource in this province, something that is a right of everyone. I think that it's completely the wrong direction.

Nor has the government brought forward a comprehensive plan for developing green energy in our province. Renewable energy is the future. Other countries are investing billions and billions of dollars in green energy, and we are just sitting here basically twiddling our thumbs. We're happy that there's a little bit of wind power, and we think that carbon capture and storage has got something to do with green energy. Well, Mr. Speaker, it does not. We were surpassed long ago by Europe, by California, and other parts of the United States. Even in Asia, the subject of the Premier's comments about the growth of the importance of Asia, China is investing billions of dollars in renewable energy research and development, and we are going to be caught with absolutely nothing but an obsolete energy source sooner or later.

Mr. Speaker, there were some things said about agriculture, which I want to refer to. I just want to say that an NDP government is committed to the family farm and is committed to small farms. The move of this government with its cousins in Ottawa to eliminate the single desk of the Canadian Wheat Board is a very serious blow to small farmers in this province. The farmers themselves have repeatedly voted in a referendum and previously in elections for their directors for a continuation of the single desk. This is something that a few large corporate farms that have the government's ear want to see, but it is not something that the majority of wheat farmers want to see in this province or in Canada, for that matter. Again, it's a triumph of right-wing ideology over common sense and not something that we're going to go along with.

I want to indicate that an NDP government supports balanced budgets, and we have for years. I want to also say that we support fair and competitive taxes. Right now our taxes may be competitive, but they are not fair. The burden has been placed on middle-class families and on working families at the expense of the very wealthiest in our society. I've already mentioned the flat tax as an important piece of that. This government has walked away from billions of dollars, not from taxpayers in general but only from the wealthiest taxpayers, who have been given massive tax breaks, and the result has been the budgets that we see. We've become so dependent on volatile resource revenue, now running at about 30 per cent of our program spending, that when the price of oil drops, we're laying off teachers or we're laying off nurses. We can do better. An NDP government will do far, far better than this government has ever done in making sure that we have balanced budgets, and they won't be balanced on the backs of schoolchildren, I can tell you that, Mr. Speaker.

One thing that the Premier didn't talk much about in her speech is the whole question of democracy. Now, we know that Tory governments have been promising more openness and transparency for years, and they've delivered anything but. We still have, I believe, the most secretive government in Canada. When the government has a plan for private health care, they will present it in their caucus, but none of their public reports or public statements will reveal the real plan. The former Premier promised more long-term care beds in the last provincial election. They actually reversed the policy, and we revealed that by releasing a document. That's how you find out what this government is doing; somebody gives you something, and you can read what they're actually doing because what they say and what they're doing are two different things. Their long-term care strategy is actually to reduce the number of long-term care beds. They've never acknowledged it, but it is, in fact, the policy that they are implementing.

I didn't hear anything from the Premier about election finance reform, and perhaps no wonder, because as Justice minister she's the one that conveniently shuffled off the whole question of leadership campaign donations being subject to the same public disclosure requirements as regular elections. That's still off in limbo somewhere. Very convenient because in her campaign, of course, she raised a great deal of money, and we should have had that legislation in place.

I'm disappointed, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, in some of the decisions that have been made with respect to this government's cabinet. It's one thing to run against the old boys. It's quite another to appoint them to your cabinet. I have not seen that there's been a follow-through from the commitments or the impressions, maybe, that were given.

The same thing with fall sittings of the Alberta Legislature. Mr. Speaker, I think it was clear that they jumped before they looked when they cancelled the fall sitting. They did not know that they did not have the authority to not have a fall sitting. That is why we are now here for two days, and then we get a month off while they figure out what it is they're going to do.

In fact, there's plenty that they could be talking about. There's a great deal. Our Bill 208 I already mentioned; we could be debating that. We could be debating it today. The government's Education Act is a very comprehensive document. We could be debating that for weeks. There are lots of things.

The promise for fixed election dates should be decided in this Legislature this fall because that's a commitment that the Premier made, and I expect that she will consult with all political parties and will fix an election date before the end of the year so that the other parties know when it's going to be. Mr. Speaker, it's like having a foot race where you all line up and where one person gets to yell go when she's ready regardless of when everyone else is. It's an old-fashioned, antiquated, and unfair system. The Premier promised in her campaign for leadership that she would change that, so I think she has a duty to bring that forward now. We need full sittings.

We need to make sure that we end patronage. I want to say something about the appointment of Gary Mar. I think that that was completely unacceptable. Whether or not he did a good job in Washington and whether or not he has got suitable qualifications to do the job in Hong Kong, it was clearly not a decision made based on careful scrutiny of all of the available candidates and evaluation of their relative skills but a political patronage decision, which conveniently moves a former political opponent out of the province, halfway around the world. I don't think it's something that Albertans really want to see or pay for, for that matter, Mr. Speaker.

Finally, you know, I do accept that the Premier has made some sounds of having a more constructive relationship, and I think that that's welcome. If we can actually develop that based on deeds rather than on promises and we see some real moves in that way, I think that the Premier will find that we will respond. You know, there's an old saying, which I think bears repeating for the Premier: your opponents sit opposite you; your enemies are behind you. I think I'm going to be watching the relationships on the other side very carefully, but I am prepared and my party is prepared to work with the government where we believe they are acting in the best interests of the public and where they are actually genuinely interested in a co-operative dialogue and a relationship. If that is offered, that will be reciprocated.

Mr. Speaker, I want to just conclude by saying that I believe that there are two clear visions in this province. There's the Conservative vision, which has been put forward in the speech, and there's the NDP vision. The Conservative vision is based on favoritism to their friends, it's based on ignoring the environment, and it's based on using education and health care as means to balance a budget. The NDP vision is based on looking after the actual needs of the people and the families of this province, making sure that the environment is clean, that health care and education are delivered consistently year after year to the best possible standard, that we look after small business and we look after farmers, and that we don't allow the kind of cronyism and patronage that has marked this government for so many years.

Those are two very different visions, Mr. Speaker, and I'm looking forward to an opportunity to put those visions forward to the people of Alberta in order to decide what direction our province is going to go.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your time.

5:00

The Speaker: I'll now call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie on behalf of the Alberta Party.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to address this House on behalf of the Alberta Party and our new leader, Glenn Taylor. He has asked me to bring his greetings to this Assembly and to voice our appreciation for this unique opportunity.

I am privileged to be the first Member of this Legislative Assembly to represent the Alberta Party. I am privileged to be, I think, the fourth Member of this Legislative Assembly this afternoon during these proceedings to congratulate the hon. the Premier on her new job and to say that I look forward to working with her and that I intend to take her at face value in her comments that where we go from here is not a partisan project, that we all sit in the Assembly together for one shared reason: because we believe in Alberta.

We in the Alberta Party believe in working together, in working constructively. We're going to criticize the government when we think the government is wrong. We're going to give the government credit when we think the government is right. We're going to trust that we can do that in an atmosphere of productive debate, a professional, businesslike environment and that it's not going to be personal and that we can continue to work together both behind the scenes and on the floor of this Legislature. I do hope we get the chance to work together on the floor of this Legislature much more in the near future than we have in the near past and the distant past.

I hope that we get to work together this fall on some substantive legislation. It boggles my mind that we are at government Bill 18 and private member's Bill 203 at this point. We should be much farther along in the agenda than we are.

I don't want to make this a half-hour of criticizing the government because there's more to be said and done here than that, I think. There's acknowledgement that there are some very good ideas in this speech. There's also the opportunity, which I would be remiss to ignore, to get our own position and point of view on the record, so I will.

The Alberta Party, Mr. Speaker, is the new kid on the block, named for this province that we all love. It is the party of the future, unencumbered by the ideologies of the past. The Alberta Party will bring hope, intelligence, trust, and better ideas back to our province and back to our government because we are a party that is built on listening and learning and then leading.

Alberta is a great place, but it can be better. That's why we're all here, to make it better. Together we can make it better. Alberta is a great place, but still too many families, too many households in this province are struggling with higher and higher costs of living and increasing debt loads. A debt-burdened society is a risk-averse society, and we cannot allow this culture of debt to endanger our enterprising and entrepreneurial skills. Our economy and our future depend on innovation, courage, and Albertans willing to start new businesses and to create jobs and prosperity.

This is a great place, but we have the highest high school dropout rate in the nation, more than any other province in Canada. We have the resources to ensure that every child completes high school and receives a postsecondary education if they choose to. Alberta is a great place, but we spend more on our health care system with often less satisfactory outcomes than many other provinces in the nation. Alberta is a great place, but our image around the world has been tarred both by our inability to tell our story and, obviously, to act as responsibly as we should have. We know this because the people of Alberta know this and they have told us so.

The Alberta Party will try to transform government because we are committed to an ambitious and authentic program of citizen engagement. We've listened to thousands of Albertans. We did this the slow way, the authentic way, often with small groups of 10 or 12 Albertans in coffee shops, living rooms, local libraries, church basements, and more than the odd pub. We've met face to face, and through the use of innovative technologies we've heard their stories, their challenges, their hopes for the province. We've also asked the citizens of this great province what they were grateful for, living here in Alberta, and they've told us that they live in a beautiful province blessed with an inspiring natural landscape and a proud history of citizenship, community spirit, and entrepreneurialism. They're grateful for the opportunities that this province offers, and they are insistent that we must not squander these opportunities.

Albertans have told us that they want us, their politicians, to work together constructively, much like we all do with our neighbours. Albertans, like all Canadians, know what it means to be a good neighbour. There is nothing like winter here in the Great White North to teach us the value of working together. We're all willing to push or pull our neighbour out of a snowbank or shovel the walkway when our next-door neighbour needs us to. So our hope is that we can bring some of that same energy and co-operative spirit to politics. It's time to do politics differently for the benefit of all Albertans, and I offer that challenge to our new Premier.

The Alberta Party is attracting thousands of Albertans from all regions, urban and rural, and of all ideological backgrounds, including those who have never been involved in any political party before this, because instead of representing a particular segment of the traditional political spectrum, the Alberta Party seeks out the best ideas regardless of whether they're perceived to be from the left, from the right, or from the middle. A good idea is a good idea. Albertans don't define themselves as right or left, and neither do we. If anything, Albertans define themselves as practical, as does the Alberta Party. Traditional parties have focused for far too long in this province on what divides us. We want to focus on the common ground that unites us. This common ground amongst Albertans is often common sense.

Having listened to Albertans and learned from their wisdom, this is how we will lead. On the economy, the Alberta Party recognizes that the development of natural resources is our primary economic vehicle. In order to continue to develop and grow, our resource-based industries need to be effectively leveraged and supported with an eye to future economic growth and challenges. We cannot control the economy. We cannot control the economy here at home within our own borders, nationwide, or, for heaven's sake, around the globe. We have no control over that.

However, we do have the ability to create a favourable business environment. It's time we use the public revenue generated from our resource-based industries today to catalyze a sustainable, profitable, competitive, and diverse economy which provides Alberta businesses access to new markets, research, and innovation.

Kudos to the Premier for recognizing the importance of the Northern Gateway pipeline project and for committing her government to getting behind it and supporting it. It opens up a crucial, key second market for our resources, and it's never good business to only have one customer to sell to.

The Alberta Party will ensure a stable regulatory and royalty environment for our business community to operate in and succeed in while we actively promote a positive brand for our industries globally. We'll insist on best practices that include a strong commitment to environmental stewardship. It's time to actively support the forestry, agriculture, and energy sectors of our economy through broad policy frameworks that encourage value-added products and processing.

We will partner as needed with the industries, enterprises, and businesses already established in Alberta, including most especially small businesses that, as the Premier pointed out, generate 37 per cent of our jobs, an incredible amount of our economic activity, to ensure that they have the capacity to continue to provide jobs and growth through increasing global market intelligence and access for Alberta's entrepreneurs.

Fiscal responsibility begins with smart planning. I think this province has lost its way somewhat when it comes to planning for the future and, thus, isn't able to sustainably pay for its operations and commitments. Yearly budgets fail to reflect the needs and wants of Albertans as they're not properly consulted before budgets are finalized. I commend the Premier for committing her government to consulting with real Albertans before Budget 2012 is written. I believe we said we would do that last spring during the last budget. Good ideas can come from anywhere, and I commend the Premier for borrowing one of ours.

Relying too heavily on nonrenewable resource revenues leaves our economy fragile and subject to the whims of the market when these revenues should be benefiting Albertans now and into the future. The Alberta Party believes smart planning and a proper mix of revenue collection, service funding, saving, and investing is needed in order to adequately offer the programs and services that the people of Alberta expect and deserve from their government now and tomorrow.

What's more, we believe it's time to engage Albertans in an authentic conversation, perhaps the most important conversation we could involve them in right now, about what level of service they would like from their government and how they want to pay for it. Consultation with Albertans is the key to successfully planning for the future, effectively governing on behalf of Albertans, saving and investing for the future, and paying today's bills without running up a deficit and a debt.

It's easy to say that the only way taxes will ever go is down and that there will be no provincial sales tax. I'm not standing here advocating for a provincial sales tax or higher taxes. I'm not even prepared to stand here as I have in the past and advocate for bringing progressivity back to our income tax system.

What I am advocating for is for government to engage the nearly 4 million Albertans in an authentic adult conversation about the level of service they want from their government and what they're prepared to pay for it and what they're prepared to give up if they want low taxes and high service. Because right now we have that. Health care is a good example. I'll touch on that in a second, Mr. Speaker. Through a collaborative and consultative process the Alberta Party will commit to discussing with Albertans the plethora of options available to cover the cost of services, including user fees and premiums, alternative revenue collection, program cuts, and a complete review of our taxation system while committing to maintaining Alberta as the lowest tax jurisdiction in the nation.

Now I want to talk about health care for a moment because it's on every Albertan's mind. We know that. It is necessary to build and we will build a health system that focuses on keeping people healthy, that strives to keep people out of the hospital. Of course, we need a medical system that is accessible and responds quickly when people become ill or injured and need to be in the hospital, but our focus on making sick and injured people better has become a focus on acute care rather than health protection and promotion, disease and injury prevention, management of chronic conditions, and long-term care.

Publicly funded universal health care in Canada is an idea that was born on the prairies. The Alberta Party believes it can be perfected here. Albertans should have the best health care system in the country, if not the world, and if we all pull together, we can achieve this. The Alberta Party emphasizes prevention as a means for ensuring the sustainability of our publicly funded health system. We acknowledge that health demands will increase in the future, and currently prevention, unbelievably, is only 1 per cent of the health care budget.

We also emphasize primary care, the right to have a family doctor, accessibility, and a strong mental health strategy. Chronic illness is the most common form of illness and very expensive to treat. Injuries are a leading cause of hospitalization among Albertans and often require expensive treatment and rehab; however, many injuries and chronic illnesses are largely preventable. Simple and relatively inexpensive initiatives like improving the enforcement of workplace safety standards can go a long way towards reducing the frequency of injuries and illness and lessening their human and financial burdens.

The Alberta Party will also create a school health policy that integrates nutrition and healthy living into Alberta's school curriculum. Our vision for the future of health care in Alberta is a vision that ensures that everybody has a family doctor and is able to easily access a primary care network. When people can see their family doc, a nurse practitioner, or some other health professional, they can identify and treat problems before they become worse, minimizing recovery times, preventing the system from having to provide more expensive levels of care.

The Alberta Party will invest in expanding access to high-quality home care and continuing care. Acute-care beds in hospitals are very expensive, up to $3,000 per bed per day, yet many patients in these beds, as my honoured colleagues who have spoken before me today have referenced, are only there because they're waiting for beds in other parts of the system such as long-term care, palliative care, mental health care, and they're waiting a long, long time. Many could even be cared for at home if we had better support systems in place for their families. Increasing support for home care and continuing care is better for Albertans. It gives seniors and their families more of a say over their living arrangements and is much less expensive for our health system.

I would be remiss if I did not recognize and appreciate the hon. the Premier's commitment to ensuring a full, open, public judicial inquiry into the alleged intimidation of health care professionals in Alberta. Sunlight is a great disinfectant, and Albertans are looking for more. There are, I guess, two ways of looking at public inquiries. One is that they cost a lot of money. They may not uncover a lot of problems or wrongdoing. That way almost presumes that you can only justify the cost of an inquiry if it produces X number of incidents of wrongdoing per Y number of dollars spent. But the other way of looking at public inquiries is this. Sometimes they are the only means of re-establishing the public's trust in an institution brought into question. We think it's pretty important that the people be able to trust that the health care system on which they collectively spend nearly $15 billion a year and on which they literally stake their lives is doing its work properly.

In many ways this province, Mr. Speaker, has some of the most progressive and forward-thinking environmental initiatives in the world. This is thanks in part to our municipal governments. The city of Edmonton, for instance: world-class waste management and a plan to preserve and promote farmland and urban agriculture. Medicine Hat: the city is using revenues from its natural gas royalties to support families in putting solar panels on their homes. Okotoks: the town has reduced its water consumption by a third and its greenhouse gas emissions by one-fifth.

The province needs to learn from our municipal governments when it comes to environmental stewardship. We must stand up for this province with more than words and expensive taxpayer-funded ad campaigns. The rubber must hit the road. The provincial government can learn from our civic government brethren. They're showing leadership, and we need to be humble enough to follow. Good ideas, I repeat, can come from anywhere, and we must never be so proud that we will not or cannot build on those ideas to build a better Alberta for the next generation.

A rich and diverse environment comes with the responsibility of properly protecting, sensibly utilizing, and respectfully appreciating Alberta's natural heritage. With good governance, meaningful and collaborative decision-making, and effective leadership the Alberta Party believes we can advance our resource economy while at the same time honouring and preserving our unique natural ecosystem. The Alberta Party believes that the improved stewardship of all water resources, responsible development of land, high air quality, and reduced greenhouse gas emissions are all eminently achievable in Alberta if we have the will to achieve those goals.

The Alberta Party believes that the citizens of this province, business, and government working together can make the province environmentally healthier and economically more prosperous at the same time. We envision a future in which integrated environment and energy policies are developed with input from industry and the people of Alberta, where water is viewed as a public good that is responsibly shared among all Albertans and conserved as a matter of course, where a land-use policy is founded upon a sustainable balance of development and conservation, reclamation, and restoration.

Over the years this province's energy sector has created immense value for our province and prosperity for our people. These benefits will continue only if our energy sector keeps pace with and adapts to the demands of a rapidly changing world. Alberta is in the enviable position of having the potential to be the world leader in developing a sustainable energy sector, combining the best sources and practices of our existing energy industry with innovative and creative renewable forms of energy. Alberta can be at the leading edge of the green energy future by building on the current strengths of a healthy oil and gas industry. The Alberta Party recognizes the need for an innovative energy sector, a robust economy, and a healthy environment. Indeed, these are not three separate discussions in Alberta; they are the conversation.

In the past, activity in our energy sector has created huge spinoff benefits, but often those benefits accrue elsewhere. We want to keep more of these benefits here at home in our local communities. It also benefits Albertans when the energy sector produces a higher valued product for export to markets. Can we upgrade a hundred per cent of our bitumen? Would market conditions allow us to do that? No, probably not. Even if market conditions would, is it in our best interests in terms of environmental protection and the preservation of our scarce water supplies to do it all? No, it isn't, but we should do more than we do today.

Becoming and remaining a world leader in energy requires a culture of entrepreneurship and innovation. Entrepreneurship means we're able to recognize opportunity. Innovation allows us to respond to a changing world. This begins with building on our existing strengths and systematically supporting innovation in education, research, technology, business development, and environmental science within the energy sector.

Our democracy, our communities, and our economy depend on education, innovation, and creativity, and Alberta must use its wealth to fund what is most important. To our party education is the foundation of our future, and our children are the hope for our future, so why not give our hope that foundation that they need? We commend the Premier for belatedly restoring the funding cut from education. We condemn the government for putting our students in this position in the first place.

The Alberta Party vision for the future of Alberta recognizes that education is more than just grades and exams. Education means equipping Albertans for the world ahead of them as our society shifts and adapts to new technologies. Our education system must absorb these changes. A strong school system produces successful and creative citizens who are proactive in this ever-changing and diverse society.

The Alberta Party envisions an education system in which schools are adequately funded and are at the heart of the community, the local school boards are responsible for decisions regarding their schools, spending habits are transparent to the public, and teachers are trusted to teach to the needs of the students, not to the provincial exam. Alberta needs to become a leader in education and learning. This means prioritizing skill development in the areas of critical thinking and problem solving; creativity and innovation; social responsibility; cultural, global, and environmental awareness; communication; digital literacy; self-direction; personal management; collaboration and leadership; and, ultimately, lifelong learning.

The Alberta Party has a new vision that reconnects the communities of Alberta to a common dream while respecting and admiring the local creativity and local way of life that give our province the richness that we cherish. Strong communities are the building blocks of a successful province, and municipalities are the vehicles through which we build them. Local government is closest to the people, and it is their actions that most closely affect all our daily lives. An Alberta Party government will recognize municipalities as a true order of government and foster a new partnership based on mutual respect.

The Alberta Party will respect the taxes people are asked to pay, and we will invest those dollars to ensure our communities are safe, that necessary infrastructure is built and maintained, and that each municipality can achieve its most sustainable and creative form.

Albertans have shared their hopes with us that this province can continue to be a place of economic creativity and strength and that our enterprising spirit can be used to leverage the opportunity we have today while building our province for the 21st century. They've told us they want a vibrant, diversified economy to create a sustainable future not just within the energy industry but in all other sectors, including the arts, forestry, agriculture, and the innovative technologies of this century to come.

It's time to turn our province back into a place of ideas, where debate is welcomed and our citizens are inspired to create a bright future for their families, their communities, and the province. The Alberta Party is committed to partnerships that respect who we are as Albertans. We're committed to a fiscally responsible financial climate, that benefits each one of us. We must use public dollars as effectively and efficiently as possible, we must balance the books to mitigate the effects of boom and bust, and we must set aside money for a rainy day.

Albertans want a government that chooses to inspire and demand the best from our public service rather than asking for mediocrity and holding hiring freezes or layoffs over their heads.

The Alberta Party is committed to making this province unquestionably the best place in the world to live and to keep raising that bar to commit to continuous improvement in making this province the best place in the world to live. We want to create a province that young people are proud to live in, are committed to stay in, will grow old and die in, and will die happy.

The Alberta Party is committed to building a province that is committed to a new democracy and new partnerships, one where we're not afraid of the voices of citizens but where we seek out their voices at every opportunity so that all hands can help build this great province and make it a progressive, forward-thinking, 21st- and maybe even 22nd-century province.

It's time for all of us to be inspired and to demand more of ourselves. It's time for change, time for leadership, and it's time to act. You earn the right to govern every four or five years, but the trust of the people has to be won every day. We listen, we learn, and then we lead. That's the Alberta Party, and that's our vision for the future of this great province, this province that we love, this province that our party is named for.

Mr. Speaker, thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. member, and thank you very much, hon. member, as well.

We've now concluded round 1, and we will drop off the list of future speakers a representative from the Alberta Party because there's no one else to participate in the six minutes remaining.

My brief notes suggest the following, and they may be out by a couple of seconds: there are 24 minutes still available for participation by a member of the government caucus, 28 minutes for participation by a member of the Official Opposition, 22 minutes left for any remaining participants of the Wildrose Party, and 12 minutes left for participation by the ND caucus.

May I ask if there's an additional speaker from the government caucus?

Then I will recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview to participate.

Dr. Taft: Okay. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a privilege for me to rise. This is, after all, an emergency debate, and I was – okay. I'll change my opening here. This is a vital issue, and it's good to see so many of us here in the Assembly to partake and to participate. I thought I would start by going page by page through the speech that was delivered by the Premier and making some comments that I think are consistent with our own caucus policy and with my own beliefs. Some of them are favourable, and some of them are real concerns.

I'll start right off from almost at the beginning, where the Premier states, I think, something that's pretty obvious. She says, "We have an astounding wealth of resources, more than enough to sustain our families and crown our communities." I couldn't agree more. I've felt for a long time – and I've done the math to support my hunch – that Alberta is almost certainly the richest place on Earth.

That's led me to some serious questioning because given the incredible wealth in Alberta, given the fact that per capita we really are the richest place on Earth, why is it that we're debating about cutbacks? Why is it that just a few weeks ago we had to scramble under the new Premier to find a hundred million dollars to reinstate funding for teachers? Why is it that even according to the government's own business plan some 50 per cent of Alberta's roads are in moderate or poor condition? Why is it that we have the highest tuition rates? There are profound questions here that all of us need to think about. If we really do have the wealth that the Premier indicates in her speech we have, why aren't we managing better? Why are we struggling so much?

We must shield Alberta from the hazards of the challenging times in which we live . . . We must offer high quality and far-reaching public services. And we must preserve the province's finances.

I think I can speak on behalf of all the Alberta Liberal caucus that we will support this Legislature and this government in pursuing those kinds of goals.

On page 3 towards the bottom of the page the Premier talks about unfortunate nations, and I want to quote her correctly here. "Unfortunate nations spent too much and took in too little." She's referring there to the current economic crisis in Europe. You could add the United States to that list and perhaps a number of other countries. I think what's striking there is the balance, the implied balance: spent too much and took in too little. I'm glad both sides of that equation are in this speech because I think over and over we hear a noisy, noisy discourse about spending too much, and we hear almost nothing about taking in too little.

The previous Finance minister, who delivered the budget speech last spring, spoke about Alberta being able to increase its revenues by $11 billion and still be the lowest taxed province in Canada. We have to ask ourselves: is it wise to leave that much money on the table? Is it wise to be $11 billion lower than the next lowest taxing jurisdiction when we can't top up the heritage fund, when we can't give reliable funding to so many of our services? Are we really being wise here?

It would have been nice – and I would encourage the Premier to do this – to genuinely open a debate. Issue a white paper, for example. Stir up the public on the debate about: what is the right balance in Alberta between spending and revenue? It's a legitimate debate, with many different views. Let's open it up. Let's have it go on.

At the top of page 4 the Premier in her speech said: "Alberta has no net debt. We have $5,700 in assets per person and the highest credit rating available." Actually, she understates things there. It's true that Alberta has no net debt and that we have, as she implies here, significant assets, but she limits her assets here to essentially the government's cash assets. I would like to challenge this government – and I challenge the Energy minister and the Finance minister to do this – to treat Alberta's assets the same way that Imperial Oil treats its assets on its books. Do the accounting in this government that you will see if you go through the financial reports of the corporations. What am I getting out there? Count all our assets and most particularly our oil and gas assets that are still in the ground. After all, if it's good enough for Imperial Oil and for all kinds of other corporate entities, surely it's good enough for us. After all, we do own it.

It's easy to forget, but we as the citizens of Alberta, we the government of Alberta actually own – what is it? – about 170 billion barrels' equivalent of oil and gas. If you do the math, even if you value that in the ground, a net present value of $5 a barrel – Imperial Oil values theirs, I think, at $10 a barrel on the books; remember that oil, I think, today got close to 90 bucks again – it's something like $840 billion that we own and that if we were a private corporation, we would put on our books. I think that this government should do the same thing, and that $5,700 number would soar. It would also give the people of Alberta a much clearer sense of what's actually at stake.

I would encourage this Premier to do that.

Ms Blakeman: Transparency.

Dr. Taft: Transparency. It's just a matter, really, of keeping up to what's common practice in the private sector.

I was encouraged when I read on page 5 where the Premier talks about "supporting a strong social network to protect our most vulnerable. We are committed to maintaining programs and services for vulnerable Albertans while ensuring long-term program sustainability."

I was discouraged that she didn't explore more detail there. We actually leave an awful lot of our most vulnerable citizens out of the picture. As many of you who've been in here over the years have heard me say, every day in Alberta thousands of kids – little kids, five, six, seven, eight years old – go to school hungry through no fault of their own, and alone among all the provinces this government provides no particular funding for helping those kids.

I was in a school just a couple of weeks ago in northeast Edmonton, and as I've seen done at a school in Lethbridge, the teachers and various charities provide toast and Cheez Whiz so that the kids can sit through a class without falling asleep or without being so distracted by their own hunger.

It sure would have been nice to have seen some commitment to actually expanding programs and services for vulnerable Albertans in this speech. We have after all expanded services for all kinds of perhaps less vulnerable interests, whether that might be the oil and gas sector, for example, with $3 billion, I think, in subsidies in the last three years, or whether it's various agriculture subsidies or all kinds of other things. Let's be serious about looking after our vulnerable people.

I took some heart when I heard the Premier say, as she did on page 6 of her speech, that this government was going to proceed with health care plans "without commercializing it or compromising our values." All of us in the Alberta Liberal caucus are strongly opposed to commercializing health care for all kinds of reasons. It turns out that in this particular case good morality, good ethics, good health care, and good economics all converge.

The evidence is overwhelming that commercialized health care not only is unethical, picking people for care according to how much they can pay, but it's also inefficient because it drives up costs. There's a lot, an overwhelming amount, of evidence to that, and I think anybody in this Assembly, on all sides of the Assembly, have at least a gut sense of that when they look at commercial health care in the United States. I'm glad we've made that commitment, but you can rest assured that under our leader and backed up by all our caucus we will go to whatever length is necessary to hold the government to account on that particular promise.

I was struck about the examples used for health care, glamour examples – the heart surgery, the high-tech catheterizations, and so on – when what we really need in Alberta for better health care is to address issues of mental health. We need to address prevention and primary care. I will urge the minister of health to focus on those things. Don't get seduced by the chrome and mirrors of all the high-tech equipment and all the millions of dollars we can spend per patient in some cases when we can do so much more so much more effectively. I think this minister of health maybe gets that. I'll be checking to see.

One of the most effective ways of improving the health of Alberta is to reduce poverty, and we will be pursuing that kind of agenda aggressively.

I did get concerned, and I thought, "My goodness, there's a kind of contradiction in this speech" when on page 6 we're talking about health care "without commercializing it," and then on page 7 we're talking about a whole new system of continuing care through public-private partnerships. Then on the top of page 8 I was startled and, frankly, dismayed when I read a quote. Well, it's not a quote yet; I'll set this up properly for Hansard. The government will be "allowing private industry to meet seniors' needs." Then it goes on to say that that "will create more jobs in many different sectors and steady growth for our economy." Now, that sentence is loaded with so many problems that I could probably fill the rest of this speech just on that one sentence, but I know not everybody would appreciate that.

Allowing private industry to meet seniors' needs is exactly the wrong direction to go, and we know that. We have a whole nation that illustrates that to us south of the border. Turning our seniors, our most vulnerable people on fixed incomes, over to private industry to meet their needs is a recipe for pain and cost and suffering and injustice. You can bet the Alberta Liberals will fight this tooth and nail. We should not be turning our seniors into a commodity. We should be there for them as vulnerable citizens. Further, this sentence then goes on, and instead of talking about meeting seniors' needs through a better system, it talks about meeting seniors' needs in order to create more jobs and to cause steady growth for our economy. Well, where does that lead us?

You know who has the most rapid growth in their health care sector in the world? The United States. One of the biggest drains on the American economy is their health care system, yet they have come to depend on the health care system as one of the very, very few sectors that's growing, that's creating jobs. They're in kind of a black hole, a downward spiral, where the more they pour into their commercial private-sector health care, the weaker their economy gets and then the more they depend on that, the economics of health care. Health care should not become a job-creation industry. It should never be seen in that regard. As you as a government begin doing that, you are leading us towards a cliff from which we will not be able to hold back.

I was struck by the line on page 8 of the speech where the Premier spoke about "64 per cent of all workers 25 and up reporting post-secondary credentials." I'm the critic for this area, and I'm pleased, as I'm sure we're all pleased, that Alberta has a highly educated workforce, but we have to remember that a disproportionate number of those people were trained outside of Alberta. Some people will say: well, how can we have such a low high school completion rate, the lowest postsecondary participation rate in Canada, yet one of the most highly educated workforces? It's because that workforce is getting trained at Dalhousie and McGill and Ryerson and at BCIT and so on, and they're moving here.

In fact, I was at an economic symposium about 10 days ago at the university, and there was an estimate that Alberta gets a transfer of value just through education alone of well over a billion dollars a year because all those other provincial governments pour money into training the workforce that comes here. Good for us; that's how a portable workforce works. But let's remember. Let's not confuse ourselves that we're doing such a great job at training these people. They're coming from somewhere else.

The most exciting thing, the best thing for me – I've haven't had a chance to confer on this with my caucus colleagues – was on page 9. I want to give the government marks here. "We will put the entire education system on a three-year funding plan, ending uncertainty over budgets and providing schools with the resources they need to meet demand from a growing population." Great idea. I'm sure that we will support that in this caucus. Let's get our government services off the roller coaster ride of funding cuts and uncertainty, and let's give them stability. Another thing this government did well, since I'm giving out bouquets here, was to give five-year funding to the health care system. Good moves.

I want to go to page 10 now and reflect on a quote here that I suspect has more truth in it than perhaps the Premier knew when she read it. The quote is this: "The most enduring prosperity is spread as widely as possible." That cuts to the core of inequality and the unrelenting increase in equality in Alberta and in Canada and in the western world.

A few years ago the TD Bank published a series of three papers over about four years where they spoke about the western tiger. In one of those they addressed inequality in Calgary, and they produced a startling figure, that 42 per cent of Calgarians were living on $20,000 a year or less. Calgary actually had a larger portion of low-income people than other Canadian cities and a larger portion of high-income people than other Canadian cities. We need to address that inequality, or we will end up in the same kind of social turbulence that we're seeing in the rest of the developed world. We can do it. Let's feed those hungry school kids. Let's set out a coherent plan to eliminate poverty in the richest place on Earth, and we will all benefit.

It's not just about being nice to poor people; it's about being good for a whole society. So when the Premier says that "the most enduring prosperity is spread as widely as possible," I hope all of you in the government caucus understand what she's getting at there. That's a vitally important value.

I will flip over a few pages. I was concerned and I am concerned about the enormous concentration on the energy sector in this speech. Clearly, we all understand that the energy sector drives this province. Half of the economy of Alberta is driven directly or indirectly by the energy sector, but for a while I was concerned, as I heard the Premier talk so much about the energy sector, that this government was going to abandon any attempts at diversification. Some of the points in here just reinforce that for me.

She spoke about, for example, on page 9: "To enhance our leadership role further, this government will negotiate externships – competitive placements for talented young Albertans with energy-focused organizations around the globe." I wondered: why only energy? Why don't we send some of our filmmakers to Hollywood or to Bollywood? Why don't we send some of our architects to Dubai or to London or to New York? Why aren't we creating externships in all of those programs? Why only energy? Again, at least let's have that debate. There is a case to be made: we'll put all our eggs in one basket and then look after them very closely. But there is at least an equal case to be made to spread our risks, to grow other industries, to bring the world talent here that we want.

When I got to page 13, I thought the Premier was simply being over the top when she said, "This government will work to make Alberta a dominant global supplier in an increasingly hungry world." Now, I could have accepted important or vibrant or vital. But dominant? Come on, folks. We're not going to dominate world global agricultural markets. We don't have the resources. We don't have the land mass. You know, we think Canada is a huge exporter of grain. France, I think, exports more grain than Canada. Our herd of cattle – I'm sitting here beside somebody who probably has the exact numbers. Alberta's cattle herd is a fraction of many states in the United States, not to mention Brazil or Argentina or Australia.

We're not ever going to be dominant global suppliers in agriculture. Let's be realistic. We can be focused, effective, significant, but there's no way in the world we're going to dominate agriculture. If there is, I want to see . . . [interjections] I'm getting heckled from some of the ministers over there. Put your money where your mouth is. Put the studies on the floor of this Assembly that show that Alberta is going to dominate the world in agricultural production.

An Hon. Member: Quality over quantity.

Dr. Taft: Quality over quantity.

Why don't we become, you know, like Kona coffee? There are barely a few thousand acres of coffee production in Hawaii, but the people on the Big Island have established Kona as a premium brand. They don't dominate world coffee production, but it's a premium brand. Let's do that for Alberta's agricultural products. Let's talk about quality.

I also wanted to comment on page 14, where the Premier said, "This government will go to the wall for Alberta's agricultural sector and ensure our farmers are the best in the world." Now, I have no problem with going to the wall for farmers, but I thought it was important to note the phrasing here. It says, "Go to the wall for Alberta's agricultural sector." And I'm thinking: well, what part of that are we going to go to the wall for? Tyson Foods? Are we going to go to the wall for Cargill? We actually have in the past. We know that under the BSE bailout the big winners were the multinationals. I don't particularly want to go to the wall for huge, multinational corporations, but I will go to the wall for the little farmer from Rimbey or Battle River or Sexsmith. I could do that, but let's get a little detail here.

It also left me wondering: who else will this Premier go to the wall for? I return to that hungry kid who sat in the classroom just a few hours ago today, without food and caught in an impoverished, dysfunctional family. Will the Premier go to the wall for that kid? Will you as a government caucus go to the wall for those kids? Will you go to the wall to protect the environment? Will you go to the wall to build the heritage fund, to get our finances in order? Who are you? Who is this Premier prepared to go to the wall for?

I think we should perhaps wrap up by addressing some of the values that were and were not spoken to in this speech. On page 16 the Premier spoke perhaps the only time in this speech about core values. She says, "Entrepreneurship is one of our core values and this government will promote it." I'm okay with that. Entrepreneurship is great. I come from a family of entrepreneurs, and I'm involved in various entrepreneurial activities myself. But I wanted to hear about more core values from this Premier.

Let's ask ourselves as Albertans: what are our other core values? What about fairness? Is it fair when some people benefit so much and some are left so far behind? Is it fair that somebody suicidal from mental health has to sit in an emergency room or somebody needing education can't get education because tuition fees are high? What about the core value of fairness? What about democracy? Some of the other speakers here challenged this Premier to address the core values of democracy, compassion, human rights, diversity.

It would have been nice if this speech had actually begun and ended with values rather than beginning and ending with finances. That's pretty much what this Premier did. She began and ended with finances. Page 16: "Our wealth and freedom depend on the individual right to free enterprise." It depends on so much more than that: rule of law, social stability, education, infrastructure, reliable electricity. On page 17 – and I'll wrap up here, Mr. Speaker – I just cannot buy this. "All our plans for a stronger Alberta must come back to finance."

I want to leave you with something. Is money the foundation of everything this government is going to do? Is it really the case that all our plans for a stronger Alberta come down to money?

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is a proud province, and there is so much the people of this wonderful province can be proud of. Nowhere else in this country have I met people as generous in spirit and as kind in heart. When facing difficult economic horizons, Albertans remain hard working. They remain compassionate. They remain tough and resilient. They know that the greatness of this province will continue to be built by the people who live here. We work hard, and, yes, we play hard, but when the going gets tough, we dig in our heels and do what we need to survive. They don't believe in a government that thinks that they know best, that centralizes decision-making and is more concerned about rewarding their pals than putting the interests of Albertans first.

Mr. Speaker, let's talk about what the people of Alberta want versus what the government tells them they want. This is so clear in the Premier's speech today by the number of times that we saw the word "we" being used. Albertans want their province to be fiscally responsible and to not spend more than we have and plunge our province into debt. They don't believe in higher taxes, bigger spending, and more government. Albertans don't want a government that gives itself a raise behind closed doors. They want to be in charge of handling the salaries of their elected officials and not the other way around.

Albertans want their government to be open, transparent, and accountable to them, to represent the roles of the elected MLAs and give them a free vote in the Legislature. What they really don't want is a government that warns Alberta of the worsening economic climate and then, Mr. Speaker, takes three weeks off to avoid tough questions and important debate. Albertans want a government that will listen to the issues and concerns and act for them and not for that government's interest.

Albertans want more from their health care system. They want a health care system where everyone has a family doctor and they don't wait months and months to see a specialist and wait even longer for surgery. Albertans want a health care system that allows health care professionals to speak openly and freely about the concerns they see, on how to improve the system, without a gag order being imposed on them.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans want our seniors to move seamlessly through the system when they can't take care of themselves anymore. They want our seniors to have home care when they need it, assisted living when they need it, and long-term care when they need it. Albertans do not want our seniors to have to pay for a bath, to pay for someone to push their wheelchair to a dining room to eat. Albertans are proud of our seniors and believe we need to take care of them. What Albertans don't want is gobbledygook coming from the government about their continuing care model, where they have developed a system that cannot meet our seniors' needs, and they nickel and dime them to death.

Albertans know that in a province with no shortage of innovation and determination they can lead all of Canada in the quality of health care received, but they are tired of the government's talking points and want to see tangible results for themselves and their families. Albertans want mental health beds along with beds available for those suffering with alcohol and drug addiction. They want health professionals to be there when they are needed. Albertans don't want to be told that there are no beds available and that they need to come back in a few weeks just to see a psychiatrist or a counsellor.

Albertans want our most vulnerable, our children, to be taken care of and for assistance to be available when emergencies hit. They especially want to make sure that these children are given stronger protection against victimization and crimes in their communities. Albertans want our social care workers to be able to manage their caseloads and be able to spend the time and the effort needed when taking care of our families when they are in crisis. Albertans want our foster families to be treated with respect and compensated fairly when they step up to the plate and to help our children and families when they are in time of need.

Albertans want us to recognize the nonprofit agencies in this province and the wonderful job they do on behalf of Albertans in our province. They want to make sure they receive a predictable funding formula year after year instead of being subject to an erratic supply of funds.

So why don't we start listening to Albertans when times get tough instead of turning a deaf ear to their concerns? They are the ones who feed life into our democratic institutions. They are the ones who make this province great. They are the ones we were sent here to represent. Let's make sure that their voices are heard. Albertans want their province to lead in troubled times, to reach out to those who need it, and to show others across this great country that in tough economic times we know what we're doing and that we are proactive instead of reactive. Albertans want to stimulate this economy the Alberta way, through lowering taxes, through balancing the books by prioritizing spending on front-line services, through less regulation and, quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, by less government altogether.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans love this province. What Albertans don't love is a government that has lost its way.

The Speaker: I'll call on an hon. member from the ND caucus.

There being none, I'll call on the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. There are 15 minutes, 41 seconds remaining on the clock.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First and foremost, I congratulate the leader of the PC Party for being selected as the leader and, of course, as Premier, representing the 30,000-some votes she did receive. Of course, we do have a province of over 3.5 million Albertans, and clearly it will be interesting in the next election in terms of how Albertans, our true bosses, speak when it comes to how and who will represent them in the government.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, today truly was a Speech from the Throne as opposed to what it was described as. That being the case, it really, I guess, is politics, but we accept that, and we play by the rules of the majority of this government, this PC government of 40 years.

Mr. Speaker, over the past many months the Wildrose has been doing a lot of consulting with Albertans but, more importantly, doing a lot of listening, not telling Albertans but actually listening to Albertans. I do know that in all political parties, including the government, many of the MLAs are listening to their constituents because they know that they are their bosses and they give them their jobs. So I salute all Albertans, 3.5 million, who give everyone in this House their job. The question is: who remembers that, and who forgets it? I guess that's the real issue that we will all be judged on in this next election: did you represent the political party, the entire party line, or did you actually listen to your constituents?

The Wildrose has been doing this for the past several months across this province. And they've been speaking loud and clear, telling us what they are tired of and also what they're worn out of in terms of the numerous tricks by the government. The state of Alberta is promising, and the future of this province is promising. It's based on ideas we've received from businesses and people and senior citizens. The wisdom that senior citizens bring to this party is significant.

I meet with citizens each and every week. I like to have open office hours where you don't have to make an appointment. I challenge all MLAs to do the same, where you can sit in your office and actually have a coffee without an appointment. It's based on first-come, first-served, kind of almost like an emergency room where you come in, and if there's nothing of a more pressing nature ahead of you, you will be actually listened to and dealt with.

Mr. Speaker, really, what this government lacks is new ideas. The fact is that after 40 years it's grown old and tired even though they do have a few young members on that side. I congratulate some of the new members of the cabinet. I'm sure they're excited. Their adrenalin must be booming. I know that there are some members who wanted to be ministers of other certain things. I saw on television where some members said that they would like to be the Minister of Education versus the minister of this and that. But it's all good. It's good ideas because at the end of the day we want to serve. Everyone in this House wants to serve.

Let's talk for a moment about new ideas. New ideas are like a newborn child. They have to be fed; they have to be nurtured. They have to be protected, the new ideas. They have to be given a chance to grow. We celebrate in the Wildrose caucus the opportunity to listen to Albertans, our true bosses, and the opportunity to allow an idea to grow. That is so important. What happens, though, in a dynasty of 40 years of a PC Party? The actual party and the system they have is more powerful than one MLA, and what happens is that you lose the connection with your bosses, your constituents. Now, there are many on the government side who continue to try to listen to their constituents, and I salute you. You are listening to your constituents. Good for you. They are your bosses, not someone who has a fancy title as a minister or a fancy title like Premier or Government House Leader. You actually report to your citizens, and I congratulate you for that.

Mr. Speaker, as we go forward, I would like to say that I believe that the next election will be built on new ideas, ideas that we hear from our constituents. Allow me to say that as I sit here today, I proudly say that it is an honour and a privilege to serve. In order to serve, you have to listen. Listening is so important because of the wisdom that senior citizens, in fact, have brought to me. I stood here three years ago with the then Premier from Vegreville who promised the seniors of Fort McMurray a long-term care centre. He stood right beside me when he announced it, and then he broke the promise. That just doesn't cut it in any constituency when you make a commitment to senior citizens to build a long-term care centre, and the then minister, now the Minister of Finance, says: "No. We're going to cut that for another five years because the average age is too young."

Mr. Speaker, a couple of weeks ago I was asked by the family to be a pallbearer for a senior citizen who stayed in an acute-care bed in our hospital in Fort McMurray along with 65 others. She passed away. She was 103 years old. She never complained because she was a hard-working Albertan. She didn't know that there are actually better facilities out there that other Albertans are enjoying, but she did know that there could have been one in Fort McMurray, based on a commitment.

I'm sorry for the fact that I was not able to live up to that commitment when I was part of that government, but I proudly can say that I can look myself in the mirror. Ultimately, that lady who was 103 years old, as I carried her coffin out, I will say that not ever for a moment did her family complain. They never complained. They never criticized the Premier or anyone in his government. They said she'd lived a good life.

It's a humbling story, and I know that all of us in this room know that we can do better. We want to fulfill our commitments. So, Mr. Speaker, I say that I apologize to the family of that senior citizen because I know that we can all do better. As our licence plate says, welcome to wild rose country as we go forward into the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. Eight minutes and 13 seconds, sir.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to get up and participate in this emergency debate, which does not seem to quite reach that level of what I'd call emergency debate. I want to congratulate the new Premier on her stunning victory to become the first woman Premier in the province here. Truly it was exciting to see at least a few Albertans decide to engage in that process and want to participate by spending their $5 to vote on that.

Alberta is a province with a vast potential to lead the way for all Canadians in the years moving forward. We are truly blessed with incredible individuals that are hard workers. We have beautiful land that is clean and productive, that produces some of the best food in the world. We have clean water. We have clean air. We truly are blessed with resources that are second to none. However, I think that each and every one of us in here understands and realizes that the real reason we're blessed and able to develop these resources is because it takes good government that respects the rule of law in order for those opportunities to be fully developed.

When facing economic headwinds like these, it is critical that we lead and return to a balanced budget and be the example and the beacon of hope for all the provinces in our Confederation and, indeed, all of the countries around the world. The new Premier responded a little bit and talked about the economic problems, which again is what the emergency debate is supposed to be about yet was not really addressed in any true sense. We had some warm, wonderful words, some direction that she's talking about, but I truly question what her intent is and the direction that she's going to lead the province of Alberta.

Again, what she's demonstrated over this last week is that she doesn't respect the rule of law. She doesn't respect democracy. She set off and said that, well, we're not going to sit. The first thing she said when she got elected was that we're not going to sit. Then she talks to caucus and says: okay; we need to sit. Then it's just for two days.

We have a commission, the AUC, that was bringing forward their report today, which she suspended. So here we have commissions and boards that are being instructed by the province to produce these reports, and then they're squashed. I think she would be appalled if she saw that going on in some of the other countries where she's gone to promote democracy. Instead, though, what we see: this government is more concerned about interfering and micromanaging our markets here and wanting to pick what I want to call economic losers rather than allowing the competition and the free market to develop that. We see that in many areas.

Instead, they're busy promoting a wasteful program like spending $2 billion on carbon capture and storage. This is not the proper answer to what we need. We need to promote the responsible development of our oil sands. We need to ensure that the Northern Gateway pipeline is our top priority. She talked about it, but is it her top priority? I don't think so.

No democratic accountability. Again, the House is going to recess for three weeks so that they can go out and rejig. Let's ask: why has this problem developed? Because of this government's poor timing on when they wanted to pick a new Premier. They knew that the House sat on October 24. They knew that way back in January when they were trying to set up the schedule to say that this is what we're going to do. They created this problem and then say: oh, we need some more time. No. What they need is some more competency, which they are lacking incredibly.

Our new Premier continues to plunge into our savings accounts for such simple things as a patronage appointment for her political rival, who was far exceeding her on the first popular vote, before they went back to the people to have a popularity contest. We'll spend, you know, $260,000-plus a year when what we really should be doing is focusing and promoting our pipeline that gets our oil to Asia and India.

As we have witnessed the controversy over the Keystone pipeline, we no longer want to be beholden to the U.S. or the EU, who seem to show their desire to buy from dictatorships that have no problem supporting terrorism around the world. These areas that they want to claim as a better place to buy oil and gas don't even allow their women to vote. They don't allow them to go out in public and show their faces, yet we listen to the EU and the U.S. put a black eye on our wonderful province and our development of our oil sands.

This is an area that should've been focused on. Gary Mar said he'd be down in Ottawa on the 7th of October to fight for that Keystone pipeline, but he fell silent. But the Northern Gateway pipeline to the Pacific coast is a necessity for this province and for our country. Are we going to maximize our revenue from our resources, or are we going to be held captive to a market that wants to badmouth us on one side and yet take their oil from other states that are far more brutal and, again, barbaric in their production of oil?

We can do better, but this government is more interested in controlling and claiming credit when they have little to do with the economic prosperity that we enjoy. More often than not the entrepreneurs and the businessmen that excel in this province do it despite this government's policies rather than being enhanced by this government's policies.

Albertans deserve better. Right now we're paying for more bloated bureaucracies and individuals going to Asia and more red tape that stifles the Alberta entrepreneur. If this government is serious about improving the state of our economy, they need to stop meddling in the lives of everyday Albertans and our businesses. This government needs to begin to apply common-market principles and to begin to capitalize on the Alberta spirit and competition in an open and competitive market, the same Alberta spirit and entrepreneurial ingenuity that allowed us to unlock the oil sands and apply it to our prosperity.

We have many problems and challenges that this Premier has failed to address at this point. I just want to touch briefly on health care. Right now Albertans are paying the highest per capita of anywhere in the developed world yet getting some of the poorest results in those areas. It's very disappointing that the Premier has not addressed what we're going to do on that. Albertans agree on universal access for health, but they are tired of a health care system that operates in the same manner as North Korea and Cuba instead of applying practical European model solutions based on the competitive delivery of health care services. For too long this government and their progressive pals in the NDP and the Liberals have gotten away with fearmongering vulnerable Albertans about implementing the necessary reforms to fix our health care.

Mr. Speaker, we can do better. Albertans are looking for the type of leadership that made this province great, leadership that created the Alberta success stories in our ranching and farming communities and the oil patch. They are looking for leadership in balancing the budget without compromising our front line. They are looking for leadership that looks the challenges of the global economy straight in the eye and does not blink. From what we have seen so far, we are not getting this from our newest Premier. She has flopped on her democratic reform. She has failed to set election dates. She's flopped in coming back to allow free votes here in the Legislature.

What we know is that we've seen a nine-month hiatus, where government MLAs can speak out, but now that the leadership race is over, is anything going to change? It was very sad to realize that all of those individuals over there voted for Bill 50 and said that it's a wonderful thing, yet when we had a leadership debate, they started to denounce it. Now the silence will set in again and a lack of democracy.

Mr. Speaker, probably the most concerning is: is this Premier committed to balancing the budget?

The Speaker: Hon. members, the Assembly stands adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, October 25, 2011

Prayers

The Speaker: Welcome.

Let us pray. Give to each member of this Legislature a strong and abiding sense of the great responsibilities laid upon us. Give us a deep and thorough understanding of the needs of the people we serve. Amen.

Please be seated.

Statement by the Speaker

Order Paper Changes

Rotation of Questions and Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, as the fall sitting continues, the chair would like to point out some changes to the Order Paper and some minor changes to the order of questions and members' statements.

First, members may have noticed some changes to certain items on the Order Paper, resulting from the recent changes to the membership of Executive Council. The first modification is that the sponsor of Bill 18, the Education Act, which is at second reading stage and was introduced under the sponsorship of the former Minister of Education, now appears on the Order Paper under the name of the new Minister of Education. The cover page of the bill refers only to the Minister of Education, so reprinting the bill is not necessary.

The second modification found on the long Order Paper circulated yesterday is the withdrawal of motions other than government motions 514, 530, 547, 571, 579, 582, and 589 to reflect the appointments to Executive Council of the hon. members for Calgary-Montrose, Red Deer-South, Livingstone-Macleod, Athabasca-Redwater, and Whitecourt-St. Anne.

As well, the chair would like to point out to hon. members changes to the rotations for Oral Question Period and Members' Statements based on the increase in the number of members of the Official Opposition and the House leaders' agreement which was tabled in the Assembly yesterday by the Government House Leader.

A change is required in the order of questions to reflect the move of the new Leader of the Official Opposition to the Liberal caucus from his former independent status. As a result, today, day 3 of the Oral Question Period rotation, question 6 in the rotation to which the then independent member was entitled to ask, is removed and the subsequent positions moved up in the sequence of questions. Question 19 is allocated to the Official Opposition. The members' statement rotation will also be adjusted so that the Liberal caucus will receive the members' statement previously allocated to the independent member. The chair transmitted this information to all members in an October 14, 2011, memo on projected sitting days calendar.

There will be two modifications to these rotations based on the House leaders' agreement tabled yesterday. For today only, question 19 will be allocated to the Wildrose caucus instead of the Official Opposition. Similarly, for today only the New Democratic caucus will receive one member's statement that is usually allocated to the Progressive Conservative caucus.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I have two introductions. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 40 grade 6 students from Annunciation school, a school in my constituency, Edmonton-Meadowlark. This school is one of only a select few that offers a highly distinguished International Baccalaureate primary years program and, like other schools, is a source of pride in my constituency. Amongst the hardest-working, smartest future leaders, community leaders, and possibly MLAs, they are sitting up in this Legislature along with their teachers accompanying them: Mrs. Maureen Ostrowerka, Mrs. Linda Girard, Mr. Chris Koper, and Mrs. Sharon Monson. They are seated in the gallery in front of me and behind me, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a great Alberta Liberal caucus staff member, Melissa Gladue. Melissa came to us in the spring to work as an administrative assistant. Her efficiency, professionalism, and wonderful attitude as our front-line face to the world has made her a great addition to our team. While she is soon to leave us for a job as a judicial clerk, I know that her service has been appreciated by our caucus and by Albertans in general, and we wish her all the best. She is seated in the public gallery. I would ask Melissa to now rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly on behalf of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview a school group visiting today from École Notre-Dame in the constituency of Edmonton-Riverview. There are 35 individuals in this group, and they are led today by teachers Mr. Paulin Larochelle and Mme Adèle Maisonneuve. They are in the public gallery. I would now ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me today to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly staff from my department of the Ministry of Seniors. We are joined today by Susan, Sandy, Sharron, Andrea, Claire, and Kathy, who work tirelessly with our department and ministry to ensure that we provide the highest level of assistance and service to Albertans most in need. We have a tremendous team of civil servants working in my ministry, and we are excited to work together, bringing about and inspiring change in this ministry. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Benito: Mr. Speaker, I have three introductions today. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly executives of the Pursuers Toastmaster Club, affiliated with Toastmasters International: Mr. Dresdin Archibald, current president, and Miss Kathy Servold, treasurer, who are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional welcome of the Assembly.

It is also my honour to introduce, my second introduction, Mr. Arrey Tabot, who is seated in the members' gallery. He graduated with a BSc from the Athabasca University in June 2011 and is a volunteer at our Mill Woods constituency office. I would ask him to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

My third and last introduction, Mr. Speaker, is Mr. Doug Craig, who is seated in the members' gallery. Mr. Craig is the general manager of the Edmonton Southside primary care network, which was founded in 2005. I would ask him to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you two people that are relatively new to my constituency, having spent the previous 40 years in the fine constituency of West Yellowhead. I'd like to introduce to you this afternoon Mr. Dan and Mrs. Margaret Rooks, who have joined us here this afternoon. They've decided that in their retirement they should come to Edmonton and take advantage of all that Edmonton has to offer. Of course, given that It's All in Calder, we're very happy that you're here. I'd ask them now to please rise and receive the traditional greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the Wildrose candidate for Whitecourt-St. Anne, Ms Maryann Chichak. Maryann was a small-business owner and is currently a councillor for the town of Whitecourt. She brings a wealth of knowledge and experience to the table, and I'm so pleased that she's a member of the Wildrose. I'll ask Maryann to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also have two introductions today in the visitors' gallery. It is indeed an honour for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly the director of political operations for the Wildrose Party, Mr. Ryan Hastman. Ryan is a former candidate for the federal Conservative Party in Edmonton-Strathcona, and, surprise, surprise, he is now a proud Wildroser. He brings enthusiasm, passion, and the strength of conviction. I am proud and honoured that he is a member of the Wildrose family. I would ask Ryan to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

My second introduction to you and through you, Mr. Speaker, is Mrs. Kerry Towle. She is a young and vibrant Albertan, a successful entrepreneur, wife as well as mother, and health advocate. She also happens to be the Wildrose candidate for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake. If she could please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly my guests from the United Ukrainian Canadian Seniors. They are here today to express their concern with the state of our public health care system and the ability in particular for seniors to receive timely and affordable care. The Alberta NDP is extremely pleased to be working with strong and committed individuals in organizations like the United Ukrainian Canadian Seniors in advocating for well-funded and effective long-term care. I'd like now to ask my guests to rise as I call their names: Shirley Uhryn, Mike Uhryn, Lucy Antoniwi, Victor and Olga Horon, and Eva Doskoch. I'd like the Legislature to join me in giving them the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members today 12 students from CDI College, south campus located in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. Our 12 visitors today are all students in the oil and gas administration program. They are seated in the public gallery. I'm delighted to have them here, and I'd ask them all to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Municipal Planning

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've risen in the Legislature many times to discuss the unique challenges and opportunities of the communities in my constituency. Today, though, I want to stand and congratulate the new Minister of Municipal Affairs for his well-deserved appointment. His dedication and inspiring advocacy for strong communities has many in my constituency excited about the potential for change. However, I'd like to take this opportunity to highlight the need for this government to adopt a deliberate and unique urban agenda that rethinks the relationship between our province's two biggest municipalities, the communities within these cities, and the provincial government.

Having visited 327 out of 422 communities in Alberta is a feat not many Albertans in or outside of this Assembly can claim, and this will serve this minister well in his position. However, I must note that the number of 427 communities in Alberta considers Calgary and Edmonton a single community each. I don't want to undermine the minister's accomplishment but, rather, highlight that this is how we have viewed our province in the past, where municipality is synonymous with community. While this has served us well for the last century, it is unlikely to do so moving forward.

The city of Calgary, for example, has over 1 million people, beyond 1.2 million if you consider the bedroom communities. The city of Calgary today is not a community. It's a large but important level of government with its own responsibilities, and it is comprised of hundreds of small communities such as Highland Park and Winston Heights, just to name a few in my constituency, as well as Tuscany, Cranston, Sunalta, Saddle Ridge, Evergreen, and Forest Lawn. Each of these communities is unique in the same way that Zama City is from Bow Island and Vermilion.

In the last decade our two largest cities have changed from medium-sized cities to large metropolitan centres made up of communities. We need to change the way that we think about these two cities, and this can be done by re-engineering the municipal-provincial relationship with the value of supporting communities at the centre of this relationship.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Duration of Fall Session

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We are here in the House for day 36 of the 27th Legislature and our second day back this fall, which will also be the last day before a planned four-week break. Then we're scheduled to come back and sit for maybe two more weeks, give or take, this year.

Mr. Speaker, this shortened session will prove to be a missed opportunity to get some really good work done. It points out the need to do things differently here in the Legislature. Now, I understand that the new Premier needs time to set a new legislative agenda and that it takes time to put legislation forward – certainly, some delay is to be expected – but what I don't understand is how all of us as elected representatives can have no legislation to consider here in the House. Even if the government does not wish to debate Bill 18, the Education Act, there are half a dozen private members' bills on the Order Paper, including, selfishly but certainly not limited to, my own Bill 205, the Municipal Government (Delayed Construction) Amendment Act, 2011, which has received widespread community support.

Here's an opportunity, as I see it, to show some flexibility and innovation in setting the agenda of the Legislature. Why not, while the government faces the need for some time to set its own legislative agenda, allow the members of this Assembly to carry out our work on private members' business? Private members' business serves a function just as government business does. I know that my own bill, which has been developed to remedy stalled or delayed developments that diminish the vitality of their communities and reduce attractiveness and accessibility for surrounding businesses, has received stakeholder buy-in from community residents, the AUMA, elected officials, and senior administration from cities and towns all over Alberta as well as an expression of support from members on both sides of this House. I trust that the sponsors of other private members' bills on the Order Paper have been consulting their stakeholders and gathering support for their legislation as well.

These bills deserve to be debated, Mr. Speaker, and voted on their merit. So I ask the government to acknowledge that there is work to be done in session while it's developing its own bills and to give MLAs the opportunity to represent their constituents in that capacity. We should be sitting.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Dr. Siegfriedt Heydenrych

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pleasure that I rise today to extend my sincere congratulations to Dr. Siegfriedt Heydenrych of Cold Lake for receiving the 2011 Alberta rural physician action plan early careerist award. The Alberta rural physician action plan, established by the government of Alberta in 1991, is an independent, not-for-profit company funded by Alberta Health and Wellness. Created in 2005, the early careerist award recognizes the significant contribution of a rural physician within the first 12 years of practice who is passionate about rural medicine, a physician who is seen as making a difference for their clients and the community now and into the future.

Mr. Speaker, this award is a great honour to be bestowed on one of my constituents. Dr. Heydenrych, better known as Dr. H., has provided medical services for Cold Lake's community for six years, involving himself in all aspects of health care in the area, including his role as hospital chief of staff, physician lead for the community primary care network, member of the Hearts for Healthcare coalition, and mentor to third-year medical students. Dr. H.'s commitment and dedication to rural practice in Alberta is truly commendable. I know that my constituents and I value the difference he has made for our community, and I want to thank him for choosing Cold Lake to call his home.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to be part of a government that recognizes the importance of rural physicians like Dr. Heydenrych in communities like mine.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. By now everybody knows that the Premier supports the heartland transmission line. She doesn't, however, support the eastern line or the western line. Her Energy minister tried suspending all three last week, but she stepped in at the last minute to save heartland. She doesn't need evidence to support her decision. She just says the word, and it's done.

The last administration said that all three lines were necessary. She says that we need only one. Why? We don't know, and we won't find out. Bill 50 grants her this luxury. The Electric Statutes Amendment Act, 2009, allows her to declare what transmission lines Albertans need based on little more than political whim. During the leadership campaign the Premier promised to review Bill 50. Now that she is Premier, she is using it to suit her own agenda.

Mr. Speaker, this is easy enough to explain. During the campaign Bill 50 was a popular thing to oppose. Some of the loudest cheers the candidates received at the forums were when they talked about doing something about fixing it. But now that she's in power, she doesn't want to give it up, and that is precisely the problem when you have a government that has been in power for 40 years. It's not about fixing the system or correcting mistakes or improving how Alberta is governed; it's about power and retaining your grip on as many levers as possible once you get it.

Mr. Speaker, the problem is Bill 50, legislation that gives the Premier the power to bill taxpayers for multibillion-dollar transmission lines that will drive up electricity bills, force jobs out of the province, and trample on landowners' rights. That's why we have promised to repeal Bill 50 and put the transmission needs assessment process where it belongs: in the hands of experts, not the politicians.

Nine months ago the Premier didn't speak out against these lines as a cabinet minister. Now, all of a sudden, she's calling the shots on which ones stay and which ones go. It would be nice, Mr. Speaker, if courage and leadership were genuine instead of politically calculated. Has this been a change for the positive? I think not.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition.

Incremental Ethane Extraction Program

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier said yesterday in this House that the Minister of Energy, who was recently investigated about his own transparency, will release a set of facts about the backroom ethane deal. She also said that we'll find in the end "that no one was prejudiced in any way." To the Premier: does the Premier believe that it's okay to prejudge the outcome of the minister's investigation before it actually happens?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, my precise wording was that the minister would account for the facts that led to this situation. I'm not presupposing any outcome, and nor should the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we have the former Finance minister, now the current Energy minister, investigating the former Energy minister, now the current Finance minister, if that makes any sense, how can Albertans trust the outcome of the current Energy minister's investigation when the Premier has thrown him into such a conflict of interest?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we are going through an exercise right now of making sure that those facts are fully accountable to Albertans. Albertans will determine what the circumstances were with respect to this. The hon. Leader of the Opposition can paraphrase and make cute remarks all he wants. It's not confusing the issue. The issue will be clear, the facts will be clear, and Albertans will make up their minds.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the previous Energy minister and his senior staff have been generously rewarded with promotions by the Premier and she's already drawn the conclusion that "we do not have a scandal here," how can Albertans trust that this process might reveal any wrongdoings on their part?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, all of these words are wonderful language for a political party to use. I'll tell you that what I've said often to my nine-year-old is that just because you say something over and over again doesn't make it true. We'll see the facts, and Albertans will decide.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Trust and truth are words I say over and over again to my children. There is a huge difference between being consulted about changes to programs and knowing what those changes are and when they're going to happen. Williams and NOVA knew what ethane program changes were coming and when. They moved first because of this. To the Premier: is it fair to leak government decisions to industry before Albertans know about them or cabinet even approves them?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, these characterizations again are presuming a set of facts that will be made available to all Albertans. Once we have those facts, I'd be quite happy to hear what the Leader of the Opposition's conclusions may be, but up until then I think it's all superfluous.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If truth is a superfluous issue, then I'm sorry.

Regardless of what department or what industry we're talking about, is the Premier honestly telling us that a consultation process constitutes permission to leak confidential information prior to cabinet making a decision?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, again we have these characterizations. We've been very clear that when we look at the facts in this situation, what we are going to see is that none of these suggestions that are being made by the Leader of the Official Opposition are actually, in fact, the case.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, given that trust and truth have now become a characterization and given that the Premier has instructed the Energy minister to fully disclose all facts of the ethane scandal, will the Premier promise a full disclosure of the entire consultation process as well as all information exchanged between the minister's office and Williams and NOVA ahead of the cabinet decision?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we've said that we'll make sure the facts are public, and we will.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, yesterday we talked about the incremental ethane extraction program for $310 million, over 10 years of ethane incentives. Now we read that the program has spent $170 million in seven months. Either there has been a boom in ethane production or the ethane fund is setting aside money for companies on a first-come, first-served basis. To the Energy minister: which is this?

Dr. Morton: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a good-news story. It shows that the program is working. The opposition member should do his homework. The incremental ethane extraction program is now being applied to the off-gases from the oil sands that were previously being burned at virtually no value to Albertans. Now it's being put into ethane for our petrochemical feedstock.

Mr. Hehr: Given that the Energy department's website states that only 12,000 barrels a day of ethane are currently produced under the program, which, at most, accounts for 2.7 per cent of what the Energy department has spent in the last seven months of ethane incentives, where has the rest of the money gone?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, why doesn't the Liberal Party just admit that they don't care about the petrochemical industry in this province? Why don't they just admit it?

Mr. Hehr: Given that in the guidelines for the incremental ethane extraction program incentives are only given when ethane is actually produced, how does the minister square this circle?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that new ethane is being produced from the off-gases from the oil sands. It's adding to the feedstock for the petrochemical industry, and it's an important step forward in sustaining this industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Health Care Accessibility

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me start off by saying that my questions are on behalf of the health care professionals in this province: the doctors, the nurses, and the LPNs that are the glue that holds our entire health care system together. My questions are directed to the Premier. Given that the government has agreed that the eight-hour provincial benchmark for arrival within the emergency department to admission to a hospital bed is a marker of the entire health care system's capacity, what is your plan to address the fact that you have missed the essential targets despite intensive attention over the last year?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the important part of this question is that we've focused intensive attention on this. There's no doubt that there are going to be times in the development of health care in this province when we're going to have situations where we meet those benchmarks and where we can't. We've been very honest in saying that we are going to do a better job. We have a new minister of health who is committed to public confidence in a public health care system, and I am very confident that we're going to be able to move to make progress with respect to that.

Mrs. Forsyth: Premier, your plan isn't working.

Given that a lack of affordable access to home care and long-term care has been identified and, Premier, agreed upon as the key contributor to a system-wide access block, when will the Premier and your government begin to be honest, open, and transparent as to what their plan is to address this essential component of health care within our province?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I don't know where the hon. member has been for the past eight months, but there's no doubt that Albertans agree, as I've agreed, that those are critical pieces to what a public health care system has to put in place. I'll tell you that in the past 10 days we've appointed a cabinet with strong leadership, that's committed to ensuring that exactly those things are achieved, and they will be.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can tell the Premier where I've been. I've been talking to the health care professionals that are keeping the system glued together.

What is the Premier's plan to address the fact that under her government's watch 30 per cent of Albertans do not have access to primary and preventive care as a result of not having a family physician?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think that's a very exciting question because, again, if the hon. member had been paying attention for the past eight months, what she would have heard is that we are committed to establishing family care clinics that will do exactly that for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Fixed Election Dates

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. During her leadership campaign for the PC Party the Premier promised to establish fixed election dates in Alberta. Since then she has been remarkably quiet on the subject. In her speech yesterday she failed to mention the subject altogether. Will the Premier tell the Assembly whether or not she intends to keep her promise for fixed election dates, and if she does, how she plans to determine the date for the next provincial election?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, within four hours of being elected leader of the party, I was less than silent on the issue. I was asked the question in a press conference, and I said I was fully committed to that. So I'd suggest the hon. leader stay tuned.

2:00

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. This Premier wants to do everything according to her timetable. I think it's important that this Premier come clean with the Assembly and the people of Alberta. I'm sure that all those happy campers sitting in the back row over there are just dying to know when the next election is, so why doesn't the Premier stand up and tell all of us?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, you know, the great thing about democracy and transparency is that one person doesn't get to decide everything. I'm reminded of that all of the time by the opposition. So I'm looking forward to the discussion about this, and I'm sure they'll be able to participate in it.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, does the Premier intend to involve the other political parties in this Assembly in that decision, and does she plan to have this Assembly make that decision this fall sitting or not? Yes or no?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think this is going to be a very important discussion for all Albertans to have, and I look forward to having it in the next little while.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Alleged Intimidation of Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Premier delivered on her promise to restore education funding immediately upon taking office, and I thank her for that. However, it would appear that some commitments are more important than others. For example, she has also promised to call a public judicial inquiry to investigate intimidation and potential financial misconduct in the health system. When will the Premier deliver on her commitment to call a public inquiry into the health system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I said yesterday in this House when the same question was asked, the government is committed to two things: first, establishing the Health Quality Council of Alberta as an independent body reporting to this Legislature. We'll be moving down that road this fall, and there'll be opportunity for discussion in this House. Secondly, with respect to the inquiry we will have more to say about that after the Health Quality Council reports in February.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the current Finance minister has publicly voiced his objection and his refusal to participate in the public inquiry and given that the Premier chose to elevate his position within cabinet, what guarantee do Albertans have that the public inquiry will ever happen?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, as the Premier has said both inside and outside this House numerous times, this government is committed to a fully independent inquiry into the very allegations that the hon. member has brought forward. We'll be moving forward on that as quickly as we can right after the Health Quality Council reports to this government.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, will the Premier commit to having the Legislature set the terms of reference for the public inquiry so that key witnesses – key witnesses – such as former health ministers, former senior health officials, Dr. Ciaran McNamee, and Dr. Timothy Winton might be compelled to testify?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I don't know how many times we have to repeat this. The government is committed to a fully independent public inquiry. Fully independent means fully independent. Appropriate terms of reference will be set, and the inquiry will be free to proceed with conducting appropriate proceedings relevant to the allegations that have been raised.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

European Union Fuel Quality Directive

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The European Union was set to vote today on its fuel quality directive, a measure which could label Alberta's oil sands as dirty, which spawns obvious consequences. To the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations: can you please provide the members of this House and all Albertans with the latest update as to the status of these pivotal negotiations?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, today technical representatives from the EU member states met but opted not to vote on the current fuel directive proposal. It's our understanding that EU member states had some problems with the language that was involved in the document, and we've had those concerns for some time. Indications are that the vote might come later this year or early next year. Of course, that gives us time to continue working with member states on this file.

Mr. Rodney: My first supplemental is to the same minister. The FQD has been discussed for two years now. The perception for some is that our efforts are simply not getting the job done. To the minister: should Albertans be seeing more of an impact, and if so, how and when?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, we are having an impact on these negotiations and are making progress. Our UK office has criss-crossed the European continent, working with member states, providing support, providing information wherever it's required, and of course we've had a number of both European policy and legislative delegations visiting us here as well.

Mr. Rodney: My final supplemental is, indeed, to the same minister. Some might suggest that we should be getting more mileage, if I may say so, out of these resources by working more closely with the federal government. What is the minister's response to these suggestions?

Mr. Dallas: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, we have a very strong advocate in the federal government. Minister Oliver has worked on this issue diligently and will continue to do that going forward. I also look forward to strengthening our relationship with Ottawa as we move forward on a whole number of issues that are important to both Alberta and Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last August during the PC leadership campaign the now Premier stated her intention to increase monthly benefits under the AISH, income for the severely handicapped, program by $400. My question is to Madam Premier, and I've been waiting to be able to say Madam Premier. Yesterday the Premier's address made no mention of such an increase. What is the timeline on it?

Mr. VanderBurg: I heard the Premier very loud and clear. I have instructed my ministry staff to have a look at it and bring back some options for discussion and budget.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Given that MLA salaries are indexed, would it not be fair to have AISH benefits indexed as well?

Mr. VanderBurg: Again, you know, Mr. Speaker, all of those are options, and I need to have an analysis done by my department to come back to me. They have budget implications, serious implications. I'll do a review of that as quickly as possible.

Ms Pastoor: Mr. Speaker, you don't have to analyze fairness.

What does the Premier have to say to AISH recipients who fear that they may be even more overlooked in the large Human Services superministry?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's very loud and clear that this does have implications on the budget of my ministry. If you give to one, you take from another. I want to assure you that this group is a very special group under my ministry and will get serious consideration.

An Hon. Member: What about keeping your promise?

The Speaker: Actually, the way it works is that somebody asks the question and somebody responds. It's not the person who asks the question who then answers the question. We could try that, I suppose.

The hon. Member for Stony Plain, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Coal-fired Electricity Generation

Mr. Lindsay: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Coal-fired electrical generation is a huge component of Alberta's efficient electrical system. The federal government is currently working on regulations to reduce the environmental impact of coal-fired electrical plants, and I understand the province is at odds with these efforts. My question is to the Minister of Environment and Water. Is Alberta trying to interfere with the federal greenhouse gas reduction efforts?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely not. We share the same goals as the federal government: to produce energy more efficiently and effectively with less environmental impact. However, it needs to be done in a way that is fair to all provinces, especially those that still primarily rely on coal for electricity to meet their needs. At the end of the day Albertans should not pay vastly more for electricity than other Canadians due to federal regulations. We're going to use this time to consult with our federal colleagues with regard to this.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. It is important that our government stand up for Albertans on this issue. How is this minister planning to do that?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We believe that unless the regulations change, they will lead to unacceptable costs for Alberta consumers and their businesses. We need to make sure that the regulations don't give industry any flexibility to achieve the same results on a company basis, so we want to make sure that there is flexibility with regard to these regulations to achieve the results that we're looking for.

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. The proposed federal regulations are not the right approach for Alberta. What is your ministry suggesting instead of these proposed regulations?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our preferred option is to have flexible compliance options, similar to Alberta's system, to ensure maximum flexibility for achieving our targets. We have demonstrated this with the system in effect in Alberta with mandatory greenhouse gas emissions reduction targets for all large emitters. We want to take this strategy and make sure that it's flexible for Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Land-use Planning

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The Premier was very clear during the leadership race that the Land Stewardship Act and the amendments that were passed in the spring would be immediately suspended if she should win. So here we are. She won, and the land-use framework process is in disarray. Land-use plans are needed by municipalities to push back urban sprawl, to provide clarity around water management, to enable protection of wildlife corridors, and just generally to protect Albertans' land. To the Premier: what are the immediate plans for the land-use framework and the Land Stewardship Act?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to address that and to thank the hon. member for her question and for her passion about land use. I agree with her that land-use plans are necessary. We're reviewing how to move forward. Our goal will be to produce land-use plans for the province of Alberta that address all of the issues that she raised.

Ms Blakeman: Well, it only took the Premier 24 hours to turn around and reverse on the fixed election dates, on funding for education, so what's the timeline here on the land-use plans?

Mr. Oberle: I'm not sure I heard a question, there, Mr. Speaker. I'm moving as fast as I can. Obviously, that involves a pretty broad consultation inside and outside of our government.

Ms Blakeman: Good. Consultation. Well, given that this government has a blue-ribbon reputation for holding public consultations and then implementing the plan they had all along, can we under this new Premier expect any changes?

Mr. Oberle: Well, I thank the member for pointing out that we do in fact have a blue-ribbon reputation for involving the public in the decisions we make. We're going to continue that going forward, Mr. Speaker.

Thanks for the question.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Slave Lake Interim Housing and Medical Access

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There have been residual effects of the fires for people in the Slave Lake area. One of the issues is housing for single people. Even though many of them have found places to live, there are still some who don't have a home. My first question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Is it possible to use any of the leftover interim housing units for those who are single and without a home right now?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to point out that with such a crisis in Slave Lake, we worked very hard to accommodate everybody who needed housing. Our priorities started with families with young children, seniors, disabled, and finally we've gotten to couples. We have built and assembled about 150 housing units. I was just up there Wednesday, and I saw the duplex units that are designed for singles who can live together. We expect that they will be getting their keys by the end of the month. Every single person that needs interim housing will have it by the end of the month.

Ms Calahasen: Well, although the recovery efforts have been ongoing, some of the people who lost their homes in the fire are still living in campgrounds, and they want to know when you as minister will get the help that was promised, a promise that was made in the last few months.

Mr. Griffiths: Again, Mr. Speaker, I believe the last update was from October 18, and there were six families that were currently living in campgrounds. Every single one of those families has available to them the opportunity to move into a hotel room if the temperatures become unbearable. Again, we anticipate that by the end of the month, which is a matter of days, every single person and family that needs interim housing will have the keys to their place and be moved.

Ms Calahasen: Another residual effect of the fire has to do with doctors. We have four doctors presently leaving Slave Lake, a cause for concern, Mr. Speaker. This creates problems not only for those who don't have doctors but those who have an inability to be able to get them. My question is to the minister of health. What are you going to do to ensure the people in the Slave Lake area continue to have access to the health care they need?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I can assure the hon. member that we are very much focused on this issue right now. There are eight physicians in Slave Lake who will continue to provide physician services to residents after the others leave. The Alberta Medical Association has assisted us in arranging coverage for the emergency department at the hospital. We're also looking at what other professionals who are in the community – nurses, pharmacists, and others – can do to help supplement the care that's available to the community until the situation is resolved.

Political Party Donations

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, we have recently learned that some PC Party constituency associations have been accepting illegal donations from municipalities and school boards. I have personally spoken with mayors who say that they have been personally intimidated by PC Party officials into purchasing and making donations to fundraisers. This is pretty cut and dried; it's illegal, and it's unethical. To the Premier. She's the one sitting right there. Will she commit to ensuring that all funds illegally donated to the PC Party over the last several years are returned to these donors without delay?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of allegations being thrown around. As usual, whether or not we can verify them is something that is really up in the air. What I will say and what I've said from the very beginning since I became leader of this party is that that isn't a practice that we condone, and if there was any reason to think that there was that problem, we'd certainly encourage the Chief Electoral Officer to look into it. We are going to have no part in any kind of practice or procedure that would suggest that that was acceptable.

Mr. Anderson: Given that government bullying and intimidation of individuals and organizations for donations should never be a part of our political system – I agree, Madam Premier – will the Premier undertake to either personally or through, as she has suggested, a request to the Chief Electoral Officer prepare a letter clarifying the rules around which organizations are prohibited from making political donations as well as the penalties associated for the violation of these rules?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, let's be very clear. Every single time that the hon. member asks me to interfere with the business of the Chief Electoral Officer, he is not understanding the rules. The Chief Electoral Officer is an independent officer. The Chief Electoral Officer must make their own determination as to what to do. If I stepped in and asked the Chief Electoral Officer to take action in this case, I think that within months we'd have the hon. member standing up and accusing me of interfering in other areas. I won't do it.

Premier, given that one of the ways these illegal donations are kept hidden is that individual town councillors and school board members will personally purchase their ticket to a PC fundraiser and then have it reimbursed by their respective municipality or school board as a promotion expense, will you undertake – this is a simple question – to have your Municipal Affairs minister send a letter to all municipalities and their auditors to ensure that this practice is ended on a go-forward basis? It's a very reasonable suggestion.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I find this to be fascinating. First of all, I'd be very interested in how the hon. member knows that this is what happens.

Secondly, there is no doubt that we have a system in place – and I referred to it yesterday – where we have a Department of Municipal Affairs, that has responsibilities with respect to the relationship with municipal governments. Municipal leaders, who are also elected by their communities, have a responsibility to follow the rules. There is no doubt that auditors who are in place understand the rules, and I fully expect that everyone who is elected and fully engaged in auditing should understand the rules well enough to make sure that these things aren't happening.

Funding for Private Schools

Mr. Hehr: Let me be clear, Mr. Speaker. I'm all for private schools that are entirely privately funded. That is not what currently exists in Alberta. This government currently subsidizes these so-called private schools to the tune of $127 million this year alone. To the Minister of Education: why are we in the business of funding private schools?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, let me tell you something, and I keep repeating this because I'm very proud of it. The Prime Minister of England recently reminded Canadians that Alberta has the best education system in the entire English-speaking world. That is for a number of reasons – great teachers, good administrators, and the list goes on and on – but one of the primary reasons is choice. Alberta parents and students have the choice of where they go to school.

Mr. Hehr: Why is it necessary for Alberta to be the highest paying jurisdiction per capita in Canada in terms of subsidizing private schooling?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, such results, that even warrant the attention of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, cost. I find that spending money on education is not an expenditure; it's an investment. We are committed to continuing to invest in education.

Mr. Hehr: Will the minister stand up for equality of opportunity and commit to cut all funding to private schools?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Primary Care Networks

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Access to family physicians by Albertans is one of the most important issues for our publicly funded health care system. Primary care networks, or PCNs, are a multidisciplinary team care approach in a family physician's clinic in order to co-ordinate the delivery of primary health services for patients. My first question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. What improvements have PCNs brought to the Alberta health care system in terms of access to family physicians and time spent with patient care since their inception in 2003?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, it's true that primary care networks have expanded access to primary care for Albertans. They do that in a number of ways. They offer multidisciplinary teams, doctors working alongside nurses, pharmacists, and other professionals to meet the needs in the local community. They in some cases have expanded hours of service. They've offered continuity of care when it comes to dealing with continuing care, home care co-ordination, and access to specialists. There are many examples. We currently have over 40 primary care networks in Alberta, serving approximately 2.8 million Albertans. All of this success aside, there is certainly more that can be done, and we're very much focused on looking at what we can do to enhance this program.

Thank you.

Mr. Benito: The first supplemental to the same minister: what assurances can you provide to Albertans that the funding mechanism for primary care networks will remain going forward?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member and others may know, primary care networks were the result of a partnership between Alberta's health region, the government, and the Alberta Medical Association. The arrangements that govern what services are provided and how they are delivered are dealt with in a trilateral agreement between those three parties. Those discussions toward a new agreement are under way now, and I'm very hopeful that they will allow us to continue to deliver what we have now and, as I say, enhance those services in the future.

Mr. Benito: Mr. Speaker, my second supplementary to the same minister: how can eligible primary care networks expect a long-term and sustainable funding formula from your ministry, and when can they expect it?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, we have an excellent example of a very successful primary care network here today in the form of the Southside primary care network, representatives of which are in the gallery. The way we ensure this is that we make the partnership work. We go back to the original agreement in our discussions, which are under way now, we look at what we've achieved to date, we look at more that can be done, and we look at other models that might enhance what primary care networks currently offer such as family care clinics.

Castle Wilderness Area

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, Alberta is internationally renowned for the natural beauty, uniqueness, and wealth of its landscapes. This diverse bounty is particularly true of the jewel in the crown, the Castle area, which was formally protected within the boundaries of Waterton national park. This spring SRD insisted that despite the endangered status of this natural corridor it was necessary to clear-cut a minimum of one-third of the area to prevent the spread of the mountain pine beetle. To the Premier: given the SRD minister's admission yesterday that there was no detectable increase or spread of the beetle in southwestern Alberta, what justification remains for the proposed cumulative clear-cutting of this area?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member grossly mischaracterizes the state of the science-based forest management plan that exists in the area, which has logging on less than one-third of the area and about 1 per cent of the area in a particular year.

Mr. Speaker, we can attribute our current pine beetle situation in part to luck but also in part to sound forest management practices as we go forward. That's the only hope we've got.

Mr. Chase: The government needs to recommit to selective logging practices, Mr. Speaker.

Again to the Premier, given that the Premier intervened directly to prevent historical grassland in southeastern Alberta from being sold and plowed under for a potato patch, will this government afford similar protection to the southwestern corner of the province by eliminating the current threat of clear-cutting?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out in my previous answer, two-thirds of the area is already off limits, and the remaining third is under the jurisdiction of a very sound forest management plan, and we'll continue forward with that plan.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: does the Premier measure a unique forest value strictly on harvested board feet, or will this government finally commit to preserving the Castle-Crown by designating it as the Andy Russell A'tai Sah Kop provincial park?

Mr. Oberle: Well, Mr. Speaker, this government is always open to input from stakeholders. We've received quite a bit, and we will continue to receive more. We will certainly take that under advisement. For the moment there is a management plan and an allocation of timber, and we intend to follow it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Affordable Supportive Living Initiative

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Like the rest of Canada, Alberta is undergoing a significant shift as our population ages. This has provided many opportunities as well as challenges for government and the not-for-profit and the for-profit sectors. Of increasing interest is how this government makes sure that there are appropriate accommodations and services that will provide more opportunities for Albertans to remain as independent as possible while addressing their changing needs. My question is to the Minister of Seniors. Will more continuing care spaces be built to meet the demanding Alberta aging population's needs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to tell you that over the last 13 years the government of Alberta has invested millions and millions of dollars in creating about 10,000 spaces. That's significant. My ministry has right now until November 4 the ASLI grant. The applications will be received until November 4.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Ady: Okay. My second question is to the same minister. What impact is this funding having on seniors and persons with disabilities?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to assure you that this new ASLI grant, $67 million, will provide, I would expect, more than 600 spaces in the province. That's significant.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Ady: Thank you. My final question is to the same minister. Why is the government only accepting project proposals from certain parts of the province with this year's funding?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, it wasn't just the Department of Seniors that came up with the determination of needs. It was with the help of the department of health to make sure that we provided the spaces where they were needed and to make sure that we get the best bang for the buck.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Long-term and Continuing Care

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Dr. Felix Soibelman, the ER section president of the AMA, said today that adding more long-term care beds is the key to solving the emergency room crisis, a crisis where most Albertans wait over eight hours in an emergency room. To the health minister: how many of the Premier's promised 1,000 continuing care beds will be full, public, nursing home long-term care beds as opposed to private supportive living spaces?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dr. Soibelman and I and others, including Alberta Health Services, are going to be meeting later this week to discuss all of the parts of the solution to not just ER wait times but better access to care for Albertans. The question of the suitability of the spaces that we are opening to meet the needs, specifically, of people who are awaiting placement in hospital is of concern to me. We are going to continue to have some discussion about what we need to do in order to match the health care component that's provided in our continuing care spaces with the needs of the residents who require placement, including especially those waiting in hospital.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given this government's not-so-secret health care privatization agenda and given that the health minister is a key architect of the agenda, what proportion of the continuing care spaces will be P3 or private?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't know how many times we're going to have to continue to listen to rhetoric around ideology and conspiracy theories.

What this government is focused on is expanding access. That's what Albertans have told us they want us to do. We have been clear about the importance of our partnership with the not-for-profit sector and private-sector providers. We successfully opened, as the Minister of Seniors just answered, thousands and thousands of spaces over the last 10 years. The power of our ability to expand access is imbedded in that partnership. That's what this government will continue to pursue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that publicly funded, publicly delivered long-term care delivers better value for money, why is the government out to nickel and dime seniors by proposing to build more private care facilities?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I have to outright object to the premise of the hon. member's question. In fact, the tradition of the provision of long-term care and other forms of continuing care in this province, dating back to the 1950s, is due very much in part to the role of not-for-profit organizations that have come forward with their capital, with their dedicated staff, with their vision for the future to try to provide a system of service that is going to meet the needs of today's generation and that of the future. We will continue to work with those partners. We will continue to ensure that the standards around quality of care delivered in the facility are controlled by . . .

Aboriginal Education

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Recently an appeal was made to the United Nations about the abhorrent conditions of First Nations schools in Canada. Young aboriginals are the fastest growing and largest untapped population in Alberta. They deserve a quality education. To the Minister of Education: how are you supporting First Nations, Métis, and Inuit students in order to receive a quality education in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, find that report and the findings in that report unacceptable. The fact of the matter is that as we're speaking right now, aboriginal students who reside on reserves are funded significantly lower per child by the federal government as opposed to children living off-reserve who are funded by the provincial government. That inequality and inequity are unacceptable to me.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister: given that the report highlighted that funding for on-reserve education is inadequate, what is the Minister of Education doing to ensure that Alberta First Nations students are adequately funded?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, frankly, I don't care where you live, and I don't care who you are. If you're a child in Alberta, you deserve the same standard of high-quality education. As such, I have already asked my department to arrange for a meeting with our federal minister, Minister Duncan. I'm hoping to meet with him very soon and address that very issue.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Final supplemental to the same minister: given that First Nations students have long been left behind with huge achievement gaps, including significantly lower high school completion, would this minister be undertaking any new actions?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I will be meeting with leaders of First Nations as well.

Yes, we are privileged to be in this province, but many of the privileges that we've attained are here because of our education system. It is important that all children in Alberta have the same level of education.

I will be meeting with federal ministers. I will be meeting with school boards that in many cases deliver services to aboriginal children, making sure that at the end of the day every child of every creed, of every race, of every geographical location has access to the same high-quality education.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Heartland Electricity Transmission Project

Mr. Boutillier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week there seemed to be some confusion over communication between the new Minister of Energy and the new Premier regarding a letter to the AUC and the building of a new transmission line. Just like with my four-year-old son, who turns the light switch on, then off, then on, and then off, it gets tiresome. I have to ask. First of all, the heartland was off, and then it was back on. To the Minister of Energy: does this government believe that it's somehow acceptable to intervene, and does he think that he is above the law?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the members of the third party have been begging us to interfere in this process for years, and of course they want us to interfere in the direction they think is right. We made it very clear when we contacted the AUC – I'm happy to table the letter – that we completely respect their jurisdiction to hear these issues.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that during the PC campaign this minister said that he wanted to send the heartland back to the independent needs assessment process so we can take a look at it, has he flip-flopped and changed his mind, or is he simply just compromising his principles for power, as he said during the campaign that you have to do?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, as the individual who's sitting over there knows well, forming government is a team effort, and I'm happy to be a member of this team. I'm happy particularly to be a member of a team where the Premier keeps her promises.

Mr. Boutilier: In other words, flip-flop or compromise.

Given that this entire problem began with the Minister of Energy and his pals in cabinet created this problem with the creation of Bill 50, a bill that overrides Albertans' centralized decision-making, I have to ask the Minister of Energy: will he do the right thing? Help Albertans and simply repeal Bill 50 and do it right now in this House.

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, we've made it very clear now that we will be reviewing the energy regulation, particularly with respect to the two north-south lines between Edmonton and Calgary.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West, followed by the hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Regulatory Review

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, over the last three and a half years I've had many instances of talking to constituents who expressed their frustration about the amount of red tape that is required to run their businesses. Yesterday I was indeed a happy camper as I listened to my Premier talk about the establishment of a task force to reduce red tape for business in Alberta. Can the President of Treasury Board and Enterprise provide some clarity about exactly what the role of this task force will be?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, we recognize the importance of small business and medium-sized enterprises to our economy. We also recognize our role as the government to create the conditions to allow businesses to prosper and to reduce the burden of those unnecessary delays and those costs. As per the Premier's direction we will be establishing a task force that will find ways to reduce the red tape and regulatory burden that constrains business owners. That task force will be reporting directly to executive council.

Mr. Blackett: My supplementary question to the same minister: that all sounds great, but can he be more specific about what this task force will actually do, and will we see some tangible, measurable results?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is very important to measure, and it's very important to benchmark where we are comparable to others today so that we have an understanding of where we need to go. Where we need to go is to be the best climate for small business and medium-sized enterprises in North America, and we will get there.

The Speaker: Hon. member, do you have an additional question?

Mr. Blackett: No supplemental.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Strathcona Community Hospital

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been over 14 years, close to 15 years since a Member for Sherwood Park was able to stand up and ask the question about the progress on the Sherwood Park hospital for that particular constituency. We have been waiting and watching, and my constituents are now asking the minister of health: why is it that both projects were tendered at the same time, both the Fort Saskatchewan and the Strathcona hospital in Sherwood Park, and why is it that one seems to be considerably more advanced than the other? The other – well, I'm going to get more information on it in just a moment.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, the answer is simple. The Fort Saskatchewan hospital project is a redevelopment of an existing hospital that's currently in service. That obviously has to move forward very quickly. The Sherwood Park hospital is a new facility, as the hon. member knows. Construction is well under way, and I'm sure that the Minister of Infrastructure can provide more detail on that.

Ms Evans: Just a supplemental, first of all to the minister of health relative to the programming. Can the minister perhaps give us an idea about some of the programming? There's been some concern about the lack of obstetrics beds, for example.

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, what I can tell you is that an open house was held a few weeks ago to share plans for both phases of the hospital with residents of the area. Construction on the tower, the phase 2, is slated to begin in 2014. When it is complete, it will house 72 hospital beds, three operating rooms, an endoscopy unit, and a shelled-in obstetrics unit. As you can see, the plan is very much for a full-service hospital by the completion of phase 2.

Ms Evans: One final question, Mr. Speaker, for the Minister of Infrastructure. We've been told that the phase 1 will be shelled-in in time for the snow to fly. Will that, in fact, happen, and how far advanced are we on the beginnings of phase 2 relative to planning needs assessment, et cetera, from an infrastructure perspective?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know how important this project is to the hon. member and her constituency, and the Member for Strathcona and she have obviously been very strong advocates of it. I can tell you that phase 1 construction is under way and slated for completion in 2013. The building is already framed, and windows are being installed as we speak. The building will be weather protected by December, so we can start working on the interior. So we're in progress and well on our way.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Seniors' Property Taxes

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last session the hon. Minister of Seniors proposed Bill 207, the Seniors' Property Tax Deferral Act, as a private member's bill. While this bill passed first reading last session, its fate has yet to be determined. In the meantime I'm concerned about the needs of our seniors right now. First question to the Minister of Seniors. You know better than any of us that some seniors in our province live with limited resources. They are also faced with the additional and often hefty burden of paying their property taxes. What are we doing to assist these Albertans?

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you to the member. Here in Alberta we're very fortunate to have the education property tax assistance for seniors. It's a very unique program. Over 100,000 senior homeowners take advantage of that program with a rebate every year to cover increases from year to year on the education portion of their property taxes.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First supplemental to the same minister: how can your department justify such expenses, especially for a program that only serves one portion of society and at a time when our government is in need of revenue?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, it's easy to justify, Mr. Speaker. We want people to be independent. We want people to stay in their homes as long as possible. I think this program, maybe in a small way, helps seniors do exactly that.

Mr. Jacobs: To the same minister: are there other jurisdictions around Canada with any similar programs to support seniors with their property taxes, and if so, what can we learn from them?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, I'm very well aware of other jurisdictions across Canada that have programs that help seniors defer their taxes. There's one program specifically in British Columbia that I like and that I think we can consider in the future in this Assembly. Bill 207, sir, will address that.

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday I had an opportunity to congratulate the hon. members with respect to the decorum in the House. Today I am really, really appreciative to all of you. You've done something today that has not happened in 106 years in this Assembly. This is the largest number of questions and their responses ever in question period at 130 questions and responses from 22 – and that's despite the fact that a couple of members continue to do preambles in the second and third questions, and they tend to be the same members all the time. So good for you. Congratulations to you: 130 questions and responses, never before in 106 years, 22 members recognized.

We're going to continue in 30 seconds from now with Members' Statements.

Affordable Housing

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Despite the recognized importance of affordable housing and despite the economic wealth and success of some Albertans, there continues to be a huge shortage of affordable housing across the province. The number of people that live in precarious housing circumstances, even if not literally homeless, continues to grow.

In the absence of rent guidelines in combination with adequate government support for and protection of affordable housing, rent supplements have become a stopgap measure upon which tens of thousands of Albertans are forced to rely to remain in their homes. The fixed-rate supplement program supports over 700 Edmonton families and roughly 550 Calgary families, and despite efforts by both housing authorities to stretch out the dollars, the program will end as early as this Christmas. Since the housing corporations have growing wait-lists, it is very unlikely that any of those who lose the subsidies will receive any assistance in finding a replacement home.

In response to public attention to this issue last week one recipient wrote the following:

Even though I work full time I do not make enough to pay the average rent. I am a single mom with four kids at home. If I had to pay full rent I would be living in a one bedroom [apartment]. Without the subsidy for my rent I would have to go back to using the many agencies in the city . . . I am already working poor. I don't want to be working backwards and end up homeless.

In the long term Alberta needs a comprehensive housing plan; however, more immediately the province needs to respond to Edmonton's call for continued funding for this program. Last week the Minister of Human Services suggested that the province would not be held to what he referred to as arbitrary deadlines. However, I remind the minister and this government that one relatively entitled person's arbitrary deadline is another's eviction notice. In short, it is crucial that the government act now.

Maintenance of this program will cost the Tories less than $5 million a year. Just yesterday we heard the PCs confidently assure us that there was no limit on the number of oil companies who could access a $350 million subsidy program. Surely, the Tories can find the political will to provide the same assurances to the 1,300 Alberta families who are waiting to hear whether they'll have a roof over their head this Christmas.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Women's Equality

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know that most people see March 8, International Women's Day, as the big day to review progress on women's equality, but my annual markers have been Persons Day and December 6, so I've had an interesting week.

Last Tuesday, October 18, was Persons Day, an important and motivating day for women in Alberta and beyond. On Friday I attended the annual LEAF breakfast, the Legal Education and Action Fund, where the keynote speaker talked about the courts requiring women wearing the hijab to disrobe in order to testify. On Sunday I attended the opening of The Collective Memory Project: Responses to Eugenics in Alberta, an art exhibit that was a collaboration between the department of extension and the living archives on eugenics in western Canada. The exhibit included artists from Alberta, across Canada, and women serving sentences in federal prison.

I'm struck by the linkages between these events: women, sexuality, punishment, abuse, legalities, power, and, thankfully, long-term resistance from groups like LEAF and history-keeping from the eugenics project. As an Alberta woman working to achieve the full and equal participation of women in the life of the province, the intersection and overlap between the issues is powerful. Women in this province are not independent until all women are independent in their choice of religion, in their choice of clothing, and in their ability to not be assaulted physically or sexually because they are women.

Women are shaped by the laws of this province. Eugenics was used to control the sexuality of young women and girls. Use whatever reason you want, but that was the effect. We may have come a long way, baby, but the laws of this province still can't cope with the concept of transgendered individuals on purely medical grounds. History shows us that even women who do well in one area can fail us in another, so Nellie McClung could be one of the Famous Five and still have supported eugenics law.

I'm grateful for the women and organizations that take on these issues.

Presenting Petitions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to present a petition signed by 246 Albertans to the Legislative Assembly of Alberta, in Legislature assembled, reading: "We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to pass Bill 205 – Municipal Government (Delayed Construction) Amendment Act, 2011."

Thank you.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the appropriate number of copies of a paper that I received from a very concerned Albertan. His name is Norman Kalmanovitch. He is a geophysicist engineer, and he's very concerned with what our governments are doing about global climate change. He's compiled this report at great effort of his time to help people who are passing legislation to understand better how to address global climate change.

I also have a second report that he's asked me to table. It is entitled Geophysical Submission to the Alberta Legislature on Global Temperatures and the Influence of CO<sub>2</sub> Emissions from Burning Fossil Fuels on Global Temperatures. I'd urge all Members of the Legislative Assembly to read these reports, that we might make better-informed decisions.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you have one on behalf of your leader?

Ms. Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings on behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. First of all, I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of postcards that he has received from 67 Edmontonians calling on the government to provide full funding to open the family medicine and urgent care sections of the East Edmonton health centre.

The second tabling is the appropriate number of copies of a news story dated September 23, 2011, concerning the Premier's promise to institute fixed election dates.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I'd like to advise, first of all, of an error on page 40 of the Legislative Assembly organization's annual report, which was tabled yesterday. Under the delegates listed for the Pacific NorthWest Economic Region conference the listing should have read the hon. Member for Calgary-North West as Minister of Culture and Community Spirit rather than the hon. Member for Stony Plain.

Pursuant to section 63(1) of the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, section 95(1) of the Health Information Act, and section 44(1) of the Personal Information Protection Act the chair is pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Information and Privacy Commissioner. This report covers the activities of the office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner for the period April 1, 2010, to March 31, 2011.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Hayden, Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, pursuant to the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation Act the Alberta Sport, Recreation, Parks and Wildlife Foundation annual report 2010-11 and the Travel Alberta annual report 2010-2011.

Orders of the Day

Government Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Ombudsman Appointment

18. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly confirm the appointment by the Lieutenant Governor in Council of Peter Hourihan as Ombudsman and concur in the report of the Select Special Ombudsman Search Committee.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege to move that motion as a government motion, but I would cede my time to the hon. chairman of the special committee of Legislative Offices, who headed the search team of the Legislative Offices Committee, that did the search, and ask him to provide appropriate remarks in that regard.

The Speaker: Hon. minister, there's no need to cede time. This is a debatable motion, so the chair would recognize he or she who would wish to speak.

The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I had the honour of chairing the Select Special Ombudsman Search Committee. The committee had a total of seven meetings, starting with an organizational meeting last January and completing its mandate on August 23. The committee received a total of 68 applications for the position, 60 from Alberta and eight applications received from candidates from other provinces.

At the request of the committee executive search completed comprehensive screening reports, and executive search conducted preliminary interviews for 11 candidates and reported back to the committee. The committee chose to conduct five interviews, and the decision was made shortly after. Mr. Hourihan was selected. Given Mr. Hourihan's past experiences I am sure and confident that all Albertans will be well served by our new Ombudsman.

The Speaker: Hon. members, additional participants? This is a debatable motion.

If not, then I'll call on the Government House Leader to close the debate or move the motion.

Mr. Hancock: Question.

The Speaker: I'll call the question.

[Government Motion 18 carried]

Temporary Adjournment of Fall Session

19. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 3(9) the Assembly stand adjourned at the conclusion of the October 25, 2011, sitting and reconvene on November 21, 2011.

The Speaker: This motion is not debatable under the standing orders, so I'll call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that Government Motion 19 carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 2:53 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

For the motion:

Ady	Evans	Marz
Allred	Fawcett	McFarland
Amery	Fritz	McQueen
Benito	Goudreau	Mitzel
Berger	Groeneveld	Olson
Bhardwaj	Hancock	Ouellette
Bhullar	Hayden	Prins
Blackett	Horne	Quest
Brown	Horner	Renner
Calahasen	Jablonski	Rogers
Campbell	Jacobs	Sandhu
Cao	Johnson	Sarich
Dallas	Johnston	Snelgrove
Danyluk	Klimchuk	VanderBurg
DeLong	Knight	Vandermeer
Denis	Leskiw	Weadick
Doerksen	Liepert	Webber
Drysdale	Lindsay	Woo-Paw
Elniski	Lund	Xiao

The Speaker: Hon. members, one of the great traditions of parliamentary democracy is that members should not be intimidated, harassed, heckled, or otherwise interfered with when they are carrying out their sacred duty of voting.

Against the motion:

Anderson	Forsyth	Notley
Blakeman	Hinman	Taft
Boutilier	MacDonald	Taylor
Chase	Mason

Totals: For – 57 Against – 11

[Government Motion 19 carried]

The Speaker: Hon. members, you know what the intent of Motion 19 is. That means when the House rises later today, it will then reconvene on November 21, 2011.

Committee Membership Changes

20. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that the following changes to

- (a) the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund be approved: that Mr. Anderson replace Mrs. Forsyth;
- (b) the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices be approved: that Dr. Brown replace hon. Mr. Bhullar, that Ms Evans replace Mr. Campbell, that Mr. Blackett replace Mr. Rogers;
- (c) the Standing Committee on Private Bills be approved: that Mr. Knight replace hon. Mr. Dallas, that Ms Evans replace hon. Mrs. McQueen, that Mr. McFarland replace hon. Dr. Morton, that Mr. Groeneveld replace hon. Ms Redford, that Mr. Snelgrove replace hon. Mr. Horner, that Dr. Swann replace Dr. Taft;
- (d) the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections, Standing Orders and Printing be approved: that Mr. Snelgrove replace Mr. Lindsay, that Mr. Snelgrove replace hon. Mr. Hancock as deputy chair, that Mr. Knight replace hon. Mr. Hancock, that Mr. Stelmach replace Mr. Groeneveld, that Dr. Brown replace hon. Mr. Berger, that Dr. Swann replace Dr. Sherman, that Mr. Boutilier replace Mr. Hinman;
- (e) the Standing Committee on Public Accounts be approved: that Ms Woo-Paw replace hon. Mr. Griffiths, that Mr. Goudreau replace hon. Mr. Dallas, that Mr. Goudreau replace Mr. Rodney as deputy chair, that Mrs. Forsyth replace Mr. Anderson;
- (f) the Standing Committee on Members' Services be approved: that Mr. Knight replace hon. Mr. Bhullar, that Ms Evans replace hon. Mr. VanderBurg.

The Speaker: Hon. members, under Standing Order 52(3) Motion 20 is not debatable, so I will call the question.

[Government Motion 20 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

3:10 Amendments to Standing Orders

21. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta be amended in Standing Order 52.01 by striking out suborder (1) and substituting the following: 52.01(1) At the commencement of the first session of each Legislature, 5 Policy Field Committees, consisting of 11 members each, shall be established to consider the following subject areas:

- (a) Standing Committee on Community Development – mandate related to the areas of municipal affairs, tourism, parks and recreation, and culture and community services;
- (b) Standing Committee on Education – mandate related to the areas of education and advanced education and technology;
- (c) Standing Committee on Energy – mandate related to the areas of intergovernmental, international and aboriginal relations, sustainable resource development, environment and water, agriculture and rural development, and energy;

- (d) Standing Committee on Finance – mandate related to the areas of finance, treasury board and enterprise, Service Alberta, transportation, and infrastructure;
- (e) Standing Committee on Public Health and Safety – mandate related to the areas of health and wellness, justice and attorney general, solicitor general and public security, human services, and seniors.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The substitute amendment is printed in the Order Paper today. The effect of the motion is to replace the five policy field committees as provided for in the standing orders with new policy field committees on Energy, Public Health and Safety, Finance, Community Development, and Education.

The Speaker: Hon. members, under our standing orders this motion is debatable.

I have asked Hansard as well to make sure that they print in Hansard the words that are followed in the motion as in the Order Paper so we do have it in the historic record of the province.

It is debatable if anyone wants to participate.

[Government Motion 21 carried]

Policy Field Standing Committees

22. Mr. Hancock moved:

Be it resolved that the following members be appointed to the Assembly's five standing committees:

- (a) Energy: Mrs. Ady, chair; Ms Blakeman, deputy chair; Mr. Hehr; Mr. Hinman; Mr. Jacobs; Mr. Johnston; Mr. Lund; Mr. Mason; Mr. McFarland; Mr. Rodney; Mr. Webber; and Mr. Xiao.
- (b) Public Health and Safety: Mrs. Fritz, chair; Ms Pastoor, deputy chair; Mr. Bhardwaj; Mr. Blackett; Ms DeLong; Mr. Doerksen; Mrs. Forsyth; Ms Notley; Mr. Ouellette; Mr. Rogers; Dr. Swann; and Ms Woo-Paw.
- (c) Finance: Mr. Renner, chair; Mr. Kang, deputy chair; Mr. Allred; Mr. Anderson; Mr. Drysdale; Mr. Fawcett; Mr. Knight; Mr. Mitzel; Mr. Prins;

Mr. Sandhu; Dr. Taft; and Mr. Taylor.

- (d) Community Development: Mrs. Jablonski, chair; Mr. Chase, deputy chair; Mr. Amery; Ms Blakeman; Mr. Boutilier; Ms Calahasen; Mr. Goudreau; Mr. Groeneveld; Mr. Lindsay; Mr. Snelgrove; Mr. Taylor; and Mr. Vandermeer.
- (e) Education: Mr. Zwozdesky, chair; Mr. Hehr, deputy chair; Mr. Anderson; Mr. Benito; Dr. Brown; Mr. Cao; Mr. Chase; Mrs. Leskiw; Mr. Marz; Ms Notley; Mrs. Sarich; and Ms Tarchuk.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, the Order Paper has the motion with the membership of the committees printed, and I would ask that that be incorporated into the motion for Hansard. This is just populating the five committees that we have just established and making changes necessary as a result, of course, of the changes in Executive Council and the change to the structure of government.

The Speaker: This motion is debatable as well. Any participants?

Once again to the Hansard people I'd ask that they print within the Hansard for the official record of the province of Alberta the names of all the individuals listed on these particular committees.

[Government Motion 22 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As per Government Motion 19 I would move that the House now stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. on Monday, November 21, 2011.

The Speaker: Before I call the motion, there is a possibility that I, in fact, will be inviting members back into the Legislative Assembly a little earlier, at 11 o'clock in the morning, that day to conduct a point of business, but the motion before us is that the House will reconvene on Monday, November 21, 2011, at 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 3:13 p.m. pursuant to Government Motion 19]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 4th Session (2011)

Activity to October 25, 2011

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, November 21, 2011

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome back.

Let us pray. As we begin our deliberations in this sitting of the Legislature, we ask for the insight we need to do our work to the benefit of our province and its people and to the benefit of our country. Amen.

Hon. members and all of our guests, today we'll be led in the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieau, who's in the Speaker's gallery. I would ask that all participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a very special guest, the acting chief of police from the Camrose Police Service, Mr. Lee Foreman. Lee moved from Medicine Hat to Camrose and joined the Camrose Police Service in 1982. He currently has over 29 years of public service with the Camrose Police Service and is the second in command as he's the inspector in charge of operations. In the past he has served in a variety of areas of the Camrose Police Service, primarily in patrol and investigations. He is a proud father of three young adult boys and is proud to have raised them in the Camrose community. His contributions to the city should be commended. That's why I'd ask Lee to rise so that he may receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two distinguished Albertans, the first being Deputy Commissioner Dale McGowan, who is the commanding officer of K Division of the RCMP, stationed here in Edmonton. Deputy Commissioner McGowan was born in Edmonton but has also served the RCMP in B.C., Saskatchewan, and all three northern territories. Sitting next to him is Chief Rod Knecht from the Edmonton Police Service. Chief Knecht is a native of Red Deer, Alberta, who has also served the RCMP throughout the country. We live in a terrific province, and I think we should feel much safer having quality individuals in senior roles like this running our police services. Please join me in welcoming them with the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of grade 6 students from Thorncliffe elementary school in my constituency of Edmonton-Meadowlark. This school is particularly special because of its excellent programs to individually assist students with special needs and with behavioural assistance as well as being a community school to 200 hard-working, very bright students, future leaders, I might say. Leading this group today is their teacher, Ms Karla Loberg. They are seated in the gallery above, and I would now ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to rise and introduce to you and through you to all hon. Members of this Legislative Assembly another visiting group, from the fine school of Forest Heights elementary in the constituency of Edmonton-Gold Bar. This group of 30 is sitting in the members' gallery. They are led by their teachers Ms Fritz and Kim Tew. Forest Heights elementary school has a regular English program as well as a German bilingual program, and they are doing very, very well in the Forest Heights neighbourhood. This is a very exceptional group of students. When their report cards come out on December 2, I'm confident they will all have As. With that, I would ask them to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 89 exceptional students from George McDougall high school, a school that I attended when I was a little bit younger. They are in both of the galleries today. Their teachers are with them, Mr. Sharun and Ms Sawby, as well as their group leaders, a group of parents and so forth: Tiffany Ascione, Constable Henry, and Cindy Davis. If they could all please rise and accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly Mr. Del Graff, Alberta's Child and Youth Advocate. The office of the Child and Youth Advocate works with children who are receiving government services to ensure that we provide the highest level of assistance to these vulnerable youth. Of course, today he is very interested in the fact that we'll be tabling an act later in the House which will make the Child and Youth Advocate an officer of this Legislature. I will also have the privilege of tabling the latest annual report later today.

Mr. Graff is joined today by Jackie Stewart, senior manager of advocacy services; Terri Davies, senior manager of legal representation for children and youth; Anita Lindstrom, systems analyst; Maxine Salopree, advocate; and Laura Gibson, legal representative for children and youth intake caseworker. Last year the advocate's office provided more than 3,000 children and youth with advocacy services, including helping young people to understand their rights and making sure they have an opportunity to participate and be heard when decisions are being made about them. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour today to rise to introduce to you and through you to members of this House Mrs. Shawna Benson. Shawna is a very close personal friend of mine. She grew up in Byemoor, where I taught for several years before I entered this House. She has worked relentlessly on rural community building and on engaging youth in the political process. She is a true leader now and for the future, and she's one of the most dynamic speakers you will ever hear. I'd ask Shawna, who's sitting in the members' gallery, to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly two individuals that are very supportive of more administrative penalties for impaired drivers. They are both from MADD Canada, an organization that doesn't need any introduction. They have been advocating increased safety on our roads for a number of years, and I'm very glad that they are here today to help us introduce some strengthening legislation on impaired driving. They are sitting in the members' gallery: Ms Louise Knox, a friend for many years and manager of the western provinces chapter services; and Mr. Wayne Kauffeldt, past chair of the national board, now a spokesman for the national board. Ladies and gentlemen, if you'd please receive them with the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this opportunity to introduce to you and through you two different groups. The first group, seated in the members' gallery this afternoon, is from WorldSkills 2011 Team Alberta. We have three members of the Fierce Four, as we call them, as they were nicknamed in London. First are Sean Donnan from Leduc, Nigel Renschler from Stettler, and Tim Twa from Calgary. They are joined by Skills Canada Alberta representatives Kari Zral, event and competitor coordinator; and Shawna Bourke, director of communications and programming. Unfortunately, the fourth member, Luke Moore of Innisfail, couldn't be here, but we want to take a moment to honour him as well. I would ask that they please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The second introduction is some student representatives that are here today, Mr. Speaker, to see some of the important legislation that's coming forward. Two members of CAUS, which is the Council of Alberta University Students, Mr. Duncan Wojtaszek and Mr. Farid Iskandar, are here. Also, from ASEC we have Ms Carol Neuman and Mr. Timothy Jobs. I would ask all of them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm especially pleased to rise today and introduce to you and through you to the Assembly the chair and three members of the St. Albert 150th Anniversary Celebration Committee. This committee is chaired by Margaret Plain and composed of Kevin Jones, Susan Jones, and Barry Bailey, who are in the public gallery today. Vice-chair Carol Watamaniuk was not able to come today. Margaret and her committee have worked diligently over the past few years to organize a host of events that have gone on throughout 2011 to celebrate the history of St. Albert, the oldest nonfortified community west of Winnipeg. I would ask Ms Plain and the members of the committee to rise, and in turn I'd ask members to give them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it is my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Mr. Don Gnatiuk, president of Grande Prairie Regional College. Don is a relatively new member of my community, but he has made great strides in a short time to profile GPRC not just in Grande Prairie but in the whole province of Alberta. I'd ask him to stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise today to introduce a valued member of my department's appeals, education, and prosecution policy branch, Alberta's traffic safety co-ordinator, Mr. Robert Palser. Rob was the first Alberta Crown prosecutor to be designated as a qualified breathalyzer technician and is trained as a collision analyst and drug recognition evaluator. He also serves on the RCMP criminal crash investigation team for Alberta. He's clearly the perfect person to help Alberta create new and more effective impaired driving legislation. His efforts in this regard have been outstanding, and I'd like to recognize his efforts in the House today. It's certainly an honour to speak about him as a valued member of my department. I'd ask hon. members to extend their warm greeting.

Tribute to Slave Lake Donors

Ms Calahasen: Today belongs to all of the givers I was involved with as they donated to help evacuees from the two municipalities and First Nations which were affected by fire. While our government went to great lengths to lessen the impact of the blaze, it is those who gave who have made quite a difference to the people who left their homes, sometimes with only the shirt on their back. I've been overwhelmed by the generosity of Albertans and Canadians alike.

So many to thank: the organizers of the Hope Concert, which brought people together after the fires; the many companies – Laricina, Pembina Pipeline, and ATCO – and the Loon River and Sawridge First Nations, who made generous donations. To Pro Bono Law Alberta, Legal Aid Alberta, and the many legal associations for providing free legal support to our residents. To institutions like ATB Financial, Scotiabank, and RBC for offering deferrals on loan payments for our residents. To AFSC for their willingness to help businesses get back on their feet. To all the retail stores who have offered discounts to the survivors of the fire as we reconstruct our lives.

To all those who collected, co-ordinated, and organized the massive outpouring of donations, especially the Slave Lake Rotary Club for the collection of many, many more donations which I do not have info on. To all the communities who ran collection drives. To Penn West for donating $250,000 to the Red Cross; EllisDon, $100,000; Merit Contractors for donating $5,000 to the Red Cross, $2,500 to the Northern Haven women's shelter, and $2,500 to the library; Alberta Sobey's Round Up program to the Slave Lake Native Friendship Centre, $67,132; Canadian Crude Separators, $100,000 to the Arctic Ice arena; Insurance Brokers to Slave Lake victims services, $12,000; to West Fraser Timber for donating a fire truck to the Lesser Slave Lake regional fire department.

To Paul Brandt for his concert and for providing funds to the library. A special thank you to Lynne Carr from Oakdale, Ontario, who collected quilts all across Canada and personally delivered them to Slave Lake with my colleague from St. Albert. To the Canadian Red Cross, the Mustard Seed, the Salvation Army, the fire departments from across Alberta, and all of those who accepted donations on our behalf. And to the dozens of volunteers who sorted through countless semitrailers of donated goods.

My sincere gratitude to every individual and family who gave their hard-earned money to help our community get through this difficult time. While no one can give the residents of my constituency their homes back, all of these gifts gave us the next best thing, hope. Thank you so much for all your generosity.

Temporary Foreign Workers

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, enabling Albertans. Alberta needs an increase in the number of immigrants permitted under the provincial nominee program, which allows a faster tracking immigration process based on a person's job qualifications to meet employment requirements in Alberta. However, as is the case with most immigration policy matters, the federal government sets the quotas for the provinces. In sharp contrast to the global recession reality it would appear that a significant number of jobs are likely to be created in Alberta, thanks to our nonrenewable resource assets, which provides us with a degree of insulation from the economic downturn affecting the rest of the world.

As opposed to temporary foreign workers, TFWs, who are questionably recruited and lack the protection afforded to citizens, immigrants are a key component of Alberta's permanent employment force. Despite potential conflict in the competition for jobs, the Alberta Federation of Labour, AFL, to its credit has provided information and assistance to temporary foreign workers who were recruited to undercut wages of unionized employees in a province where unions are afforded little recognition by both federal and provincial governments.

TFWs have been used as pawns in forced contract agreements such as division 8, whereby the first signatory to the contract dictates the wages and working hours for the rest of the workers, whether union or nonunion. Recently in the oil sands 200 unionized insulators were laid off and replaced by TFWs due to Alberta's lax labour laws.

Immigrants are frequently caught in a cruel ping-pong game, bounced back and forth between the federal government, that sets the rules for their entrance and stay in the country, and the province, which has jurisdiction over their health care, education, housing, employment, the daily quality of their life. The offices of both one's MLA and MP, whether having achieved or applying for landed immigrant status as the first step to full citizenship, if so desired, should be considered as both a priority and a right in acquiring information and in seeking support.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A year ago Albertans found out what cabinet ministers have known for years. The health system is in crisis. Now, the Premier, who campaigned on calling a public inquiry, has broken her promise to Albertans. The question is: what does she have to hide? To the Premier. What is the Premier most afraid of? Is it the damning testimony of doctors McNamee and Winton, what an investigation of her own cabinet ministers may reveal, or how Albertans will react to the truth and facts before an election?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, today is an exciting day in Alberta. Today we are going to be tabling legislation that is going to ensure that we can have public, transparent, judge-led public inquiries into what's going on in health care. I am very proud of the fact that Albertans are going to be able to find out exactly what's going on in the system, and that's the appropriate place for us to find out exactly how health care can be improved.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that Hansard shows that after months of opposition pressure the government only agreed to a Health Quality Council inquiry on the day that the McNamee story aired on national TV, why should anyone trust this Premier's and this government's sincerity this time, when the HQCA hand-off is so obviously intended to minimize the political damage of a real public inquiry?

Ms Redford: You know, Mr. Speaker, I'm going back to six or seven months ago when I was sitting in this Legislature. There were a number of issues with respect to health care, and my recollection is that hon. members of the opposition asked for the Health Quality Council to be given the authority to investigate and launch an inquiry. Today that legislation will be tabled, and the Health Quality Council will have more authority than they've ever had before.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, we have had the legislation in place for years, and many of those cabinet ministers and MLAs on that side have known about this.

Finally, to the Premier: given that we already have this legislation and the Premier has already flip-flopped many times, who is bullying the Premier out of calling a real public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act? Why are you breaking your promise, Madam Premier?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think about my life, and I really can't think of anybody who has ever bullied me into doing anything. But I will tell you that the legislation that's being tabled today is being tabled because Albertans want to ensure that they know what's going on with health care. The Health Quality Council is more than qualified to do that work. They will be given additional powers to be able to do that work, and that's good for Albertans.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care Privatization

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year this government downplayed these leaked health care privatization documents, but the fact remains that the government does intend to run a parallel private, for-profit health system. Why did the Minister of Health and Wellness present a privatization agenda to Albertans when they made it clear that they don't want it?

Mr. Horne: I presume that question was directed to me. You know, Mr. Speaker, earlier in this session and back in the spring we had a number of alleged, quote, privatization documents tabled in this House by members of the opposition. I don't know about you, but we on this side of the House are getting a little tired of it. None of the documents that have been tabled in this House can be attributed to any member of this caucus. The document that the hon. leader is holding up now is one such document. He's offered no proof, no substantiation . . .

The Speaker: The hon. leader. [interjection] The hon. leader, please.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this is the minister that presented this document at caucus, when he's on the government's side, and given that the former minister said that these documents simply reflect comments from average Albertans, why did the current minister tell the public that this is what he heard from Albertans and then tell caucus that this is what he heard from Albertans, more privatization? Minister, tell the truth.

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I must say it's very illuminating to be told about the substance of caucus discussions on this side of the House by someone who's standing on the other side of the House.

The fact of the matter is that no other government has stood up stronger and harder for public health care than this government caucus, and we'll continue to do so. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition is interested in tabling documents that are unattributed discussions to which he may or may not have been a party, I suppose that's his business. We're interested in getting on with the business of . . .

The Speaker: The hon. leader. [interjections] Okay, okay. The Leader of the Opposition is recognized. Nobody else is.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Illumination is exactly what Albertans want. Let's shed a little bit of sunlight onto the truth.

Given that the Premier was there when these documents were discussed and won her campaign on a pledge of public health care just like the previous Premier did, can the Premier just be honest with Albertans, admit that she and her whole caucus share the same privatization agenda after the next election just as her two predecessors did? Premier, can you please answer that question?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the hon. member was doing all summer, but I think I was pretty clear for over eight months that I am committed to a publicly funded health care system in Alberta, full stop.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Provincial Fiscal Policies

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. My first question is to the Premier. Why did this government feel it was necessary to handcuff the Minister of Finance by now requiring him to go to the President of the Treasury Board any time he wants to spend money in his department?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's wonderful that the hon. member is standing up for our Minister of Finance because he sometimes needs some help in our cabinet.

What I will tell you is that when you're on this side of the House and you're managing a government, you're managing a cabinet, we have rules of protocol which allow for us as government to make decisions that are in the best interests of government. I know that everyone in our cabinet is committed to that. That involves speaking to each other, balancing priorities, and working together as a team, and that's what we do.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that hon. minister's history as a wild spender in health, I can see why you put the political handcuffs on him.

Now, again a promise. The $1.8 billion that's in the Alberta sustainability fund: will the Premier please commit to this House that that money will not be used for the Progressive Conservative's re-election slush fund in the next four months?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we are the government of the day. We are committed to the future of this province. We are responsible fiscal conservatives that will ensure that we are managing a government and a budget and a caucus that's going to ensure that Albertans have the best services possible now and in the future. This random speculation is really out of sorts and not relevant to the real discussions in this House.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the Premier: if this is a government that holds true to fiscal responsibility, why was it necessary, in the second quarter that was released today, for this government to increase borrowing by $1.1 billion? That's not being a fiscal conservative. Ask those guys.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the quarterly update today reported on the circumstances as they've existed for the past six months in terms of fiscal planning. There was nothing out of the ordinary. There was no exception. There was no change in the way that we do business.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Tom Baker Cancer Centre Pathology Lab

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Since 2000 the world-class pathology lab at the Tom Baker cancer centre has developed and performed a variety of critical tests for cancer patients in Alberta. These tests are crucial in determining life-saving treatments. However, in nine days the cancer testing lab at the Tom Baker is going to be shut down. This superboard decision was made without consultation and despite questions and warnings from the lab's director, Dr. Tony Magliocco, and other pathologists. To the Premier: will you heed the warnings and stop the closure of the Tom Baker cancer centre pathology lab today?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, when we're managing health care, we have to understand that there are responsibilities the government takes on, and there are responsibilities that Alberta Health Services takes on. We know that some of the information we've seen today would certainly suggest that there's been a disagreement within the workplace with respect to some decisions. It's entirely appropriate for those to be dealt with within the workplace, and that's where we'll leave them.

Mrs. Forsyth: It's just so disgusting. Again to the Premier: given the proof of intimidation in the health care system and given that Dr. Magliocco has expressed no confidence in the Health Quality Council and, Premier, said he would return to Alberta to testify in a full judicial public inquiry, will you do the right thing, keep your promise of what you said you were going to do when you ran for leader, and call a full judicial public inquiry today and not your gobbledygook that you're tabling later on?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to see that, in fact, if someone does have concerns with respect to doctor intimidation, they would be prepared to come to an inquiry. The legislation will be tabled in the House today to ensure that that can happen. If there are issues to be determined, then I have full confidence that the Health Quality Council is going to be able to get to the bottom of that, the physicians are going to be able to testify with protection. That's where we're going to deal with these issues, before we start suggesting that there may or may not be proof.

Mrs. Forsyth: Given that Dr. Magliocco was ignored, stonewalled, ostracized, and intimidated for raising his concerns over the planned closure, it's clear that intimidation is real and world-class health professionals are leaving this province. What are you going to do to stop other world-class professionals from leaving our province? Premier, call the public inquiry today.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there will be legislation before this House that is going to allow for that inquiry to take place. It is very important that Albertans know what is happening, and it's also very important that we do not jump to conclusions. We know that there will be disagreements in workplaces, as we know there are in all workplaces, but when we start jumping to conclusions as to what that may or may not have resulted in or could have become, that is not appropriate for this House.

The Speaker: Okay. I've heard language in here already that I'm not sure Hansard is going to pick up. I will not recognize members if they continue to interject when they're not supposed to. I just simply will not recognize them when they think it's their turn in the question period.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Health Care Premiums

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2008 the PC government did away with health care premiums. Today the Finance minister threatened to reintroduce health care premiums, a regressive tax that will cost every family over a thousand dollars regardless of their income. This is an insignificant amount for Alberta's wealthiest individuals but a real burden on middle- and low-income families. My question is to the Premier. Will the government admit that this is going to be yet another tax and one that disproportionately and negatively affects middle- and low-income families in this province?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, this is exactly the point in time when we as a government are entering into budget deliberations. There are a number of points of view being expressed by Albertans across the province with respect to where we go in some difficult economic times. There's no doubt, as both the President of the Treasury Board and the Minister of Finance have said, that this is something that Albertans have raised with us. It was in that context that the comments were made.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that when the Conservatives did away with progressive income tax in this province, the Alberta Treasury estimated that it cost the province 1 and a half billion dollars a year way back in 2001 and that most of that was because of tax savings of up to $60,000 for some of the wealthiest individuals in this province, will the Premier admit that the real source of the deficit was the decision to cut taxes for the wealthiest Albertans several years ago?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, right now in Alberta we have a situation where there is a deficit. We also know that this is a very difficult economic time. To start speculating on whether or not it has to do with whether or not a particular household income is paying more or less taxes from over six or seven years ago is not an appropriate analysis of the situation.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that this government seems desperate to try and find revenue that comes from the people least able to afford it instead of asking those who are wealthy and benefit from our society to pay their fair share and given that the health care premium goes into general revenues rather than into the health care system, will the Premier admit that it has nothing to do with health care and is simply another disproportionate tax on poor and middle-class families?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, this particular member happened to be at the media conference that we had this morning. I don't think that he washed his ears this morning because what we said at that media conference was that in our round-table discussions across the province these issues were raised. We made no commitment in any particular direction other than to listen to Albertans. I must remind this hon. member that he was the one out there advocating that we increase royalties substantially for corporations in this province, which significantly impacted negatively the oil and gas industry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. During her campaign for party leadership the Premier promised not only to raise the meagre monthly allowance that AISH recipients receive to $1,588, which barely approaches Alberta's deplorable poverty line; she also promised to increase the preclawback amount for the small minority who are able to work. To the Premier: given that the ability to earn bolsters a sense of independence in those very few AISH recipients who are able to work, when can we expect the Premier to make good on her promise?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member raises a very important point. It is important for people to feel that, where possible, they can make a contribution to their life. We are at the moment, right now, in the middle of budget deliberations. This is part of how we move forward with respect to both fiscal policy and public policy, and I think the hon. member can look forward to the results of that very soon.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I can't wait, and the poor people on AISH are considerably more desperate than I am.

What does it say about this government's support for vulnerable Albertans that it has since 2008 offered AISH recipients less and less initiative to earn, Madam Premier?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think what it says about this government is that in the past month and a half the party that is governing this province elected a leader that's committed to improving the quality of life of AISH recipients, and we will do that in the next budget.

Mr. Chase: When will the Premier stop talking about improving AISH benefits and implement the necessary changes to assist highly vulnerable Albertans? Talk is cheap. Solutions are more expensive.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member is very insightful in his comments. We are fully committed to honouring the commitment that I made, and we will do so.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Keystone Pipeline Project

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier has said that we cannot lobby the U.S. or intervene in their processes regarding the Keystone pipeline. My first question is indeed to the Premier. Can she please explain to Albertans and to this House what value, if any, her meetings with U.S. congressional leaders had in this regard, and can she update us on discussions she had along similar lines with Canadian counterparts?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, last week was a very interesting week, and I think that as Albertans we should be very proud of the reception we received in Washington, New York, Toronto, and Ottawa. The reason for that is that we were able to go and talk about what Alberta is. We talked about our success as environmental stewards. We talked about being strong partners with the United States with respect to economic development. Fortunately for us, because of some announcements that the State Department had made, the regulatory process was suspended with respect to Keystone when I was there. So we also had the opportunity to advocate very strongly for Keystone both with the State Department as well as with bipartisan congressional leaders.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Premier, and thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations. Considering the importance of Keystone, can the minister explain what good it is to have an interim envoy in Washington rather than employing someone on a longer term basis?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dave Bronconnier's posting is, in fact, a very important assignment that comes at a very important time. Issues such as the Keystone XL and the oil sands are critically important issues that are front and centre to discuss in U.S. politics at this time. Dave has a significant voice. He gets the attention of the important decision-makers in the U.S., and I'm very confident that he will have an impact not only in Washington but in other key places around the United States.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Minister.

My final supplemental is to the Minister of Environment and Water. Obviously, Keystone is of vital importance to citizens across our country as well. During her visit to Ottawa last week was she able to get any kind of indication of when we'll see some real movement with our federal counterparts on world-class, joint monitoring systems for the oil sands so that this and other pipelines receive the required seals of approval as soon as possible?

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. Well, I can tell the hon. member that we've been having some good conversations with the federal minister. We're making great strides to move forward with our monitoring system, and I'm looking forward to the work that we're going to do together to have one first-class monitoring system here in Alberta with both the federal and provincial governments. We're moving very well on this. I've had a couple of conversations, and I look forward to announcing something with that minister soon.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Fixed Election Dates

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. We have yet another broken promise from this Premier and this government. The promise was fixed election dates, but instead we have a fixed election season. Now, to the Minister of Justice: when every other Canadian jurisdiction that has fixed election dates actually has that, a fixed date for the election, one day, why would Alberta need a three-month political window?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, we're going to be introducing legislation in a little while here, and I would prefer to have that debate after we've introduced the legislation. The hon. member will have all kinds of opportunity to debate at that point.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister, the hon. Minister of Justice, who should be able to answer the question. Hopefully, he's capable. What challenges do Alberta voters face that other Canadian voters don't when they can have one day for fixed elections, and you want this three-month-long political window?

Mr. Olson: Well, I'm very happy to have the debate now. I think we'll have a little bit more time later. It's not a question of Albertans facing unique challenges; it's a question of a made-in-Alberta solution that makes sense for Albertans.

Mr. MacDonald: This is not a made-in-Alberta solution; this is a Progressive Conservative made-in-Alberta solution.

Now, what is this government so afraid of that you can't pick one date every four years for Albertans to elect their government?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, it's not a question of being fearful of anything. I would imagine that anybody could figure out that when there's a three-month window to host and have an election, they should be ready for it at any time within that three months. It's very reasonable, and it's very flexible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Provincial Achievement Tests

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There's been some indication that this government will end the provincial achievement tests for grades 3 and 6 students. My questions are to the Minister of Education. Is the minister planning to cancel the provincial achievement tests?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I will not pre-empt the outcome of a very healthy discussion I'm having right now with the Alberta School Boards Association and many individual school boards, with the parent council associations, and with parents, students, and others. What I can undertake at this point in time is that we are looking at the PAT exams, and we will make sure that at the end of the day we will have a solution that is both constructive to administering education in this province and to addressing some of the issues that have been raised with the tests.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: can the minister assure parents that he will address the legitimate concerns regarding undue stress, particularly on young students, that has been raised with regard to the PATs?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I can assure parents of two things. I can assure them that, yes, indeed, we will be looking at some of the concerns that have been raised and looking at how we can alleviate some of the issues relevant to their concerns, but I can also assure parents that we will make sure we continue to develop and monitor our curriculum so that we continue to have one of the best curriculums in the world to such extent that we're actually exporting Alberta curriculum to many countries throughout the world.

Mr. Doerksen: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: as these tests are to be gauging student achievement, how will the minister ensure that these tests are in fact used to address and gauge student achievement rather than as comparators between teachers, schools, and school divisions?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, these tests are really, actually, designed to test the curriculum and to see how the curriculum plays itself out in the classrooms. Then this is how we adjust and/or develop new curriculum. The fact is that, yes, there are third parties that utilize that test for purposes for which the test was not intended. It's a form of misuse of information and, frankly, arriving at very questionable conclusions. The fact is that we will look also at the possibility of making sure that these tests, which are very valid — they are there for a very good reason — are not misused by third parties.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Environmental Monitoring of Oil Sands

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Albertans want an oil sands industry they can be proud of, and industry wants to be innovative and respected internationally for its environmental record, but this government's continual foot-dragging is making both things impossible. We've had no new standards for oil sands water monitoring, no new CCS, no health impact studies. All promised; not delivered. To the Minister of Environment and Water. Industry will step up to the challenge if it's provided, so why does this government insist on dragging its feet on implementing environmental standards?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I wouldn't say that we're dragging our feet at all. I would say that what we're doing is working with the federal government to come up with a world-class monitoring system here in Alberta that Albertans can rely on. We looked at the portal that we announced a week or so ago. The transparency of the information is there. I would say that in the last month that I've spent here as minister, we're not dragging our feet.

Ms Blakeman: Well, Mr. Speaker, back to the same minister. Given that this government's inaction has led the federal government to step into our oil sands to a degree never seen before, what tangible evidence can the minister offer us that would show that they're encouraging environmental innovation in the oil sands on a scale that can't be denied internationally?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, I would say that we share the jurisdiction with regard to the environment with the federal government. Rather than having two separate monitoring systems for air, land, water, and biodiversity, we're doing what makes sense, and we're having one first-class system in Alberta. Albertans will see the transparency with that, and that is what we're doing with the federal government because we share that jurisdiction.

Ms Blakeman: I can't wait for transparency from a provincial and a federal government. Good Lord.

Back to the same minister: given that climate change is real and a threat to our biggest industry, what will the minister do to ensure Alberta is leading the way in environmental innovation rather than toddling along 10 steps behind?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again, I'd like to say that I'm very proud that Alberta is leading the way and has been leading the way. We're the first one with regard to putting a price on carbon. We're the first one with regard to putting in a huge commitment with regard to carbon capture and storage, a $2 billion investment that around the world is seen as a huge investment, taking real steps, real concrete steps to real projects on the ground. These are just a couple of the things that we're doing that are taking real leadership in Alberta, and quite frankly I'm proud of that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Noninstructional Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. For some time now postsecondary students have been expressing their concerns about colleges, universities, and technical institutes basically sidestepping this province's tuition cap and charging high fees that are deemed noninstructional. Institutions are using fees for things such as athletics and recreation technology and registration fees as a way to get around tuition caps. My questions are to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. What are you doing to make sure that this practice stops and that students are not literally paying the price?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know the students are extremely concerned about the cost of noninstructional fees, and so am I. It is an issue that we promised the students we would deal with when we met earlier this year. Since meeting with them, I have sent a letter to all of our postsecondary institutions asking them to develop policy on how they will include the students in the discourse around any future fees that will be charged to those students.

Ms Woo-Paw: To the same minister: when will students see outcomes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you. We've asked all of the institutions to be back to us with their policies on student engagement within the next 90 days.

Ms Woo-Paw: To the same minister: given that the public postsecondary institutions' tuition fee regulations set a model for predictable increases to tuition fees, why not just regulate these noninstructional fees the same way you do tuitions?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That suggestion has come up from the students, but, you know, we have 26 publicly funded postsecondaries across Alberta, and they're all very different and unique institutions. Some are extremely large; some are smaller and rural. We determined that it would be better if each institution had a chance to look at how they could engage their student body, their students in the process and come up with a way that would work in their institution. We don't believe that one solution would work in every institution across the province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Nations, provinces, and municipalities across Canada and around the world have had no difficulty operating with fixed election dates, but in Alberta somehow we're being told it's just not manageable and that the best we can do is narrow it to a three-month season. Now, seasons might be fine for duck hunting or theatre, but democracy deserves better. My question to the Attorney General is: what possible defence can he offer for the Premier abandoning her promise to deliver on the long-awaited fixed election date for Alberta?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, we're very comfortable on this side with this because it's flexible. In the springtime, for example, there are changes of season. There are many things that come up. There's Easter. There are dates where if you had an arbitrarily fixed election date, it would make it very inconvenient to have an election. It's a reasonable thing to do. Albertans are not going to be fooled in any way or prejudiced in any way, nor is the opposition, by having a flexible period of time within which to have an election.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that other provinces have the same range of unpredictable issues that Alberta has – I'm pretty sure Manitoba has had a flood or two – and given that Alberta municipalities have managed for years to hold elections quite successfully on fixed dates, why is the Attorney General supporting the Premier's decision to secure political advantage at the expense of keeping her promise to Albertans?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, any political advantage, if there were any, would be minuscule in this example. Three months is a very small window of time within which to call an election. The opposition will know years ahead of time when the election is coming, and they can do everything they need to do to prepare. Albertans, again, are not going to be prejudiced in any way, but it will be flexible enough that people will also not be inconvenienced.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the long string of broken promises is becoming a growing embarrassment to the new Premier and that her failure to stick with a fixed election promise would be so easy to correct, will the Attorney General commit today to flip back from the Premier's flop on this issue and consult with opposition parties and give us a fixed election date and not a fixed election season?

Mr. Olson: Well, this brings me back nicely to my original comment with the previous question, that we're going to have a chance to debate all of this once we actually introduce the legislation.

Electricity Regulation

Mr. Hehr: Over 10 years ago this government decided to deregulate electricity. The promise of better service and lower costs to consumers never happened. This change has led to significantly higher energy prices and unstable, unpredictable markets. My question is for the Minister of Energy. How is it that every time you promise lower prices, our electricity bills continue to grow?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, as usual the hon. member is about half right and half wrong. It is true that prices for electricity have increased since January – I'm happy to explain the reasons why – but if you compare Alberta to other non hydro dependent electrical systems, we are in the middle of the pack and very competitive.

Mr. Hehr: Well, given that five electricity producers control 70 per cent of the market and that the Market Surveillance Administrator identified over 46 violations of market manipulation in the past year, why aren't you defending Alberta consumers?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to report that just recently the Market Surveillance Administrator did identify an irregularity in one generator's practice, investigated, found there was an irregularity, and has negotiated with the company and imposed both a fine and a payback to the pool to make up for that transgression. So the system is working.

Mr. Hehr: Do you really think that a $125,000 fine for causing 5 and a half million dollars in damage is an appropriate fine? Is that what I'm hearing from the minister?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has a wonderful imagination in coming up with imaginative figures in terms of total damage, but I can assure you that if there is a problem with the fine and the compensation, the decision made by the Market Surveillance Administrator goes to the Alberta Utilities Commission, which has the final word on the appropriateness of the penalty.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

High-speed Internet Service for Rural Alberta

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very frustrated that there are still parts of our province that are left with poor access to high-speed Internet service and in some cases none at all. I represent an area comprising parts of Camrose and Leduc counties where access to the Internet is very poor. To the Minister of Service Alberta. Mr. Minister, it seems that no action has taken place recently on this file for quite some time. Are you finally going to do something to bring parts of rural Alberta into the 21st century and ensure that unconnected . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. At present 3.3 million, or 94 per cent of Albertans, have access to high-speed Internet through private service initiatives and strategic government infrastructure. Now, we are committed to taking this up to 98 per cent, and to find that remaining 4 per cent, we are pinpointing reasons as to why some people are not receiving service today. We will bring forth solutions that are cost-effective and that can be executed in a very timely fashion.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that our government is now forecasting a significant deficit and with continued efforts to balance the budget, can the minister assure this House that this important initiative will not disappear from the government's radar screen?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can assure the members of the House and all Albertans that this is a priority of this Premier and our government. We are committed to a thriving rural Alberta community. We will deliver on this promise. We will make sure our rural communities are thriving and have access to high-speed Internet to capitalize on every technology that the rest of Albertans have at their disposal.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: will this minister leverage the SuperNet in his efforts to close the service gap, considering that all Albertans have invested millions of dollars in building this vital piece of communications infrastructure?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is a leader by creating the SuperNet; 429 communities throughout this province have fibre optics in the ground. We're a leader across not just Canada but internationally. We will capitalize on that technology. We will make sure that that infrastructure that we've put in place is best utilized and that we come forth with the most productive, cost-effective solutions moving forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Provincial Tax Alternatives

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many Albertans fought for many years to get the federal tax-and-spend Liberals out of Ottawa, but it seems that they have resurfaced here in Alberta under our new tax-and-spend Premier. Today the Finance minister and Treasury Board president all but promised that their Christmas gift to Alberta families next year will be a $1,000 per year tax increase dressed up as the old health care premiums. To our Finance minister. This is a very, very simple question. Are you considering bringing back the old health care premiums at the next budget? Yes or no?

Mr. Liepert: It's a pretty simple answer, Mr. Speaker. It's no. I think this particular member, who was also at the media briefing, if he'd have washed his ears this morning, might have heard the same thing as the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Anderson: Well, I am happy to hear that, Mr. Speaker.

Given that at today's press conference the Finance minister all but announced that health care premiums were coming back to pay for this government's all-you-can-eat spending buffet, are you, Minister, willing to say that under no conditions – under no conditions – will you as minister, will this government be raising taxes, fees, premiums, or any other money grab on the backs of hard-working Alberta families? Admit to that now, and I'll believe you.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the first question this member raised was whether we'd be bringing back the health care premiums, that were cancelled a few years ago, and my answer to that was no. What we do have to look at – and, quite frankly, it's what Albertans are saying – is that we need to ensure that as we move forward, there's a recognition by Albertans of the cost of health care. As we move forward, we're going to look at how that can be accomplished, and at this stage there's nothing that I have to announce.

Mr. Anderson: Well, that was as clear as mud.

Given that this Finance minister has mused this last week about introducing a provincial sales tax, bringing back a $1,000 per year tax hike on everyone, or health premiums as he calls it, and given that his government now has a $6 billion cash shortfall, will this minister confirm that he and this new Premier's balanced budget strategy entails taxing Albertans more and praying that the price of oil hits $120 a barrel? Is that the plan?

Mr. Liepert: Well, let's be clear, Mr. Speaker. The member, as is typical, throws a lot of numbers around there, and frankly I don't know sometimes where he . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: The Minister of Finance has the floor.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I'll continue on. These numbers that are being tossed around have no validity. What we did announce this morning is that at this point in time, second-quarter results, we are very close to what we said in this House in February, that our projected deficit this year would be about $3.1 billion now, all of it covered by the sustainability fund. We do not have a debt in this province, and that's because of the good management of this government.

An Hon. Member: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order? Okay.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Property Tax Deferral

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the largest constituent groups in Edmonton-Calder is seniors, and I do believe that we need to do everything possible to keep them in their homes. It reflects directly on their quality of life, on their dignity, and on their overall health. One simple solution would be to address a property tax deferral program. My question is to the Minister of Seniors. Minister, will you consider such a property tax program for Alberta seniors?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the question is a valid question and probably a really brilliant idea as well. I can tell you that I've had the opportunity to read about B.C. and what they've done for property tax deferral. It has kept seniors in their homes. I want to tell you that I'm committing that next spring as part of the government agenda I'm going to bring this thing forward.

The Speaker: The hon. member?

Mr. Elniski: No supplemental. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

2:30 Alleged Intimidation of Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the joint submission to the Health Quality Council of Alberta made by the Alberta Medical Association and the Canadian Medical Association, widespread physician intimidation is described as well as an environment of "chronic instability" in Alberta's health care system. Since last March the AMA, the Alberta Medical Association, has had no master agreement with this province. To the minister of health. During negotiations the ministry threatened to terminate programs such as the physician and family support program and cast doubt on the future of other programs and staffing of physician offices. Are these the tactics of a government intent on eliminating intimidation of physicians?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows full and well, discussions between the government, Alberta Health Services, and the Alberta Medical Association on a new agreement have been ongoing for some time. The discussions, I can report, are positive. They're constructive. The new president of the Alberta Medical Association, Dr. Linda Slocombe, and I have spoken several times. We are continuing to work toward a new agreement with Alberta's doctors. I see nothing but positive and constructive dialogue in the months to come.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. Swann: Well, I'm glad the minister is so optimistic, Mr. Speaker.

Given that such deplorable tactics persist, what confidence can Albertans have that current negotiations will result in an agreement fostering meaningful physician engagement in our health care system?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the very act of the negotiations and the issues that are discussed are evidence of this government's commitment to a constructive, positive relationship with physicians. My barometer is the feedback I receive from Dr. Linda Slocombe, the AMA president, on behalf of her members. As I will continue to report to this House, we're on a very positive path toward addressing a number of the issues raised by the hon. member.

Dr. Swann: A lot of ground to catch up, Mr. Speaker, on the loss of confidence in this province among physicians.

When will the province do what most provinces have done and implement continuance provisions that allow the building of trust and for the AMA to transition from one agreement to the next? Continuance provisions.

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, obviously, it would be inappropriate for me to stand here and discuss specifics of discussions that may be under way between government, Alberta Health Services, and the Alberta Medical Association. What I will say is that this government is committed to continuing to provide an environment of stability and predictability for physicians that practise in this province. The same is true for all other health professionals. The discussions that are under way now reflect that spirit on both sides, and I have every reason to believe that will continue.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Bullying Prevention

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last week was National Bullying Awareness Week. We're hearing too often the tragic stories of youth that have been victimized and targeted by this senseless act. My question is to the Minister of Education. How is this government raising awareness of this very important issue?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that we have to raise awareness, but the fact is that bullying does exist. There are a variety of forms of bullying. There is cyberbullying. There is homophobic bullying. There's a variety of it, and there's no place for that in Alberta, never mind in schools and schoolyards but even outside of schoolyards. As the Alberta government we will be raising awareness on how to identify bullying and how to eradicate bullying from our schools.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Leadership is required, for appropriate behaviour must be modelled if this government is truly to change the culture around bullying. What concrete steps is the Minister of Education taking to change peoples' behaviour?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, behaviour must be modelled, and we all have to work as a community to eradicate this culture of bullying. Number one, we are providing our schools and our teachers and administrators with tools on how to recognize bullying. You will see that the currently tabled Bill 18 is being consulted on further with Albertans, and we are looking at legislative enhancement to allow teachers to deal with bullying in schools. But in the end all of us in this Chamber and everybody throughout Alberta can be a positive contributor to eradicating bullying simply by leading by example. As government we will be enhancing awareness through a variety of media that accesses not only children but teachers, parents, coaches, grandparents, and everybody in our community.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I understand it, bullying prevention is a crossministry initiative involving Education and Human Services. My question is for the Minister of Human Services. What is the government doing for ongoing bullying prevention and supports for all Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, there has been an ongoing crossministry initiative and a crossministry committee on this, led now by Human Services. We do have 15 passionate, inspiring young people on a youth advisory committee who advise us with respect to this area. They helped to create a website for youth. It's b-free.ca, which has advice and tips for youth who are experiencing bullying or are concerned about a friend. Along with the B-Free website we have a toll-free 24-hour bullying helpline, 1.888.456.2323, and two other websites for adults and children. So there are a number of things happening, but much more has to be done in this age of technology.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

GreenTRIP Incentives Program

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. GreenTRIP was announced more than three years ago, and only this year did the government finally begin to honour its commitment to the municipalities. The $2 billion was committed in 2008 with no plan for transit improvements to use the full amount within 10 years. To the Minister of Transportation: is the government still planning to support transit to the tune of $2 billion, or will it be on the chopping block like the Premier is considering doing to some of the CCS fund?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, we're in the budget process right now, but what has been committed to GreenTRIP, to the municipalities will be honoured.

Mr. Kang: Mr. Speaker, to the minister again: given that of the $2 billion promised only $575 million has been allocated, will the minister explain why Calgary has been left out in the cold? Does this government plan to end the program before Calgary projects are approved?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, in fact, Calgary hasn't been left out in the cold. I want to inform the hon. member that Calgary is working on an application that we have been discussing with them, and that is in the process.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: given that the city of Edmonton was able to shuffle MSI money away from the NAIT LRT project to be replaced by the funding from GreenTRIP, will the ministry approve similar applications being considered by the city of Calgary?

Mr. Danyluk: I'm not exactly sure, Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member is talking about, shuffling MSI funding and moving projects over from one to the other. I think it's very clear that the applications that are in place for the GreenTRIP program, also for the MSI program go through the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. Do we work with the municipalities on their projects on a regular basis in consultation? Of course we do because we want to make sure that the funding that is provided for municipalities is used in the best way, and they want the same goal as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Electricity Import Manipulation

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans were shocked to learn earlier this month that TransAlta had acted in a way that artificially increased electricity prices. Too many people feel the system is just not working. To the Minister of Energy: what happened in this case, and what impact did this have on my constituents?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, for 31 hours in November of last year TransAlta took certain steps that had the effect of impeding electricity imports from British Columbia. The result of that was that power pool prices in Alberta were higher than they otherwise would have been. However, I want to stress that only industrial consumers who purchased energy from the power pool in real time were impacted. Residential consumers who buy on a regulated price: their price is set one month in advance so was not affected by the temporary boost in prices.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you. To the same minister: what is being done about this infraction of the rules?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the Market Surveillance Administrator is in effect the policeman that regulates and monitors this industry. They noticed the irregularities last November. They asked TransAlta to stop and undertook an investigation. As a result of that, they found that there was a violation of the rules, and based on negotiations TransAlta has agreed to pay a penalty of $370,000; $245,000 of that is for, in effect, excess profit. The other $125,000 of that is an administrative penalty.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Energy: given that some have estimated the cost to consumers to be more than $5 million, shouldn't the fine be higher, and can't this money be returned to those who paid the inflated prices?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the second question, the legislation requires that all fines go into the general revenues, so that's a matter of legislation and is dealt with that way. With respect to the so-called $5 million estimate, as I indicated to my Liberal friend earlier, that's based on a guess, really a guesstimate, that assumes that for the 31 hours in question all consumers were paying the real-time pool price. In fact, that's not the case. As I indicated earlier, residential consumers pay a month in advance and were not affected by that. Even industrial consumers often hedge their purchases. So in that respect, the $5 million figure is not accurate.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the question-and-answer period for today. Twenty members were recognized. There were 116 questions and responses. We have a very, very busy Routine to deal with in the next 18 minutes, so we're going to go immediately to Members' Statements, and I'm going to call on the Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Family Violence Prevention Month

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to recognize November as Family Violence Prevention Month in Alberta. This month is a serious reminder to all of us that we can help to prevent and address family violence in our communities. This issue has devastating effects for individuals and families across the province. We know that family violence also has profound and lifelong consequences for children regardless of whether they are abused directly or a witness to it.

According to a 2008 study neglect and exposure to intimate partner violence are the most common forms of substantiated maltreatment causing children to come into care, with each issue accounting for about 34 per cent of all substantiated cases in Canada. We need to continue our efforts to protect children and support all Albertans who are struggling with the trauma of family violence and help them as they work to rebuild their lives.

The government of Alberta is working closely with families and communities to provide support for those affected by family violence. More than $65 million is invested each year across government, including support for women's shelters, victims' support programs, safe visitation sites, public awareness and education efforts, and many other programs and services.

This spring in the Legislature we passed amendments to the Protection Against Family Violence Act with the unanimous support of all parties. These changes improved protection for those affected by family violence and came into force on November 1 of this year. These amendments hold accountable those who violate protection orders and make Alberta's penalties for such violations amongst the strongest in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, if an Albertan knows someone who is experiencing abuse in their family, I encourage them to call the family violence info line at 310-1818 for information and to connect with support or to visit familyviolence.alberta.ca. We all need to keep working to prevent family violence so Albertans can live safely in their homes and communities.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

St. Albert Sesquicentennial

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year marks the 150th anniversary of the founding of St. Albert by Albert Lacombe in 1861. As such, St. Albert is the oldest nonfortified community west of Winnipeg. St. Albert's 150th anniversary committee organized a marvellous series of programs throughout the year to celebrate this major event in the history of not just St. Albert but the province of Alberta.

The year kicked off with a parish event to mark the actual founding of St. Albert in 1861 by Father Lacombe and Bishop Taché, which also marked the establishment of the Catholic church and the Grey Nuns in St. Albert.

The kickoff for the 150th anniversary committee was the performance of The Black Bonspiel of Wullie MacCrimmon in the newly renovated curling rink, and thank you to the province of Alberta for a major contribution to the funding of this facility.

A major Canadian Western Bank rendezvous gala was held in the Enjoy Centre, the Hole family's new commercial and botanical complex. This and other galas were well attended, including guests such as our Lieutenant Governor, the Hon.

Donald Ethell, and Her Honour Linda Ethell as well as Premier Stelmach and Mrs. Stelmach.

Over the spring and summer St. Albert hosted a number of unique events for all ages, including a soap box derby, a performance and tour called Meet the Street, which featured various street names and the pioneers they were named after.

Traditional events such as the St. Albert Rodeo parade, the International Children's Festival, Canada Day, the farmers' market, and rockin' August as well as the 55-plus Winter Games were supplemented with the 150th anniversary activities.

The crème de la crème was the August 28 picnic, which attracted over 10,000 residents, former residents, and visitors. This event featured 10 separate venues along the Sturgeon River from Big Lake to Riverlot 56, including Grain Elevator park and the botanical gardens. These venues featured on-site artists and artistic demonstrations, aboriginal dancers, athletic and cultural events, and, of course, a large variety of different ethnic and traditional foods.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Team Alberta WorldSkills Achievements

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'd like to recognize the members of Team Alberta's Fierce Four, three of whom are with us today in the members' and public galleries. These young Albertans were part of the Team Canada contingent at the recent WorldSkills competition in London, England. As you are aware, Calgary played host to the WorldSkills in 2009, and we were all witness to the incredible technical expertise and problem-solving skills of these competitors in areas like refrigeration, web design, autobody repair, and hairstyling.

Mr. Speaker, skills competitions at all levels, from the provincial to the national and all the way to the international, are events that shine a spotlight on the importance and value of apprenticeship and skilled labour in our province and around the world.

Tradespersons and skilled workers are the foundation of Alberta's economy, and these members of Team Alberta are tremendous role models for the rewards of a career in the trades. The excellence that the Fierce Four put on display for the world to see did not come without a great deal of support from the team at Skills Canada Alberta and especially from their employers.

Mr. Speaker, a tip of the hat should be extended to Marc Seabrook of Onsite Machining Solutions in Innisfail, Murray Brennan of Brennan Auto Body Repair in Stettler, John Goucher of Allied Projects in Calgary, and Chad Theriault of Millenium Mechanical Services in Leduc. These employers played a huge role in supporting these competitors and deserve their own recognition for helping these Albertans realize their goals.

It's easy to see why Alberta is making such an impact on the world stage when you combine the incredible support for these competitors and the individual drive and determination of the Fierce Four. I encourage all Albertans to learn more about skills competitions in their communities and to see first-hand the dedication of so many of their fellow Albertans.

I would like to congratulate Team Alberta, their employers, and the team at Skills Canada Alberta for all their hard work at the recent WorldSkills competition.

Global Entrepreneurship Week

Ms Woo-Paw: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak on two extraordinary Calgary events last week as part of this year's celebration of Global Entrepreneurship Week. The Canadian Youth Business Foundation organized the YOU Innovate Canada tournament, which challenged Canadians 16 years and older to think like entrepreneurs by creating new value out of an ordinary coffee cup. Forty videos were submitted from across Alberta, including participation from six postsecondary institutions.

The community award went to a team called Something Awesome, which was comprised of Kendra Wannamaker, Nicolette Bell, Kyler Marshall, and Connor Dyck. This team also received over 11,000 online votes.

The postsecondary award went to a team called Boja, which was comprised of Breana Baker, Olivia Bohdan, Josh Holloway, and Adam Holloway. I'm pleased to note that the government of Alberta is a proud partner to this great initiative with a $1 million contribution. Mr. Speaker, I was truly impressed and inspired by the level of social consciousness exhibited by these young people's project concepts and ideas.

Another leading-edge initiative is the Trico Charitable Foundation, dedicated to the development of social enterprise, which essentially encompasses a business operation commonly run by charities or nonprofits. Revenue raised by the business operation is reinvested into the charity to support their programs and operations. The foundation organized Enterprising Spirit: Creating Value and Social Good conference, that attracted over 150 delegates from all over Canada.

This unique conference was highlighted by the inaugural Social EnterPrize awards, annual grants to grow and sustain social enterprises, provoke innovation, and build capacity in the nonprofit sector. Awards went to Ms Caroline Arcand, executive director of Groupe Convex; the Social EnterPrize award for mature organizations was given to Potluck Café and Catering of Vancouver; and the grant for emerging organizations was given to Mission Possible of Vancouver.

Kyle Fundytus

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is with great sadness that I rise today and comment on the terrible tragedy that killed a local minor hockey player last week. Kyle Fundytus was an aspiring young hockey player for the midget double-A South Side Athletic Club who was hit in the neck by a puck while going down to block a shot during a game. He was just 16 years old. Neck guards are mandatory in minor hockey, and Kyle was wearing one, but unfortunately that wasn't able to save him.

Tragic accidents like this one affect many different people on many levels not only at Holy Trinity high school, located in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods, but also in the entire city of Edmonton and in our province who know how to appreciate the sport of hockey. Those who knew Kyle say that he was a dedicated teammate, a hard worker, and that he had an infectious passion for the game of hockey.

Our most sincere condolences go out to Kyle's family, friends, and teammates during such a difficult time.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices I'm pleased to table five copies of the committee's report on the review of the Lobbyists Act dated November 2011. Copies of this report will be distributed to all the members today.

Introduction of Bills

Bill 24

Health Quality Council of Alberta Act

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and move first reading of Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act.

The proposed bill will give the Health Quality Council of Alberta expanded powers to investigate health system matters and have it report directly to the Legislative Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 24 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Bill 25

Child and Youth Advocate Act

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great privilege to move for first reading Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act.

The act would make the Child and Youth Advocate an officer of the Legislature and set up appropriate mandates for him. It would also provide for the establishment of a council for quality assurance, clarify provisions around the so-called publication ban, and provide for greater sharing of information about children in care or children in need with caregivers and others who are associated with those children.

I would move first reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Election Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce for first reading Bill 21, the Election Amendment Act, 2011, which will amend the Election Act to provide for a fixed election time period and, thus, allow all of us to prepare for elections with greater certainty.

I move first reading of Bill 21.

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Bill 22

Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce for first reading Bill 22, the Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011.

This bill contains amendments and housekeeping changes to a number of justice statutes. The changes in Bill 22 will increase clarity, fix a few errors, improve the functioning of Alberta's courts, and increase the effectiveness of our legislation.

I move first reading of Bill 22. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 22 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Order.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011.

This amendment is to empower landowners and to clear up any confusion that exists with the existing lap of legislation. It gives landowners as many options as possible when we're working with them and they're impacted by a potential major infrastructure project. It will also ensure full consultation, fair compensation, and full access to the courts.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 23 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011.

I'm very pleased to bring forward this very important piece of legislation. Impaired driving is something that affects all Albertans and continues to be a major safety concern for everyone on the road. This is a serious matter. Many alcohol-related collisions are preventable. This legislation focuses on improving safety on our roads by encouraging greater personal responsibility and behaviours that help save lives.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to table the appropriate number of copies of the Child and Youth Advocate's 2010-11 annual report. This is the first report provided by this particular youth advocate, who was appointed on June 1, and if the Child and Youth Advocate Act that I've just tabled is passed, this will be the last one tabled by a minister because the Speaker will be tabling future Child and Youth Advocate reports in the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Sherwood Park.

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As deputy chair of the Premier's Council on the Status of Persons with Disabilities it is my pleasure to table the appropriate number of copies of the annual report dated 2010-2011. The council works to improve the lives of Albertans, particularly those that have disabilities. They work on behalf of all Albertans to provide the Premier and the minister for seniors and community supports with advice for this Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the 2010-2011 annual report of the Seniors Advisory Council for Alberta. The council is a vital communications link that works with Albertans and seniors' organizations to share information about the issues that are important to seniors with government.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today I have three tablings from constituents. The first is from Hadi Schiestl, who is a resident of Lions Village Railtown. She and a number of other residents there are asking the government to please bring forward legislation on life-lease situations.

The second tabling that I have is from constituent Kent McKay. He is very supportive of the Royal Alberta Museum, the importance of it for Edmonton. He believes that it will help to revitalize our downtown core and that it represents our centennial legacy and an embodiment of our culture and that we should stop arguing and get on with it.

The final tabling is an e-mail from Ian O'Donnell, who is the chair of the development committee for the Downtown Edmonton Community League, so the local community league. He is writing to me for provincial support for the downtown arena, recognizing the province's role in making urban centres attractive to business investment and potential residents, and notes that we need to attract and retain talent. He views amenities and attractions as an important consideration.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) says, "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." Well, hon. members, that's what the standing orders say. I've notified the Assembly.

3:00

Orders of the Day

The Speaker: I've called Orders of the Day, which means that other things can come in, but there are some things that we have to conclude.

We have a privilege motion that hangs over from before, and I will call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to deal with that. We have a point of order that we have to deal with as well. We also have to deal with the provisions of Standing Order 58(1), which states that at the commencement of every Legislature the Assembly shall elect

(b) a Deputy Chair of Committees, according to the procedure set out in Schedule A with respect to the Speaker, with all necessary modifications.

And it should be done immediately, so that matter has to be dealt with, too.

Now that we've crossed the line, Government House Leader, did you want to attract my attention?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, Mr. Speaker. At the appropriate time, after you've dealt with the points of order and privilege, it would be my intention to ask for the attention of the House for two unanimous consent motions, the first to deal with the election of the Deputy Chair of Committees to be dealt with at 6 o'clock this evening and the second to allow a reversion to government business briefly for the purpose of allowing the tabling of supplementary estimates and the two associated government motions. That's what was done last fall, and it gives the opposition time. So at the appropriate time I'd request that you call on those two pieces.

The Speaker: Well, seeing that we're now into Orders of the Day and seeing that we're up against Standing Order 58(1) and as I've already indicated my intention to deal with the privilege motion and the point of order motion, I do believe, in terms of trying to set a schedule for this afternoon, that I would ask that the Government House Leader propose the suggestion that there be unanimous consent to do the election of the Deputy Chair of Committees at 6 o'clock tonight and see what happens.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Then I would request unanimous consent of the House to refer to section 58(1) and establish the earliest possible time at 6 o'clock p.m., rather than adjourning at the normal adjournment hour, to deal with the election of the Deputy Chair of Committees at that time.

The Speaker: This requires the unanimous consent of the Assembly to deal with this matter beyond the ordinary termination time of 6 o'clock. I will ask the two questions.

The Speaker: Then we will deal with the election of the Deputy Chair of Committees immediately after we deal with the privilege motion and the point of order.

Edmonton-Strathcona.

Privilege Misleading the House

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising in accordance with Standing Order 15(2) to raise a point of privilege, that on November 30, 2010, the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek interfered with the ability of members of this House to fulfill their duties when as Minister of Health and Wellness he made statements about a government document regarding the source of materials contained in that document titled Alberta's Health Legislation: Moving Forward, dated July 12, 2010.

It's our view that in mischaracterizing the source of this information, he deliberately misled the House and, in so doing, interfered with the ability of several members to fulfill their duty as Members of the Legislative Assembly.

I'd like to start first with preliminary matters. Points of privilege must be raised at the earliest opportunity. I believe this was done. The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood sent a notice concerning this point of privilege to your office, Mr. Speaker, on October 24, the first day of the fall sitting. Although the statements by the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek to which this point relates were made in the House in November and December 2010, a document which raises the question of the veracity of those statements only came into our possession just prior to the commencement of the fall sitting in October of 2011. That document was tabled in the House at the first possible opportunity on October 24, 2011. As such, it is our view that the point of privilege was raised in a timely manner and is in order.

I'd now like to address the substantive elements of the NDP opposition's point of privilege against the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek and former Minister of Health and Wellness. In terms of the form of contempt that we believe the member's actions took, I can refer to several authorities on points of privilege relating to deliberately misleading the House. House of Commons Procedure and Practice, 2nd edition, says on page 83 that "deliberately attempting to mislead the House" is considered a contempt of the House, and Erskine May, at page 132, states that "the Commons may treat the making of deliberately misleading statement as a contempt." I would also like to note, Mr. Speaker, that in one of your previous rulings on a point of privilege on November 7, 2007, at page 1860 in Hansard you said, "These purported questions of privilege allow members to allege that someone is deliberately misleading the Assembly, which is something they could not say in the ordinary course of debate under our rules of debate."

I'd now like to review the facts upon which we make this point of privilege, and it relates primarily to statements made by the member. I believe the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek deliberately misled the House in a statement he made on November 30, 2010. The statement is found on page 1691 of Hansard, in which the Member for Calgary-Mountain View raised a question concerning the government document titled Alberta's Health Legislation: Moving Forward, which he described as a plan "to bring in two-tiered American-style health care." The Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, who was Minister of Health and Wellness at the time, responded by saying:

It's a simple statement of fact that it is not a document that I authored. What it is is a document that reflects concerns, opinions, and comments from Albertans, and inasmuch as there are some things in there that we looked at and decided not to do – specifically, I went out and said that I'm not going to do this – we have to listen to what Albertans have to say.

To give further context to the minister's statements on November 30, one can also review additional statements made by the then Minister of Health and Wellness in response to further questioning from the opposition. On December 1, 2010, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood asked a question about: "a document laying out the government's ... plan to privatize health care was leaked to opposition parties," to which the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek responded:

There is no secret plan. There is no secret agenda. There is nothing on the table whatsoever to do with privatization. There is nothing there to do with a two-tier system. What we've made very clear and what I would ask this member to accept and understand is that there are Albertans out there who have opinions of a wide range. Whether we like them or not, whether we agree with them or not, they deserve to be heard, and all that the document reflected is what was heard.

Again, on December 2, 2010, the Member for Calgary-Mountain View asked about "the document which reveals the government's ... plan to introduce two-tiered American-style health care," and the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek said:

Mr. Speaker, I already said that this is a departmental document that reflected views, opinions, comments, and ideas by Albertans, so you might say that it came from a variety of sources right across the province.

And here is the important part, Mr. Speaker.

All that the department did was co-ordinate all of that, put it into one document, and said: here's what Albertans said. We looked at that document, and I said that there are things in here that we can do and things that we can't do.

So the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, who was minister of health at the time, contended that the document was simply a reflection of opinions of Albertans that the government had gathered and that the PowerPoint dated July 12 was merely a summary of the opinions expressed by Albertans.

Now, obviously, Mr. Speaker, when the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek made these statements at the time, members on this side of the House were understandably suspicious. If these documents merely summarized public opinion, where was the reference to the opinions we knew full well had also been expressed during the consultations, opinions calling on government to increase public funding and to increase the scope of public provision of health care to add, for instance, pharmaceutical therapy, preventative therapies, and dental care? These were also opinions held by Albertans. We knew they had been presented to the government during consultations, yet they did not appear in the so-called public opinion summary. Notwithstanding these circumstantial concerns, there was no direct evidence that the minister's statement that the document was merely a summary of Albertans' opinions was untrue.

That was the state of affairs until the point at which our offices received a second document, entitled Minister's Report, concerning the proposed Alberta health act and dated May 2010, two months before the document which was the source of the debate last fall and therefore a document that was prepared for the minister prior to the Alberta health legislation Moving Forward document, which is dated July 12, 2010. Mr. Speaker, I tabled this document for the information of all members on October 24, 2011.

First, let me outline why we believe this document to be relevant to the discussion of the subsequent document that's dated July 12, which was the subject of so much debate. A review of the first one, the May 2010 document, in comparison to the July document reveals that the former was clearly the source for the latter. Here are a few examples. Both documents propose that all health providers be allowed to work concurrently in both the public and the private health care systems. Both documents propose that the government regulate private insurance for publicly funded health services rather than continue to prohibit it. Both talk about the need for a process to determine which health services will be fully funded, partially funded, or unfunded.

The May and July documents bear additional similarities: both documents discuss the need for consistent approaches to designation and regulation of health facilities, both talk about flexible funding for out-of-province and out-of-country health services, and both talk about the current ban on queue-jumping and extra billing. The similarities between the two documents are such that it is reasonable to conclude that the May document is the source of the July document.

Now, the problem is that the next question becomes: well, did the May document actually arise from the opinions of Albertans? Perhaps that's what the then Minister of Health and Wellness meant when he said that the July PowerPoint was simply a summary of opinions from Albertans. Well, I would suggest that that's not the case. The appearance of the May document provides support for the fact that the July document was not merely a summary of public opinion in two ways. First and most importantly, the May document itself states that the source of the policy options contained in it, including the controversial policies that were the subject of debate in November last fall, is the ministry of health. The May 2010 document says on page 5 that "Alberta Health and Wellness has identified the elements listed below for consideration and direction."

The document goes on to list two elements, those that promote public confidence and those that "identify what services are funded and permit flexibility in how they are funded." On page 10 of the document from May the ministry writes about lifting the prohibition on private insurance for publicly funded services in order to "provide more flexibility to Albertans and the government for the funding of health services." This policy proposal also appeared in the July document and was one of the contentious issues discussed in debate last fall.

The key issue to the point being made today, however, is the quote that precedes this statement within the May document. "Alberta Health and Wellness is considering options to regulate private insurance for health services rather than having only a prohibition in the Act." Alberta Health and Wellness is considering the options, not Albertan opinions. Clearly, again it shows what the source of this policy is.

Further down on page 10 the document addresses the issue of physician opt-in/opt-out options. Now, this is another contentious policy issue that is commonly associated with increasing the privatization of health care. Nonetheless, the ministry document suggests that midwives are allowed to opt in and out, and it's not fair that they're allowed this option and doctors are not. For the point at hand the relevant quote from the May document is this: "Alberta Health and Wellness would like to be able to apply the same conditions to all health providers." So again the source of the policy is Alberta Health and Wellness. Indeed, the document itself acknowledges that this policy shift is in clear contradiction to the prevailing public view on the subject.

Now, the second reason the appearance of the May document demonstrates that the July document did not arise from summarizing Albertans' public opinions relates to the date . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, please excuse me for a second. Would you please take your seat?

Standing Order 15(1) and (2) at several occasions talks about a brief statement. The hon. member has now had nearly 15 minutes. I suppose it's subjective to determine what brief is, but to the point would be very helpful to all members as this is a private members' day, and brief usually would be several moments. If you would get to the point, that would really be helpful, I do believe, and if you could advise me as to how much more time you will require, that would help me fix in my mind the agenda for the remainder of the afternoon, which seems to be really, really plugged.

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would say that I've got about four minutes left. I believe it's important to review the document in question in order to make the case.

The Speaker: You just wasted 20 seconds. I'll give you four more minutes.

Ms Notley: The government has embarked on two sets of consultations with Albertans on health care since the last election, one in October of 2009 and one in June of 2010. The consultation of October 2009 produced a report dated January 2010, and that report made no mention of any of the policy provisions which were included in the July 2010 document.

We don't know exactly what the public consultations were, what they heard in June of 2010. However, we do know that they occurred after the May document was written. Clearly, consultations that took place after the document was written cannot be the source of that document. Even Tories are subject to the regular rules of space and time. Given that every component of the July PowerPoint had already been carefully constructed in the May document, it is clear that the June consultations were not the source of the July PowerPoint.

In summary, we know that the document prepared for the minister in May 2010 contains a list of proposals for significant changes to the health care system which would lead to more privately funded health care, and the document states that these proposals were identified by Alberta Health and Wellness for inclusion in either the Alberta Health Act or regulations. We also know that many of these same proposals appeared in the July 2010 government document. When members of the opposition asked the then Minister of Health and Wellness about those proposals, the minister and Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek told the House repeatedly that the document was no more than a collection of opinions.

Mr. Speaker, it's my submission that it's now a matter of applying the precedent in these cases to the facts I've just outlined. In previous rulings on points of privilege, for example November 7, 2007, you referred to the test that needs to be met, and it's outlined in House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 86, footnote 128, where it states:

The following elements have to be established when it is alleged that a Member is in contempt for deliberately misleading the House: one, it must be proven that the statement was misleading; two, it must be established that the Member making the statement knew [it] at the time . . . and three, that in making the statement, the Member intended to mislead the House.

Mr. Speaker, I believe I've demonstrated the first test, that the member's statement that the July 2010 document was simply a collection of Albertans' views on the health system was misleading. The May 2010 document, that we've since introduced, including proposals for privatization, says that those proposals were identified, in fact, by Alberta Health and Wellness. The second test is also met as the May 2010 document was prepared for the member in his capacity as minister of health at the time and is directed to him, and we can assume that he received it at that time and was aware of it. Finally, the third test is also met because the May 2010 document establishes that he had been briefed on the proposals, but when he was asked by the opposition in November about the other document, he repeatedly told the House in unequivocal language that the proposals were nothing more than opinions from the general public.

This was not merely a question of not knowing the answer, Mr. Speaker. Rather, it was a question of giving the Assembly the wrong answer over and over. I submit that the member not only misled the House but that he did so deliberately to avoid taking responsibility for controversial policies for increased privatization of our public health care system that were being very seriously considered within his ministry and by his caucus.

By misleading the House, the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek interfered with the ability of all members to do their duty. Health policy has been a top priority for Albertans, and proposals for privatization of aspects of the public health care system have been highly contentious. Albertans are concerned about this issue and see the Assembly as a key forum through which to hold the government accountable. By failing to acknowledge the actions of the ministry for which he was responsible at the time, the member gave false information to this House and thereby prevented an honest and open debate. It's a critical component of the obligations of members of this Assembly to hold the political heads of government departments accountable for the actions of those departments. When members of the House are intentionally misled about the actions of those departments, we cannot do that job.

Mr. Speaker, it is a principle of parliamentary practice that outside of making a point of privilege, it is unparliamentary and, indeed, prohibited for one member to allege that another has in any way lied or otherwise misled the House. That principle is a sound one and is premised on the collective understanding we share of the fundamentally important role that this Assembly plays in our democratic system. It is because of this role that I would suggest that members are in a position of trust, not only in relation to their colleagues in this Legislature but in relation to all Albertans. As such, incidents of misleading each other or Albertans must be treated seriously in order to maintain the reputation of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I would therefore ask that you find that a prima facie case against the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek exists and have this matter referred to the appropriate standing committee.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that statement was 21 minutes in length. I heard exactly what has transpired. Now, I have one question for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Your text: you read from it. You must have a written text in front of you. Is this correct?

Ms Notley: Yes.

The Speaker: Did you by way of courtesy provide this to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, or is this the first he's heard of this?

Ms Notley: No. I provided the House leader with particulars. This was written by me this morning.

The Speaker: That's what I mean. Has the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek received a copy of your submission prior to hearing it now in the House? Just yes or no.

Ms Notley: Not what I just wrote. He received particulars. I believe that if the House leader for the government provided him with my particulars, he received the particulars on Friday afternoon, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: He received the text that you gave today?

Ms Notley: No, just the particulars, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Okay. I just wanted to clarify in my head because there has to be a process here of fairness. So, hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, you've not heard any of this till now?

Mr. Zwozdesky: No.

The Speaker: Okay. Then I'll give you till tomorrow, if you wish, to respond. You have to have a chance to study this and to see this.

Nobody else has moved after the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona made the presentation, so I gather there are just the two.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, you wish to participate in this, too?

Mr. Chase: Very briefly.

The Speaker: Okay. I'll recognize you tomorrow, prior to, and then if this goes on a third day, it goes on.

Now we're going to move on to the next one. We have a point of order. Airdrie-Chestermere.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am bringing a point of order under Standing Order 23(h), (i), (j), and (l). It is regarding the Finance minister's comment that this province has no debt. I asked for the Blues. They are not ready yet for this, so I'll just cite from memory.

Essentially, this hon. minister said that I was factually incorrect on various issues and then proceeded to say that we as a province had no debt. The fact that he was making allegations against me that I had made some things up, made facts up: I would say that that also "imputes false and unavowed motives" to myself. It's insulting language. It also under (I) introduces a matter into debate that "offends the practices and precedents of this Assembly" in that it wasn't true because the practices of this Assembly are that you tell the truth in this Assembly and that you don't say things that don't meet that criteria.

With regard to the comment that he made, that this province has no debt, I just simply refer to the document that this Finance minister presented this morning, the second-quarter budget update. Specifically, on page 10 it lists direct borrowing for capital purposes, just in this budget, as $1.8 billion. On page 8 it goes through the different liabilities that this government has. In accumulated debt it talks about $828 million; liabilities for capital projects as it stands at the end of the second-quarter forecast, $5.2 billion; other liabilities, $7.6 billion; pension liabilities, $9.9 billion; as well as self-supporting lending organizations. But even if you just look at liabilities for capital projects, just look at that line, clearly in the last several years the government has indeed taken on debt to the tune of, as it says right in his own second-quarter budget estimate, $5.2 billion.

I would ask that the Finance minister correct his misstatement in that regard so that he doesn't introduce a matter into debate that offends the practices and precedents of this Assembly, which is to actually tell the truth when stating numbers like that.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Finance on this purported point of order.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think we can fix this very easily. What I should have said is no net debt because we have substantive dollars in the sustainability fund to cover any borrowing that's out there. If it makes the member happy, we'll add "net debt" into my comments.

An Hon. Member: How about being honest?

The Speaker: Whoa, whoa. There's more debate?

You know, if people didn't debate things in the question period, we wouldn't have these issues. The purpose of question period is to ask for information, not to have a debate, so if we didn't have a debate in the questions and answers, we wouldn't have these issues.

I think this is a dispute of facts. I think this is an exchange of debate. We've heard a point raised. We've heard a clarification given. I have no doubt at all that as soon as the supplementary estimates come in here, are introduced in this fall session, we're going to have all kinds of ample opportunity to debate this. We'll hear it again ad nauseam.

We're going to move on now to the election of the Deputy Chair of Committees under Standing Order 58(1). The chair has provided to all members the process. It is in your standing orders. I'm just going to briefly deal with this matter to provide the outline again.

Basically, the process is that the Speaker calls for nominations. Individuals who are interested may be nominated. I'd ask that there be a nomination time frame of no more than a minute to two minutes. It's not expected that those who are nominated, he or she, would have to give a speech. They would be asked by me if they're prepared to accept the nomination. When we've gone through that process and we have one, two, three, four, or whatever number that choose to do this, you have in the document attached the process for the way that the voting will occur and how you will walk to the polling station. It'll be conducted by the table officers.

I'm going to announce now that pursuant to the standing orders there will be an election for the position of Deputy Chair of Committees, and I'm now going to call for nominations from the floor.

Election of a Deputy Chair of Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to nominate the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek to the position of Deputy Chair of Committees. As you know, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek served as Deputy Government House Leader in this Assembly for a total of almost 11 years, so he's intimately familiar with the rules, proceedings, and standing orders of this House. This member is in his fifth term as an elected member of this Legislature, including four ministerial portfolios. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek has a long list of recognitions and awards, including a Queen's jubilee medal.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek is an exemplary member of this Assembly who is amply qualified to hold this position, so I urge all members today to elect him as our Deputy Chair of Committees.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek: will you accept the nomination?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Yes. I accept the nomination, and I thank the hon. member for nominating me.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege and honour to nominate the Member for Edmonton-Centre for the position of Deputy Chair of Committees, if that's the right term. I think everybody in this Assembly knows that this member is an enormously competent parliamentarian. She's well experienced. She's been House leader of the opposition since 2003. She has a formidable knowledge, which she has frequently drawn on to display, of parliamentary procedures, and she's very hard working.

I would like to point out to all members of this Assembly, Mr. Speaker, that it is relatively common for people who occupy this position to be from the opposition caucus. The current federal Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees of the Whole is from the opposition. There are similar situations in British Columbia, Nova Scotia, and Ontario. I think it would be, frankly, a breath of fresh air for a member from the opposition to occupy a position like this.

She is, as we all know, a committed parliamentarian, and she has shown over and over a passion for due process, for respect of the procedures, and for balance, Mr. Speaker. I think this member would be a terrific person for this position.

Thank you.

3:30

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, will you accept the nomination?

Ms Blakeman: Yes, I happily accept the nomination. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed an honour and a pleasure for me to nominate the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House to the position of Deputy Chair of Committees. He's been a trusted friend and colleague to many of us for many, many years. He served Albertans and members of this Assembly for over 30 years in such capacities as minister of environment, minister of agriculture, Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, Minister of Transportation, Minister of Infrastructure, minister of government services as well as numerous committees, too numerous to mention. He's also carried out these duties with a great degree of dedication and distinction.

He has already occupied the chair on numerous occasions when called upon to do so during the many late night sessions we've had. He has shown his abilities to carry out the duties of this position in an efficient and fair manner and has gained the respect of all members of this Assembly.

Having been in the chair myself as Deputy Speaker and Chair of Committees, I believe this member has the experience and working knowledge of the requirements of this position to serve us well. I ask all members of this Assembly to support the nomination of the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House: are you prepared to accept the nomination?

Mr. Lund: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I would be only too happy and honoured to serve as Deputy Chair of Committees.

The Speaker: Hon. members, are there further nominations? The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, it's my pleasure to nominate as Deputy Chair of Committees the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. This hon. member has served proudly in four ministries, has been in this House for 14 years, is an extremely bright, articulate individual, full of energy. I think that it would make for a very fair debate. He's very fair minded. He would make sure that everyone had an fair opportunity to respond.

You know, for someone who's one of the leaders of this House, as the Deputy Chair of Committees is – of course, certainly serving under your direction, Mr. Speaker – I think it's great to have someone from the economic engine of Canada and Alberta in that position. I think that the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo would be very fair minded as he oversaw the committee work. I ask all members – and I'm sure all members will be very happy and excited to have this opportunity to vote for the good Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: To the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo: are you prepared to accept the nomination?

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I believe in fair and square, not nail 'em and jail 'em, so yes, I do.

The Speaker: Are there additional nominations?

Having heard, hon. members, four individuals nominated and four individuals accepted, before we move forward, now that all members know who are participating of the four who have agreed to accept the nominations, is there any desire on any member to withdraw at this point?

Well, then, we are going to prepare. We are going to move forward now. I'll call the nominations closed, and the office of the Clerk will now immediately prepare and post an alphabetical list of members' names nominated as candidates for the election to the position of Deputy Chair of Committees. In a few minutes from now ballot papers will be provided to all members. You will see the manner in which you will proceed to the election box. The boxes will be on this table. You will come down the aisles in which you sit, just go through, record it, and vote in a very secret ballot way. This process is now under way. Take a few minutes, take a little refreshment, and we'll be back.

A number have asked the question about the process: how long is this going to take? Well, we don't know, but we won't call you back to vote until 3:45, so you've got nine minutes, okay? Be back by that time. I don't know, Clerk, if we can even ring the bells a minute or so before that.

[The Assembly recessed from 3:35 p.m. to 3:45 p.m. while the lists of candidates were posted]

The Speaker: Hon. members, there are four ballot boxes in front on the Clerk's table. In the documentation we sent you, we indicated the manner in which people should proceed, so we'll ask the hon. Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation to lead that row up this way and the hon. Deputy Speaker to lead that row, and you just follow down sequentially.

The Speaker: Have all members voted who wish to vote? No member has not availed themselves of the opportunity to vote?

Okay. Then the table officers will retire with the Sergeant-at-Arms to count the ballots, and we'll return shortly. The bell will be rung for one minute to give you one minute to get back into the Assembly. This may take up to 10 minutes or something.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the rules are such that the Clerk will ring the bells for one minute to recall members to their seats. That has been done.

When all members are seated, the Clerk will announce the number of ballots cast, the number of spoiled ballots, and the number of votes required to achieve the 50 per cent plus one majority. If one candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, the Clerk will announce the name of that member to the Assembly. If no candidate receives a majority of the votes cast, the Clerk will announce the name of the candidate having the least number of total votes cast, which will be excluded from subsequent ballots. If every candidate receives the same number of votes, no name will be excluded from the next ballot.

Subsequent ballots will be conducted in the manner prescribed and will continue until such time as a candidate is elected Deputy Chair of Committees upon having received a majority of the votes cast. At any time after the result of the first ballot has been declared but before the commencement of the second or subsequent ballot, a candidate may withdraw from the election, which will then proceed as if such member had not been nominated.

The Clerk: Mr. Speaker, the number of ballots cast for the position of Deputy Chair of Committees, 67; the number of spoiled ballots, zero; the number of votes required to achieve the 50 per cent plus one majority, 34. The member having received the majority of the votes cast, Mr. Zwozdesky. Mr. Zwozdesky is the Deputy Chair of Committees for the Legislative Assembly of Alberta for the 27th Legislature. [applause]

The Speaker: Congratulations to the new Deputy Chair of Committees.

Hon. members, we will continue the Routine for the day. I'm now going to call on the hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I indicated to you earlier today, I have circulated to opposition House leaders an intention to bring forward a request for unanimous consent, as we did last fall at this time, to revert to government business for a short period of time this afternoon to allow for the delivery of a message from His Honour with respect to supplementary estimates, the tabling of a quarterly budget report, the tabling of the supplementary estimates, and dealing with government motions 23 and 24, of which 24 is not debatable. Just that short piece. I'd ask for the unanimous consent of the House to revert to government business to accomplish that specific piece of business.

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. members, there is a request for unanimous consent. On the request put forward by the hon. Government House Leader, two questions. Would all hon. members in the Assembly who agree please say yes? If you're opposed, say no.

Motions for Returns

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Occupational Cancer Rates

M17. Mr. Chase moved that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of the analysis by employment and immigration on occupational cancer rates referenced on page 38, note 14, of the April 2010 report of the Auditor General of Alberta.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to the government's response and the opportunity to respond to the response.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, with respect to this motion for a return I will have to advise that the government will be asking that we reject this motion for a return. It refers to a copy of the analysis by employment and immigration on occupational cancer rates referenced on page 38, note 14, of the April 2010 report of the Auditor General.

In reporting to the Auditor General, Mr. Speaker, the former department of employment and immigration made an error in citing an incorrect number from a reference. The error was corrected and explained to the Auditor General after the report was complete. In the report a footnote that reads, "Analysis by the Department" in fact refers to the number that was quoted incorrectly. As such, there is no additional information on the analysis by the department on the occupational cancer rates.

That being said, if the hon. member is interested in pursuing that particular topic with me, I would be more than happy to zero in on the type of information he is wishing to get and to work with him in terms of whether that information might be made available or not.

With respect to the specific request there is no analysis because it actually was an error in the report which was later corrected with the Auditor General.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to close the debate.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the hon. House leader's offer to work with me. My request goes beyond a single number. It's how the information on occupational cancer rates was arrived at. It's the procedure that I'm looking for as opposed to a specific number.

I appreciate, for example, that a former hon. member, Richard Magnus, who represented Calgary-North Hill, did tremendous work in providing firefighters with further extension of cancer recognition. The hon. member across the floor, now the hon. Minister of Education, who was formerly the minister of employment and immigration, took what Richard Magnus had begun and further extended the occupational cancer rate information for firefighters.

Mr. Speaker, my concern is that I believe cancer rates are underreported, not necessarily deliberately, by employment and immigration. I think what happens is that as people retire, leave their jobs, we lose a tremendous amount of this information. I think that in order for us to be accurate and provide benefits for people who have suffered from cancer which resulted from the types of jobs they were doing – firefighters is an obvious one, but I've previously mentioned how first responders come into contact with a number of the carcinogens which firefighters experience.

In terms of closing debate, I will take the hon. House leader, the new Minister of Human Services, at his offer. Whatever information he can provide me with and, obviously, possibly provide this House with – I'd put it that way – on how these statistics are calculated would be very beneficial.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion for a Return 17 lost]

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair would like to call the committee to order.

Bill 203

Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It is with pleasure that I rise to open Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act.

I'd like to thank all of my colleagues from all corners of the House for sharing their thoughts and comments during second reading. Of course, that was back in the spring. I'd also like to thank all ministers in each of the related departments for their unanimous support of the bill. Considering the timing of the debate, it's important to quickly review the key components of the bill.

This act was simply created to improve the lives of Albertans since it promotes not only the importance of outdoor activities but also draws attention to the fact that living an active lifestyle contributes to overall well-being. Now, Mr. Chair, although it's not a lengthy bill at all, the message it provides is very important. In section 1 it reads: "In recognition of the importance of outdoor recreation to the people of Alberta, the second weekend of April in each year shall be known as "Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend".

This time of year provides Albertans with the perfect opportunity to get outside to enjoy all that our wonderful province has to offer. Now, the long, cold winter, that we've been rather rudely reminded of very lately, will be replaced – yes, it will – at that time of the year with warmer temperatures and longer days, and at that time there will still be snow in the mountains, so Albertans can get their last shot at their favourite winter activity. Meanwhile in the rest of the province everything is finally going to be thawing out, and this might just be the nudge that a great percentage of Albertans are going to need to finally get back outside and bike, hike, jog, golf, or visit farms or forests, waterways, ranches, parklands, mountains, and more.

Albertans, Mr. Chair, are responsible for the great success of government-recognized occasions such as Family Day and arts weekend, and I'm convinced that Alberta GO weekend will be every bit as successful. Now, I hope that colleagues are aware that in America they celebrate a similar sort of event, and there is overwhelming participation and success. In Canada, though, we would be at the front of the pack with this.

Part of the good news is that the only start-up cost is promoting the day. The rest is up to community groups and organizations, who can't wait to make this their own. As a matter of fact, Mr. Chair, asking just one time, I've had over a hundred letters of support from all sorts of groups across Alberta – municipalities, recreation and sports clubs, seniors' councils, health organizations, numerous other important groups – and the message has been consistent. The possibilities are endless.

Now, Mr. Chair, Albertans take a great deal of pride in our natural landscape, and like me they don't take it for granted. That's why it's important that we acknowledge the appreciation Albertans have for our province through legislation such as the Alberta GO weekend act. Bill 203 will also promote our internal tourism sector while encouraging Albertans to explore their pristine natural environment.

We all know that living an active lifestyle, which includes getting outdoors, can improve the overall well-being of one's body and mind, and overwhelming medical research asserts this. It's counterproductive, in my humble opinion, to just complain about addictions and type 2 diabetes and heart disease and osteoporosis, cancer, stroke, obesity, or that people of all ages are spending too much time cooped up in front of one type of screen or another. Now, Mr. Chair, I recognize that Bill 203 is not the final answer to the question as to how to ensure that Albertans become more active, but it would be a huge, important piece of the solution which complements other related government initiatives which increase active living.

Bill 203 will impact Albertans' lives on many levels. We must continue to inspire people to value and enjoy our natural heritage as well as the benefits they provide for current and future generations. I believe that this bill is in the interest of all Albertans, and I earnestly encourage and invite all members to vote in support of Bill 203. Mr. Chair, this bill passed quickly and easily in first and second readings, and I trust that all members will ensure that this will be the case, indeed, in committee.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would never want to suggest that I was opposed to anything that promoted healthy lifestyles. As the hon. member pointed out, this is just a first step, but I would like to see it taken considerably further than just suggesting that a weekend in April, the second weekend of April, be considered for fitness.

The hon. member talked about potentially getting away from statistics, but it's those statistics that provide the need and the encouragement for such an activity weekend as the member is suggesting. Alberta, well, Canada for that matter has a significant number of deaths due to heart and stroke. Childhood obesity in Alberta in particular is growing at a very frightening rate, and one of the ways to combat obesity, beyond dealing with the most important factor, which is poverty, is exercise.

As a former teacher for 34 years I promoted physical fitness by example. I'm rather pleased to say that a number of students chose to participate as opposed to were forced to participate, as the government has previously done, by mandating daily exercise. Frequently students, regardless of the season, when I taught elementary on a Friday afternoon, would choose to participate in outdoor pursuits. We would go on lengthy runs or lengthy cross-country skis, depending on what the weather conditions were. As a result, a number of my former students, who got sort of bitten at an early age, have gone on to compete in triathlons and marathons, in the TransRockies mountain bicycle race. I'm pleased that the enthusiasm that I showed in the classroom and for fitness in general carried over, but I don't believe that simply designating a day is going to have much of an effect and certainly not the desired effect.

When the government decided through Don Getty and some of the misfortunes that Don Getty's son experienced to set aside a day in February called Family Day, it was considered a holiday. It was a specific day that was set aside in recognition of the need for families to get together and enjoy each other's company. The government went beyond just mandating it. It became an Alberta provincial holiday, and it was recognized.

This particular bill, which, incidentally, I am supporting, is the lowest level of encouragement that the government could possibly provide. If the government is truly serious about increasing fitness and getting individuals involved in the process, then there are ways to do it, and that's increasing, for example, our parks and protected areas.

So many times I've called on the government, whether it's the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation or the minister of the environment or the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. I've said, "Set aside the Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kôp area, that is part of the Castle-Crown," which unfortunately is being overrun with clear-cutting. If you want to create and promote recreation, then provide parks for Albertans to recreate within. Maintain the trails so that they can hike. April, for example, is Alberta's snowiest month, so there is the possibility that some people at lower altitudes would be hiking while others at higher altitudes would be enjoying cross-country skiing, alpine skiing, climbing what may be left of icefalls.

These are all worthwhile activities, but they require more than just a verbal statement that in April the second week is get outdoors weekend. I don't see how that's going to promote a significant number of people getting involved. However, to the hon. member's credit, if it gets even a few out, then the bill has value. I want to see the next steps. I want to see the government supporting our parks and recreation. I want to see the government funding ice arenas instead of selling off part of Olympic Park for condominium development or business offices or a hotel. Put the money into improving the ski jump, improving the luge. In other words, put your money where your mouth is.

Thank you.

The Chair: Does any other hon. member wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise today in Committee of the Whole and share my comments on Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act. Before I begin, I would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed for all of his hard work he has put into drafting this particular piece of legislation. I feel that the bill provides an excellent opportunity to step back and rethink about the attitudes and approaches surrounding a very important issue, an issue that can be characterized as a healthy and active Alberta and Albertan.

Today, Mr. Chairman, I would like to focus the majority of my comments on the preamble of this particular bill; specifically, the part pertaining to the medical benefits of the act. For the record I'm referring to the initial line in the preamble. It reads: "Whereas there are significant health and lifestyle benefits associated with active living and outdoor activity."

Mr. Chairman, it is very important to understand the value of a healthy and active lifestyle along with the corresponding medical benefits. The link between physical activity and a person's health is very strong and at times can be challenging for individuals. Not only does a physically active lifestyle lead to a longer life expectancy and improve one's quality of life; it also reduces stress, which in itself is a tremendous medical benefit.

During a time when obesity rates in this province are of epidemic proportion and continue to rise exponentially, understanding the value of a healthy lifestyle is of the utmost importance, and I can tell that the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed strongly believes in encouraging Albertans to lead a healthy lifestyle. I certainly commend him for taking this particular approach and call to action.

Mr. Chairman, quite clearly, there are significant health and lifestyle benefits associated with active living and outdoor activity, and at times we have to prompt it so that it can move forward. That leaves little to be disputed around this particular issue. Physical activity contributes to health and wellness in a number of ways. One is that being active decreases a person's risk for cardiovascular disease, and in companion to that, it will have long-term and short-term benefits returned in terms of the investment that we make in our health and wellness for Albertans.

Physical activity also helps the body to use and become more efficient in terms of weight loss and those other conditions that would benefit in the direction of a healthy lifestyle. Studies also show that 60 per cent of Canadian adults are obese or overweight, and roughly half of Canadians are deemed to be physically inactive. That's why this is a very good direction.

Likewise, Mr. Chairman, it is estimated that becoming physically active can reduce the risk of heart attack by as much as 55 per cent by taking up and moving forward to promote and engage in a healthy lifestyle. Quite clearly, this is the link between being physically active and living a very healthy life.

Another medical benefit of a physically active lifestyle includes that it can increase your basal metabolic rate. At times, as you're getting older and with the growing population, this particular health rate has a tendency to slow down, so anything that an individual can do to up their basal metabolic rate really helps decrease your appetite and reduces adipose tissue, or body fat.

Mr. Chairman, regular exercise is a very important part of a healthy lifestyle for adults, children, and youth, and Bill 203 intends to act as that initiative to get Albertans excited about exercising regularly. People who lead an active lifestyle are less likely to get ill and more likely to live longer. Exercise not only makes you more physically fit, but it also improves your mental and physical well-being, and it's important that it become more and more a part of our lifestyle.

Mr. Chairman, to be physically active and to recognize the benefits of such does not mean that you have to work out for many hours a day. Physical activity can take many forms and should be encouraged in one's daily work routine. Walking, as an example, is a very good physical activity, one that is not expensive. If you go out to the malls, you notice that the malls have become more comfortable gathering spaces, and you see a lot of people taking up the challenge to do walking inside malls. After all, especially in Edmonton, we are a winter city. Inactivity has an adverse medical effect, which can cost not only lives, but in the end it causes a lot of expenditures on the health and wellness side for our government. As well, as we all know, the costs associated with poor health are not insignificant. It puts a strain on our health care system, and even from a corporate perspective absenteeism and other costs in our medical system are attributed to it.

The combination of a poor diet and lack of physical activity is directly linked to heart disease and cardiovascular disease. We do have a rise of type 2 diabetes in this particular province, and that's also a concern. In Canada we are also currently ranked the third highest in the world when it comes to obesity rates and the third lowest in the world when it comes to walking and other leisure activities. We can see, as demonstrated by the important criteria that are outlined in this piece of legislation, that there is a need for promoting physical activity and making it fun for all to enjoy.

Bill 203 intends to make physical activity fun. It also has several health and wellness advantages not only for an individual, but I can see that the corporate sector could also step up and engage their employee complements right across the province to be more mindful of engaging in more physical activity. Who knows? They may even stretch to promote something that would occur on a particular weekend.

Bill 203 is a reasonable step to take towards promoting healthy lifestyles across our great province. The preamble acknowledges one of the major reasons for having this bill, which is the health and lifestyle benefits associated with active living and outdoor activity. If this preamble was not included in the bill, we would be missing an important link between health benefits and living an active lifestyle.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I would again like to stress the importance of this particular Bill 203. It maintains that the benefits of promotion and participation in the great outdoors weekend can be far reaching, and it could shift a cultural response from Albertans. This weekend has the potential to improve both the physical and mental well-being of Albertans. Such active living can lead to a longer life, reduce stress, and improve overall quality of life. After all, health and wellness are priorities for our government and should be for all Albertans as well.

I would again like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed for his hard work that went into drafting this particular bill. I will be in support of Bill 203, and I urge all of my hon. colleagues to do the same.

Thank you so much, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Any other hon. members? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I am pleased to rise today in Committee of the Whole and speak to Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

I would first like to thank my hon. colleague for this important piece of legislation. The bill that we are discussing today is a meaningful way to further encourage Albertans to participate in healthy outdoor fun through the implementation of an Alberta get outdoors weekend. The objective of Bill 203 is to create a weekend every year during which Albertans are encouraged to get outside, be active, and take advantage of all that this great province has to offer. It is important that this weekend is not just a one-time event and that we, instead, implement it as an annual celebration of outdoor recreational activities in Alberta.

Today I would like to focus on section 1 of Bill 203 as it deals with the need to make the Alberta get outdoors weekend an annual one. The vision that we would like to accomplish through this bill is to see a province where citizens are much more active in the great outdoors. While it may only begin with one weekend a year, this initiative has the potential to raise awareness all year long. In other words, this bill is about creating and implementing a vision for future generations. The government of Alberta is committed to continued support of Albertans leading active, healthy lives. Specifically, this bill will help us achieve this goal because it will promote lasting health effects to the people of Alberta.

Mr. Chairman, we need to encourage Albertans to get outside and partake in an activity that they love or to try something new. As well, this is not simply about getting individuals involved. It is about involving whole communities through local events. As I see it, this bill would be a wonderful way to revitalize community spirit across the province and to create a greater sense of inclusiveness. The weekend would encourage participation by all citizens, making their lifestyles more active and healthy. Also, by making this weekend an annual event, communities would be able to plan events for their areas and advertise community and scheduled activities that could become family traditions.

In many ways we can relate this proposed weekend to Family Day in February, in which many people plan and take part in activities aimed at the whole family. This is a day that brings families together, strengthening their bonds with their community by encouraging them to participate in special events. It becomes something that people can look forward to and plan for every year. As section 1 of this bill suggests, this is something that the government of Alberta is committed to supporting. By combining this opportunity for community involvement with the promotion of outdoor physical activity, an Alberta get outdoors weekend could help families take up and maintain healthy lifestyles together.

There is at least one good example of such specialized events just south of the border. The United States has implemented National Get Outdoors Day. This annual event, which began in 2008, takes place in June and encourages all Americans to take part in healthy outdoor fun. The goal they have set for their national event is to offer opportunities for citizens to experience traditional and nontraditional types of outdoor activities. Mr. Chairman, the U.S. government is hoping to connect people back to public lands and to reconnect them with the great outdoors. By making this an annual event, various communities are able to get involved and plan specific events for their area, making it a more unique and special occasion.

A planned weekend for physical activity can go a long way in assisting Albertans with leading healthy lifestyles, which is why this government remains committed to ensuring that we have these opportunities annually, as is clearly articulated in the wording of section 1 of the bill.

I think the city of Denver is a wonderful example of what a community can do with an annual event like Get Outdoors Day. Because Get Outdoors Day is celebrated each year, Denver is able to plan elaborate community activities in advance to bring the citizens of the area out to enjoy the great outdoors. Denver incorporates a 10-kilometre sports walk, camping equipment demonstrations, canoeing, fishing, skiing, mountain biking, and many other events, all for the enjoyment of the public. It goes beyond just the physical activities, with information sessions also offered on general wellness, nutrition, and outdoor safety.

While I believe that we are already doing a lot to encourage outdoor activity, Alberta's children and adults alike are now less connected to the outdoors than in previous generations. According to the findings from the Canadian Community Health Survey in 2004 26 per cent of Canadian children and adolescents aged two to 17 were overweight or obese. Also, the report concluded that for children aged two to 11 and for adolescents aged 12 to 17, the likelihood of being overweight or obese tends to rise as time that is spent watching TV, playing video games, or using the computer increases.

As is suggested in section 1 of this bill, one of the benefits of having an annual Alberta get outdoors weekend would be to assist in countering these negative trends by providing kids and their families with an abundance of practical and fun outdoor activities. Active living can lead to a longer life, reduce stress, and improve Albertans' quality of life, which is why I think it is such a significant issue to be brought to the forefront of public awareness.

Mr. Chairman, Alberta has spectacular scenery, diverse wildlife, and numerous recreational opportunities. We are lucky as Albertans to have this beautiful province to call home. I feel that having an annual Alberta get outdoors weekend will encourage us to take advantage of our magnificent and readily available natural beauty while also promoting significant health and lifestyle benefits through active living. By encouraging the enjoyment of many outdoor attractions, we can show Albertans how easy and fun it is to be active.

Having a yearly scheduled event will give communities the opportunity to plan events in advance that will lead to further enjoyment of Alberta's vast natural landscapes. Ultimately, the main goal of this bill is to encourage individuals to get outdoors, get some exercise, and to have fun, and I believe that Bill 203 will do just that.

Mr. Chairman, Bill 203 is a beneficial piece of legislation, and I would like to thank again the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed for bringing it forward.

With that, I will conclude my comments. I look forward to the remainder of the debate. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise today in Committee of the Whole to speak to Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act. Debates around this act so far have been productive, and already we've learned so much about the positive effects of physical activity on our well-being, and I think those are indisputable. We've become acquainted with similar events in other jurisdictions and reacquainted with initiatives already in place in our province.

That's part of the intent of this bill, and I want to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed for all of his efforts in raising awareness in this matter. I know physical activity and health and well-being are a big part of this member's life. He climbed a certain mountain at least a couple of times and, I think, many others and, obviously, didn't fall off. In fact, it might just be the kind of boost that we need to get us outdoors more often.

Mr. Chairman, there is a strong basis for passing this bill, and there are a number of reasons for choosing the second weekend in April for the Alberta get outdoors weekend. In fact, I think it's great that we would establish what will likely become a great Alberta tradition. This will be my focus. As stated earlier, section 1 of Bill 203 reads: "In recognition of the importance of outdoor recreation to the people of Alberta, the second weekend of April in each year shall be known as 'Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend.'"

Mr. Chairman, the first reason that comes to mind for choosing this particular weekend is actually a question: why not? We are built to experience the outdoors, and we're eager to spend time outside. This is another excuse to do that, and it's a good one. By this time in April the snow is all but gone, hopefully much earlier. Who in Alberta is not tempted to engage in outdoor activities at that time? Not just adults, but kids are reminded at the same time that they need to get their bikes out of the garage and out of the shed, that footballs, baseball bats and balls, and soccer gear need to come out. On the second weekend in April golfers are also highly motivated – highly motivated – to hit the greens.

Mr. Chairman, the point that I'm trying to make here is that by April virtually every Albertan eagerly awaits the chance to get outdoors, so why not make the second weekend in April the official Alberta get outdoors weekend?

Another benefit of choosing this date includes the opportunity to practise both summer and winter sports. We can start to get outside, but we can still partake in winter sports. There's still some skiing going on in the mountains, but the golf courses are also starting to open up, or certainly the driving ranges. Soccer and baseball fields might not be ready, but sidewalks and bike trails and maybe even backyards are.

Mr. Chairman, walking or running on those urban parkland trails after a long winter is always a pleasure. It's an opportunity to breathe fresh air, relax, walk the dog, or spend some quality time with the family. Students can resume their favourite playground activities. Schoolchildren can go outside. It's great for a DPA and all sorts of initiatives like that to get the kids out. This bill aligns well with other learning activities that are already taking place in our classrooms, so there are many direct and indirect benefits. Kindergarten to grade 12 phys ed programs, like the DPA that we were just talking about, say that students must have the opportunity to participate in five dimensions of physical activities, which includes activities in an alternate environment, for example aquatics and outdoor sports.

I think the point is that it's a reminder that we need to get outside. We need to think about it. But we need to do more than think about; we need to actually do something about it. I think that if this raises awareness – and I'm sure it will – for Albertans to get outside and get physical, then it's certainly well worth while.

I urge all members of the Assembly to support this bill and the date chosen for the Alberta get outdoors weekend. I think April is the perfect time, so I'll be supporting this bill.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Any other hon. members wishing to speak?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call on the bill's sponsor, the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed, to close the debate.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. It is indeed a pleasure to rise once more to offer concluding remarks for Committee of the Whole debate on Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act. I would like to thank all members that participated in committee as well as during first and second reading.

This bill will ensure that we acknowledge the importance of outdoor recreation and that we are committed to improving the mental, physical, and environmental benefits of outdoor recreation. We'll also recognize that there are significant health and lifestyle benefits associated with active living and outdoor activity.

Mr. Chair, I believe that the current wording of the bill accurately reflects the objective and the intention that was debated in second reading.

Now, Mr. Chair, a point of clarification if I may. I'm just wondering exactly how many minutes are remaining in my concluding speech.

The Chair: You have four more minutes.

Mr. Rodney: Okay. Because there have been people from around the province who have asked that I read their names in. These are organizations of all kinds that took the time to write in. I sent out one single e-mail about a year ago saying: do you like the idea or do you not?

With the time that we have remaining, these are the names. Feel free to let me know when the time is out so that we can have a vote before the end of our time span here. The town of Sylvan Lake; the town of Devon; the county of Barrhead; the town of Crossfield; the city of Leduc; Spirit River; Linda Nelson, deputy chief administrative officer; the town of Coalhurst; the town of Hinton; the village of Strome; the town of Sexsmith; NPRL manager; president of Alberta 55 plus; provincial commissioner, Girl Guides of Canada, Alberta; the town of Killam; administrative assistant, the town of Black Diamond; the village of Warburg – I see all of the members are just very curious to see if they had something from their particular constituency, but I can assure you that it's from all over the province – the village of Chauvin; Hines Creek; Youngstown; the town of Stavely; the town of Bowden; the town of Vulcan; Fort Macleod; InMotion Network; recreation and parks, Parkland county; the town of Bon Accord; Alberta Centre for Active Living; Chris Brookes, Alberta Snowmobile Association; 2010 ABA president; NWAB.

Do we still have enough time to go through the rest?

The Chair: You have one minute and 49 seconds.

Mr. Rodney: One minute. Thank you.

Lac La Biche, Rainbow Lake, Boys & Girls Clubs, Valleyview, Ever Active Schools. I don't want to run out of time completely. I'll mention the rest, if there is time, during third reading.

Mr. Chair, as you can see, there are all sorts of stakeholders, all sorts of groups from across the province. People of every age and activity level and activity style are very interested in helping to promote this.

Again, I just encourage all members to vote in favour of Bill 203. If passed, it will just take one more step forward in improving the health and well-being of Albertans.

With that, Mr. Chair, I move to adjourn debate and call the question in Committee of the Whole on private member's Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: I just want to clarify that you called for a motion to close the debate.

Mr. Rodney: Agreed. Close the debate. Thank you for the clarification.

The Chair: We have no other speakers, and the sponsor of the bill has closed the debate, so the chair shall now call the question.

[The clauses of Bill 203 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chair: Opposed? Carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration a certain bill. The committee reports the following bill: Bill 203.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the report by the hon. Member for Strathcona, does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 204 Justice System Monitoring Act

[Debate adjourned May 9: Mrs. Sarich speaking]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I know my time is short, but with the allotted time I'm very pleased to speak to the private member's bill put forward by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, Bill 204, the Justice System Monitoring Act. I certainly congratulate the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek for the foresight and the leadership in bringing forward this private member's bill.

The act touches on one of perhaps our most cherished principles, that of accountability. I never forget who my bosses are, the people of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, proud Albertans as are other members of this House. And when your bosses are upset, you listen. My bosses are very upset when it comes to the issue of some of the handling of things by this government. They have called me, and they want to know what the heck is going on relative to the issue of justice monitoring.

When we look at the cold, hard facts of the government's mismanagement, Mr. Speaker, we certainly hold some various dubious records in the Canadian court system. We are first in defendants not showing up for their court date. We're second in the length of time to complete a court case, at 270 days. The last fact concerns me perhaps the most, that 56 per cent of people in custody have not been convicted of the crime. If people are guilty, get them in front of a judge and jury. That's what my citizens are telling me and what Albertans, I know, have been telling this government. If they're not, set them free to live their lives as Albertans. Well, this government continues to fiddle, blind to the smoke and fire around them.

We are paying attention, none more so than the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek. She was the Solicitor General and a proud member under Premier Klein, pertaining to her tireless efforts in preventing the exploitation of abused children. No one in this House has done more for the victims of crime.

Ultimately, my theory is that justice delayed is certainly justice denied. It's a lot like health care in this province. To give you a small example, my constituents, seniors, were promised a long-term care facility over three years ago by the PC government. As they remain cooped up in acute-care beds on the third and fourth floors of our hospital, clearly, they made a commitment and haven't lived up to it. In fact, they still have not, if you can believe this, even broken ground on the new facility, that was announced three years ago. The fact is that they've had four to five press announcements but at this point have not even broken ground. That's a small example of what has not been working within this government.

The Justice System Monitoring Act will track very important points: the length of time from laying a charge until a concluding verdict, the total time for court hearings in a case, the length of time between reporting an offence and laying a charge, the number of delays exceeding three months, the number of prosecutions involved in each file – need I go on? – the number of adjournments granted, the number of trials that begin on their designated day, and the approximate cost of delays in terms of peace officers, prosecutors, as well as witnesses, victims, and jurors.

The way that this bill works is very simple. The ministry will have six months after the calendar year-end to present a report online providing the statistics outlined in the act. If the House is not sitting, the report must be tabled within 15 days of the next sitting. The tabled report will be referred to the relevant committee. Six months after the committee receives the data, they will report to this House. The minister will have three months after the committee report to respond. This, Mr. Speaker, is true accountability.

Now, I know that I only have a minute or so to conclude, so I will of course keep my comments relative to this, on private members' day, in the time to go. One argument that should be made, very relevant to this important point, is that old story of jurisdiction. You know, one argument that will be made . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt you, but the time limit for consideration of this item is concluded.

5:00 Motions Other than Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Postsecondary Student Funding Review

506. Ms Woo-Paw moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to review the procedures and rules that determine postsecondary student funding to ensure that student funding meets the diverse and evolving needs of students in the 21st century.

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise today and open debate on Motion 506, which urges the government to review postsecondary student funding. I'm proposing this motion in order to express concerns that I have heard from young Albertans about the current structure of student funding.

We already have some of the best postsecondary institutions in the world, and ensuring that funding for students who attend these institutions is viable and adequate is of the utmost importance. To be clear, I don't think a complete overhaul of our current student funding structure is necessary. The affordability framework, published in 2006, acknowledges that affordability is key to raising postsecondary participation and attainment levels. But demographics have changed in the past five years, and to respond to such changes, we must re-evaluate student funding policies. The age of students is also increasing as over half of postsecondary students are now over the age of 25. Students are also working more than ever before, with over 70 per cent of students holding a job while they continue their studies.

While these demographic shifts affect all students, I believe they especially impact individuals studying part-time. Mr. Speaker, we have over 85,000 part-time students studying at postsecondary institutions in our province. It is often the case that part-time students have full-time jobs, families, and other responsibilities that make their postsecondary commitments especially challenging.

In discussions with students and faculty members as well as members of the various postsecondary student associations, which represent well over 120,000 students, individuals raised concerns about the accessibility of funding for part-time students. Currently part-time students are unable to access the same opportunities for bursaries and scholarships as full-time students. While I understand the need to differentiate between part-time and full-time funding, I think it's important to review the funding in place so that students studying part-time have equitable access to bursaries and scholarship programs as well as adequate funds.

Indeed, student leaders raised concerns that part-time students are more likely to visit campus food banks than are full-time students. These campus food banks are often the last resource for students who are having trouble making ends meet. While I commend the Ministry of Advanced Education and Technology for programs such as the Alberta part-time bursary, I think it's important to review the range of programs within the ministry to ensure the needs of part-time students are met.

In addition to discussing part-time student funding, I also want to mention the importance of funding for those who wish to conduct part of their studies or broaden their studies in a foreign country. In the 21st century the benefits of international learning experiences are well recognized. There are also increasing opportunities for students to capitalize on in major Asian institutions such as in India and China. Our government understands the importance of competing on the global stage and contributing to the global community. In my opinion, one of the best ways to ensure that Albertans are global citizens is to provide needed supports for students who can benefit from international studies such as exposure to different cultures, an opportunity to learn or enhance a second or third language, and to learn different ways of addressing issues or solving problems. As the importance and level of interest for international studies is expected to increase, ensuring our funding criteria and assessment processes are responsive to current contexts is critical and should be achieved through a comprehensive review.

Finally, I want to briefly discuss the importance of completing a comprehensive review of student funding in the immediate future. There are about 600,000 Albertans aged 20 to 29 right now, Mr. Speaker. This figure will not be higher for at least 20 years according to the Minister of Finance's medium-growth scenario. In other words, the number of Albertans who are of the typical age for postsecondary students is at its peak right now, and these students will be the leaders and shapers of our province over the next several decades. It is therefore imperative that we take action now to ensure our policies and programs are truly responsive to the needs of the people the programs are intended to support.

Mr. Speaker, one of Alberta's most urgent issues is ensuring that we have a sufficient pool of an educated and skilled workforce. Failing to adequately support the growing number of learners who are eager to obtain an education but face barriers to achieving their goals not only hampers these learners' development and their families' well-being but also the well-being of our province.

Mr. Speaker, in summary, I think that a review of postsecondary student funding is of the utmost importance. It is imperative that this review happen sooner rather than later as the number of Albertans in their 20s is currently at its peak. Conducting such a review immediately will ensure that we maximize return on taxpayer dollars.

I also think that such a review ought to focus on the issues I have raised today: responsive and equitable funding criteria for part-time students, assistance for students wishing to study internationally, and funding that encourages diversity and inclusiveness in our postsecondary education system. I acknowledge the fact that the issues I raise today are complex. I believe that a full review of student funding, with stakeholder involvement, will help to properly address these issues.

I wish to thank the endorsement of Motion 506 from the Alberta Graduate Council, the Alberta Students' Executive Council, the Calgary Medical Students Association, the Canadian Federation of Medical Students, the Council of Alberta University Students, the medical students' association, and the Postdoctoral Association of the University of Calgary. Some of the representatives are here this afternoon in the gallery. I really appreciate your presence.

I look forward to comments from my hon. colleagues on Motion 506, and I encourage everyone to support this motion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe – am I right? – that I have five minutes to speak to this.

The Deputy Speaker: Ten.

Dr. Taft: I have 10 minutes? Okay. Thank you very much. I know many others want to participate, so I will try not to take up the full 10 minutes, but this is a very important issue.

I want to commend the hon. member for bringing this motion forward. I think the spirit is good; the approach is fine. I think the choice of wording of the motion reflects the parliamentary constraints on what we can do in a motion and what we can't do in a motion in terms of requesting funding. I do like the idea that's brought forward here of reviewing the procedures and rules that determine postsecondary student funding because I think that if we were to do that sort of a review properly, it would drive us back to some basic questions. What do we want our postsecondary system to achieve? Why do we have a postsecondary system at all? Why do we educate people?

I think that if we were to revisit those kinds of values and those kinds of questions, we would get a new appreciation for why postsecondary education is so important. I think it's clear that we support postsecondary education not just because of the knowledge and skills that are delivered or acquired but because it makes for a better society. It makes for healthier citizens. It makes for citizens who are more engaged. It also strengthens our democracy because it encourages free and open and well-informed debate on issues. So I think that if the government was to follow this motion and actually start the review where, I would suggest, every review should begin, which is around questions of why – what are we trying to achieve? – that would be a very healthy thing.

The Member for Calgary-Mackay has covered a lot of ground in her comments. She referred to, I noticed with some interest, the value of international studies, and that's, of course, a value that goes both ways. When Albertans go and study abroad and come back home, they bring the whole world with them. They bring the language and the values and the attitudes and the knowledge that they acquired abroad back home with them, and we benefit from that. Likewise, with students who live elsewhere and come and study here, we gain from their presence here.

I say that because two doors down from the house where my wife and I live, last winter there were four students from Kazakhstan. We struck up a friendship, and I wouldn't be surprised, Mr. Speaker, if some day we go to Kazakhstan. It opened up our world to a society in central Asia about which we knew next to nothing beforehand. So that's terrific.

I think that in the end we do need to come down to specifics. We do need a government that looks hard at things like tuition costs, which, in my view, are too high and have escalated too rapidly, and at an issue that came up earlier in this Assembly today, nontuition fees, which can come out of the blue and can seem arbitrary and unfair.

I also think that we need to revisit or challenge ourselves with the gap between our very low postsecondary participation rate and our low high school completion rates and the fact that we have a highly educated general population. Of course, that can be a mystery at first glance. How can that gap be? How can we have such low graduation rates and low postsecondary participation rates and such a well-educated population? As I've said before in this Assembly, it's because people are getting trained outside of Alberta and are moving here. In fact, I know an economist who's looked specifically at the value of this to Alberta, and it's well over a billion dollars a year that we gain in a kind of informal transfer payment from people who are educated at Dalhousie or McGill or Laval or UBC or wherever and move to Alberta with all that training in place.

I think we have to ask ourselves: is having the lowest post-secondary education rate in the country the best we can do? I don't think it is. I think we need to reduce the barriers to post-secondary education so that we get that rate up to something we can actually be proud of. I think it comes down to viewing education, from K to 12 right through postgraduate, not as a cost but as an investment, and I say that very seriously, Mr. Speaker. We keep tabs on the value of our infrastructure and our roads and our transmission lines. We keep tabs on the value of our buildings and our facilities, but we completely ignore the value of having a highly educated population. That value is immense, and I suspect that it's actually measurable. That value represents our investment in ourselves, in our children, and in our future. If we understand education as an investment and not just as an expense, then I think this motion makes perfect sense. I think that if that approach infused and informed the suggestion made in this motion, it would be a great thing.

I congratulate the member for bringing this forward. I hope other members can support it, and I hope that the government pays attention if it passes in this Assembly.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise today and speak on Motion 506. I'd like to thank the Member for Calgary-Mackay for bringing this forward. You know, the objective of the motion is, clearly, for us to look at how student funding is done today, and it is very important.

When I meet with the student organizations across the province or just students within the postsecondaries, it is always one of the issues that comes up. It's issues around loans; it's issues around grants; it's issues around bursaries; it's issues around remissions. It's all of those things rolled together because at the end of the day our education needs to be accessible, it needs to be affordable, and it needs to be of high quality. Those are the things that we ask of it, and those are the things that our students ask of it as well.

Clearly, those things don't always work very well together because sometimes to maintain high quality, of course, there is some cost to it. We in this province believe it's critically important to keep our system affordable, to keep it available to students. We also know that the cost of education continues to go up, so we're always looking for opportunities to improve the system.

I am pleased to say today that we're planning a full review of student finance. That will include everything from the access to the future fund, which helps to fund some of our matching dollars for scholarships, right through to the student loan fund and everything in between. You know, we have made some significant changes in the last few years. Our loan system, our finance system, of today doesn't look anything like it did 15 or 20 years ago. We've increased annual loan limits. We've increased living allowances. We've removed some of the silly rules around what kind of vehicles you drive, and some of that.

With this review we want to really drill down because what I think shows there is a problem is that only 30 per cent of our students take out a student loan. Only 30 per cent. I truly believe that there are students out there in Alberta today that aren't in postsecondary because either, one, they couldn't get a loan or, two, their families or themselves had a fear of going into debt, a fear of going to school and building up a debt and coming out carrying a large debt load.

Those are really legitimate fears for our students, so it is important that we review the system to ensure that the loans that they can get are easy to get, that the interest rates are low, that the payment rates are fair, that there are proper remissions available to students for a number of different reasons, that grants and bursaries – you know, we've got the Rutherford scholarship, the Jason Lang scholarship. These are wonderful projects, but the students come to me and say: we'd like more programs like that. This year we added the new opportunity for students to volunteer in the not-for-profit sector to gain valuable experience and to also gain scholarships for their next year of education. We are moving in that way, but I think we can do much, much better.

One of the areas that does keep coming up – the Member for Calgary-Mackay brought it up, and we will be reviewing it as part of this review – is around part-time students and especially graduate students. They simply either cannot get the loans that they need, or under the regulations that exist now if a graduate student gets a loan, they have to start paying back on it immediately. There is no waiting until you finish school. So it becomes very onerous or difficult. On one hand we're trying to attract graduate students, the brightest and the best, to come to Alberta to study and to be here, yet we create financing systems that don't support those graduate students.

In some provinces there is actual direct funding for graduate students. As well, there are different loan programs for graduate students. In British Columbia, for example, they even offer PNP placements for graduate students coming to study in British Columbia. These are important things to look at as part of a holistic plan for our funding system for our young people.

Another interesting thing in Alberta: we talk about students not going from high school into postsecondaries, yet we have a very educated population. One of the ideas brought forward was that maybe people move here that are educated. That's some of it, but the average age in our postsecondary institutions is 28. Twenty-eight years of age. That means that people are leaving high school, going to work, maybe even starting a family, and then determining through that process that the job, the career, that they really want requires them to go back to school.

So on top of these important issues we need to look at ways to streamline education systems for people that are in the workplace. We're going to have to look at things like online apprenticeship training so that an apprentice that's working doesn't have to leave his home and his family, leave his job for eight weeks, travel to another community to take his apprenticeship training. We're going to look at unique things like that. Alberta consistently in apprenticeship punches well above our weight. With 10 per cent of the Canadian population, we train 20 per cent of the apprentices. Those numbers don't show up in our postsecondary numbers. We train a lot of apprentices in Alberta because we need a lot of apprentices in Alberta.

I'm very supportive of the system, but we need to make it better. We need to review this, and I thank the Member for Calgary-Mackay for bringing it forward, for inviting the students to come here and talk about it and hear about this important issue because, truly, we are going to review that system, and we are going to make it better.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: I have a list of speakers here. After the minister there will be the members for Calgary-Varsity, Bonnyville-Cold Lake, Lesser Slave Lake, Calgary-Nose Hill, and Edmonton-Ellerslie. Is that right? Now you know your turn.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to begin by first thanking the Member for Calgary-Mackay for bringing forward Motion 506, which states:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to review the procedures and rules that determine postsecondary student funding to ensure that student funding meets the diverse and evolving needs of students in the 21st century.

This is an extremely important discussion. I don't wish to repeat a number of the points that have been made by previous speakers, but I would like to bring forward some observations.

When it comes to postsecondary representation by elected MLAs, I find it rather interesting that four of the eight members that represent the Liberal caucus represent significant institutions in the province of Alberta. My colleague from Edmonton-Riverview is the elected representative for the University of Alberta. My colleague from Edmonton-Centre is the elected representative for Grant MacEwan, which has recently become a university. In Calgary the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology is represented by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View. I'm extremely proud of the fact that for the last two terms I have been the elected representative for Calgary-Varsity, which takes its name from the University of Calgary, which is a key contributor to the Calgary-Varsity constituency.

I would like to echo the investment comments that the Member for Edmonton-Riverview made about education being an investment rather than a liability or a cost item. For every dollar that's invested in postsecondary education we have a threefold return. That return is obvious because the person who graduates from university finds themselves in a higher earning echelon. As a result of that, we continue to receive the benefits not only of their intelligence, their intellect, but also of their economic productivity as it relates to our province's well-being.

Ralph Klein did an interesting circumstance. In the late '90s he savagely cut postsecondary funding. He decided that the way to save money was to cut at the highest level, the highest cost of postsecondary. What Mr. Klein did as well as freezing and reducing the budgets for health care was take it a step further and reduce the number of medical seats available at university. He drove doctors and nurses out of this province. From that time on we have been trying to recruit them back or provide them with an education.

Now, Ralph Klein in a bit of a yin-yang circumstance in 2003 temporarily, basically for a year, froze tuition. That was back, as I say, in 2003, and that type of freeze hasn't occurred since. The cost of tuition has steadily climbed since that time, and it makes it prohibitive for a number of students to engage in postsecondary education.

The problems with postsecondary begin with our current education system which from an aboriginal point of view sees fewer than 50 per cent of aboriginal students graduating from high school. Only 25 per cent of ESL students who enter high school and continue in their studies in a period of three to four to five years actually enter postsecondary. So we're losing out on a terrific number of individuals. We encourage immigration to this country. Then what do we do? We put up a wall. We don't provide the ESL funding support within the public system, and we discourage ESL students from pursuing postsecondary academic career choices. This has to be changed. While this is only a government motion, which is a suggested direction – I appreciate the fact – I'm hoping, that a review will actually take place.

Now, the government has made a series of bad decisions. I've mentioned one from former Premier Ralph Klein. When the decision was made – and I believe it was in 2007 – to take any discussion of tuition increases out of legislation and put it behind the closed-door regulation of whoever was the current minister of postsecondary, I believe that the democratic opportunity for students and their representatives to voice concerns was lost. It became a unilateral, omnipotent, omniscient decision by whoever was the current minister.

Similarly, we have seen a series of other poor decisions made, in my opinion. For example, decreasing the number of bursaries and grants and scholarships in favour of increasing the indebtedness of students by increasing the loan provisions I think was a very negative move. We're saying to students, "Yes, under certain special circumstances we'll let you get yourself further into debt," but the rate of forgiveness has not appreciably increased on those debts.

When it comes to recognition of doctors who receive their training outside of this country, the government reduced the number of spaces for foreign-trained doctors to upgrade from 60 to 40. Both the U of C and the U of A last year were forced to reduce the number of seats for Alberta high school graduates to pursue postsecondary medical training. This is hardly the way to go in a province where family doctors are at a great shortage.

The concerns that continue to be large for a number of students are that loans are tied to a student's family's economic circumstance rather than to the students themselves. While that separation does not exist, the problem intensifies. In other words, if a family is economically well off, the student, regardless of their relationship within that family, is penalized and not able to potentially receive the loan that would allow them to attend the postsecondary institution or faculty of their choice.

The failure of this government to recognize how important postsecondary education is as an investment shows up every September when 25 per cent of eligible students who can afford the tuition and have received the grades are turned away. The government attempts to sort of assuage the circumstance or massage it by suggesting: well, chances are the student applied to three institutions and was turned away by two of them and was finally accepted by the third. If you look at the number of students who were turned away at the institutions, regardless of whether it's a technical or an academic or whether it's distance learning, that figure of 25 per cent rejection regularly turns up.

Another mistake the government made was its failure to follow through with its urban campus concept, and that was very evident in what could have been a university-centred East Village development. There was a plan to have Bow Valley College, Mount Royal, the University of Calgary all connected in an urban campus. [Mr. Chase's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise today and join debate on Motion 506, brought forward by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay. This motion proposes a review of procedures and rules that guide postsecondary student funding. We all know how important postsecondary education is for the future of this province. We're also well aware of some of the social, academic, and financial challenges facing students when pursuing a degree, diploma, or certificate. It is our role as leaders to make sure that these obstacles, financial or otherwise, can be overcome.

Mr. Speaker, as anyone who has ever attended a postsecondary institution can attest, numerous opportunities can arise during the course of one's studies. One such opportunity is the chance to study abroad. Unfortunately, the reality is that internationalizing one's education can be expensive, and many could not afford it without financial assistance. Ensuring that Alberta students have opportunities to study abroad is very important. It helps them develop a skill that will prepare them to cope with globalizing the world. This falls in line with Alberta's international strategy. For the record Alberta's international strategy is the Alberta government's commitment to pursue global advocacy, advance Alberta's international relations, and strengthen Alberta's reputation abroad to create opportunity for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, the list of benefits of international education is very long, so today I will only speak to some of them. One of the foremost reasons for travelling to a foreign country for a semester or two is the opportunity to learn to improve one's proficiency in a second language. As anyone who is learning a second language can confirm, only so much can be accomplished inside a classroom. Using the acquired language in day-to-day activities, on the other hand, vastly improves one's ability to speak it.

Another major reason to go abroad is the opportunity to get out of one's comfort zone and experience a different culture or way of life. It can challenge students to adopt new and diverse ways of thinking and bring fresh ideas back to Alberta. As well, understanding local cultural sensitivities is crucial to international relations at any level. Failing to do so can result in diminishing exchanges with foreign entities, preventing fruitful business relations to emerge, therefore limiting opportunities for Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, studying abroad is also a great way to meet new people, many of whom will become leaders in their own communities and countries. In fact, as international businessmen and businesswomen can attest, forging durable relationships is the most difficult part of doing business abroad. Socializing with people informally in a university or college environment is therefore a great stepping stone for future business partnerships or scientific research exchanges.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, the problem with those international opportunities is not a lack of motivation on the students' part or the amount of paperwork required to make it happen. The issue for students is funding. Perhaps a number of avenues could be explored to help these students afford the added cost to their education when pursuing an exchange program. Giving them an opportunity to be part of the global community at a young age will only give them a better sense of what awaits them in the future, and what awaits them is an increasingly competitive world that generates an abundance of opportunities for those who understand how to seize them. Perhaps it's time to review our postsecondary education funding scheme to better reflect the needs of our globally minded students.

I will conclude my comments by thanking the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay for her work on this motion. I encourage all members to continue this debate and think about what can be done to ensure that our education system continues to be the best and most accessible one in the world.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to also support Motion 506, proposed by my colleague from Calgary-Mackay. I'd like to thank her for bringing that motion. Motion 506 encourages the government to review rules for postsecondary scholarship and bursary eligibility so that we look at the evolving needs of the student body that we have in the province today. We do need to take some action regarding the participation rate of Alberta's youth in postsecondary education and training, whether it be universities, colleges, or technical institutes. Our participation rates are too low.

Mr. Speaker, over the past number of years there's been a changing demographic in the student population. The average age of postsecondary students is on the rise. That means that a lot of students that are leaving high school are going out for other opportunities, employment opportunities perhaps, and postponing their education. There are some economic opportunities when the unemployment rate is low and when the wages are high. Sometimes it's attractive for students to leave high school and go straight into the workforce. Now, those kinds of students are of an older age, are more likely to be living on their own. They're more likely to be working to support themselves. Also, I think it's worthy to note that approximately 30 per cent of the Alberta student population study only on a part-time basis, so they may not have access to scholarships and bursary options that full-time students do.

Now, Mr. Speaker, some might argue that higher tuition fees are a barrier to increasing our participation rates, as I mentioned, which we need to work on. There's certainly some truth in that proposition. To meet the challenge of that barrier, a lot of programs are available. Our government and most institutions provide programs to help students through scholarships, but scholarships only reward those students with very high academic performance regardless of their financial need. There are also programs like bursaries, where governments and most institutions also recognize the need to support students who may not have the financial resources to pursue their postsecondary education or training. But I would submit that these also may not be taken care of in their entirety. They may not fall within all of the academic requirements. Those that may qualify for bursaries: there are many, many thousands of students who are deprived of opportunities still by reason of unaffordability of postsecondary education and training.

In this connection I want to make a comment, and that is that the way that we award scholarships and bursaries may not correlate with the prospects of academic success in all cases. Generally speaking, postsecondary institutions are ranking their admissions based on their high school academic performance. They use this tool because it's a tool that they have available, and it's the best tool, probably, that they do have available and one of the only ones that they have available.

I had the very good fortune to work alongside a gentleman by the name of Dr. Peter Krueger, who was a very distinguished and well-respected professor and academic administrator. He explained that academic performance in high school is not a reliable predictor of academic performance in university. The reason is that these institutions are different. A high school is a different place from a university or a college or even a technical institute. There are many mediocre high school students, Mr. Speaker – mediocre students – that will make excellent university students. When they get into that academic milieu, a lot of them catch fire in the free atmosphere of a college and a university where they can pursue something that truly interests them and do something which inspires them. I believe that we have to find a way to allow those students to excel in a field of their choice.

Today, Mr. Speaker, the reality is that a lot of the departments and faculties require very, very high marks in order to gain admission: 85, 90, 95 per cent. As I said, that's used as a criterion for admission, but it's not necessarily giving us an indicator of all of those individuals who might be capable of excelling in those fields. I'm not suggesting that every department or faculty should accommodate everybody that comes along regardless of their academic standing, but I believe that we need to concentrate on having a window to allow students to enter into that postsecondary milieu, where they can gain some experience and where we can give them an opportunity to flourish.

For that reason I'm suggesting that for your first year of general studies, where you can take a sampling of a number of different courses, for example, I think that the hon. minister would be well advised to allow for another type of admission policy whereby we could allow people with a lower academic standing in high school to have an opportunity to flourish in that postsecondary environment.

My recommendation, Mr. Speaker. Allowing these very, very high academic standards to be the criterion for entry into various programs is all well and good, but we really need to look at supporting those individuals in a way that allows them financially to get into the institution. We also need to look at the marks which are required in order to get into that first year of postsecondary education. I think that if we do those two things, then our participation rates will respond accordingly, and I think we'll be on our path to going from the lower ranks, the lower echelons, of provinces in terms of our participation rate into the upper echelons.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Are there any other members wishing to join the debate?

Seeing none, I shall call on the sponsor of the motion, the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, to close the debate.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I brought this motion forward to encourage a review of the procedures, criteria, and rules that guide postsecondary funding. I'd just like to say that I'm very much gratified that this motion reiterated the government of Alberta's commitment to an accessible, affordable, and high-quality postsecondary system through the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology and hearing the strong commitment and support to our students in the postsecondary system by so many members of this House. I'm also honoured to have the presence of the hon. Member for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville here this afternoon, and I hope that he's in support of my motion.

I'd just like to close by saying that I'm most pleased to learn from the hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology today that his ministry will conduct a full review of student finance, especially part-time students and graduate students. I'd just like to thank all the hon. members who shared their valuable opinions this afternoon for their participation, and I thank you for the time.

[Motion Other than Government Motion 506 carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that we have voted here, I would move that the House stand adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:45 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Statement by the Speaker

Election Anniversaries

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we proceed, I'd like to point out to all hon. members that today is the seventh anniversary of the first election of 16 members. Congratulations to the hon. Member for Peace River, the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development; the hon. Member for Calgary-West, the Minister of Finance; the hon. Member for Calgary-Foothills; the hon. Member for Highwood; the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill; the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays; the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat; the hon. Member for Stony Plain; the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka; the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed; the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon; the hon. Member for Foothills-Rocky View, the Minister of Energy; the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View; the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity; the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East; the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie; and the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Today is also an anniversary in time. Please join me in wishing the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity happy birthday.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I think you omitted one very important anniversary, November 21, 1979. Perhaps you might comment.

The Speaker: November 21, 1979, was a day not unlike what we have in Alberta today, very similar in the amount of snow, very similar in the temperature, and it was an anniversary for me, my first election to this esteemed Assembly. Interestingly enough, hon. members, it was in the fifth decade ago. It's been a thrill. [applause]

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly the mayor of Slave Lake and the reeve of the municipal district of Lesser Slave River. Mr. Speaker, they're seated in your gallery: Her Worship Mayor Karina Pillay-Kinnee of Slave Lake and Reeve Denny Garratt from the municipal district of Lesser Slave River. I'd also like to acknowledge, though he sends his regrets because he couldn't attend, Chief Roland Twinn from Sawridge First Nation. I'd ask them to rise.

Mr. Speaker, it took a community to respond to the wildfires, and it will be a community that together faces a journey through recovery. All 233 temporary housing units have been installed, and anyone who lost their home to fire should be in place this week. Leadership, teamwork, and concern for your residents means things are moving ahead quickly, and I know that the work you are doing is helping your community become whole again. The Alberta government will continue to work alongside you in the weeks and months and years that it takes to rebuild fully. I'd ask these two members to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, you also have a school group.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you very much. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 25 visitors from Ryley school in Ryley, Alberta. There are 22 members in the members' gallery; they may all be there, Mr. Speaker. The students are accompanied by their teachers Wendy Butler and Fred Yachimec. They're also accompanied by a parent helper, Leanne Monteith, and D.J. Smith, the FCSS co-ordinator for the school. This grade 9 class is studying government. They've had an exceptional tour today, and I got to see them just before they came in at about a quarter after 1. They truly represent what their school's motto is, The Small School with a Big Heart. I'd ask them to rise and please receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 12 students from the Yellowhead school in my constituency of Edmonton-Calder. With them today are teacher Brian Gizzie, Mr. Rob Eglund, Mr. Ron Stober, Mrs. Shawn Lechelt, and Mrs. Okeme. I understand that they're seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them now all to please rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 27 grade 6 students from Meadowlark Christian elementary school, a K to 9 school in my wonderful constituency. This school began as a private school in 1982 for committed Christian families but has grown steadily and became an alternative program offered by Edmonton public schools in 2004, offering choice within the public system. Leading this group today is their teacher, Mike Krogen, and Mrs. Loretta Strachan, Mrs. Patti Kern, and Mrs. Karen Singleton. They are seated in the gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I also have a second introduction. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of 30 grade 6 students from Belmead elementary school, also in the wonderful constituency of Edmonton-Meadowlark. Belmead is a community school of 260 that serves not only Belmead but also the Hamptons neighbourhood. They offer a very effective full-day community kindergarten program for those students, something that the Alberta Liberals have supported for a very long time. Leading this group is their teacher, Lisa Zimmer, and Ms Lyndsay Dakin and parent helpers Mrs. Mona Choukair, Mr. Ryan Carifelle, and Mrs. Stephanie Casper. They are seated in the gallery. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour for me to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members here in the Assembly three wonderful seniors' advocates. Luanne Whitmarsh is CEO of the Kerby Centre in Calgary. The Kerby Centre provides holistic services for adults aged 55 plus in Calgary and the surrounding area, and it provides a place where older adults can connect to meet their social, recreational, and learning needs while at the same time meet friends and make new friends and volunteer. Luanne is also a constituent of mine from Calgary-Elbow. Also with her today from SAGE, the Seniors Association of Greater Edmonton, are Mr. Roger Laing, the executive director, and the president, John Schiel. SAGE is a multiservice seniors' centre in downtown Edmonton that has been serving seniors since 1970. SAGE provides a wide range of recreation and social services for seniors. They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask that they rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly staff here today from my department, Alberta Health and Wellness. These staff have been on a tour of the Legislature, had a photo opportunity on the Legislature steps, and they are now here to observe question period and their minister in action. Many of these employees have devoted their careers to public policy, and I want to take this opportunity to publicly commend them for that commitment. The importance of that work often goes unacknowledged. These members are seated in the members' gallery. I would ask each of them to rise as I call their name: Ms Jeanie Casault, Ms Shaughnessy Fulawka, Mme Monique Gervais Timmer, Mrs. Suzette Mackey, Mrs. Jennifer McGill, Ms Colleen Zimmel. Please join me in extending the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure today to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly two good friends. This afternoon in the members' gallery is Mr. Doug Black. Doug is senior counsel with Fraser Milner Casgrain and a current chair of the board of governors at the University of Calgary and doing a great job there, and thanks, Doug, for that. With him is Martyn LaFrance, a recent graduate of the U of C. He is a bright young mind and a shining example of what the future holds for this province. He is also serving as EA and helping Doug in a bold, new adventure that he's undertaking. I would ask this House to rise and give them our warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today we have a special guest from Ontario. Mr. David Rinneard is with BMO commercial banking out of Ontario. He has come out here to have some meetings with numerous different groups. David is rather unique. He actually grew up in Orillia, Ontario, but took his university education at the University of Lethbridge, which many of us are very familiar with, and he convoked down there with a bachelor of management, later going on to take his master's in business administration from Queen's University School of Business. David is currently the national manager for agriculture, responsible for many different areas in the bank's agricultural portfolio, and he's got a diverse background in oilseeds, dairy – you name it; he's done it – and he is very familiar with southern Alberta. I had the opportunity to have lunch with him, and he met many of our colleagues here today. I would ask David in the public gallery to please stand up and receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a very special guest that is here today in recognition of Mee-Yah-Noh elementary school's 50th anniversary, Ms Cheryl Johner. Ms Johner is serving her first term on the Edmonton public school board as the school board trustee for ward A. She is a very hard worker. It's an honour and privilege to work at collaborating within the ward, because we share some constituents in Edmonton-Decore. I would now ask Ms Johner to please rise to accept the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed my pleasure to introduce through you and to members of the Assembly members of the Fort McMurray public school district who are here today, who bravely travelled highway 63. We have the chair, Jeff Thompson, along with trustees Linda Mywaart and Stephanie Blackler. I'd ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you another excellent Albertan who's been serving on an Alberta school board and who has also stepped into the provincial political arena. I'd like to ask Dave Nelson to please stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly. He's running in Battle River-Wainwright.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Ntley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly two guests from the Parkland Institute. Founded in 1996, the Parkland Institute has initiated research and has promoted discussions on countless economic, social, cultural, and political issues important to all Albertans. The Alberta NDP would like to congratulate the institute for hosting another successful fall conference this past weekend, and we'd like to thank them for their invaluable contribution to the political research and dialogue within our province. My guests are Gordon Laxer, founding director of the Parkland Institute, who will be stepping down in January of this year after 15 years of service at the institute, and Laura Collison, administrative co-ordinator, who has been there for about a year and just finished serving as the architect, for the first time, of their very successful fall conference last weekend. I would like both Gordon and Laura to now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today and introduce a neighbour of mine who I see up in the gallery, who is well known to the Assembly, a past president of the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta, Ms Marg Mrazek. I would ask her to please stand, and we'll give her the warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I also have noticed a constituent from my constituency of Edmonton-Decore, Mr. Jim Ragsdale, who always makes a point of dropping by my constituency office. He's here today in the public gallery. I'd like him to please stand to receive the warm welcome of our Assembly.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

50th Anniversary of Mee-Yah-Noh Elementary School

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 15, 2011, it was my honour and privilege to be part of the 50th anniversary celebration of Mee-Yah-Noh elementary school in the constituency of Edmonton-Decore. Over the course of 50 years there is no doubt that all the young people who have crossed through the doorways of this specific school have truly been the benefactors of exemplary learning opportunities and creative discoveries that unfold through innovative teaching, leadership, learning partnerships, and programming. Without exception the 50th anniversary gathering was inspiring, for it was filled with symbols, ceremony, enthusiasm, laughter, tears, and a collection of exciting stories highlighting the proud past and present successes of teachers, staff, students, parents, and the school community.

Mr. Speaker, there is a 50-year legacy of dedication to student achievement embedded in the school's namesake, Mee-Yah-Noh, a Cree word meaning a great place to be. Mee-Yah-Noh is a place where the students are truly fortunate to have great teachers at the helms of the classrooms and the school. Their focus is to ensure that the learning successes of children are filled with vibrant, everlasting, high-quality experiences and opportunities. As Dr. Seuss so aptly said: "Unless someone like you cares a whole awful lot, nothing is going to get better. It's not."

Mr. Speaker, special heartfelt thanks and congratulations to all of those from the past, present, and into the future whose tireless dedication and commitment to children makes Mee-Yah-Noh the great place to be that it truly is. The future of this dynamic school will be defined by new opportunities taken and discoveries made, and I look forward to the achievements yet to come. Mee-Yah-Noh elementary school will always be a place that will be part of children forever and of which children will be forever a part.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Public Health Inquiry

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is also the first anniversary of me being ejected from the government caucus for standing up for Albertans.

During the leadership campaign the Premier unconditionally promised a public inquiry. She said, quote: my call for an inquiry is about finding out the truth and putting a stop to practices that go against my personal and political values. Unquote. Now she has broken her promise and is towing the party line. Why is the Premier putting her political fortunes ahead of the truth?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as I said yesterday, it was a wonderful day to be able to have the legislation tabled with respect to the Health Quality Council. It's going to strengthen their ability to do exactly what I would like them to do. You know, what's great about this is that they're going to do it independently, they're going to do it in public, they're going to be able to compel witnesses, protect witnesses, and it can be judge led. That's transparent, and that's the commitment. I'm very proud of that.

Dr. Sherman: Given that exactly a year ago today my expulsion happened for standing up for public health care, positions the Premier supported in her own leadership race – the Premier was quoted as saying that failing to hold a public inquiry for fear of harming the government's re-election chances is cynical politics; that's her quote – why was the Premier silent on health care when Albertans needed her the most, only to speak up when she needed their votes the most, only to reinvent a different public inquiry and delay the truth?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, Albertans care about public health care. I care about public health care. This government is committed to public health care. This caucus is committed to public health care and will continue to be committed to public health care.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that several members of the government caucus who are against a public inquiry and, in fact, caused the health care crisis that we faced last year and still face today may not be seeking re-election, is delaying a public inquiry the Premier's way of avoiding the tough questions that Albertans want answered before an election?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I'm not quite sure I understood the question, or maybe it's that I don't understand the hon. member's reality of politics. But I'll tell you that we are committed to moving ahead on this, to answering those questions, to ensuring that the Health Quality Council will have the ability to do exactly what we want them to do in the best interests of Albertans.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Fixed Election Dates

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me ask another question and offer another reality. The Premier's performance on keeping her promises is the same as the government's record on health care: only about 30 per cent, a failing grade. Half measures, flip-flops, and backtracking have defined this government. The Premier promised democratic reform with fixed election dates. Now she proposes fixed election seasons. Why is the Premier breaking yet another promise to Albertans?

Ms Redford: It is wonderful to come to the House again today for question period and to be able to see what the work of this House was yesterday: Bill 21, Election Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 23, Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 25, Child and Youth Advocate Act; Bill 26, Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011. This is a government that keeps its word, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The question was about fixed election seasons.

Given her work with great world leaders, the Premier must have learned the importance of true democracy. How can the Premier call her leadership open and transparent when it only seems to be about power and control, the very democracy those world leaders fought against?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, my recollection is that within two hours of me being elected leader of this party, I heard comments from many people in the hon. opposition saying: we need to make sure we have a fall session. We have a fall session. We have legislation that represents work done by a caucus that is committed to serving Albertans. I can't think of anything more transparent than being in the House debating legislation that matters to Albertans, having question period, and knowing that any issue the opposition would like to raise, they can raise. That's transparent and accountable.

The Speaker: The hon. leader. Hon. leader, I've called you.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand that it's question period. It would be nice if it was also answer period.

Given that this Premier seemed to be more concerned about polling than democracy and fairness, why does the Premier insist, with these fixed election seasons, on having a 50-yard head start on what is a 100-yard dash when it comes to the next election?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, Albertans want to know there's going to be an election every four years. We think this legislation, that's before the House and can be fully debated in a fully transparent manner, represents what Albertans want to see. They want certainty. They want security. I'd suggest that if the opposition is concerned about ensuring that they have a head start, they can read the legislation to get ready for a provincial election. That's democracy.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Fiscal Accountability

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, we all want certainty and security, yet with this government we get uncertainty and insecurity. Yesterday the government painted a gloomy picture – a very gloomy picture – of a $3.1 billion deficit, setting up yet another Conservative public relations election strategy saying no to the people. How can the Premier ask her subjects to trust the government to balance the books by 2013 when their own forecasts jump so wildly based on the math skills of whomever is sitting in the Finance minister's chair?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I find the hon. Leader of the Opposition's comments quite interesting. Last time I checked, this was a democracy. I don't have subjects; I have people that can choose who to vote for, and they're going to be able to do that in the next election.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The subject that the government needs to worry about is math.

Given that the government has a history of massaging the numbers, can the minister tell us how much better the deficit will be just before the next election?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I've got news for the hon. member. What we presented yesterday was not a lot different than what was presented and debated in this House six months ago. Our projections are that our budget deficit is . . . [interjections] If they would have allowed us to yesterday, we would've tabled these documents. They could've read them for themselves. I'll repeat: our projected deficit is what we said in the House on the budget.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that when you plug in the current oil price and the Canadian dollar figures, which are near a hundred bucks a barrel, you arrive at an actual deficit that's about a half billion dollars less than the minister claims, did the Minister of Finance intend to mislead Albertans by making the deficit look worse, or can he simply not add?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think what this particular member has to realize is that what we're projecting is what the price of oil will be for the entire year, not what it is today. If the member just takes a look back in history, a very short two or three months ago the price of oil was about $80 a barrel. So what we're projecting is what the average price of oil will be. Quite frankly, if it's higher at the third quarter, we'll report that it's in a better position than at second quarter.

Public Health Inquiry (continued)

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, during her leadership campaign this Premier made a clear promise to Albertans that she would call a full public inquiry into intimidation and manipulation of health workers by our government and AHS leadership and that it would happen prior to the next election. She made this the cornerstone of her leadership campaign. Well, if her word is her bond, that bond must be from Greece or Italy. To the Premier: will you apologize to Albertans for breaking your promise to conduct a public, judge-led inquiry before voters go to the polls?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this legislation sets out very clearly that the Health Quality Council will have full powers to call an independent inquiry. That's what Albertans want, that's what I want, and that's how we're going to serve Albertans best.

Mr. Anderson: Given that this Premier has now made it optional for the Health Quality Council to call a judge-led inquiry and given that she has delayed the process so that it cannot possibly be conducted before the next election and given that she has appointed a health minister who put himself at the centre of this scandal when he called the head of the college of physicians to question the mental state of the Leader of the Official Opposition, Premier, how do you expect Albertans to believe that you have anything but your party's political survival in mind when dealing with this issue?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that Albertans care about health care, and there is no doubt that they will trust this government to deliver good health care. They will also trust this government to do exactly what we committed to doing, and that was to ensure that there was a full public inquiry that would allow an independent body to get to the bottom of the information. At the end of the day what Albertans will determine going into the next election is who actually constructively delivered on their commitments.

Mr. Anderson: Well, then, we'll have a big Wildrose win there, Mr. Speaker. Won't we?

Here is your chance to clarify everything – everything – for all Albertans. Premier, will you commit here and now that you will call a judge-led, open to the media public inquiry into the extent of your government's and AHS's intimidation and manipulation of Alberta's health care workers to be completed prior to the next election, as you promised, so that voters can assess whether your party truly deserves four more years of unfettered power?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this legislation clearly sets out the commitment that we've made to ensure that Albertans will get full information with respect to what's happening with the health care system. We are fully committed to that. The legislation sets that out, and that's what Albertans want.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier made many promises during her campaign for leadership of the Tory party. Many of these promises are barely recognizable today. One such broken promise was setting a fixed election date. Why has this Premier broken her promise to have a fixed election date, or does she believe that a date lasts three months?

2:00

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this legislation does exactly what Albertans want it to do. What Albertans said is that they wanted certainty. What other political parties said is that they wanted to be prepared for the next election. I'd suggest that the political parties better get prepared for the next election.

Mr. Mason: How can this Premier talk about what Albertans want? She has no mandate.

Given that this Premier also made a promise to work with opposition parties and to encourage their input, why did she make a decision regarding election legislation without any consultation with other political parties in this Assembly whatsoever?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the last time I checked, the way a Legislature works is that a government puts forward legislation and then members debate the legislation. That's the point in time, just in case they'd like to know, that they're supposed to offer their input, and I'm looking forward to the debate.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, the arrogance from this Premier is overwhelming. Given that this Premier promised open dialogue and to accept the input, even a new role for the opposition, for her now to turn around and suggest that the only time we can have input is in an election is the height of arrogance. I've never seen anything like it before.

Given that there is no fixed election date as promised and given that there has been no consultation with opposition parties on this or any other matter, why should Albertans trust any promises this Premier makes from now on?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, what I said was that the input is legitimate input that needs to be in the Legislature. That's why we elect members, to have public debate in the Legislature, and that's what we'll be able to do.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Services for the Brain Injured

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A number of severely brain-injured people in Calgary are being forced out of the residences that they've called home for up to 11 years because Alberta Health Services in Calgary put out an RFP this summer on all bids for the brain injured under their authority. The RFP was developed without any consultation with the personal care home operators or the families of their clients and at that time proposed to lower funding by up to 68 per cent. The RFP has since been amended five times. To the Premier: since other government programs like PDD have an ongoing consultation process in place, is it not against government practice to develop an RFP involving vulnerable people like this behind closed doors?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member in raising the issue of brain-injured patients is not alone. Services for brain-injured Albertans have also been the subject of discussions between myself and many of my colleagues on the government side of the House. The RFP that the hon. member refers to was issued by Alberta Health Services. My understanding is quite contrary to that of the hon. member. My understanding is that the families, the residents, the operators were all involved in detailed planning for the new placements for the individual residents who are affected, and I'm satisfied that they've had appropriate input.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. I will ask this question, Mr. Speaker, to the health minister. Explanation, please. Why is it that Calgary chose to tender out these services, yet Edmonton just renewed its current contracts with its operators for five years? Aren't the rules supposed to be the same for the entire province?

Mr. Horne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can't speak for Alberta Health Services in terms of how they managed the placement of these residents, but what I can say is that in the case of Calgary the total financial resources that are devoted to the services for these patients is actually $800,000 greater as a result of this change. So I'm very satisfied that the appropriate degree of resources is in place to provide for their needs.

Mr. Taylor: Mr. Speaker, this last question of mine is for the Premier. Is the Premier aware that the parents of the affected clients had petitioned both the ministers of Health and Seniors this past August 16 to transfer support services for the brain injured from Alberta Health Services to Alberta Seniors?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I have consulted with both of my ministers on this. It is an issue that they have been meeting with stakeholders on, and I know they've had a meeting with the hon. member on this. I believe that they're taking those issues very seriously in terms of considering what the best options available are. But I am aware of that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Global Economic Conditions

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Fraser Institute released a report today called Economic Freedom of North America 2011, that lists Alberta as the most economically free jurisdiction in North America. My first question is to the Minister of Finance. Has the minister seen this report yet? If so, is it consistent with any other studies that the government has undertaken in this area?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I have not seen the report, but I've seen media reports, and all I can say is that they are very encouraging. In some ways it's some of the same conclusions that we've drawn. We're pleased that the Fraser Institute, which I know some members of this House think very highly of, recognizes our efforts to make our province more competitive. We strive in this province to encourage entrepreneurialism. We recognize that there's more work to be done in the area of regulatory reform in those particular areas, and we're going to continue to work to make it even more economically free.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental is also to the same minister. With the global economic turmoil that's going on, including markets falling and news that the U.S. has been unable to agree on a plan to reduce their deficit, we can't ignore what's going on around us. What's being done to determine the impact on Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Well, you know, we don't need to do a lot of studies. All we have to do is look at the documents that I'll be tabling later this afternoon, which show that the investment from the heritage fund is about half of what we had projected in our budget just six months ago. That's primarily because of the economic situations that exist in both Europe and the United States. We have to ensure that we try to continue to create the environment for business. I think that we're not immune to what's going on in the world, but I would say that I don't think there's a better place in North America to do business today than Alberta.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. There's been a lot of talk recently about Alberta's tax system, especially from the minister. How does Alberta sit today compared to other provinces with respect to taxation?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that we did prepare, the Treasurer and myself, relative to the round-table discussions that we held throughout the province, was an analysis of our overall tax structure. What we determined was that if Alberta had the tax structure of British Columbia, Albertans would pay $11 billion more in taxes annually. Now, British Columbia is the next closest to us. At the other end of the scale is the Quebec government, and if Alberta had the tax structure of Quebec, we'd be paying $20 billion more in taxes than we currently are. Again, I think the Fraser Institute has recognized this, and we're appreciative of that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Federal Police Officers Recruitment Fund

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Three years ago the Solicitor General received over $42 million from the federal government to recruit much-needed police officers across the province under the police officers recruitment fund. My first question is to the Solicitor General. Can the minister please provide this House with an update on where and how much of the $42 million has been used in the last three years under the police officers recruitment fund?

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As this member is probably well aware, since 2008 we have provided 108 new police officers here in Edmonton, 123 in Calgary. We will continue to support law enforcement in this province as part of our safe communities initiative, that the Premier started herself when she was Minister of Justice.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the Solicitor General – and I'm talking specifically about the $42 million that was provided by the federal government to hire new police officers across the province – why has $30 million of the $42 million of this money not been used when Alberta continues to have the second-lowest ratio of police officers to citizens in the entire country? You, sir, are not doing your job.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I take umbrage with that member's comments. This is conduct unbecoming a member here.

This member knows our safe communities initiative has consistently reduced the crime rate in Alberta, and that is something that we can be proud of.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. I would request, first, that this minister read his own annual report, and he would see where this money has been left on the table. Given that the city of Edmonton, unfortunately, has a very high homicide rate, why is this federal money being left on the table instead of being used to support our hard-working police officers across this province?

Thank you.

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, I've read this report, and I would suggest that this member opposite get a dictionary so that he can read it himself as well. The crime rate is going down. Our safe communities initiative is supporting this entire province's police officers. This is something that we can be proud of, and we can stop this partisan rhetoric.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Education Consultation

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the Minister of Education. He announced that he wants to seek further input on the Education Act. This is in addition to the already significant outreach that was conducted as part of the drafting of the original legislation. So what were the issues with the previous consultation and the subsequent legislation?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, there were no issues per se, as a matter of fact. My predecessor had engaged in dialogue with Albertans for quite a long time. However, I'll say to you that the Education Act, being, I would argue, the most fundamental piece of legislation any province can have, doesn't get reviewed very often. As a matter of fact, the School Act was reviewed when I completed high school. I want to be able to give students in the classroom and parents assurance that we have done everything we possibly could to make sure that this act is ready to educate our kids not for a decade but for two decades so that we graduate citizens that are ready for the world. We will take our time, and by spring the act will be tabled, and we'll debate it in the Chamber.

Ms Woo-Paw: My next question is to the same minister. While some Albertans will have the opportunity to provide some input on the act at the seven forums, how will this minister ensure that Albertans from all corners of the province will have an opportunity to participate in the consultation process?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the member is correct. There will be seven in-person forums. We will be giving priority to students and parents and teachers to appear in person if they choose to do so. We will also be engaging a variety of technologies. So if you wish, you'll be able to twitter me. You can contact me on Facebook. You can send me an e-mail. We will have a website you can blog. Or you can do a crazy thing: get a piece of paper, pen, envelope, and a postage stamp and send me a letter. I'm asking all Albertans to get involved because education should matter to everybody, not just those who are engaged in the education system.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. With legislation as important as this I think we should consult the people who'll be impacted by it, so I would also like to hear from the minister how the young people would be consulted meaningfully.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, this is the exciting part, Mr. Speaker. I really want to hear from students. I want to know from students what in their opinion would make education more engaging. What do they expect from their education experience? What would they do if they were Minister of Education for one day? So I'll be asking the smallest little ones in grade 1 all the way to grade 12 to get engaged in this process and share with me what in their opinion would make a great education system. They will have different ways to get in touch with my office. I'm looking forward to that input, which will be, I'm sure, very meaningful.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Residential Construction Standards

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The 2008 building envelope survey done by the government with the city of Calgary said that Alberta's "system of construction and inspection is not performing adequately to protect the home or condominium owner." In real terms that means that Albertans can be paying tens of thousands of dollars to fix badly built new homes and condominiums. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: why is it that in three and a half years the government hasn't adopted a single change relative to new residential construction?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank the member for asking me my first opposition question.

Mr. Speaker, we're aware of some of the challenges around the province with condominium owners and homeowners. We're reviewing the home building standards right now, and we're working on making sure that the right punitive measures are in place and the proper timelines to make sure that those who are not building appropriately are punished as opposed to those who are doing a great job around this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Well, this is a recurring theme.

Back to the same minister. Given that the government suggested in June of this year that adoption of new homeowner protection measures was imminent, like, right away, like, soon, why are condo owners and homeowners still waiting for even one of those measures to be put into place?

Mr. Griffiths: I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker. I can't comment on what was promised by the department earlier. I know that our department is working on it right now, and they are coming forward. We're hoping for some adoptions to the code this spring.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. As minister you're responsible for now and before.

Last question. Why hasn't this government been able to find the courage to increase the woefully inadequate Safety Codes Act fines? I mean, they're a joke. They're a cost of doing business. This department keeps reviewing and reviewing, but nothing is happening. When are we going to see it happen?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, my comment was not that I'm not responsible, but I can't comment on what exactly happened in the process at the time because I wasn't the minister.

This spring I will be bringing forward legislation that takes the six-month period when violations can be identified and fines can be levied to a three-year period because it usually takes that long for those sorts of structural challenges to be identified. We're raising the fines on the first offence from $15,000 to $100,000 and from $30,000 to $500,000, and it will punish those who are not building to code.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

High Prairie Health Care Centre

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's been 12 years, 12 long years, since we started working on the replacement High Prairie health facility. This project has been on again, off again. Now I see some movement on the proposed site, but not many people know what's going on. My first question is to the Minister of Infrastructure. Could you please provide my constituents with an update as to what has been going on for the health facility?

Mr. Johnson: Certainly. Mr. Speaker, this exciting $90 million project has been many years in the making, and I know we're committed to making it a reality for this member's community. What I can tell you is that my department has been working hard with Alberta Health and Wellness and Alberta Health Services. We'll be able to move to comprehensive design work once the functional program is complete. But what I can tell the hon. member is that there is dirt work going on; there is site preparation going on. Crews have been working hard to do the grading and installation of underground utilities and roadwork.

Ms Calahasen: My second question is to the minister of health given that the $90 million facility has been allocated, and the community has been involved with doing work with the health facility. They've been working to make sure that we include the renal clinic, cancer clinic, and CT scan. Now they're being told that these are just shell spaces. My question is to the minister of health. Please tell my constituents that these are not just shell spaces but operational spaces.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, the reality of a new hospital for Grande Prairie is, in fact, very real.

Ms Calahasen: High Prairie.

Mr. Horne: High Prairie. Excuse me.

As the hon. Minister of Infrastructure mentioned, work is already under way with respect to the design. What I'm interested in – and we're continuing to work with the community on this – is making sure that we have the programs and services we need not only for 2011 but for 20 years down the road. To that end, we'll continue to work with the hon. member in designing spaces.

Ms Calahasen: Well, my final question is to the same minister. And it is High Prairie. Currently, we have 42 long-term care beds and a lot of people waiting to get on the list, yet that new facility is only allotted 42 long-term care beds. We always talk about how we're meeting future needs of health care. How does this then meet the future needs of my constituents?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. What it means for the community of High Prairie and for the new High Prairie hospital, in fact, is that we need to continue to work together to complete the functional program design for the facility. Whether or not we have sufficient continuing care spaces included in the current draft of the plan is a very valid question, and it's one I'll be relying on the advice of the hon. member and her constituents for as we move ahead.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Tom Baker Cancer Centre Pathology Lab

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday Dr. Tony Magliocco sounded the alarm over the pending closure of cancer testing at the Tom Baker cancer centre. Not only do they express grave concerns over what might happen to Alberta cancer patients should this world-class testing facility close, but he told of what he encountered when he tried to raise these concerns. He was bullied, he was threatened, and he was told he would regret it if he didn't shut up and go along with it. To the health minister: can you assure Albertans here and now that cancer testing will not be impacted by the closure of the Tom Baker?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I thank the hon. member for this question because I can completely assure the residents of Calgary and, in fact, all Albertans that the testing services that will be provided when this relocation is complete to Calgary Lab Services will be safe, and they will be of the highest quality. In fact, as we speak, both Mount Sinai hospital from Toronto and the Mayo Clinic from the United States are involved in the validation of the testing processes that will be used at Calgary Lab Services.

2:20

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I find that answer very interesting, so I'm going to ask the minister this: when will you table that impact study?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I didn't talk about a particular study or report. My information is from Alberta Health Services with respect to the process they are following to plan for and implement the relocation of lab services.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I think it's unfortunate and, in fact, quite sad that members of this House would suggest to Albertans, to Calgarians that the services they are going to receive are unsafe, that patients are at risk as a result. This is not a closing; it's a relocation. It's being done with the utmost attention to detail and to the highest international quality standards that apply.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the health minister: given that the Tom Baker cancer centre will close – it will close, not relocate but close – in eight days and given that neither the Premier nor you or your superboard has given any assurance that cancer testing won't be impacted, will you please stop playing politics with the lives of Albertans and stop the closure of the Tom Baker cancer centre?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member would do well to develop an ability to distinguish between politics and science and appropriate approaches to health administration. First of all, the hon. member said that the Tom Baker centre is closing. It is not closing. Lab services located at that centre today are being relocated to a larger facility, Calgary Lab Services, and being consolidated with other services on that site. The result is the opportunity to deliver more tests, increase throughput, maintain and increase quality and safety, as we always do in the health care system, and ensure that Albertans have hope of receiving their test results in a more timely fashion in the future.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Secular Public Education in Greater St. Albert

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, I was present at the Alberta School Boards meeting this morning and had the opportunity to listen to the Minister of Education's comments. In his address the minister used the term "equity" and discussed applying that principle throughout the education system. When the minister spoke and used the term "equity," I immediately thought about the situation in Morinville, a situation where parents are wanting a secular school for their children but still do not have that opportunity. To the Minister of Education: why do parents in Morinville have to send their children to a school that is not a fully secularized public school?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for that good question. When I talk about equity, what I'm saying is that every child anywhere in Alberta, no matter where they live, deserves the same high quality of education. That doesn't always mean equality; it means equity because in some areas certain added resources need to be put in place to bring that level of education to the same level.

With reference to Morinville, Mr. Speaker, indeed there are concerns relevant to the provision of Catholic and secular education. The school board, whose trustees are duly elected by residents of that area, will have an opportunity to address that issue and resolve that issue. Hopefully, my office will not have to be involved in addressing a local issue.

Mr. Hehr: Well, given that the minister is in charge of this file and that that situation has been dragging on for some time and given that Morinville parents do not have a secular school of their own and that they are forced by government inaction to send their children to a holy parade of religious teaching, does the minister consider this equitable?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal of faith in and a great deal of respect for locally elected authorities. In that area there are duly elected trustees, and I know that they have the best interests of all children in the area in mind. I know that they have the ability to sit around a table – and I will be meeting with them, by the way, within the next couple of days. They will sit down around their common table and see if they can locally arrive at a solution so that one is not superimposed by my office. Locally arrived at solutions are always better than the ones put in place by a minister.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, this situation has dragged on for a number of years now. When will the minister take his skates off, do the right thing, and provide a solution to this problem where Morinville children cannot go to schools that provide a secularized schooling opportunity for their parents and for their children? Enough is enough. Let's make a decision.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this member obviously is not well informed on the nature of the issue and the seriousness of the issue. These parents indeed are looking to a resolution, but as I said earlier, there are reasons to believe that a resolution can be found at the local level.

This is not an issue that should be politicized. There is no skating going on. We have parents who have certain rights and want to exercise them. We have trustees that have the ability and the tools to resolve that issue. We'll let them resolve it immediately. If not, my office ultimately will have to make a decision. But that's not the ultimate way of bringing peace into that part of the world.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Quarterly Financial Reports

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As was evidenced earlier this afternoon with the official opposition on the quarterly update, all my questions are to the Minister of Finance. While financial accountability is important to any government, does the requirement of a public announcement of quarterly financial results provide any real value to the Alberta public regarding the long-term fiscal position of the government?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, these quarterly updates have been taking place now, I think, for some 15 years. They originated because at one point in time the budget that was projected ended up being quite different a year later. I think we have to emphasize that the quarterly updates really are just a snapshot in time. I guess what I would say is that we have to ensure that we reflect from these quarterly updates the budget that was introduced, not the previous quarter, and if you follow that strategy, we're pretty much on target with the budget that we introduced here in February.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The minister has given rise to my next question. Given that Alberta has a significantly volatile revenue stream, which is a result of reliance on nonrenewable resource revenue, does it make any sense to report publicly such short-term swings in revenue as required in the quarterly fiscal update?

Mr. Liepert: Well, we need to be clear, Mr. Speaker, that the quarterly reporting is actually the law of this Assembly, and I have no intention of breaking the law. So this is something that we will continue to do unless we change the law in this House. It's not my prerogative; it's this Assembly's. I guess all I could add is that our quarterly update does give Albertans a point-in-time view of what our financial situation is. I think that this is a government that's open and transparent, and we're not going to apologize for that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That leads me to my last question. Will the minister commit to reviewing the overall purpose of quarterly financial updates, taking into consideration that balance between financial accountability and other consequences, intended or unintended, of the current requirements?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think we're always looking for ways to improve. I would say that if there are suggestions within this Assembly of ways to improve on this reporting, please bring them forward. But I want to go back again that our objective is to be open and transparent and ensure that there are no surprises for Albertans when the year-end financial statement comes out.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Postsecondary Education Funding

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. During her leadership campaign the Premier promised new funding for postsecondary students. The harsh reality is that in the past two years Alberta students have seen millions of dollars cut from grant programs. Students, like all of us, are tired of empty promises. To the minister of advanced education: given the $3 billion deficit and the already scarce funds in our postsecondary system where and when is the minister going to get this additional funding? Or is he going to break the Premier's promise?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand up and answer that question. You're right. This Premier has spoken often about her commitment to education, to postsecondary education, and to health, and we're pleased with that. This is a very opportune time to talk. We are in budget discussions right now. We're talking about how we can fund the budget into the future. We're also looking at how we can do student finance differently to make sure that we have finances available for those students that need it most as well. So it's going to be a combination of moving forward with new funding for growth within the postsecondaries, new funding for new programs, as well as student finance options.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, a promise is a promise. So what precise timeline and amounts can the minister give us, other than the sort of vague reassurances we just got, as to the new bursaries that the Premier promised?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you. The budget will come out early in the new year, and all of those items will be included in the budget, the things that have been promised and discussed as well as some really exciting new things that I think everyone in the House here will be pleased to see. Postsecondary students are being consulted as we speak. We're working with our postsecondaries and looking for lots of great opportunities to continue to grow chances for both rural and urban students to get the best possible education they can.

Dr. Taft: Well, since Alberta literally is the richest place on earth, will the minister place accessibility first and restore the millions of dollars that were cut from student grants in the last budget?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you. I think you're probably referring to the access to the future, or at least as part of that, because that funding did flow through in support of grants and bursaries.

Last year we also made some changes. We removed some small grants but also increased significantly the amount of loans that were available to students because they'd asked us to increase those numbers in both how much they could borrow for living costs and all those things. We've tried to respond to what the students have asked for. The new program where students can volunteer for bursaries that will help them to gain both the experience in the not-for-profit sector and get bursaries and grants that they can use for their education is a wonderful new program that's only new this year. So I think we're doing a lot of good things for the students and for their finances

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Highway 2 Interchanges

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Nisku-Leduc industrial area in my constituency is located just south of Edmonton and is home to some 20,000 workers who travel highway 2 daily. Congestion at the highway 19 and Airport Road interchanges is becoming very dangerous. Traffic backs up to the Blackmud Creek, and there have been many recent accidents. To the Minister of Transportation: what is your department doing to help these workers and the rest of the public stay safe on highway 2 between Edmonton and Leduc in the near term?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, we are always working on our Alberta highways to ensure that they are safer for the public. In direct answer to the hon. member I want to say to him that the current construction that we're doing on 625 is going to alleviate some of the concerns going into Leduc off highway 19. As well, in the future we're hoping to do work on highway 19 to alleviate that congestion coming from the other side.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: with the continued growth in this corridor, including Port Alberta at the Edmonton International Airport, I'm just wondering what long-term infrastructure improvements you and the department are contemplating?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, in fact, that is a very congested highway, and in the future it does have to be twinned. I'm speaking about highway 19. We do have a lot of traffic that comes from the Devon area into the thoroughfare of highway 2. That is a bottleneck, and we're working on it and seeing what we can do in the very near future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, with the neighbouring communities of Leduc county, the city of Leduc, and of course Edmonton International Airport I would ask the minister whether or not he's willing to work with these entities to make sure that the planning is done properly?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, in fact, Mr. Speaker, as recently, I believe, as last week I had a meeting with the mayor of Leduc. Also, I'm hoping to meet with the municipality, the rural municipality, the county, and I believe we have a meeting planned with the airport commission. I have also met with the residents of the area to talk about the plans and the future plans for what we're doing as far as highway enhancement and the interchanges. I need to say to you that we very much recognize that that area is a concern, and the safety of Albertans is always our primary focus.

Logging in the Castle Special Management Area

Mr. Chase: This year is the United Nations International Year of Forests. This should be a joyful occasion to celebrate our natural heritage and biodiversity. Unfortunately, Alberta reality isn't so. This government has sold out against citizens' will an ecologically significant forest treasure with the upcoming logging in the Castle area. To the Minister of SRD: given that the vast majority of Albertans are opposed to the devastating effects of clear-cutting, will the minister commit to banning this unsustainable practice from our province?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is probably not aware or, I would say, definitely not aware that there has in fact been logging in this region for over a hundred years. I think the evidence speaks for itself. It's done in a responsible and sustainable manner.

Mr. Chase: To the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation: given that clear-cutting will have a negative impact on local business and provincial tourism, how can the minister justify going against his own mandate, which is to promote Alberta as a tourism destination?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's exactly what we do, promote Alberta as a tourist destination, one of the very finest in the world. So that the hon. member understands, it's against the law in Alberta to take timber in a park.

Mr. Chase: And that's my next question. Thank you very much. Given that the vast majority of residents in southwest Alberta want reinforced special places protection for the Castle area, will the minister defend our natural heritage and proclaim the Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kòp wildland park?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of course, we will treat this advice that we're getting from Albertans as we always treat advice from Albertans. If it's what, in fact, they want, it's what I'm expecting they will get. We want to protect as much of Alberta's eastern slopes as we possibly can because it's such a treasure not just to Albertans but to the rest of the world.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Federal Safe Streets and Communities Act

Mr. Allred: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In September the federal government introduced the Safe Streets and Communities Act, an omnibus crime bill aimed at targeting crime and terrorism and providing support and protection to victims of crime. My first question is to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Does Alberta support the changes proposed in Bill C-10?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta does support many of the changes proposed in C-10, and we've long been supportive of the changes that have been worked on in individual bills that have led to this new omnibus bill. We're supportive of changes to the Criminal Code that we feel are needed to ensure that our communities remain safe and secure. We're going to continue to work to ensure that our courts and our police and Crown prosecutors have the tools that they need to ensure safe communities. We're going to be watching this legislation with interest as it proceeds.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for that answer. My first supplementary question is to the same minister. Is the Alberta government in support of the mandatory minimum sentences proposed in Bill C-10?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, these new mandatory minimums and the proposed increases to existing mandatory minimums we think achieve much-needed consistency and predictability and an appropriate floor, particularly when it relates to crimes against children. Alberta has taken a leading role in connection with protection of children against these types of offences, and we've been prosecuting vigorously. These sentencing ranges, interestingly, that are being proposed in the new legislation actually are still below the vigorous sentences that we've been seeing in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last supplemental is to the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Both Ontario and Quebec have stated that they are refusing to pay additional costs associated with the bill. Has the minister considered the costs associated with this bill and who will be picking up the tab?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Fighting crime does cost money, unlike what the opposition may seem to think today, and we want to be at the table with the federal government to discuss this issue. The bill has not yet been passed, but I am meeting with the federal Minister of Public Safety, Vic Toews, next month to discuss this. There are many positive things to the bill such as the modernization dealing with Internet predation as well as the changes to the Youth Criminal Justice Act that our government does see as positive. We will be discussing the financial issues behind it as well.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes question period for today. Eighteen members were recognized; 108 questions and responses. In 30 seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine, Members' Statements.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Tom Baker Cancer Centre Pathology Lab

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday an Alberta doctor came forward who had been the director of pathology at the Tom Baker cancer centre when he resigned after encountering threats and intimidation for opposing the closure of the cancer lab. In his expert opinion closing the lab and shutting down the world-class cancer-testing institute could have serious potential life-threatening impacts on cancer patients. He did not want a repeat of what had taken place in Newfoundland.

He tried raising his fears with everyone he could, with the government bureaucracy and superboard. He raised it with the former health minister. He raised it with the superboard chair. He even raised it with the man the Premier is going to entrust with reviewing the health care system. He was told by a superboard supervisor that he would, quote, regret it if he did not shut up and go along with the government plan. At least the new minister of health voiced his displeasure with such inexcusable behaviour. Alberta cancer patients are appalled at how this Alberta doctor was treated.

Let me pivot for a moment to my hometown of Fort McMurray. This government often speaks of the Alberta economic engine, the oil sands. The only problem is that they have no idea how to oil it for health care. We are Canada's fastest growing community, but our public school board has received only one school in the last 26 years as we have over 1,200 births a year. Maybe that's a sign of cold winters. Clearly, things such as long-term care, highway 63 delays – both of these issues speak to an irrefutable truth. A question. Is this government interested in only two things: power and holding onto it no matter who they try to intimidate along the way?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Centennials of Edmonton-Calder Churches

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Churches are often bastions of cultural preservation and community growth. When a church celebrates a 100th anniversary, communities and congregations gather to remember the past and prepare for the great things to come. I'm pleased this afternoon to speak of not one but two such gatherings in my constituency. On October 23 St. Edmund's Catholic parish and school celebrated 100 years in Calder. On November 5 Chalmers-Castle Downs United church also celebrated its centenary.

It should come as no surprise that these two churches would still be thriving 100 years from when they were founded. After all, Mr. Speaker, Calder, or the village of North Edmonton, as it was known in those days, led the region in growth. To most of you here today, hon. members may not be aware that the first roads paved with bitumen from Fort McMurray were in Calder. Paving was done to improve the roadbed for the first streetcar line out of Edmonton. It was, in essence, the government of Alberta's first investment in regional light-rail transit, and it played a major role in the success of both St. Ed's and Chalmers as successful congregations. St. Edmund's parish and school established itself as part of the new community of Calder growing up around the railroad. The United church opened its manse adjacently in Elm Park, a community aptly named for its vegetation.

When you think, Mr. Speaker, of the good works these two congregations have done in the last 100 years, one cannot help but be humble. I hope that we can give pause to think about the lives that have been enriched and the people who have benefited from the presence of these two institutions. Staying true to their roots and their beliefs has helped both congregations weather the passage of seasons and the changes in society. Both enjoyed fine celebrations with some reflection on the past and strong hope for the future. While I may not be here to celebrate with them in another 100 years, I do believe that they will do good work and continue the essential work that they do.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Anthony Henday Drive

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about the important investment that our government, with the support of the federal government and the city of Edmonton, has made in our provincial infrastructure over the past several years. Anthony Henday Drive, also known as highway 216, was first envisioned in the 1970s as Canada's first free-flowing ring road. Since then, much funding, innovation, and hard work has gone into realizing this vision. The government of Alberta has invested over $2.2 billion into the development of this road.

Mr. Speaker, in the constituency of Edmonton-McClung three new interchanges were opened in the past few months. The Callingwood Road and Lessard overpasses were built at an investment of $45 million, and the Cameron Heights overpass at $25 million. These interchanges have made the everyday commute in and around Edmonton safer, more convenient, and more enjoyable. The completion of the Cameron Heights interchange means that the last set of traffic lights was officially removed from Anthony Henday Drive, enabling a continuous traffic flow, which will potentially reduce noise levels along the ring road.

Just a few kilometres north of my constituency of Edmonton-McClung the Stony Plain interchange has also opened at an investment of $168.6 million, which has significantly improved the traffic flow on the west side of the capital region.

Mr. Speaker, our government has always been dedicated to investing in infrastructure to aid in our economic growth and to ultimately enhance the lives of Albertans. The construction of these four new interchanges on the Edmonton ring road is an excellent example of our commitment to making Alberta the best place to live, work, and drive.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Bullying Awareness and Prevention

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Jamey Rodemeyer, age 14; Jared Benjamin High, age 13; Gary Hansen, age 16; Dawn-Marie Wesley, age 14; Megan Meier, age 13: these are young people across North America who were so tormented and traumatized by repeated bullying that they chose to end their own lives rather than open another vicious Facebook message or suffer through another day of homophobic taunting. Their deaths are society's loss and are heartbreaking for their families and friends who loved them.

Tragically, youth are bullied every day right here in Alberta. It is senseless and unjustifiable aggression. Bullying in any form, in any place is unacceptable. So, too, is being a complicit bystander or witness without standing up to reverse it.

November 13 to 19 was national Bullying Awareness Week. This year our government supported a call to action led by passionate and courageous youth from Alberta's Prevention of Bullying Youth Committee. Children and youth in schools and communities across the province staged awareness activities, sending the message loud and clear to all Albertans that bullying is horrible, it is wrong, and it's not a normal part of growing up.

We urge all people in all communities to join in our call to action to continue to raise awareness of bullying and promote a kind, respectful, and safe society. Our actions must speak as loudly as our words. United let us take a stand against bullying, help make Alberta bully free, and save lives not just during national Bullying Awareness Week but every day.

As a reminder of this, I am pleased to note that every MLA has been provided with a Stand Up and Stop Bullying wristband. I trust many are wearing those bracelets today.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let us remember.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Public Health Inquiry

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Of all the responsibilities that fall to government, surely the most important is to defend, protect, and foster trust and good health among its citizens. This government has jeopardized the quality of Alberta's health care system with years of mismanagement, and in recent months there have surfaced credible and extremely troubling allegations of financial misconduct and systemic government intimidation of health care professionals who speak for their patients.

Health care professionals with impeccable credentials have stated publicly that there is a culture of fear and intimidation in public health care today, and it continues. The morale of Alberta's health care professionals is at an all-time low as bullying and payoffs erode the foundation of the health care system and of this government. For these reasons, the Official Opposition has repeatedly called for a public inquiry to unearth the truth surrounding these allegations so that we can fix and restore trust to our ailing public health care system.

For a brief moment it appeared as though the Premier recognized the urgency of holding a public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act. During her race to become leader of the PC Party she joined our call for a public inquiry, and at the time we congratulated her for her courage. Unfortunately, she has waffled. She has refused to call a public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act. Instead, she has decided to bring forward unprecedented, unnecessary, and costly new legislation granting more powers to the Health Quality Council. What's next? An education health quality act? It's merely a delaying tactic protecting the government from uncomfortable truths until after the next election. Is the current Public Inquiries Act inadequate? If it is, fix it. Don't create more bureaucracy and duplication.

The Premier has broken her most important promise to Albertans. So much for integrity and accountability to the public and the professionals of Alberta.

Thank you.

2:50      Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat and chair of the Legislative Offices Committee.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices and in accordance with section 19(5) of the Auditor General Act I would like to table five copies of the report by the Auditor General entitled Report of the Auditor General of Alberta, November 2011. Copies of this report are now being distributed to all members.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane and chair of the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund.

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pursuant to section 16(2) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act and as chair of the Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund it is my pleasure to table the 2010-11 annual report on the fund.

Pursuant to section 15(2) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act I am also tabling the 2011-12 first-quarter update on the fund. Copies of these two reports have previously been distributed to members.

Finally, pursuant to section 15(2) of the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund Act I am pleased to table the 2011-12 second-quarter update on the fund, which was released yesterday. Copies will be distributed this afternoon.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition I would like to table two documents that were referenced during the leader's questions today. One is copies of an FPinfomart article from the Edmonton Journal: Redford waves red flag at fellow Tories; Call for probe into queue-jumping allegations.

The second one was posted June 7, 2011 – I'm sorry; I don't know where – Allison Redford Calls for Public Inquiry. Both of these were referenced, so I'm tabling them on behalf of the leader.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table five copies of 16 letters I have received from my constituents at St. Theresa's parish, who call upon our government of Alberta "to develop and then implement a comprehensive Child Poverty Reduction Plan that would reduce and ultimately eliminate child poverty in Alberta."

My second tabling is five copies of the third annual eagle awards of excellence for outstanding community members within the constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods, that took place on Saturday, November 12, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have three tablings today. The first is pursuant to section 39(3) of the Legislative Assembly Act. I wish to table with the Assembly the appropriate copies of a number of orders that were passed by the Special Standing Committee on Members' Services at its November 16, 2011, meeting. Copies of all orders tabled today will be provided to members and will be incorporated into the consolidated Members' Services orders binders and made available: constituency services amendment order 23, which came into force on November 16, 2011; members' allowances amendment order 21, which comes into force on April 1, 2012; and constituency services amendment order 24, which comes into force on April 1, 2012.

As well, I'm pleased to table copies of a brochure entitled Page Biographies, Legislative Assembly of Alberta, 27th Legislature, Fourth Session, Fall 2011. These basically give you a background on these young people who participate with us on a daily basis.

Pursuant to section 46(2) of the Conflicts of Interest Act the chair is pleased to table with the Assembly the annual report of the Ethics Commissioner. This report covers the period April 1, 2010, to March 31, 2011.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Lukaszuk, Minister of Education, school jurisdictions' audited financial statements for the year ended August 31, 2010, sections 1, 2, and 3; Speak Out, Alberta student engagement initiative year in review 2010-11.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Olson, Minister of Justice and Attorney General, pursuant to the Legal Profession Act the Law Society of Alberta 2010 annual accountability report.

Privilege

Misleading the House

The Speaker: Hon. members, yesterday as we ended the Routine, an hon. member rose to present a case for privilege. I asked yesterday if there were additional members who wanted to participate. One member indicated yesterday that he would want to do so today. Standing Orders 15(1) and (2) talk about brief statements. I'll recognize additional participants if they wish.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At the heart of the point of privilege raised against the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, the former minister of health, is the ongoing claim by this government, which cannot be substantiated, that Albertans are supportive of a two-tier private-public health care system. This deceitful suggestion is no more true now than it was in 2003-2004, when I served as the Alberta chair of Friends of Medicare, a nonprofit, nonpartisan advocacy group for the preservation of public health care.

While the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek is currently at the centre of this controversial whirlpool, the ripple effects touch and taint every current member of the Conservative caucus and many former members, most notably Ralph Klein, whose third way was considered unpalatable by the vast majority of Albertans. Likewise, a key factor in our last Premier's forced abdication from the throne was the mess he made along with his chosen deconstructor, the Member for Calgary-West, whose centralizing health board attempts continue to be a costly super failure.

Our most recently selected Premier has found herself caught within the whirlpool's grasp by attempting in vain to backstroke away from her . . .

The Speaker: Sir. Sir.

Mr. Chase: . . . campaign promise to call a judicial . . .

The Speaker: Sir. [interjection] Calgary-Varsity, please sit down. Three times I've tried to interrupt you. You weren't looking at me. You were reading your paper. What has this got to do with the point of privilege so far? This is a point of privilege we're talking about, the most serious of all allegations that can be made against a member. It is not a time for theatrics or anything else. You come to the point of privilege, or I'm not going to allow you to participate any further.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, the point of privilege is about the deception of this House putting forward the idea that Albertans support the privatization of health care as alluded to by the minister of health. That is what I am attempting to address. Under the point of privilege it has been suggested that . . .

The Speaker: Sorry. You may misunderstand. Sit down. This is about an individual. That's what this is about, not the government. This is about an individual, the most serious of all charges that can be brought in this Assembly, with dire penalties for all who participate. So get to the point of privilege of the member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. The dream of Tommy Douglas, that was legislated into Canada's national reality by Liberal Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson, will continue to be cherished by Albertans. While today's point of privilege is primarily focused on the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, his Conservative caucus colleagues can no longer hide either in the shadows or, to conclude the whirlpool metaphor, the shallows.

The Speaker: Okay. I've given the opportunity.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek, tomorrow I will recognize you if you want to respond with respect to this input that we've received in this Assembly. If I'm able, I will deal with a resolution of this matter on Thursday afternoon after I've heard this and had a chance to review what is in the text.

Are there any additional members that want to participate on this before we close and give an opportunity for the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek tomorrow?

Orders of the Day Government Motions Evening Sittings

26. Mr. Hancock moved:
Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 4(1) beginning November 22, 2011, the Assembly shall meet on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings for consideration of government business for the remainder of the 2011 fall sitting unless on motion by the Government House Leader made before 6 p.m., which may be made orally and without notice, the Assembly is adjourned to the following sitting day.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the motion as proposed by the hon. Government House Leader is not debatable, so I'll ask the question.

[Government Motion 26 carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

3:00 Committee Membership Changes

25. Mr. Hancock moved:
Be it resolved that the following changes to the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices be approved: that Mr. Blackett replace Mr. Mitzel as chair, that Mr. Ouellette replace Mr. Mitzel.

[Government Motion 25 carried]

Transmittal of Estimates

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier and President of Treasury Board and Enterprise.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I have received a certain message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, which I now transmit to you.

The Sergeant-at-Arms: Order!

The Speaker: The Lieutenant Governor transmits supplementary supply estimates of certain sums required for the service of the province for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, and recommends the same to the Legislative Assembly.

Please be seated.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, when supplementary estimates are tabled, section 8 of the Government Accountability Act requires that a new or amended fiscal plan be tabled. Accordingly, I wish to table the 2011-12 second-quarter fiscal update, which serves as the amended fiscal plan. The 2011-12 second-quarter fiscal update has already been provided to all members and released publicly as required by the Government Accountability Act.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier and President of Treasury Board and Enterprise.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The quarterly fiscal update tabled by the Minister of Finance provides the framework for additional spending authority for the Legislative Assembly and for the government. I now wish to table the 2011-12 supplementary supply estimates. These will provide additional spending authority to two offices of the Legislature and nine departments of the government.

When passed, the estimates will authorize an approximate increase of $2.4 million in expense and capital investment of the Legislative Assembly and approximate increases of $864.9 million in expense, $82 million in capital investment, and $250,000 in nonbudgetary disbursements of the government. These estimates will also authorize transfers of approximately $80.7 million of the previously approved spending authority from the Department of Treasury Board and Enterprise to five departments and an approximate transfer of $58.4 million from expense to capital investment within the Department of Infrastructure.

23. Mr. Horner moved:
Be it resolved that the message from His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, the 2011-12 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund, and all matters connected therewith be referred to Committee of Supply.

The Speaker: Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Government Motion 23 carried]

24. Mr. Horner moved:
Be it resolved that pursuant to Standing Order 61(2) the number of days that Committee of Supply will be called to consider the 2011-12 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund shall be one day.

[Government Motion 24 carried]

Government Bills and Orders*Second Reading*Bill 24*Health Quality Council of Alberta Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to rise and introduce second reading of Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act.

Mr. Speaker, two key commitments of our Premier are to reposition the Health Quality Council of Alberta in a way that its independence is clear and, secondly, to provide a new mechanism for public inquiries to effectively address health system matters. This bill delivers on both commitments.

I want to begin by recognizing the important role played by the council and how that is being maintained and fostered in this bill. Mr. Speaker, the core mandate of the Health Quality Council is focused on facilitating the continuous improvement of quality of health care services in our province. The council's specific goal is to promote and improve patient safety and health service quality on a province-wide basis. To do this, the council works co-operatively with health organizations to bring a patient focus to the health system. HQCA activities involve measuring and monitoring safety and quality of care factors, identifying and recommending effective health service practices, assisting with the evaluation of strategies to improve patient safety, and surveying Albertans about their experience and satisfaction with our health care system.

The ability of the council to network and maintain positive health system relationships will continue under this bill, Mr. Speaker. In addition, the council will continue to have matters regarding patient safety and health service quality referred to it for assessment by the Minister of Health and Wellness or Alberta Health Services.

The Health Quality Council of Alberta plays an important advisory role in this regard. The ability of the Minister of Alberta Health and Wellness and Alberta Health Services to refer matters to the council has enabled an independent and expert review of emerging issues in a timely fashion. Throughout the last decade, Mr. Speaker, we have seen many examples of this fine work. This work will continue to be undertaken by the Health Quality Council. It is important, and it is valued. It is a critical component of the health system, and I note that most provinces in Canada have similar organizations in place to facilitate health system service improvements. This bill will enable the Health Quality Council to continue to work within the health system on identifying and implementing improvements to the quality of health services in our province.

Mr. Speaker, the council is also authorized to establish a quality assurance committee, which operates in accordance with section 9 of the Alberta Evidence Act. Operating in a quality assurance committee creates an evidentiary privilege over the information that the committee receives. This means that the information cannot be used in other legal or administrative proceedings.

The work done by a quality assurance committee is important in encouraging continuous quality improvement in our health system. It fosters the sharing of information and ideas and aims to create an environment that seeks out and adopts the best health services practices available. The continuing work and effectiveness of the Health Quality Council in promoting patient safety and health system improvements will depend on its ability to conduct some of its work through its own quality assurance committee. This bill makes continued provision for this.

Mr. Speaker, I've talked about what is not changing with this bill, and I want to spend a few minutes now speaking about what is changing. The Health Quality Council is currently a corporation established by cabinet regulation under section 17 of the Regional Health Authorities Act. Its members are appointed by the Minister of Health and Wellness. While the Health Quality Council has always operated independently and at arm's length from the Minister of Health and Wellness, this bill will provide a greater separation between the council and the health ministry. It does this in several ways.

The Health Quality Council of Alberta will no longer be established by cabinet regulation under the Regional Health Authorities Act. Under Bill 24 the council is continued as a corporation. Appointments to the board will no longer be made by the health minister; appointments will be made by cabinet. As well, the Health Quality Council will be required to submit an annual report to the Speaker of this Legislative Assembly – to you, Mr. Speaker – on the business and activities of the council for the preceding fiscal year, including a financial statement.

The Health Quality Council will operate in whole or in part with public funds granted to it and must demonstrate proper stewardship over those funds and accountability for its activities, including appearances before the Public Accounts Committee. In this regard, Mr. Speaker, the bill contains provisions that require the directors of the corporation to make bylaws establishing a code of conduct and an investments policy, and there are limits on the ability of the council to provide indemnities or to borrow money. As well, the bill provides for the board of the Health Quality Council to appoint a chief executive officer, establish committees, and delegate responsibilities. These are matters common to corporations and are required for the efficient conduct of business of a council.

Mr. Speaker, for any member of this Assembly who is truly interested in a greater degree of openness, transparency, and accountability, the provisions I have just outlined will ensure that the Health Quality Council, under its new status as proposed by this bill, delivers that.

Mr. Speaker, a new health system inquiry authority is also provided for in this bill. While this authority is very similar and imports many provisions from the Public Inquiries Act, it has some special distinctions designed to make it more functional for the purpose of looking specifically into serious health system matters. An inquiry based on this bill, like one based on the Public Inquiries Act, is initiated by cabinet. Cabinet will be responsible for determining whether or not an inquiry is in the public interest, and if so, cabinet will determine the nature, scope, and timing of the inquiry.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, a public inquiry is a significant activity not to be taken lightly, requiring a large commitment of financial and human resources. It is a very powerful tool for getting to the bottom of a matter and must be used judiciously.

One of the distinctions from a more traditional public inquiry is that in this case, when a decision is made to hold a health system inquiry, cabinet will ask the Health Quality Council to appoint one or more individuals to the panel. Subject to the agreement of the courts the appointment may be a judge and may also include individuals with expertise in health system matters. The bill also manages potential conflicts that could arise from appointments made by the Health Quality Council of Alberta. Specifically, there is a requirement that if the Health Quality Council has reviewed a matter that becomes the subject of a health system inquiry, the inquiry must be conducted by one or more individuals with no prior involvement in the matter.

Once appointed, the panel operates independently. The panel will have the same powers, privileges, and immunities as a commissioner has under the Public Inquiries Act. Mr. Speaker, this means that the panel will have the power to summon any persons as witnesses and compel them to give evidence, to require witnesses to produce any documents that may be required in order for there to be a full investigation of the matters that are the subject of the inquiry, and while witnesses will generally have the same privileges in relation to the disclosure of information and the production of documents that a witness has in a court, such as maintaining solicitor and client privilege, the panel will have the power to compel a witness to answer questions even in the case where under an act, regulation, order, or agreement that witness would be required to not disclose certain information.

This provision covers what is often referred to as nondisclosure agreements, where a physician and employer, for example, may have parted ways and have both agreed to a settlement that includes a clause whereby neither side can disclose information contained in that agreement. Mr. Speaker, under Bill 24 both sides can be asked about the contents of those settlement agreements as part of a health system inquiry.

As you can see, the powers vested in the panel are considerable and must be applied fairly. For example, it is important for the panel to have the ability to protect personal health information from unnecessary disclosure and to protect the private interests of a person who is not directly involved in the inquiry and who would be prejudiced by a public disclosure. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, explicit provision is made for the panel to hold a hearing or part of a hearing in camera – in other words, in private – on an application being made by a person.

In deciding whether or not to go in camera, the panel must take a number of matters into consideration. These are listed in section 19 of the bill and include such factors as whether the disclosure of a medical record of a patient is likely to result in harm to the patient or to the treatment or recovery of the patient. Mr. Speaker, I think you will agree that these are matters that Albertans take very seriously.

Another factor to consider is whether the disclosure of information that is subject to a nondisclosure clause in an agreement should be in camera because to hear it in public would be injurious to the interests of justice. The basis on which the panel can hear matters in camera is similar to the Fatality Inquiries Act.

The in camera provisions are broader than under the Public Inquiries Act. As well, where the Public Inquiries Act makes it mandatory for certain matters to be heard in private, the provisions in Bill 24 leave the decision to the discretion of the panel. Matters heard in camera cannot be published or otherwise disclosed with the exception that the panel may disclose these matters in its report if the panel is satisfied that the disclosure is essential to the completeness and integrity of the report and is in the public interest. It is important to note that the bill contains provisions that prevent the panel from making any findings of legal responsibility and that prevent findings from being used or received against a person in other legal proceedings. The report emanating from a health system inquiry will be reported not to the minister or to the cabinet; it will be reported to the Legislative Assembly through the Speaker as a result of provisions in this bill. If the Assembly is not sitting, Mr. Speaker, you are under these provisions required to make the report public.

Mr. Speaker, I've spoken about various provisions of the bill and what will not change and what will change with respect to the role of the Health Quality Council. Before I close, I'd like to take a moment to highlight the three most important reasons I believe this bill should be supported by all members of the House. First of all, as I mentioned earlier, Albertans take the matter of the protection of personal health information extremely seriously. This bill makes explicit provisions for the protection of that information under the proceedings in a public inquiry.

Secondly – and I can't emphasize this enough – the provisions of the existing Public Inquiries Act, in the case where an inquiry is called, permit cabinet to appoint the members of the panel of inquiry. Under the provisions of this bill the Health Quality Council, not members of cabinet, will have power to appoint members of the panel. Contrary to what has been erroneously reported previously, the Health Quality Council will not conduct the public inquiry. They will appoint the members of the panel, who will conduct the inquiry in accordance with the provisions in the proposed legislation.

Mr. Speaker, in consideration of the consultation that we did in the preparation of the underlying concepts for this legislation, I am confident that we have struck the right balance with what we are proposing in Bill 24. We have maintained the important role the Health Quality Council currently has in assessing public satisfaction with the health system as well as assessing patient safety concerns. We also have proposed to add important inquiry powers that are customized to the health system to protect personal information to allow the council to use its expertise and knowledge in identifying individuals to be appointed to an inquiry panel, including a judge. In addition, the bill provides for the council to report independently to the Legislative Assembly on an annual basis.

Mr. Speaker, I am very confident this legislation will serve the interests of Albertans and that it directly addresses the concerns that have been raised in this House over the last year with respect to inquiries into health system matters.

At this time I would like to move second reading of the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, and I would also move to adjourn debate at this time. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 22

Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to speak to Bill 22, the Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011. This bill contains a variety of amendments and housekeeping changes to a number of statutes. These amendments are intended to improve the effectiveness, consistency, and clarity of our legislation. I'll begin with changes to a variety of justice statutes.

This legislation contains minor amendments to the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act, the Wills and Succession Act, the Administration of Estates Act, the Family Law Act, the Family Law Statutes Amendment Act, 2010, the Fatality Inquiries Act, and the Witness Security Act. The majority of the amendments in these statutes are minor in nature such as fixing typographical errors.

However, I would like to highlight several more significant amendments. The amendments to the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act, for example, will expand the application of the act and make it easier and more cost-effective for the civil forfeiture office to carry out its duties under the act. This act allows the government to seize profits from crime and property used to commit crimes such as vehicles and weapons. This action is called civil forfeiture because the application is brought in the civil courts. Currently the civil forfeiture office can seize goods from illegal acts that are contraventions of the Criminal Code and the Controlled Drugs and Substances Act. For the acts to apply to illegal acts, to the offences under provincial statutes, these statutes must be specified by regulation. Work on this regulation is currently under way.

The amendments proposed to the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act will allow the act to apply to illegal acts that take place before or after the Alberta statutes specified by regulation are in force. The amendments will also permit additional persons other than a civil enforcement agency to carry out functions related to seized property. For example, the civil forfeiture office could save money by using towing or storage services.

The Wills and Succession Act updates and consolidates five pieces of legislation related to the transfer of property on death. Over the past year Justice lawyers and private practitioners have provided feedback on wording in the Wills and Succession Act that could improve the clarity and consistency of the act. These amendments respond to that feedback.

An example is in the survivorship provision. This provision governs who inherits property if two or more individuals die in circumstances where it is uncertain which of them survived the other. The law would be that people who died in these circumstances will not inherit property from each other unless their will says otherwise. As well, any property the deceased hold jointly is to be deemed to be a tenancy in common although the act does not specify it must be equal shares. Lawyers told us the Wills and Succession Act was not as clear as it could be on this point, so we have rewritten this section.

Other amendments remove redundant words, clarify transitional periods, and replace words with ones that are properly defined.

Lastly, the amendments to the Administration of Estates Act reflect that certain responsibilities, mainly aimed at avoiding duplication of grants, have been transferred from the Public Trustee's office to the clerk of the court.

Next I will discuss amendments to court statutes. The Court of Queen's Bench Act will be amended to give those appointed to the judicial office of master the option of retiring and sitting on a half-time basis. This will provide experienced masters with an option for continued service when they might otherwise retire. A provision will be added restricting masters from engaging in other employment while in office. This will reduce conflict-of-interest situations for masters.

The Justice of the Peace Act will be amended to combine the duties and jurisdictions of sitting and presiding justices of the peace into a single office. This will create more flexibility in the assignment of duties to justices of the peace. Consequential amendments will also be made to other statutes that refer to sitting and presiding justices of the peace. Provisions will be added to permit justices of the peace to be appointed to a further one-year term on an ad hoc basis after completion of the initial 10-year term and to permit part-time JPs to apply for full-time positions when they become available. This will allow experienced justices of the peace to continue serving in different capacities and will enhance the efficiency and effective functioning of the justice of the peace program.

Additionally, amendments will be made to restrict full-time justices of the peace from engaging in the practice of law and limiting the type of law that part-time justices of the peace can practise while in office. This will ensure that justices of the peace are free from an appearance of conflict of interest or bias.

The Provincial Court Act will be amended to remove the birthday commencement date provision for part-time judicial service. This will permit a part-time judicial appointment to be made effective on any day of the year, giving the Provincial Court greater flexibility in scheduling when a judge elects to sit part-time. The act will also be amended to clarify the options available for the Court of Queen's Bench when hearing an appeal from the civil division of the Provincial Court. Specifically, the amendments will clarify that the Court of Queen's Bench is able to make a decision on the transcripts of evidence given in Provincial Court or hear the matter anew but cannot send the matter back to Provincial Court for a new trial unless there is no transcript of the evidence given in Provincial Court.

Amendments are proposed to the Proceedings Against the Crown Act which will permit commencement of proceedings against the provincial Crown in Provincial Court, civil. I refer to small claims here within the court's monetary and substantive jurisdiction. Currently claims against the provincial Crown involving $25,000 or less must be commenced in the Court of Queen's Bench. Allowing these claims to be brought in small claims court, where the procedures are less complicated and litigants do not require the assistance of lawyers, will improve access to justice for Albertans.

The Civil Enforcement Act will also be amended to improve civil enforcement procedures and to clarify provisions. It is an offence for a person to purport to be a sheriff or display the word "sheriff" on uniforms, badges, or vehicles. Amendments will clarify that peace officers and clerks who use the title "sheriff" under the authority of other statutes are not guilty of an offence.

Amendments will be made to reduce the number of days seized property can be kept in storage before a civil enforcement agency can notify creditors that it intends to release the seized property. Amendments will also reduce the number of days of notice that must be given to creditors before seized property is released. This will help avoid unnecessary storage costs.

The length of time a garnishee summons remains in effect will be increased from one year to two years, making it consistent with the writ of enforcement and reducing renewal costs. The requirement that a creditor obtain a court order to seize property that's already under seizure by another creditor will be eliminated. This will streamline procedures and help ensure creditors do not lose right of priorities with respect to seized property.

Finally, as part of the court statutes amendments some minor consequential amendments will be made to the Builders' Lien Act. These amendments are being made to make the procedures and terminology in the act consistent with the procedures and terminology in the Alberta Rules of Court. The amendments substitute "court clerk" for "clerk of the court" and eliminate the requirement for the court clerk to affix the court seal on certificates.

Legal Profession Act amendments. This bill also contains two amendments to the Legal Profession Act. The first amendment deals with the process under which lawyers are disciplined for misconduct. The Law Society of Alberta is a self-governing body for Alberta's lawyers with a mandate to regulate the legal profession in the public interest. A lawyer's membership, standing, competence, and conduct are subject to the regulations of the Law Society under the Legal Profession Act. The governing body of the Law Society, the Benchers, have established a conduct process task force to examine this area. The task force determined that the current process is fair and transparent to lawyers, complainants, and the public but identified opportunities to enhance efficiency and timeliness.

Proposed changes include a process to deal with minor infractions that do not engage the integrity of a lawyer, a process that will allow for alternative measures. A three-member hearing committee will not be required for every hearing. An expedited process would be available for an immediate guilty plea by a lawyer. A process would be available, when appropriate, for the appointment of non-Benchers to sit on hearing committees and the requirement that all conduct appeals go to the Benchers first, with an ultimate appeal to the Court of Appeal.

The second amendment supports mobility of lawyers between the Law Society of Alberta and the Barreau du Québec. The Law Societies of all provinces signed the Quebec mobility agreement in March 2010. Reciprocity with Quebec requires the ability to put conditions on the call to the Alberta bar by a Quebec lawyer. The amendments in this bill support mobility through this agreement. Proposed changes include a requirement that a lawyer be a member in good standing of his or her home jurisdiction and the ability to restrict a lawyer's practice areas in Alberta.

As hon. members can see, there are a great number of amendments included in Bill 22. I urge all hon. members to support these changes as they will improve the effectiveness, consistency, and clarity of our legislation.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I also move to adjourn debate on Bill 22. Thank you.

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it is a pleasure to stand before you today. On November 21 the government introduced Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, which proposes strengthening Alberta's approach to impaired driving.

Drinking and driving imposes numerous costs and enormous costs on our society. The true cost of drinking and driving is the victims. From 2006 to 2010, Mr. Speaker, 569 people were killed and 8,350 people were injured in alcohol-related collisions. In 2010 alone 96 people were killed and 1,384 were injured. Despite increased awareness and the serious toll on society, Albertans continue to drink and drive.

Alberta's approach builds on the existing action that Alberta has in place. We already have a 24-hour suspension in the .05 to .08 range, a successful ignition interlock program, and programs designed to change behaviours. This builds on what already is there.

For example, we continue to use a blood-alcohol level of .05 to .08 as a guideline for a warn reading. That doesn't change. What we're doing is increasing the consequences on the penalty end. Another thing that doesn't change is that we are not implementing fines. All costs are associated with things like getting your licence or your vehicle back or taking a course, for example. Mr. Speaker, these costs are not borne by the taxpayer. They are paid by the offender.

What changes the most in Bill 26 is the emphasis on repeat offenders. We continue to be encouraged by the support from our traffic safety partners, all of whom want safer roads, especially as Alberta continues to grow. There is a direct consequence and prevention such as remedial courses for repeat offenders, licence suspensions, vehicle seizures, and ignition interlock devices. In other words, this approach favours driver education, enforcement, monitoring, and addictions assessment, all designed to help change behaviours, and it introduces immediate consequences.

An appeal process will be available through the independent tribunal. The Alberta Transportation Safety Board, which consists of community members with varying backgrounds, will hear many of these appeals. These board members, who are appointed by an order in council, will hear appeals of a second and any subsequent roadside licence suspensions and vehicle seizures, licence suspensions which are given to new drivers, and licence suspensions which are given when a criminal charge has been laid. That means that if you need a vehicle for your job or you need to appeal a vehicle seizure or if you lend your vehicle to a friend or a family member and your vehicle is seized, you will have the opportunity to appeal that seizure.

Mr. Speaker, it's very important to reinforce that this is not about stopping people from enjoying social activities. This is about separating drinking and driving. We want motorists to plan ahead and make decisions that they will not regret. Driving is a privilege, and we all have the responsibility to practise safe driving. We all use Alberta roads, and we want to know that the person in the car next to us is alert, able to respond rapidly, and paying full attention to the road. Introducing a more targeted impaired driving law is another step towards making our roads safer for all of us.

Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, focuses on improving safety on our roads by encouraging greater personal responsibility and behaviours that save lives. I know that there are different views on this sensitive issue, and I look forward to the upcoming debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to adjourn debate.

Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm privileged to rise and move second reading of Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011.

Central to Bill 23 is the clarity, fair compensation, and full access to the courts that these amendments bring to the act and the power that it brings to landowners. With these amendments property owners will have more power if their land is affected by a potential LAPAA project. Landowners can keep their land and continue farming it, they can trigger a sale at any time, they can trigger the expropriation process, they can sell to a third party or leave it to their family members in their will until the land is required, and they can have enhanced access to the courts, which is what Albertans have been telling us that they wanted. Bill 23 also clarifies the type of major transportation or water projects allowed by the LAPAA legislation, and it removes some of the penalties that Alberta landowners were telling us they saw as heavy-handed.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I'd ask you to allow me to adjourn debate on Bill 23.

Child and Youth Advocate Act

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Human Services.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased this afternoon to move second reading of Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act.

This piece of legislation will expand the mandate of the Child and Youth Advocate and, in keeping with our Premier's commitment, will change the reporting structure so that the advocate becomes an officer of the Legislature. Alberta was the first province to have a child advocate and has had someone in that position since 1989. Many people in Alberta are unaware of the important role and function of the advocate to ensure that the rights, interests, and viewpoints of children and youth in the child intervention system are heard. Some may question why there's a need for an advocate or why an independent advocate is necessary. Understanding the role of the advocate in individual and systemic advocacy is therefore an important part of understanding this legislation.

If we think about it, the large majority of children and youth in Alberta are fortunate to have parents, family members, or other significant adults in their life to speak up for them, whether it be in school, on a sports team, or accessing health services. Parents and families are primarily responsible for protecting their children and their children's rights, and we see great examples every day of parents who will do everything they can to ensure that their child receives what they need for their growth and development and has the opportunity to participate in and contribute to their community.

Right now for many children in the child intervention system the advocate may step in when their families or other significant people in their life are unable to advocate on their behalf. These are children and youth who are receiving child intervention services because of abuse or violence in the home or whose circumstances make it impossible for them to live at home. It can be difficult, lonely, and scary to be a child in care, especially when decisions are being made about where they live, go to school, or whether they can have relationships with family members.

As much as possible caseworkers ensure that children and youth are involved in decision-making that affects their lives, but sometimes children and youth in care want to have someone in their corner, someone whose only role is to help them voice their opinions. The advocate's focus on individual advocacy is a strength of this position, that was highlighted in the 2009 child and youth advocacy review. Last year alone the advocate's office provided advocacy services to more than 3,200 children and youth. Through this work the advocate's office is in a unique position to identify systemic issues within the child intervention system.

Within the current reporting structure in which the advocate reports to the Minister of Human Services, the advocate regularly provides feedback and reports to the minister. This includes identifying systemic issues and making recommendations for developing policy or processes to address these concerns. With this legislation the advocate's reports and recommendations and advice will not go through the ministry but will go directly to the Legislature, providing an open and transparent process and involving Albertans.

The advocate will now have the ability to make recommendations to the Legislature and to the people of Alberta as a whole through the Legislature about the services it provides to children and youth in the child intervention and the youth criminal justice systems. The advocate's reports from investigations into serious injuries and deaths will also be made public. Albertans can then be confident that the advocate is doing his job in identifying concerns in the child intervention and youth criminal justice systems, beholden to no one but the children.

This new act will take the individual and systemic advocacy functions of the advocate and expand them to include children and youth in open and closed custody in the youth justice system. This will help to ensure that children and youth served in these systems will have access to advocacy supports so that they, too, will have someone in their corner. Because many children and youth are involved in both systems, this expanded mandate will help co-ordinate services and supports for them. The focus will be on the most vulnerable children in our province who, as I said earlier, may not have parents or other adults involved in their lives to be on their side, to advocate for them.

A key part of the legislation provides the advocate with authority to investigate critical incidents involving children and youth in the child intervention and youth criminal justice systems. Right now when a child in care is seriously injured or dies, the ministry conducts internal reviews to identify where enhancements can be made. With this act there will now be two additional mechanisms by which incidents can be investigated: by the advocate and by the council for quality assurance. The purposes of these serious review processes are not to duplicate or interfere with any police investigations or court proceedings but to identify where improvements can be made in a timely manner, identify how we can do a better job for vulnerable children.

The advocate will have a significant role as both a member of the council for quality assurance and in his capacity and authority to investigate serious incidents involving children and youth served by his office. In carrying out these investigations from a systemic perspective, the advocate will have the powers of a commissioner under the Public Inquiries Act, meaning he can compel information to assist his investigation.

The council for quality assurance will also review serious incidents and may appoint an external panel to conduct more in-depth and expert reviews of a case. The council will also make recommendations on leading practices and areas for improvement. This function of the council and related powers is one of the consequential amendments to the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act outlined in this new legislation.

Some additional consequential amendments to both the enhancement act and the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act will help with information sharing between service providers when planning and providing services in the best interests of children and youth. One of the things that we found, Mr. Speaker, is that it's absolutely essential that all of the people, all of the caregivers that are involved in a child's life, whether they're involved in the school system, the health system, the child protection system, wherever they are, they need to be collaborative and share the information so that they can act in the best interests of the child. While that's currently allowed, often the information doesn't get shared because people are concerned about whether it is allowed. We're making it clear. It is allowed. It is expected.

The publication ban provisions of the enhancement act, which are designed to protect the privacy of children in the child intervention system, will be clarified and simplified, thereby increasing the effectiveness of the provisions and promoting public support of and adherence to the publication ban.

Again, there are often situations where there is a public interest in an incident, and our only answer is that we cannot provide the information because of the privacy issue. This will clarify what information can be provided, what information can't be provided, and the mechanism for interested parties to go to court to ask for further information to be released. The court can then make a thorough examination of whose interests need to be protected and whether or not the information can be released.

This past spring the Protection Against Family Violence Act was amended to add offence and penalty provisions for breaching protection orders. As we moved toward implementation on November 1, we received new information from our stakeholders, in particular the police, that we felt was important to address. The amendment with this new legislation adds the authority for police to arrest without a warrant based on reasonable grounds that a protection order has been breached; again, important for the protection of children. Family violence affects children, and it's absolutely necessary that we have all the tools in place so that the protection orders provided for under the act and now the penalty provisions for the breach of those protection orders can be enforced with respect to the ability of police to arrest someone that has breached a protection order.

Obviously, under the act now they can arrest somebody at the time of the incident if they're there, or they can go and get a warrant, which provides for a gap in time, under which there is a potential exposure to risk. We can't afford that potential exposure to risk. We can't afford it for the victims of the violence or the children if they're witnesses to the victim of violence or victims themselves. Therefore, allowing police the opportunity to arrest under reasonable probable grounds – in other words, to follow the perpetrator away from the scene and arrest them later – is an important amendment, and it fits within the mandate of what we're talking about here in terms of child protection.

All of these changes under the Child and Youth Advocate Act will increase transparency and public confidence in the child intervention system and the youth criminal justice system and provide greater protection for the children who are most vulnerable, those children at risk.

I ask for support for Bill 25 from all members of the Assembly to help enhance the outcomes and services for children and youth being served by these systems and help ensure that those children have every opportunity to maximize their potential to grow up to be full citizens of this province, contributing to their communities like we wish for our own children.

I would also move that debate be now adjourned.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 21 Election Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to move second reading of Bill 21, the Election Amendment Act, 2011. This act will amend the Election Act to provide for a fixed election time period. Currently the Premier is able to choose the date of the general election, and the Premier can request that the Lieutenant Governor dissolve the Legislature and pass an order authorizing the issuance of a writ of election.

A drawback of this approach is the perception that the chosen election date is purely political. This is not the perception we want the public to have. We want to inspire an even greater confidence in our electoral system, we want Albertans to trust in the integrity and fairness of the system, and we want them to get out and vote and know that their vote counts. Better yet, we want them to get involved as candidates and volunteers. That's the primary reason why we want to create some certainty in election times.

There are a variety of other reasons for doing so as well. First, Elections Alberta or the office of the Chief Electoral Officer will be able to administer elections in a more timely and cost-efficient manner. They will be able to secure advertising buys, recruit additional staff, and prearrange the acquisition and shipment of equipment and supplies. Knowing the approximate date in advance allows for cost savings by eliminating last-minute requests that often occur when trying to secure services. Elections planning such as preparing an up-to-date voters list through earlier enumeration, hiring and training of staff, and securing polling locations would be made simpler and more efficient.

A fixed election period also allows for more timely publication of election material for the benefit of the public and political participants. There are also many boards, agencies, and organizations that rely on the timing of certain decisions of government.

To put it simply, speculation as to when an election will be held results in uncertainty. Fixed election periods would allow the government and the public service to work within clearly established time frames. We believe that this will allow for improved governance.

Through Bill 21 two amendments to the Election Act are proposed. The first amendment allows for elections to be held every four years. This amendment would create a fixed three-month period, or window, in which a general election will be held every four years. Starting in 2012 a general election would be held between March 1, 2012, and May 31, 2012. Afterwards general elections would be held in the same three-month period, beginning on March 1 and ending on May 31, in the fourth calendar year following polling day in the most recent general election.

This made-in-Alberta approach does differ from other jurisdictions. All federal and provincial jurisdictions that have fixed elections have a specific date. For example, an election could be held on the third Monday of October.

Using a three-month window allows us to set the election date so that it does not conflict with days of cultural or religious significance, other elections, or other unforeseen circumstances. For example, religious holidays such as Easter and Passover fall within this time frame, or the province may find itself hosting a major sporting or cultural event or festival during this time.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans are a diverse and busy people. We understand the competing pressures in today's fast-paced society. We want to ensure that Albertans can participate in a provincial election, so we've tried to minimize as best we can conflicts in these busy schedules. We understand that in the fall children are back to school, new routines are being established, and harvesting of crops is under way. We are hopeful that this spring window, rather than a specific date, will allow for reasonable, limited flexibility in the setting of the election date and greater participation from Albertans.

The second amendment clarifies that the Lieutenant Governor's constitutional power to dissolve the Legislature remains intact. Removing this power from the Lieutenant Governor would, we believe, be unconstitutional. For that reason all the federal and provincial jurisdictions that have fixed election dates have a comparable provision. The political consequences of asking the Lieutenant Governor to dissolve the Legislature outside of the fixed period would discourage this from happening except when there is obvious justification for doing so, such as if there were a loss of confidence.

Some may ask: what happens if an election is called early because of the dissolution of the Legislature or on a vote of nonconfidence? The provision is drafted so that the four-year period is reset. In other words, the next election would be held in the same three-month period, March 1 to May 31, in the fourth calendar year following polling day in the most recent general election.

The changes in Bill 21 will lead to a greater public confidence in our electoral system. They provide transparency and predictability. By knowing when an election will be held, Albertans will be able to participate more easily and effectively, whether as voters, volunteers, or candidates.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that all members support this amendment to this bill.

At this time I move second reading and ask that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 24

Health Quality Council of Alberta Act

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Horne]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great honour to stand and speak to this important bill for Albertans, Bill 24, Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. I must say it's created a lot of energy and a lot of mixed response everywhere that I've discussed this, not least in the public and among the professionals. I guess the big question about Bill 24 is why we need it beyond the obvious need to have the Health Quality Council report independently to the Legislature, something we've been championing and pushing for years. We cannot do anything but support that aspect of the bill. Unfortunately, the rest of the bill is severely flawed.

Let me begin by saying that the purpose of the Public Inquiries Act is to set out a process to conduct an official review of important public events or issues, to establish the facts and causes of the events or issues, and make recommendations to the government for improvement. It governs the review of something in the past.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The big question, then, since we've had a Public Inquiries Act here for decades is: what is the need for a separate public inquiry act for health? Has our act failed us? Is there a need in other areas besides health where there is failure of the Public Inquiries Act as it's constituted? Is mismanagement in health uniquely requiring of its own public inquiry law? To suggest that the Public Inquiries Act is inadequate to the task of investigating physician intimidation and financial misconduct is to condemn decades of public inquiries or to suggest that these issues in 2011 are somehow unique to health care and it requires its own special public inquiry act. This government is running as fast as it can away from a fully independent public inquiry before the next election. Bill 24 duplicates the powers of the Public Inquiries Act. It's costly. It's confusing for public and professionals.

Other questions arise. Should this new body investigate occupational injuries? What about mismanagement associated with cultural or mental challenges? What about poor nutrition associated with management in our supports for independence? Do we need a separate public inquiry power for mismanagement in infrastructure and environment? Clearly, we move to the ridiculous. Government's role is to restore trust and to protect the public interest. This is not taking us down that road.

What would be the impact on the regular work of the Health Quality Council of having this extra power? The Health Quality

Council is to evaluate and define quality health care and recommend measures to improve it without pointing to responsibility or blame. When individuals being interviewed or reporting to the quality council now are under the understanding that the Health Quality Council has the power to go on to investigate as part of a public inquiry, how will that affect the perceptions of health professionals who come before the Health Quality Council? What is the impact of that on their freedom, their legal rights, their ability to speak freely and openly about what needs to be fixed?

Perception is important. This minister argues for greater confidentiality of health information, another area that he feels needs special protection. Is there something more confidential here than other personal information? Can we not trust officials in the regular public inquiry around private versus public interest making that assessment? Is there reason to doubt the capacity of the usual public inquiry to assess an act on the balance of private versus public interest?

An Hon. Member: They don't have the ability.

Dr. Swann: Yes, they do. My understanding is that they do.

Nondisclosure agreements, another area where this minister says we need special powers to open them up. This exists currently under the Public Inquiries Act, as I understand it, as I've been told by legal minds in the province.

Another argument for the uniqueness of health information and health investigation is the choice of the panel members on the public inquiry, not the usual cabinet but the Health Quality Council. Does this justify creating a whole new act, just to empower another body to select the panel members for this public inquiry?

Indeed, by giving this power to the Health Quality Council in the midst of their own investigation, it raises serious questions of conflict. This body has already been investigating questions of intimidation and financial misconduct. Are we now going to say that they are going to choose the ones that are going to make the decisions in a public inquiry about what needs to be explored, what needs to be brought forward, who is going to be the best at this? Clearly, there is a conflict there. Do we really want an independent panel, or do we want something that is being influenced already from within the Department of Health and Wellness? Serious questions that I think we need to ask. Real independence would come from an independent body. Isn't that what we say we want? Well, the Health Quality Council is no longer independent. Surely, that's plain and simple to everyone who sees it.

Well, having made these arguments, I don't doubt that there is a reasonable chance that this bill will pass. If passed, it should be eminently clear that this new act should not apply to issues they have already been addressing as a Health Quality Council. Either the decision on the panel members has to be taken out of the Health Quality Council, or indeed they have to allow the regular Public Inquiries Act to investigate this set of allegations and leave the Health Quality Council to investigate future concerns. We cannot muddy the waters by having the same Health Quality Council that has been involved in investigating these issues then go on and influence the makeup of the panel that will do the new public inquiry. Surely that's evident.

Mr. Speaker, the questions that arise really beg serious answers. Quality assessment is an important role, and a continuous improvement is essential in our health care system. We must restore confidence and quality in our publicly funded health care system, but there is no need for extra powers of public inquiry. Why is the Premier delaying? It's clear: political advantage and influence from within her caucus. The former health minister has already stated very obviously that he will not support this, and the Premier is at risk of serious splits in her caucus over such a decision. Anything to delay this inquiry.

Will the decisions be impartial? One raises serious questions about that given the background that I've indicated. Neither the government nor the Health Quality Council is seen as independent of this decision. We must as quickly as possible call a public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act, lay that issue to rest, then go on, if it's necessary, to allow the Health Quality Council to do its work on whatever future issues arise.

There are ways to make the independence of panels as distant as possible from government. I say that if there are changes to be made in the Public Inquiries Act, why do you not fix it? What is it about 2011 and health information that allows you to justify the expense, the duplication, and the confusion that will arise out of this ill-advised and unacceptable act, which we on the opposite side will not support. Unfortunately, by lumping it together with independent reporting of the Health Quality Council, the waters are muddled.

The lack of support will be confusing, but we will be very clear with the public that this government is not interested in transparency. They fear an open and objective public inquiry, and they are doing anything possible to maintain power and control and the obscurity of the issues around health care mismanagement since the totally misguided blowing up of our health system in 2008. They are running scared, and it's very clear that this is not going to serve the public interest but only their political interests. [interjections] The heckling from the Finance minister is clearly intended to discourage all thoughtful individuals around this misguided and wasteful bill that is purely, purely political.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak, Mr. Speaker. I'll step down and let others rail against this misguided bill. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, do you want to join the debate?

Mrs. Forsyth: I do. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's somewhat bittersweet for me to speak to Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. On the one hand, it's great to see the Health Quality Council of Alberta granted more independence and power to continue some of the great work that they've done for patient safety and, for that matter, patient care. But, quite frankly, the reason for expanding their powers is wrong in so many ways. It's a bandage solution to a much bigger problem. It's political interference, the rot in our health care system, a broken health care system. Fortunately for us, a wonderful group of health care professionals – our doctors, nurses, LPNs, NAs: all of those people are keeping the glue to the system and keeping it fixed.

What we have here, quite frankly, is a cop-out. It's a broken promise and more of the same from the Premier, who promised change, to do things differently. Mr. Speaker, Albertans are not fooled. Albertans are not fooled because they know what they heard with their own ears. Six months ago Dr. Duckett made a serious claim. He claimed that connected insiders were getting preferential treatment in our health care system, a health system that all Albertans value for its fairness and for its equality. Albertans thought that when they got sick and needed emergency care, it wouldn't matter if they had a politician's business card. They just knew that they wanted to get there. Not only were there accusations of people jumping the lines, but they had an office and a phone number to contact just to make sure it happened.

I, quite frankly, like Albertans, was somewhat shocked and maybe not so much surprised. I couldn't believe what I was hearing. You know what, Mr. Speaker? So was the current Premier. She said, and I'm going to quote: my call for an inquiry is about finding out the truth and putting a stop to practices that go against my personal and my political values. Well, we're still waiting for the truth. We're still waiting for the Premier to call an inquiry to get to the bottom of these shocking claims.

What's not shocking to me is that the Premier now has no sense of urgency to find out the truth about rotten practices in the health care system. Her hunger for the truth has suddenly disappeared. She doesn't seem to have an appetite to do what's necessary. Albertans are scratching their heads. They're saying to themselves: what has happened? Where is this person that promised changes, promised to do things differently and to do them quite quickly? A lot of Albertans voted for the Premier when she promised an inquiry. It set her, quite frankly, apart from all of the other candidates. It was a bold step, earning the praise of many Albertans and the wrath, quite frankly, of the previous Premier. It was the decision that many made for voting for her out of respect, but now that respect has faded. It's in the past but not forgotten.

I've talked about the reaction of the average Albertan. Let's talk about the views of our hard-working front-line health care professionals. I'm not just talking about the doctors but also nurses and other health care specialists that work day in and day out to make sure Albertans have a great health care system. No one is happy with the way the government is managing the health care system, not suffering patients waiting months or years for treatments and certainly not the staff. This government has created a group of people, political refugees, now living and practising medicine. It's even more tragic because they are world-class, respected experts.

Mr. Speaker, I'm constantly on the phone with doctors, day and night, hearing their heartbreaking stories as they try to help their patients and make sure that they get the best care possible. These same doctors and these same health care professionals tell me over and over again about the need for a public inquiry: "We need to get to the bottom of this. I need the protection of a judge so people can know what is really happening in the health care system."

The government says that the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act is capable of handling the investigation of doctor intimidation. The council does have significant expertise and knowledge of the health care system, and I would agree with that. But if it was legal trouble, I have to tell you that I wouldn't call my doctor; I'd be calling my lawyer. If I had a bad cold, which I do right now, or a sore throat, I'd see my doctor. I wouldn't go to a lawyer.

The scandal is bigger than the crisis in the emergency room. This is about political interference and the intimidation of health care staff across this province. I have to point out the reason that the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act exists, its mandate. I've read its mandate, and over and over again I've read the same phrases: patient safety and health service quality. The council is an expert at matters of patient safety and health delivery. In the past they've quite frankly studied the impact of the closing of the Edmonton City Centre Airport, the health system's handling of the H1N1 pandemic in 2009, and most often satisfaction surveys of patients. They are not cut out for examining the political string pulling that happens in cabinet or government in general.

This is not a slight against the Health Quality Council. They're doctors, and they're health researchers. This is a bait and switch going on here. The government claims that the council is experienced and knowledgeable and should conduct an investigation, but the proposed legislation is clear that board members, agents, employees, or contractors of the Health Quality Council can't participate in the inquiry. What's the point of appointing the Health Quality Council when their expertise and their knowledge cannot be used? You know, Mr. Speaker, it's mind boggling.

An issue I have with the legislation in particular is that judges, legal experts are not mandatory in conducting a public inquiry. This blows my mind. The council is allowed to include a judge, but they don't have to. That's like saying it's nice to have a doctor at your surgery, but – guess what? – he doesn't have to be there. We should have the experts doing what they're trained for. If an inquiry is going to call testimony and evidence, they should have the expertise and the experience doing so. That's where the world experts come from. Doctors and health researchers don't have experience conducting public inquiries. It should be mandatory to have a judge not only on the panel but as the leader.

The Premier has insisted she won't call an inquiry because the council is currently conducting an investigation. She says she'll wait until the spring, when the final report is in, and go from there. Quite frankly, that's unbelievable. The current investigation is looking at cancer and emergency room care as well as the intimidation of doctors. The whole reason the Premier called for an inquiry was because of the alleged queue-jumping. The Health Quality Council is not looking at queue-jumping. She will not even consider an inquiry into queue-jumping until election time in 2012. That brings us to – I'm not sure if the election is going to be in March or April or May, but she said today in question period to be ready. What we have here is an abandonment of a promise by the Premier. We now have more of the same from the government under the new leadership. They bury something until after the election to avoid accountability, something that this Premier has campaigned on.

The Premier should call a full, public, judicial inquiry into queue-jumping and doctor intimidation, just like she promised in June. If she doesn't call an inquiry, she quite frankly is breaking another promise to Albertans, and we won't get to the truth, faith will not be restored, and Albertans won't have the answers they need and deserve.

The Deputy Speaker: We have Standing Order 29(2)(a) for five minutes of comments or questions. Any hon. member wishing to take 29(2)(a)?

If not, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Before proceeding to detailed debate on Bill 24, I want to put on the record what I consider to be a continuation of dirty parliamentary tricks. Premier Klein was known for closure. He called closure more frequently within his limited reign than all previous Premiers and parliamentarians had experienced in the history of Alberta. His successor's trick, the representative for Fort Saskatchewan-Vegreville, was time allocation: limit the amount of debate; therefore, you force the opposition into a position where there is no time left in which to debate.

Now, our most recently elected Premier talked about transparency and accountability. She talked about improving communications with Albertans, but within this House, Mr. Speaker, the failure to communicate is of great concern. For example – and I don't know to what extent this will matter to Albertans, but to anybody concerned with the democratic process, hopefully, it will matter – the previous arrangement between the House leaders has come to naught because the opposition House leaders would not agree to time limits on debates. We have no idea what the agenda is, what bills are going to be discussed, when they're going to be discussed.

The Deputy Speaker: We are debating the bill. Please stay on the subject of the bill.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order

Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, under Standing Order 23(h), (i), and (j) bearing on matters which would bring us into disrepute and, specifically, making allegations against a member, clearly anybody who is talking with the opposition House leaders would be the Government House Leader.

The hon. member doesn't have a clue what he is talking about. We met with the opposition House leaders as we do. We clearly identified what was going to be on the agenda as quickly as we could. We identified it in more detail for them as we could. We insisted that each minister or sponsor of a bill brief the opposition with respect to the contents of the bill, as is our normal practice, and that was done. I confirmed that that was done in each circumstance.

We made it clear in the meeting that on the first day we would be introducing all the bills so that they would be available for the opposition to see as early as possible in this short session and that on the second day they would all be moved and adjourned so that they would be available for debate on a consistent basis. We moved all of them and adjourned all of them as we said we would.

There were some that went a little bit out of the order that was on the Order Paper, but that shouldn't matter to the opposition because the point was that there was a government speaker moving and adjourning debate on them. We did that on the basis that it would accommodate the mover of the bill. But that's the only concern that the opposition might have with respect to the order of debate this afternoon. It doesn't impact their debate because it was very clear that all those bills would be moved and adjourned, and then at the end of that period of time we would go back to Bill 24, which is what we've done.

So to make allegations that we have done anything to deny democracy or otherwise compromise the opposition is false, and to suggest that we breached any agreement that we had is equally false. I ask the hon. member to retract.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, please take your seat.

I listened to the debate here, and the subject matter is the bill that we have at hand. The hon. Government House Leader brings up a point which really is nothing about the bill but is about process. This is more like a question and answer that should be dealt with in the question period.

Please carry on debating strictly on the subject of the bill.

Debate Continued

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I am hoping that the lines of communication will be better opened than they currently appear to be.

Mr. Speaker, I have to suggest that I hope that courtesy will be afforded to the House leaders as to what bills are to be specifically discussed so that opposition critics are prepared at the appropriate times to be present in the House to debate. All right.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, get back to the bill, please.

Mr. Chase: Aye. Here we go, Mr. Speaker. Our most recently elected Premier has found herself caught attempting in vain to backstroke away from her key campaign promise to call a judicial public inquiry, which is the subject of Bill 24, Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, which is an end-run activity into the mess her predecessor Premier made in undermining public confidence in our universal health care system.

As recently as yesterday in her question period responses the Premier acknowledged only one of the three pillars of medicare, which is publicly funded. By failing to recognize the other two key pillars of a publicly administered and publicly delivered health care system, the Premier showed that despite her claims of being progressive, when it comes to championing public health care, she is cut from the same failed fabric as her predecessors. If the Premier and her chosen advisers, including Gary Mar's controversial health care confidant, Kelley Charlebois, thought they could distance themselves from their public health care missteps by sacrificing the former health minister, who is the subject of today's point of privilege, they are sadly mistaken.

Mr. Speaker, when it comes to Bill 24, Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, or any other piece of legislation that comes before this astute Assembly, we are judged by the company we keep. By raising a key former background third way consultant, the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, who provided privatization advice to her two Premier predecessors and who introduced Bill 24 in the House today and is recommending and promoting it, to the position of health minister, our interim Premier has signalled that it's business as usual with the publicly funded private, for-profit health care agenda.

During next spring's 2012 election season the Premier and her caucus colleagues will hopefully be confronted by the electorate as to which master they serve, the public or the private interests. The main concern for Albertans, as it has consistently been in the past, will be the preservation and improvement of our public health care system.

Mr. Speaker, Bill 24 does nothing to improve the functioning of our health care system. As the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View pointed out, it at best can be considered redundant and at worst can be viewed for what it truly is, a stalling mechanism, a duplication of services. Without going into the detail that the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View pointed out, what we need is the type of openness and transparency that the Premier promised when she was campaigning. Now, the Premier promised that we were going to have an actual public judicial inquiry. The fact that the Premier has abandoned that circumstance is extremely troubling.

Mr. Speaker, I could not bring myself to purchase a Conservative membership card, but had I been in that position, the person I would have chosen for Conservative interim Premier would have been the Member for Battle River-Wainwright. However, the current Premier would have been my second choice. I along with a number of Albertans feel that we have had the wool pulled over our eyes because the transparency . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, the bill.

Mr. Chase: Yes.

. . . that the Premier offered in calling for a judicial public inquiry is not present in Bill 24. You know, as the expression goes, you can put lipstick on a pig and you can attempt to turn a sow's ear into a silk purse. But that's not what's happening here. Bill 24 does not accomplish what an independent judicial public inquiry would accomplish.

Now, the major reason, as I say, for the introduction of this legislation is for stalling. The Health Quality Council has already indicated that they won't be able to present their findings until the spring. Well, how convenient. Don't we have an election season scheduled for the spring? So any of the information, the damning information, that would come out of the Health Quality Council's findings to date will be delayed until after the election. How convenient.

The Health Quality Council of Alberta Act would not compel, for example, the Member for Calgary-West, a former health minister, or our hon. Government House Leader or our current MLA for Edmonton-Mill Creek to testify. Without the opportunity to hear from these individuals, who were directly involved in what has happened with the health system over the last number of years, Albertans are kept in the dark.

Now, I see that the former health ministers are communicating back and forth and enjoying a degree of joviality. That joviality they are currently experiencing will continue under Bill 24, Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, because they know darn well they're never going to be called to testify. They're ensuring in the proposal of Bill 24 that they don't get called. For example, the Member for Calgary-West, who is in such good spirits on my birthday, has already dismissed what the Health Quality Council might find. The prejudgment is there.

So Bill 24 is just more government mumbo-jumbo, which is part of the stalling process to make sure that even if the new government changes, this government, or if a coalition government forms in 2012 after the election, these individuals who contributed to the confusion, the establishment of the superboard, especially if defeated, may well never be called to account. This is a concern. There is no way, for example, that doctors who have been sent out of this province are going to appear before an extended version of the Health Quality Council.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have a fair amount of faith in the interim head of the Alberta health group, Dr. Chris Eagle. But in terms of communication it seems that Dr. Chris Eagle was able to fax Don Braid of the Calgary Herald a nondisclosure fill-in-the-blanks agreement, but none of the doctors within Alberta Health Services were privy to that particular agreement. Just fill in what you're willing to have disclosed. Within that agreement they still can't disclose financial contract circumstances, so there's still a muzzle applied.

Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, cannot achieve what an independent public inquiry under our current Public Inquiries Act would accomplish. What this government is trying to do is build the equivalent of a Trojan Horse, something that passes for legislation but really takes us nowhere. It's as hollow as the horse.

Mr. Speaker, if the Premier truly believes in transparency and accountability, Bill 24 will not get to Committee of the Whole. It will not get to the point of proclamation. It will hit the dustbin, where it deserves to be placed. True transparency and accountability will be what the Premier can run the election on. She was selected. Like the majority of people in this House who have not announced they're retiring, she has yet to be elected. I'm hoping that Albertans will demand more of this government.

The movement to have an election season, which we will discuss and debate in a further bill, is an important step. At least Albertans won't be caught by surprise. If they feel that democracy is important, hopefully they'll be given a chance to vote prior to taking on their responsibilities, whether it's seeding or taking a vacation, whatever it may be.

Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, is such a shadow of what currently exists under the Public Inquiries Act.

Mr. Speaker, it's sad in one sense, but it's also offensive that with the same type of cloak and dagger, the lack of whistle-blower legislation, cover-up, preventing doctors from speaking because of disclosure agreements they previously signed, the truth will remain buried if this legislation is allowed to continue and to stall the legitimate process that a public inquiry would provide under our current Public Inquiries Act.

I appreciate, Mr. Speaker, that the heckling and joking has died down sufficiently. It does show the type of respect that should be afforded individuals within this House, whether they're members of the government or members of the opposition. The expression goes: fool me once, I am the fool; fool me twice, and it falls back on yourself.

Albertans need to be engaged. In 2008 only 41 per cent turned out. Of that 41 per cent of eligible voters 21 per cent of Albertans gave this government a major mandate. They've regretted it ever since.

The Deputy Speaker: Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) we have five minutes for comments or questions or clarification. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. The Member for Calgary-Varsity was talking about why he believes that it's likely that Albertans have regretted their choice since the last election. As it relates to this bill, I'm wondering if you could articulate in more detail why you think that might be their opinion.

Mr. Chase: Yes. By all means. The last set of Premiers rolled out a slogan of transparency and accountability. Unfortunately, it has been just that. It has been a slogan. I recall debate and question period with the former Premier, and I suggested at that time that the Premier had become so transparent that Albertans could see right through him.

Now, I had greater hopes and greater faith in our currently elected Premier. There is no doubt about her international credibility. She fought for democracy alongside Mandela. She is an educated individual. She is a lawyer. She is a mother. She has a whole series of strong qualities, and I would not suggest that one of those qualities is more important than the other.

As a former teacher, Mr. Speaker, I believe in report cards. So when it comes to restoring the money that shouldn't have been taken out of the Education account, I give her an A. When it comes to the promise she made to assist AISH individuals, it remains unfulfilled. The promise that the Premier made to call a full judicial public inquiry has not happened. So we have an A in the category of education funding, and the rest, unfortunately, are still to be evaluated. They haven't happened.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in the democratic process. I was elected under the Liberal banner, but I am not so partisan that I would not want to see every member of this House working towards a common goal, which is the betterment of Albertans' circumstance.

Bill 24 is a cloak. It's nothing to do with transparency. It's nothing to do with accountability. It's a delaying process that flies in the face of the very accountability that past Premiers have run on.

I am hoping, Mr. Speaker, that in the time that remains prior to the next election, I can see our newly selected Premier live up to her campaign promises. I want to have faith that when I retire and enjoy the company of my wife of 42 years and go out camping with my grandsons that at least for the time being the province will be in good hands, that the system will be improved, that the rights of opposition members to express their concerns without having time allotments called on them will be taken into account.

We have talented individuals on both sides of this House. If we could work together, think what could be accomplished for the province of Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to respond to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the need for transparency and accountability, which, unfortunately, within the seven years that I've been elected to serve the constituents of Calgary-Varsity has been missing from the procedures of this House.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. members to join the debate?

An Hon. Member: Is Standing Order 29(2)(a) still available?

The Deputy Speaker: We have zero seconds.

On the bill, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to be able to rise and offer my preliminary comments on Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. This is an act which, of course, has received a tremendous amount of attention in the public forum, in part, I guess, because it's the foundation of our current Premier's breakout moment when she was running to be leader of the Conservative Party. Many analysts say that the moment she actually started to have a campaign that developed a bit of traction was when she broke out of the pack by departing from the groupspeak which had dominated the commentary of all previous spokespeople for the Conservative Party on the issue of whether or not we might ever consider opening the doors of secrecy which guide and determine the way in which this government functions. In so doing, she had an opportunity to move forward and to ultimately succeed in her efforts to become the leader of the Conservative Party.

The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood made a very good point today in question period, that this Premier does not actually have a mandate from Albertans because, of course, she was not elected by Albertans. But she does certainly have a mandate from those within her party. A very marginal majority of that group, not a strong majority by any means but a slim majority within the Conservative Party, appears to support the current Premier. That is because she made a promise to move forward on the issue of openness and transparency as it relates to the issue of staff and intimidation within our health care system, an issue that had generated a great deal of controversy and attracted a great deal of attention amongst concerned Albertans over the course of the last year. So be it. That was something that enough people thought would make the Premier a credible leader that they opted to select her.

Now we are in that process, prior to an election season, of assessing those first rounds of promises. You know, the new Premier made a number of promises to Albertans and to members of her party, and now we get to assess the degree to which those promises are being kept. I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that this act is clear evidence of one of many promises which are not being kept by this new Premier.

It's interesting. I remember talking with a friend at one point earlier this summer, and we were looking at the promises that were being made by both the current Premier as well as a former member of this House, who at that time was perceived to be a front-runner, Gary Mar. People were saying: "Oh, well, this candidate has promised that, and this other candidate over here has promised this other thing. Oh, isn't this important?" And I said, "Well, you know, with all due respect," even though I am myself a lawyer, "they are lawyers. So it's really important that you read the small print in terms of what these folks are providing and what they're promising because no one is better at weaseling their way around things when they feel the need to. We should be very careful about whether that's happening here." Indeed, that appears to be exactly what is happening here.

Many people might characterize the comparison between the promises made by the current Premier and the legislation we have before us in this very abbreviated two-week übersession, that you would see, in fact, that it kind of looks a little bit like what people sometimes characterize as sharp practice. You know, you're very careful about what you say, fully knowing how you're going to get around actually implementing that which you have very intentionally left the impression that you're going to implement. That's what I see in every piece of legislation that has come forward from this Premier so far. Certainly, that's what we see today with Bill 24 and the issue of whether or not we are actually going to have a proper, full public inquiry into the issue of government members and senior staff engaging in intimidating practices with professionals and other staff who are employed within our health care system in the task of keeping Albertans safe and healthy day in and day out.

Why do I say that this act does not actually meet the elements of the promises made by the current Premier of the province? Well, she indicated to Albertans on a number of different occasions that this inquiry, or the inquiry that was forthcoming, would be led by a judge. I believe it may have even been today in question period that she said that. Maybe it was yesterday; I'm not sure. But she definitely stated on the record that this inquiry would be led by a judge. I'm looking at the act, and I see no evidence of that. In fact, what the act clearly states is that the board, the Health Quality Council, appointed by this government, is the one that makes the decision on whether or not this inquiry will be led by a judge, and that decision is made in consultation with the Chief Judge or Chief Justice of the court from which that judge would originate.

I find it quite amazing that a Premier would get up there and very clearly make promises about something that in the very legislation she's putting forward she doesn't have the authority to make promises about. They very clearly set up a piece of legislation that does not guarantee the inquiry will be led by a judge. So it's not a promise kept. It's as simple as that.

You know, we can have all of the arrogant kind of offhand comments about members of the opposition by the Premier in her responses to our questions, but the reality is that this piece of legislation does not guarantee an inquiry led by a judge – and anybody who can read the legislation can see that – yet that is what the Premier promised. So we didn't get what we were promised. It's really simple, Mr. Speaker. It's really simple.

I mean, there are other concerns about this bill as well because, of course, it gives a lot of opportunity for the inquiry, which may or may not occur at some point, some day in the future. Who knows if it'll ever actually happen? I feel fairly convinced that we won't ever see it happen. Regardless, should it happen, what we're going to see is that there is a broad range of circumstances under which this government can do what it likes to do best, and that is to keep things behind closed doors. I don't know that there is another government in the country that is as creative and as energetic and as committed to the task of giving itself the ability and the authority and the opportunity to keep stuff secret as this group.

You know, you'd think that after 40 years you'd have some level of confidence that perhaps it's possible to speak with the people of Alberta in an open and honest way and probably get re-elected, but it seems that the longer they are in government, the more concerned and paranoid they get about the idea of actually being open and transparent. Certainly, we have a long list of criteria that anybody engaged in this inquiry can rely upon to exclude the public from ever seeing the details of the proceedings of the inquiry that may or may not at any point be led by judge.

You know, it's an interesting group of exceptions, Mr. Speaker. Some make good sense and, I think, would appeal to the common sense and the reasonability of most Albertans. We don't want to disclose details that would be harmful to patients, that would disclose medical details of patients, who are somewhat ancillary to this process. They may be part of an example of an incident that occurred where a professional was ultimately intimidated. But why disclose the particulars of the patient that was involved in that case? That's a completely reasonable exception.

Then, you know, we have some really broad-ranging exceptions as well. I mean, one of my favourite ones here is whether disclosure of any medical information, basically, would be harmful to the physical or mental condition of a third person. Now, gosh knows, these guys are pretty liberal – and I use that in the nonpartisan way – with their concerns about the mental health of people, of third parties, and indeed have taken the opportunity to express that concern in somewhat inappropriate settings. There you go. All you have to do is be worried that disclosure of the proceedings of the inquiry might possibly result in injury to the mental condition of a third person, and Bob's your uncle; let's close those doors and lock them and throw away the key.

Now, if that's not broad enough in terms of the creative opportunities that the drafters of this legislation and this cabinet in approving this legislation gave themselves to ensure that they keep everything behind closed doors, just like always, how about this one: whether the disclosure might be prejudicial to someone whose interests are not concerned in the inquiry. Well, like the Premier? I don't know. There's someone, so there's a good reason: "Well, you know, we might disclose the inquiry or the proceedings of the inquiry or the findings of the inquiry or some of the evidence brought forward in the inquiry, but it'd be prejudicial to the interests of the Premier. So you know what? We're just going to keep that door closed, keep the lock well secured, keep the guards out front, and make sure that Albertans never hear the outcome or the conduct of this particular inquiry."

You know, here's another one: where the holding of the hearing in camera would be essential in the interests of justice or would be injurious to the public interest. How do we define that? Goodness knows, these guys have used, again, a lot of legislative time and authority to run away from any kind of third-party consideration of what is the public interest. The less independent assessment we have of that particular issue, the better for these folks.

Nonetheless, it's one of those things where it can be interpreted in a number of different ways, and depending on how it's interpreted, again we end up with that fabulous, fail-safe conclusion that we always find with these guys: it's behind closed doors, and nobody hears about it. All of those decisions, all of those considerations of those criteria about all of the 47,000 different reasons why we can justify keeping this matter behind closed doors, ensuring that no one ever hears about it: all of those considerations and those conclusions are absolutely not reviewable by any court. I thought that was interesting, too.

We could appoint the Health Quality Council, you know, people that have good, strong roots and links with the Conservative Party in this province, as the current members of the Health Quality Council clearly do. Then we could ask that council to set up the panel, and they'd get, of course, to pick their folks, and once they've picked their folks, then those people get into a room, and they have a broad array of reasons they can use to make sure that no one else ever gets inside that room.

This is exactly what people were railing against, the issue of whether or not we should have a public inquiry into the actions of this government in terms of allegations that were made about whether there was intimidation of hard-working health care workers and professionals within the system. It was that very concern that we were trying to get away from. We wanted to have this open, transparent conversation. I have lost count of the number of times I've seen the Premier in front of cameras saying: open and transparent conversation. She loves to have conversations. She loves for them to be open. She loves for them to be transparent. And she loves to say that phrase over and over again.

Yet I have to tell you that this is a bill which gives credence to the notion that you'd better read the fine print. As much as we may say that, when it comes to holding someone accountable or finding a way to actually ensure that what someone says they will do, it all comes down to what's in writing. And when you've got what's in writing, you'd better read everything. Unfortunately, in so doing, I see that this Premier has failed her promise.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments and questions. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hon. member, I wonder if you could answer for me – obviously, whether to call a judge-led inquiry is now optional. There's no doubt about that. Legislation makes that clear. Hopefully, she comes through with it if she actually . . . [interjection] Well, hopefully, she suggests it, and it occurs.

But my question is regarding the timing. We have a Public Inquiries Act on the books right now. Clearly, the day after or the week after or the month after she was elected as leader of the PCs and was sworn in as Premier, she could have clearly called a judicial public inquiry under that legislation without the need of new legislation. Her government is now bringing forward a piece of, frankly, redundant legislation. She didn't need this to call the judicial public inquiry. It would appear from her comments in the media lately that the plan is now that we won't have a judicial public inquiry called until after the election, which seems to go against what she specifically said during the leadership, that this would be well under way, if not completed, by the time the election was called.

Any thoughts as to why that might be a problem?

Ms Notley: Well, thank you, Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. You know, it's a good question. Of course, I guess it really all comes down to politics, doesn't it? I mean, it comes down to a very, very cynical decision to serve a political interest at the expense of keeping your word. In making that promise, the Premier at the time was simply concerned about the goal right ahead of her, and that was to win her way into the 51 per cent of Tories who would vote for her. That was the focus. Then, of course, when she woke up and discovered that she'd actually managed to do that, well, you know, the chickens had come home to roost, and it was a question of, "Well, how do we do that, because now the next campaign I've got to run is one to get this group of folks re-elected," or at least some of them, the ones that supported her. I'm not sure how committed she is to the others.

Anyway, then in the midst was, you know, that deliberation about how to deal with that because obviously transparency and openness is not something that I think would be particularly helpful to this government's electoral chances.

We then had to deal with the current Minister of Finance coming out very clearly and pretty publicly directing the Premier to change her mind on this and saying that he would not have any of it, that there would be no public inquiry because he didn't want it. Apparently, much to the chagrin of many Albertans, we had actually elected two Premiers. One of them apparently had more sway than the other. All of a sudden Mr. Finance doesn't want the public inquiry to go ahead, and it's also very inconvenient to the electoral chances for this government, which become increasingly relevant as we approach hunting season or election season or theatre season or whatever it is that these guys are planning on.

The question is simply this. There was the absolute opportunity to fulfill her promise, to engage in the kind of open and honest conversation with Albertans that she's constantly talking about, to do what she said she would do, and to establish her credibility by calling a public inquiry immediately after she was elected Premier. Instead, we've got this very convoluted, distractionary process, which is clearly geared to pushing everything off until after the election.

I'm willing to make a bit of a prediction, here, that the Health Quality Council, as they have the ability to do under this legislation, will choose not to have the kind of open, transparent, judge-led inquiry that the Premier is currently trying to sell us because they have the authority to do that. But they'll make that decision after the election. The hope will be day 1, term 2 – it's a new world. Right? Or day 1, term 93, whatever it is in this Legislature. It's a new world, and that Health Quality Council can wear the fact that they're not going to move forward with the Premier's promise at that time. You know, we'll be three and a half, four years away from another election. That's the way these things work.

I suspect that that's exactly why this is structured the way it is. It's been very thoughtfully done from a very cynical perspective by a government that's very adept at using all the mechanisms of power to get their way.

The Deputy Speaker: On the bill, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutillier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, I believe that Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, is a fancy title that really doesn't achieve the objective of the promise that was made by the new leader of the PC government. It really concerns me when I speak of Bill 24 because we don't want to lose sight of the fact that it's about time that we give the Health Quality Council a bigger tool box to get the job done. Now, this decision comes at a very interesting time. It's being bandied about as the solution to a pressing problem, the need for a full public judicial inquiry. That was what, in fact, the contender who now is the PC government's leader and Premier said. It's the right tool for a different job. My bosses, Albertans, are not impressed.

It's really simple, Mr. Speaker. People don't respect someone if they don't keep their promises. In fact, I looked in the dictionary at what the definition of promise is. Clearly, the actions of this government are not living up to their promise. It's so basic that anyone outside of government can understand that. The government, under its new leadership, has a very tarnished reputation. The Premier made a very big splash. In fact, it was like a tidal wave when she promised, promised, and promised. She promised something that she thought Albertans were looking for. But the word "promise" appears to have lots of wiggle room. See, the Wildrose doesn't believe in making promises. We commit. I believe commit is the difference. This government promises and doesn't live up to them. We commit, and we will deliver. We commit to true conservative values, values of telling the truth. Okay?

It's like a $3 dollar bill. In fact, the way the government operates today, you would almost think the Minister of Finance thinks there really are $3 bills. Well, let me clue him in. There aren't any $3 bills going on. In fact, even the former Treasury Board president and the former Finance minister understood there weren't $3 bills, but this new regime and new era that the Premier talks about clearly doesn't get it.

Mr. Speaker, I think it's almost like Groundhog Day two. We've seen that movie with Bill Murray in it. We've seen that with fixed election dates. As I speak here today, the previous Premier made a promise to my constituents – he made that promise over three years ago – to get a long-term care facility that was so badly needed. But, oh my goodness, it's three years later, and that word “promise,” that is being introduced into what this bill is all about, clearly does not live up to that commitment. That's unfortunate. When I refer to it, as I mentioned to the then former minister of health, it's really gibberish.

The Premier promised a judicial inquiry, and now we have Bill 24, which is absolutely like a $3 bill, where judges are optional, where, by the way, the minister of health no longer appoints; it's appointed by cabinet. Winston Churchill said: if everyone is thinking the same, then nobody is thinking. We are not at all convinced that the people that are in this cabinet are doing anything more than trying to continue to secure their job based on living up to this Premier's word “promise.” It's very unfortunate that a Premier was breaking some major health promises to my constituents, and now here it is again, déjà vu.

I had to check the calendar to make sure that I wasn't living in 2009 again. I thought that this leader was actually going to change. But, clearly, the next election will, I believe, see real change, that the Wildrose will offer, something that this government does not know.

I'm glad to see that the Minister of Finance has woken up, and I see his lip is up by his other lip, which really means that I'm getting on his nerves. Now he's putting his hands on his head because he needs to be able to breathe, to make sure that oxygen goes to the brain. I understand that medical term because, of course, he was the minister of health. Mr. Speaker, the good thing, as I say, is that I wash my ears and my Q-tips don't fall in, like the member across the way. I would like to say that I'm glad he's paying attention to every word that I'm saying. Let me remind him that there is no such thing as a $3 bill. Now, with this minister, of course, we've seen by his voodoo math that there must be $3 bills out there. You know what? I almost think Lloyd would be better back there, certainly, than you.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I look at the kind of things going on – queue-jumping, against everything Albertans believe in with respect to health care; a superboard supervisor yesterday saying: you will regret it if you do this – and what do we do? We lose a doctor who, of course, is someone who is trying to do good in testing at the Baker clinic, and what happens? They just intimidated him and scared him out of the province of Alberta. That's a sad reality.

I want to thank also the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, who brought this to our attention with the doctor. I think that, clearly, in my judgment, the issue of the Health Quality Council is something that does not speak of accountability. The PC word “promise” really does not have any foundation. They don't have any foundation because they just wiggle around it. We don't promise; we commit. A commitment is something. That is your word. That is your bond. I can proudly look at myself in the mirror and say: I live up to my commitments.

Mr. Anderson: Their bonds are from Italy and Greece.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. As the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere said, you know, their bonds are from Greece and Italy. I love Greeks, and I love Italians, but the reality of it is that we've seen how their bond markets have been going lately.

I see that the minister of whatever his ministry is – I think it's HR now – is going to be talking, and I have to remind him that this is not billable time, so he may want to hold on to his breath for another time.

But I have to ask the question: why is the government doing this? How simple is it? We have a true conservative value: live up to your commitment. The promise was made. Live up to that commitment. It's not being lived up to. It's unacceptable, and I think you're going to pay the price in the next election for that unacceptability of it. [interjection] I can see that the three-dollar bill on the other side agrees with me. He's pretending to read, which is something that I will help him out later with, but I will say . . .

Mr. Marz: Point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, there's a point of order on what you said.

Mr. Boutilier: On what grounds?

Point of Order Relevance

Mr. Marz: Beauchesne's 459, Mr. Speaker, relevance, repetition. I believe we are talking about Bill 24, expanding the mandate of the Health Quality Council, and I haven't heard anything from this hon. member in regard to that. He's talking about promises and $3 bills and all sorts of other comments that I can't in my wildest imagination see relate to this bill in any way, shape, or form. Perhaps if you could admonish the hon. member to stick to the contents of the bill, I think we'd all appreciate that.

Thank you.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I certainly appreciate the hon. member's comments and will try to stick to the bill even with . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, please. There is a rule in the House about when the Speaker stands up.

I see that you have not stayed on the discussion of the bill strictly, and the hon. member has voiced a concern. There's a point of order, so stay on the bill.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, I like to be very firmly directed on the point at hand, and I will try, regardless of the chattering on the other side, to stay on the bill because that's so important. I had no intention of talking about a $3 bill until someone prompted me on the other side.

Debate Continued

Mr. Boutilier: I am accountable to my constituents, Mr. Speaker, of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo when it comes to the Health Quality Council. I believe, as members of this Legislature believe, that all Albertans pay for their health care system, and we need to be accountable to it. One has to ask the question: why is the government doing this? This all comes back to the accountability and, ultimately, the truth. The government is afraid of the truth, the very thing that this Premier promised.

Any time I hear the word "promise," I think it's most important to actually look for the word "commitment" because commitment is real as opposed to what we have heard in these promises. There are very important people that are scared of what will be found. Perhaps that's the issue. This is opportunistic and against the public interest.

[The Speaker in the chair]

We always hear the same thing from the government. Mr. Speaker, trust is earned, and we believe there is not a lot of it going around this government. By dodging a public inquiry, by avoiding having a judge, clearly we believe they're appointing their own insiders in doing this. From the fact that it's no longer the minister of health but that it's actually the cabinet, that doesn't inspire us or give confidence to the fact that this is not a judicial public inquiry.

The fact is that we have in law, that was approved in this Legislature, a judicial inquiry act. That should clearly suffice. But what happened, Mr. Speaker? I'm glad to see that the minister of HR and everything else is listening. I would like to say clearly, in my judgment: why don't we keep to the truth, the truth that this leader, this Premier, promised? Why doesn't she commit to a public inquiry? Brave doctors are coming forward. Yesterday the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek talked about the Health Quality Council and talked about the fact that a doctor was bullied, intimidated, and in fact now cancer patients are left with the unknowingness of their testing that may be going on.

Mr. Speaker, world-class doctors, trained here in Alberta, are now world travellers because the government refused to listen. The doctor yesterday clearly said that he was afraid to come forward. I believe that I do respect the work of the Health Quality Council, but you don't come to this type of a review and this type of inquiry by just coming in like kindergarten as opposed to having a full-fledged inquiry. That's concerning. They are world-class doctors and health researchers that fill a vital role in our health care system, and they make sure we receive the best and safest health care possible.

There are issues in the delivery of care. They make sure we understand the situation so it won't happen again. In order to do this, their concern is patient safety, and I applaud that. They are great at their jobs, but are we asking too much of them? Are we asking doctors to be lawyers? God forbid. I can only say that that's not their job.

This is what confuses me, Mr. Speaker. We're giving doctors more legal powers. When an inquiry is called, they don't have to appoint a judge to conduct the proceedings. That is shameful. I ask the question: isn't this strange? Shouldn't we get the right person for the job? We're asking doctors to understand the rules of evidence and testimony. That's unfair to the Health Quality Council, and quite honestly I think it's unfair to all Albertans. The right person for this job, getting to the truth of what's wrong in our health care system: it should be the exact same situation with the federal Liberal, whom I know they're very closely associated with, Paul Martin, when, in fact, he had an inquiry. But what happened? He had the inquiry. Oh, they lost the next election.

We keep hearing about the current investigation by the quality council. Alberta Health Services talks about how this is a new world, where doctors are free to advocate for their patients. They are still afraid. I want you to know that nothing could be further from the truth. Just this week our cancer pathologist came forward and said that he contacted the Health Quality Council about intimidation and persecution in the health care system. He brought evidence and testified to the lead investigator. Nothing has been done with that evidence, Mr. Speaker. Why? Because the investigation is behind closed doors, just where this government likes to make its decisions.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, what we have here is a case of the inmates running the asylum. It makes sense in the asylum, but anyone outside with perspective can tell you: this is loony. It's time to end the bait and switch here. Creating a kangaroo court is not what Albertans expect and need from their government. I call on this government and I call on this Premier to do the right thing and live up and commit to her promise, that she is failing on to Albertans now.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity under this section.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Through you to the hon. House leader, I want to recognize the fact that on this very specific occasion, when he suggested I didn't know what I was talking about with regard to the agreement between the House leaders, he was completely correct. I apologize to not only the House leader but to the hon. members connected to this Assembly. For my 64th birthday/anniversary dinner I'll be eating crow.

The Speaker: Well, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Happy birthday and happy anniversary to the member.

My question is to the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. Again, I'm having some real consternation, umbrage, with the fact that the Premier during her leadership race promised with regard to this legislation that the health inquiry would be held and conducted prior to the next election so that voters would have an opportunity to see everything before they voted and get confidence again in the health care system and all that sort of thing. Yet I'm not seeing anything in this bill that ties her to that. In fact, it seems that this bill might just be a delay tactic since we already have a Public Inquiries Act out there, that would allow her to call this public inquiry immediately if she wanted to. But here we are. We're still debating a bill that's really unnecessary at this point to do what she said that she would do during her election campaign.

I guess my question is with regard to the timing. Do you feel that this bill is just a delay tactic, or is it something that needs to be legitimately done in order to proceed with what the Premier promised again and again and again during her election campaign and, you know, embarrassed some of her own party over during the election campaign?

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, would you like to respond?

Mr. Boutilier: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker. In fact, that's perhaps one of the smartest questions I've heard here this afternoon. What I would like to comment on is simply this. [interjection] Sorry. Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance, I think it is, is interrupting my comments through the chair. Let me refocus my thoughts again so that there's not another point of order.

Mr. Speaker, I find this really quite interesting. The short answer is that, yes, it's a delay tactic. When the federal Liberal Party, in fact, under Paul Martin as Prime Minister, decided to have a public inquiry into the sponsorship scandal, what happened was that the results came out before the federal election, and we all know what happened. They were soundly defeated.

I think the actual connection is that this government and this Premier are afraid for this information to come out because they know that it will damage every single member that's sitting as a PC in getting re-elected. That is their concern; therefore, they are more interested in what I view as two things. They're interested in power and holding on to power. I believe that, unfortunately, the situation has arisen where, in my judgment, they are actually learning from the federal Liberals. They're learning from the demise of the then Prime Minister Martin. Therefore, the new leader does not want to face that same demise. But I don't think that Albertans will be fooled by this charade because we already have an existing law, a Public Inquiries Act, that can be commenced immediately, and we can find out the results before the election is called, which, I understand, based on legislation will be called between March and May 31.

Therefore, the short answer to the question is that this is a delay tactic because they want to just keep it under the rug. They don't want more doctors and more people coming out and exposing what has taken place in this situation. In fact, the Minister of Finance was part of this charade when he was minister of health, and truly it was gibberish.

The Speaker: Additional speakers on this subject? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to be in the House tonight to discuss Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. It's being talked about greatly tonight as it probably will dominate at least the papers over the next few days and possibly even the next election.

If I could talk sort of about the act first. The act itself goes some way to looking into some of the allegations that have come forward in our health care system. We've had numerous doctors and health care professionals who have felt they have been intimidated by this government. They've felt they have been intimidated from doing their work to the best of their ability and from advocating for their patients to their greatest ability, and that is deeply concerning.

In fact, some of these allegations happened over the course of the last 20 years. There has been much talk about how this should be eradicated from the system, how it should be made more open and transparent, and that doctors should be able to do their work without interference of the political system and free from reprisals from the political masters who are seemingly in charge of the health care system. So that's what the bill is trying to address.

If you look at it at face flush, it does go some way to ensuring that this happens in a reasonable and forthright manner. For instance, parties can sign nondisclosure agreements. They could be protected from subsequent liability and the like. So there is some certain degree that the government has gone to in trying to see that at least some of the complaints are heard. Hopefully, some of the stones will be overturned so that we can get to the real bottom of whether this has been plaguing our medical system and whether it has interfered with its administration of public duty, which is saving lives and improving the health of Albertans. If it does do that, I am hopeful that at least some good will come out of Bill 24.

You know, another part of me was thinking about this coming over to the House. I was informed that we don't have very long to think about this or even to discuss this as the debate has been hurried along. In fact, we really didn't have long to prepare for this. We really didn't have much time to put this together. Nevertheless, I was thinking back to growing up. I hope you will allow me a little bit of leeway on this. We all have family members from time to time – you might have an uncle or an aunt or a grandparent or someone who has gone before you – who always love to rail against politicians whatever they do. I can remember being around the dinner table as a young man, and sure enough my uncle would say: "Oh, those stupid politicians. They're doing that Hibernia. It'll never pay out. Oh, those silly politicians. They're doing this." I can remember that when seat belt legislation came about, he said that it was going to be the end of freedom here in Alberta. You know, even when we brought in the metric system, he said that it would be the end, really, of Canada as a country as we know it.

We know there are people out there who say these things and are reactionary from time to time and love to, I guess, rail against anything public servants or members of this Legislature try to do. Even when these types of people are of the opinion that everything we do in this House is duplicitous, that it is for an untold evil, to either line our pockets or to further our prestige in the community or to secure some sort of advantage, in my view, this is often wrong, and it is often wrong for good reason. I think that most times Legislatures, both federal and provincial, at least try in their own way to get things done in a reasonable fashion that does not add to this public misconception. So on that sort of memory of growing up around this relative, my comments towards this bill become a little bit more terse, a little more that I'm not quite as satisfied with this as I would be at first blush.

You know, we all know politics is difficult. We all know promises are made, and sometimes promises aren't kept. I know that sometimes situations change and opinions have to change, but in general, hopefully, these are for a good reason, the economics of the time or balanced books or needs to be readjusted. Former promises of tax cuts don't necessarily happen because the public purse needs to carry on with the business of the day, providing education or providing health care. You can understand those sorts of situations when they come. The politician when he made those statements wasn't aware of certain implications that were going to come down the pike. Situations changed, and they had to change their minds accordingly, and it wasn't easy for them. Sometimes they had to pay the price with the electorate, sometimes they didn't, but they always did these things, I think, with a view to what was right at the time. At least, that's what I hope politicians would do.

When you look more specifically at Bill 24 and what transpired over the summer in the Tory leadership campaign, you had many participants in that race who simply would not call for a public inquiry. They said: "No. I will not go down that road. I will pay the price in this race. We're going to let the chips fall where they may on that because, in my view, I don't have the ability or the support to bring this about." They made that conscious decision because I believe they could see the six months down the road, where they would not be able to fulfill that promise. In not making that promise, it may have effectively cost some of them their position as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, Premier of this province. But they made that decision at that time, I think, looking forward to today, to what we are facing now in this Legislature.

Instead, we have a Premier who chose six months ago to go down this path. She struck the bold path of saying: I will call for a judicial public inquiry. This was made to much delight and fanfare of many people in my community, some family members, some nephews, some teacher friends of mine. They may have gone to the polls and struck a ballot for this individual, saying: "Right on. Here is a person who's willing to go down the uneasy path of looking into this matter, of getting to the bottom of it. Maybe we have a politician who's going to do what she says."

In my view, this Premier was smart enough to know, when she made this comment some six months ago, that today she would have to either invoke a public inquiry or go back on her word. I'm not sure what happened in the interim. I assume there was some pressure put on her. But at the time she made that statement, she had to have known this day was coming. Okay? I'm hoping, at least I was at that time and am still hoping today, that she will understand that those words meant something. It's not one of those promises where the circumstances changed, Mr. Speaker. It's one of those circumstances where the tea leaves were drawn out, where she could see the future. Budgets aren't changing this effect. The timelines haven't changed. We're dealing with allegations into the public health care system. She knowingly did this to get votes, and she realized there was going to be a day to pay for this. Now we see it here.

I look at this situation as being very different from some of the ones we alluded to earlier. In other situations, say, where Mr. Bush Sr. said, "I will never raise taxes," well, guess what? He looked at the situation. The budget had changed, the economy didn't grow as much as it could, and in his good conscience he said: "I can't let the country slide further into debt. The situation has changed."

But in this situation the situation has not changed. This Premier knew what she was saying then, and she knew what she was going to have to do now, and she has chosen not to do this now. In my view, that was wrong. If it's wrong now, she shouldn't have said it earlier because, in fact, it probably propelled her to the position she is in and garnered a lot of trust.

Now, I can't tell the future. Maybe it doesn't matter. Maybe it doesn't mean a tinker's darn. Nevertheless, let's go back to my uncle, who is sitting around the kitchen table or wherever he is right now reading the paper and going through his same monologue. Maybe this person can never change anyway, Mr. Speaker. Maybe he is destined to think the worst of us at all times. He's picking up the paper there, and he's going to rail the next time I go down there, probably at Christmas sometime. "See? All you politicians are just the same. There are promises made; there are promises that weren't kept. You're all a bunch of rats and scoundrels." And this has added to his fuel.

I believe that this has caused some rancour amongst our citizenry. It's caused possibly a lack of confidence in our elected officials and, in my view, was unnecessary given that the Premier knew what she was saying then and that she knows now what she is doing. In my view, that is the trouble with this. People continue to lose their confidence in what we have before us in this House, continue to have shaken confidence in our abilities to do what is in the public good. In this case their confidence should be shaken and rightfully so.

Those are my comments. I would leave them for those to consider. In my view, the Premier should be calling for a full judicial public inquiry, like she promised, like she used to get herself elected to this honourable position. Now she should let the chips fall where they may as she knew what she was saying then, and she knew what the consequences would be today.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your time. We'll go on from there.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for five-minute exchanges.

There being none, shall I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, then, to participate in the debate?

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour and a privilege to rise and speak to Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. I believe the title should go a little bit further, though. I believe this is nothing more than an act that's been put together for the health and the quality of the PC Party and their new Premier. It has very little to do with the Health Quality Council judicial inquiry that should be being brought forward. Again, it looks like an extension of a cover-up to me.

I just want to start off, I guess, by mentioning that it was back in March of this past spring when the former Premier called for the Health Quality Council. At that point there was a lot of debate saying that that wasn't going to do the job. The Health Quality Council was to look at the quality of delivery of health care in the province. I think that we can say that the delivery is actually pretty good. The wait times, the concerns are another issue. But what was at issue and at the root of this entire problem is the intimidation, again, as Dr. Duckett spoke out about later after being released, the priorities and the influence that government MLAs were having on the health procedures being performed here in the province.

There are two or three things that I think are unequivocal when it comes to asking Albertans on the street, and that is that the intimidation is real. There's been economic intimidation in the province. There's been intimidation in many areas, in many departments, but the one that concerns Albertans the most is the intimidation that's gone on for doctors and health care professionals, who are trying to provide service and be advocates for Albertans and who have been told: "You know, don't step out of line. Things could get iffy for you if you do." It's very, very disappointing that we are not having a full judicial inquiry.

We already have an act here in the province for judicial inquiries, and I don't think there's anybody over there on the government side that knows and understands that better than the Premier. There's no question that back in June and July, before the first report came out, the Premier, in talking to reporters, very much indicated the need for a judge and the need for a public inquiry and wanted to restore the confidence of Albertans in, I want to say, the governance of the quality of health that's being administered here in this province. This act is not going to address any of those concerns for Albertans. It's a confidence crisis that is ongoing.

We have lost health care professionals who have left the province because they've been told: you know, if you want to stay here and speak out, your future is jeopardized. There have been times, access to operating rooms and other areas, that have been brought forward, but I think the tipping point for all of this was just two days ago, when our health critic, Calgary-Fish Creek, was in contact with many physicians who have said over and over again – and even the Alberta Medical Association says that physicians will not come forward unless it's a full judicial public inquiry. Even with the Medical Association speaking out, this government has put their Q-tips in their ears and plugged them so that they don't have to hear it.

The past health minister spoke out unequivocally on the 4th of October saying that he would not support an inquiry into health care. He said that it would be a waste of time and money. But I think what it's all about is the health of the government, that it's jeopardizing their health if there was a full inquiry to be going forward.

I think our new Premier even was so naive at this point to think, because she's new in here: I'm clean from this, so I can talk about a public inquiry. But to me there's no question that the information that's coming forward is so damning that they're saying: "You know what? We can't have an open and public inquiry. We have to remain behind closed doors." This bill, Mr. Speaker, addresses that. It gives all kinds of protection, where this, I guess, kangaroo court is going to say: "Well, this is damaging. We will do this in camera." It's written in this bill to protect them. It's protection in here for a third party, and I have to ask: who is this third party? I think they're sitting over there in many spots on those benches. They are the third party that this is referring to for third-party protection in here. It is very alarming and concerning that this is the first step that this Premier wants to take in fixing the crisis in our health care. It needs to be addressed. Bill 24 simply does not address it.

It's interesting, you know. Why not make it mandatory to have a judge do the investigation here? I mean, they talk about it. You would think that it would at least be so simplistic when they're writing this to say: "Well, we won't leave it up to the minister or cabinet. We'll actually make it legislation and say that it must be a judge." But they don't even do that. They leave it vacant to say: well, at our discretion. From everything that I look at and read and hear about, this is for the protection and the health of the government, and that's disappointing.

What we're worried about is the health – and I want to say the health and the morale – of our health care professionals. It's never been a lower time for those that I speak to that have been practising health for 40 years in the province. They say that the front-line morale of those professionals providing this service is at an all-time low. They've never seen it worse. Originally, when the new superboard was put together, it was mandated in there. They were not to speak out, and they would be punished if they did. Then they said, "Oh, we'll recant that," but the punishment continued. It's just ridiculous to think that because they recanted, it's not going to happen when it continues to happen, and colleagues see this. There are a few individuals that say: "You know what? I'm not going to be part of this." They've moved on. They've left the country. These are world-class health care doctors and professionals that don't want to be here anymore. They don't have to be, but they want to be.

Again, in the case of Dr. Magliocco all I can say is thank you to someone who was willing to speak out that this government has no desire to have a full inquiry. I believe, personally, that one of the reasons why he spoke out was because of the amount of time and testimony he provided to top health care professionals and those on the Health Quality Council and to Dr. Chris Eagle, to all of those, and to Ken Hughes, the chair of the superboard. When they came out with their mid-term report in October, which I might also add, Mr. Speaker, is when this was supposed to come to a conclusion, he wasn't even mentioned – not even mentioned – in that report.

I find that astounding, that he spent over two hours and talked about it, had the e-mail to say: look, they told me that you would regret this if you speak out. He said: "Well, I guess I'll look after myself. I'll find another job." He's also said, Mr. Speaker, that he feels that in his new jurisdiction where he's at – and they've recruited him; they're excited to have him – that to put his team together, it's going to take him two years to duplicate the team that we have currently at the Tom Baker facility in lab tests.

We all know that when it comes to sports, when you have a winning team, you can't just dismantle it and move it and bring it back together. They've spent years putting this together, yet there's no regard, and in eight more days that facility is going to be shut down and moved. They say: "Oh, you know, there's no harm. There's no danger."

What's critical in all of this is that this government has already called on the Health Quality Council to do an inquiry. It's failed – it's clear – so now they're looking at having new powers to reinstate and to call new people for a kangaroo court to look at this. They've gone to great lengths, again, as I say, in here to protect the government, to protect health ministers, to protect superboard members, to protect everyone except for the doctors, the nurses, the health care professionals, and the people of Alberta. You just have to ask: why? Why are we doing this? Then it becomes quite crystal clear. Why? Because there's an election.

We have a flexible time period, and I think the number one reason for that flexibility is, well, in case there's an economic downturn, not a climate downturn, or there's a health care downturn, not a dry season.

Mr. MacDonald: Scandals.

Mr. Hinman: A scandal. Thank you, Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: What scandals do you think could happen?

Mr. Hinman: Oh, so many. So many. The Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar is asking: what kind of scandals? It would be better to ask them. They know, as the terminology is, where the skeletons are in the closet.

Mr. Speaker, it's incredibly concerning that this government and this new Premier have come forward with a bill to say that we're going to give new powers and create a new Health Quality Council of Alberta Act to get to the root of this. I don't see any intention or desire by this government to do that. What they want to do is postpone it. This is like finding out that you've got a wisdom tooth that needs to come out, and when you think about that, you go: "Holy smokes. I've got to postpone. This is going to be painful."

I talked to one individual. The doctors for years tried to tell him: we need to take out your wisdom tooth. It was causing him migraine headaches and everything else. Because he's delayed so long, he's been told that it could give permanent damage and that he won't have sensation in his tongue, so now he puts up with the headaches because he doesn't want to lose his taste.

I think this is exactly the problem here, that they've postponed it. They had a year to have the Health Quality Council investigate and to bring forward and account for the intimidation and the bullying that's going on, and they've failed. Because of that – and it's real – they can't have an inquiry now. If they were to pull out that truth, it would cost them their life, so this is about protecting their very life going into an election. With no evidence being brought forward, like you would under a public judicial inquiry, it's just extremely disappointing. We need to do better.

This bill should not be supported. This government should not pass this bill. They should do what the Premier promised, and that is to bring forward a full judicial inquiry and to actually bring forward witnesses that are able to speak, that are truly protected and not just pushed out of the province and told: "Go practise somewhere else. We don't need you." A flippant remark by our new health minister: "Oh, no problem. We can just transfer these people over. There's nothing to worry about. We can carry on with this testing and put a new team together and have that world-class experience transferred over" when we don't even know how many are going to leave on that team. Is the government even aware of how many of those pathologists and those working over there are leaving because they're so upset with the way their colleagues have been treated?

As Albertans are continuing to lose confidence in their quality of health care and as the health care professionals are the ones that have been asking the most for a full judicial inquiry, it's disappointing, to say the least.

A few other points that maybe we can go over. Public interest. How many times do we hear the Premier use the words "public interest"? I don't believe that the PC Party's interest is in alignment with the public interest. If it was, they would be doing something different. They're about power. They're about control. We see that they continue to want to centralize those powers, those decisions. They don't want to turn it over to a public inquiry, I very much believe, because of the damning evidence that would come forward and would be detrimental to the health of that party, even the life of that party.

Mr. Speaker, I just can't express enough my disappointment in the Premier and her solution, that she feels is for the people of Alberta, when everyone I talk to that delivers health care and those citizens that are concerned about this just shrug their shoulders. They're in disbelief. What are they doing? Why are they delaying this? Why can she pop out and spend $107 million in days, yet she can't call a full judicial inquiry in those days? As I said earlier, I don't think there's anybody over there who understood better than herself, with the quotes that she gave to the media those months leading up to her leadership, what a full judicial inquiry was. Yet she misled the media. She misled the members of this House. She misled Albertans. It's disappointing.

The Member for Calgary-Egmont is shaking his head.

The Speaker: We have a point of order.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, with respect to the hon. member's clear and intentional breach of the rules with respect to using unparliamentary language, I heard the words "misled" and "mislead" probably 10 times. I didn't quite start the count, so I'm not sure exactly the number of times. Mislead is not a parliamentary word. It doesn't show respect for the Legislature.

The Speaker: Actually, it has been used more times than necessary. The context is everything. I do believe that the hon. member also used the phrase "deliberately misled," which is even more damaging.

You've only got 22 seconds left. Can you sort of just clean it up?

Mr. Hinman: I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker. It does get frustrating, I guess, on this side because you hear it used so much that I forget. I mean, it's just done. It's say one thing; do another, then, I guess. It's just misspoken, misunderstood. The perception is that when you look at what the reporters recorded versus what's happened, there's a dichotomy here that cannot be brought back together.

Debate Continued

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have a question for the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. Certainly, I enjoyed his remarks on Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, but I have a question regarding the regulations. The cabinet may make regulations. They have 16 ways here to write a regulation, as I see it.

I'm curious: if you thought they would table those regulations and you would have the chance to look at them, would your opinion on the bill change? Is it possible that if you saw the regulations, you may consider supporting it? There are 16 different ways here to write a regulation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. member, if you wish.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. That's an excellent question. I guess I would say that I think if they were actually to bring forward the regulations, it would be more damaging than more supportive. I mean, what's the famous quote? The devil is in the details. The details are missing. The details are left to the whims of cabinet.

I'm very concerned that the inquiry would be regulated to death and controlled to the point of strangulation and would not function properly with the regulations that are coming out. I mean, it should be simple and clear, a full judicial inquiry. Then the inquiries act would take place, and a judge would step forward. They would have the Rules of Court. They'd be compelling evidence, they'd be compelling witnesses, and they would actually probably get to the root of this. But none of that, from what I have seen in here, is going to be in there other than smoke and mirrors. They speak about that they could; they might be able to if they desire to. All of the wording in there is such that you have to ask. It's so ambiguous. Oh my goodness, look at the latitude that they're giving this. There's no desire to come to a solution. If they had a desire to come to a solution, it would have come out already.

Again, in October when they came out with their report, I think the most disheartening thing for health care professionals was the fact that many of them had gone in and testified already and had spoken to the Health Quality Council, and there was very little, if any, mention of the bullying and the intimidation, which is real and is happening. We're losing professionals from the province. Are they going to come forward? Are they going to compel witnesses? No. I think they've probably got a list of who not to call. That would be in the regulations, to say: "Well, you know, don't call this or this or this area. We don't want to get into that." Again, it's about protecting the government. It's about protecting past ministers. It's about protecting the superbord. It's just wrong.

I mean, Dr. Duckett has spoken out. I think he did that with a lot of thought, carefully worded, on the manipulation and how his hands were handcuffed and how he was unable to perform the way he wanted to and was completely frustrated. That day when he put a cookie in his mouth, I believe, was because he was told: don't you speak or talk to any reporters. So what did he do? He thought: "Oh, that will be cute. I guess I'll just chew on a cookie to avoid that." I mean, Dr. Duckett was an individual that we could have used for another year, with his experience, to go through and find out what the problem is with the efficiencies in our hospitals, what the true cost is of each operation in Edmonton and Calgary and Lethbridge, to get down to the actual pennies and dimes of what the problem is. Yet he was not used for the talents that he had, and it was very disappointing.

This quality council I don't believe will even bring him in to ask him anymore. Again, the biggest problem is that they have the discretion to go in camera where they think there might be third-party harm. Third party for whom? Let's have the names of who they're worried about. The last three health ministers? The last two Premiers? Who are they needing to protect? That's the question that one has to ask.

I thank the hon. member for the questions. I think those regulations will be more prohibitive to finding the truth than helping it.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, another question?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I have another question, please, Mr. Speaker, for the hon. member. Section 17 of Bill 24 is the authority to establish a public inquiry. Are you confident that the cabinet should have that authority and that they will act in the public interest in their deliberations, whether or not a public inquiry should occur?

Mr. Hinman: Well, I think it's quite clear that if . . .

The Speaker: Alas, the time has expired.

Additional speakers? The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The object of the bill is to invest in the HQCA new health system inquiry powers and to require it to report directly to the Legislative Assembly. This is like reinventing the wheel. We have the Public Inquiries Act. I don't think we have to go this route. We should leave the mandate at whatever the Health Quality Council is supposed to do. We should leave it at that. I don't think this happened overnight because health care has been suffering for a long time, you know, since the '93 cutbacks. The problems keep piling up, piling up, piling up. I believe that in 1989 we had 13,300 acute-care beds, and two decades later we are left with 7,800 acute-care beds while the population has increased by approximately 700,000 or 800,000.

These problems didn't start overnight. With these cutbacks the front-line care providers were under a tremendous amount of stress, and the wait times kept going up and up and up. Obviously, people who were connected were probably going to get better treatment when the wait times were long.

In March the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, the outcast Tory, in question period raised some concerns about doctors being silenced, doctors being intimidated, and doctors being driven out of the province. Their careers were sabotaged for speaking out about patient care. Not only doctors, Mr. Speaker; even the nurses were scared to speak out. Then Dr. Duckett revealed about the well connected getting preferential treatment, jumping the queue. That was happening under the decentralized regional system. There was queue-jumping. Albertans were kind of vaguely aware that the politically connected were getting a little better treatment. An example is when the Calgary Flames and their families got immunization while average Albertans were made to wait because of the vaccine shortage.

Mr. MacDonald: Did they make the playoffs?

Mr. Kang: I don't remember that. I don't follow hockey too much. But I'm a Calgarian, you know, so I'll support the Calgary team.

The Speaker: Hon. member, please, through the chair, who is quite interested in your remarks.

Mr. Kang: When Dr. Ciaran McNamee came out and said that he couldn't speak, the government was in a rush. They appointed the Health Quality Council inquiry. The Health Quality Council inquiry has said that lots of doctors are not coming forward to testify until they get the protection of the law, that because of the nondisclosure agreements they signed, they cannot reveal any information. In my view, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act is not going to achieve what a full judicial public inquiry would achieve.

In June the Premier put herself apart from other leadership candidates when she agreed to hold a judicial public inquiry led by a judge, who has the power to compel evidence. That was a very bold statement on the part of the Premier. I think that because of that statement, lots of Albertans thought that, you know, she was different.

The Speaker: I am sorry. Hon. member, I hate to interject, but the Assembly must now adjourn. It will reconvene at 7:30 p.m. in Committee of Supply.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, November 22, 2011

Committee of Supply

[Mr. Zwozdesky in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: Thank you hon. members. I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order.

Supplementary Supply Estimates 2011-12 General Revenue Fund

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on behalf of the hon. Deputy Premier and President of Treasury Board and Enterprise.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Please let me be the first in this House to congratulate you on your new role as Deputy Chair of Committees. I know it was a very close election. [applause]

I'd like to move the 2011-2012 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund on behalf of the President of Treasury Board and Enterprise. The estimates will provide additional spending authority to two offices of the Legislature and nine government departments. When passed, the estimates will authorize increases of about $2.4 million in voted expense and capital investment of the Legislative Assembly, increases of about $864.9 million in voted expense, $82 million in voted capital investment, and $0.3 million in voted nonbudgetary disbursements of the government.

Mr. Chair, the estimates will also authorize, when passed, transfers of approximately $80.7 million of the previously approved spending authority between departments and a transfer of approximately $58.4 million from expense to capital investment in the Department of Infrastructure. These estimates are consistent with the second-quarter fiscal updates, which updated the 2011-2012 fiscal plan for all government entities. The estimates will authorize increases for each of the following: the office of the Auditor General; the office of the Chief Electoral Officer; and the departments of Culture and Community Services, Education, Environment and Water, Human Services, Justice, Municipal Affairs, Sustainable Resource Development, Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and Transportation.

Finally, the estimates will also authorize transfers from the Department of Treasury Board and Enterprise to the departments as follows: Advanced Education and Technology, Agriculture and Rural Development, Infrastructure, Sustainable Resource Development, and Transportation as well as a transfer from expense to capital investment within the Department of Infrastructure.

Mr. Chair, the ministers that are responsible for these departments or the ministers who are here on their behalf will be happy to answer questions from any members from the House. Thank you, sir.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you. Just before we call on the first speaker, I want to just remind all members here that members may speak more than once at this stage; however, speaking time is limited to 10 minutes per occasion. I would only say that if a minister and member wish to, they can combine their total time for 20 minutes, but I would ask that you advise the chair at the beginning of your speech, hon. members, if you plan to combine your time with the minister's time. Both of you will then take and yield the floor over that combined period. I'll try and maintain a speakers list here.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, do you wish to lead off?

Sustainable Resource Development

Dr. Taft: Okay. Sure. I thought I might have opening comments from the minister.

The Deputy Chair: That's fine, too. Yes.

Dr. Taft: Then I'll respond to him.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Thank you.

Dr. Taft: We can take it back and forth if that's okay with the minister. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Minister for Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you. I'm pleased to appear before the House tonight to request and explain the supplementary estimate of $280 million, which you'll note is bigger than the actual original budget estimate. As past ministers in this spot have done every time, I will explain that we budget for fires, and now for the mountain pine beetle, at a base level of known cost, which is start-up, man-up, equipment purchases. Those sorts of things establish our base budget. Beyond that, we go into emergency spending, which brings up very large supplementary estimates.

The explanation – and I'll ask the Hansard recorder to indulge me in this if they would use capitals and an exclamation mark – could be simply summed up in one word. It would be FIRE! As you well know, this year we had it, and I don't at all mean to make light of the horrific year that we had the fire, the huge cost to improvements to the entire town of Slave Lake and the communities everywhere and of course to our forest resources.

Dr. Taft: Okay. Well, I appreciate that it was an extraordinarily horrific year for fire. My struggle with this and my questions to the minister are around the recurring nature, whether it's the fires at Slave Lake or whether it's the Chisholm fire or wherever the fires are. Every year there are significant fires, and every year we come back after the fact to pay for them. I contrast that, for example, to the snow clearing budgeting process, say for the city of Edmonton, where they take an average, the best guess of what it's likely to cost to clear the snow, and they put that in the budget up front. Then sometimes they go over and there has to be a supplement, but sometimes they're under, and then they can carry that forward to the subsequent year.

It just strikes me as a peculiar way to handle the budget for fire. We'll get to the pine beetle later. It's just a genuine question of: why doesn't the government handle the budgeting process differently based on, say, the average of the previous five years or something like that because it would take some of the more dramatic swings out of this department's budget, which I'm sure is a hassle to handle. So that would my question. Any explanation from the minister? Any openness to changing that for next year? I'd welcome hearing it.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I welcome the hon. member's question. As I said, every year that I've sat in this House, the same concerns have been raised. The member, of course, understands that we're talking about orders of magnitude different from the snow removal budget of a city, and the completely unpredictable nature of it. I'll give you an example. The fact is that this year is actually a less-than-average fire year. We're 50 per cent below our annual average number of fires. All of the damage was caused in very short order in a very few fires, and that was purely the timing of the fires, not the fact that they happened. They happened in the spring in very volatile burning conditions that we've never seen before.

I know that other jurisdictions struggle with this as well. This is the budgeting process that we've arrived at. This argument reminds me of how useful averages are in these natural resource situations. I know of three statisticians that were out hunting. They're walking down a trail, and there's a beautiful buck deer standing there. The first guy shoots and misses it two feet to the left. The second guy shoots and misses it two feet to the right. Whereupon the third guy starts jumping up and down and says: "We got it! We got it!" It's not always useful to use averages, and it certainly isn't in this case.

Dr. Taft: Well, we just have to agree to disagree on this one. I actually think it would be quite useful to use a different kind of budgeting process. Every year is different. Every year there are random events. There is a dry spring, or maybe there's a dry fall, or there are even winter fires. Whatever. We can be pretty sure that we're going to be spending $100 million or $200 million on fires every year. If we're really lucky and we don't, we can even carry that forward.

I will just once more put on the record that I think it's an odd way to handle this kind of budgeting. Although it wasn't a bad joke, I didn't hear from the minister a rationale that convinced me of why this is a sensible approach. This comes up every year, and we get the same exchange every year.

I'd like to move on, actually, to the pine beetle. I happen to have last year's sup supply estimates for Sustainable Resource Development, and it's word for word and number for number the same allocation. It says, "$30,000,000 of emergency spending for continued ground survey and control operations to fight the mountain pine beetle infestation." I guess there are two or three questions to this. One is: again, if it's $30 million last year, $30 million this year, and it's probably going to be $30 million next year, why do we keep bringing this back to sup supply as opposed to just putting it in the baseline budget?

That $30 million is a nice round figure. I have no idea what the detailed basis of it is, but I assume it's built from the bottom up, and it probably covers research and culling and controlled fires and goodness knows what. So the first part of my question would be, perhaps: is there some reason not to put that $30 million into next year's base budget?

The second question around the mountain pine beetle, frankly, is: how is the fight going? Let me put it that way. I was twice in the fall through the area west of Nordegg and up to Lake Louise and so on. Boy, it's a bit worrying there. In fact, probably just a week or 10 days ago I was at Chateau Lake Louise, and I looked across, and there are a number of red pine trees. I'm thinking: "Wow. Is that magnificent view from Chateau Lake Louise of the lake and the mountains and the glaciers and the trees going to look different if in three or four years the trees are all dead?"

Can you (a) tell us about the budgeting? This $30 million: where is it going? Will we see it in next year's base budget given it has been exactly the same for the last couple of years? And (b) how is the fight going?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm very pleased to respond to the member. First of all, he's right. That was the number that was presented in the budget last year. That would be indicative of the fact that we're expecting a similar amount of work to happen this year. We do annual surveys. We have some understanding of, as he puts it, how the fight is going. I'm expecting to do a similar amount of work this year.

What I put in the budget for a proposal for next year is up to me, in consultation with my department, about the amount of work we need to do. How it goes into the budget is for the tall foreheads in the accounting group in the Treasury Board and Finance ministries. Even the Auditor General, who has reviewed our books and how we do budgeting, has made comments from time to time. So the accounting rules around it are not mine. I invite you to carry on a conversation at some point with the Finance minister and the Treasury Board President about that very thing. Our work, the $30 million, is based on some projection of the work we need to do.

The situation in Alberta: I can inform this House that it's good and bad. We are just finishing the survey work. We are about to release a report. I believe the first of next week it'll be out. The southern part is encouraging. I have some issues in the north in the Grande Prairie region and then east to the town of Slave Lake.

My objectives for the coming year will be to do everything we can to stop the north-south movement of the beetles along the eastern slopes corridor and the east-west movement between Grande Prairie and Slave Lake. The north-south corridor along the eastern slopes is absolutely critical to us. That's a watershed for all of the prairies. The east-west movement gives them a vector into the eastern pine system of the boreal forest. There is probably no real stopping them once they get to that point, so I have some concern.

The hon. member mentioned the situation in the parks. There are indeed beetles in the parks. I am travelling to Ottawa, I hope before the end of the year, to discuss with the federal ministers of Natural Resources and Parks what their actions can be. Is there any role that Alberta can play in assisting them and in partnering with them since we have crews up and running already? I'm not completely sure what they intend there.

I do know and I need to make it very clear to the member that the federal government intends to act, but they're acting on a protected parkland basis versus the managed land basis that my department looks after, so they have different objectives and different tools. They are fully intending to use prescribed fire. I know that much.

I do intend to meet with the federal ministers to discuss what role we can play and how they can help us on our publicly managed land base as well. They have been helpful to this point. I also need to say that significant federal dollars have flowed to our province, the research resources of the Canadian Forest Service. They've done some work with industry in the utilization of mountain pine beetle killed wood, and those sorts of things. I don't in any way sling arrows at what the federal government is doing or how helpful they have been to us.

So I think that kind of covers the issue. As I said, we have a similar amount of work planned for this coming year, and that's based on surveys and survival counts and all that. I'll be releasing a full report on our work to date on the state of the mountain pine beetle I guess at the beginning of next week.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Is it possible for me to see if I could bring another minister in, the Minister of Finance, just specifically to SRD?

The Deputy Chair: Proceed.

Dr. Taft: Thank you. Just picking up on our debate here, I was just saying, Mr. Minister, that last year, 2010-11, the supplementary supply estimate had $30 million “of emergency spending for continued ground survey and control operations to fight the mountain pine beetle infestation.” This year it’s exactly the same thing: $30 million of emergency spending for exactly the same purposes. So my question would be: given that it doesn’t look like the mountain pine beetle is going to go away, should we not be at least considering taking this $30 million from emergency funding and putting it into the standard budget? Maybe you don’t even need to answer that. I’m just putting that as a question to you in terms of how we manage our budgeting.

I think the pine beetle has gone from being a one-off kind of emergency to, sadly, probably a chronic management issue. So I’d encourage the Minister of Finance and the Minister of SRD to consider, rather than bringing $30 million next year in sup supply, just building it into the baseline budget. I don’t know if there are issues around that that the Minister of Finance wants to address or not. I just put that idea on the table.

Mr. Liepert: You know, I guess it’s a question as you begin the year: what is the appropriate amount that you put in? With all due respect, we’re spending a lot of time talking about $30 million out of – what’s our supplementary estimates? – about $800 million. You know, when it comes to these disasters, I just don’t know how you manage to get to that point, and at the end of the day I’m not sure that it really makes that much difference.

That’s why we’re here with supplementary estimates, because inevitably there are going to be some things that you’re not going to be prepared for. When we reconcile at the end of the year, it’s all there. So it’s a matter of whether you do it up front and, potentially, not need the money and then lapse it at the end of the year, or you spend it on something else because it’s already been accounted for, or you actually make sure that the expenditures take place and are warranted and then come back to the Assembly for the approval.

Dr. Taft: My last question just to the Minister of SRD would be: is there spending on mountain pine beetle fighting outside of this $30 million, or is this $30 million the full allocated amount for the continued ground survey and control operations to fight the mountain pine beetle?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Yes. Mr. Chair, I’m pleased to respond to that. There would be a base level of spending in there. It would not be the kind of base that would be in our fire budget, you know, the amount of equipment required in firefighting, but there are certainly staff costs, those things built into the department that we will be staffed up to address the mountain pine beetle. Beyond that, actual program spending is in the emergency.

The minister makes an excellent point. That money in my budget up front would allow the SRD ministry, if in fact it turned out to be a less-than-average year, to spend that money elsewhere. It is, in fact, better to come back to the Legislature as a supplementary estimate at the end of the year with the indication that that money was actually spent on the disaster that it was intended for.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

You have four minutes left if you wish.

If not, I’ll proceed in an alternating fashion after the lead critics have had their moment. I have Calgary-Nose Hill for a quick question and then Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

7:50

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The Member for Edmonton-Riverview anticipated part of my question, but I would like to follow up with the minister with respect to the $30 million, exactly what the program is with respect to spending that money. I can certainly appreciate additional money for the purposes of a survey, which would allow cutting in advance or in front of the advance of the mountain pine beetle epidemic and allow, also, some salvage operations. Could he explain what types of control are being utilized with respect to this additional money other than the survey money? Is it selective cutting and burning, of which, I understand, we’ve had a program for some years? Also, is there some measure of the efficacy of the way that that program is being utilized? Has it had success here in the past?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I’m quite pleased to address that. Of course, we need to do surveys to determine the progress, the success of the beetle from year to year, and that’s an expensive endeavour. We do aerial and ground-level surveys.

Most of the money goes to control actions, and a very significant part of that goes to single-tree action, where trees are removed, relocated to a different place, and burned on the site. Where cutting or salvage cutting is feasible, as in the beetles in a big enough concentration and we can get reasonable access to it, we do work with the forest industry to reschedule their cutting activities and take those pine beetle-infected trees. But lots of the action is on a single-tree basis: remove the tree and burn it at another location. That work happens often with helicopters and is very expensive.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

I have Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Just indicate if you would like to proceed in rapid-fire, hon. member, or combine your time.

Mr. Mason: Sure, we can combine the time. That would be great.

The Deputy Chair: Okay.

Mr. Mason: This summer I travelled to a few communities in the wake of the Slave Lake fire where they had reception centres. Athabasca was one, and I visited other towns in the northern forest. Some of the conversations I had with local officials revolved around what we do to protect these communities from the kind of thing that happened at Slave Lake.

This may not be a supplementary estimate, but you do talk about forest protection here, so I’m going to use the opportunity to raise the question. Is there not more that we can do to protect these communities by way of building firebreaks or fire barriers around the town, anticipating that as the forest dries out a bit because of climate change, these kinds of fires are going to be more common? They’re going to be larger, they’re going to be hotter, and they’re going to be more dangerous. I’m wondering if the minister could talk a little bit about anything that has been discussed or is in the works, any plans that have been made to provide greater protection for this type of thing, which is becoming more inevitable every day. I would really hope that we would learn a lesson from what happened in Slave Lake and take steps to mitigate that kind of occurrence in the future.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The member is right. It's not a part of supplementary estimates.

We do run a FireSmart program, and we offer supports and grant funding to communities to deal with the urban forest interface, and we deal with country residential land practices to minimize the chance that a fire will spread into a residence or into a community. We do that work all the time. That's in our regular budget.

I want to caution the member to understand, and I will tell him that in my experience in fighting forest fires – that's how I began my career in forestry – I've never in my life seen burning conditions such as there were on that day in the Slave Lake fire. I expressed concern that morning to my son. We were watching the weather conditions in Edmonton here, the amount of wind that was blowing, and I said to him: you know, if we have a big forest fire today, somebody could get killed. I've never seen burning conditions like that. It warms my heart, at the same time, that I've also never seen a human response such as we saw that day in the fact that we safely evacuated that many people in that short a time, and we moved on.

There is no feasible fireguard system that would have stopped that fire advancing under those burning conditions on that day short of completely devegetating, including the grass, from a very large area. It was early in the spring, and any grass that was on the ground was dry. It wicked the fire just as well as the trees did.

There are some very interesting shots of that fire. One has an RCMP officer directing traffic on the road, with fireballs raining. Those were coming from the tops of trees, clumps of needles and cones being blown in from kilometres away. It's not something that you could have stopped. It was an absolutely unbelievable situation. Thank goodness we had the people in place either directly or very quickly to have a safe reaction to that and literally save lives. It really could have been horrendous. An absolutely astounding event. You know, it was just good disaster planning, good emergency planning. A lot of ministries came together, and some great people in the public service came together on that day.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I agree that there was an excellent effort following the fire. I'll actually give the government a little credit on this because I think that they did do a good job. I also think that municipalities did a great job, various organizations did a good job, and the people really came together. It was really a collective community effort the likes of which I've not seen before. I was so impressed and so proud to be an Albertan when I saw the work that had been done and the volunteers coming forward at the reception centres to help the people, even, you know, the SPCA setting up facilities to rescue animals, pets that had been left behind. It was very, very impressive and heartwarming.

I also recognize that there were special circumstances on that day. However, I didn't hear the minister say that any efforts were being made or any program put in place to protect communities. There are some communities – take, for example, Swan Hills – where the forest comes right into the community in a number of areas. It wouldn't take an extraordinary fire for that community to be put at serious risk from a forest fire. That's just one example. Again, is the ministry considering working with municipalities in order to provide at least a higher degree of protection from fires than currently exists?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you. First of all, I want to thank the hon. member very much for reminding me that it wasn't just our public service that responded on that day. Municipalities from across our province did, I agree, a fantastic job, and we couldn't have done it without their help. The number of fire trucks that rolled into Slave Lake, for example: those weren't ours; those were from municipalities across the province. An incredible response.

I did say that we run the FireSmart program and provide grants. We'll continue to do that. I've approved some grants for this year already. That is a program where we work with municipalities to identify risk and mitigation strategies. It could well be that we'll be informed by what happened in Slave Lake this year, and we'll relook at criteria. I can guarantee that. It's essential work. I didn't want to say that it's not possible to do that. It's just that on that particular day it would have been next to impossible to stop that particular fire. But that's not the average fire condition. I do agree with the member that it's very important to identify those strategies.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

I have the hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Pardon me if I've got this wrong. I was just getting organized when the minister was speaking earlier. I understood the minister to say that he doesn't budget for disasters, but he does budget for mountain pine beetle. Then I thought I heard the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview indicate that you could roll over your budget from one year to the next. Is that correct? That's not my understanding of the situation, but I'd appreciate the comment on it.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you. First of all, I do budget for fires and mountain pine beetle in the regular budget. There is a base level of activity that I have to do from year to year, so that's budgeted. Then the activities as they occur come out of emergency budget, as the Member for Edmonton-Riverview correctly pointed out.

If in the event that I had that in my regular budget and I didn't spend it in a year, no, I definitely could not roll it over. That's not in keeping with our financial rules.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Yes. Just a supplemental. Certainly, I didn't believe you could roll over your budget, and I appreciate that.

I don't personally agree with budgeting for disasters. I agree with budgeting a certain amount for the mountain pine beetle, you know, because it's a regular occurrence as of late and certainly a certain number of fires, but I don't believe in budgeting for disasters.

My question is with regard to the mountain pine beetle and particularly the national parks. As I recall, about 30 years ago – and my memory is a little faded; I'm getting a little old – in Waterton park they had I think it was a mountain pine beetle or maybe it was a spruce beetle at that time, and the national parks' policy was, since it was a natural occurrence, to leave it alone and not do anything. Is that still the policy of the national parks as far as you're aware, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Oberle: No. To the best of my knowledge, it's not although each individual park has a somewhat localized management strategy. That situation occurred. It's not just the fault of the federal government. The B.C. government did it in Tweedsmuir provincial park, and the federal government had the same problem in Cape Breton Highlands national park. We've all learned a lot since, you know, those kinds of infestations have happened, and we all take a little different approach to them.

The federal government is still constrained by the fact that it is a national park, so they have certain land uses that they can allow within there, but they are actively managing it. You will have seen prescribed fire used in our national parks several times in the last few years, so they do have management strategies. We've all learned a lot since those infestations happened.

Mr. Allred: I have a question if I may, Mr. Chairman. I noticed in coming back from Slave Lake several months ago that a lot of the burned-out timber was just standing there. Is there no commercial use for that timber, and is it not logical to try and harvest it for some use? I expect that's probably a commercial operation, but perhaps you set policies on that.

Mr. Oberle: Well, we certainly try to do as much salvage logging as we possibly can. Much of the wood is damaged beyond repair immediately in that as soon as it dries out that much, it cracks, and then it's not useful for lumber. There's only so much sawmill capacity in the province to deal with all of that wood. We've done some work with pulping, but carbon, charcoal, in pulp is just about impossible to get rid of. You can't bleach it out. So it's difficult to deal with salvaged wood. We do as much as we can, recognizing that the wood has ecological benefits and that the sites will have to be reforested. We'll move forward on a sustainable basis. No, we simply cannot salvage it all.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

I have the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere next if he wishes to speak. No?

Then we'll go to Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Chair. Just a brief question about biofuel or at least the opportunity for energy from some of this damaged wood. I assume some of it, even the pulped stuff, could be used for alternate energy. I was wondering if you had any sense of where that might be going and what the potential is in our energy mix.

Mr. Oberle: That is definitely a possibility, and, you know, we'll look to opportunities wherever we can. There are problems with that, though, in that you can't have a biofuel industry at full capacity sitting on the ground waiting for fires to happen, and it can't be set up fast enough to deal with an emergency after it happens, so you always have a limited capacity.

There is also an economic problem in that it's a more marginal endeavour to burn biofuels for cogeneration, for example, and there's a limited distance that you can truck those fuels beyond which it's no longer economic. So there are problems. We are certainly willing to talk to anybody that's willing to discuss bioenergy or other opportunities. That's part of our salvaging program as well because there are bioenergy facilities out there, and they will be utilizing burned wood wherever we can.

Dr. Swann: A supplementary. I was actually referring to the pine beetle damaged wood. Are there any current existing facilities using the damaged wood?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Oberle: Yeah. It's the same situation, maybe magnified somewhat, though, because the damage from the pine beetle is typically more dispersed than the damage from a fire. At least that's all in one place, and you could economically harvest within that area. It's harder to do with pine beetle, and with the amount of access that's required, it's difficult. But, again, we are salvage cutting in pine beetle wood as well, and all the waste from that wood and whatever other amounts we can are going to bioenergy facilities wherever we can. We're always open to talking to more people. One thing about deadwood fibre is that it's useful for a number of years for a bioenergy facility. It doesn't deteriorate like it does for its use in sawn lumber. So there's some opportunity there.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Are there any other questions for the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development?

If not, we can proceed to the top of the list, then. Perhaps, Minister of Culture and Community Services, you may wish to address the Assembly with your request.

Culture and Community Services

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. Good evening and thank you for the opportunity to speak to the 2011-2012 supplementary estimates for Culture and Community Services.

As you all will know as MLAs, representing Albertans across this province, cultural facilities play an important role in the building of welcoming and inclusive communities. These facilities provide the kind of socioeconomic benefits that help sustain not only local business but the communities themselves. Our investment in cultural facilities has resulted in stronger communities and improved quality of life for all Albertans.

This year's supplementary budget estimate of $20,683,000 is requested to provide the following funding: first, $6,245,000 to complete the Canada Sports Hall of Fame; second, $518,000 toward the Citadel Theatre; and third, $3,295,000 to complete the GO community centre. This funding is offset by a transfer from the government of Canada's infrastructure stimulus fund.

An additional $4 million is required for the construction projects at Fort Calgary, including the Hunt and Deane houses, expansion of the interpretive centre and the stockade, barracks, and parkways. A transfer from the federal government's provincial-territorial base funding program will offset this funding.

Mr. Chair, $3,125,000 will support the development of the Ukrainian Canadian Archives and Museum of Alberta, with the funding used in the conversion of the historic Lodge Hotel in Edmonton to house the museum, archives, and library. Again, this funding will be offset by a transfer by the federal-provincial-territorial base funding program.

Lastly, an allocation of $3,500,000 is required to meet the first year of the province's $25 million commitment toward the construction of the Cantos national music centre.

These investments will help establish our communities and our local economies while enhancing Alberta's reputation as a cultural leader in Canada and beyond.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Any comments? The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. Thank you for this information on supplementary supply for Culture and Community Services. I have to assume that each of these extra expenditures was not anticipated in the year, and that's why it wasn't budgeted for. I'd appreciate hearing a little bit about how each of these actually happened.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. As I indicated earlier, many of these are federal flow-through capital grants. What typically follows is that the money is put in at the provincial level, and then the federal level follows with flow-through capital grants. That's why it's an additional supplementary estimate to the budget that was presented last year.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Chair. How does that apply, then, to the Cantos music centre?

The Deputy Chair: Madam Minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you. The Cantos music centre: to make it clear, that is an allocation from the province for the first year of the $25 million commitment. That would be an allocation from the province from the current funds there for that. That would not be part of the federal flow-through, so my apology there.

8:10

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. I'm curious to know more about what's happened to some of the Wild Rose Foundation funding and whether that is continuing through other means and how that's being disbursed. I know it's not part of the supplementary estimates, but many of us are curious about where that money has gone and how decisions are being made.

The Deputy Chair: Madam Minister, the Wild Rose Foundation is not part of this, but if you wish to answer the question, I'll allow it.

Mrs. Klimchuk: That's fine. Just a couple of brief comments. The Wild Rose Foundation still does exist as a foundation in this department, and of course all the grants that are funded towards international development are running through the community initiatives program. Those still will continue.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. Perhaps the minister could make some comments about the Royal Alberta Museum and what you are anticipating there.

The Deputy Chair: Again, Madam Minister, the Royal Alberta Museum funding is not part of this request from what I read, but if you wish to make a brief comment, I'll allow it.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. I'll make one brief comment. The provincial museum is a terrific example of levels of government working together to develop something that's going to be an incredible legacy for Alberta and for Canadians. That is moving forward. We know the design-build agreement has been met. As well, there's been some excellent work with respect to moving forward on the transfer of land. So it's going to be a very exciting project for Albertans.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you. That was done nicely and briefly. Let's just remind ourselves that we should be focusing on what's really in the supplementary estimates.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Just in looking at the supplementary estimates, in particular the Cantos national music centre, it's my understanding – and this could be incorrect; a little bit of knowledge can sometimes go in a wrong direction, so I appreciate the minister's contributions on this – that this project is supposed to start building by 2014. If I look at these payments, it looks like the provincial government is looking at making eight. Is that your strategy, to make eight payments of $3.5 million over the course of the life of this project? Are you guys contributing? I believe the federal government has contributed $25 million to this project, and they have put those funds into the Cantos national music centre. Isn't that granting formula contingent on you giving it relatively quickly, or am I mistaken on that?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. I think it's really clear to note, just speaking specifically to what's before us tonight, that the initial allocation of $3.5 million is required to start the process going. Then the allocation will be that every year there will be money put towards that from the provincial and from the federal levels, as you said.

Mr. Hehr: Well, no, that's not my understanding. My understanding is that the full money is already at the national music centre from the feds. In future years are we going to see this $3.5 million contribution come forward in supplementary estimates, then, for the time foregoing, or is this going to become a budgeted amount in the budget, where people can actually see that the Cantos music centre is going to get this money over eight years? I guess I would like some clarification. It's my understanding that the federal government has given the full grant process to them. Now that the provincial funding mechanism is here, won't that impact the Cantos music centre in some fashion?

Mrs. Klimchuk: Well, certainly, it is my understanding that it'll be part of the budget moving forward, but I would prefer to get back to the member on those details so that I can make sure I have the correct information for you.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you. I might be mistaken as well, so I'd appreciate that.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Okay. No problem.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Are there any other questions for the Minister of Culture and Community Services? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I was wondering if I could ask a very simple question to help Albertans understand what is meant by the flow-through dollars from our federal counterparts. Also, from time to time constituents raise the issue of whether those flow-through dollars are time certain for the province of Alberta. I'm just wondering if the hon. member could shed a little bit of light on those two aspects.

The Deputy Chair: Madam Minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Chair. That's a very good point. The concept of flow-through dollars, as I mentioned previously:

oftentimes the province will initiate the funding, and then the federal government follows through. That's why the flow-through dollars are there. It does give you flexibility to plan. But, also, we want to make sure that when we plan our projects, they do go ahead and the money is there. Albertans can be assured that with respect to these items for the supplementary estimates there are no concerns there whatsoever.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Any other members wish to question the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit?

Seeing none, perhaps we could move on to Education. If the Minister of Education wishes to make a few opening comments, that would be appreciated.

Education

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, I'd be thrilled to do that. There are a number of reasons for supplementary estimates as requested in the documents before the House as follows. The supplementary amount of $217,646,000 is requested to provide, and I list: $106,683,000 for the reinstatement of operating support to public and separate school boards; $13,100,000 for fuel costs, which, as you know, Mr. Chair, have risen significantly over a short period of time; $3,200,000 for teachers' salaries as a result of an increase in the actual Alberta average weekly earnings, to which the salaries under the current agreement are tied, to 4.54 per cent from what was anticipated to be 4.4 per cent as included in the original budget estimate; and also $94,346,000 for reprofiling of the Alberta school alternative procurement projects, the second phase of it, due to – and this is a good-news story – faster than anticipated construction progress, and $70,296,000 for new school construction and modular classrooms; and, last but not least, $317,000 for the reinstatement of operating supports to accredited private schools.

Mr. Chairman, as you know, in some cases, as well as we do with budgeting, some numbers, particularly those of average weekly earnings, are simply not predictable. They're very difficult to pinpoint a year in advance. So those differences will occur. As you also know, very much appreciated by the school boards was a recent additional injection of dollars to address some of the shall we call hot spots or pressure points within school boards throughout the province. I should note that shortly school boards will be reporting to us on how they spent these dollars. I can assure you that you will find that many of the pressures that would have been identified by students and/or parents have been addressed in a satisfactory way. The Alberta School Boards Association will tell you that the dollars were welcomed and were needed and have yielded the benefit that they were designed to address.

At this point, Mr. Chairman, I'm open to any and all questions from members of this House.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Just before I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, I'm going to assume that it'll be 20 minutes shared unless speakers advise me otherwise. It just helps us run the clock.

Proceed, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Chair, and I thank the hon. minister. I know he's had a long day with the speech I heard him do this morning in front of the boards. Most of it I was actually quite receptive of. I congratulate him on that speech and the reception he got from the ASBA.

I would like to go into a little bit of the conversation. As you know, I think I asked last spring, when we were going through the then proposed cuts – I think I only asked one question last term. It wasn't because I couldn't ask other questions. The importance of it meant that I needed to ask it every day, and that was, in my estimation, the wrong-headed cuts of approximately $107 million to the school budget, something that threw our school boards and parents and teachers' groups into disarray for quite a while. I'm glad to see that the Premier in this instance has followed through on her promise and reinstituted that funding for the benefit of not only children but, in my view, for the benefit of the province. I would say that was kudos to the government for reinstating that money.

8:20

On that component of the $106 million or $107 million, just to be rough. In my conversation with some of the school organizations out there they indicate to me that because of the budgeting and the pulling the money in, pulling it out, and returning the money to them, additional costs and expenses and other things of that nature were incurred by the boards. Was there any consideration given to or any requests made of this government to augment some of these extra costs that occurred as a result of the giving of funds, taking of funds, and giving funds back again? Or has that discussion not happened and it's just – I know it's not seen here, so obviously it wasn't given, but was there a request made, and was there any consideration of that?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have to start by saying that the reason the member was not appreciative of all of my speech but only most of my speech is because he couldn't hear the remaining parts because the applause was so loud. But I will share my notes with him later so he can appreciate all of it.

Mr. Chairman, no, there were no discussions, really, with school boards relevant to any additional costs that may or may not have been incurred as a result of the in-year injection of the dollars, but I would like to remind the member that in the last year's budget we actually increased the amount of funding for Alberta Education. This was just programs, which in many cases were anticipated to lapse, so school boards knew that some of the programs within that $107 million were lapsing.

That is not to say that they are not welcoming of these particular additional dollars to address some of the pressure points that they found within school boards. All school boards were given significant latitude in how they will spend these dollars. All school boards have identified meaningful and productive ways to allocate these dollars, and we will be hearing from them within a month or so, telling us exactly how each school board appropriated those dollars and what tangible benefit in the classroom was incurred.

To answer your question shortly: no. No discussions took place, and frankly no requests were made by school boards to offset any additional costs which may or may not have been incurred.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Another question I have is in regard to the expenditures for operating accredited private schools. I do note that I've asked some questions of the minister on the appropriateness of funding for accredited private schools. I think many Albertans are simply unaware of the fact that we fund private accredited schools to the tune of 70 cents on the dollar for all these schools that are operating that may or may not or, in my view, do not fit within an inclusive education system that expands equal opportunity to each and every child regardless of age, race, colour, creed, and all of that stuff – you know the drill – and then that term “equity” that I heard in the speech earlier today. Nevertheless, just a question around this $317,000 expenditure: is that based on the .7 formula, or 70 per cent formula, for private schools? If you could outline how that expenditure was made, that would just clarify things for me.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Chairman, the fact that we do have private accredited schools in this province speaks to equity, actually. Each child learns differently, and each child and family have different needs and different priorities. What makes Alberta education as great as it is and renowned throughout the world to a large degree, not only because of it but to a large degree, is the fact that parents and children in Alberta have choices. They can go to Protestant schools. They can go to Catholic schools. They can go to chartered schools. They can go to Christian schools. They can go to Islamic academies. They can go to art schools and drama schools, and they can go to academic schools. The list goes on and on. That’s what makes the system so good in this province, and that’s what engages children.

A monolithic approach to education would not engage all children and by all means would not be inclusive because as different as we are on the outside, our brains are different. Children learn differently, and they require a different environment and different approach. What is important, Mr. Chair, is that no matter what school it is and who administers the school and what their focus is and what the corporate structure of the school is, they all teach Alberta curriculum, and that is one of the best curricula in the world. We actually are proud of exporting our curriculum to other countries. These children learn Alberta curriculum, but their learning is enriched by other, additional programs that are offered by either charter, private, or you name it, whatever variety of school it may be.

In the case of private schools, yes, we fund the schools based on a portion, on a percentage of what funding we allocate to public schools to recognize the fact that we pay only for instruction of Alberta curriculum. Any other additional programs that the schools deliver: the parents are on the hook for that cost. There are also some infrastructure funding differences, and that is what the number is.

I know this hon. member has issues with having nonpublic schools, having schools that may be religious or privately operated, but I would suggest to him that it is the mosaic of schools that we have that makes, overall, Alberta education better. It actually improves public schools because it creates a constructive, child-focused competition between schools, and that is important. That drives the level of education within the publicly funded system.

Mr. Hehr: I thank the minister for his comments. I don’t want him to think I’m antichoice. I believe we should have lots of choice in Alberta, choice for lots of stuff. This can all be accommodated through a properly funded, properly administered, publicly funded education system. I beg to differ with him on the fact that private schools make the landscape better for all students because it increases competition. That simply doesn’t bear out in research done in other jurisdictions or in our own.

Nevertheless, I thank him for his comments and the explanation that it is that private schools are being funded on a per-school grant of 70 cents on the dollar compared to the public school system and that clarification that that’s what this expenditure is for. I thank him for his time. These are my only questions in that regard.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

I have the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, and I’ll look to see who might wish to speak thereafter. Go ahead, hon. member.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. First off, I’d like to on behalf of the Wildrose and our caucus agree and congratulate the minister on his comments about the importance of diversity in the schools that are permitted and the schooling options that are permitted parents in this province. It is critically important that we continue that.

There is a fallacy out there that people that go to private schools or charter schools are somehow only just, you know, the very elite and the very rich. It’s just not the case. Clearly, there are some very high-level, I guess you could say, expensive private schools out there that people who are very wealthy put their children into, but those are relatively rare. The vast majority of private schools are nonprofit. They cater to a group of parents that just feel that their child, for whatever reason – maybe they have autism or a special need or, perhaps, they are looking for a more faith-based education or something like that. Their parents feel that that’s the need that their child has.

I have several private schools in Airdrie-Chestermere. One is Airdrie Koinonia Christian school, a fantastic school. The parents sacrifice so much to put their kids in that school. It’s a nonprofit school. They do fundraisers. They’re just such a strength to our community, and the quality of the graduates that they put out is second to none.

8:30

There is also another school called – boy, I’m going to butcher this, hon. member – the Khalsa school. It’s just a fantastic school in Conrich, fabulous students. It obviously very much caters to the East Indian culture. Specifically, there are mostly Sikh students going there, but there are others, too. It’s just a real credit to my community. Again, it’s nonprofit. They’re not all rich parents that are sending their kids to school there. That’s not the case at all. They are sacrificing. They raise money. They work hard to have their students have the kind of cultural education that is important to that community.

So I’m glad to see that although we have disagreements on many issues, certainly school choice is not one of them with this minister and with the PC Party.

I also want to say that I agree with and support the Premier and this minister’s decision to put the $106 million back into the public education system. That is exceptionally important. My children attend public school. Well, I only have one that’s old enough so far to be in public school but another one next year. It is just so critical that we properly fund our public education system. This is one of those priority areas. When we talk about prioritizing our spending, our education system is one of those areas where we do need to put in as many resources as we can.

It’s not like the health system, which is so overly bureaucratic and is just a black hole. There’s so much money wasted in it, not going to the front lines. In health care it’s not a matter of spending more; it’s about changing the entire management structure of the system to spend more wisely and to make it more efficient. With education that’s not really the case. It’s just a matter of getting more resources to the front lines to build more schools and to hire more teachers. So I want to congratulate him for doing that.

Now with that, I do have some questions. The first thing is that even though it is important to restore that funding, it’s also important to realize that we have a $3 billion deficit and a $6 billion cash shortfall that is primarily coming out of our sustainability fund as well as direct borrowing. Between those two, that's where the $6 billion cash shortfall is being financed. If we're going to put back $106 million, what I would like to know is that in the first conference after her election as PC leader, the Premier alluded to finding in-budget savings, in-year savings to cover this $106 million reinvestment of the money into the education system. So my first question to the minister is: where is this money coming from? What savings have you found in order to pay for this needed $106 million?

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. minister, before you answer, could everybody please check and see if somebody has a cellphone on vibrate? It's coming through the system here. If you do, move it off your desk, please, or turn it off completely. Thank you.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Chair, I thank the member for his kind remarks relative to the choices that exist in Alberta. I can assure the member that this government will be committed to making sure that parents and children continue to have choices relative to schools. I agree that predominantly private schools are not for the elite of our society. I happen to have a school in my riding, the Islamic Academy, which is attended by slightly fewer than 1,000 children. I have to tell you that I would guess – this is purely intuitive – that the average income of the families who send their children to that school would be below the average in Alberta.

The fact is that to that community maintaining language predominantly and learning religious studies are important. These children do extremely well. They do instruct Alberta curriculum. There are misconceptions relative to private schools, that they happen to be elitist schools for rich kids with uniforms who get dropped off in fine, fancy vehicles by rich parents every morning. That is just simply not the case.

Now, relative to where that $107 million was found. The member comments that education should be well funded and that the $107 million was the right thing to do, but at the same time he's asking: where did I find $107 million in the Ministry of Education? Basically, if I was to find $107 million in the Ministry of Education and then put it back into the Ministry of Education, I don't think the education system would be any better off at the end of the day. So requesting that the Minister of Education first cut $107 million just to the next day reinject it and have a big announcement is not what the Premier intended. The Premier intended to put an additional $107 million into the system, which, obviously, the Premier, myself, and all involved in the administration of education concluded was needed at this point in time.

The member should be reminded that approximately 80 per cent of the Education budget goes into salaries. It's a very labour-intensive ministry. Obviously, teaching takes place in classrooms by teachers, and our teachers need to be paid salaries. Right off the bat 80 per cent of our budget goes into salaries. The exercise was not to carve out $107 million just to reinject it. This was additional dollars that were found in the operations of the government of Alberta.

Now, the member will have an opportunity to debate next year's budget in the House. If he has any suggestions for where I can find savings in the Ministry of Education, I would be more than interested to hear what they are and how they can be attained. But I have to tell you one thing. I will not consider any savings and/or cuts that will negatively impact children in the classrooms. So if the member is aware of any savings that can be found that will not compromise the quality of education, I will be very interested to find out from the member what they are, and I will get on it.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Well, I'm just going to assume that that was a misunderstanding and a lack of clarity on what I was asking, Minister. Surely he doesn't honestly think I was saying that he should cut $107 million from the Ministry of Education to pay for the $107 million.

Anyway, what I would ask is: where is that $107 million coming from out of the government? Obviously, he doesn't know where that's coming from. Obviously, it seems pretty clear that when the PC government needs more money, they don't look for savings in-house. They just grab it out of our savings account. I thought I was providing an opportunity for the minister to explain where they found that $107 million in the total government, but apparently he thought I meant taking it out of the Department of Education, which was clearly not my question.

He did ask for ideas on where to find savings in the future. That is a good question, and here's my suggestion. The former Education minister – before he was the health minister, before he was the Energy minister, before he was the Finance minister – signed a very irresponsible contract with the teachers that tied teachers' salary increases and, frankly, reflected the irresponsible pay increases that we as MLAs received, to the cost of the weekly wage index. A very, very irresponsible way to index our salaries; irresponsible as well to index the teachers although it's not the teachers' fault. When they see the politicians, their leaders, going ahead and giving themselves that kind of salary increase, then naturally and, I think fairly, they say: well, shouldn't we be getting the same increase?

If we don't show an example in this House of how to be reasonable with our salaries, surely we can't expect the same out of public servants. That irresponsible contract was signed, and it has led to a huge increase in the cost of wages in this province, roughly 4 and a half per cent a year or thereabouts, so about 13 per cent over the last three years. It has caused, of course, our Education budget to balloon so that instead of controlling teachers' salaries and our salaries as well to the rate of the cost of living, for example, in which case we would have only had maybe a 5 or 6 per cent increase over the last three years, we have doubled or more than doubled that increase. Because of that, with the same amount of money we haven't been able to hire as many teachers as we would have been able to with the same amount of money had we kept those costs down.

So my question to the Minister of Education is whether he is actually going to negotiate a contract with the teachers this time that adequately protects taxpayers and will actually result in us being able to hire more teachers because we're not paying them through the nose because of some irresponsible vote-buying scheme that a minister previous to you put in place. That's what I would like to know. Are you going to actually negotiate a good deal for the people of Alberta, or are you going to cave in like a cheap tent again?

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Chair. A few corrections. A very inflammatory rhetoric, but very thin on facts. Number one, I would strongly encourage the member tonight, once we recess at 1 o'clock in the morning, to dig out his last paycheque and to realize that his wages have not been indexed to average weekly earnings for years. So I hope he's not budgeting his family budget on anticipated pay increases because he hasn't been receiving any and won't be receiving any for a while to come. To say that we are getting average weekly earnings as politicians – it's difficult for me to take financial advice from him when he actually hasn't even examined his own paycheque.

Now, Mr. Chair, relative to teachers' salaries. This is actually good timing on behalf of the member because I will be meeting with the majority of teachers over the next few months, and I'm sure they will be interested in finding out what position the Wildrose Alliance is taking relative to our teachers.

The fact is that an agreement was negotiated in good faith by the Alberta Teachers' Association and the Alberta School Boards Association and the government of Alberta. At that point in time it was considered to be a fair pay settlement by all three parties. Our Alberta teachers are not paid exorbitant wages. They are paid more on average than teachers throughout the country, but I can tell you that the results that we're getting out of education are better than what the rest of the country gets.

I have to remind the member, because this is testimony that I am very proud of, that when the Prime Minister of the U.K. showed up over here, he highlighted Alberta education as the best education system in the entire English-speaking world, not Canadian education but Alberta education. Are we getting a return on our investment? I see spending money on education as an investment and not expenditure. Yes, we definitely are.

If that particular party wants to engage in divisive rhetoric and try to pit parents against teachers against students against school boards against ATA against government, they're free to do that. I choose to work with the school boards and the teachers and the parents in a collaborative spirit because at the end of the day there's only one thing that matters, the students in the classroom.

If you want to engage in inflammatory rhetoric where you end up pitting one against the other, only one party is going to lose, and it won't be the teachers. They have contracts. They will come to work tomorrow morning and get paid. It won't be us. It will be the children in the classroom who lose because what happens when you engage in that kind of rhetoric, as the Wildrose Alliance would have us do, is that you don't talk about education. You end up talking about politics, you end up talking about arguments, you end up talking about salaries, but you never engage in the most important conversation that we as adults, as educators should be having. That's pedagogy. That's curriculum. That's administration of education. That's making sure that we continuously remain one of the best education systems in the world.

Mr. Chair, I personally will not be drawn into that kind of inflammatory dialogue with teachers or with parents. I will stick to the request. If the member wants to know where the money comes from, well, I am here before the House, asking the House for the money. To answer the member's question, if he grants the money today to pay that $107 million, he knows very well where the money comes from. It will be him voting either in favour of it or against it, and the money will come from the Alberta Treasury. Obviously, at the end of the day there is a finite amount of dollars that government can have, that Alberta Treasury will have, and something has to give. But we do budgeting together in the House, and that member should know where the money comes from.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, about three minutes and 18 seconds left.

Mr. Anderson: Well, that lack of budget and fiscal planning is the reason why we have a $6 billion cash shortfall. The member is right; we haven't had a pay raise as MLAs for the last two years, three years, something like that. The reason is because we got a monstrous 30 per cent pay raise right after we were elected, and we all know on that side of the House and the people that used to be on that side of the House how that pay raise occurred, okay?

We know how it was decided; we know how it was told and how most of us were informed, including that member, who wasn't a minister at the time. [interjections]

I would just say, you know, that the most important thing here is that that type of stupidity, specifically by the Finance minister – his lack of proper planning, the lack of proper budgeting, selling out, constantly trying to buy votes – is the reason we are in the situation . . .

Chair's Ruling Decorum Relevance

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, I wonder if we could just go back to the peace and decorum we had a few minutes ago so that the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere could continue speaking.

Airdrie-Chestermere, could I remind you that we're discussing the supplementary estimates of Education; okay? If we can stay relevant, that would be appreciated. Thank you. With that, please proceed.

Mr. Anderson: It's ridiculous. I've said again and again that the reason we can't pay for teachers, the teachers that we need, is because of the absolutely irresponsible, liberal-minded, ridiculous contract that that Finance minister over there signed. That's the reason. Because of that irresponsibility, we're in a position here where we have a teacher shortage. He signed an irresponsible contract that the taxpayers of this province couldn't afford. That's the reason why we're here talking about giving money back. The reason we are in the position where we have to spend an extra $107 million right now is because of that irresponsibility, and that's why we have a $6 billion cash deficit and a $3 billion deficit. That's why we're here in supplementary supply putting forward another money bill, because of that irresponsibility.

It's just amazing to me – and I don't blame this current minister because I have faith in him. I think he's going to do a better job this time, negotiating a deal that has some financial sanity, which is more than I can say for the Minister of Finance, who's now in charge of this entire province's finances. It should scare the living you-know-what out of every single Albertan.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. minister, you've got 15 seconds.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, 15 seconds is all I need. The choice is clear. You can have that party running this province, or you can have this party running this province. In the meantime I'm asking for the supplemental estimate.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, did you wish to speak?

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Chairman, you know, when you bring up a point in regard to relevance, that comment certainly did have nothing to do with the budget whatsoever.

The Deputy Chair: Frankly, the chair was challenged to hear any comments for the last 30 seconds. If we could just preserve the decorum, that would be much appreciated.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Chairman, if I may, we have technology in this Legislature that works very well. Because of my hearing impairment I would encourage you to get one of these.

The Deputy Chair: I just asked for one, in fact. Thank you.

Are there any other members who wish to speak on the Education estimates? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'll get in on this increasingly interesting exchange that's been going on, and I will start with the $106.7 million to reinstate operating support to school boards. I'll just remind some of the members opposite, including the current Minister of Education, that when the last budget was debated in the Legislature, we warned the government that this cut, not a cut exactly but this shortfall in terms of the requirements that the school boards put forward, was going to result in very serious impacts on our students, the same students that this minister is now standing up and purporting to champion. It was this minister as well as all the other members opposite that supported this budget for education at the time. They were warned and they were told by teachers, by school boards, by parents, certainly by Alberta's NDP in the Legislature that the cuts or the reduction or the shortfall of $107 million was going to have a terrible impact, but they didn't listen. They did not listen. They passed that budget, and every Tory member stood up for it. That's all a matter of record.

The results, of course, were substantial reductions, a whole class of graduating education students that didn't get jobs. Existing people who were teachers and support staff and specialists that provided for the educational needs of special-needs children lost their jobs. Class sizes exploded, and kids were hurt. And the minister laughs when I say that kids were hurt, but I think that if he asks the parents of those children, they haven't forgotten the impact of that devastating decision on the part of the government.

People got angry. Parents were angry. Teachers were angry. Alberta's NDP organized a campaign to reinstate the funding, and this funding is exactly what I'm talking about, Mr. Chairman. I'm talking about the $110 million. We organized a campaign to get that money back. Now, at the last minute in the Conservative leadership race, with the current Premier behind in the race, she pulled out a Hail Mary pass and threw the ball of $110 million to reinstate the funding, a political move: shrewd, perhaps; opportunistic, definitely; coming from the heart, from a clear understanding of the needs of children, not a chance. It was a purely political move in order to accomplish what she achieved, which is her victory in that race.

Now we come down to the $106.7 million, the roughly $107 million. It has now been reinstated, but a lot of damage has been caused in the meantime. Just correcting it halfway through the school year does not undo the damage over the last number of months in our schools and to our children, so this government bears a heavy burden of responsibility with respect to that.

Now, I want to ask the minister because I was there for this announcement at Government House. I watched the minister and the Premier announce the reinstatement of this $107 million. I want to get back to the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere's question because he asked where the money was coming from. We got a glib non-answer from the minister that, of course, it's coming out of the treasury, but I was there, and I remember what he said at that time and what the Premier said at that time, that this money would be found from savings in the budget. In other words, they were not going to increase the budget. They were going to find reductions across the board, not limited to his department, because I don't want him to misrepresent my question. Across the board they were going to find the $107 million and make other cuts in order to restore the funding that they never should have cut in the first place. My question to this minister is: where will this money come from?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Chairman, the Ministry of Education has a budget of $6.2 billion – that's billion with a "b" – and $106 million compared to $6.2 billion was lapsed by way of programs that were not continued. This member would have this House believe that entire education classes of graduates did not get hired and that a bunch of teachers got fired and that a bunch of support staff got laid off and that classroom sizes exploded, and I imagine that he's going to tell us that we shut down schools and that we knocked down schools and that the education system was devastated, that it was just char and smoke, and that nothing was left of education because $107 million was lapsed out of a $6.2 billion budget. If that's the case, next year I'm going to run the education system on $107 million. If you can hire all the teachers and run the whole system with $107 million, who needs the $6.2 billion?

Well, Mr. Chairman, that is not the reality. The reality is that, yes, that $106 million was very important. It was addressing programs within classrooms that were impacting students, and it was deemed that it was needed to be reinstated. But when you look at the fraction of the budget that it actually is, it's a very insignificant number.

Mr. Chairman, the premise of that entire question is ridiculous, but I will go back to my initial response that I have given to the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. The fact is that the money, obviously, will come from the treasury. The member is asking: what are we going to cut? I will expand my question by saying that if the member is of the belief that there are programs that need to be cut to find those dollars, do say so. Not to misrepresent his question, I don't assume that he wants me to cut that money out of education, but if there are other ministries that the member thinks that we should be cutting those dollars from, please do say so because we will be interested.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, hon. minister.

I would again ask, please, to keep the conversations down to a minimum. If you wish to be recognized, just wave your hand, and I'll be happy to recognize you in your order.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, please proceed.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, I'm going to persist because I think what we just heard from the minister was an attempt to completely misrepresent the question in the first place, not the first time he's done it tonight, then a refusal to take responsibility for the impacts of those budget decisions and an attempt to dismiss them and pretend that they are trivial and minor, which I don't think we can accept – I'm glad that he's on the record saying that – and ultimately a refusal to answer the question, an attempt to try and put it back in a very crude, ham-fisted way, quite frankly, as if I am proposing that we are going to find other cuts, that I have to propose what it is to cut.

Just to cut right through it all, at the time that this minister and the Premier announced that the $107 million would be restored to the funding, they said that this money would be found in the budget from other places. My question to the minister is: where are those reductions that correspond to this increase, or has the minister changed the game without telling anyone? I heard the Premier say it, and now the minister is blatantly avoiding the question, refusing to answer. We can be here all night until we get an answer on this question. I'm up for it.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, unlike the member would suggest, I don't play games with education, and this government doesn't play games with education. If to him education is a sport, he's welcome to it, but to me it is a serious business. Frankly, I would argue that it's probably one of the most important businesses that we can carry out in this House and as government in this province.

The fact, Mr. Chairman, is that this government department by department on an ongoing basis goes through our budgets, and we try to find savings in-year if there can be any realized without negatively affecting the valuable programs that we deliver to Albertans, and our departments will continue doing that. At the end of the day, when you get your final quarter numbers, you will find out whether there were any savings found within departments. If there were, that's fine. They are reallocated or returned to Treasury.

In the meantime, Mr. Chair, I know that he will get up and scream and shout that I'm misinterpreting his question, but I don't think that he's suggesting that we don't issue that $106 million, which, nota bene, has already been released. School boards have been given the go-ahead to bring the programs into the classrooms as required. I don't think he is suggesting that I not do that and not release the dollars to the classrooms until this government in some ministry or perhaps even in my ministry finds the dollars.

If that member wants that to happen, if he wants us not to release those dollars into the classrooms and have the children benefit from it right now until we find $106 million or $107 million in current budget spending in some ministry, say so.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Chairman, of course I didn't say so. The minister continually attempts to avoid answering questions by putting words in the mouths of other members. It's not what I think we expect from a responsible minister who's in charge of a multi-billion dollar budget, as he rightly says.

I think we're making a little progress, Mr. Chairman. He's now talked about reviewing his budget to find other savings, and that says that they do that on an ongoing basis. He's saying that we have to wait until the final reconciliation after this budget year is all over in order to find out where those reductions were made, and I don't think that's responsible either, Mr. Chairman.

I want to put it to the minister again. If you're going through your department looking for savings in order to contribute to this $107 million figure, where are you making those reductions?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, I don't know if I can be any more clear to this member. Let me say this again. You know what? I give him the benefit because maybe I should sit down with the member and walk him through what we do in each portfolio on an ongoing basis. Mr. Chair, you will appreciate that as you carry on through the year, you do try to find savings everywhere you can as responsible stewards of taxpayers' dollars also in charge of the living programs. If there are ways of delivering programs at a quality that is expected by Albertans and delivering them cheaper, you always will do that because you try to deliver programs as efficiently as you possibly can.

In the last-quarter reconciliation of the year you do notice how much you managed to save by finding efficiencies within departments. At the same time, when you make an in-year announcement that you're going to inject additional dollars into a program, you don't honestly believe that for a program as important and as vital and as time sensitive as education you're going to wait to inject those dollars until you actually realize the dollars in savings in this or some other department.

What you do is that you continuously look for savings, and you do find savings. You do realize savings. But when the time comes to inject dollars, you inject dollars. We made a decision as government to inject this additional $107 million, and I'm sure that as we continuously look for savings in other departments, that sum or even a greater sum may be found in in-year savings in a variety of ministries.

In-year savings happen through a variety of ways. Sometimes you just find a more efficient way of delivering a program. Sometimes you find that the subscription to a program was lower than you thought it was because of ineligibility or because the program simply wasn't tapped into. Sometimes you find that certain programs just were not needed in a year. But the opposite is also the case. We just had a minister talking about natural disasters. You may have a program that gets tapped out, and you have to put additional dollars into it. That is the nature of government. You put budgets in place, but at the end of the year you try to find efficiencies.

Let the member be patient. At the end of the year when we reconcile our budget, he will see what savings were found.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I will express my appreciation to the minister for his change in tone. Instead of inciting and insulting and putting words in the mouth of people asking questions, he is actually now just down to basically not answering the question. So that's progress.

I want to pursue this a little bit. He is talking now about in-year savings. That's the language I remember the Premier using when this announcement was made. We're going to call it in-year savings. Okay. So now we're back to sort of what the Premier and the minister actually said: in-year savings. Let me ask this question of the minister. Which year are you going to find $107 million of in-year savings? Is it the current budget year, which is coming to an end next March, or is it in-year savings next year? How much of the in-year savings are going to be found in his department – does he think he can give me an estimate? – versus other departments in the government? So let's start there, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. minister, we have about three and a half minutes for this exchange.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, I never attempted to incite or insult the member in any way. If I did, I apologize.

You know, Albert Einstein, I think it was, had a definition of insanity: if you do something over and over again and you expect a different outcome, that is the definition of insanity. I would suggest to this member that if he continues asking me the same question over and over and over again, on the balance of probability he is likely to receive the same answer over and over and over again. There is a very good reason for that. It's because there is only one answer to his question.

This member seems to be more concerned with where we find the dollars in this year, in which ministry and which program will perhaps be underutilized or which program will be eliminated, which probably may not be the case, and he will have the opportunity to see that when this year's budget, not next year's but this year's, is reconciled. The actual topic that we should be discussing over here is the additional injection of the almost $107 million into the system for programs that were deemed to be valuable and programs that needed to be topped up.

So if the member wants to ask me in a variety of ways the same question of where this money is going to be found, Mr. Chair, I have no option but to give him the same answer and speculate on what motivates him to ask the same question over and over again. What I'm wondering right now is that maybe he is not certain whether injecting that $107 million into education was the right thing to do because he's worried that we may not find it in this year's spending. That is starting to become clear to me. If that is the case, if he thinks that we may have injected dollars that we may not be able to find later and we are being fiscally irresponsible, say so. But if he is supportive of the fact that injecting the dollars into the budget was the right thing to do, if he knows that at the end of the day the budget will be reconciled in just a couple of months and that he will have the opportunity to take the entire last-quarter report home and look through it and see what ministries realized what savings, we can sit down with him and walk him through it. I'm sure the Minister of Finance will enjoy doing that. We will do that.

Mr. Chairman, I don't see how my comments in any way are inciting the gentleman or being insulting. Ask the same question 55 times, and you are going to get the same answer. What is important is that we have to focus on the benefit of the $107 million. This morning I met with the Alberta School Boards Association, and the member has already heard that apparently it delivered a speech that the Member for Calgary-Buffalo could not hear because it was so well received. Partly it was so well received because of that $107 million, Mr. Chairman. The money was put in places where educators, not this government but educators, and school boards deemed appropriate. They will be reporting to this member, and he will have the benefit of seeing their report and how the money was spent in the classroom. He will see that the children have benefited from it. But if he wants to focus on which ministry in this government found that $107 million, let him go to it.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, Mr. Minister.

Are there any other members? The Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely. Well, let's keep going, then, because we're all just a little crazier tonight. Specifically, you're telling me, Mr. Minister, that at the first news conference after your new leader was elected, she comes out and says: we are going to return the $107 million that we cut to education, and because we're such fiscally responsible Conservatives, we're going to find in-year savings to do that. The media asked: where are these in-year savings going to come from? She said: we're just going to find them; stay tuned.

So you bring in a supplementary estimate to get this $107 million, and you don't even have the answer. You're so unprepared that you do not have the answer as to where that $107 million comes from. Does it come from savings, from the sustainability fund? Did it come from the heritage fund? Did it come from your backyard? Where did it come from? Are you just taking more money, more savings, and just putting it in there without finding the in-year savings that your Premier in her first news conference, almost first words out of her mouth, said: we will find in-year savings in the current budget to pay for this $107 million. I said: well, that's great; that's exactly what they should do.

So you ask: where? Well, how about the $350 million we're spending on new MLA offices. Do you think that's a priority for Albertans? Do you think $2 billion for carbon capture and storage is a priority for Albertans? Do you really think that? Do you think that your 34 per cent cabinet salary increases were a priority for Albertans? Where does it end? I guess that if you're looking for $107 million of in-year savings, there are plenty of places to look. You could also have gotten it from the sustainability fund. Maybe that's where you got it.

What I'm asking, Mr. Minister, I think is a very reasonable question since it was the first thing that came out of the new Premier's mouth. Or is this another flip-flop? Is she again flip-flopping, which she is doing literally once or twice a day now it seems? Did she make a promise again and not keep that promise? It sounds to me by your non-answer that she made a promise that she's not keeping. She said: yeah, I'm going to give this $107 million back to the school boards, and I'm going to find in-year savings to do it. It sounds to me like she got half the promise right. It's kind of like with fixed elections; she kind of went halfway there, you know, but she didn't go the full length. So she's found the $107 million, but she hasn't found it in in-year savings. Is that what you're saying, Minister? Is this just coming right out of our children's savings again? Is that what's going on?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. The only thing that went halfway is the half-baked idea of their platform and what they're presenting here to this House right now.

If, really, the opposition wants to engage in a debate right now on whether the government did a fiscally prudent thing by injecting $106 million, game on. Let's talk about that because that's what they seem to be focusing on. The fact is very simple, and this is not unusual. Government MLAs' offices – by the way, I should let you know, Mr. Chairman, that perhaps there's yet another memo that he hasn't read. His office, his opposition office, which will be his opposition office for many, many years to come, or maybe not his but his party's, will also be in that building. So it's not government MLA offices. It'll be opposition MLA offices unless he chooses not to vacate the Annex building. It would be unfortunate, but worse things could happen.

The fact is that they have already pawned that building 55 times over because that building is going to pay for 55 other programs that they identified with savings that could be found. I would strongly encourage them to go to the mayor of Edmonton and tell him that we should not have refurbished that building and left it vacant and paid $600,000 per year to keep an empty building standing.

The fact, Mr. Chairman, is that this tells you about the depth of the dialogue that you get from that side. Instead of focusing on what we should be focusing on, the well-being of children in the classroom and the fact that we need to maintain valuable educational programs, the fact that we have kids with special needs that need additional help from time to time, the fact that there are pressure points that arise from time to time, and the fact that this member in his own city has pressure points in the education system that he should be focusing on instead of playing politics with education – no, that is something that they will not discuss.

They want to discuss where that $106 million is going to come from. Well, Mr. Chairman, it's going to come from the government of Alberta. He knows very well that every ministry is looking for in-year savings, and there will be in-year savings in a variety of ministries. At the end of the day the budget will be reconciled, and the odds are that $106 million will come from dollars currently allocated to the operations of the government of Alberta. If he honestly wants me not to release the dollars to school boards, not to put additional help into classrooms, not to get those TAs to stay on the job until I can actually pinpoint which ministry that $106 million is going to come from, say so.

Mr. Anderson: You know, this minister talks a lot about how much he cares about the children. That's great. That's awesome. I love children, I love motherhood, and I love apple pie. But you know what? I'll tell you how much I love children. I love my own children, my four boys, and I know the minister has children or has a child and, I think, another on the way. I'm not sure. Anyway, I know he cares about children as well. The fact of the matter is that I care about my children, so not only do I worry about their education, I worry about their financial future. I worry that we're going to pile upon them billions and billions of dollars in debt, deficit, liabilities, all kinds of different entitlements, and things that they're going to have pay for our irresponsibility because we couldn't figure it out, because at a hundred dollar a barrel oil, we're running a $6 billion cash shortfall.

When oil goes down to $50 one day or $40 because it's not worth as much and there are alternative fuels out there that kind of lessen the demand for it, and our kids come and look – you know, they're a little bit grown up, and everyone is moving out to different areas of the world because there are no jobs in Alberta, and we haven't saved a blinking nickel so we can't pay for all these great social programs that we've built up over the years and the infrastructure. When all that happens, and they look at us and say: "What the heck was the matter with you guys? You had $10 billion in resources, and you couldn't put a few nickels away for us? Instead you spent it all? Really?" That's what it means to care about the kids, Minister.

I care about the kids just fine. I want to make sure they get an education, and I want to make sure that the bills are paid and that we don't leave them with a mountain of liabilities and debt. If we can't balance our budget at a hundred dollar a barrel oil, then on what planet are we ever going to balance it except for the possibility that oil may one day get to $120 or $130? That's the problem I have, so I look at this debate as more fulsome than that. Clearly, we want education for our kids. Clearly, we want schools for our kids. But, clearly, we don't want to leave them up you-know-what creek without a paddle when it comes to the finances of this province. That's the direction we're heading in.

When the Premier comes out and she talks about being all fiscally responsible and she says that we need to make sure we give that school money back to our kids to support their education, that's great. I'm completely in favour of that. But when she says in the next sentence that we're going to do that by not increasing the deficit and we're going to do that by finding in-year savings, I take her at her word. That's what she said she'd do.

What is clear, very clear here, Mr. Chair, is that this minister has, I think, told the Assembly by his nonanswer that there was never any intention to find that $106 million. There was never any intention. It was another promise that this former PC candidate Premier made in order to get people to vote for her. She had no intention of finding the in-year savings at all. She just wanted the votes. She promised the money. She got it. She got the votes, and she got the premiership.

Mr. Boutilier: Crass politics.

Mr. Anderson: Crass politics is right.

Obviously, we've talked through this issue with the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and I think I've talked about it two or three times in this session. We've asked very nicely. I complimented the minister earlier tonight. I've tried to ask reasonable questions of him. What is clear is: there was never any intention by this Premier to find in-year savings for this money.

Am I happy that we're giving the children this money? Absolutely. I am very happy about that. But why couldn't you find money in those new MLA offices? I'll say it right here. I don't think the Wildrose has been hiding the fact that they think $350 million for new MLA offices is not a priority for the people of Alberta. Not just for the people of Airdrie – this is not just only Airdrie. People in Airdrie don't think this is a priority. No, no. I would say the vast majority of people in the city of Edmonton, frankly, don't think that new MLA offices are more important than new schools, this funding or balancing the budget or at least trying to get closer to a balanced budget. I think that that is very clear.

Mr. Hancock: I wonder if the hon. member would permit a question. Do the rules provide for that?

9:20

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely. I have to preface my question. I have to give a preamble so that there's context to the question, so I am getting to the question.

Mr. Mason: You don't have to ask questions.

Mr. Anderson: You don't have to ask questions?

Mr. Mason: Did you want to ask him a question?

Mr. Hancock: Oh, I'd love to ask him a question.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, we're still waiting for an answer, Dave, on this side.

Mr. Anderson: We are waiting for an answer. If we get an answer, then we can ask questions again.

That's the question I have for this minister. Does he have no intention over the next period of time to find this $107 million out of in-year savings, or is he just going to take it out of our savings? Because what it sounds like to me, according to the second-quarter update that was just released yesterday, the increased deficit is being financed by the sustainability fund.

Am I right to say that this $107 million – it's a simple question – came out of our children's sustainability fund? Is that correct or not correct? Or did it come out from, you know, the end of the rainbow? From leprechauns? Where did it come from?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chair, it was very difficult to focus on the member's question right after he told me that I have a child on the way, because I wasn't aware of that. As you may appreciate, receiving that news under circumstances like this is a little bit unnerving, but I will try to address some of the things that he may have said.

Mr. Chair, this debate really puzzles me because the question before the House is really simple. The government has made a decision, and these members across the floor will argue that they are supportive of this decision. They really want this $107 million to go into the classroom. So the debate should be short and simple. The fact is that that was an allocation of dollars that was wisely spent to address issues that definitely needed to be addressed.

Also, a comment was made by the Premier and myself that we will find savings in-year in the operation of the government. The year is not over. There's an entire quarter ahead of us.

As I said earlier, Mr. Chair – this is probably the seventh time that I'm saying the same thing – the budget will be reconciled. They will get to see what savings were made. I'm sure certain departments will find more than $107 million of savings within their operations. That will be the money. The dollars are not marked. The dollars are fluid, and that will be the case.

The question is not whether we find the dollars but whether we're spending the dollars wisely. I hear that these members are – at face value they'll tell you that they are supportive of spending and investing dollars in education but only at face value, theoretically speaking, because the moment you actually start spending money on education, this is the kind of rhetoric you get.

They will start telling you that spending money leads you to deficit spending, which leads you to debt, which means we're passing debt onto our next generation, and loving children actually doesn't mean spending on education right now but making sure that we don't pass debt on to them in the future. Well, Mr. Chair, you can't speak out of both sides of your mouth. If you really love children and if you profess to be supportive of education and spending on education, then you should be supportive of this expenditure.

If you profess to be proficient in understanding budgets – and this member clearly doesn't seem to be exhibiting such qualities – you should know that at the end of the next quarter the budget will be reconciled. He will be able to take a look at the reconciliation of the budget, and I'm sure that he will find more than $106 million in year-end savings in some ministries, and then he will find that other ministries like this one and a few others have to come for supplemental spending because programs require such.

Mr. Chair, the question is simple. I think Albertans could conclude from this dialogue, rather bizarre dialogue, what the priorities of each party in this House really are. Some will actually tell you, like ours, that our priority is education and children, and we put our money where our mouth is. Some will just talk about the fact that education is their priority, but the moment you try to address issues within the education world and try to invest dollars into programs, all of a sudden that becomes an issue. That becomes deficit spending. That becomes passing debt on to our next generation, and all of a sudden that is not a wise expenditure. You can see the duplicity in what they're professing.

This is a government that will continue supporting education, that will be addressing issues and pressures from school to school. We will be addressing education in an equitable way, which means that sometimes you need to put different resources in different jurisdictions to make sure that kids throughout the entire province get an equally high level of education. And sometimes it means that you have to look at in-year savings from other ministries.

But these individuals choose to focus on something very narrow because that's all they can understand and not very well, because he hasn't even realized that he hasn't had a paycheque increase over the last years. He still thinks that he is getting his average weekly earnings increases. All they can comprehend is numbers, but you can't assess education simply by numbers, Mr. Chairman, because when you look at education, it is as much quantitative as it is qualitative.

If you want to judge by numbers and if you want to colour by numbers and if that's how you would administer education if you, God forbid, ever had a chance of getting anywhere near power, then God help us and the children that you profess that you love so much. Yes, maybe you would leave them with a massive surplus, but – you know what? – they wouldn't know what to do with it because they wouldn't have the education that they need right now to be able to deal with it later and manage this province, as they will. We are graduating some pretty darn good graduates out of our schools that are ready for the world and will be the leaders not only in Alberta and not only in Canada but throughout the world. Why? Because education is our priority. We're putting our money where our mouth is and not engaging in dialogue that Albertans now had to be exposed to for the last half an hour, which makes no sense, no rhyme, and no reason.

By the way, if your prediction that I have a child on the way turns out to be true, I thank you for being the first one to let me know.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. member, you have two minutes and 50 seconds left in this exchange.

Mr. Anderson: Excellent. As we've exhausted, obviously, the intellectual capacity of this minister, I'm going to move on to somebody who I think is articulate enough to actually answer this question since she made the promise. The Premier is here. When she was first elected, the day after, she specifically stated that she would restore the $107 million in funding for education, which was a promise that she made, indeed, during her leadership. She said that she would find in-year savings to the tune of $107 million to fund that. So my question to the Premier is simply: where is that $107 million going to come from? You said it was in your savings. Where is it going to come from? From the sustainability fund or from somewhere else, Madam Premier?

Chair's Ruling Committee of Supply Procedures

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I might remind you that supplementary estimates pursuant to Standing Order 59.02: the debate that's going on is between a member and the minister. A question such as you're wishing to ask might be better posed in question period or in some other format unless the Minister of Education wishes to deal with it.

We've got about a minute and 30 seconds.

Debate Continued

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. I will gladly deal with that question, Mr. Chairman. Let me reiterate what I said earlier, and I'll try to use a different approach. When the government of Alberta and this Legislature passes a budget for a whole year, this government, which actually is the only one, I believe, in Confederation to do so, provides all Albertans with quarterly reports. The final report is the final reconciliation of the entire budget. All members are privy to looking at it, and Albertans are privy to looking at it. As the member would know, from time to time certain ministries have additional pressures, in-year pressures, because of unforeseeable circumstances, just like changes to average weekly earnings, to which we are contractually bound, or natural disasters in other ministries that need to be addressed, and we find ourselves in a position where we have to come back before the Alberta Legislature. It's the privilege of the Alberta Legislature to grant us additional dollars.

Now, other ministries on the other hand will find, as did the past ministry I was fortunate to be charged with, certain programs that are undersubscribed for one reason or another. Economic conditions in the province are good, and certain programs are simply not tapped into. Those ministries find themselves on the opposite side of the ledger, and they will end up having in-year savings. At the end of the year, Mr. Chairman, the budget is reconciled, and if there are additional dollars, those dollars are used, and they're moved from ministry to ministry.

Hopefully, that helps this member in recognizing where the dollars will come from.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you, Mr. Minister.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, and I see that Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood is up after that. Calgary-Buffalo, please proceed.

9:30

Mr. Hehr: Well, now I've spent an hour listening to this riveting debate. Nevertheless, I think the question is whether it will be in-year savings or some other thing like that. Do you think we can just get your best efforts to – I think you've sort of said that you're going to provide those throughout the year or at the next budget time. That answer is good enough for me, and I think it should satisfy the rest. Is that sort of what I'm hearing, that you're going to use your best efforts to let us know whether it's in-year savings or if some other event happens? Is that the gist of it, just to clarify for everyone here and sort of to proceed along? I will not get that last hour back in my life, by the way, but, you know, I hear you.

The Deputy Chair: Mr. Minister, you're reminded that section 23(c) deals with needless repetition, but if you wish to repeat once more for the record . . .

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, I won't. Obviously, this member understands it, and he finds it perfectly clear. It's just unfortunate that the Wildrose Alliance members are not in a position to understand that.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, do you have any supplementals?

Mr. Hehr: No further questions. I just wanted to make sure I had the parameters clear.

The Deputy Chair: Thank you.

Could we move on, then, to Calgary-Glenmore, please?

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm going to go back because I'm going to restate in another way what it is. To my understanding, these are supplemental supply estimates. What that means: we go through some of the other ministerial offices, and the one most important that we look at is the hazard in Slave Lake, and we understand why we're applying for new money. But the question that's eluding all of this in education is the fact that it says expenses. The reason the supplemental amount of $217 million is requested to be provided: the first major line item is $106 million "for the reinstatement of operating support to public and separate school boards."

Now, the problem that seems to be eluding everyone I think is very simple. The Premier promised and said that that money would come from in-year savings. Therefore, it wouldn't be in here. It's supplemental supply. So what they're saying very plainly is that it's not going to come from in-year savings. What it says is that it's going to come from in-year and be transferred over. What they're saying is that they're going to pull it out because this is all new spending, money that they're taking out of our savings account to pay for these things. It sounds like the minister is cackling over there. I don't know. Maybe he's having an egg, then, if not a child. Why would you put it in here if, in fact, it was in-year savings? It wouldn't need to be in supplemental supply in a request for the $106 million.

The Deputy Chair: The Minister of Education to comment, please.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Chair, yes. Perhaps I need to really pull back and start at the beginning, and that actually will be a benefit to these three members there for the next budgetary process because we will soon be passing a budget. When you pass a budget, you pass it ministry by ministry by ministry. Each ministry is allotted a certain amount of dollars for their operation. Money doesn't freely flow from one ministry to another, where the Minister of Education all of a sudden needs 300 extra million dollars and I pick up the phone and call my friend in another ministry and say: spot me $300 million. Well, that maybe is how these guys would run government if they ever had a chance to get near one. Thank God that it won't be the case.

What happens is that this Legislature decides how much each ministry gets to spend on operations of their department, and when certain ministries find themselves in a situation where they need additional operating dollars, despite the fact that other ministries actually may be not utilizing all of the dollars that have been allotted to them by this Legislature, you don't just borrow money from each other between ministries and hope that at the end it's a wash and that everything works out just fine. The fact is that each minister has to come before this Legislature so that our duly elected members get to either approve a supplementary supply or not. If this member suggests that this is money up and above the entire government of Alberta, it's ludicrous, and it shows, you know, what level of understanding of the budgetary process he has.

The fact is that these are dollars just for the Ministry of Education. The Ministry of Education needs additional dollars to enhance the programs that we apparently all agree need to be enhanced. I as a minister will not be receiving dollars from other ministries. There is no free flow of dollars between ministries. This Chamber is the ultimate decision-making Chamber and decides which minister gets how much money, and if money is to be transferred from one ministry to another, it has to happen with the approval of this particular Chamber. One would hope that this member would know that because this is his second term in this Chamber. He's gone through at least seven budgets up to now, and he still thinks that money is flowing free from ministry to ministry. Well, such is not the case.

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

That is why I am standing as a minister before this Chamber, which has the ultimate authority to give me additional dollars, to inject that $107 million for what these members on one side claim is the right way to spend money, but on the other side they are very hesitant to release the dollars. Well, if you're supportive of it, release the dollars. If you're not, then that's fine. I won't be able to release the dollars. School boards will have to find it in their current, this year's, budgets, which obviously is not what they anticipate doing. Then I will come before you in March asking for a new budget.

There is no free flow of dollars. I hope that member takes time, looks at how the budget works not only in Alberta – it's a parliamentary procedure throughout the Commonwealth – and realizes that the process he was part of for seven years, I believe, now is not working the way he may have thought it did.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you, Minister. You're such a teacher. You shouldn't have given up that profess-sion because you're doing a poor job in here, and I think that should be crystal clear for you.

Fair enough on the technicalities of it, the budgetary. That's fine. What you're putting in there, though, and what you haven't explained to any of the opposition that have been asking you a question on whether or not it's going to be in-house findings or whether you're going to rob it from our children's savings, that we supposedly had in there for a heritage savings or a sustainability fund, which isn't sustainable the way you guys spend money – it's pathetic, and it's inexcusable. I don't know how you could possibly talk to your child as they're growing up and tell them that you're running a $6 billion cash deficit when we have a $10 billion revenue from our resource sector. Totally unbelievable for him. I don't know how you're going to ever explain that to him. It's just appalling and unacceptable.

Let's go on to some other questions here. Can you please explain how you've failed to estimate properly the $13 million for the student transportation? Was there a change in the way you are doing the transportation? Did you open up other areas? Why is there an extra $13 million needed?

Again, you know, it wasn't that long ago, Mr. Chairman, just a little over four years, that this government was needing, again, to buy an election. We've just gone through a process of buying the leadership, where they went to the teachers and said: "Oh, yes. We'll sign a five-year deal. We'll even give you average weekly earnings because that's what we ourselves get." Yet they failed to calculate what that was going to cost them. They said: "Oh, we're giving you an increase, but, well, we don't want to do it on the average weekly earnings. We'll even take you to arbitration or the courts if we need to." Therefore, we have a $3.2 million shortfall there, which we all understand.

Again, this is just poor government negotiations and failing to even honour their own contract. They have had a long history of doing that for the past seven years that I've been following this. Very disappointing. They have no respect for the rule of law. They think that they make the laws because they have a majority and that they don't need to have precedents, that it's okay to send a bad message to investments around the world saying, "Sure, we said that you could put a bid on our land" – and they bid billions of dollars back then – "and you'll pay this much royalty," and then they shred those contracts.

The Premier is taking a look. She knows about it. She went and listened to the people in downtown Calgary on the disregard for the contracts, that this government has done damage, which is part of the reason why we're running a $6 billion cash deficit. They set us up for failure there. Very disappointing.

Again, the $317,000 reinstated for operating support for accredited private schools: why did you cut them? Why weren't they in the original budget, and why do we need to go to supplemental supply to go back and reinstate these things? Let's have stable government, predictable government. They finally have caught on, and they think it's going to save health care because they've got five-year predictable funding, but they don't have predictable funding for education.

It's just wrong the way that they chop programs, add programs, a hundred million here, cut a hundred million, sign a five-year contract. They don't calculate it out in their so-called intense budget debates, where they put things forward. They don't have the capability of even calculating their own dealings, arguing: "Oh, that isn't what we meant. We wrote out average weekly earnings, but we didn't mean it. We meant something else, so we're not going to pay that." It's just unbelievable the hundreds of millions of dollars that we need in these different departments other than the fact of such things as in SRD, where we had a disastrous fire. We understand that need.

Year after year when I'm in here, Mr. Chairman, we have these supplemental supplies because of the failure of the government to be able to do their budgeting and to forecast out. I don't know. They seem to think: oh, we'll cut here so that we can give it back in six months, and they'll think it's a treat. It's amazing to me. I don't know what their thought process is on how they do that.

Again, the $94 million to provide $24 million for the reprofiling of the Alberta school alternative procurement project. I don't know. Maybe I missed it when I was in my office listening, but why do we need to do the reprofiling of those things? The anticipated construction progress: that's the one on the supplemental page that I can understand, that things progress a little bit quicker, so we need the money in this fiscal year. Understandable. If you could perhaps answer some of those in a more professional manner, it would be appreciated.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, I hope that you will point out to me if or when I'm being unprofessional, and I hope that I haven't been up to now.

When I came to this Chamber with my supplemental requests, I was hoping that we would actually engage in a high-level discussion about how money could be appropriated, how we can enhance our Alberta education system with these dollars, and perhaps on how we can start planning expenditures for next year, focusing on education and on children in the schools. What I'm finding myself doing is engaging in a very low-level discussion about MLA offices in one building with seven floors and language that sometimes is really unbecoming, particularly when you're talking about education.

Also, instead of actually assuming that all members of this House would have a thorough understanding of how the budgeting of this province is done and how it's disposed of by elected members of this Legislature, I'm finding myself as a teacher again, putting on grade 6 social studies, teaching members on how the operation . . . [interjections]

The Chair: Hon. members, we have 20 minutes of back and forth. Now it's the minister's turn.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, if that's what I have to do and if the member feels that I'm a better teacher than an MLA, then that's fine. Let me go back to grade 6 curriculum social studies and do government 101 because, obviously, that will be more appropriate at this point.

What happens, Mr. Chairman, for the benefit of the members over there, is that when the minister receives the budget – obviously, the budget is based on best estimates from last year's expenditures – there are certain projections that you make.

The member really wants to know why there is an additional $13 million for transportation. Well, let me give him an example that he can understand. Those yellow buses that pull up in front of schools – you know, the kids get on them – every so often have to pull up in front of a gas station, and you have to put fuel into those buses. The fuel that you use is called diesel, Mr. Chairman. It's not leaded, and it's not unleaded. It's a different type of a fuel. It's called diesel. That's what buses use.

Mr. Chairman, because of world global commodity costs and because of increased consumption and decreased production, supply and demand, the cost of diesel went up. When the bus pulls up in front of the gas station and the bus driver fills up the tank, the bill that he got this year was $13 million higher than what we anticipated because no one could predict the fact that diesel would be more expensive this year by as much as it was last year. So to answer this member's question, when you now fill up all of those buses and add it up at the end of the year, the bill for diesel was $13 million more than what we anticipated.

There are no people in Alberta, never mind in this Chamber, that could have predicted that because the price of fuel is based on consumption and supply. It's very difficult to predict with a great deal of accuracy what the consumption will be, what the supply will be, what the interaction of the refining processes of diesel will be, what global commodity prices of oil and bitumen will be, and that resulted in an additional fuel price.

Mr. Hancock: We reinstated the subsidy program.

Mr. Lukaszuk: That's right. What also happened, Mr. Chairman – because when the bus driver shows up in front of the gas station to fuel up his bus and the bill is bigger, he can't tell the gas station owner: "Uh-oh. I don't have any money. I can't pay you for the gas." It wouldn't be good. So what we did as the government of Alberta is that we reinstated a program to subsidize the cost of fuel so that school boards can continue fuelling buses so that children can show up to school on time and get home after school. I'm not sure how I did as a grade 6 social studies teacher, but hopefully that answer went through and sunk in.

Mr. Hinman: Well, it's interesting. Thank heavens that the former Education minister is here because the answer, which he finally said after listening to your prolonged gibberish, was that they reinstated the fuel subsidy. A simple answer, yet you spewed out minutes... [interjections] Well, because I didn't know, but the past minister finally did, and he told him so that he'd sit down. Unbelievable what rhetoric comes out and how unprofessional it is.

I guess my question, when he wants to talk about diesel, is that I don't think this government even understands the importance of upgrading. It's interesting when you actually upgrade and produce more diesel. For decades diesel was cheaper in this province because we had a surplus. Supply and demand. Actually, one of the things, if we were to do more upgrading, is that it would drive down the price of gas and diesel here in the province because it's a commodity.

The reason we have upgraders in different locations is because once you have the diesel and the gas, it costs too much to pipe that around. That's one of the economic challenges of how much we can actually upgrade here and then have diesel and gas left over. It would drive the price down, which would be a benefit for industry here in the province. Obviously, the minister doesn't understand any of that area. Thanks to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, who gave us the answer in a few quick seconds.

The other question that the minister failed to answer was about the $94 million to provide $24 million for the reprofiling of Alberta schools alternative procurement 2 program. The reason I wanted to ask about this is that one of the reasons WestJet is so successful is because they went through a procurement program for their fuel. They knew a year in advance what it was. The government is big enough. They can look after those things. Why don't they look at buying long-term contracts and locking in those prices rather than having a $13 million hit in the pocketbook at the end and saying, "Wow; we didn't project that," and going from those angles?

They talk all the time, and we commend them when they want to underforecast the price of oil so that we don't overspend. It's the same on the other side when they're doing the budgeting for these areas, to realize that the price of fuel can go up.

Perhaps he would like to answer on the reprofiling of Alberta schools alternative procurement 2 and why that costs so much more. Hopefully, there's a quick, simple answer. That's all we're really looking for is an expansion on the line item.

9:50

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Chairman, there's nothing quick and simple in education. Maybe that is the reason the member has difficulty understanding some of the concepts.

One of the attributes of Alberta Education, Mr. Chairman, is the fact that we have 62 boards administering education in a manner that is conducive to that local area. Yes, I would agree with this member that if you had centralized procurement and if you had the wisdom and the foresight that this member professes to have – if we actually hedged diesel prices, for example, years in advance, knowing that they would go up, then we would be the only ones to have the privilege of understanding what commodity prices would do – then, yes, as a result, we would end up saving dollars. But the fact is that we have 62 school boards that run fairly distinct operations. I think this member would be the first one to say that local autonomy, local decision-making is the best thing in the world since sliced bread. We do have local autonomy and local decision-making at school boards.

They have their own procurement, that this government backstops, obviously, in our annual budget as well. They buy supplies and materials that are responsive to their local needs and local jurisdictions. We as the government of Alberta also provide a variety of services to the 62 school boards. That is why the mathematics is not as simple as this man would like them to be.

The Chair: The 20 minutes have just been completed.

Next is the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: Do you want to combine the 20 minutes?

Mr. Mason: No.

The Chair: All right. So you go for 10, and then back and forth, right?

Mr. Mason: I've got a few things to say about how this has gone so far. You know, the minister talked about how this has been bizarre dialogue. It has been to a degree, and I think the minister has made a significant contribution to that.

It is a question of $107 million that we're asking about, Mr. Chair, and I think that opposition members are entitled in this process to ask legitimate questions about that $107 million, including where it is to come from, particularly when the Premier and the minister have previously said that it would be found by in-year savings. It is a legitimate question to ask where the money is coming from before we are asked to vote on it, without suggestion that by asking that question, we are asserting that we do not want to spend the $107 million and restore it to Education. That is completely false, and that allegation or suggestion has been made repeatedly. We deserve an answer to the question of where the $107 million is going to come from.

Now, I am going to assume, based on what we've gone through, which has wasted quite a bit of time, that the minister doesn't know. I wish he had just said so. I don't think it's appropriate to accuse people who ask a legitimate question of taking a position that they have not taken or of trivializing the impact of the reductions that took place as a result of the original decision.

So let's move on. I want to ask a question about the P3s and the schools. There's a supplementary amount of $94.3 million for school facilities infrastructure. Of that, $24 million is for the reprofiling of the Alberta schools alternative procurement, ASAP 2, projects due to a faster than anticipated construction progress. That involves the construction of 10 new P3 schools in Edmonton and Calgary which are expected to open next September. The government claims that the P3 approach will save $105 million. The government also claims that the savings on ASAP 1 will save $97 million over 32 years.

Now, I would like the minister, if he could briefly, to outline where those savings are going to be found, why they're going to be found, and what, in fact, the reprofiling actually amounts to.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Going back to the member's initial comments, I think I have done the best I can to advise the members of this House where that $107 million will be found. At this point if the members are asking me to pinpoint exactly where that money is going to come from – and I know this member knows very well and that, obviously, we don't need to approach this member the way we had previous speakers. The money will be found in in-year savings when the budget is reconciled. It will be found in the in-year savings of the operations of the government of Alberta.

But where will the money come from? I would have to now predict how the last quarter of the expenditures will go. I may hope that it will come from Sustainable Resource Development, but who knows? There may be a fire, and it won't. I may think that it will come from Human Services, but who knows? All of a sudden they may have a big uptake in a certain program, and it won't. I can't tell you exactly where it's going to come from, but I've said this a million times already tonight: it'll come from the reconciled budget of this year's expenditures. Period. I'm not sure how much more detailed they'll be. I know that this member will agree with that statement. The others: we'll leave them oblivious. Perhaps that's a good place for them to be.

Now to the question on infrastructure construction. You know, that is one that I'm actually personally struggling with right now, and I'm looking forward to discussing that matter with some members of the opposition. The fact is that with the current accounting structures we have in the government of Alberta, it is very difficult to build as many schools as we would like because the need for schools is outpacing our ability to build new schools. Frankly, when I met with the school boards a couple of days ago, I told them that in total we probably have too many schools in Alberta. If you could actually put them on dollies and move them around, we would probably have excess space of maybe 20 to 25 per cent. But, obviously, that can't be done.

So the question we have to ask ourselves is: are we going to continue, as WRA members would want us to do, to find the money for the building of new schools in year 1 of the budget, so that if I announce a school today in your riding, hon. member, I have to find the dollars in my budget this year? Or are we going to do what businesses do and what all Albertans do when they buy homes, where we amortize the cost of the school over the duration that we anticipate the building will serve us?

Currently our system is such that not only in Alberta but in accepted accounting standards, we have to find all the money in this year's budget. I don't care how rich this government may or may not be and I don't care how much of a surplus we may have or how much money we have stashed away in accounts, we simply will never have enough money to build enough schools if we always have to find the dollars in this year's budget. So alternative ways of financing schools have been found, P3s. I know that the member was opposing that process. Is it ideal? Perhaps not. But it is a process that allows us to build more schools at the same time because of the fact that it allows us to amortize the cost of schools over a longer period of time.

That in itself is an asset to Albertans because we get to announce and build more schools at the same time and have more children attending schools, where they have an environment that's conducive to learning and where communities have schools where the children actually live. If there was a method – and I'm challenging the Treasury Board of our government to find a method – where we could ourselves actually finance the buildings over a period of time, that would be great. That's something that we are focusing on because at the end of the day I don't believe there is anyone in this House who doesn't want to build schools for children. We know kids need schools. The question is: how do we finance them, and how do we make it happen?

Now, the reprofiling is that when we're using third parties and they're constructing the schools on behalf of the government of Alberta, just like with building a house, the contractors want to be paid every time they reach a certain stage of construction. But when they're actually moving ahead of time, which is good because that means they'll complete the building ahead of time and kids will move into classrooms ahead of time, they want to be paid faster. So if I'm anticipating that a school will be built over a period of three years, and all of a sudden the contractor manages to build it in two years, he needs to be paid faster. I need to find the three years' worth of money that I anticipated to pay him over three years in two years. So that is the additional cost.

It's actually a good-news story because that means those projects are moving ahead of schedule, and that means they will be used by Albertans, by children, faster. But it requires the reprofiling because we need to issue the dollars to pay the contractors for their work as they are completing their work faster.

10:00

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much to the minister for that answer. I want to just take issue with one point that the minister has made, and that is that it is necessary, in his view, to have a P3 in order to amortize the cost of the capital construction of a school. Now, we know that most governments, municipal governments as well as provincial and the federal government, do borrow for their capital costs. In fact, it's the normal way of building infrastructure projects. Utilities do that, and governments do that in order to build roads and schools and other infrastructure. You do not have to have a P3 to amortize the cost of a capital project. In fact, it is the case that government can borrow money at a lower interest rate than the private sector. So savings can be found by eliminating the P3 participant, the partner, and having government finance, including self-finance, its own infrastructure projects.

I agree because, you know, I remember when I was first elected to Edmonton city council, and there was a policy in place called pay-as-you-go for capital projects. It meant that we had to pay cash for every major project we wanted to build. It was interesting that it was under Mayor Decore, who was a Liberal but actually had a very conservative approach to financing. At the same time Ralph Klein was the mayor of Calgary, and he was borrowing like crazy to build all the stuff that Calgary has, and Calgary moved ahead. Sometimes if you're prepared to borrow for infrastructure in a responsible way, including planning ahead for the retirement of the debt, the principal and the interest, then it is actually a good way to go. But I reject the concept that you need to have a private partner in order to do that. What you need is a bank.

The question I have is how these P3s actually operate. We have had some P3 schools open in Edmonton, and there have been some maintenance issues that have arisen as a result of the structure of the P3. The maintenance is required by the private partner, which is in this case Honeywell. Technicians that are working for Honeywell are responsible for fixing mechanical equipment like boilers, and they have to report back to a private partner in Calgary for every maintenance procedure they do. They have to get their replacement parts from Calgary, all of which slows down the process. We've received a report about a public school board school where the heat was out for three weeks because of the time it took for the private partner to fix the heating system.

Now, my question relative to this is: what are the costs of doing things this way? You already have a department in the school board responsible for the maintenance of schools, but certain schools have to be maintained by a private company, and that adds lots of duplication. Particularly if the private partner is located in another city, it creates inefficiencies and higher costs and so on. I'd like to ask the minister: is he aware of this situation, and does he really think that this is the best way to build and maintain our schools?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Chairman, going back to the member's initial comments, in principle I would agree with the member. Unfortunately, adopted accounting standards would not agree with what the member says. It is true that it would perhaps be cheaper even though our P3 partners do benefit from our government's backstopping and ability to borrow at a lower cost – they also get to do that – but the fact is that in Alberta there are really two types of accounting for infrastructure.

The infrastructure that the government of Alberta builds and actually owns and operates – let's say like this building. We can actually amortize the cost of this building if we were to be building it today over the next 30, 40, 50 years and show one-fiftieth on every year's subsequent budget because this building shows on our ledger as a provincial asset. We own this building, so on one side it's an expenditure, and on the other side of the ledger it's an asset. It's basically transferring liquid asset dollars into a solid asset, being a piece of infrastructure. That's what happens in business accounting.

Schools are a different animal, Mr. Chairman, because the moment we construct the school, we almost symbolically, literally hand over the keys to that school to a school board, and the school board runs and operates that particular building. So it shows as an expenditure on one side of our ledger, but it doesn't show as an asset on the other, and that is why we need to find the dollars in this year's budget. Whether we borrow those dollars or not, we need to show them in this year's budget because that building ceases to be an asset that shows on a statement from the Ministry of Education. In a reconciled statement of the entire province it does.

You will find that other provinces that haven't adopted the accounting standards – but they will because all of them will be falling in line – that don't have truly reconciled budgets, their citizens actually never get to see the true picture of the budget of the province because all of the Crown corporations and utility companies and others have their own separate budgets. You never really get to see a reconciled budget of the province. In Alberta you do, but because of the fact that you do, we have that particular barrier to building schools.

That is something that we will overcome. We're working on it with the Treasury Board. Hopefully, we'll find a more innovative way of building schools that will allow us to amortize the cost over a number of years, which I would suggest to you – and I think you would agree with me – would be a sensible thing to do.

Relevant to maintenance of buildings, the P3 contracts are signed in such a manner – and they're subject to public disclosure if the member ever wanted to look at them – that maintenance of the building is built into the price of the building. Honeywell in this case is responsible for operation and maintenance of the building. At the lapsing of the particular contract, they are turning over the building in the condition of a new building, so they have to actually have an elevated level of maintenance of their buildings.

Those buildings actually are built to a somewhat higher standard than a building that we would be building because they know that after 30 years or so, whatever the amortization of that contract is, they will be returning that building to the province, and it has to be in mint shape. It is in their best interests to build it to a good standard and to maintain it as well as possible because if they don't, it will be costing them money because (a) they have to maintain it contractually and (b) they have to turn it over to us in mint condition.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm going to just indicate that I don't agree with the minister on a number of points, but I think we've spent plenty of time on his ministry. Given that we've got some real answers lately, I'm prepared to move on.

The Chair: So we conclude that session.

Any other hon. member wish to join the debate on Education?

Seeing none, then the next item would be the Minister of Environment and Water.

Environment and Water

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. The supplementary estimates amount of $13 million relates exclusively to the EcoTrust funds. The $13 million represents the deferral of spending authority not used last fiscal year. In 2008-2009 Alberta received $155.9 million under the federal government's EcoTrust for clean air and climate change program. When received, the EcoTrust funds were set up as a dedicated funding item in the government of Alberta budget process. Through the annual budget exercise, the department receives spending authority, which includes the dedicated EcoTrust funding. The EcoTrust budget is included under the climate change program. Since this funding is dedicated, any unused spending authority in any year can be deferred to a subsequent fiscal year.

10:10

The Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm pleased to rise and raise some questions regarding the supplementary supply. It appears that the $13 million was simply deferred, then, from a previous year. I would be interested to hear more about what the Canada EcoTrust is about, how it relates to our climate change commitment, where Climate Change Central fits into that, if that's part of this budget. I'll follow up with another question after this particular one.

Thanks.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, and thank you to the member for the question. So the climate change fund with the federal dollars is a flow-through fund that comes into ours. If the funding isn't spent in a year, it is deferred into the next year's budget. A certain amount of our dollars has gone to Climate Change Central funding.

A couple of items with regard to some of the great programming that's happened with regard to climate change. I'll give you two examples of two projects, one being the Helmholtz Institute. In December 2009 $25 million was dedicated to a unique international partnership between the University of Alberta and the Helmholtz Association of German research centres to drive innovation towards clean energy production with particular focus on the province's oil sands.

In September 2009 the University of Alberta signed a memorandum of understanding with the Helmholtz Association to establish the Alberta initiative with Helmholtz. The five-year research venture will address key challenges encountered when advancing the sustainable development of Alberta oil sands, including cleaner alternatives to tailings management, more efficient methods of reclamation, and developing renewable energy sources.

Another fine example of dollars that have gone out of this fund is to the city of Edmonton and county of Strathcona initiative. On October 1, 2009, the government of Alberta announced it would provide $7.5 million in EcoTrust funds to support a renewable energy project that will transfer residual energy from a city of Edmonton biofuels facility to heat a neighbourhood in Strathcona county. The project will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by about 700,000 tonnes per year. An agreement has been worked on with them as well.

So that's just giving you an idea, a flavour of two of the initiatives that have gone forward with regard to some of this federal funding.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Chair. Thank you to the minister. Could the minister speak further to the budgets for Climate Change Central, what they are doing with the money and what the future holds for supplementary support for Climate Change Central?

Mrs. McQueen: Some of the funding that has gone in the past to Climate Change Central really is dealing with some of the energy efficiency programs that we have. We've funded over the last three years a number of millions of dollars of projects with Climate Change Central. We're working with them right now within their current budget year to look at providing additional funds to them for the work that they've done with energy efficiency and the reductions of GHGs with regard to that.

We've worked well with them, Climate Change Central, as well as looking at other ways to become self-sustaining, and they're working with regard to that. Certainly, we've provided from the department many millions of dollars – I think about $35 million – with regard to the last three years for Climate Change Central on energy efficiency programs.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. I understand they have done some remarkable things working with industry and with individuals: workplaces, individual behaviours, incentives for those things, and obviously appliances and retrofits in homes, that are getting supplemented. The rumour is that some of this will be removed in the future. I guess I was surprised to hear that there were concerns about the effectiveness of the program when everything that I've heard from the consumer's side of it is that it's been positive. Are there plans to cut out that program or to significantly reduce its support of GHG reductions in Alberta?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair, and thank you for the question. With regard to Climate Change Central's future funding, three years ago when they were given funding, they were given that under the condition that they look, as all programs eventually need to look, at becoming self-sustainable, at this. When I spent some time with them on that board as one of the co-chairs, that was certainly an initiative that they were looking at. How do they broaden their horizons? How do they become more sustainable?

As I said earlier in comments about Climate Change Central, we're working through a budget process right now, looking at: when we design new energy efficiency programs, would we run those through Climate Change Central for the coming year? That's what we're looking at with regard to that. We are currently designing what some of those climate change programs may look like with energy efficiency and are certainly looking towards Climate Change for that. We've met with them recently, and certainly they've done good work in that area. I know they're excited about the way that they're branching out as well. So that's where we are currently in the budget process.

The Chair: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you. Shifting to another area of funding. I guess I'm surprised that we didn't hear about supplementary requests for things like water monitoring. It suggests that, you know, in this past year, when there has been so much international attention on our oil sands and the lack of consistent evidence-based, comprehensive monitoring of our water system, especially in the north, we're not moving very quickly on setting up that independent monitoring system that has been so needed for several years in the province. What is the plan there, and how are we going to get things moving more quickly?

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. I do believe that kind of question is a question more aligned for question period. The supplementary request right here is with regard to the excess dollars to transfer. If the hon. member would like to have a question at another time, at question period or sit down and chat about it, I would be more than happy to talk about the monitoring program. I think that piece is really out of scope for what we're talking about here this evening.

Dr. Swann: Well, I do think it's highly relevant since this department cut millions of dollars from its monitoring program in the last couple of years. How do you justify cutting funding and then asking for supplementary funding for some of these greenhouse gas reductions when monitoring is the issue of the day? When the international community is saying that they don't respect our oil and we cut back on funding for monitoring, how does that jibe with good governance?

Mrs. McQueen: Certainly, the request for tonight really is about a transfer of funds that wasn't expended in the last year and is transferred here. What I've said before in question period with regard to the monitoring system: we're working very hard with regard to a federal-provincial monitoring system to move to a world-class monitoring system. As I've said in question period with regard to that is that I've had a couple of conversations with the federal minister. That conversation is moving along very nicely, and we hope to be able to stand together to have a response to Albertans and Canadians on how we're going to move that forward. We've put a lot of effort with regard to that.

We are taking forward, as well, the recommendations from the Alberta report that was put before us. I'm taking that through the government process. I'm not going to speak about the past; all I can speak about is the present. We are working very hard to make sure that in a very timely manner we are moving the monitoring system forward and that it'll be a system that will be world class and one that Albertans, Canadians will be very respectful of and will be very excited to see.

The Chair: Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, you still have 11 minutes left.

Dr. Swann: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. Well, I've been very impressed with the vision of Alberta environment to establish cumulative impact assessments. While the words are there, it's pretty hard to believe that anything is happening with technical and expert decisions and monitoring systems that will actually allow us to make cumulative impact assessments, whether it be in the Fort McMurray area or in some of the other systems that were involved. I guess I'm encouraging the minister to show us the money.

If we're serious about doing this rather sophisticated and vital next phase of environmental monitoring that is based on the cumulative airshed and watershed and soil impacts of the activities in an area, we have to see more than talk for the credibility of this province and especially for our industry to actually be able to make inroads in the international markets and restore some kind of reputation. We're in serious trouble, obviously. The Keystone was to me a symptom of the failure of this government to actually embody some of the principles of good environmental stewardship, set in place standards, get the technical people that you need, and spend the money on monitoring and enforcing those standards. We are going to continue to be in a serious disadvantage with the rest of the world.

On the basis of what I am reading and hearing, there's no connection between what this government has said it's doing on environment and what it actually appears to be spending money on. I think we're at a serious phase in our development in Alberta, especially with respect to the credibility around monitoring cumulative effects, and we're losing not only the international support for what we're doing but the citizens' support in this province. You can only counter the evidence with public relations so long before people start to say: the emperor has no clothes. When I see year after year cuts to Alberta environment, the credibility is gone.

I think not only you as a minister but this whole government needs to take a serious look at what priority our independent monitoring, our standard setting, and our enforcement of those standards takes in this administration.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Chair. Well, I would respectfully disagree with the hon. member. I think Alberta has been very, very proactive in a lot of the work that they've done and in particular in the areas of the oil sands. When we look at areas of cumulative effects and land-use planning and when we look at the areas of a carbon tax, I think Alberta has been very leading edge in that. But it is time – I will agree with you on this, that there are areas where we need to have continuous improvement.

What I've said and what I'm saying this evening is that we are looking at a monitoring system that will be world class, that will not only be a system that we'll do in conjunction with the federal government so that we have one system in Alberta for the oil sands area. In addition to that, the province of Alberta is looking at having a system that is province-wide. All I can say to you is stay tuned because it's going to happen, and I look forward to having other conversations with you. I think what's really important about this one is that both the federal government and the provincial government share jurisdiction in this area rather than having two different systems that may or may not contradict each other or are vying to see which system is better.

We have good systems of monitoring here in Alberta, and I think we need to be proud of that. I think we need to start talking about the positive things that are happening in this province. Other people are talking about that although you may not see it in the headlines all the time. When people come to visit Alberta, when we go to visit them, when they hear the full facts about all of the good work that happens in the Wood Buffalo region, it's really quite amazing what they have to say.

You know, I had a group out from the European delegation a couple of years ago that I took on a tour, and we made sure that they got to talk to everybody. They got to talk to the NGOs. They got to talk to the First Nations. They got to talk to the different departments. Quite frankly, then we took them up to the Wood Buffalo region and let them see first-hand the excellent work that is happening up there. Their comments to the media were very, very positive. They were actually very surprised at what they saw on the ground and what they heard from Albertans from various opinions compared to what they may have read in their media.

I, for one, am very proud of the work that we in the oil sands and the different industries that we have here in this province. Does that mean we cannot do better? Absolutely, we can do better. We can always work to strive to do better, but I think it's time that we stand up as Albertans and be proud of the work that we're doing, the leading-edge work that we're taking, and start talking about some of that as well and being proud of this province and the resources that are plentiful in this province and making sure that we have those discussions.

So, absolutely, we're going to create a monitoring system that will enhance what we're already doing. But let's not forget that we have good monitoring. We look at the Wood Buffalo area with their monitoring. We look at the biodiversity monitoring. Even with the RAMP monitoring, that's had some criticism, the Royal Society has brought up some good points.

In saying that, though, I think it is time that we have one good monitoring system between the federal government and the provincial government here. Stop duplication. Make sure that we have a system that works across the province in addition to just in the oil sands region. I think there are lots of areas in this province that we can be very, very proud of.

I, for one, like to talk about the cup that's half full and speak about those in addition to saying: let's fix the issues that arise, but let's all as members in this Assembly also start promoting Alberta for the good things that happen in this province rather than just focusing on what may be the negative. We've got many, many good stories here to talk about in Alberta; in particular, the economic region and economic engine of the province, the oil sands. We need to be having some good-news stories about that.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo talks about that quite often and is pretty proud when he speaks of his region. I'm pretty proud when we talk about that as a province.

Hon. member, we are going to be moving forward with this monitoring system across the province. We can do better. As we ramp up industry and development in the oil sands, we can do better. We'll have a system that people can look at.

The other part. If you look at a week or so ago, when we announced the information portal, it was very, very progressive, the work that the department did over the last two or three years. I give them a great deal of credit, and I give the past minister a great deal of credit for bringing that forward. We were happy to announce that a couple of weeks ago. That shows to Albertans the piece that our Premier has talked about, the transparency piece. All of that information was publicly available. What we've done is made sure that it's there and that it's easier for people to access. We had very, very good comments from many sectors with regard to the information portal. I say that that's one thing. In the first month on the job that's the first thing we've looked at.

We were looking at making sure that we have a good agreement with the federal government as we move forward for a federal-provincial monitoring program. I'll say one thing. We're going to do it in a very timely manner, but we're going to get it right when we do it. To me it's more important that if it takes us a little bit more time, and I do mean a little bit more time, that we do it in a fashion that is proper and that is science based and that we have all of the issues we need to do with that. The group that we had with regard to doing the provincial report, I think, has come up with excellent recommendations. We'll take that through the process, and I think that even you, hon. member, will be quite happy with the results of the monitoring program.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: You want to join the 20 minutes or 10 minutes?

Mr. Boutilier: I welcome the dialogue.

The Chair: Twenty minutes then.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Chair. As a former minister of environment I appreciate the comments that have been made by the existing minister of environment when she talks about my home. I hear so often the dialogue that goes on in this place, and as I look around, there's not one single person other than me that calls Fort McMurray home. I'm very proud.

Relative to the finances here today I have a question to the minister of environment. I'm very proud of being one of the architects behind the formation of Climate Change Central. In doing so, from what I observed in talking to a variety of mayors and councillors and people at the local level – and it's no different than the minister of environment, who also served, I know, with distinction as a mayor in Drayton Valley – one of the issues at the most recent AUMA was the issue of finances. We certainly want to avoid any duplication. There has been a very positive initiative that has been structured with the AUMA on finances relative to Climate Change Central, but it's at the local autonomy level. Specifically, Bob Hawkesworth, a former alderman in Calgary, is chairing that initiative. It's really local initiatives that have played a significant role.

I've been very impressed. I saw their project in terms of what they're doing, engaging local communities. I understand that the minister has, I think, contributed a couple of million dollars to that project in partnership, and I actually think it was a good investment, connecting Climate Change Central even further down to the grassroots of our communities, where I see local autonomy of groups actually putting it to good work. Especially on the issue of energy efficiency they continue to look for more. I'm wondering if . . .

The Chair: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt you, but I just wish to announce that the minimum three hours have expired pursuant to Standing Order 61(1)(b). If you want to continue, go ahead.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Chair, I'll continue on relative to the Ministry of Environment with my nice, positive comments that I'm making to this particular minister. I would like to say that my four-year-old son breathes the air in Fort McMurray every day. I think the investment that is being made in connecting with local communities such as through partners of the AUMA is important. It's been a wise investment of dollars. Consequently, I am saying that with the supplemental estimates I do believe this is a good investment of money. Albertans will be proud of the value they're getting, especially when you're relaying that dollar back to local communities and elected officials at the local level, something that the Wildrose believes in at the local level. We don't believe in the sky down; we believe in the roots up. So I compliment the minister on that.

Now, what I would like to do is to also ask a question on Climate Change Central. In fact, rather than have a duplication, where we can continue to use that outreach within municipalities – we have over 365 municipalities – why wouldn't we tap into their energy? There is an incredible willingness in energy efficiency with them wanting to help. I think there's $2 million or $3 million there on energy efficiency. I see some incredibly good, positive things happening, and I compliment the minister on that. It's not often that I compliment this government on things that are going right, but to this particular minister I say: good job, and keep it going.

For my son and for anyone who talks about the oil sands and the economic engine, I just want to say that it's one thing to talk about the economic engine, as I've heard other ministers and the previous Premier talk about, but what's more important is that words are cheap, and it really comes down to the investment. The investments that are being made in my community, that I've called home for over 34 years, we commend. But I will invite and offer this. I find it interesting that there are so many ministers on the other side. They come into my home, but they never extend the courtesy. Having been the minister of environment and the mayor and a member of council for 12 years, I find that actually quite annoying. I never go into a community without talking to a member that has been elected there. But it seems that this government doesn't do that at all.

I hear the Premier. I want to say that when I taught at the University of Alberta, as a professor at the University of Alberta I would always ask Dr. Taft if I could come into the classroom each and every day. Indeed, what a pleasure it is that he gave me the green light on all occasions to be able to do that.

I want to say this to the minister. Economic engine: let's make it more than just words. This Premier and some ministers over time use the term, but the reality of it is that they bring in people from Europe. You know what? Oh, gee, they bring somebody from Europe to tell them about something that I believe ministers still do not know. I'm not saying this minister, but there are many ministers on that side who really do not know what my home is all about and what goes on in the oil sands capital of the world, that I'm very proud to have called home for 34 years.

The Chair: Hon. minister, do you want to respond?

Mrs. McQueen: I will respond quickly and thank the hon. member for some of his positive comments. What I would say is that I do agree with you that connecting local communities is a great initiative. As we all know, Mayor Melissa Blake and her council in Wood Buffalo do outstanding work. We know that they do outstanding work there. I'm very proud of the work that they do and the work that not only the hon. member does but all of our cabinet and colleagues do. I will say that it's been an interesting initiative with the local communities. Being a past mayor and councillor, we know that, certainly, a lot of these initiatives with regard to energy efficiency can happen very effectively at the local council.

I will leave it at that.

Mr. Chairman, now that the three hours have expired, I would ask to call the question.

Vote on Supplementary Supply Estimates 2011-12 General Revenue Fund

The Chair: The hon. minister has proposed calling the question. Is any hon. member opposed? Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

Those members in favour of each of the resolutions relating to the 2011-2012 supplementary supply estimates for the general revenue fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, please say aye.

Some Hon. Members: Aye.

The Chair: Opposed, please say no.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Chair: The motion is carried.

The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I would move that the committee now rise and report the supplementary estimates.

[Motion carried]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Quest: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration certain resolutions, reports as follows, and requests leave to sit again. The following resolutions relating to the 2011-2012 supplementary supply estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, have been approved.

Office of the Auditor General: expense and capital investment, $975,000.

Office of the Chief Electoral Officer: expense and capital investment, $1,400,000.

Culture and Community Services: expense, $20,683,000.

Education: expense, $217,646,000.

Environment and Water: expense, $13,000,000.

Human Services: expense, $18,250,000; capital investment, $1,132,000.

Justice: capital investment, $2,940,000.

Municipal Affairs: expense, $309,890,000; capital investment, $65,100,000.

Sustainable Resource Development: expense, $280,000,000.

Tourism, Parks and Recreation: expense, $5,450,000; nonbudgetary disbursements, $250,000.

Transportation: capital investment, $12,800,000.

The Committee of Supply has also approved the following amounts to be transferred.

Infrastructure: from expense to capital investment, $58,420,000.

Treasury Board and Enterprise: from capital investment to expense of Advanced Education and Technology, $13,000,000; to expense of Agriculture and Rural Development, $25,000,000; to capital investment of Infrastructure, $21,700,000; to capital investment of Sustainable Resource Development, $610,000; to expense of Transportation, $14,000,000, and to capital investment, $6,400,000.

The Deputy Speaker: Having heard the report, does the Assembly concur in the report?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 24

Health Quality Council of Alberta Act

[Debate adjourned November 22: Mr. Kang speaking]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. During the recent PC leadership race the Premier made a very specific promise in order to get selected as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party. This promise set her apart from the crowd. It even got the former Premier so upset as to scold her publicly. He called her a Liberal, in fact, which got her instant attention in the media and support.

Last June in the wake of Dr. Duckett's allegations of rampant queue-jumping by those with connections to the PC Party, she said without equivocation that if elected, she would call a full, independent public inquiry. She said that those claims and others alleging intimidation of health care whistle-blowers demanded an inquiry. She said, quote: it's about what has happened in the system to ensure that we get to the bottom of this and, if there has been any of this, meaning intimidation and so forth, that we all are completely open about it. Unquote. And she added this, quote: I know that it's not something that Albertans are going to accept, and nor should they. That's why we need to have this inquiry. Unquote.

This wasn't just a media stunt either, Mr. Speaker. In September she was still talking about how absolutely urgent it was to have this public judicial inquiry because, quote, in Alberta we've had so much political interference in health care that I don't think Albertans have confidence that the system has been allowed to work. Unquote. She said at that time what the Wildrose and other opposition parties had been saying all along, and she was right at that time.

But as with so many other issues what the Premier said before she was elected as PC leader sounded great, but what she is actually doing as Premier is just as disappointing. Whether it's fixed election dates or balancing the budget or, as we heard earlier today, finding $107 million of in-year savings or fixing the Human Rights Act to protect free speech, the list is growing every single day. This Premier is constantly – constantly – flip-flopping on the promises that she made to Albertans and, indeed, to her own party members.

This flip-flop is maybe the most blatant, however, and has the most serious consequences. We need a truly independent and powerful body to look into the dozens of allegations of government intimidation of health care workers and political queue-jumping as well as interference with the health care system. And now we don't know if we're going to get it. We also don't know if we're going to get it before the next election, another promise that she made. She made a promise during the campaign that this public inquiry would be well under way before the next election so that voters would have all that information in front of them, openly and transparently, before they went into the ballot box and selected a member to represent them in the Legislature. She's flip-flopped on that promise by implementing this needless bill, thereby delaying the process so that we will not have this public inquiry before the next election, another broken promise.

As the Premier made perfectly clear when she was running for the PC leadership, the repeated allegations of bullying by politicians and AHS executives could not be handled by anybody but a judge. She was right about that, absolutely right about that. This needed to be done publicly so Albertans could be assured of the truth. It needed to be open so that the media could be there and could report to Albertans on what was happening so they could have their confidence restored in the health care system and those overseeing it. She emphasized that partisan considerations didn't matter. All that mattered was that Albertans' faith in the system was restored. As I said, she even said that it was so very urgent to proceed quickly so that the inquiry would be well under way by the time the next provincial election was called.

But now, Mr. Speaker, she's waffling. She's flip-flopping. I don't even know if waffling or flip-flopping are the right words because there are other words that are unparliamentary to use for what she has done. Clearly, she's breaking a promise. We'll use the parliamentary words. This is a flip-flop of the highest order. To quote today's Premier and then candidate, "It's not something that Albertans are going to accept, nor should they," meaning that this would go on without a public inquiry.

This has to stop. This Premier needs to start keeping the commitment she has made to Albertans, and it starts by keeping her promise to call an independent public judicial inquiry into the allegations of health system intimidation and interference. Earlier this month the Wildrose along with the New Democratic and the Liberal caucuses penned a joint letter to the Premier asking that she keep this promise to Albertans and laid out five criteria that the inquiry must include in order to be legitimate, effective, and in line with the Premier's aforementioned commitment to Albertans on the matter.

These five criteria are as follows. First, the inquiry must be entirely public and open to the media. We don't try extortionists or fraudsters behind closed doors. We do so publicly so that the entire legal process is open and transparent. The point of this inquiry is to restore confidence in our health system and to give health workers the confidence they need to openly advocate for their patients without fear of reprisal.

It is also about who, if anyone, was involved in the intimidation of health professionals, whether any person used their political influence to interfere with the administration of the health system, such as queue-jumping for example, and whether any such intimidation or interference adversely affected the health of patients, the health of Albertans. The inquiry will be considered an absolute sham if it is conducted behind closed doors.

The second criteria. The inquiry must be judicial, meaning that it must be presided over by a qualified judge with the power to subpoena witnesses and evidence. It is not enough to simply appoint a panel with a judge included on it. A qualified judge should have complete authority over the entire process. He or she must have full powers of subpoena and the experience to properly weigh evidence and assess the credibility, or lack thereof, of the witnesses that come before him or her.

This is not a job for doctors. Not only are they unqualified to weigh evidence and assess witness credibility compared to a judge; they are also conflicted in that they are being asked to judge their fellow health colleagues and current political bosses, who pay them, indirectly, their salaries. The judge must also be a federally, not provincially, appointed judge with absolutely no known ties to the PC Party or the provincial government. This must be a federally appointed judge, just so that there is no appearance of influence even if there isn't.

The third criteria. The inquiry must be focused on alleged wrongdoing, intimidation, or interference by government members, officials, or surrogates with health professionals or the administration of the health system that has resulted in harm to patients, health workers leaving Alberta, unnecessary costs incurred by the health system, or health professionals being forced to stay silent as it pertains to advocating for patient care.

This inquiry is not about health quality issues such as why our ERs are overcrowded and what we can do about it. That would be a question for the Health Quality Council. That is what they are qualified to look into, health quality issues, not allegations of wrongdoing and breaches of ethics, as is being alleged in this case. The promised public inquiry is about the alleged intimidation and government interference with health care, and those are the clear criteria or the clear parameters that a judge-led inquiry or a judge-presided-over inquiry should look into.

10:50

Fourth, the inquiry must be well under way or complete prior to the next election so that voters have the information they need before making a decision at the ballot box. The Premier must not delay the process in order to avoid having uncomfortable findings come out prior to her spring election call. This would be exceptionally cynical and disrespectful to Albertans, who have the right to have all relevant information in front of them before they mark their X in the ballot booth.

This is critical, this point, and it is clear to me above all things. From everything that I've gathered here in the last couple of days, through question period and so forth, the number one reason for this legislation has become quite clear. By using this legislation and this process, by extending it out, by making sure that this goes well into the spring before we have the legislation, before the Health Quality Council makes their first report, and so forth, what it does is that it allows the Premier to extend the process and not get started, in any significant way anyway, until the next election is over with.

Her plan is very simple. Her plan is to make sure that there are no uncomfortable truths that are made public prior to the next election. What an absolutely, frankly, shameful motivation that is. For someone who ran on transparency, who ran on accountability, she's starting to sound like the Member for Calgary-West.

Finally, the inquiry should be called using the Public Inquiries Act. There is no need to pass new legislation as it relates to calling the inquiry. If the Premier wants to pass additional legislation to strengthen the Health Quality Council so that it can better conduct investigations related to health quality issues, that is a good thing, and I think all opposition parties would support that. However, strengthening the Health Quality Council has nothing to do with the public inquiry we are referring to. The public inquiry deals with alleged wrongdoing, ethical breaches, waste of tax dollars, and the buying-off of health professionals to stay silent. As mentioned, the Health Quality Council deals only with health quality/ care issues, like the reasons behind long ER wait times or dirty surgical instruments in the hospitals and how to solve such issues in the future or keep them from happening.

Delaying the inquiry in order to pass new legislation is unacceptable. It's needless. The Member for Calgary-Mountain View spoke very eloquently earlier about the fact that we have a perfectly legitimate and well-proven, well-used Public Inquiries Act. It's there. We know it works. There is no reason that the week after the new Premier got elected, she couldn't have used that legislation to call this public inquiry. Absolutely no reason. Instead, we sit here. We're now – what? – approaching two months of her being in office, and she has managed to delay, delay, delay. It is absolutely shameful. She is passing this legislation simply in order to delay the process that she could call at any time if she had any true intention of getting to the bottom of the alleged outrageous acts by government officials and AHS officials.

There is only one reason why the government would go to all these lengths to create something that meets some of the Premier's promises out of the Health Quality Council instead of just using the existing Public Inquiries Act. They have something to hide. They are not telling us something. They know that there is something there that is going to be very, very damaging to their political re-election chances, so they will hide it. It may come out a little bit right after the next election, but they're banking that if they can just hold on to that information a little longer, till after the next election, then they can spend a couple of years after that trying to repair the damage and separating themselves from their wrongdoing.

Clearly, people within her party, like the former health minister, who publicly said that he would fight her on this inquiry, have gotten to her and have explained to her how many of their careers could be ruined by a public inquiry. For someone who campaigned as an outsider who would do things differently, it sure didn't take her long to let Albertans down. I hope this Premier flip-flops again on this bill and just calls the public inquiry she promised and knew was needed before her election. She can prove to Albertans that she really is bringing renewal to this government and isn't just the newly crowned queen of the same old boys' club, but, Mr. Speaker, I won't be holding my breath.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, questions, clarifications.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, I find it interesting. The Member for Airdrie-Chestermere had made some very important points and clearly indicated that, you know, this Premier and the word "promise" obviously must have a new meaning to what has gone on over there.

My question to the member, though, is this. You made reference to a former minister of health, that's been often referred to as Mr. Gibberish, but I thought it was important that there were also some very inappropriate actions being taken by the now minister of health, and as that was going on, the question is: do you perceive that potentially the perception is that there was something trying to be hidden by the actual minister of health that stands in here today, that represents under her leadership?

Mr. Anderson: Yes, I would. You know, one of the real issues here is the many conflicts of interest that are present. We have, for example, the former minister of health, now the current Minister of Finance, who essentially seemed to know what the Health Quality Council was going to find even before they announced their interim report. He said: "Ah, they don't have anything. They've got nothing. There's nothing worth pursuing there." This is before the Health Quality Council even came up with their interim report. That's a questionable thing, isn't it? It's almost like the government has a pre-notion of what's going to happen.

Of course, that calls in the whole question of the independence of the Health Quality Council itself. That's the problem here. I don't blame the members of the Health Quality Council for it. I blame the government members for allowing the perception of bias or the perception of nonindependence that their comments, particularly that minister's comments, have allowed.

The other problem, of course, as you alluded to, is that the current minister of health is allegedly involved in this scandal, as we saw. One of the clearest displays in the last year and a half of this problem was, of course, when the now Leader of the Official Opposition was sitting as an independent after being kicked out of the Tory caucus. He was emotionally talking about his experiences in coming to this country and his family coming to this country and his grandfather, all these incredible stories. He was trying to relate that to why we shouldn't allow intimidation like this to occur in our country, et cetera, et cetera. He was getting slightly quivery in his voice. Apparently, the now minister of health decided that he would phone the head of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Dr. P.J. White, and have a conversation with him about the potential mental state of the Official Opposition leader.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 23 I would ask that you call the hon. member to order. He is imputing motives to a member, making allegations against another member. He's specifically referring to the current minister of health, and he's mischaracterizing a statement that was very clearly put on the record by the now minister of health with respect to exactly what happened in the events of that evening. It's inappropriate for this hon. member to mischaracterize those statements, to make up stories, in essence, about what happened that night. What he's talking about is not the truth. The truth was put on the record at the time, and he should be called to order for making allegations against another member.

Mr. Anderson: I get to respond, obviously, to the point of order?

The Deputy Speaker: Yes.

11:00

Mr. Anderson: On the point of order. Mr. Speaker, I think it's very important that the House leader opposite actually describe what part of the story I just said – give me the quote – that was untrue? Let me repeat what I said. I said that the now minister of health, when the now Official Opposition leader was an independent speaking about his experiences and was getting emotional, called Dr. P.J. White, the head of physicians and surgeons, on the phone to say that he had a problem with the mental state of the Official Opposition leader. What was untrue about that statement? I actually heard the phone message, and I think most of the media has, too. What part of that was untrue?

Mr. Hancock: The whole of it, Mr. Speaker. The whole of it is untrue, and he can go back to the statement that was made on the record by the now minister of health at the time, which clearly explained all of the actions at that moment. All of what that member has said is a mischaracterization of what happened at the time and inappropriate to put. [interjections] It is absolutely. It is a total mischaracterization of the events of the day.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak to the purported point of order, which is brought under Standing Order 23(h), which is making allegations against another member, and (i), imputing false or unavowed motives to another member. The events of that time are well known to all of us in this House. We know that the present minister of health, who was not the minister of health at that time, during a very prolonged debate that was taking place in this Chamber, called the president of the Alberta Medical Association and expressed concern about the mental state of the now Leader of the Official Opposition, who was at the time someone who had been suspended from the Progressive Conservative caucus because he had spoken out against government health care policy.

We know that as a result of that, the president of the Medical Association called three doctors who were colleagues of the now Leader of the Official Opposition. We also know that the next day a psychiatrist from the College of Physicians & Surgeons showed up at the constituency office of the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, now the Leader of the Official Opposition, in order to subject him to a psychiatric evaluation to see if he was able to continue to practise medicine.

Mr. Speaker, the result of that would have been a very serious point of privilege, which we prepared and introduced. Unfortunately, it was withdrawn at the advice of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark's lawyer. I know that the hon. member, now the minister of health . . .

Mr. Boutilier: He was the junior minister then.

Mr. Mason: No, he wasn't.

. . . had made a statement with regard to that incident in which he set out his purported motivations.

I want to just indicate that there is still a great deal of controversy about his actions at that time, which in my view should be part of the subject of any inquiry into intimidation of health care professionals. I won't judge that question, but I will say that on the face of it it is my strongly held belief that that conduct of the minister of health at that time must be part of the investigation of any public inquiry if one is ever actually called.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, in bringing this up and referring to it, does not, in my opinion, offend Standing Order 23(h) and (i) but is, in fact, a legitimate part of the debate around this question as it's obvious that the government is attempting to avoid just the instance that I'm setting forward.

So I would ask you with respect, Mr. Speaker, to rule against the Government House Leader's point of order because I believe it has no merit.

The Deputy Speaker: I heard the point of order, and I heard the defence on that, and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood expounded it further. According to my opinion, Standing Order 23(c) says, "persists in needless repetition or raises matters that have been decided during the current session." The matter you talked about has been repeated, and then it has been raised and resolved in the last session. To me that is the point of order. Don't repeat what has been raised before. Resolve it, and go on with the debate on the bill.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order?

The Deputy Speaker: I already ruled on the point of order.

Mr. Mason: This is a new point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: A new point of order?

Mr. Mason: A new point of order. Absolutely.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay.

Point of Order

Explanation of Speaker's Ruling

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, under chapter 2 of the Standing Orders, section 13(2) states that "the Speaker shall explain the reasons for any decision on the request of a Member." My request to you is to explain how you ruled that something was out of order on a point that was not raised in the original point of order.

The Deputy Speaker: Well, I used the standing order here, and I heard on that point of order the debate about it. It clearly says in here, "persists in needless repetition or raises matters that have been decided." Okay? That is the point I want to make on that. That is a point of order that we should pay attention to and not violate. I do not recognize a point of order on a point of order.

Carry on the debate on Bill 24.

Debate Continued

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I feel intimidated into silence. I have nothing else to say.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member want to join the debate on Bill 24? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak briefly to Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act. This bill does some things. It continues the Health Quality Council. It gives it the regular powers that it has had. It clarifies things. It allows it to make bylaws. It gives the responsibilities of the directors for indemnification, borrowing, access for information, and so on. It says that the council may advise the minister and will look into things requested by the minister and at the request of the minister prepare and submit reports to the minister and so on. Those are its normal activities, and the normal reporting relationship relative to those activities is to the minister of health, whom we've just had a little conversation about during the point of order relative to his history with the broader issue.

11:10

But it also gives new powers to the Health Quality Council, powers that are similar to but not exactly the same as a judicial inquiry, and that's very interesting because until the Premier had promised a judicial inquiry under the inquiries act into allegations of physician intimidation, there was no thought of giving these additional powers here. So it's interesting that when the government has before it the inquiries act, that allows a clear public inquiry headed by a judge, a very clean process, she and the government did not choose to avail themselves of that act. That question has never been properly answered by this government, why they didn't just want to use the Public Inquiries Act to investigate the allegations that had come forward and to meet the commitment made by the Premier during her run for the PC leadership.

So why, then, do we have a government that goes to all the trouble of amending a piece of legislation for the Health Quality Council to give it these similar powers when it already had those powers under another act? That's a very interesting question, Mr. Speaker, and one that this government has never been able to adequately answer.

I would submit that this creates a problem for the Health Quality Council. The Health Quality Council is closely connected to the health community. It's comprised of individuals who have history, who participate in various professions and various roles in the health system, and that's appropriate for its traditional role of trying to examine the health care system in order to make it safer and more efficient, to make it more effective, to improve it generally, and to look into serious problems in terms of the administration of the health system.

But now it's got these extra powers, and it can set up a quasi-judicial inquiry, so that brings it into conflict with its traditional role. I think it's not a good idea for several reasons but mostly because it goes from being part of the health system and integrated with it, to a degree, to being put in a position where those attributes are no longer an asset to its work and not appropriate to its mandate. The government is creating kind of a Jekyll-and-Hyde situation for the Health Quality Council. Again, it brings us back to the question of why they're doing it.

My view is, Mr. Speaker, that there are two reasons. One is delay. By initiating this legislation we hold up the process of appointing the inquiry and we ensure that the inquiry is not under way in a public way during the next election. Nobody expected a judicial inquiry appointed by this Premier to have completed its work before the next election, but its work might have been under way, and people might be testifying, and it might be embarrassing, and it might have created some negative reaction for this government. So it was better from the government's point of view to simply pass some new legislation and start later. That's one of the things.

The other thing is, Mr. Speaker, that it's not quite going to be the same, and it's certainly going to involve a group of individuals making selections, perhaps of a panel that may include a judge – the Premier said a judge-led inquiry – and a bunch of other people who have some involvement in the health system. Then it brings to bear a whole number of additional biases, filters, and opinions that prevent a clean examination. I think that it is not going to result in getting to the bottom of it. I think that's why the government is doing it here.

I'll make no apology, Mr. Speaker, for being concerned that we are going through a process of legislation by this government, a Health Quality Council that reports to the minister of health when the minister of health himself may be one of the primary witnesses of the inquiry, and he should be, in my view. How is the Health Quality Council going to structure an inquiry that would have that result without seriously compromising itself? That will in my view seriously compromise the legitimacy of the inquiry, that it may or may not call and which may or may not contain people including a judge or other individuals. The government has decided that they're going to go down this route. In my view, the only answer for this seemingly contradictory and duplicative piece of legislation is so that the government can manage the outcome of this inquiry.

Now, the present Minister of Finance, who was a notorious minister of health, has come out publicly against the inquiry, saying that it's just going to show that the allegations that have been made are just figments of Edmonton-Meadowlark's imagination. He's already prejudged it, Mr. Speaker. He's already determined that an inquiry is not needed. But that minister should also be called as a witness for this inquiry because under his watch as minister of health there were a number of senior health officials, doctors, public health officials whose positions were terminated apparently over a dispute about a public awareness campaign for a syphilis outbreak. They have signed nondisclosure agreements, which seems to be part of the standard pattern when the government runs off people that they don't agree with in the health system, people that cause them problems.

Now, I think the minister's sensibilities were offended by the fact that this campaign talked publicly about the outbreak of syphilis, but the result of cancelling that campaign, Mr. Speaker, was that the syphilis outbreak continued unchecked and we had Third World rates of syphilis in this province and babies with congenital syphilis who died. That, in my view, is the result of political interference by the former minister and should be the subject of this inquiry. But I don't think with this legislation that's ever going to happen. I know perfectly well why that minister does not want this inquiry to go ahead, because he is one of the people that should be testifying, and there would be a lot of people testifying about his actions as well.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is a contrived way of the government attempting to control its message, to prevent damage to its reputation, to prevent the facts from coming out. This piece of legislation is part of the ongoing cover-up of this government, of their culpability in the interference in the health care system that has caused so many people to suffer so much. So I'm opposed to this particular piece of legislation and very strongly so.

I think that the Health Quality Council does very good work. It does really good work in examining procedures that take place in the health care system and in hospitals, but it is not appropriate that it should be conducting a public inquiry. It is not the body that should be handling this. It is a way for the Premier to avoid the promise that she made to Albertans when she was running for leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

I will oppose this legislation. I think all Albertans need to ask the basic question: if there's going to be a public inquiry, then why don't we use the Public Inquiries Act, which is already there for exactly that purpose? Until the government can answer that question for Albertans, I don't think this is going to wash.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

11:20

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows five minutes for comments and questions. The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Yes. I would like to ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood about a point he raised. It's interesting that under moving away from the Public Inquiries Act, this government indicated that the actual decision would be made by cabinet. I have to ask through the Speaker to the hon. member, you know, about the comment that has been made that the fox is in the henhouse. One has to ask the question about the role cabinet plays in this because it truly is not independent, in fact, because of the fact that someone that is brought into the controversy of the whole episode of what's going on in this review is directly involved as minister of health. Relative to the perception that it's creating for Albertans, what does he think of that?

Mr. Mason: As I indicated in my comments, hon. member, I think that is part of the problem. This is a body that for its routine activities responds to the minister of health, and the minister of health, in my view, needs to be examined on his role in the intimidation of one of the members of this House. I think that it creates a conflict of interest with respect to the Health Quality Council conducting the inquiry.

The Deputy Speaker: Seeing no others on Standing Order 29(2)(a), the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the bill.

Dr. Taft: On the bill, Mr. Speaker. Much has been said, so I will keep my comments brief and to the point. I particularly commend readers to the comments made by the Member for Calgary-Mountain View as well as other members.

But this is what I would like to say. Bill 24 is unnecessary, and it's an expensive delaying tactic. It's intended to avoid accountability instead of to embrace accountability. It's a broken promise, no more, no less, on a matter that potentially involves life and death, truth and lies, insiders and outsiders, and courage and cowardice. It's a sorry and cynical mark for a new Premier to make, and it should be withdrawn.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other speakers wish to join the debate?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question on the bill.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for second reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11:24 p.m.]

[Ten minutes having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

For the motion:

Totals:	For – 25	Against – 6

[Motion carried; Bill 24 read a second time]

Bill 25

Child and Youth Advocate Act

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Hancock]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to rise and speak to Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, something that this caucus has been pressing for for a long time now. I'm very pleased to see a very progressive minister embrace this and move it forward into legislation. The Child and Youth Advocate is a critical role to ensure the monitoring and standards in the child and youth care system, dealing with problem issues, injury, deaths in care, probably the most vulnerable population of all that government deals with, and now we're seeing a serious commitment, I think, to ensuring that the children, particularly those where there are some unfortunate adverse events that happen, are going to be addressed more vigorously.

The kind of ongoing monitoring and changes to the system are going to go into independent reporting to the Legislature, and there won't be the concerns that I think have been raised on a number of occasions, that it's politically difficult for a minister to be dealing with some of these reports and not be seen as having some kind of conflict of interest.

The Child and Youth Advocate has also got at his or her disposal a council for quality assurance, providing access to the advocate for incidents and referral outside that quality assurance council to even a second investigative department.

Admittedly, the Child and Youth Advocate is chosen by the cabinet, but there is now a degree of separation between the reporting requirements on these sensitive and critical issues to the Legislature, where there can be seen to be a more objective and impartial review of some of the most serious problems, injuries, and risks, a learning process for us all, in fact. We all become much better able to do the oversight and make recommendations for improvements that have to be ongoing in such a complex and challenging area as children and families at a disadvantage and in this case separated from, in some cases, parents and kin.

This process has been strengthened as a result of the changes. Indeed, there's some clarification around confidentiality and what aspects of some of these cases can be protected in privacy when they will not necessarily serve the public interest. But those that can and will serve the public interest will be made public so that there can be the learning and the changes that are needed in how we identify, how we counsel, how we work with families, and ultimately achieve greater success in terms of the health, safety, and the achievement of their human potential under very difficult circumstances.

In looking at some of these issues, it's something that I certainly will be interested in hearing more debate on and seeing more of the details relating to this bill, but at the current time I think there is a lot to be said for the changes that are being made. With that, I'll take my seat.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo on the bill.

Mr. Boutillier: Yes. Thank you. On the bill, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a privilege to stand in this House to discuss the proposed adoption of a Child and Youth Advocate as an independent officer of this Legislature and accountable to this Legislature. I am very encouraged by this proposed bill as I, myself, like many people in here, many members, have young children. I, like everyone else, support the intention of this bill to help young people at risk in our province.

The disturbing number of deaths and injuries that have happened to children in government care is a real cause for concern for my constituents and all Albertans. With that in mind, I find it helpful that we finally have some legislation in front of us that will help the government of the day in an area where Albertans are wondering why it hasn't happened sooner. But that being the case, better late than never.

I particularly want to congratulate the government since the Wildrose were the first to indicate that we supported the advocate as an independent officer of this Legislature.

Mr. Mason: Point of order.

Point of Order

Factual Accuracy

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, it is sometimes necessary to rise in this place to end absurdity and to set the record straight, so I'm rising on Standing Order 23, "abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder." Given that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has single-handedly championed this issue for years and fought to make it a provincial issue and the government has finally caved in and adopted her proposal, it is abusive and insulting to her efforts for this hon. member to claim that they had anything whatsoever to do with it.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to clarify that the Wildrose is the first conservative party to in fact come forward.

The Deputy Speaker: A point of clarification has been made, so no point of order.

Go ahead, hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, on the bill.

Debate Continued

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. After that important point of order was raised, I would like to continue on with my thoughts relative to this important initiative that we are very proud to share with other members and other parties in this House.

Mr. Speaker, clearly, we believe that my colleagues here in the Wildrose have been asking the government to do something like this for some time, and it is better late than never. We have been very consistent. I might add that being consistent is something that means you're not flip-flopping, that you're being consistent. We believe the initiative relative to this important piece of legislation on the Child and Youth Advocate being independent of the government is important, and I commend the government. As much as I will raise comments when I don't like things that the government is doing, I will commend them occasionally.

You might remember that we have also long called for a variety of situations similar to what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona had initiated as well. In terms of calling for something and the better sharing of information between public bodies, a clarification of confidentiality in regard to these cases is also very important. This is something that I believe the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek had been pushing for for a variety of reasons; for instance, for a safer communities taskforce. As you recall, the previous Justice minister wasn't quite able to get that job done, but I'm glad that the government finally decided to follow an important initiative by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, which I commend, to include this in the legislation as well.

With that said, Mr. Speaker, there is obviously, I think, some real promise here, where we see one of the government's biggest shortcomings being addressed. For too long it has been entirely up to the minister to decide if something gets looked into, and often the same minister has something to lose by the investigation. This is the problem with our health care system. We'll see over the next few weeks if those problems are adequately addressed, which we don't believe under Bill 24 because it's falling short of the promise that was made.

Again, I remind members that we believe in commitments, not making false promises. I will say that I know that I have my doubts, but I will give the benefit of hearing the debate in the days and hours and weeks ahead.

One of the things that we need assurance of in debating this bill is whether it is adequately addressed in this bill. Now, on the one hand we can feel confident about this because there is an independent advocate, but then it gets muddled because there is also a child and family services council for quality assurance. So it looks like there might be a muddying of mandates here, and we want to ensure that that is rectified. Maybe this council appointed by the minister will somehow reduce the powers of the advocate, and we certainly do not want to see that happen. We'll see how the government presents its case, and we'll be watching very vigilantly and closely as this case is a work-in-progress.

It seems that it is a positive step, though, that this council will not only be activated when summoned by the minister but that, instead, the functions and powers of the council will be embedded in the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act. Again, we'll have to see how the government envisions this council working with the advocate's office.

Still, Mr. Speaker, I feel that this bill is clearly, I think, missing a few things that I will give friendly suggestions on at the appropriate time. Maybe the government can explain how this council and the advocate are up to the job. For instance, the Premier made a promise in light of a situation that took place not that long ago, as you know, with a youngster, a tragedy, that we know the Premier had spoken to as well. It was a tragic situation.

The Premier said in the summertime during her leadership campaign that we need a children's serious incident review team. Now, this would be modelled on the Alberta Serious Incident Response Team, that has the tools to look into police shootings and other delicate things that require independence. But that is not here explicitly, and I look forward to the government explaining how this bill is even better.

You know, this provides a great opportunity to get some of the right legislation in place, and I compliment the initiative that's in front of us. I wish I could stand more often to say that I like what is coming from across the way when it comes to legislation. But I'm pleased to say that they are listening to the conservative party that brought this up. As mentioned earlier, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has been a real advocate of that as well.

I might add that we're very proud that the Wildrose has a former minister of children's services, who has shown a stellar record relative to helping children and protecting children, the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, that while I do think the bill is a good first step, I look forward to other comments and questions as we go forward. I want to say that we believe that Alberta used to be a leader on a lot of things, and it's time for us to catch up. It's like how we were the first province with balanced budgets, but lately we have fallen behind. Now it's other provinces like B.C. and Saskatchewan that are leading in things like accountability. [interjection] I am hearing what the member behind has mentioned to me, certainly accountability and fiscal responsibility. It's sad, I will say, in the fact of what has taken place.

We are one of the last provinces to make the advocate independent. With that in mind, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the government: welcome to the 21st century. We're still a bit concerned about how we can be assured that the Child and Youth Advocate won't become a political appointment who deliberately will not hold the government accountable. Sometimes it seems like every henhouse in the province has a PC fox guarding it. We know that apart from the advocate council members will be appointed by the minister, and this perhaps could be a problem. But we are assured that the advocate will be an officer of this Legislature, that all members proudly serve in, and that means the opposition members at least get to be part of the vetting committee. Even if we're outnumbered, that's still important.

Now, without saying anything disparaging about the current advocate, this Legislature has a clause saying that the current advocate, chosen in the past by this government, will stay in the post. This seems unusual and goes against the definition of being an officer of the Legislature. We'll have to review this in the debate. I think all the opposition parties will likely question whether it wouldn't be better to let the current individual reapply for the post so Albertans are reassured the very best person is in the job.

We have seen in the past month or so, with the appointment of our new trade representative to Asia and with the new executive director of the Progressive Conservative Party, that this Premier is a very big fan of political appointments and not holding open competitions. That concerns us, and I think it concerns Albertans.

I, quite frankly, worry that our new Child and Youth Advocate could be another Gary Mar or a Kelley Charlebois, who will not stand up to this Premier when needed. We want the next person that is appointed by this Legislature to stand up for children. Again, I'm not in any way referring to the individual currently in the post. In fact, I know little about him, but that's the point. The opposition should know a lot about officers of the Legislature because they are vetted by them. The advocate must be independent, so we'll be looking for a bit more reassurance that the post won't be filled by yet another insider from the good old boys' club.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I will say that another thing that boggles my mind is that there is not any explicit mention of co-operation with aboriginal affairs and aboriginal relations. The word "aboriginal" doesn't appear anywhere in the whole document. I will say as a former minister of aboriginal relations that I think it's unfortunate because if you look at the data, it's very clear that our aboriginal children are disproportionately at risk, and we want to continue to care for all Alberta children. Why would the advocate not have the clear mandate to co-operate with aboriginal affairs, to directly help those most affected? Like a lot of things with this government, it truly does boggle the mind.

That is something that I could see helping aboriginals in and around my community of Fort McMurray and across Alberta, and it bothers me that it's not included in this legislation. I hope that at the appropriate time some alterations could be made there in amendments.

On a final concern, I want to be assured of this, that the advocate will have the power to access cabinet documents. Whatever rules there are about going public with the information, we want to be assured that this advocate, like in British Columbia, has the ability to see how the cabinet is responding to issues that affect children, not a behind-closed-doors approach but, rather, that it is open and transparent so that all Albertans can see.

This government is notorious for its contempt for transparency, so if the British Columbia government found it inconvenient for their advocate to be snooping around for the truth inside the dome, I'm guessing that this government isn't even letting it get on the table. That is very unfortunate as well.

I look forward to the minister setting me straight down the road because I believe the minister is to be commended, in his new gigantic ministry of quite a lot of things, to not lose sight of the importance of the children. I say that as the dad of a four-year-old son.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, questions, clarification. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo would, in order to afford the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona the chance to speak to this bill at second reading, move to adjourn the debate.

Mr. Boutilier: Sure. It would be my honour, Mr. Speaker, to move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this is the first full day of session since we returned to deal with government business and since we've made such good progress, I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 11:59 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 23, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. We give thanks for the bounty of our province, our land, our resources, and our people. We pledge ourselves to act as good stewards on behalf of all Albertans. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: Before I call on the first of those who will introduce, let me extend congratulations today to one of our members who has arrived at a certain anniversary of his birth, the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill. Happy birthday. [applause]

The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you a few very special people, one of them the reason this job is so difficult for me and also the reason why it's so important, my 11-year-old son, Jamieson, who is here from Athabasca with his school group. I'll introduce them in a second. The other one is my father. Many of you know LeRoy Johnson, who served as MLA in this House for 11 years for Wetaskiwin-Camrose. It's a real treat to have them here today. I see they've risen, so I'd ask that you give them a good round of applause.

Mr. Speaker, I do have one other introduction. Although they're not here, I would like to introduce them. It's Jamieson's class, who are touring the Legislature right now, but they will be joining us in a little bit during question period. This is a class of 26 kids from Landing Trail intermediate school in Athabasca. The French immersion class is led by their fantastic teacher, Jennifer Jones. Melanie Opmeer, Trevor Yeaman, and Leo Chiesson are also here as parent helpers. I'd like in their absence for you to give them a warm round of applause and welcome them to the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions if the Speaker would indulge me today. The first one: it's an honour to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature a group of grade 6 students from Woodhaven middle school in Spruce Grove. They are part of two groups of students from the school to visit us this week. Tomorrow I'll be introducing some more of these bright, energetic students. They are accompanied by Mrs. Dalowe Dilling, Mr. Robert Coulas, and Mrs. Miranda Niebergall and by parent helper, Mr. Brent Taylor. I believe that they are in both galleries today, and I would ask that they all rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, my second introduction today: it's an honour to introduce to you and through you to members of the Legislature Tony Rafaat and Janice Shoepp. Janice is a member of the RCMP and currently works as a school resource officer in the community policing section of the St. Albert detachment. Tony is a junior high school teacher at Sir George Simpson junior high school. Tony and Janice enjoy gardening and keep nine honeybee hives in the St. Albert area, and I was pleased to be presented with some of that honey today. While attending the St. Albert food bank annual auction back in April, Tony bid on a special tour of the Legislature, and I'm pleased that he was the highest bidder. I would also like to mention that Janice currently sits on the food bank board in St. Albert. They are seated in the members' gallery this afternoon, and I would ask that we all give them a warm welcome as they rise in the gallery.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's always a pleasure to introduce students from one of my favourite schools in all of Alberta, Julia Kiniski. We have 36 visitors who are here observing the process today. They are joined by their teacher, Dale Mandryk; by their education assistant, Darrel Shymanski; and by parent helpers Vicky Deacon, Monica LeMoignan, and Mrs. Anna Creighton. I would ask all of these members from Julia Kiniski to please rise and receive the thunderous applause of this Assembly. Thank you for being here.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of introductions today. The first is a group of 33 visitors from the Academy at King Edward, a fabulous school which is just across the street from the elementary school where my kids went and go. I'm very pleased that they're able to be here today because often kids in my riding end up coming here in the morning, and I don't get to introduce them. They are accompanied today by their teachers and group leaders: Lucia Besko, Chris Giasson, and Jonathan Clarke. I would ask that all of my guests rise and receive the warm welcome of the members of this Assembly.

My second introduction today, Mr. Speaker, is two members from my constituency who are seated in the public gallery. Both Edward and Sarah are first-time visitors to the Legislature and are eager to learn more about the proceedings within this House. I would now ask my guests, Edward Davies and Sarah Grieve, to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a very esteemed pleasure for me today to rise and introduce a large delegation of individuals here from Calgary, all associated with the Drug Awareness Foundation. The hon. Premier as well as many colleagues from both sides of the Legislature took time to meet with this group over the noon hour. I'll ask them to rise as I read their names: the man that walked across Canada to raise awareness in the fight against drugs, Mr. Balwinder Singh Kahlon, Avtar Singh Dharni, Baldev Singh Gill, Binnie Singh Grewal, Buta Singh Rehill, Harvir Singh Randev, Harcharan Parhar, Hardyal Singh Mann, Harjit Singh Saroya, Manjit Singh Suri, Mohinder Singh Judge, Mohinder Singh Kaler, Pritam Singh Kahlon, Ranbir Singh Parmar, who is the president of the Dashmesh Culture Centre, Sukhdarshan Singh, Sukhram Singh Sandhu, Surinder Singh Dyal, and Virinderjit Singh Bhatti. I ask the Assembly to give them our esteemed welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a privilege for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Legislature a delegation from the city of Grande Prairie. They have joined us here today to meet with the Premier and several ministers to promote the interests of the beautiful city of Grande Prairie. The talented mayor, councillors, and city staff are proud of the strong northern community and are incredibly dedicated to representing the issues of the citizens in this outstanding area of the province.

I'd ask them to rise as I call their names: Mayor Bill Given, Councillor Lorne Radbourne, Councillor Alex Gustafson, Councillor John Croken, Councillor Dan Wong, Councillor Kevin O'Toole, and from administration Janette Ferguson. The Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky and I would like to thank this hard-working group for visiting the Legislature today, and I'd ask them to remain standing and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's truly an honour and a privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly eight guests seated in the public gallery. They are strong leaders within the Ismaili community. I would ask if they would please rise as I mention their names: Mr. Ayaz Bhanji, president, Ismaili Council for Edmonton; Mrs. Zahra Somani, honorary secretary, Ismaili Council for Edmonton; Ms. Zafira Bhaloo, deputy communications co-ordinator, Ismaili Council for Edmonton; Mr. Irfan Kherani, youth representative of the Ismaili community; Mr. Amin Valani, leadership from the Belle Rive Jamatkhana congregation; Mr. Hussein Ali Alibhai, leadership from the Belle Rive Jamatkhana congregation; Mrs. Tamizah Valji, chairman, Ismaili Tariqah and Religious Education Board for Edmonton; and Ms. Shameen Ladhani, honorary secretary, Ismaili Tariqah and Religious Education Board for Edmonton. I would now ask that the Legislative Assembly warmly give them the traditional welcome.

Thank you.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly some good friends and supporters of mine, and those are all the delegation from the drug awareness walk under the leadership of Mr. Balwinder Kahlon; the president of the Dashmesh Culture Centre, Mr. Ranbir Singh Parmar; and Virinderjit Singh Bhatti, Amarpreet Singh, Preetinder Tah, and Sunny Banipal. Amarpreet is the former Liberal candidate in Calgary-McCall, so he knows about this business. All the members of the delegation have been around politics for a long time, and they know all about this politics business, too. They are all seated in the gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and to the members of the Assembly today a young man who over the last year went through medical trauma when he was diagnosed with a brain tumor. He's only in his twenties. He and his fiancée, Lisa, and their 18-month-old son Kohen and his mom and dad are with us today to witness question period on important health care topics. I'd ask them to all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms. Ntley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly my guests, who are seated in the public gallery, from Women Together Ending Poverty. Women Together Ending Poverty is a grassroots group of women who have come together to take action on poverty. They are here today to present nearly a thousand signatures they have gathered from ordinary Albertans calling on the Premier to raise the minimum wage to a living wage and to keep her promise to raise AISH benefits. I would now like to ask my guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly as I call their names: Rose Ing, Cecilia Miguel, and Jackie Carrier. I'd ask all members to join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Drug Awareness Foundation Calgary

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today to recognize a great organization, the Drug Awareness Foundation Calgary, and the important work that they are doing to make a difference in our communities. This foundation, which was established in 2006 by Mr. Balwinder Singh Kahlon, has done some truly outstanding work in raising awareness about the dangers of tobacco, alcohol, and drug abuse not only within Calgary's Punjabi community but throughout Alberta and Canada.

Through campaigns, radio talk shows, community events, and youth presentations they have encouraged countless Albertans, including our children and youth, to make good decisions when it comes to drugs and alcohol. They have also provided critical support to many individuals living with addiction to help them turn their lives around.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to all of the work they have done to prevent and reduce addiction in our province, this year the Drug Awareness Foundation Calgary hosted its first ever Walk across Canada. Beginning in St. John's, Newfoundland, this April, Mr. Kahlon and his team of committed team members from our Punjabi community walked an incredible 8,000 kilometres to Victoria, B.C., to spread a message across Canada of the importance of leading a drug-free lifestyle.

Mr. Speaker, it takes a great deal of courage to undertake an event of this magnitude, and it takes a lot of heart to do it to help others. I would like to sincerely thank all of those who are involved with this inspiring organization for the valuable contribution that they are making and to encourage them to continue their important efforts because they are indeed making a difference.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Sikh Community Annual Blood Drive

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Sikh faith is about truth, justice, equality, and human rights. Sikhs are renowned for their contributions to the community and their good works. So today I want to thank all Sikhs in Canada and in Alberta for the annual acts of charity that have saved over 55,000 lives in Canada alone in addition to the hundreds and thousands who fought alongside all of our warriors to defend democracy in the world wars.

Before I do that, I'd like to recognize another way that Sikhs are helping our community. Mr. Bill Kahlon is in the Legislature today. He has led a team across the country, walking to raise awareness of the dangers of illegal drug use. Bill and his team represent a fine example of the good work Sikhs have accomplished across the nation. I'd like to thank him and his team today. Thank you, Bill.

For over 10 years thousands of Sikhs around the world have participated in an annual blood drive to memorialize the many lives lost during the wave of anti-Sikh violence that erupted after the assassination of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Sikhs have responded to this tragedy by giving life. Their annual blood drive has saved tens of thousands of lives since it began in 1999. Sikhs are donating blood in Edmonton and Calgary to continue this life-saving tradition. The world's Sikh community has responded to a great human tragedy with love, tolerance, charity, and hope.

This gift comes at a very opportune time, Mr. Speaker, for this month also marks the National Day of Remembrance for Road Crash Victims. As an ER doctor and former STARS doc I can tell you how vital blood is for the survivors of car wrecks. As we gather on November 23 to remember those who have lost their lives in traffic collisions, we can be grateful that Alberta's Sikh community is at this very moment giving the gift of life to Albertans who need blood transfusions, many of them traffic accident victims. How fortunate we are to have such generous souls in this province.

On behalf of the Official Opposition I thank the Alberta Sikh community for the annual drive.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Belle Rive Jamatkhana and Centre

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rose earlier to introduce and welcome to the Alberta Legislature representatives from the Edmonton Ismaili community and from the Belle Rive Jamatkhana and Centre. On August 14, 2011, it was my honour and privilege to have been invited by the Aga Khan Council for Edmonton to participate in the public tour of the Belle Rive Jamatkhana and Centre.

Mr. Speaker, the Belle Rive Jamatkhana and Centre is a place of prayer, contemplation, and gathering. It is the first purpose-built Jamatkhana in Edmonton, celebrating its 14th year of establishment and proudly serving approximately 1,000 Ismaili residents in the community. The focal point of this special place is the prayer hall, which displays outstanding Islamic architectural beauty and serves the Shia Imami Ismaili Muslim congregation of Edmonton.

The Belle Rive Jamatkhana is a collection of architectural spaces that never fail to stir the occupants deeply, whether you are in the prayer hall, the library, the classrooms for religious education, or the social hall. It is a place that is very welcoming and a wonderful addition within our local community.

Mr. Speaker, the first Ismailis arrived in Canada in the mid-1960s as part of a pool of professionals that emigrated from western Europe. The Edmonton Ismaili community consists of active and long-standing dedicated volunteers who actively lead and engage with other partners in enrichment and outreach initiatives such as the Capital City cleanup, Habitat for Humanity, the citizenship court tea, and the Eid al-Adha celebration, which is commemorated here at the Alberta Legislature.

I would like to convey my heartfelt thanks and appreciation to the Ismaili Council for Edmonton and the Ismaili community for adding immeasurably to our city and our great province.

Mr. Speaker, Alhamdulillah. Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Public Health Inquiry

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Empire of No has established its rule over Alberta with broken promises as its flag, and the Premier's subjects are worried that she's incapable of saying yes even to her own promises. Calling a public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act is so easy, and the Premier has the sovereign power to do so with the simple wave of a hand. Is the Premier willing to say, "Yes, I will call a public inquiry today under the Public Inquiries Act"?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the legislation before the House clearly sets out my commitment to Albertans to have an independent public inquiry that will get to the bottom of this, judge led, which is going to allow witnesses to be compelled, and that's critical because that allows witnesses to come forward and actually be protected. This is the way forward that's going to allow Albertans to really get to the bottom of the issues that they're concerned about in health care, and I'm looking forward to the debate.

1:50

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, witnesses can already be compelled under the Public Inquiries Act. Given that the Premier has said publicly that failing to hold a public inquiry for fear of harming the government's re-election chances is cynical politics, will the Premier now explain to Albertans why her government is playing the same cynical politics that she railed against just a few months ago?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, legislation before the House that can be publicly debated to support a public inquiry is not cynical politics. It's good legislation, it's good public policy, and it's what Albertans want.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, we already have good legislation. There's no reason to pass more good legislation.

Given that two AMA presidents, a CMA president, the HSAA, many health professionals, and average Albertans have overwhelmingly endorsed a true public inquiry, why does the Premier continue to disagree with honest Albertans and avoid calling a real public inquiry? Why have you broken your promise, Madam Premier?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there's no disagreement with average Albertans. There's disagreement with the Leader of the Opposition.

What we need to do in this province is ensure that Albertans can have confidence in public decision-making systems, and one of the reasons we need to ensure that is because much of the commentary that comes from the Leader of the Opposition and other opposition parties undermines the independence of offices and institutions that are independent already in this province. We will strengthen those institutions so that Albertans can have confidence.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, ample Albertans and organizations have come forward to agree with this Leader of the Opposition.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Sherman: Let's change topics here. These AHS memos from September emphatically state that there's an acute shortage of mental health professionals and a critical demand for mental health beds in the Edmonton zone. As a result, our hospitals are being forced into the inhumane decision of dumping the mentally ill onto our city streets. Will the Premier tell us why her government's policy is to kick them to the curb as opposed to caring for them?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there is correspondence within Alberta Health Services that is doing exactly what Alberta Health Services should do, and that's manage the health care system. I'll tell you that we on this side of the House are not going to second-guess the competent, professional management that's taking place with respect to mental health in the Edmonton zone.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, these memos clearly suggest that discharging the mentally ill to the streets is the government's solution to the overcrowding problem and lack of staff. Can the Premier please tell us and all front-line staff and Albertans why mentally ill men and women are receiving compromised care or no care at all?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this Leader of the Opposition is jumping to conclusions that are entirely unfounded. This is communication by managers in Alberta Health Services who are capable and competent and compassionately managing the needs of Alberta mental health patients, and that's a fantastic thing.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, if I have to jump to stand up for the truth, I'll jump every day. The only one jumping here is the Premier, jumping out of the way.

Given that these damning memos show that the overburdened and demoralized staff clearly could not handle the volume walking in the door, can the Premier please tell us how many mentally ill Albertans have been kicked to the curb and what happened to them afterwards?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is jumping to conclusions with respect to events that have not happened. What we know is that Alberta Health Services on a day-to-day basis has to manage volume. That's what we do in a health care system. They've done it competently, they've done it compassionately, and they've done it within their mandate to do it.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To quote the memo, there are currently eight emergency room patients waiting for beds in this zone. "Any possible patient discharges are deeply appreciated." Coincidentally, today the Peter Lougheed reported seven cases in their emergency room waiting for beds. Alberta has 50 per cent of the psychiatric beds per thousand population of the national average. To the Premier: does the Premier see a connection between the lack of psychiatric beds and long emergency room wait times?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think we have a number of challenges to face in the health care system. We've been completely honest about those. The direct correlation that the hon. member is trying to make is not an appropriate correlation, and the answer is: no, sir, I do not.

Dr. Swann: The current mental health plan released recently downplays the need for more psychiatric beds in Alberta. How do you suggest professionals deal with critical psychotic cases needing continuous observation and treatment if not as an in-patient?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I actually believe that the way patients should be dealt with is the way that Alberta Health Services is currently dealing with patients. I expect that they make clinical diagnoses, they ensure what the treatment should be, and they provide the appropriate services. These memos illustrate exactly that competency.

Dr. Swann: How do they do that without the appropriate services and support? How many of our most vulnerable people will die for lack of the essential mental health care? How many more?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, this is a serious issue. We should not be playing politics with this. This is an unfair correlation that causes people to be afraid when they have no reason to be.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Out-of-country Health Services

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Premier has indicated she supports public health care, and I applaud her for that, as does anyone in this House. We have a policy. The policy is that if you get sick and no one in Alberta can perform the surgery, such as my constituent who has a brain tumour that, in fact, is very rare – his doctor recommended that he had to leave Alberta and Canada to get the treatment. The treatment was done. He was going blind, and he now stands up there a year later, alive and well, with his 18-month-old son. My question is to the Premier: can you give us a review of the actual review that the former minister of health was doing on this very critical case?

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I did have an opportunity over the summer to meet the hon. member's constituent and am pleased to know that progress is happening. What we need to do in this case is ensure that we're following the procedures that are in place. I understand there has been dialogue between the department of health, that actually reviews this file, and the person in particular, without going into too many details, that would allow for more information to be considered, and I'm happy to facilitate that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much. Given, Mr. Speaker, the medical trauma that this family faced over a year ago – it's almost an anniversary – and, of course, now the financial burden of over $200,000 that the family faces, they're fund raising. Obviously, what he and his family are looking for, like any other Albertan, is that if your doctor says you have to leave the country to get this new type of surgery, Alberta health services will reimburse. Is there any kind of indication of measurement to this family? They've been waiting now almost a year.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I truly feel for the whole family, but I'm very confident that the physicians and other professionals that are on the Out-of-Country Health Services Committee and also the Out-of-Country Health Services Appeal Panel have a good process in place and that they followed that process.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, in fact, that same panel the member makes reference to told the family of a teenager in Airdrie that they would not receive the funding, but they eventually did with the review by the former minister. I'm asking that the same review be done because the committee that you make reference to actually said no to my constituent as well. That simply is not acceptable to Albertans, to anyone who would face this situation. What can we do to in fact enhance this because of the pressures that this family is facing?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I think it is important to be sure that we're clear on the information. My understanding is that there has been the opportunity for the committee to ask the family for further information. I'm happy to take that away and try to resolve it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Legislative Workload

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. If this Premier had her way, this fall session wouldn't even be happening. Now that it is, the government is trying to force its agenda through as fast as possible, creating one of the shortest sessions in Alberta history. The government insists that the Legislature go into the wee hours to debate important bills. It's legislation by exhaustion. My question is: why does this Premier show such disrespect for the democratic institutions of this province?

2:00

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I was in the House last night for a short time later on in the evening, and it was very important to me to see so many members of the government here willing to debate those issues. I'm pleased we're having a session. It's important to pass legislation that matters to Albertans. Our legislative agenda for the fall reflects what Albertans are concerned about, and I'm looking forward to the next two weeks of debate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that this Premier said yesterday that openness and transparency on the part of her government were demonstrated by the fact that we have question period and that the opposition input was limited to debate on bills the government has already decided to pass, will the Premier admit that she has broken her promise for a more open and democratic and transparent government?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, one of the fantastic things that I had the opportunity to do this summer and what I've done since I became Premier is to meet with an awful lot of school groups that come to this Legislature to learn about democracy. What they're taught is that this is a public forum where the governing party introduces legislation, and that legislation is debated on the floor of the House, and it is either passed or it's not. I think that's a great process. It's a process that children in grade 6 understand, and I certainly hope the leader of the party will understand it, too.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, how can this Premier claim that she's demonstrating a democracy in practice to children when debate on very critical issues is taking place past their parents' bedtime?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I really don't think that the hon. member wants to get into a debate with me about what democracy is or why it matters.

What I will say is that legitimate public debate in this House follows the rules of this House. We are committing to getting that legislation passed, and we're looking forward to the debate for the next two weeks.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mental Health Services

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A memo by Alberta Health Services dated September 14, 2011, regarding bed pressures, addiction, and mental health, Edmonton zone, reads: "The Edmonton Zone is currently experiencing a critical demand for inpatient mental health beds in the region. Any possible patient discharges are deeply appreciated." Why is this government now throwing the mentally ill out on the street?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health Services is competent and capable of managing our health system. Alberta Health Services communicates, I'm sure, by e-mail, BlackBerry, and memos. I don't think that it would be a surprise to any Albertan to know that on a day-to-day basis the managers in Alberta Health Services have to shuffle resources. I think that's what people do in every part of their life every day. There is no reason to believe this suggestion that there's anyone whose life is at risk as a result of the fact that Alberta Health Services is doing their job.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, if this government was competent and capable, these outstanding recommendations from the Auditor General's report, which are three years old, would have been met by now.

Given that we have this memo that indicates that you are throwing mental health patients out on the street, is this this government's idea of wait-time management for those who are mentally ill?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there are so many ways that I need to answer this question. The first is that it's an unfounded allegation. To draw conclusions from a two-line memo that's been written by someone who is a competent manager in Alberta Health Services I think is suspect.

The second thing I'll say is that with the report of the Auditor General what we see are substantial and solid recommendations that the government of Alberta has accepted and is implementing. Now, I'll tell you, Mr. Speaker, and I think Albertans know that sometimes, once a recommendation is made, it takes some time to implement. We are committed to responding to those reports. We did so again yesterday and will continue to.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, in the Auditor General's annual report there are at least eight outstanding recommendations on how to improve mental health and mental health program delivery in this province, yet we find this government is using a memo and discharging the mentally ill onto the street. Why is this government failing again to protect the mentally ill by forcing them out onto the street because of your incompetence and your inability to manage the health care system?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, there is nothing in that memo to support the allegations that the hon. member has made. There is no doubt that mental health is an issue that's important in public health. I'll tell you that one of the things this government has done is invested in mental health beds in the past three years under the safe communities program, including 18 new beds in Medicine Hat. This government takes that issue seriously, and we're acting on it.

The Speaker: Hon. members, four of the six questions thus far have referred to a memo or memos. I hope that these memos have already been tabled or will be tabled today.

The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Additional Funding for School Boards

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In this province $33 million is spent each and every day on our K to 12 education system. This is a very important investment, and Albertans have a lot of questions about how those dollars are being spent, particularly the 107 million additional dollars recently announced to school boards. My questions today are to the hon. Minister of Education. Much has been said about layoffs prior to this recent $107 million cash injection. How many teachers were actually laid off prior to this announcement, and were they classroom teachers or teachers holding administrative positions or a mixture of both?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I choose to use the term that Albertans invest $33 million in Alberta education every day, not spend. But you will be hearing of me announcing a 10-point plan in the next few days, and one of the points that I'm planning to address is accountability. I want to make sure that all Albertans, because education matters to all Albertans, know how they invest the money, where the money goes, and what return they get out of the investment. I suggest they get a very good return on that investment. Part of that will be the $107 million, and I expect that school boards will be reporting on how and where they spent the money.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that a lot of the parents are talking about these layoffs, school boards told me that not all of them will be hiring teachers this particular school year because they're already set. Is the minister confident that all of the $107 million will be used to put more teachers in classrooms, if not this year, in the coming year?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, I was very clear that the expectation was upon the school boards to invest the dollars in pressure points that they have identified within their respective jurisdictions. Each school board knew at that point in time where the pressure points were, so they made decisions. They were given latitude. Some may have hired additional teachers or teaching assistants, some may have put in some extra programs, and some may have allowed for additional supports for children who need additional support. So the decisions were made at the local level. However, I am confident that they benefited the children.

Mr. Marz: Perhaps the minister doesn't yet have this information, but my last question is: how many teachers will be rehired this school year as a result of restoring these dollars? Because that would be good news. If he doesn't have the answer now, I'd be happy to get it at a later date.

Thank you.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, I will be sharing it, actually, very gladly with the hon. member and with the Legislature and, frankly, with all Albertans. I put a clear expectation that all schools boards report to me how they spent that $107 million and actually go one step further and tell us what impact that money had in each classroom in each jurisdiction. Once I get that information, I will be reporting it to the House and to Albertans accordingly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Greenhouse Gas Emission Standards

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. This government throws out a whack of options to companies on greenhouse gas intensity emissions, allowing companies four measurements and five calculation methods, but in the end the government doesn't know what was measured, how it was measured, or how it was verified. Bottom line: Albertans don't have an accurate picture of whether emissions are getting lower. There is a total, but we don't know if it's accurate. To the minister of environment: on what information is the ministry basing its assertion that this program is working?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment and Water.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. First of all, I'd like to say that we support the Auditor General and the help he is giving us to fine-tune our system. It is a good system, but it's still new, and it's one that we still need to refine, but we're committed to constant improvement with that. We've worked with the Auditor General to identify some of those gaps. We're happy that his team was able to work with us, and we'll work on continuous improvements in these areas.

2:10

Ms Blakeman: Goodness gracious, that was a lot of talk and no information.

Back to the same minister: how does the government know if Albertans are getting value for this program?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, there are a number of ways that we're getting value for the program. With regard to some of the issues that the hon. member has mentioned and that the Auditor General has mentioned, it's with regard to the review of the protocols that we have. We ensure that protocols are reviewed with regard to tillage protocols and the issues that the Auditor General has raised with regard to that. Protocols will be updated by the end of this year to address those issues as well.

Ms Blakeman: Oh, boy. Back to the same minister: will this minister continue to employ the strategy of confusion and conflicting instructions, which makes it impossible for anyone to, one, comply and, two, confirm the results? Is any of that going to change?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What we'll continue to do is make this system a world-leading system in North America. We will continue to refine it and make it a better system as we go on. When you look at North America, there are not places that are doing the kind of work that we are doing with reducing greenhouse gas emissions and addressing the issues that we are. And through the protocols and the review of the protocols and working with the Auditor General, we will continue to have continuous improvement. There were several protocols, and only a couple of them didn't pass the audits report.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Police Car Collisions

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. I know they're hard-working and dedicated to safe streets, but there have been 171 EPS cruisers involved in collisions so far this year. What is the reason for these high numbers from one police service?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Crime can be very dangerous, but so can fighting crime. What we need to remember is that these collisions were as a result of simply the Edmonton Police Service members doing their jobs. This is under the oversight of my department, but regularly there is an internal committee that, I understand, is doing an investigation. I have every confidence that it'll get to the bottom of it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. I understand, Mr. Minister, but that doesn't answer the question of who is liable for these collisions. Who is going to be paying for this?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my understanding that only in extreme situations should a police officer be personally liable in cases of negligence and other areas as well. It's very easy to look back and say that these things should have been done, but they make split-second decisions. My understanding is that to fix the vehicles comes out of the EPS annual budget.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question is to the same minister. Taxpayers, Mr. Minister, should not be on the hook for this. What steps are you taking to prevent this or to minimize this in the future?

Mr. Denis: Mr. Speaker, there is an internal process by the Edmonton Police Service. I'm looking forward to meeting with Chief Rod Knecht about this. We also have to consider that if a police officer is going to be liable for every accident resulting from a split-second decision while protecting the public, that doesn't make for good policing policy in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

International Trade Offices

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First, without a competitive job interview process the Premier dispatched her main political rival to Hong Kong. Then the Premier nominated her envoy to Washington with a similarly closed and opaque process. This leaves us wondering about the Premier's promise to review the province's international strategy. To the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations: what was the point of your department's review of our international strategy last year when the new Premier has unilaterally disregarded its findings?

Mr. Dallas: Thanks to the hon. member for the question. Mr. Speaker, in fact we did not review all of the operations of our international offices last year, and we are, as the Premier has indicated, conducting such a review now. We're looking very carefully at our trade relationships, the locations of our offices, how those offices are resourced, and how we need to position to get the maximum benefit for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Given the Premier's promise of transparency and accountability, will the minister defend taxpayers' dollars and commit to making international offices accountable for their expenses, which currently they are not?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, all of the expenses of the ministry are accountable and transparent, and we're responsible for all of those. I'm not sure where the member is coming from on this.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I previously asked the hon. minister to table the evaluation of money for risk in those offices. Given that many international offices have little to account for, will the minister provide to Albertans a detailed breakdown of their accomplishments, especially for trade, agriculture, and tourism? This is the second time I've asked.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I'm not entirely sure that's correct. However, we do report on an annual basis on the operations. But I have and the Premier has committed, too, that as part of this strategic review we'll carefully contemplate the outcome measurements that we're looking for, and we'll report on those measurements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Counselling for Victims of Sexual Assault

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first question is to the Minister of Human Services. Both Bonnyville and Cold Lake victim services have been working together to try to obtain counselling services for victims of sexual assault for the past four years. The closest area to obtain these services is currently found in Lloydminster. This is a necessary service to have for my constituents and one that needs to be provided locally. To the minister: what is being done to address this issue in my constituency?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a very important question. We work to support the important work of Sexual Assault Services right across Alberta. In 2011-12 Human Services is providing $1.7 million in grant funding for nine sexual assault centres, including the centre that was referred to in Lloydminster and to the Association of Alberta Sexual Assault Services. Sexual assault centres have told us that their funding has allowed for greater program stability and service expansion. I understand that the association is working with people in the Bonnyville-Cold Lake area to look at how we can provide better counselling services in that area.

Mrs. Leskiw: My next question is to the same minister. Given that many of these victims simply cannot afford to travel to Lloydminster, why has this government not provided something closer for these people?

Mr. Hancock: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, that's a very important question. In times of trauma like that we need to make sure that people have access to counselling services. I'd be very happy to work with this member and with the association of assault centres and the communities to see how we can get those kinds of services into those communities. It's very important work. It's important to be able to support victims in that way.

Mrs. Leskiw: My last question is to the same minister. Given the incredible amount of collaboration that has occurred between the Bonnyville and Cold Lake victim services, when does this minister plan to work more closely with these organizations to ensure that these services are provided for my constituents?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, my understanding is that the Association of Alberta Sexual Assault Services has worked with the communities of Cold Lake and Bonnyville to provide the counselling services. We'll continue to support AASAS regarding its ongoing strategy to seek support with the broader domestic violence community. But I can assure the hon. member that I will make a priority of talking with the association, with the communities, and with her to ensure that we can resolve this issue at the earliest possible date.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Child Poverty

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Sunday was children's day, but so far this week is full of grim news for children in Alberta. Yesterday the respected early childhood education index rated Alberta as the second-lowest province in the country, especially for failings around child care. Today a report from the Alberta College of Social Workers and others begins with the shocking news that child poverty in Alberta has increased by 40 per cent. To the Minister of Human Services: on behalf of the first minister of broken promises can that minister tell us why this government has not yet acted on the Premier's commitment to a poverty reduction strategy, something seven other provinces have had in place for years?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier has acted on her promise. She has appointed a Minister of Human Services and mandated that minister to put together a social policy framework, working with other social services ministers in government to make sure that there is a comprehensive process within government to make sure that there are no gaps in service, to make sure that vulnerable children are protected and supported and that families are supported appropriately so that every Albertan can live with human dignity and so that children can have the opportunity to maximize their potential. Exactly the mandate that this minister has been given.

Ms Notley: Well, given that it sounds like actually no action has been taken on the poverty reduction strategy and given that 1 in 8 children under the age of six, 34,000 little children, live in poverty in Alberta and that nearly half of them live in homes where at least one person works full-time, will the minister agree to immediately undo the shame of this government having the lowest minimum wage in the country?

Mr. Hancock: Well, in fact, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member ought to know that the lowest minimum wage is not the only circumstance in this province. We have the highest personal exemptions for taxes, the lowest tax rate for individuals, and a much higher than the hon. member indicated after-tax take home for individuals. She should also know that we have the highest participation rate and the lowest unemployment rate; therefore, most families have the opportunity for a good job in this province. But we are working through Alberta Works with those families that need to improve their skills so that they can get a better income. There are very few people actually earning the minimum wage in the province, but we want to ensure that every family has the opportunity for a good job and a good income.

Ms Notley: Well, given that the minister doesn't understand the minimum wage, I'll ask my next question to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Given that extensive research identifies secure, affordable housing as an essential component of dealing with the poverty experienced by these children, will this minister reverse the decision to cut funding to Edmonton and Calgary, the termination of which will see over 1,000 Alberta families out of their homes this Christmas?

Mr. Griffiths: Mr. Speaker, the funding that was given was block funding to municipalities over a five-year period so that they could build affordable housing. Eleven municipalities chose to use it for rent supplements. The provincial rent supplement program still exists. They don't operate on a first-come, first-served basis. They give it to the most high-needs people in each municipality. Our programs work fantastically.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Southwest Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The failure to build the Calgary southwest ring road frustrates Calgary commuters, businesses, and truckers, and it seems like now the talks with the Tsuu T'ina Nation are on the back burner. To the Minister of Transportation. The Premier committed during the leadership campaign to either secure an agreement with the Tsuu T'ina Nation or build a road through Bragg Creek along highway 22 or 22X. Can the minister tell us what plan is going forward?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to say that I have been talking to the chief of the Tsuu T'ina Nation, and I will say that we've had good discussions. We met. I had some questions, and so did he, and we're going to meet in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Premier stated in her first election campaign that if elected MLA, she would get the southwest ring road done and still after almost four years nothing has been done, can the minister, with a straight face, tell us: is progress being made?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In fact, progress is being made all the time. As I said a couple of seconds ago, I had discussions with the chief of the Tsuu T'ina Nation, and we are continuing to have discussions. So is progress being made? Very much so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the progress being made is at a snail's pace. I think we have to speed things up, Mr. Minister.

To the Minister of Transportation again: given that Alberta Transportation's own website lists ongoing consultation of new possible roads for the ring road, none of which fulfill the Premier's campaign promise, will the minister commit to ending the Calgary southwest ring road planning study started in December 2009 or . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister, please.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I need to say that when we have discussions with the Tsuu T'ina Nation, we are having discussions, progressive discussions, about the needs of the Nation as well as the needs of Calgarians and the surrounding province.

Twinning of Highway 43

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, this government made a commitment a number of years ago to twin highway 43 from west of Edmonton to the B.C. border. Here it is many years later, yet there are still several two-lane sections on this road. My questions are to the Minister of Transportation. Can the minister tell me when he expects his department to complete the twinning of highway 43?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, we are making excellent progress. That is a 450-kilometre section of road that we have committed to paving. We have done 400 out of 435 kilometres from Edmonton to Grande Prairie. We are at the point of having only 35 kilometres left, and I can tell you that by 2013 that will be completed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental question is to the same minister. Some of that construction is taking place through the Sturgeon Lake Cree Nation where there were reduced speed limit signs through the construction zone. Can the minister tell me why the reduced speed limit signs are still up even though the construction season is now over?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, the construction season is not over. In fact, the 80 kilometres an hour speed limit has been put up. There is still work being done on that road. It is for the safety of travelers and also individuals that are working. When that road is done and the people aren't there and the construction isn't taking place, I'll remove the signs.

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, the Grande Prairie bypass is a priority for the city as it will alleviate a lot of the traffic pressure within the city, which will improve ambulance access to the new hospital. Can the minister tell me when this project will be completed?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it sounds like a lot of things are happening in the Grande Prairie area. The eastern half of the bypass was completed in 2010. Ninety per cent of the planning and the design is under way for the other portion – we are still in the process of land acquisition – and we're continuing to work on that section.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the signature promise of the Premier's leadership campaign was her promise to the teachers' union to pump $107 million back into that system. She promised that the money would come from in-year savings and told Albertans she would not dip into our ever-dwindling savings. Last night, however, the Education minister signalled that she may back down from that promise by refusing to say where the money will come from. To the Finance minister: is the Education minister just ill informed, or do you really not know where or how you'll pay for the Premier's education promise?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's no ill informed on this side of the House. I think there's a fair bit on the other side because what the minister clearly said – I quit counting after about 15, 20 answers, the same answer to these members last night – is that that will be accounted for when we do our year-end accounting.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, it's a promise on hope and not on thought.

Again to the Finance minister: given the endless examples of this government's wasteful spending and given the litany of examples that we have suggested where that money can come from, such as eliminating the cabinet pay hikes, scrapping carbon capture, or extending infrastructure projects by one year, perhaps a meeting with our Finance critic on your budget could help you walk through and show you how to prioritize and where to find the money.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to talk a little bit about the report that was released yesterday by the Fraser Institute. It talked about this province and this province's finances being in the best shape of any state or province in North America. So, you know, these particular individuals can continue to flail away at certain expenditures, but we'll have a time pretty soon when the people of Alberta will pass decision on whether we're spending money appropriately or whether these folks are focusing on something that Albertans really don't care much about.

Mr. Hinman: Isn't it great to brag about a deficit of $6 billion cash. Unbelievable.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll direct this question to the other deficit twin, then, since the Finance minister doesn't seem to have a clue. To the President of the Treasury Board: given that your government continues to push back its balanced budget target date because of unbudgeted spending, will you commit here and now to find the $107 million in this year's budget so that our savings aren't sucked dry and so that your balanced budget target isn't so far away you can't even see it?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's interesting that they're trying to suggest that we have pushed out our targets. I think I answered the question quite clearly in the news scrum, at which I saw some of the hon. members diligently taking notes. They obviously must have lost them, I guess. We did say that our target was 2013-14, and we did also say, when we announced the funding for the $107 million, that we would find that within in-year savings. The Auditor General has said, as the Fraser Institute has said, that we do the best books in the country and North America bar none. We're pretty proud of that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffer.

2:30 Canadian Energy Company Acquisition

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Saskatchewan government recently blocked the sale of PotashCorp to a foreign company, citing that potash is a strategic resource. Here in Alberta Chinese-owned Sinopec has been shoring up their interest in Alberta's energy resources, the most recent being the proposed purchase of Daylight Energy. To the Minister of Energy: will the Alberta government allow this sale to go forward?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, I should clarify, first of all, that the decision of whether or not a foreign company can buy a Canadian-based company when the price is over $320 million is actually federal, not provincial. It's under the federal Investment Canada Act. The federal government makes the decision: is that in the best interests of Canada?

With respect to Alberta, though, we certainly look at what's in the best interests of Alberta. With respect to Daylight and the oil and gas industry we know that there are hundreds of foreign companies active here. It's a capital-intensive business. Many foreign companies already have a stake here. There's no precedent being set.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you, Minister. How is this different from the sale of Potash in Saskatchewan?

Dr. Morton: The situation between potash in Saskatchewan and oil and gas here is quite different, as is the situation of Sask Potash. The concentration of resource in Saskatchewan is that it has most of the global supply, and there are only four or five operators there. Sask Potash has 20 per cent of total global reserves of potash. Here in Alberta Daylight produces 37,000 barrels of energy equivalent a day. That's less than 1 per cent of Alberta's total production. So there's no real parallel at all.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: No further questions.

Funding for Private Schools

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, this summer when the now Premier was stumping for her new position, she participated in an educational debate where she said the following: what I am quite concerned about right now is that we could very well see, with the continuing development of private and charter schools, the public system being a second-tier level of education, and that can't happen. To the Minister of Education: since you became minister, has the Premier had a chance to indicate to you this concern, that she previously discussed in the debate at the Alberta Teachers' Association summer meetings?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, obviously the Premier, like myself and any other parent, is concerned about making sure we have the best education possible. Every parent as a partner in education wants to make sure their children receive the best education possible.

You know what, Mr. Speaker? A little bit of bad news. I said already in this House that the Prime Minister of the U.K. just told us that Alberta has the best system of education in the entire English-speaking world, and he was referring to the public system. Yes, we do have private schools and charter schools and Christian schools and Islamic schools. The list goes on and on. Altogether that's what makes Alberta Education so great.

Mr. Hehr: To the same minister. Given the Premier's words can the minister explain why this government is currently subsidizing some elite private schools, some that charge parents up to $17,000 a year, with provincial tax dollars?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, again, as I said, that's what makes Alberta Education so fabulous. This member would like to misrepresent private schools. As a matter of fact, the majority of private schools are not elitist. I have a private school in my riding, the Islamic Academy, where I would venture to guess that the average income of the parents could possibly be below the provincial average. We want choice for parents. We want choice for children. Children learn differently. Parents have different values and different expectations. In Alberta we offer a full buffet of education that suits everybody's needs.

Mr. Hehr: Given that my previous example makes it clear that in the main the average working family cannot afford private schooling, will this minister take the Premier's words to heart and look at cutting funding to private schools?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the answer is simply no. Again, what this member is doing is misinterpreting what the Premier may have said. The fact is that I know of private schools – I have private schools in my riding – where, as I said earlier, the majority of children in that school are children of immigrants. The average income is probably below the provincial average. To misinterpret the reality of private schools is simply wrong. Our kids deserve choice. Our parents deserve choice. They deserve the best education possible, and they're getting it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Crime and Safe Communities

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. From listening to our constituents express their concerns about the police budget in Calgary and the recent incidents of shooting, my questions are to the hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. Given that safety and security are among the top priorities of our constituents and our government, what can the minister do to ensure the safety and protection of Alberta residents, particularly in Calgary?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I've mentioned before, since 2008 this government has provided $12 million of funding in lieu to the city of Calgary for 123 new police officers, some of which actually patrol the member's constituency in the inner city in Calgary-Fort. But it's not just about cops on streets; it's also about attacking the root causes of crime, and that's what we're doing through our safe communities initiative.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same hon. minister: how can the minister be sure that the safety and protection of all communities are preserved in these tough economic times?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. During this difficult time we are continuing with police funding of $435 million this year province-wide. Of course, that does include the member's beautiful constituency of Calgary-Fort.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same hon. minister: moving forward, how will the minister ensure that provincial funding does not simply top up the reduction in the municipal budget?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. That is a good question. I've mentioned before how the province has stepped up for our cities, our towns, and throughout the province in dealing with police funding. Realistically, whenever one particular municipality goes and complains about funding, it's unrealistic to expect the province to backstop it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Inspection of Long-term Care Facilities

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A question to the Minister of Seniors, please. Why has this government failed to set uniform province-wide inspection systems for long-term care facilities six years after the office of the Auditor General demanded that it be done?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, our department does set the accommodation standards and the fees. We do inspections. Under the great leadership of the previous minister that was posted on the website so that we can all see it and enjoy it for our evening reading.

Mr. MacDonald: Given that last year Alberta Health Services spent over half a billion dollars on facility-based continuing care services, why again has this government failed to approve updated standards for facility-based continuing care? Your version of this is totally different from what the office of the Auditor General suggested to the media and the public yesterday.

Mr. VanderBurg: Again, Mr. Speaker, I'd really like to tell you that there's a great care facilities review committee. There's great work done by this ministry. Today I had an opportunity to look at the website. You know, if any of you from Edmonton are interested, there's the Dianne and Irving Kipnes Centre for Veterans, the Edmonton Chinatown Care Centre, the Edmonton General Continuing Care Centre, Extencicare Eaux Claires, Extencicare Holyrood, Good Samaritan Society. It's all public. You can read about it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: if all of this is true, why are there so many discrepancies in the current inspection system for those facilities?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, of course it's all true. It's all on the website. We're transparent. We have a great process and a great group of administrators to make sure that these facilities are reviewed each and every year. If a complaint comes up, we'll address it.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the question-and-answer period for today. Nineteen members were recognized. There were 112 questions and responses.

In 30 seconds from now we're going to continue with the Routine.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Community Funding in Edmonton-McClung

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I would like to speak about two initiatives of the Alberta government that have made an important impact in the constituency of Edmonton-McClung over the past three and a half years, the community facility enhancement program, CFEP, and the community initiatives program, CIP. Both provide critical funding to support local organizations to improve the everyday lives of Albertans.

Since 2009 organizations in Edmonton-McClung have received an incredible $1.6 million in funding. CFEP grants have helped almost every community league in the constituency to build or renovate their playgrounds, skating rinks, and other important facilities. Over $200,000 in CFEP funding has been given to the Ukrainian Orthodox Church of St. Anthony to expand its cultural hall, and another $200,000 has been provided for facility upgrades at the Jamie Platz YMCA. In addition, government of Alberta grants have helped to make a reality both the west Edmonton water spray park, an investment of $125,000, and the Callingwood skateboard park, an investment of $425,000.

Over the past three years 13 out of the 15 schools in my constituency have also received CIP grants to help support technology upgrades, including new computer equipment, Smart boards, and musical instruments.

Mr. Speaker, the schools and community organizations in Edmonton-McClung have been able to do so much for their communities through the aid of CFEP and CIP, for which they are most appreciative. I'm pleased that our government has been able to support their admirable community spirit and initiatives through such funding.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay

Adoption Awareness

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in recognition of Adoption Awareness Month. Each November we recognize Alberta families who have opened up their hearts and adopted children and youth, giving them a permanent, loving home of their own. This gift is something that many of us take for granted.

This month is also a time when we need to think about the children and youth in government care who are still waiting to be adopted. Alberta has approximately 200 children or youth ready and waiting to be adopted by families who will help ensure that these kids have the love and support they need to reach their full potential, something all children and youth deserve.

Alberta's adoption program does a terrific job of placing children and youth with families who really care. As a result, our program is considered by many to be one of the best in the country. In the last fiscal year 551 children or youth were placed in permanent homes, which, I'm pleased to say, more than exceeded our government's goal.

Our adoption programs take a proactive approach with initiatives such as the successful Wednesday's Child televised segments and its unique website that profiles Alberta children and youth available for adoption. This program also includes A Child's Hope, which is a grassroots strategy that gets people talking about the many benefits of fostering, providing kinship care, adopting or mentoring a child or youth.

Mr. Speaker, our government's involvement in adoption does not stop at the time an adoption is successfully completed. We also offer postadoption supports and services that include financial assistance through the supports for permanency program. This program provides financial support to families who adopt children in government care to help cover the costs of the child's day-to-day needs and some of the additional services the child may require.

We are also available to provide postadoption information and reunion services through the postadoption registry. To find out more . . . [Ms Woo-Paw's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Premier's Election Promises

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On October 2 this Premier surprised quite a few people, including most of those sitting on that side of the House, when she was selected leader of the PC Party by just over 37,000 PC Party members. She won that vote by a razor-thin margin of 1,600 votes over her chief opponent, Gary Mar.

How did she pull off this narrow and improbable victory? Well, quite simply, she made a whole lot of promises. She said that if PC members elected her, she would usher in an era of openness and transparency and end the era of the good old boys' club. Well, it worked, barely, but it did work. Enough people bought into the promises, and our new Premier was crowned.

What has followed, though, has been a literal tsunami of broken promises and half measures. Her promise to call a judicial public inquiry to be conducted prior to the next election, gone. Her promise to set fixed election dates turned into fixed election seasons. Her promise to find in-year savings to pay for $107 million in education cuts, out the window. Stopping bills 50 and 36, nada. Her promise to be more democratic turned into a cancellation of the fall session and then four days to debate six highly controversial and complicated bills before they are rammed through faster and more crudely than her predecessor ever did.

One has to ask: would we have a Premier Gary Mar today if PC voters knew how many promises the current Premier would eventually break? My guess is, especially in such a close race, that Gary Mar would indeed have been our Premier today. It appears the broken-promise strategy worked and worked well. Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me. The bad news for this Premier is that Albertans are nobody's fools.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, before we move on, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always an honour to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly individuals who wish to come and visit Edmonton. We have a couple of youth groups from Lindbrook and their leaders. They visited earlier today with the hon. members for Cardston-Taber-Warner, Calgary-Shaw, and myself and asked many pointed questions to government. I'd like to introduce them. I believe they're in the members' gallery: Dana Adams, Cristin Cahoon, Roberta Tiedemann, Samantha Woodruff, Haley Roe, Cailin Cahoon, Sam Cahoon, Jazmin Roe, Kana Oshima, Mei Tsuboi, Betty Lou Roe, and Will McCauley. I wish to have everybody give them a warm welcome.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The Minister of Finance.

Mr. Liepert: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with the Gaming and Liquor Act and the Government Accountability Act I am tabling the appropriate number of copies of the 2010-11 Alberta Gaming and Liquor Commission annual report.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Centre – sorry – Edmonton-Centre, then Calgary-Buffalo.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As you know how delighted and honoured I am to represent the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre, I would like to provide the Assembly with the appropriate number of copies of three tablings that the Leader of the Official Opposition referred to during his questions in question period today. The first is a copy of an Edmonton Journal article, Emergency Waiting Times Not Improving.

The second is a copy of the Alberta Medical Association president's letter dated November 14, 2011, in which they are specifically referencing the interim report of the Health Quality Council of Alberta and in which it validates allegations of physicians being intimidated.

Finally, stapled copies of two memoranda issued by Alberta Health Services, both of them dated the 14th of September – one of them is actually timed – one referenced about critical demand for in-patient mental health beds and associated discharges, then an additional one on addiction and mental health bed pressures, that was more widely circulated. Those were referred to. There you go.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter from Ms Kathryn Braun in Calgary, who has a letter addressing her concerns on Bill 50 and what it could do to the electrical system here in Alberta.

The second letter is from the Canadian Civil Liberties Association to Lauri-Ann Turnbull, board chair of the Greater St. Albert Catholic schools, asking some pointed questions about the legal basis for not providing secular schooling in that area and asking for a meeting to explain the position.

Anyway, I believe that I have the appropriate copies to be tabled as we speak.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a petition which contains 923 signatures gathered by Women Together Ending Poverty. The petition reads:

We, the undersigned residents of Alberta, petition the Legislative Assembly to introduce measures into the 2012 budget that: 1) increase the minimum wage to $14.00; 2) reform Alberta Works policy and increase benefits in accordance with the living wage; and 3) increase AISH benefits in accordance with the living wage.

I have the appropriate number of copies.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others? Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm sorry. I neglected to table a very important tabling, and that is from one of my constituents who is asking for help to implement a publicly funded insulin pump program for Albertans with type 1 diabetes. She notes that Alberta is one of only three provinces that don't pay for this and that "Albertans with annual incomes greater than $15,000 face the highest out-of-pocket costs in the country."

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Privilege Misleading the House

The Speaker: Hon. members, on October 24 the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona gave notice to the House about wanting to rise on a point of privilege. We heard submissions on that date, we heard submissions on November 21, 22, and today it is the opportunity for the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek to enter his thoughts into the record.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've had a chance to read through the hon. member's purported point of privilege, in which she alleges that I somehow misled this Assembly. This is absolutely false and otherwise totally incorrect.

I have enormous respect for this Assembly, for all the members who sit in it, and also for the democratic process, and I feel honoured, as all members do, to be sitting here serving my constituents and all Albertans. I take my duties and my responsibilities very seriously in that regard, and I know other members do, too. Therefore, regarding the baseless claims that were made in the member's submission, I appreciate this opportunity to respond and to defend myself.

It is clear at the outset, Mr. Speaker, that the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona's point of privilege is based on a fundamental lack of understanding of government processes and is based on a misinterpretation of some of the facts. It is a known fact that the government of Alberta embarked on various information-gathering initiatives over the past several years and that this information was gathered through, by, and/or from surveys, meetings, and consultations with stakeholders and with Albertans in general. In many cases Albertans were encouraged to also submit their own comments, ideas, and opinions voluntarily, and the response was quite outstanding.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta Health and Wellness staff routinely administer surveys that support these province-wide consultations, and they also personally attend many of the consultation meetings across the province, and they also review the submissions. Thereafter it is these hard-working staff members who compile, collate, categorize, and otherwise organize that information, and then they may provide it as confidential advice to the minister for his or her consideration. It's apparent to me that that's precisely what occurred here.

In fact, on page 1 of that document, which was tabled, it clearly states under the title Issue, "The Ministry of Health and Wellness is seeking approval-in-principle of core concepts that may be reflected in a new health Act." Clearly, it is a ministry document. In other cases the information gathered may be used to inform or guide a printed report for the public such as the report from the Minister's Advisory Committee on Health, which I received last year and immediately released to the public.

In reality, we hear from the public and from stakeholders all the time regarding health care matters. With respect to the source of the information that informed the analysis of the Minister's Advisory Committee on Health report and with respect to what appears to have been reflected in the PowerPoint that was tabled in this Assembly, the truth is that the source really was Albertans. However, I must also add that in them being the source, which is what I said, I necessarily did not agree with everything that came forward in the form of advice. In fact, in this Assembly I indicated that there were certain parts that I outright rejected.

However, I also want to make it clear that when you are reviewing the myriad of issues that comprise health care, the department may do additional research on its own, and that might include reviewing information and data from other levels of government, from other provinces and jurisdictions, and even from other countries. Therefore, I did not mischaracterize the source of the information, as the member alleges.

Moving on, Mr. Speaker, I certainly did not deliberately mislead the House through any statements that I made here. The member is challenging a statement that I made when I said that a document tabled in this House by the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, a document which he later stated was a PowerPoint dated July 12 of last year, is not a document that I authored. I did not author that document. In fact, as I indicated one year or so ago, it was created by officials in the Department of Health and Wellness. So once again I have been forthright about who wrote or compiled the document or the documents referenced by the member.

Let me also address the member's contention and/or inference that I was responsible somehow for an alleged government plan to privatize health care. Nothing could be further from the truth, Mr. Speaker. My commitment to a strong, publicly funded health care system remains steadfast, as evidenced by my own actions. Look at the historic five-year funding plan for health care that I introduced as part of our budget, a plan that guarantees for the first time in the province's history and for the first time in any province's history across Canada a commitment of 6 per cent increases to health funding in each of the first three years, followed by increases of 4.5 per cent in years 4 and 5.

Look at the five-year health action plan that I introduced, a plan that sets out a clear road map for the direction of health care in Alberta, along with 50 very specific key performance measures to publicly monitor our progress. Look at the multibillion-dollar infrastructure plans for health facilities and equipment that I coannounced in 2010 and 2011. Mr. Speaker, most of all, look at the Alberta Health Act, that I presented and defended in this Assembly last year, an act that clearly states in law our commitment, including obviously my personal commitment as a minister, to the principles of the Canada Health Act, as requested by Albertans.

When one considers these factors, I would challenge anyone to conclude, as the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona erroneously did, that somehow I had a privatization agenda in mind. Clearly, I did not, and my actions certainly prove that. It should also be noted that these plans I just referenced and all of these commitments are all public documents and that all of them support our publicly funded, single-tier health care system.

In summary, I did not fail to acknowledge the actions of my ministry, as the member alleged. In fact, on December 2, 2010, in response to Calgary-Mountain View's question in this regard, I stated, "That is a departmental document that reflected views, opinions, comments, and ideas by Albertans, so you might say that it came from a variety of sources right across the province."

Earlier, on November 30, I also said, "It is not a document that I authored," which is also true. I did not write that document.

Furthermore, the member herself acknowledged this fact just two, three days ago, when she referred to the document in question and said that it was “a document that was prepared for the minister.” Then later on in her speech on Monday, a few days ago, she again stated: “We know that the document prepared for the minister in May 2010.” Clearly, Mr. Speaker, through her own statements in this House just a few days ago she understood that the documents she was referencing were not my creation. Why she would attempt to make it sound otherwise is baffling indeed. They were, in fact, departmental documents, as I indicated and as I acknowledged.

Mr. Speaker, I did not give any false information to this House ever, which the member again incorrectly alleged. She may have a misunderstanding of some of the facts and a general lack of knowledge of government processes and so on, and I can understand that. However, the facts remain as I stated them in this House about one year ago. I believe I already elaborated on that in my comments earlier today.

Finally, I most certainly did not prevent an honest and open debate regarding health care issues, as this member has alleged. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I encouraged that kind of debate at every opportunity, and my actions in this House and outside this House, with over 1,000 meetings, would prove that to be true. For example, I introduced Alberta's first-ever Alberta Health Act last fall, and that led to a very important, very lengthy, and very significant debate about health care right in this House, a debate that I felt was both open and honest even though I may have disagreed with certain things that some opposition members may have said. As Minister of Health and Wellness I also supported the Standing Order 30 motion in this House that prompted a so-called emergency debate in this Assembly regarding health care. It doesn't get more open and honest than that.

I can certainly cite other examples where I have encouraged and supported open and honest dialogue and debate regarding health care and other issues that are important to Albertans.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I wish to indicate quite emphatically that I did not make any misleading statements. There may have been some misinterpretations of some of the comments as understood by some of the members but certainly nothing that could be construed as a deliberate attempt to mislead. Therefore, I feel there is no basis to this point of privilege raised by the hon. member, but I shall await your final ruling in this respect.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, it'll be my hope that I'll be able to rule on this purported point of privilege tomorrow.

Orders of the Day.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, may I participate in the debate?

The Speaker: I'm sorry. No, sir. We've concluded it.

Mr. Mason: Okay. Thank you.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 25

Child and Youth Advocate Act

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Boutilier]

The Speaker: Before we proceed, the hon. Member for Fort

McMurray-Wood Buffalo concluded the discussion of this at second reading. He was the third member. Was the five-minute question-and-answer section applied? It was? Okay.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, please proceed.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is always an honour to be able to speak in this House as I acknowledge the extreme privilege it is for us to be in this Legislature and to actually get to participate in the debate, the discussion, and the direction that this province goes in and continues to go in. I just note that over the course of the last number of years, I recognize the extreme privilege of being able to do that, and it is so again today.

If you look at Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, you have to give the government credit for bringing in what looks like a very good bill that's going to help and assist many of our province's most vulnerable youth. Unfortunately, many youth in Alberta do not have the solid backing or the solid foundations that many of us here in this Legislature have been privy to, a loving family with food on the table and with parents doting over them to get to public education, skating, swimming; the whole thing. In fact, many children here in Alberta do not have the privileged an existence at all. Some may even say that it's downright disappointing, the existence of some of our youth. That was indicated today, I believe, in question period when it was highlighted that 34,000 children right now are living in poverty. That to me is something we should all be concerned about in this Legislature and we should be moving forward on.

But the Child and Youth Advocate Act can assist in some ways in dealing with youth who find themselves in turmoil, find themselves in a place of loneliness, in a place of despair. Whether that be in terms of violence in the home or even troubles with the youth criminal justice system many of these individuals have nowhere to go. You know, there are probably numerous reasons for this, some of which this Legislation can't always assist in. I understand there are limits to what a government can do to try and even the scale, so to speak, to try and give everyone an opportunity to the good life.

I noted today in the National Post, as it relates to the Child and Youth Advocate Act, that there could be some connections between this. The National Post was going through the rankings of how this province stacks up compared to other provinces in terms of support for, essentially, child daycare spaces, assisting families who are starting out and on their way. They noted that other provinces – Quebec has a $7 a day daycare system that tends to support young families, gives people opportunities to build lives and careers as well as ensure that their children are supervised and taken care of in a fashion that's reasonable and commensurate.

I also noted that it wasn't just Quebec but the provinces of Prince Edward Island and Ontario who also scored very highly on this. In fact, if memory serves – and I just read the article three hours ago, so it should – Alberta scored towards the very bottom of this country in terms of supporting these types of programs, which they noted not only assisted families economically as it allowed them to participate in the workforce; it assisted children in their development as it gave them a place where they could be nurtured and cared for when families are pressed to earn a daily wage and to try and put food on the table.

Possibly we need as a province to move in some of that direction to try and even the scales, to try and provide for these essential services, as other jurisdictions are doing and having quite a bit of success at, that would hopefully maybe not eliminate the need for a Child and Youth Advocate Act. I believe these situations will always exist, but it's still something to consider when we look at the number of youth in Alberta who are having difficulties and who need a service like the Child and Youth Advocate to not only protect their rights but to sometimes shepherd them through a system and a storm of life that is not necessarily their problem. It is their problem but is not necessarily caused by them directly, and they simply need that guidance and direction and that help and that hand up that governments are supposed to give people, especially the most vulnerable and even more so if the most vulnerable are our youth. We can never turn our backs on human potential.

That's what this act actually does. It assists in helping the lost, the people who are having difficulty finding their way, the people who have fallen through the cracks. In my view the government should be applauded for bringing in this act.

One of the neat things about this is that oftentimes on this side of the House we have called for an independent officer of this Legislature. That means they report directly to this House. There is no vetting of the report. There is no changing of the report. There is no politicizing of the report. The Child and Youth Advocate is prepared and able to do his work. We are allowed to see an unfettered, unpoliticized look at the good, the bad, and the ugly of what children are going through in our society. In my view, we can then get the best handle on how to assist those individuals when the storm of life is upon them.

This legislation also provides the legislative authority you need to establish the child and family services council for quality assurance and spells out its roles and functions and powers. This can be a very powerful tool. I know we were talking earlier in question period about a poverty reduction strategy and how this government is apparently going to a crossministry analysis and, I'd assume, a cross-services analysis, how this could play a role in the elimination of the poverty that was mentioned, where 1 in 6 children in this province are facing living in poverty. In my view, we have more wealth in this society, probably, than we have ever had.

The difficulty, when you think about that, is that if our society is wealthier than we've ever been, how is it that seemingly more children are living in poverty? You know, it's difficult to talk about the good old days because you always run into the question: were the good old days always that good? Nevertheless, I think if you go back in the annals of time here in Alberta, at least pre-1985, there were fewer children who were living in poverty and who were finding themselves in difficult circumstances. There seemed to be more emphasis on the public good and on our collective roles and responsibilities rather than the stockpiling of individual wealth and individual pursuits, which is something where I am hopeful that the new Premier may take us in a new direction if I may say so. I think that direction can be accomplished here. I believe that our electorate is ready for that direction and a new embracing of what it means to be an Albertan. Let's hope some of that plays out.

I think this might be sort of the tip of the iceberg. It may be one of those things that I'm hoping will signal this change in the way we have done business over the last 25 years in this province. If this does in some small way look to eradicate some of the differences and difficulties that some of our youth are facing, well then it's definitely worth it.

I know on this side of the House – and the good Member for Edmonton-Centre can correct me if I'm wrong – we've advocated for this for quite some time, long before I have been in the House.

If I have the history correct, we've been advocating for this for the last 12 to 14 years. We on this side of the House have seen this as a truly needed part of our social fabric and a recognition that things aren't always easy out there for youth.

If we look at some of the roles this youth advocate can play, one is with the criminal justice system. As you are aware, I'm a recovering lawyer, and I often found it difficult to wrangle through the rules of court and muddle through a legal file. I can only imagine the difficulties that many of our youth are facing, with difficult decisions and difficult options and always with a view to what can best assist them not only through that trial but being in front of a magistrate, a judge, who has their immediate punishment in their hand. But the youth advocate then possibly can follow up with that youth and say, "Hey, now that we're done with this, let's try and move on to the next thing," which looks for the bettering of that individual's future and the better of our society's future.

In the main I'm very happy that this act has been put forth. I applaud the minister for bringing it forth, his first bill as new Minister of Human Services. Let's hope this signals a new direction for what a future Alberta could look like, maybe with a little more emphasis on human potential and the development of that spirit and our public contributions to each other, which, from my view, would be a breath of fresh air.

Those are my initial thoughts. I look forward to taking part in this debate at a later time, and I will leave it to others to comment further on this bill, which, as stated earlier, I find is a refreshing step towards some openness, some transparency, providing this Legislature with the means to do some good on behalf of Alberta youth.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

All right. Who should I recognize next? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to join in the discussion on second reading of Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act. I haven't had time to read through the Hansard comments of the minister – these bills are moving quickly through – so I apologize for that. I may ask some questions that, in fact, he answered yesterday. I just haven't been able to read the Hansard completely to be able to prohibit myself from asking the question again.

A few things have occurred to me as I've gone through the act, and I'll just throw those questions out to begin with and then get into a general discussion. I'm wondering why under the office of the Child and Youth Advocate there are exemptions. Certain things do not apply to the office of the Child and Youth Advocate or any employee of them, and I'm wondering why this was done. Is this a regular clause that goes into bills like this? I don't remember seeing them. I guess that's why it kind of jumped out at me, the fact that it's an exception. It says that it doesn't apply in the matters of financial administration of the Public Service Act. So if I can get an explanation about that. This may well be a standard clause. I just don't know.

The next thing that struck me as a little odd – and I think I know where this is coming from, but let me just ask the question. When it's talking about the reports that are done after an investigation of a child who is a ward of the government – and I'm sorry; that's old-fashioned language. I'm not sure what is the language that's used now. I'm just looking for what the minister was referring to, but I'll call them wards of the state or children that are under the guardianship or protection of the government. It does say that when there is a report, the report “shall not contain any findings of legal responsibility or any conclusions of law.” I suspect this is because they’re not lawyers and it’s not court, but I’m still hoping that there is an expectation that the findings of the advocate would in fact have some finding of responsibility, if not legal at least some responsibility of where this went wrong, and also conclusions. So I understand that they can’t be legal conclusions, but I hope there are going to be conclusions. I’m just double-checking that.

This report that’s done when there’s a child who has a serious injury or a death: the name is not going to be disclosed. Again, I thought we were trying to get away from that. So I’m curious as to why it’s still in there. That was one of the big points people were talking about, that having the child advocate report to the Legislative Assembly rather than through the government process was making them more accountable; in other words, that it doesn’t get buried under a government ministry.

One of my things – and I’ve been pretty vocal about this in public and in the media – was that the name of the child shouldn’t be hidden if, in fact, the child has died while under the protection of the government. Yet I see in this clause that the report “must not disclose the name of, or any identifying information about, the child to whom the investigation relates or a parent or guardian of the child.” So exactly the same clause seems to be in there, and I don’t understand why. I thought that was going to come out.

What ends up happening is that we end up with mystery children. You know, we’re not able to put them in our consciousness as reminders that we should never do this again. We have all kinds of sayings in our society that try and remind us to not forget or that we will remember. Never forget this day. We’ve got all kinds. Today is remembrance day for motor vehicle collision victims. They’re there to make us remember these things.

When we can’t name a child, we lose them. They’re just nameless. They disappear into the system. Soon even the circumstances around their death disappear, as horrible as this is, referring to them as, you know, the hanging or the suicide. They become a “the something,” and then eventually nothing because we can’t distinguish this “the suicide” from that “the suicide,” so we refer to them by the manner of their death rather than by a name. I’m quite distressed that that seems to be the case.

You know what? Sometimes I read this legislation wrong, so perhaps I am wrong. I’m sure the minister will correct me if that’s the case.

We have the usual clauses about setting up an office and hiring people and having a budget and how they report and all of that, but I think overall this is something that people wanted. I think Albertans are very aware of our collective, our societal responsibility for vulnerable children, children that may not have the support of one or both parents or the support of a legal guardian. They’ve come into conflict with the law, or their families haven’t been able to provide for them, et cetera. They are vulnerable children, and the government has stepped in and taken over responsibility for them.

What the advocate does is provide a voice, an alternative that is nongovernment for a child to be able to go to and say, “I don’t think I’m being treated right,” or “I want to have a say in decisions that are being made that affect my life.” This is what the advocate can provide for them and, in fact, I think has provided for them all the way along. We’ve had a long history where we’ve had some really wonderful children’s advocates who have worked very hard, and this cannot be an easy job. It just can’t. You’re seeing children who really are distressed, and things have not gone well for them. This cannot be an easy job to go to Monday to Friday 8 to 4, and I bet you this job extends beyond those hours and those days as well.

We’ve had some children’s advocates who’ve really done a great job on advocating what the government needs to change in order to better look after children that are under their guardianship, but it’s always been surrounded by a great deal of controversy. We’ve certainly heard from some past children’s advocates that the government made it almost impossible for them to do their job, or the bureaucrats working under the instructions of cabinet ministers made it very hard for them to complete their mandate. They’ve gone public with that, which in this province is particularly difficult to do. Certain individuals in positions of power in the government have an ability to make life pretty tough for people that go public on them. We’ve got another bill in front of us that’s actually dealing with exactly that issue, with the doctors feeling intimidated by people set on them by the government.

Then we started to see that the government actually started to hire children’s advocates who were pretty quiet to begin with, and we actually weren’t hearing very much and then found out, to some dismay, that there’d been a failure to file for a very long period of time. It wasn’t even possible for the public, to whom we answer, really, any public that was out there, interested group or anybody working in children’s services, that wanted to see what the government was being told about how to improve their services and where things were going wrong. The reports I read did reference how many children’s cases they’d taken for children that had been injured or how many had been in trouble with the law or how many had died and some vague references like the suicide that referenced how they died.

Even what was being brought forward in reports eventually seemed to have been minimized, and as I said, I think it was five years’ worth had not even been filed. Eventually the minister or someone caught on to the fact that they hadn’t been filed. There was a big to-do in the Assembly at the time, and that caused the most recent round of advocacy from members of this Assembly but also from people concerned about vulnerable children outside of the Assembly, advocating to the government that this particular position and the office and support surrounding it be moved out from underneath the ministry and into a position that would make it now the sixth officer that responds to the Legislative Assembly, joining, of course, the Ombudsman, the FOIP commissioner, the Auditor General, the Chief Electoral Officer, and the Ethics Commissioner. This will be the sixth one.

I, in fact, sit on that Standing Committee on Legislative Offices. Indeed, they come before us several times a year to put their business plan before us and to get approval for their budgets and to answer questions that we have for them.

So it’s been a long history to get to this point. It once again proves that if you advocate consistently and firmly long enough, you will probably manage to change the government’s mind. I’m sure that the presiding minister is very happy to be starting off his stewardship of this particular department with a good-news bill, which is what this is.

Again, I’m trying to talk and read his comments at the same. I can see him in here talking about publication bans designed to protect the privacy of the children being clarified and simplified, but again I think that there’s a certain point where it’s in the public interest to know what went wrong and what happened. There is a certain witnessing function that the public takes over government actions that is important to uphold and to provide information for.

I think that this does expand the mandate. It does, I hope, make it more transparent. Certainly, there’s been a number of provisions put forward in the act that make the entire process more transparent.

3:30

My wholehearted support of this bill is tainted by that clause that I've discovered that, again, says that the name of the child won't be published if they have died under care. I can certainly understand and would totally uphold not naming anyone or anyone attached to them if the child is still alive. They don't want to have to go to school and have all the kids or teachers saying stuff to them in the hallway. I mean, other people just don't need to know that about you. They really don't. But I think if a child has died while in government care, that's a whole different ball of wax. It should be a whole different process in which we understand that there is something to be learned and something to be witnessed, and things should probably change as a result of that. At least we have to understand why. What were the circumstances that caused that with the child?

So thank you very much for the opportunity to speak in second reading. I am very supportive of the principle of this act, and I look forward to hearing other members, hopefully some government members, speaking on how they think this act is going to affect their constituents or people that they work with.

I don't have a lot of kids in the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. Mostly my children tend to be coming from families that are new Canadians or recent refugees or immigrants, and those communities tend to take care of their own. Their children – and I'm generalizing carefully here – tend not to end up in the system, so I actually don't have very much experience with, for example, child welfare cases as compared to some other constituency offices that probably deal with them on a regular basis. We get one a year, and we sort of freak out because we can't remember who we're supposed to call to try and work our way through this. Other things? Oh, yeah. Mental health? Yeah. We deal with it all the time. But children? Not so much.

I am pleased to see the progress that has been made here. I think it's a good thing, and I hope it's a good thing. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Government House Leader on this matter, question and answer. Proceed.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm sorry I missed the first point, so I'll have to go back and catch it. But the hon. member mentioned two points that concerned her: the section under 15(2) about no liability being found and section 15(3), I believe, about the name not being disclosed.

With respect to section 15(2), no liability to be found, I'd be interested in knowing whether the hon. member would agree that it's important that an investigation of this nature would not in any way be seen to impede or taint any criminal investigations so that liability can be found in the appropriate place.

I'd also be interested in her comments with respect to provisions of the act which allow for publication, in appropriate circumstances, after applying to a court so that the court can actually look to see who else's rights might be affected by a disclosure and whether she doesn't believe that the provision which says that the name will not be disclosed in the report is a safeguard, understanding that that particular child is dead but understanding that disclosing that child's name would disclose status with respect to the rest of the family and perhaps other children and others that might be affected. Therefore, it may be more appropriate to actually have the application process for the publication of a name in appropriate circumstances.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much to the minister for the question.

To respond to his first question – did I agree that the advocate shouldn't do anything that would impede a later legal finding or any kind of further legal process? – yes, but in a lot of cases there is no further legal process. I just don't want to see this kind of disappear into the ditch where we don't get any conclusive findings from the children's advocate. It never goes any further, so what did we learn? It's not there, right? I think there have to be some conclusions that are found by the advocate. Yes, I agree that it shouldn't impede any legal findings, but a lot of times you don't have legal findings. So how does that get balanced? I guess I'll throw that question back at the minister.

I'm not clear on the publication ban because I actually haven't been able to read enough about that to understand where it comes into play. Yes, as you know, I'm very interested in privacy rights. I'm very interested in who is holding information about whom and who else gets to see it and for how long it's kept and all the rest of that. My concern is that we fail to learn the lessons and we fail to share the lessons that we've learned if we make a child nameless. I'm hearing the difficult situation that's presented because if you go out there and say, you know, "Johnny B, who died in this manner," a number of people would be able to connect that one way or another with the Black family who had had a child die in a certain way and would be able to figure this out. Therefore, the taunts aren't transferred to the child no longer there but to siblings and parents and people associated with the family.

To be honest, if the child wasn't a ward of the government, wasn't under government care and they died in a playground mishap or disturbance or event or in a motor vehicle collision, their name would be shared. Their family is still out there, you know, with people knowing that somebody died in a certain way connected with their family, and they deal with that.

So I think we've got to weigh this very carefully, and I'm not sure if we've weighed it enough in what I'm seeing in this bill. That's my hesitation around this. I will look carefully as debate moves forward to see if it's been answered.

Just to refresh the minister's memory, the other question that I had was under section 8(3), the exemptions that are listed about the advocate: the standing committee can order that regulations under the Financial Administration Act or under the Public Service Act do not apply to the office of the Child and Youth Advocate.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.

Are there additional speakers on this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand up and speak to Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act. I'm actually pleased to support this piece of legislation, but I'd like to get some clarification, and I have some questions, like the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, in regard to the legislation. I'm hoping that some of that we can deal with in committee because we're currently in second reading.

I'd like to say that I think this is a long overdue piece of legislation. I know as a member of the Wildrose that in our policy one of the things that we brought forward was having a child advocate and having an independent child advocate, so it was nice to see the minister bring this piece of legislation forward. I do particularly want to say that there are some things I like about the legislation; there are some things that I'm not so sure about the legislation. I think by saying that I'm not so sure, it's probably that there's more clarification needed.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

I will say, though, as the former minister of children's services that it was an honour and a privilege and a pleasure for me to be able to work with the staff in the ministry of children's services. Their dedication within that ministry and what they try to do with children on a daily basis is absolutely beyond the call of duty. It's not a nice portfolio, as I'm sure any of the former ministers can attest to. The ones that seem to hit your desk as the minister are the ugly, ugly, ugly things. I think probably Albertans would be quite shocked if they knew some of the things that went on in this province and what was happening to our children in this province and what was being done to our children in this province. The dedication of the staff that work in the ministry of children's services.

I did have the privilege also, when I had the briefing with the minister – well, it was blind, actually, because it was over the phone, and I didn't have a copy of the three-column document. I know that one of the staff that was involved in the conference call is a lawyer that I've had the privilege of working with before. Her dedication to the area of children's services goes way back because, interestingly enough, she was assigned to me when the Protection of Children Involved in Prostitution Act was made Bill 1 in the Legislature by the Premier. She also showed a great deal of knowledge and a great deal of love for children in this province. I was feeling a little more comfortable knowing that Susan had actually been working on that piece of legislation, so I know that probably 70 or 80 per cent of this bill is done right.

I guess where I'm coming from is that I need to understand some things, and I'm hoping that during the debate – and I know the minister's staff is probably listening to this – they will be kind enough to provide some answers to some of the questions that I need to understand to make sure that the children in this province, under the auspices of the child advocate, will be well taken care of, and quite frankly we will have an advocate act that's probably the best in this country.

Unfortunately, I haven't had a lot of time to do research. The one thing about being a member of this opposition – and I've made this comment in the Legislature before – is that there are four of us. I have five critic positions plus one. We have limited staff. We have limited researchers. So a lot of the time my colleague from Calgary-Glenmore and I and my other colleagues that are sitting in this Legislature are spending an enormous amount of time doing our own research and, like all of the people in this Assembly, are working very, very hard to represent our constituents. But we're also trying to do five or six different critic positions, so time is very valuable in our lives.

I do know, Minister – and I know you're listening – that one of the pieces of legislation on the advocate, as I was doing research, that I quite liked and we have done some research on, that is being touted as probably one of the best pieces of legislation across this country at this particular time and having the biggest impact on children in the province, is the legislation coming out of British Columbia. We have diligently tried to go through their legislation and compare it to our legislation. There are some things that stand out, particularly in the B.C. legislation, that I think our minister needs to look at and, quite frankly, consider. He needs to be able to maybe tell me, when I look at some of the stuff that's happening in the B.C. legislation that I like – and I will apologize right now because I'm looking at a 30-page bill, and I haven't had the time to go word by word through the legislation. We will probably have that opportunity as we move through the process, more likely into committee.

But I would like to ask the minister about part 3, Representative's Functions and General Powers, which is the advocate's responsibility. They have a part in there that talks about:

The representative is responsible for performing the following functions in accordance with this Act.

And they talk about:

- (a) support, assist, inform and advise children and their families respecting designated services, which activities include, without limitation,
- (i) providing information and advice to children and their families about how to effectively access designated services.

Not a problem. I mean, I know the advocate does that now. I can see where that is more or less included in part (ii) of the advocate's roles, functions, and general powers.

- (ii) advocating on behalf of a child receiving or eligible to receive a designated service.

No problem. I can see where that would be a fundamental responsibility of the advocate.

- (iii) supporting, promoting in communities and commenting publicly on advocacy services for children and their families with respect to designated services.

A motherhood and apple-pie statement. I'm sure it's incorporated in all the advocate's responsibilities under Bill 25.

Now, Minister, here's something that maybe you can explain to me so I can explain to the constituents of Calgary-Fish Creek and, quite frankly, Albertans. You know as well as I know that there's nothing that tears more at people's hearts than to see a child that's hurt or sick or has died in custody or care or, you know, unfortunately, an animal. I need to understand. Under the B.C. legislation they have a section that reads:

- (b) monitor, review, audit and conduct research on the provision of a designated service by a public body or director for the purpose of making recommendations to improve the effectiveness and responsiveness of that service, and comment publicly on any of these functions.

When we were looking at researching, that means that the advocate has the ability to take it upon themselves to look at any issue even though it hasn't been brought forward by the government. That's one of the strengths of the B.C. legislation and, I would suspect, one of the criticisms of the B.C. government because the advocate has that ultimate responsibility to initiate on their own and to conduct and research on anything that you're providing.

Now, Minister, I have looked through here. I have not been able to find that in any of your sections, but I'm sure that you will clarify that for me.

Mr. Hancock: In 9(2)(g).

Mrs. Forsyth: He says 9(2)(g), undertake or collaborate. Is that the one you mean, Minister? I know we're supposed to talk through the chair. The minister is trying to talk to me, Mr. Speaker, so excuse me. I see 9(2)(g) is: "Undertake or collaborate in research related to improving designated services or addressing the needs of children receiving those services." What you're suggesting is similar to what is incorporated in the B.C. legislation. I appreciate that, and I'm not going to respond till we get some more clarification on what you're saying and what the act in B.C. is suggested to say.

Minister, I'd like to ask you a couple of other things. The B.C. advocate was allowed to access cabinet documents and reports on problems and how she found out how cabinet was handling things. Are you going to give the advocate the same power? There is nowhere in this document, in your bill that allows the power of the advocate to do that. I know that's a question where I look forward to your answer. The other question is: will the privilege aspect of information and reporting be something that protects the minister's office, or will it instead really be the removal of the barrier?

Now, the thing I see in here is more of a clarification if you don't mind, Minister. The advocate talks about raising the age of the mandate from 19 to 20, especially when you're dealing with developmental disabilities and things that have happened recently. I know that under your act you currently talk about "a person under the age of 18," including a youth who is receiving services, so that's under the age of 18. You then go on under the Child, Youth and Family Enhancement Act to "a person under the age of 22" because you've got that particular piece in your legislation that allows you to be able to access.

The last thing that I'd like to ask. One of the problems that we continually hear about is the high-risk youth who currently aren't receiving care. They're in and out of the system. They're receiving benefits under your department; then they're not; then they are. I think that's one of the areas that have to be caught. If you have a high-risk student or a high-risk child or youth, I guess, that's been in and out of the system, that's been on benefits and not having benefits – I don't see anywhere in there where you have these high-risk students. I know that the government has talked about capturing these high-risk children. If they're not receiving benefits but have been under your care, can they still be captured under the advocate?

That's about all I have to say right now, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to hearing the minister's comments. I also look forward to committee, and I'll be very interested in listening to the rest of the debate.

The Deputy Speaker: Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) five minutes.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow on the bill.

Ms DeLong: Thank you. There's just a question I wanted to get on the record regarding the children's advocate. Section 9(1) talks about the role of the advocate. I wondered: when it talks about the rights of the children, what does it mean by the rights of the children? Could it include a child's right to access to their parents? I just wanted to get that question onto the record and hope that we can get some clarity on that.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, on the bill the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The highlights of Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, are to establish the Child and Youth Advocate as an independent officer of the Legislature; to provide legislative authority to establish the child and family services council for quality assurance and spell out its role, function, and powers; to clarify and simplify publication ban provisions; to clarify confidentiality of information; to authorize the sharing of a child's personal information in specific circumstances.

In this bill the Child and Youth Advocate will become the sixth officer of the Alberta Legislature, joining the Auditor General, the Chief Electoral Officer, the Ethics Commissioner, the Privacy Commissioner, and the Ombudsman. Also, rather than reporting to the Minister of Human Services, as the child advocate currently does, the advocate will now be an independent body, which is what we've been asking for for a long time, and will report directly to the Legislature.

The scope and authority of the advocate will also be expanded to enable the person to monitor a child's welfare, which is paramount, and undertake systemic review at his or her discretion. The advocate currently has no authority to do so. As part of an expanded mandate the advocate will also ensure that children who find themselves in the youth criminal justice system have legal counsel by either appointing or facilitating the appointment of a lawyer to represent them.

The bill also authorizes the Minister of Human Services to establish a child and family services council for quality assurance, whose role will be to identify effective practices of and recommend improvements to the child intervention system. The council will also conduct preliminary reviews which are considered necessary of serious injuries and deaths of children in the child intervention system and will refer incidents to the expert panel it appoints for further, in-depth review.

The members of the council include the chair, who will be appointed by the minister. Interestingly, the Child and Youth Advocate will also be a member by virtue of holding that office. Given that the child and family services council for quality assurance can investigate incidents where a child in care is either seriously injured or dies and that the advocate is a member of the council but is unlikely to be the chair, this raises a question as to how the advocate can function objectively and independently at the same time that he or she is a member of the council of appointees that are beholden to the minister.

The bill will also clarify and simplify publication ban provisions and clarify confidentiality of information in instances when a public body is authorized to share the child's personal information.

Section 20 specifies that all information provided by a child to the advocate and all documents and records created as a result of the confidential communications between a child and the advocate are privileged information. Documents and records of the child cannot be used as evidence in legal proceedings.

Overall, Mr. Speaker, there are some questions about the bill, but having an independent advocate, I think, will be good. For those reasons I'll support the bill.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to get up and address and ask a few questions about Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act. Very pleased to see this coming forward.

There are two roles of government, in my mind. The first one, that we often think of as we come together as citizens, is that we want government to protect our life, our freedoms, and our property, but the second and most critical part is to pass laws and legislation that protect those who can't protect themselves. To me, this is what Bill 25 comes under. We need to protect those tragic cases where our youth are not able to protect themselves. We've had a sad history here in Alberta of not responding in adequate time or in appropriate ways too often. [interjection] Edmonton-Centre, stay calm.

Some of the tragic experiences as an MLA are to see people come into our offices that are facing life crises. My hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere was able to help an individual who had life-threatening surgery try to get reimbursed. Again today Shane Wambolt was here, who needed life-saving surgery, and it didn't happen. These were people that were in a situation where they could go out and take it into their own hands and do something though the government still hasn't responded in an appropriate time.

The reason why I bring those up, Mr. Speaker, is because when these tragedies hit Albertans, every one of us is vulnerable to that. There are times when government just for whatever reason gets bogged down, caught in technicalities, and doesn't seem to be able to move forward with common sense and immediate actions. When we go into our hospitals, if it's not a crisis or an emergency, often people wait for eight hours, 12 hours to get a response. When there's been an accident and they've come in on air ambulance or are critical, it's right now, and we've got some of the best in the world in response. But there are areas where we can't.

I want to talk a little bit about my struggles with Baby Elizabeth and the problems that they faced as the grandparents tried to save their grandchild from a tragic situation. They contacted the minister's office. They contacted social services and told them the problems. They went to the doctors. They went to the police. Nothing was done.

This child lost its life because of the inadequacy of our children's services here in this province. Mr. Speaker, it's wrong. The struggles that I've seen the grandparents have as they've come in and showed 42 days of trying to get and rescue their granddaughter, saying, "We will even look after them," with no response was just wrong. I hope that as we study and look at this bill, we'll realize that we need to act. It shouldn't take 42 days when a child goes in and has X-rays and has two broken limbs, and the medical people say that this is abuse, and nothing was done. It's wrong. When we have meetings that are held and questions asked but no notes kept, you have to ask: why would there be no notes kept? It just seems like all they were doing was covering themselves but not protecting those who needed to be helped.

Mr. Speaker, I apologize for getting emotional on this, but I've been with the grandparents, I've gone through this case, and it's tragic. It shouldn't have happened in Alberta, and it shouldn't happen while we're here. I hope that as we go through, we'll take the time to look at the details to make sure that we have a child advocate that can act, that you can call, and that something is done, and not go through weeks and months looking for an answer and then losing a child.

One of the concerns that I do have here – and our Premier talked about this in her leadership – is to have a serious incident review team, and I'm not sure that this is in here. One of the things that to me is critical, just like our emergency rooms, is that when someone comes in they can act and they can move now. I mean, the discussions that there were quotas, that we've taken too many children out of the home already, that we don't want to act prematurely: this is a real struggle. When we're trying to protect someone who can't protect themselves and who as a child can't even often speak for themselves, this is critical. We need to have the best people employed there. We need to give them the resources that they need so that they can act in a speedy and quick way.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, again, this legislation is all coming so fast and so quick. I appreciate the need of this coming forward, but we need to make sure that we have this right, not like some of our other bills where after three years we're still struggling to get it right.

Like I said, we need to have a response team. We need to empower the advocate so that they can actually move out and take the action that is needed. Again, sometimes we're going to perhaps overstep, but with the tragic deaths that we've had here in this province, we can't go forward the way that we have.

With that, Mr. Speaker, at this point I'd just like to move to adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 26

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Danyluk]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall on Bill 26.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Drinking and driving is an issue not only here in Alberta but all over the world. In my family we are victims of an accident which involved drinking. We are still feeling the pain. Although it happened in 1972, we are still feeling the pain and the suffering from that very tragic accident.

In 2008 in Alberta 22.5 per cent of drivers involved in fatal collisions were judged to be consuming alcohol prior to the crash, compared to 5.3 per cent of drivers involved in injury crashes. As people drink more, the severity of the collision increases as well. This does not only affect the vehicles on the highways and on the streets, but off-highway, too. Use of all-terrain vehicles is another source of alcohol-related deaths. Of Alberta's 100 ATV fatalities from 2002 to 2008, 39 people were found to be over the limit of .08 per cent. Those were out of the 85 who were tested.

In Alberta impaired drivers can face sanctions defined under the Criminal Code and those defined provincially by the Alberta administrative licence suspension program within the Traffic Safety Act. On the roadside an officer who has reasonable suspicion that the driver or person with the care and control of a motor vehicle has alcohol in their body may demand a roadside screening device test. Suspicion of alcohol in the body may come from physical signs, driving patterns, or statements made.

The roadside screening device doesn't measure the actual blood-alcohol level but instead gives a basic indication of whether or not the person's ability to drive is impaired by alcohol. The device indicates a pass, fail, or warning. While failing the roadside screening test is not against the law, it does give officers reasonable and probable grounds to hold a person further and demand they take a breathalyzer test. The breathalyzer is a machine which measures a person's actual blood-alcohol level. The intent of Bill 26 is to curb drinking and driving to make the roads safer.

Under the Criminal Code there are three offences: impaired driving, operating a vehicle with a blood-alcohol level over 80 milligrams of alcohol in 100 milliliters of blood, and refusal to provide a sample.

With Bill 26 we are not really aiming at repeat offenders, the drivers who are double the limit when they have their accidents. The bill is trying to change the culture – that's what the minister said – surrounding drinking and driving by lowering the limit for automatic punishment, licence suspensions and vehicle seizures, to .05 from a BAC of .08. That is going to not only affect the drivers which are under the influence of alcohol, that is going to hit Albertans who drink responsibly and who have a social drink.

According to the Canadian Restaurant and Foodservices Association, as the minister said, the hospitality industry has concerns that these proposals are not targeting those dangerous, legally impaired drivers that are responsible for alcohol-related accidents and fatalities. Alberta accident statistics confirm that the vast majority of alcohol-related injuries and fatalities result from impaired drivers at twice the legal impaired limit of .08 and legally impaired drivers who repeatedly drink and drive. They don't support the administrative penalties targeting ordinary responsible Albertans who occasionally enjoy a social drink with family and friends or a glass of wine or beer with their meal when eating out.

I know we have this law in British Columbia. The accidents have come down within that five-month period from a 45 average in the last five years to 22.

Ms Calahasen: You don't even drink.

Mr. Kang: I drink, but I drink responsibly.

Bringing in this law will bring unintended consequences for both the hospitality industry and the government. There is the potential for people who drink responsibly and drive to be wrongfully punished without a fair and impartial hearing under the law. There are significant business, employment, and family hardships for first-time offenders, losing their vehicles for a minimum of three days when they are not legally impaired. There is the potential for someone who operates a vehicle while legally impaired to avoid a conviction under the Criminal Code. Eighty-eight per cent of B.C. licensed CRFA members lost 21 per cent of their business in liquor sales in the six months following the new penalties. That will, in turn, have job losses.

That's not to say that, you know, we are against this bill or that we are supporting this bill, but we have to find some happy medium here so that the people who have an occasional drink or who have a social drink are not punished.

According to the CRFA a survey was done and licensed Alberta CRFA members confirmed that 84 per cent of respondents, 68 per cent strongly and 16 per cent moderately, oppose Alberta introducing tougher .05 to .08 BAC administrative penalties, and 82 per cent of respondents believe that introducing tougher .05 to .08 BAC administrative penalties will have a negative impact on their business, 63 per cent say very negative and 19 per cent say somewhat negative.

CRFA members do support alternative, more effective solutions designed to get dangerous impaired drivers off the road. Their survey indicates that 88 per cent of respondents support accelerating penalties and sanctions against impaired drivers the more they are over the legal impaired .08 BAC limit; 73 per cent also support stricter graduated licensing provisions for new drivers.

Implementing these penalties for a person who enjoys a social cocktail drink, a glass of wine, or beer with dinner will result in prosecution of responsible Albertans who are a questionable safety risk while devaluing the importance of criminal court sanctions.

There is no evidence that people between the limit of .05 to .08 are responsible for fatal accidents or are responsible for all the carnage on the road. According to the stats done by the Canadian Council of Motor Transport Administrators, most driver fatalities in Canada involve a nondrinking driver. For 2008, the most recent available data, 61.3 per cent of all fatally injured drivers had a zero blood-alcohol level. Of the fatally injured drivers who had been drinking, 85 per cent exceeded the limit that's allowed under the Criminal Code, so that's a blood alcohol limit of .08. The remaining 15 per cent were within the legal limit. For all the provinces the largest proportion of drinking driver fatalities is at blood alcohol concentration levels of more than .08.

Breaking down the BAC levels further, most fatally injured drivers who were tested had BAC levels more than double the legal limit. In Canada 22.6 per cent of fatally injured drivers had blood-alcohol levels greater than .16, with 10.3 per cent from .081 to .16. Only 2.2 per cent had blood-alcohol levels from .05 to .08. So it is only 2.2 per cent of people who have been involved in some kind of accident under the influence of alcohol. That really is a minimum, really a small number to be punishing almost everybody who is going to have a social drink or who is going to have a glass of wine with their dinner.

For the provinces this pattern also held, with only a small percent of driver fatalities in the .05 to .08 blood alcohol range. Overall in Canada a declining trend is evident with respect to the problem of impaired driving. Between 1995 and 2008 the number of people who died in motor vehicle crashes involving a drinking driver fell from 1,296 to a low of 790, a 39 per cent decline. Similarly, the percentage of alcohol-related crash fatalities decreased from 38.8 per cent in 1995 to 33.6 per cent in 2008.

According to Statistics Canada in the last two decades the number of impaired driving charges in Canada fell from 111,917 to 65,183, or by 42 per cent. The rate of impaired driving charges fell from 512 per 100,000 population aged 16 and over to 232, or by 55 per cent. At the provincial level, similar large declines in number and rate also occurred over the same period of time. More recently, following three consecutive annual increases, the rate of impaired driving charges in Canada fell 6 per cent in 2010 from the previous year.

4:20

The object of the bill is to touch a main area in the subject of road safety. It greatly strengthens administrative penalties for driving while impaired, including lowering the threshold for impairment by alcohol to .05 mg alcohol per decilitre of blood from .08. It does not introduce new driving restrictions on vehicle operators within the first six months of being granted a graduated licence. These changes are proposed through a separate regulation.

The act is increasing penalties for drivers with blood alcohol over .08. Alberta currently has a mandatory ignition interlock for repeat offenders, drivers with blood-alcohol levels more than double the legal limit, and those refusing breathalyzers. Alberta now has licence suspensions but no vehicle seizures for drivers above .08.

A change to penalties laid for drivers with blood alcohol over .08: an immediate suspension, which is ongoing until criminal charges are resolved. Will this stand up in the courts? People are going to challenge it. What is happening to the principle of innocent until proven guilty? This will also clog up our court system, which is already clogged up.

The first offence: ongoing licence suspension and a three-day vehicle seizure. Second offence: ongoing licence suspension, seven-day vehicle seizure. Third offence: ongoing licence suspension, seven-day vehicle seizure. Mandatory ignition interlock after a criminal conviction over .08 limit: one year for a first offence, three years for a second offence, and five years for a third offence.

For drivers found with blood alcohol of .05 and above, the board will also be empowered to make mandatory ignition interlock use by an individual after two suspensions or disqualifications within 10 years if it so chooses or if the board receives direction to conduct a review from the minister, the courts, or the registrar.

For drivers found with blood alcohol of .05 to .08, currently Alberta rules can nail a driver for impairment when the driver provides a breath sample below .08 if they have probable cause to suspect impairment, but in reality enforcement is near absent below .08 today.

The new rules would create new easy-to-implement and legally specific charges and penalties. Drivers are not subject to Criminal Code prosecutions below the .08 limit.

The first offence is a three-day licence suspension and three-day vehicle seizure.

The Deputy Speaker: We will continue the debate on the bill. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to rise and speak to this government's Bill 26, which proposes changes to the Traffic Safety Act concerning drinking and driving. The two main points are that those charged with impaired driving over .08 will have their licence suspended at least until their trial is settled, and those blowing between .05 and .08 will lose their licence and have their vehicle seized for three, 15, or 30 days.

I want to say, first off, that I appreciate and fully support the goal behind this bill. I hope every person in this Legislature understands the carnage and the pain that drinking and driving causes on our streets. Frankly, it's a plague, and it kills so many innocent people in our midst, not the least of which, of course, was the horrendous – horrendous – accident that occurred in Grande Prairie very recently. These are terrible things, and we should be doing everything that we can to eliminate intoxicated driving from out of our midst.

However, I want to be equally clear that this law, in my view, will not achieve that goal. In fact, I fear that because it will be so ineffective in doing so and will cause such a distraction to law enforcement, it may even result in the exact opposite, and I'm going to explain why.

Alberta's drinking and driving rates are higher than in most provinces, and this is unacceptable, as everyone here would agree. Clearly, with this bill the government recognizes that it needs to do a better job, and that is a good first step. Albertans do need to know that drinking and driving is not acceptable, and it is clear this government is not getting that message through as well as they should. I've often commented that I haven't been through a checkstop in at least 10 years in this province. That's a problem. That says to me that we're not doing a good enough job on our streets enforcing existing drunk driving penalties.

I'm going to explain why I think this drastic law uses the wrong tools and targets the wrong people. First, the suspension of licences until trials are over, I believe, is a legally flawed step because it presumes guilt on what is a pretty serious allegation, that of driving under the influence. This isn't a parking ticket. It's not one of those things where, you know, the car is parked in an illegal spot, and you get a parking ticket. There's a presumption that you need to pay that parking ticket. If you don't show up, you know – it's just presumed that it's a strict liability offence, as it's called, and you're going to pay the parking ticket.

This is not a parking ticket. This is much more serious than that. It is not only much more serious, the evidence surrounding whether someone is intoxicated at the wheel or not is a lot more difficult to prove. These breathalyzer tests are often not accurate. Most of the time they are, but oftentimes they're not. There are many different factors that go into proving somebody has driven under the influence. So it's not as simple and straightforward as a speeding ticket or a traffic ticket, for example. In other words, presuming someone is guilty essentially until proven innocent I don't think should be allowed in this case.

Second, it is pretty arbitrary in terms of the penalty. I feel that the penalties in this act penalize people more in parts of the province that have longer court delays than others. The Minister of Transportation admitted in the paper just the other day that it could be two years or more before a court would even get to hear this, depending on where you are in the province. Now, even if you support this punishment for people who haven't been proven guilty yet, it just isn't fair to punish some people more simply because their local courts are more backed up.

Like most Albertans I don't have any sympathy for drunk drivers who cause death and carnage on our streets, and I do think the government needs to find ways to make punishments more intimidating. That's the key. We need to hammer, absolutely throw the book at – criminally and administratively throw the book at – those who are the problem, drunk drivers, those who are blowing over .08, those who are repeat offenders, who go out and endanger lives over and over and over again. Those are the folks that we need to crack down on hard, not the folks that are blowing between .05 and .08.

I will say, though, that tougher penalties aren't the only thing that we can do to reduce drunk driving, and they probably aren't even the most effective. I think that more education, more public service announcements in our high schools in particular, and more checkstops – most importantly, more checkstops – and enforcement of our existing laws are the first steps we should be taking. Again, I haven't been through a checkstop in over 10 years. I travel that highway 2 between Airdrie and Calgary when I'm home in the constituency many times a week, evenings and weekends, and there are just never checkstops on that road. And I know there are drunk drivers. I've seen them on the road.

The bigger concern for me in this bill is the proposed administrative penalties. Seizing the car and licence of Albertans found with a blood-alcohol level of between .05 and .08 is very troubling to me. I don't think you have to be a lawyer to see what's wrong with this one. Today I'll narrow it down to four main criticisms.

My first point is that cracking down on drivers between .05 and .08 is going after the wrong people. I'm talking about the couple who are out on a date who have a glass of wine or two or a beer or two over dinner or someone who stops for a beer or two with his pals after work on a Friday night. Let me clarify one thing. This law doesn't affect me personally because I don't drink. These are the regular folks out in Alberta who will be affected, and they shouldn't be affected. They're law-abiding citizens that present no danger to the public.

The stats that I've seen are pretty clear, and they fit with common sense. According to a 2008 report of all the drivers who have been killed on our highways, about 60 per cent of the perpetrators of the accident, the ones who caused the accident, had no alcohol in their system. Of course, that's just because, obviously, there are a lot of accidents on the streets. So 40 per cent did have alcohol in their system. The next largest group are those that were double the legal limit, so they were more than .16 over the legal limit. That's about 22 per cent of those folks who caused fatal accidents.

So 60 per cent no alcohol; 22 per cent twice the legal limit. Then it's drivers between .08 and .16. That group is around 11 per cent of all fatalities caused on the roads. Then, if you can believe it, next place are drivers with an alcohol content between .01 and .05. They equal roughly 3.5 per cent of the accidents caused on our streets by everybody. Bringing up the rear, between .05 and .08 is that group. Around 2 per cent of the fatalities on our roads are caused by people who had a blood-alcohol level of between .05 and .08. Two per cent. This sounds like a very low level of causation to me.

People who are in favour of this law point to British Columbia. They point to how the law there has cut down drinking and driving and fatalities on the road caused by drinking and driving. Correlation, Mr. Speaker, is not causation. We should all know that by now. The administrative penalties in B.C. – and there are some differences in the legislation between B.C. and Alberta. In B.C. there's a lot of very stiff fines attached to this .05 to .08 level. Our proposed legislation here doesn't have those same fines. There are kind of indirect fines of impounding vehicles, and so forth, but there's no direct fines.

Because of that money, all of a sudden that became a cash cow. Of course, when you give politicians or police officers or police agencies, who obviously need money to do their work, when you make a cash cow out of something, guess what? Enforcement goes up. So there were more checkpoints, there was more enforcement, and because of that, yes, they caught more of the folks, not just between .05 and .08 but the people above .08. Correlation is not causation. The B.C. law did not cause a decrease in traffic deaths. The decrease in traffic deaths because of drunk driving was caused by more enforcement in the province of British Columbia, which is a good thing. That's good, but we should be able to do that in Alberta without resorting to these draconian measures.

I'm sure the government has found some different stats and studies, and I look forward to hearing about them. I do. But I don't think anyone can argue that the real danger in Alberta – I don't think there's any report that's going to be circulated here that doesn't conclude that the real problem, those who are causing by far the most carnage on our streets, are those who are blowing above the legal limit, particularly two times above the legal limit, but definitely over .08.

This is certainly what the federal government concluded. They examined a proposal recently to reduce the Criminal Code level to .05 and decided that it was actually a bad idea. They acknowledged that some people are impaired between .05 and .08 but decided that the existing laws were adequate; namely, the ability of officers to charge people with impaired driving regardless of what the hand-held breathalyzer says if the driver shows signs of impairment. That was good enough. They were not convinced that every driver between .05 and .08 deserves punishment, and neither am I. If an officer isn't sure and wants to err on the side of public safety, that's what the 24-hour suspensions are for.

I'm going to quote from today's Calgary Herald editorial just because I think that it brings forward some good points in an articulate way. They said:

The current 24-hour suspension is reasonable for public safety, referring to what I just talked about, but stiff penalties for people who are not convicted of any criminal offence is going too far, especially considering that hand-held roadside testing devices can be inaccurate and their results are not even admissible in court.

That's what the Herald editorialist thinks. Granted, that's just one opinion, but I think it's a practical one and a true one.

The power to hand out the 24-hour suspensions makes a lot of sense. If the police feel that a person might be a little bit impaired but not enough to warrant a criminal charge, they can suspend the licence for 24 hours, get that person off the road just to make sure. They can just err on the side of public safety. They're not sure if the person is intoxicated or not, so err on the side of public safety. I think that's good. I think we already have the tools in place to deal with these folks on the border, in the red zone.

The other issue is how this law is more unfair for rural Albertans. It's easy for the Premier or any other person from a large city centre to say that if you want a glass of wine with dinner, just take public transit home or a cab home. But I know that even in Airdrie cabs are not always convenient, and in more rural parts of Alberta they are nonexistent. My hon. colleague from Calgary-Glenmore can elaborate on this point in his comments as I know he's brought it up before.

I'd also mention the fact that the policeman on the side of the road is judge and jury on the spot. That's a problem. It's not something that I think I'm comfortable with within our legal system, to just have for such a serious offence the police officer be judge and jury.

Now, I'm going to jump to the argument that this new law will actually reduce the number of DUI charges and distract from the goal of actually getting dangerous drivers off of the road. Let me explain. I mentioned that police already have the 24-hour suspensions for those they judge to be mildly impaired or who blow between .05 and .08. They call you a cab, they fill out a one-page form, and they get back to keeping the streets safe. That's what they do now. But these mandatory seizures are going to tie them up a lot. They're going to have to babysit a person's car until the tow truck comes. Instead of 15 minutes, they're going to be tied up for an hour or two because your car needs to be taken away.

So my question would be: how many folks with a blood-alcohol level over .16 or over .08 are going to drive by this officer while he's waiting for someone's family car to get towed away? Our police are overworked as it is, and this is not a good use of their time. The .05 to .08, these people are not the problem. It's the .08s and above.

The other danger is that this penalty is strict enough that the police might start using it instead of going through with criminal charges for drunk drivers. [Mr. Anderson's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, on Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I'd like to ask the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere if perhaps he couldn't just finish what he was so eloquently sharing with us. It sounded quite pertinent.

4:40

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm almost done.

The other danger is that this penalty is strict enough that the police might start using it instead of going through with criminal charges for drunk drivers. They might say, "Look, we've got this other way to get them; let's not go through with the full criminal charges on the problem drunk drivers," the ones that are really blowing over .08, because that's much more complicated than just taking the person's car away at .05 or .06. While there will be a bit more paperwork than the 24-hour suspensions, it will be quite swift compared to a proper criminal investigation. I fear that this easy penalty has enough teeth that not only will the innocent be overpunished but the guilty will be underpunished.

In closing, I want to repeat that certainly I – and I'll let my own caucus speak for itself – side with the Albertans who are not happy with the job this government is doing to curb or prevent drunk drivers from menacing our roads, but I'm not convinced that the legally dubious suspension until trial provision and especially the targeting of those who have blood-alcohol levels between the .05 and .08 range is the way to go. I do not feel that this law is going to reduce drunk driving. I do not feel it is effective, and I feel that it is going to target people who are simply not the problem.

It's certainly going to hurt different industries, the hospitality industry for example, as we've seen in B.C. If we were really targeting and reducing significantly the amount of deaths on our roads because this law was effective – you know what? – the damage to the hospitality industry would probably be justified. But that's not the case. We're going to be damaging an industry, and we're not going to see any real improvement in traffic safety. That's what I fear.

I hope that the members opposite in the government would consider at least maybe putting this to an all-party committee so that we could take a look at it, so that we could get all the studies in, so that we could get all the facts in and try to come up with a solution that's actually going to make sense to the average Albertan.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I close my arguments.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, on 29(2)(a) or the bill?

Ms Blakeman: On the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: On the bill.

Ms Blakeman: Great. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise in second reading and comment on the proposals that appear under the government's Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, which sounds so innocuous considering the amount of to-do that is going to come out of this bill.

I just want to say from the outset that I really hope that I hear some of the government people on this. I know they always say: oh, we've already discussed this and made our decision, and that's why we don't say anything when it's in front of us. As a result I get your constituents writing to me, saying: why did so-and-so do blah, blah, blah? I have to say: I have no idea because they didn't debate. You know, what does Rocky Mountain House think about this? Or Calgary-Mackay? Or Drayton Valley, or Leduc, or Edmonton-Ellerslie? Boy, these seating plans change so fast.

An Hon. Member: That's because we're adding members.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Well, okay. Fair enough.

But, you know, what does the Member for Calgary-Lougheed tell his own constituents about how he feels about this bill? So I really do hope that we hear from those members and others in this debate even given the speed at which the Government House Leader would like us to clip along with this bill. You guys should be on the record with this one, so let's hear you.

I want to go back and start from the beginning. This bill actually is bookended by two pretty good ideas, which I suspect a lot of people are not aware of if they haven't actually read the act. The government talked about four things they were going to change here. One of them is not in this act at all and I gather is going to come from the regs, and that was the one about restricting or changing the number of passengers that young drivers or learner drivers or whatever they call them who are not family members – how many other people they were allowed to have in the car. I gather that they're going to do that through regs because I don't think it's in the act. That, I think, is a stellar suggestion because we do know that in having a lot of kids together in a car – and I can speak from experience – you do egg each other on and get to doing some stupid things, some stunting or talking and distractions from the road. It's a good idea to restrict that although, in fact, it's not appearing in anything to do with this bill.

What we do have in the bill are new administrative penalties around the mandatory alcohol interlocks for a period of time on the vehicles that are to be driven after current automatic suspensions are connected to Criminal Code convictions for driving over .08. Good idea. Good move. You've done that well. Glad to see it in the bill.

There's also talk in the bill about permanent interlocks and drug testing and monitoring that could be required for drivers who have two penalties within 10 years of driving. In here it's listed as .05. I would be happy to support that if it was .08, but I'm not agreeing with it at .05. You've got two fairly good things in here and then this political quagmire that you have created for yourselves here.

A number of times I've heard the language attempting to change the culture used in connection with this bill. I guess my question is: what are you trying to change in the culture? Are you trying to get people to not drink? Are you trying to get decent, law-abiding people who have enough to drink that they're over .05 but under .08 to not drink or for people to not drive if they have any alcohol at all in their system? For that I would say: okey-dokey; then pass that law because what we have right now, the administrative penalties that are being put in place here – the reason the government has to do administrative penalties is because drinking and driving under .08 is still legal. It's a legal activity. Nothing says that you can't drive under .08, right? The government doesn't have the flexibility, I would argue, to do this. Oh. He's giving me that look, so he's sure to get up and add something to the conversation.

That's my point. If it's Criminal Code, then there are Criminal Code sanctions. And the Criminal Code is that you can't have a blood-alcohol content of .08 or above and operate a vehicle. It's not to be done. It is determined that judgment is impaired at that point. I heard some of the talk in the media conferences about, you know, how your judgment could be impaired with a blood-alcohol content of less than that. Now you're into a very interesting place. Who determines that and how? Obviously, you're not talking about a lot of drinking. You're not talking about a binge drinker here. You really are talking about the difference between one or two glasses of wine, one or two or three beers. This is not, you know, a half-sack of beer. This is not a mickey that you're drinking really quickly out behind the community league. This is a very small amount of liquor that you are talking about, a very small difference in blood-alcohol content. What this bill is actually talking about doing is increasing administrative penalties for something that is a legal activity, and that I have a problem with.

I go back and say: okay; you want to change this culture. In particular, this appears under section 12 of the bill, which is amending section 88 of the original Traffic Safety Act. [interjections] I so appreciate the support from my colleagues, but if you could take it into the hall, you might enjoy yourselves more. I wouldn't be interfering with your ability to hear each other.

Changing the culture for whom? It appears that you're trying to change the culture for law-abiding, reasonable citizens because these are the ones that are drinking those one or two glasses of wine, those one or two beers. This is really going to affect women, those nice soccer moms that vote for so many of you, generally reasonable people – right? – people who would have a drink or two with dinner, people that might stop with their buds on the way home on a Friday night and take advantage of whatever strange martini they're drinking these days.

Let me point out to you the conversation I've already heard in the media about: oh, come on; you know, any woman could drink a couple of glasses of wine, and for sure they'll be under this; it's really not going to affect them. Okay. Well, the last two nights I've been fortunate or unfortunate enough to be in establishments that serve wine, and I have been very careful to say: "Oh, really? And how much wine is in that glass?" "Oh," they say, "six ounces or nine ounces." Really. Well, I can tell you that this girl, based on my metabolism, would be in that range. I'd probably be over that range with two nine-ounce glasses of wine. [interjection] It's a lot of wine. Exactly. How are you supposed to be telling this?

Now, we have the Government House Leader and minister for everything vulnerable in front of me here saying, "Well, if you drink at all, you just shouldn't drive." But I just don't think that's realistic. One, consuming alcohol is still a legal activity in this country. [interjection] I'll come back to that. He's making the point that kids do understand that and have designated drivers. But my argument – see, you got me off track. I'll come back to that one.

I think this is probably going to change the whole culture. I'm already telling the restaurants that I go to: I hope you can now create a four-ounce glass of wine because I won't be able to do the six-ounce or the nine-ounce glass of wine.

Okay. We're changing the culture because we're trying to not have anyone who drinks and drives on the road. I go: well, why? What is the problem here? Well, duh, it's an obvious problem. Drunk drivers kill and maim people, and they cost all of us, every taxpayer, every member of society, a whack of money through the hospitals, through the police services, through the courts, through the effect on production for their businesses, for the wear and tear on their families. It's almost endless.

Who is it that's doing the killing and maiming here? Well, you heard some statistics. I'll refer back to my colleague from Airdrie-Chestermere, who did quote you a long line of those statistics. Essentially, the people who kill and maim have blood-alcohol levels well over .08. These are the people in the .16 range, the .20 range. These are people that are really smashed, really drunk, really impaired. Okay? Not close to .08 but really, really drunk. The question is: why are they still out there?

Mr. Hehr: They're hammered.

Ms Blakeman: They're hammered, my colleague from Calgary-Buffalo says helpfully.

But my question is: so why are they still out there? Why aren't we catching them? Why are we trying to now go after soccer moms and accountants on their way home on Friday? Why are we after them and not after people that have a blood-alcohol content of .16, which is what we know really kills people? Well, it's just the way the funding has been working; there isn't quite enough funding for the police forces to be putting enough checkpoints out there, we hear. Ah, I say, so this is a question of funding and money. So the government, instead of appropriately funding the policing services so they can run enough checkpoints, which we know are effective, to be able to pick off those people that are truly drunk enough that they maim and kill – no, no – what they're going to do is put it all on all of us. This is just bad legislation. This is just bad planning. I'm sorry, but it is.

Sorry. Let me back up. You have two sections that are quite good in this bill. The section I'm talking about is 88, where they're talking about putting through administrative sanctions, losing your licence, having your vehicle impounded for three days, first offence, for a blood-alcohol content of between .05 and .08. That's what's wrong here. We don't have the funding that's going to policing to allow the checkpoints to operate and, I would argue also, just police patrolling. You know, if they're really patrolling a community that they know well, especially smaller communities and outside of Edmonton, they know who's a problem. They know where stuff is going wrong. They're able to take a better watch on people and steer people away from actually getting into their vehicle.

We know, as the minister has pointed out to me, that younger people already have the don't-drink-and-drive mentality. As a generation of parents we've just beaten that into their little heads. Good for us. For the most part, I think, they get it. They go with a group, and one of them is a designated driver. They seem as a generation – and this is a wild generalization; please forgive me for that – to travel as a pack more than we did. So you get two or three of them or four or five of them in a car, and one of them is the designated driver, who doesn't drink at all, and off they go. Good. I have no problem with that, and I have no problem, as I said, with the changes to the graduated learner licences. This would be really affecting our pages, by the way. I know they're very interested in this bill.

But that's not the way the rest of us live. I said to the minister: how often do you carpool to an event so that you can say there is a designated driver? Well, I need to be honest. Usually, I walk. I'm sharing a car with my partner, and he's also in politics. But there do come times when one of us does have the vehicle or is trying to pick up another one, and we're not able to carpool. We just can't organize things like that. Maybe the rest of you regularly carpool on your way out. Good for you. I can't do that, and I see a lot of people in this House that admit that they can't do it either.

One of the other sections that we see in section 88 that concerns me – and I want to be very careful here. I have registered for quite a time my concern with empowering people working in police service who are not as well trained as our traditional police and RCMP officers. They come under different names now, but I noticed in here that sheriffs, that we know have less training than police officers, are some of the ones that are going to be empowered to make these decisions at the roadside. They are going to be investigator, judge, and jury. They are going to be sentencers. They are going to decide whether you are in this vague range of .05 to .08. They're going to decide that you are guilty, and they're going to sentence you to lose your licence for three days.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a). The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Yes. Thank you. I was wondering if the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre had any concluding remarks she wished to make.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Sorry. The part that I missed out of all of this is the impact on small business. I think that what the government has done here is that it has taken a really, really, really big stick to hit the wrong people and, no surprise to any of you, we are getting a great deal of conversation happening with people who own small businesses in the restaurant and hospitality industry.

Representing the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre as I do, I of course have a lot of small businesspeople who run such establishments. I am on a first-name basis now with the owner of Hudsons hospitality, for example. But you know what? He has raised some darned good points, and I'm looking forward to getting some information back from him about what would be the effect of this bill on him.

We know that the businesses in B.C. lost 21 per cent of their business. They did come back up again to about 10 per cent. My question to that industry was: did it come back up again? Did it level off? Did they come back to where they were? The answer I've gotten back is: "No. It flatlined at that 10 per cent." So this will sentence our small businesspeople, our hospitality and restaurant people out there in the beautiful town of Rocky Mountain House, to a 10 per cent loss in their business. That's a hit. That is a hit to any businessperson. Why? Because we want to not allow soccer moms to have a glass of wine or an accountant to have another beer on the way home. I say: why?

You know, the issue has been raised with me about transportation, and these are people that deal with this a lot. Some of the people that I've heard from – Devaney's pub, some of the wine cellars that I have – are frustrated because they're already having to deal with people trying to get cabs and trying to get public transit in a metropolitan city at night. So for people who want to be able to take advantage of a taxi cab, who don't travel in a pack, who don't have a designated driver but don't want to drive, what do we do? Do we say, "Don't go out at all" or "Only go where you can walk"? Well, that's just not realistic for a lot of people.

I mean, those in rural areas: I hope you get up and talk about this because what is it going to mean in a rural area? What's that going to mean in Stony Plain or Spruce Grove or for somebody living on an acreage outside of that? Are they going to be able to go out at all? What's going to happen to that small business, that mom-and-pop diner that serves wine and beer? Are they going to have to shut down when they lose 10 per cent of their business because of this?

I hope we continue to hear from people. I can certainly tell you that I have spoken directly to the people that have contacted me in my constituency, and those are the issues that they're raising. They know what it's like to try and get their patrons home at night and how difficult that is. I'm talking Edmonton-Centre here, guys. I'm not talking out there in Peace River or . . .

An Hon. Member: Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. You guys have a lot to contribute to this conversation, and I hope you will.

I think we need to be very careful about who is going to be affected by this legislation, who's going to benefit, and who it is going to harm. We know for sure that it's going to harm our small businesspeople. Is it worth it? Is the benefit worth the harm? That's what we're juggling in this bill.

So let me hear the rest of you get up and talk about whether you think this will harm or benefit your community the way this legislation is going to work.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: On the bill, the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Yes. Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is always a privilege to discuss things in this Legislature, and it's no different when you look at Bill 26 here, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011. I tend to look at this in a global sense, and I'm going to try and balance this off many different perspectives that are here in this bill. I would like to start by saying that, Lord knows, drinking and driving is a problem. It's a problem in our society – throughout Canada, throughout North America, throughout the world – and the carnage and the devastation that it causes when it does happen is severe. It's heart wrenching for families. It's heart wrenching for everyone involved, and it is horrible when this happens.

I agree with the hon. members who have spoken before. I am of the view that when people are over .08, I am in favour of them increasing the penalties for those people, whether that be through administrative ways or others, to work toward strengthening those laws and to ensure that things are done in a uniform fashion that separates criminality from things that are actually legal.

If we look at that, the law is pretty clear in the Criminal Code. We have an offence that says that .08 is the current law in this country as to what our responsibilities are before we get behind the wheel. That's the legal responsibility. There are moral arguments to the effect otherwise, and I guess we're getting into some of that debate.

I agree with the Member for Edmonton-Centre that some of this legislation is a bit of a ham-fisted approach. The way it's put in this legislation could actually be quite good. I like the idea of permanent interlocks or drug testing to monitor drivers with two penalties of driving over .08 within 10 years, if that's what the legislation says. Right now it says .05, but maybe we could see an amendment there that really hits the people who are causing some of the carnage and the concerns out there.

I believe the statistic that's been brought up is that the overwhelming majority of people who are involved in drinking-and-driving accidents, who are causing most of the damage, are blowing twice the legal limit, which is the real nub of the problem. It's not the people who are legally driving with between .05 and .08. It's the people who are driving with 1.6.

Let's talk about that. Why are we not able to do something about the people who are driving that much over the legal limit? Well, I think there are a few things at play in maybe why we aren't targeting more there or we'd have more success in lowering those rates in Alberta.

I've been long on this topic, but I'll just bring it up to remind everyone in this House that our policing numbers per capita here in Alberta are relatively grim vis-à-vis the rest of the 12 other jurisdictions in Canada. We are 11th in police per population. That is a fact. I'm not making up numbers. We all know it here. I know members on the other side get sensitive about that, but it's true.

If you correlate that, then, what our police forces are able to do in terms of checkstops, in terms of enforcing the existing rules, in terms of actually punishing people who are driving in a criminal situation, over .08, is highly compromised. That's a fact. We are not able to get a handle on drinking and driving because we don't have the enforcement capabilities out there. So if we really want to do something about this, let's get policing numbers here in Alberta up to a reasonable fashion, where we can see checkstops on the roads, where we can see enforcement.

I agree with the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, who said he hasn't seen a checkstop in quite some time. Well, I have a feeling he's at home with his children most nights, but I through luck or not am out quite a bit on Friday or Saturday nights, and I, too, have not seen an abundance of checkstops in the last 10 years. I cannot remember the last one I went through, and I live right in downtown Calgary, near 17th Avenue, where lots of drinking occurs. I have seen zero in the last five years when I'm out. That to me is a problem.

If we can't get a handle on actually having enforcement or checkstops set up to act as a deterrent, that is the major problem here. This is window dressing compared to having that in effect. If people knew that there was going to be a checkstop out there, that there was going to be police on the streets able to enforce existing laws, that would send a significant message to our population that our government was serious about getting tough on drinking and driving, tough on the criminality of the act. Okay?

[The Speaker in the chair]

Simply put, we don't have that capacity here in Alberta. I would ask people to look at our checkstop rates that are up right now on the Calgary and the Edmonton policing websites. If you compare the amount of checkpoints they do here compared to what they do in Ottawa or Toronto or Vancouver, other jurisdictions with larger policing numbers, we simply don't have the police force capacity to do that, which is really where we should be concentrating the message, towards that. So I challenge us to look at that. If we really want to get a handle on this, let's more adequately support our police officers. Let's actually get behind that and get those policing numbers up to a reasonable level in this province.

Let's talk about a few other things that the Member for Edmonton-Centre brought up. Cabs. Right now in Calgary we have, I believe, 1,300 licences to drive taxicabs to service a population of 1 million people, a very large city that's very difficult to transport people around, with a very large urban footprint. I know that in my community when people call a cab, it's now sometimes taking between two and three hours on a Friday night to actually get a cab. I'm not making this up. This is brought up all the time to me as an MLA. I say: go talk to Mayor Nenshi; I'm not the guy in charge of this. Nevertheless, it is one of those things that Calgary and, I'm assuming, Edmonton and other jurisdictions are facing. It provides a bit of difficulty for people who are actually trying to do the right thing.

Another thing is that our busing services and our LRTs do not run 24/7. If we are going to have this in effect and still serve alcohol in this society, actually have it as a legal activity, then we have to have some of these other systems in place. You know, one of my favourite shows is Boardwalk Empire, but it is not prohibition here yet. It is still a legal thing, drinking in this society. Now, it is illegal to drink and drive. I understand that, and I pointed out here where we should be going: enforcement for people over .08 and the administrative fines heavy for the people who are over that, repeat offenders, and interlocks on people who are repeat offenders and the like. And let's have some significant police presence out there to actually enforce the laws we have.

Now, we go into the aims of the act: to change the culture surrounding drinking and driving by lowering the limit from .08 to .05 and automatic punishments. That's licence suspensions and vehicle seizures. This work also requires mandatory courses for second and third offences. If we look at this, we are now making offences with some pretty severe consequences to them. I believe the act says that you lose your licence immediately, and you're not allowed to drive for three days and the like. These are fairly significant limitations on individuals who are doing a legal activity. I note that it does cause, for some, questions on the legalities of this, whether it's going to stand a Charter test, whether this can be done, and whether it should be done.

I am cognizant of that fact. I know that I've been in contact with some lawyer offices who believe that this is not in view of what civil liberties are in this province and that it actually makes people guilty before they're actually proven guilty in a court of law. That, to me, is something that we should be highly cautious about when we look at introducing penalties. There's a reason we have the rule of law. There's a reason we have innocence before you're proven guilty. We have built our society on that value, and I believe that it's a value worth, in most cases, sticking up for. So when we are going to do this, we have to look at it with a really rational eye towards what is in the best interests of the entire society.

At the same time, I look at it, and there are some significant consequences to our restaurant and hotel businesses. I understand that business is not the be-all, end-all of what's important in society. In fact, sometimes I think we go far to think that it is the most important thing. But in this case I do have to look at the statistics coming out of British Columbia and note that there has been a significant drop-off in business for what is a law-abiding activity, for something as innocuous as people stopping by the local pub after work and having a drink. That is an issue when you look at a constituency like mine, which probably has 70 or 80 restaurants, pubs, and hotels, maybe more, and which has many of my constituents who work in the service industry in the capacity either as a waitress or as a bartender or as a server working in the hospitality industry. Clearly, this has an impact on their livelihoods. Clearly, it has an impact on the bottom line and on who people are able to hire and whether they're going to be able to stay in business.

I do know that when you look at this, you have to look overall. Overall, is this going to be more protective of society? Is it going to make a real difference in people's actual lives? Is it really going to do what we think it's going to do; I mean, reduce the risk of people dying on our streets? That's something that at this time I am still not convinced about. If I could be fully convinced in weighing out the competing interests, I'd be inclined to support this legislation. At this time I'm still not convinced. I remain to be convinced, and I'm looking forward . . . [Mr. Hehr's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. member.

Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for a five-minute question-and-response time. The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A number of the speakers this afternoon have talked about things like the difficulty of somebody getting home if there are no taxis or if they live in a rural area. I'd just like to ask this hon. member if he really thinks that it's appropriate for someone who's been drinking to say, "It was okay for me to drive home because I couldn't get a taxi" or "because it was inconvenient" or whether he thinks it's more appropriate for people to think about that when they go out and not drink if they're the ones that have to drive home.

The Speaker: The hon. member, if you wish.

Mr. Hehr: Well, that's a pretty silly question, sir. Of course, you're right in that postulation. They should think about that. If they are given a choice between driving home when they would be impaired, of course they shouldn't drive. But are we really setting up a society here where, with a legally allowed thing, .08, we are going to make it criminal now to drink whatsoever? We're on the cusp here, a fine line between where that could occur in certain cases. For instance, people who are 120 pounds go out, have one glass of wine. Is having that glass of wine now going to be a criminal occurrence by this .05 to .08 sanction? We are walking a very fine line here.

I understand what the hon. member is getting at. People should, if they're driving, consider that, weigh that out, and regardless of the fact not drive, and I understand that. Nevertheless, it's not as black and white as that. Until such time as we actually understand whether this has a legitimate rate of return, shall we say, on the safety on our streets, then I remain to be convinced.

The second thing I'd point out is that right now we're having difficulty enforcing the actual people who are over .08. We see this by the repeated drinking and driving offences. We see this by people who are causing the carnage, who are blowing 1.6, 1.7. Those are the people who are killing people. The member knows that our policing numbers per population are so weak that we have difficulty enforcing right now the criminality of this. How are they going to do the job of enforcing this, the grey area, .05 to .07, and then do the other things? It just simply looks like we're passing the buck here on dealing with the real issue.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, another question?
5:20

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Obviously, the member would know, because he's a lawyer and, I think, would be familiar with this area, that criminal law is federal law, and this is obviously not criminal at all. It's administrative and within the province's purview as to who gets to have a licence. The hon. member would also, I think, understand that many of the people who are driving impaired probably don't think they are. If they thought they were impaired, they probably wouldn't drive, so going down to a .05 might encourage them to think about it.

Does the hon. member honestly believe that we should put enough police on the roads so that we can stop every impaired driver, that that's actually an effective use of resources, or does he believe that we should try and encourage people to think more clearly about whether or not they should be driving after drinking? We put up billboards all over the place to encourage people: do not drink and drive.

Mr. Hehr: Well, it's not an either/or answer or an all-in-one answer. I don't think that to answer that simply would give justice to the debate we're having here. I think it would be a fair proposition to say that if I had seen a checkpoint on the streets in the last 10 years, that might serve as a chill or would serve as a chill to others who are prone to drinking and driving to think about it as well. We would also, then, be hitting the people who, like the hon. member said, are over the .08 limit, who are in the criminality of this under Canadian law. I agree with that. There is also some truth in what the member is saying, and that's where he gets at the culture of drinking and driving and whether having people start to think, "Oh my goodness, am I going to be over the limit after one?" may be a good thing. But we have to look at this on balance as to what we're trying to accomplish and the harm caused.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will be brief. It is a pleasure to join in the debate on Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011. I would note that there are a lot of countries around the world that have zero tolerance for drinking and driving and at the same time often have more liberal liquor laws than we do. What we're trying to achieve here can be done, but this bill is getting a lot of push-back, and only some of it is coming from the people who own bars, and only some of it is coming from the people who spend too long in those bars and then drive home from those bars. An awful lot of this push-back is coming from very average, very normal, very sober citizens of the province of Alberta who are sincerely concerned about what this legislation may do in terms of its effect on their lives and their lifestyles. These are not people who are going to be breaking the law as it's interpreted by the Criminal Code if this bill goes through.

I think there are two issues here, and it's been very interesting to listen to the debate so far, and some very good points have been made here. There are two issues, the changes to the penalties at over .08 and the proposed penalties at .05 to .08. But no matter how you look at it, this bill seems to have been rushed into this House by a government that often drags its heels notoriously on solutions to straightforward problems, solutions that are easy to implement, solutions that are easy to pass into law, easy to change policy around. Suddenly on this one we have this almighty rush to get it into the House in time for the fall session.

I want to be careful here, Mr. Speaker, because criticizing the overall intent of this bill is kind of like saying that you don't love your mother, that you don't like puppies, and that you think rainbows and unicorns are horrible things. There's a right way and a wrong way to do this sort of thing, and the right way, when you're talking about this kind of proposed change to people's lifestyles, this kind of proposed impact on people's lifestyles, when no Criminal Code law is being broken, is the process by which you arrive at a piece of legislation like this, before you get it to the floor of the House to debate its merits.

I have a couple of questions around that. One is for the government, and that is: what do Albertans think about the process that the government used to get to this point where they brought in this rushed and, I would argue, seriously flawed piece of legislation? That's the question that I would ask the government. The question that the government should be asking all of the people of this province, at least all the people of age to be licensed to drive or even to have a learner's permit, is this: what do Albertans think about this idea?

The process we should be going through here is asking in a broad-based conversation – and believe me, Mr. Speaker, if the government put this question out there in any kind of meaningful way, any kind of meaningful vehicle for people to communicate back to the government, they would get responses by the bucket-load on this one – what do Albertans think about the ideas expressed in the Traffic Safety Amendment Act? Have the conversation with the people of Alberta first, and then craft the bill accordingly and carefully, without rushing it. Bring it back to the Legislature – bring something like this, something similar to this, but something better than this – in the spring of 2012.

That would be my argument, Mr. Speaker, that this bill was rushed. It may very well be flawed. I think some very convincing arguments have been made here this afternoon that it is. The government needs to pull this bill, consult with the people of Alberta – I don't just mean its friends; I don't just mean police departments; I mean all the people of Alberta – and then bring something better back in the spring.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you are participating in the question-and-answer section?

Mr. Anderson: Yeah. Through the chair, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the hon. member. He said a very interesting point, that the consultation process for this bill has been literally nonexistent. It's just kind of happened. It seemed to come out. She met with the Premier of B.C., I think, when she announced it if I'm not mistaken. She met with the Premier of B.C., and it came out, and all of a sudden we were down the path to substantially changing our drinking and driving laws in a way that will have a huge effect on our hospitality industry and just on people's lives, not so much on my life but on severely normal Albertans' lives.

Mr. Mason: As opposed to you.

Mr. Anderson: As opposed to me, as this member points out.

My question is: why would we pursue it? Do you think this government has taken the requisite amount of time, the proper amount of time to properly consult with Albertans? How would you suggest, hon. member, that the government proceed to do this consultative process? Should it have forums? Should we refer this to an all-party committee? What would you suggest would be the right way to go ahead and do that?

The Speaker: The hon. member, if you wish.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Hon. member, yes, I think this has been rushed. I don't think the proper consultation has taken place by any stretch of the imagination. I will grant that this is a better approach to tackling impaired driving or at least alcohol-impaired driving, because it doesn't really address any other forms of impairment, than what they used to do in Bulgaria in the Communist years, which was that they took you out and shot you for your second drunk-driving offence. So we should be thankful for small mercies.

Mr. Mason: Well, they didn't have impaired drivers, did they?

Mr. Taylor: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood makes the point that they didn't have an impaired driving problem. Then they didn't have many cars either, hon. member.

But back to the point here because I don't have that much time. This bill has been crafted without proper consultation, I would argue. I think that while there may be a number of ways to skin a cat on this, hon. member, there is one very, very good way that we have at our disposal in this Legislature, and that is to refer the bill to committee, as we did with the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays', if I remember the sponsor of the bill correctly, private member's bill a few years ago that sought to ban the use of hand-held cellphones in moving cars. That got referred to committee and went through a process that eventually came back to this House as the distracted driving law, that was debated in this House, passed in this House, proclaimed by the government, took effect in this province on, I believe, September 1 of this year.

I still do see the odd person driving down the highway, usually in the fast lane of the Queen Elizabeth going 70 or 75, yakking away on their cellphone, oblivious to the impact that they're having on everybody else around them, but I think there has been – and this is anecdotal, Mr. Speaker – a marked reduction in the number of people who are driving distracted.

Distracted driving, I would remind the House, is a form of impaired driving, not a form of impaired driving that this bill will address because this bill is very, very specific to wine, beer, and spirits. It doesn't address marijuana. It doesn't address sleeping pills. It doesn't address any other kind of prescription medication. It doesn't address tiredness. It doesn't address anything but the issue of alcohol impairment, not to minimize that as an important issue in our society. As I said at the outset, there are countries, not including Bulgaria in the old days, many countries around the world, many jurisdictions that take a much dimmer view of drinking and driving than we do in this province or anywhere in North America, have more liberal liquor laws than we do, and seem to manage just fine and have, sir, for decades.

We can do this or we can get closer to that if we want to go about doing it the right way, but if we're going to do it the right way, especially with something that involves human behaviour to this extent and especially a level of human behaviour that is not deemed to be illegal by the Criminal Code of Canada, then the only way this is going to succeed is with buy-in from the people of Alberta, and the way you get buy-in is to engage them in the discussion through standing committees... [Mr. Taylor's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

I'm prepared to recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. I'm pleased, actually, to see you in the chair because of the fact that I'm going to take us down memory lane a little. I know that you were in this Chamber in March of 2000, when I actually brought forward a private member's bill in this Legislature called the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2000. I'm glad to see that you do remember that.

Ms Calahasen: He does. He remembers everything.

Mrs. Forsyth: Yes. Of course.

At that particular time I happened to bring forward a private member's bill to talk about bringing it from .08 to .05, so we're going back 11 years. What the idea of the bill was was to bring the awareness of what drinking and driving can do to you in this province. At that particular time I talked about drivers who were over .05 to have a 24-hour suspension. There was great debate in that Legislature. There were great things pointed out at that particular time in regard to this particular piece, and I know the member from Vegreville-Viking will remember this because he was part of the Assembly at that particular time, and I recall having a great deal of debate with him on this particular piece of legislation.

The former RCMP commissioner at that particular time, a fellow by the name of Assistant Commissioner McDermid, was not really happy with me at that when I brought this piece of legislation forward in response to the RCMP. We had a great, great deal of discussion in caucus on this particular piece of legislation. I see some of my colleagues who've been around, and I have to tell you that it was not received with a great deal of love and support at that particular time in our caucus at all. I was a member of the Progressive Conservative Party at that time, going around and talking to my colleagues about, particularly, supporting me on this piece of legislation just to bring forward the idea and awareness of the effects of drinking and driving in this province and all of the effects and all of the tragedies that had occurred.

When I brought this piece of legislation forward, Mr. Speaker, I had actually dedicated the bill to constituents who had been killed in a tragic accident near Morley, Alberta. On behalf of them the ultimate goal on this was not to penalize .05 to .08 but, really, to make people in this province aware of the seriousness of what happens when you drink and drive. In my speaking notes one of the things that I was very adamant about was the idea of educating the public and telling people what happens when you drink and drive, the serious, serious effects of that.

I have to say, Mr. Speaker, that this particular piece of legislation died on the Order Paper. We didn't get to vote on it, but some time after that, obviously, we brought in the 24-hour suspension. I can tell you that I was then lucky enough to go into the position of Solicitor General from the years 2001 to 2004 and had the opportunity in my travels as the Solicitor General to do ride-alongs with the police and to listen to the police in this province, that were very, very concerned about the issue of drinking and driving and, I can tell you, more so about impaired driving.

I also had the opportunity when I was the Solicitor General to be at checkpoints, which I thought were very, very interesting, as we pulled suspected drunk drivers over, watched them go through blowing over .08 and then realizing the seriousness of the situation, and at that particular time what would happen to them going through the process after they had been charged.

Mr. Speaker, it's 2011. We're 11 years later, and we have a piece of legislation that's been brought forward into this Assembly, and I question, as I've listened intently to everybody else, what consultation has been done.

In 2007, when I had the honour of chairing the safer cities task force report, I travelled the province for six months straight listening to what Albertans want. One of the number one issues was about drinking and driving, but it wasn't about .05. It was about driving over the legal limit of .08 and what as a task force or as a government, when I was chairing that task force, we were going to do about the seriousness of that particular issue.

In all good faith I tabled the legislation under the auspices of the then Premier, from Vegreville-Viking. It's interesting when you go through all of the recommendations in this particular task force report. That, I can tell you quite frankly, was accepted right across this country as one of the best reports in regard to how to tackle crime within the province.

In this report we pointed out the importance of doing some advertising and some public awareness in regard to the effects of drinking and driving and the devastating effects it can have in this province. The government accepted all of the recommendations, including a report about setting up safer communities, which we now hear the Premier talk about and brag about from her two years as Justice minister, and she brags about what they're doing now as Premier.

We've done some research, and I'm still looking for all of the public awareness advertising that was supposed to be done and was recommended that we do in regard to bringing the effects of drinking and driving to Albertans so that they can understand what's going on with drinking and driving.

I don't know if anybody recalls the terrific success that AADAC had with a TV commercial several years ago, the bowl commercial, where you had these kids puking their guts out into the toilet. It talked about drinking and driving, one of the most successful commercials done to bring drinking and driving awareness to young kids. It won numerous awards. That's the kind of impact that people need to see. As much as we don't want to see some child barfing into a toilet bowl, that is very effective in regard to telling people. It would be no different than probably showing a drunk driver smashing into a family and killing them, quite frankly, and what happens.

I think what's missing through this whole conversation is what we call the elephant in the room, so to speak. I think that elephant, quite frankly, is: what are we doing with the chronic drunk drivers in this province, that are 20 per cent of the problem, that cause 80 per cent of the work for the police in this province? This bill doesn't touch that issue at all. The people being targeted here are not Alberta's most dangerous drivers. It's the chronic abusers of alcohol that we should be targeting. People like myself or you, Mr. Speaker, if I may, that like to have a glass of wine at dinner, anyone who likes to have a glass of wine for dinner, are not the ones that we should hold responsible and, you know, that we want to have to target.

Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I like to have a glass of wine with dinner, but I have to tell you that I weigh a hundred pounds, and if I have a glass of wine, I can guarantee you that if I'm sitting at the table and if we were deciding that we were going to have me tested in regard to blowing, I bet you that if I had the kegger nine-ounce glass of wine, I'd be at .05 for sure. If I was sitting with the Minister of Human Services and he did the same test, I'm not quite sure that he would reach that same alcohol level as I have, to be very honest with you.

Mr. Speaker, if the government is really serious and they really want to start targeting the chronic drunk drivers, then let's spend our time and our effort on those chronic drunk drivers. I, quite frankly, have to admit that that's what the police want. They want the ability to have checkpoints out there, having their police officers pulling people over on a Friday night that are seriously inebriated and that we have to get off the street. They don't have the time, where the minister of human resources and his wife were out for a nice quiet dinner and then are coming home, to pull them over and say: Mister, could you blow into this so we can see if you're at .05? I can tell you that our police want to take care of the chronic drunk drivers in this province, that have caused more problems and more devastation for families, wiped out four kids from Grande Prairie, kids that incited me to come in and bring forward some legislation.

What's interesting, Mr. Speaker, is when I start going through the speaking notes in Hansard, and I reflect back on what people say. I reflect back on – and probably the Member for Edmonton-Centre will remember the Member for Calgary-Buffer who was previously in this Legislature – a fellow by the name of Gary Dickson. I started reading through what he had to say in Hansard. I'll tell you, he's got it bang on. He talks about the two categories of drivers who are constantly causing the problem. These were statistics in 2000. I would like to know the government's statistics on what they have from 2000 to 2010 in regard to what is happening with the over .08 and what is happening with the .05 to .08.

Obviously, something tweaked to the government so that they thought this particular piece of legislation was so important. Seriously, as someone who stood in this Legislature in 2000 talking about the importance of looking at a 24-hour suspension, they have got to have some knowledge in regard to some statistics, even from 2000-2010 on the fatalities that have occurred from someone driving who was driving between the BAC of .05 to .08. There has to be some sort of information to make the government aware, and the seriousness to bring forward a piece of legislation . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

We're now into Standing Order 29(2)(a) should there be a member who wishes to participate.

Mr. Anderson: The hon. member was in the middle of eloquently speaking about this piece of legislation, and I would like to ask her to please finish her thought as I was paying rapt attention to it.

The Speaker: The hon. member, if you wish.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess, just to conclude, as someone who has, I have to tell you, struggled on this because, as I indicated to you earlier, I brought forward a bill in 2000. I wanted to see the 24-hour suspension. And you know what? There's nothing wrong with that.

If I'm driving down the street after having my mega nine-ounce glass of wine at the Keg and I get pulled over and the officer says to me, "Dear driver, you are blowing over .05, and we really think that you shouldn't be driving home, and I think it's a really good idea for you to pull over and to park your car," guess what, Mr. Speaker? I'm going to say, "Yes, sir" because he obviously thinks that maybe there is some question. On the other hand, if I'm driving home after having two of those megaglasses of wine at the Keg and I'm so inebriated, then I guess I should be off the street, and I should face the consequences of my decisions for being so stupid to knowingly drink that much, knowing very well that I could be killing somebody on the street.

I guess what I'm asking the government is, as someone who brought this forward 10 years ago, to please show me the data that you have to say that it is important for us to start bringing it down from .08 to .05 and that we have conclusive data that shows this.

The safe communities task force was set up specifically to find out what was going on in this province, what needed to be done in regard to legislation in this province, what the hot spots in this province were as far as policing. I mean, I can show you all of the recommendations, quite frankly, why the need for the safer communities, but I can tell you that I don't recall anybody coming to me or talking to me on the safe communities task force about .08 to .05. The safe communities task force was set up to do some consultation.

They have a whack of money in the Safe Communities Secretariat. They must have the data to prove that this is something that really needs to be done over more mental health beds, more drug and alcohol beds for our kids that are suffering from drugs and alcohol. I mean, there are 27 recommendations that I think the dollars can be used for that would give us a bigger impact.

Mr. Speaker, I'm looking forward to hearing what the government has to say, and at that point I'll sit down and listen.

The Speaker: Other questions under this segment of Standing Order 29(2)(a)?

There being none, shall I call on the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood?

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011. The genesis of this bill was apparently the meeting between our current Premier and the Premier of British Columbia just actually a few weeks ago. The Premier of British Columbia talked about the legislation that they have in that province and the impact that it has had. Based on that conversation apparently this legislation was initiated and has been brought forward.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the question of impaired driving and the sorts of things that we see there are very concerning. I think we're all justified in having a grave concern for innocent people who are injured or killed as a result of drivers whose judgment and reaction time are impaired by alcohol or by other drugs. It's a very serious thing. I want to commend the work of police services around the province and also citizens' organizations such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, that have done such a good job in raising public awareness.

We have made steps towards dealing with this. I remember – I'm now old enough to remember – as a young person how common drinking and driving was and how different the attitudes were towards it than today. I think we have done a good job in shifting attitudes towards impaired driving. I think that any carefully thought out steps that move us towards further reductions in the incidents of drinking and driving are good and should be supported.

The question really is whether or not this is part of a careful analysis of the problem and a carefully thought out response on the part of government. I'm afraid to say that I am concerned here that this is something that has been done more for political reasons; that is to say, to appear to be doing more without necessarily taking the best approach that minimizes the harm caused by impaired driving.

Now, it's a characteristic of Conservatives – and apologies to my friends in the Wildrose, who are really conservatives, and some of my colleagues across the way, who are conservatives, but not the Premier, who's definitely not a conservative, in saying this. Nevertheless, the Premier shares one thing in common with real conservatives, and that is that she believes one of the answers to changing public behaviour is to increase the penalties. We can see this with the federal government in Ottawa with their bill – I think it's Bill C-10 – jacking up penalties on all kinds of things because Conservatives believe that if you lock people up for longer, you will prevent the behaviour that you want to prevent. It's a very simplistic view. It's a view that's contained in part in Bill 26.

In my view, reasonable penalties with a great chance of being caught and convicted if you're guilty of the offence are a stronger deterrent. Public education is very important as well. There are a number of components that we need to take into account when we're trying to change behaviour in society that has negative consequences. Certainly, drinking and driving is one of those things.

I want to just suggest that there's a difference between increasing penalties and increasing enforcement. A number of members have talked about the fact that the most serious threat to people in terms of impaired driving comes not from the people in the category of .05 to .08 but from repeat, chronic drunk drivers whose blood-alcohol levels are much higher. That being the case, you would think that the government, if they were carefully analyzing the problem and identifying where the real source of the threat is, would identify that and would bring forward some legislation or some program to deal with that. To me, increased enforcement is, in fact, what we need to do to get the chronic, repeat drunk drivers off the road. I think the government should focus on that. That's something that's within their jurisdiction, which leads me to a second concern.

The federal government has jurisdiction over Criminal Code offences, and they have brought in Criminal Code offences making it a crime to operate a motor vehicle if your blood alcohol is .08 or higher. The provincial government is proposing bringing in administrative penalties for individuals who do not meet the threshold set in the Criminal Code. I think that that's an issue. I think that's something that we should be prepared to talk about.

The other aspect about this: like other bills this government has brought forward in the past, there are administrative penalties applied directly by law enforcement officers without the benefit of a trial taking place. A trial eventually takes place, but the penalties are imposed before, and that is a problem.

The Speaker: Excuse me, hon. member. You will be recognized to participate at the juncture of your speech when the Assembly next comes back to this matter, but right now the Assembly stands adjourned until 7:30 this evening.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 23, 2011

[Mr. Zwozdesky in the chair]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 25 Child and Youth Advocate Act

[Adjourned debate November 23: Mr. Hinman]

The Acting Speaker: Is there anyone who wishes to speak to this? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Through you and to all members of the astute Assembly gathered here tonight I'd like to provide a little background information for our online pay-per-view participants tonight in the WNFC bout that we're about to undergo, the Wednesday night fight club edition of the ADD, Alberta darkness democracy, debate. Our first contested bill is Bill 25, the children's advocate act. In the blue corner, weighing in at a combined weight of several thousand pounds, representing the pro/con Conservatives, the tag-team Tories, we have our wonderful individuals. Over in the red and currently orange corner we have the democratic Liberals, and I'm sure we'll be joined soon by the wild Albertans. [interjections] I'm being called for relevance.

It's important, hon. member, that those who choose to participate with us tonight, whether online or in spirit, understand the rules. I want to welcome to our square circle our newest referee. Wearing black and white and carrying the whistle for this government's activities and representing all members is the hon. member, the mighty member from Mill Creek. Without further ado, let us get the match going.

Now, the hon. member who smiled – and it's a nice way to begin – the hon. Government House Leader, yesterday mentioned that Alberta was the first jurisdiction to have a children's advocate. That's extremely worthy of note, Mr. Speaker, but also worthy of note, and what Bill 25 is all about, is that finally we're going to be the last province to have the children's advocate report directly to this astute Assembly. For that I am very grateful.

Mr. Speaker, having talked to a number of front-line workers, they have been concerned that previously the child advocate has been muffled. The feeling from front-line workers who have tried to have issues raised previously was that there was a type of whitewashing going on. Examples that came to mind that were very specific were children who had physical or mental disabilities and were placed in foster homes that did not have the understanding or capability to provide them with the greatest degree of care. The children's advocate was not able previously to do his job, and that was to advocate for all children.

Mr. Speaker, as you and the members of this House well know, the most significant portion, grossly overrepresented, of children in the system are First Nations children. Currently their participation in the new Ministry of Human Services is 67 per cent, and that participation rate for aboriginal children is slated to go as high as 70 per cent next year. So the advocacy role is extremely important. Aboriginal children or aboriginal First Nations individuals, being the fastest growing portion of the population, currently represent only 12 per cent of the population, but as I indicated, they are vastly overrepresented by the number of children who have been taken into care or custody. So I am hoping that one of the major roles, when the restraints are taken off the child advocate, is that they will be able in good conscience to report their concerns directly to the Assembly.

Over the last 10 years over 60 children have died while in the custody of this province, Mr. Speaker. The majority of those children, again, who have died or been injured severely have been aboriginal children. I'm not suggesting that the children's advocate immediately but potentially at some point in the future be considered for a qualified First Nations' representative who has a cultural understanding of the circumstances and is able to speak for all children. It is just a thought. I don't believe in special minority provisional circumstances, as we have seen in the United States, but it would be worth considering. We definitely need to have more First Nation front-line workers in the Ministry of Human Services. That's a thought I wanted to put out.

Mr. Speaker, I am hoping, as I say, that the children's advocate will have an unfettered opportunity to report unfiltered to the Assembly. It's a difficult position in the sense that the government is the person who provides the employment and also the remuneration for this person. Hopefully, the individual that takes on this position is sufficiently strong and their integrity unquestionable so that they can stand up and reveal circumstances that have previously not been permitted.

Far too often, in the name of protecting the child's family or the child itself, even though they have been killed in the system, the details surrounding the death or injuries have been withheld. Now, Mr. Speaker, it would not be necessary for the name of the child to be revealed, but what we have currently is a two-tier information system. For a child who is injured but not a part of the provincial care system the details of their injury – even their name, their family, and their circumstance – is revealed. We learn something from that experience, which we, hopefully, going forward can prevent. This, of course, is a significant role of the children's advocate and what Bill 25 is recommending. Hopefully, that opportunity will be provided, and the children's advocate can look more closely into cases where children have been injured and provide advice going forward so that we can prevent future instances of not only death but also of injury. Currently that's not possible.

The government has hopefully turned a new page with the creation of the Ministry of Human Services, which in-house is referred to by front-line workers as the ministry of humongous services. But I am hoping that it will become a one-stop service provision place for individuals, in this case children in need.

Mr. Speaker, children have been warehoused previously in hotels. We know that there's a shortage of group homes. I'm not sure to what extent the children's advocate can change our current system. Obviously, we need greater provision for particularly troubled youth. But I'm hoping that in their advocacy, in their reporting directly to the Assembly, we will have an opportunity to participate more directly in improving the conditions of Alberta's children.

I support the direction of this legislation, Mr. Speaker. I believe the hon. House leader suggested that the position of children's advocate was first created in Alberta in 1989, and here we are basically 20 years later and finally catching up with the rest of the provinces who initially followed our example. I suppose the expression "better late than never" applies to this circumstance, and therefore I welcome the notion of the improved transparency and accountability provided by the children's advocate being able to report directly to our Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, children are among our most vulnerable. That's an obvious statement. But there are other vulnerable individuals, seniors and those on AISH, and we need to have advocates for them. We need to have the same type of independence for seniors' representatives and for the disabled. Bill 25 is a good first start, and it's a great way to kick off tonight's debate.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Any questions or comments regarding the previous speaker? None? Okay. We'll proceed, then.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to stand up and support the government's Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, 2011. I want to compliment – I'm sorry he's not here – the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore on his speech on this this afternoon. It was eloquent and very touching.

I just wanted to quickly give my support for it. I do have one comment on it that I am worried about, though. I guess in committee, maybe, we can get some clarification on this issue. One of the positive things that this bill does is that it makes the youth advocate specifically accountable to the Legislature as opposed to the cabinet, as opposed to the government, which is a very good step. But I am worried that if that's what we're going to do, then I think that we should make sure it is the Legislature that chooses the children's advocate under this legislation.

I don't think we should just transition the current one, who was not picked by the Legislature but picked by the government, by the minister. It's nothing against the individual. The individual might be fantastic. That's the point. We don't know. If we're going to make this person an officer of the Legislature, then I think that it's critical that they be truly accountable to the Legislature and chosen by the Legislature. We'll bring some amendments forward when we get into committee on this to see if the government is willing to entertain that possibility.

I would like to note that our party, the Wildrose, has been calling for an independent advocate reporting to the Legislature for some time. We released our policy on this a while back, and it's something that we've been pushing. Clearly, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona has been pushing it longer, and I certainly congratulate her.

Ms Blakeman: We had a private member's bill.

Mr. Anderson: I'm informed that the Alberta Liberal caucus has also been pushing this as well. That's great. This is a good-news story for them and a good-news story for everybody in the Legislature because it's long overdue. That's a very positive piece of this legislation.

We're also calling for a better sharing of information between public bodies and clarification around issues of confidentiality on issues involving children. We hope that the government will take a look at that.

There are many issues that still need to be dealt with, but we certainly believe that this is a positive step. I hope that in committee that we can really hit this one out of the park as a House by making sure that the person who becomes the Child and Youth Advocate will be someone that is chosen by this Legislature. That is really my only caveat to supporting this bill, but I will be supporting it in second reading and would hope that all members will do the same.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available should anyone wish to pose any questions or comments to the previous speaker. The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View on 29(2)(a).

Dr. Swann: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would appreciate the comments of the hon. member on the existence in the act of the council for quality assurance, a council appointed by the minister to review quality in child care. One of the members, I understand, would be the advocate on that council. Should there come a time when a public inquiry might be needed for children in care, what is your view of the need for an independent body, new powers to that quality assurance council? Do we need a new act to empower them to do public inquiries on children and the sensitive issues around the poor outcomes of children and families?

Mr. Anderson: Well, you know, I think it's clear that the Child and Youth Advocate needs to clearly have the ability to call, if the need arises, a public inquiry. I'm not really sure how that would be best conducted in legislation. We do have the Public Inquiries Act. Of course, that can only be called by the government, by cabinet. They have to call that, so I don't know if that would necessarily be the right avenue in this case.

I guess I would say that, you know, the critical thing here is that when it comes to the safety of our children, when it comes to their welfare, we have to make sure that this individual, who is essentially their protector after families have failed or after there's been a failure or a breakdown in that child's immediate family circle, is the last line of defence. This Child and Youth Advocate is really the last line of defence. So if there is a systemic issue occurring that is endangering children's lives, then I think that it's critical that they have that power, that this person has the power to call a public inquiry independently.

Now, I don't know what criteria that should include and so forth, but I look forward to hearing your comments in committee, when we get there, as to how you would see this taking shape.

Thank you for the question.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Anyone else under Standing Order 9(2)(a)?

If not, we'll entertain any other speakers on Bill 25. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, then.

Ms Notley: Yes. Thank you. It's a pleasure to be able to rise and speak to Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act. This is a very important bill, and it's one that I have devoted a great deal of time to addressing since I was first elected three and a half years ago. It raises a number of very important issues because, of course, it circumscribes some new initiatives on the part of the government to potentially enhance or give some support to what is an otherwise failing system in terms of ensuring proper attention to our children and youth in care.

My concern about the bill, though, is that – well, let me back it up a bit. You know, as an opposition member there are times when you spend a lot of time raising issues with the government, critiquing the government, raising public awareness about issues that the government would otherwise not have fully debated within the public sphere. And there are times when you question: well, how does that actually change the agenda? Does it or doesn't it? And you like to at times convince yourself that maybe the government has moved a little bit in reaction to some public opinion that you may have had a role in swaying or generating.

For the most part it's few and far between that opposition members are able to look at a piece of legislation and think: oh, well, I had a hand in ensuring that this is here. I have to say that I think that on behalf of the NDP caucus Bill 25 is probably an exception to that rule in that I think we probably did have a hand in ensuring that this bill is here by creating a sufficiently broad-ranging level of concern amongst Albertans that it became one of the issues that the newly elected Premier decided to talk about in her campaign.

It's a long overdue issue. Other provinces have had independent child and youth advocates for up to decades, and it has been really a blight on this province that we've not had an independent Child and Youth Advocate. So when I heard that this bill was coming forward, I have to say that I was incredibly encouraged and very, very pleased to see that, finally, after stating the obvious repeatedly to a point where it must have been – I can't imagine that it wasn't – somewhat embarrassing to the government, they decided to move forward on this piece of legislation.

It was then, I have to say with some profound disappointment, that I finally had the chance to sit down and read through the legislation in its entirety, and I discovered how the government had structured this new piece of legislation. I was really quite disappointed. Those folks over there like to talk about made-in-Alberta solutions, but I have long since come to the conclusion that made-in-Alberta solution is Toryspeak for "our extraspecial way of ensuring that we stay in power," and "We don't do as good a job as we could otherwise for the voters of Alberta." That's what made-in-Alberta solutions tend to mean when those guys over there talk about that. Unfortunately, Bill 25 is exactly that all over again.

Now, I know that the members over there have been around long enough to understand what the concept is of an officer of the Legislature, and I think that we've all been elected long enough to understand that an officer of the Legislature is important because they are appointed by and are accountable to this body. In theory that ensures that we actually end up with an independent person who is slightly less intimidated to speak out on issues that might embarrass the government and, in so doing, to represent and fulfill their mandate as set out in their legislation. That's why it's so important that an officer of the Legislature be selected by the Legislature. That's why I was so incredibly disappointed to discover that, no, what we have is a made-in-Alberta junior officer of the Legislature piece of legislation here.

What we're doing is that we are not having an officer of the Legislature who is selected by Legislature. No, Mr. Speaker. We are creating something which I think may or may not even be entirely constitutional. I'm not sure. We're creating an officer of the Legislature who is selected by the minister behind closed doors. Five years from now we will get an officer of the Legislature in reality, but what we're going to get right now and for the next five years is an officer of the Legislature who while they may answer to the Legislature has been and will be appointed by this government behind closed doors, by Tories, without a transparent process.

So we have no idea whether the current Child and Youth Advocate, who by virtue of, I believe, section 24 of this act will become the Child and Youth Advocate, meets the requirements of ensuring the independence and the transparency and the backbone that is required to ensure that they speak up in favour of and on behalf of some of the most voiceless Albertans that we have in the face of a 40-year-old government that's awfully darned sure of itself, that in other forums is currently being investigated for a variety of different intimidation tactics.

Instead, what we have is a career bureaucrat, from what I can tell, whose expertise arises from having faithfully served within the bureaucracy for many, many years in a different province. There is no indication that the child advocate we have now has any record of ever going against the grain, of ever standing up publicly when it's difficult, of ever risking the negative reaction of their boss or the media or anybody to whom they are accountable because it's the right thing.

There are certain people out there that have that in their background, and you can count on those people to stand up for people without a voice. But that's not the criteria that was used to select the Child and Youth Advocate that we currently have; therefore, that is not the criteria that will have been in play when the government behind closed doors at the direction of the previous minister selected this advocate. And now this advocate will be in place for five years.

What this legislation actually is doing, folks, is giving us an independent officer of the Legislature five years from now. In the meantime it's giving us a career bureaucrat who happens to have the title of independent officer of the Legislature between now and then. That sounds just really very typical of so many of the promises, the so-called promises, that this Premier has moved forward on. When you get to the fine print, you discover that it's not exactly what they're calling it. It's not exactly what they're calling it.

Yes, this new advocate, hired by the former minister of child and youth services behind closed doors with no transparency and no accountability, will now be accountable to the Legislature. But a lot of it comes down to whether they were hired for that purpose in the first place. And they were not hired for that purpose in the first place, so we have no idea whether this person is going to be able to carry on that function. We really have an unfortunate, disappointing shell of an advocate.

Now, frankly, if that issue were fixed, I could get over my other concerns that exist in the act, because I do have other concerns about what's in this act as well. If that's not fixed, I cannot support this legislation because this is not an officer of the Legislature, and this government has not fulfilled the promise that the Premier made during her campaign. It will be yet another broken promise. So if that's fixed, I can probably get over my other concerns.

Let me talk a little bit about some of the other concerns that I think also compromise this process. The first one is that the scope of authority of this new advocate – and let's talk about the advocate that we're going to have five years from now, the independent advocate that the Legislature will select in five years. That advocate even then will not have the scope of review that other child advocates have in other provinces. Their ability to engage in systemic review will be limited to those occasions where there has been a serious incident or, heaven forbid, a fatality.

That's a concern because the idea is that we are engaging in a preventative activity. Why do we have to wait for the system to go so terribly wrong that a child almost loses their life or does lose their life before this advocate will have the capacity to engage in a systemic investigation that might well alert the members of this Assembly to some emergent changes that need to be made before somebody dies or is seriously injured? I'm very concerned about the mandate that is being given and the limited nature of that mandate as it relates to other children's advocates across the country.

Another concern I have is the ministry of children and family services' version of the quality council as it currently exists. Now, it's a great idea to get together a bunch of experts to review things periodically. That's lovely. There's a certain amount of accountability there, I suppose. But, again, that group will be appointed by and subject to the direction of the minister. That group will work day in and day out with that child advocate, who will be part of that group, and that group has actually greater ability in terms of the scope of their mandate to engage in systemic investigation.

I am very concerned that we're going to have the kind of scenario where you see a tragedy like any of the ones that we probably heard discussed by members on this side of the House over the course of debate about this bill. We might find ourselves in a situation where there's a tragedy like that, and people go to the advocate and say, "Are you going to investigate it?" and the advocate is going to say: well, you know, the internal council is investigating it right now, so I don't want to interfere with that. So it's going to be used as a cover for a period of time. Then that council will write a report, and that council will be filtered through and managed by the minister's office. Then when that report is released, the advocate will say: well, you know, I'm satisfied by the report of the council; I don't think I need to do any further investigation.

This internal council structure is, again, as far as I can tell, the only one of its kind. We have not felt the need to set up a minister-appointed babysitter for our children's advocate in any other province in the country, yet we've decided here that we need to have a minister-controlled babysitter of our children's advocate, the one who five years from now may actually be truly an officer of the Legislature. I'm concerned about why that is, why it is that we just can't let the children's advocate be appointed and selected by the Legislature and then have a broader mandate and then function independently, just like the children's advocate does in other jurisdictions across the country. Why do we feel the need in Alberta to come up with a made-in-Alberta solution that undercuts the public trust that will be put into this advocate for the next five years and undercuts the independence, I would suggest, of the advocate indefinitely through the functioning of that council?

I appreciate that the government was open enough to our concerns to be interested in creating the title and creating the impression that they have created an officer of the Legislature who will stand up for children in Alberta. I just wish that they had been more committed to actually doing it, and I just wish that we didn't have to wait five years to have the real thing actually come into play.

With those comments in mind, I certainly look forward to the opportunity to engage in further debate and opportunities for amendments to this legislation in order to ensure that perhaps the government will improve it while we debate it over the course of the next few days and accept some amendments that might actually result in improvement, specifically to change the appointment process and to ensure that the mandate is expanded to match that of other children's advocates across the country.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. Through the chair, please. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. To the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. That's a good point, especially around the transition and the time period. Yes, I think that is fairly simply dealt with in that it could be referred through to the Legislative Offices Committee to review the current person's resumé or something and then refer it back to the Legislative Assembly rather than just putting in a transitional clause that says that the guy that has it now is the one that's going to have it because it means that we do have five years where we have an officer that is not the same as the rest of the officers under the Legislative Assembly Act.

The question that occurs to me is that when you actually read section 2(1), the appointment of the Child and Youth Advocate, it does not refer in any way to the Legislative Offices Committee doing the recruitment and interviewing and process and the recommendation to the Legislative Assembly. That piece is missing, and that's what I was looking for in the rest of the act. When it refers to the standing committee, which clearly in this act refers to the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices, is there some clause in here that says that the committee will hire or will – what's the word I'm looking for? – vet and go through the process with the next one? It doesn't.

It refers to: "The Lieutenant Governor in Council," which is cabinet, of course, "on the recommendation of the Legislative Assembly, must appoint a Child and Youth Advocate to carry out the duties and functions set out in this Act." Does this mean, then, in the opinion of the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona that, in fact, we might never have one that goes through the same process as the other officers of the Legislature: the Chief Electoral Officer, the Ombudsman, the FOIP Commissioner, the Ethics Commissioner, and the Auditor General? To me, it looks like this is somehow coming through the Legislative Assembly, but there is no mention of the standard process from the Standing Committee on Legislative Offices. Given this Assembly, it means that it's a government appointment because the majority vote in this Assembly is always a government majority vote. That's essentially saying that as long as this thing is in play, that's how it's going to happen. So I'm wondering if the member has a comment on that.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. In fact, I mean, section 2 as a whole, it's my understanding based on our researchers, mirrors the language used with respect to other officers of the Legislature in that when it says "on the recommendation of the Legislative Assembly," the Legislative Assembly has its own processes for how they make recommendations. The processes are to go through the Leg. Offices Committee and create a subcommittee and yada, yada, yada. So I think that section 2 is fine because it mirrors the sections that you would find governing other officers of the Legislature. That piece is fine.

It's section 24 that is the concern because section 24 states that the current Child and Youth Advocate will be "deemed to be" the Child and Youth Advocate, and then it talks about a term of up to five years. That's the concern, that the Child and Youth Advocate will for five years not be an independent officer of the Legislature.

I see the Government House Leader shaking his head, so presumably there will be amendments proposed to clarify that the legislation does not currently allow the current Child and Youth Advocate to remain the advocate for up to five years.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. minister, before you speak, could I just remind members that we're in the second reading of this bill, and the thrust of second reading is to discuss the principle of the bill. The clause-by-clause discussion and debate, of course, will occur in committee. I'm just reminding everyone.

The hon. minister, please.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'm wondering if I might ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona why she would interpret the act the way she does when I think it's very clear. There are two sections of the act that are applicable. Section 2 allows for the appointment of the advocate as an officer of the Legislature. She's quite right; that's the same type of phrase as you'll find in the Ombudsman Act or others. In other words, the Legislature itself sets this process and has a Standing Committee on Legislative Offices that does that process. So that would be done in exactly the same way.

Section 24 is a transitional provision to make sure that there's no vacancy in the office. The current advocate becomes the new advocate. Now, there's nothing that prevents the Legislature from deciding that it wants to appoint a new advocate because this advocate appointed under 24 is in place until a new advocate is appointed. I wonder why she doesn't read it that way.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Are there other speakers to Bill 25 at second reading? Section 29(2)(a) has expired. Any other speakers?

Seeing no one, I would ask the hon. Minister of Human Services to close debate should he wish to do so.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Very briefly, I think that this is a timely act. We've had a Child and Youth Advocate in this province for quite a number of years, but I think it is timely that the Child and Youth Advocate become an officer of the Legislature. It creates a more open and transparent process, and I believe the public will have a greater degree of confidence in a Child and Youth Advocate appointed in this way.

8:10

The serious incident review committee, the quality council, if you will, is a very important addition to the process to make sure that whenever there is a serious incident, we can learn from it, we can improve the process, and we can improve the system. I would disagree entirely with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona when she says that that's a babysitting committee. I think that's a very unfair characterization, unfair to the advocate because the advocate's powers are clear. The advocate clearly has an independence and authority quite separate and apart from the quality council.

To make sure that the advocate has access to everything that the quality council has, the advocate is appointed as a member of the quality council, but it clearly doesn't fetter his or her discretion or ability to deal with any issue that they wish to within the powers and authorities that they're given. So this is a very good step forward, a very important piece of work.

Again I would respond to the concept that section 24 appoints the existing advocate for five years. It does not. The act clearly puts the authority in the Legislature and, presumably, through the Legislative Offices Committee to appoint an advocate any time it wants to. The transitional provision in section 24 says that the current advocate remains the advocate until such time as the Legislature appoints an advocate.

Now, the current advocate does have a four-year contract. Apparently he started in June, as I understand it, so my hope would be that people would be reasonable about the process. The person has been asked to come to Alberta to do a job. My hope would be that he would be able to continue to do that job for the balance of his contract unless Leg. Offices, in reviewing his performance, decided that they wanted someone different. But it is entirely up to Legislative Offices to decide when and if they want to start that process. That's very clear in the act.

With those few comments I would recommend to the House that we pass the act for second reading and move quickly to establish an independent Child and Youth Advocate in Alberta, establish the quality council in Alberta, and get on with making a much, much better system for the protection of children in Alberta.

[Motion carried; Bill 25 read a second time]

Bill 26

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate November 23: Mr. Mason speaking]

The Acting Speaker: Is there anyone else who wishes to speak? We'll go to the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, please.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the intent of Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, but I want to provide some caution and concern as to how the intent to save lives may catch the wrong individuals. If I were to use sort of a seafaring, ocean analogy, what we want is a gillnet rather than a dragnet approach. We want to get the specific offenders who are causing the damage, who are over the limit and causing the accidents. We don't want a dragnet approach where a soccer mom – we'll use that term – who has had a glass of wine at dinner and is driving home gets pulled over, has her car taken away and her licence suspended.

To bring another analogy to it and more of an Alberta analogy, is this bill going to serve as a clear-cutting, where the entire forest is taken down, at the .05 level? Or is it going to be applied selectively to those people, such as with our legislation on distracted driving, who come to the attention of a peace officer and, therefore, because of their distracted nature they are pulled over and dealt with? Bill 26 may be the equivalent of a sledgehammer when a watch tinker's hammer is required.

Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about how widespread this particular bill is. You've heard me speak on numerous occasions in favour of distracted driving, wanting to go beyond just the hand-held to the hands-free device because it was the mental activity that was impeded as opposed to just the physical activity, and of course impairment, obviously, is impairing a person's mental capacity and physical ability to safely operate their vehicle. But where we need more support is on the front line. We need more police officers conducting roadside checks to make sure that the individuals that cause the most danger and havoc, the ones that are driving without insurance, the ones that are blowing well over the .05 and causing the concerns, are dealt with.

The other group besides the chronic drinker and driver is the youth of Alberta. The 18- to 24-year-olds, next to the chronic drinkers and drivers, are the ones most likely to run into trouble based on poor judgment, and I'm not sure that Bill 26 provides the education element that would correct that poor judgment. I've previously spoken in this House about some of the poor judgments I made as a youth and the fact that I learned very early on, and thankfully without injury to myself or to others, that alcohol and steering wheels don't mix.

What I would like to see that currently isn't in Bill 26 is a greater education process such as the PARTY program that we see for grade 9s. I would like to see that expanded to deter young people, through an education process, from overconsumption and then getting behind the wheel. Now, the hon. Deputy Premier in debate can explain why he sort of pooh-poohed the idea of the PARTY program being extended, and I look forward to his explanation. Mr. Speaker, we need two things to happen. We need to be proactive, and that is the education component, and then we need the appropriate enforcement.

We have, obviously, seasonal road checks, and they do capture some of the individuals. I'm thankful for that. But in order to save lives, we have to change attitudes, and changing attitudes is the hardest part of this circumstance. Initially taking away a person's car and their licence because they are at the .055 or whatever point above yet are still able to safely operate their vehicle is a concern. Also, Mr. Speaker, depending on our body size or body chemistry, our tolerance for alcohol varies. So from a human rights point of view potentially this bill is discriminatory for either a smaller built individual or, for example, a woman who is of a slight nature.

Mr. Speaker, because at a very early age – as I've explained, I'm basically a teetotaler. There is a large part of me that says: "Whatever we can do to eliminate drinking and driving, go for it. Be as punitive as possible." Even on the punitive end Bill 26 doesn't talk about demerit points; it does talk about certain licence restrictions. But just as the distracted driving law doesn't take points off your licence for your bad behaviour, this Bill 26, in its first stages, can be a momentary infringement as opposed to a proactive, permanent solution.

Now, there are some very interesting statistics that came out of B.C. that I'm sure our Premier looked at when considering this legislation, and that was that over a five-month period the number of people killed in alcohol-related circumstances dropped from 45 to 22, which is significant. What is missing is the degree to which the person was at .05 or higher when these fatalities occurred.

It seems to be, from the limited opportunity I've had to speak with emergency physicians, that this bill may be directed at the wrong people. What we need to be clearing off our roads are the unfortunate habitual drinkers and drivers. Bill 26 applies the same sort of expectation across the entire population but does not significantly focus or provide that pincer directed at the worst offenders. Yes, the repeat offenders will have the equivalent of a lock mechanism put on the car after their second offence so they have to blow before they can start their vehicle. That's important, but so much of this is after the fact. The damage has occurred.

I'm very anxious to put in the proactive part of the bill: get across the idea that drinking and driving is not only foolish; it's a critical concern. When things are done properly – I reference the PARTY program in junior high school – kids do start to get it. Mr. Speaker, you and I have kind of a common background. We know what our students are capable of. They in general have the capability, the intelligence, the understanding right at the junior high level and take it down to the elementary level. Elementary children, I know very well from my grandchildren, can give their granddad or their mom and dad a terrific scolding if they figure the behaviour that they're demonstrating is inappropriate. Deal proactively in the schools in larger community circumstances about the dangers of drinking and driving and potentially that one drink is too much.

Currently in the restaurants the portions that are served in a glass of wine are six ounces or nine ounces. You're offered that choice when you go to The Keg, for example, or any other restaurant. For a small woman or a light-framed youth that six ounces puts you over the .05.

Mr. Speaker, while I appreciate the intent, I think there have to be amendments to ensure that the scope of this act deals with the problem as opposed to just catching a whole variety of people in the net in an inappropriate fashion, a balance of a person's human rights and safety, the avoidance of carnage on our roadways.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available for any questions or comments pertaining to the previous speaker. The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member pointed out that I was opposed to some PARTY thing or something. I have no idea what he was talking about. Frankly, I don't like to be accused of something when it's not true. I'd just ask the hon. member to clarify his remarks if he may, please.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, hon. Deputy Premier. I'm sorry. Potentially what happened is that you were caught in that larger net which I was describing. I interpreted the laughing or the joviality associated at the same time as I mentioned the PARTY program in grade 9. Potentially you were receiving a humorous anecdote from the Minister of Energy, and your joviality had nothing to do with the mention of a very good PARTY program. If you were caught up in that large net, which to me is a concern, I apologize for having caught you inappropriately.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Deputy Premier.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That is truly an example of making an assumption when it isn't warranted and looking at something that isn't true and putting it on the floor of this House as a truth. I am not opposed to any of the programs that would keep our young people from drinking or driving under the influence of any of those substances that we want them to stay away from. Indeed, I've often and always told my kids: if you're going to drive, don't drink. It won't have any effect on any of these bills that we're doing because if you don't do the crime, you don't need to worry about the time.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. Hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I very much appreciate that clarification. I am sorry for, as I say, having miscaught you. Hopefully, as part of the magnanimous catch-and-release program, you'll accept my apology for misinterpreting your actions during the discussion of the party program.

I know you're a father. I know you care. I have similar concerns for my own family and the well-being of my grandchildren. I appreciate your clarification. Thank you for straightening out myself and this House.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, for your clarification and your apology.

Are there any others under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, I would then ask for Calgary-Glenmore to rise and speak, please.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to recognize you and congratulate you on your sitting there in the chair. I appreciate the efforts that you make to ensure the proceedings go forward in a fair and equitable way.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, just before you proceed, might we just interrupt you briefly to revert to the introduction of visitors quickly? Does everybody agree?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Cross.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I begin by saying that it's good to see you in the chair this evening.

Also, something else very special has happened. We have three young guests here in the audience. It's a pleasure to see you here as well. I just noticed that they've arrived here in the Legislature. The one person I'd like to introduce that I personally know is John Hampson, who is visiting here this evening. John, as some of you may know and recognize, worked as a summer student in the former ministry of children and youth services and was very highly regarded for the good work that he did there. Just as importantly, though, John was a very strong contributing member of the Youth Secretariat with the ministry of children and youth services. John, I welcome you, and I welcome the two other guests that are here with you this evening as well and would ask that you please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. members, for that courtesy.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011 (continued)

The Acting Speaker: Please, could we ask Calgary-Glenmore to continue with his comments?

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always nice to have visitors here in the House to watch the proceedings as they go forward.

I'd like to take this opportunity to talk about Bill 26 in second reading. I guess I'll start off by saying that I understand the intent. I think the intent is admirable, but I'm very concerned about the consequences and what we're really trying to accomplish in this bill. To read from the government's press release on the 21st of November, it says:

With 96 deaths and 1,384 injuries caused by impaired driving on Alberta roads last year, Alberta has introduced new legislation aimed at improving safety on the province's roads.

Bill 26 . . . introduced in the Alberta Legislature by Transportation Minister . . . imposes tougher sanctions on impaired drivers, especially repeat offenders.

That is excellent to that point. The problem, as the Member for Calgary-Varsity just pointed out, is that it's stated here that it's supposed to go after impaired drivers. Impaired driving, to my understanding, at this point in Canada is over the blood-alcohol level of .08, but there's a lot of content in this bill that talks about below .08. I'd like to talk a little bit about that at this point and my concerns and perhaps more especially the Albertans who have contacted me.

I just spent the last hour and 40 minutes over at the U of A talking to a class there about government, about laws, legislation. I asked them if they thought we should lower the blood-alcohol limit to .05. I thought there might be a little bit of discussion on it, but it was unanimous. They all said no. We talked a little bit about the science of it and why they thought so. The key is that the studies – and again I'll start, I guess, by saying that this really should go to committee, I believe, because we need to do more research on this. If there's something new or new evidence that

I'm not aware of, I would change my position, but my understanding, Mr. Speaker, is that .08 is the legally impaired level of driving, where the laws of the land say that you're impaired and that you're not to drive at that level. The biggest content of this bill is more about the .05 to .08, and that's a concern.

The intent. We've all heard that story that with good intentions we've paved the road to some destination that we don't want to arrive at. I feel that this is a lot of good intentions, but when we arrive at the end, we've put a lot of people at that destination that they don't want to be in when I don't think they've done anything illegal or really endangered others around them. That's the question and what the debate should be.

I was disappointed to be down in the press room this afternoon to listen to our Premier talk about this to the press. She said that she wants this passed by Christmas. What was interesting to me is that she said: we had a robust discussion in caucus. We talk about free votes, but I'm going to be amazed – I am personally going to be amazed – if there is one member, let alone 10 over there, that's going to stand up and vote against this. The Premier talked about a robust discussion and about a more honest, a more open, a more transparent government, yet I will bet they're going to be whipped, and they're all going to vote for this because they've lost that discussion in caucus, where they say that the democratic process really takes place in the province of Alberta.

Again, I look at that as another broken promise to Albertans. This isn't more open and transparent. I do hope that I am wrong on this in the next few days. Again, the velocity at which she's pushing these bills through concerns me greatly. We're not doing the research. We don't have the evidence being brought forward to say that this is what it is. If we did, I think that the federal government would be coming in with a law saying that we need to reduce the impaired level to .05, and they would present a case, but there's been no case presented. It's kind of interesting.

Again, because of the speed at which this stuff is coming forward and the size of our caucus and the funding to our caucus, we don't get to do the research that we'd like to, so sometimes we have to take things at face value. I don't have time to double-check it, but according to the stats that I've been given, Mr. Speaker, only 2 per cent – 2 per cent – of the fatally injured drivers who were tested were in that .05 to .08. So when you take these numbers that we start with, the 96 deaths and the 1,384 injuries, and go by 2 per cent, in my opinion we are running after pennies when there are gold coins rolling along the ground beside us. We're focused on these pennies when the bigger problem or the bigger opportunity is being missed.

There have been many members that have talked eloquently about the importance – and this is where it really is – of enforcing the laws that we have in our land now. I am confident that if we were to ask, there is nobody in here – we would vote unanimously – that wants drunk or impaired drivers on the road. The Minister of Education then got up and said: well, there's zero tolerance. Then let's pass the legislation if that's what our intent is, zero tolerance, but I don't believe that is the intent.

When we look at those accidents, only 40 per cent of those deaths, according to the stats that I've received, are people that were impaired at .08 or above. Forty per cent. Mr. Speaker, what that says to me is that there's a bigger problem. Though this is a big problem, there's a bigger problem with the other 60 per cent. I don't see any legislation coming forward. Perhaps this government thinks that that will all change next year because we can't drive while we're holding a cellphone. I don't know.

Again, let's look down the road and be a little bit patient before we run off and pass all these feel-good bills when we don't even know – again, our former Premier always referred to this, and I love it – the unintended consequences. What are the unintended consequences if we were to pass this and it's enforced by this Christmas? I have a lot of friends, relatives that live out in rural Alberta. They might drive into a small town. They might be there for a hockey night with their children, have a great night. They might stay afterwards on a date, want a glass of wine, whatever else, and then they need to drive home. They're not impaired. They're within the legal limit, yet they can't afford to risk it because our government is going to pass new legislation saying, "No; that's unacceptable; we're going to confiscate your car for three days" or your vehicle, whatever it might be. Again, no judge, no jury. This is just action, the heavy hand of government stepping in and saying, "We know best" and scooping it away.

I'd even take the next step with the unintended consequences. Has there even been an economic study? Is it done by somebody competent? I question that because this government had their economic study done on raising the royalties and said the billions of dollars they're going to get. There have been many referred to, saying that if we raised to a progressive tax, we'd be able to get another $6 billion.

Ms Notley: Eleven.

Mr. Hinman: Oh, thank you. Eleven billion dollars if we raised our progressive tax. But these people don't understand the consequences, that those people who have moved here will move away to another jurisdiction where they're not taxed so heavily.

An Hon. Member: Would you move?

Mr. Hinman: I was asked: would I move? When I was actually elected a few years earlier, some of the wealthiest individuals that I met with said: "You know what? I don't need to stay here. My money doesn't need to stay here. If they pass this, I'm leaving." I would stay here. I'm not one of these ones who's going to get, supposedly, a million dollars if you change the tax. Those people who are wealthy: they have other residences; they have other places. This one individual I talked to sold 260 properties and liquidated out and left our province because they changed that. People do move. Money and people move with the royalties, and we lost a great individual.

I always say that wealth is wonderful. If there are two individuals that I would love to have here, it's Warren Buffett and Bill Gates. Again, how many individuals are we going to lose, and how many small businesses are going to suffer? [interjection] He's free to pay more. It's interesting that people talk like that, yet they don't do it. Warren Buffett could donate a lot of money to the U.S. government if he wants to, but instead he sets up his own organization and makes sure the money is spent well. He does a better job than the government does by a long shot, in my opinion. [interjection] And he's free to run to be the President as well. There are a lot of wealthy ones down there that are interested in doing that, and I say: go for it.

Mr. Speaker, the problem with this bill is the unintended consequences. We have no idea what it is going to do to small business, what it's going to do to people, yet what we do know is that it's going to catch very few individuals or decrease, I believe, the fatalities that are on our roads and the carnage, which is what this bill is aimed to do. Again, as with this government so often, when they aim at a target – I don't know – they're cross-eyed or something because they can't even hit the target that they're purporting to shoot towards.

Ms Blakeman: Are you talking about blood-alcohol levels?

Mr. Hinman: Yes, and the small businesses that are going to suffer because the Premier wants to have this bill passed by Christmas.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. I got you. I'm with you totally.

Mr. Hinman: Great.

It's a big problem. I don't even think the economic consequences were considered. This is a feel-good bill with good intentions that is not going to accomplish what the Premier and every one of us in here really wants, and that's to reduce or to eliminate, really, drunk driving. This bill does not address that. So we have to ask ourselves: why would we pass it?

Like I say, the real acid test for me on this new open and democratic government is that I cannot believe that every one of the government members is going to be in complete concurrence with this and vote in favour. When we have our vote, I do not believe that we're going to see any discrepancy over there.

Ms Blakeman: How about Lac La Biche-St. Paul? How does he feel?

Mr. Hinman: Yes. Lac La Biche-St. Paul: I've already talked to him, and he's all excited. He is the carrier of this bill, so of course he's going to vote for it. They're all for it; trust me. We'll do a standing count.

Mr. Horner: Why don't we do it right now?

Mr. Hinman: We'll do it very shortly.

Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned. This bill should be sent to committee. We should do some research. We should have some better numbers to verify why we're wanting to expand this. I believe that this is a desperate government that is looking to be popular. I believe this is a desperate government that needs cash because they don't know how to control the spending that they have, and this is the intent of this bill.

There's no thought here of the real consequences of this bill, so I would urge members to postpone this and, again, really send this to committee. Let's do some research, and if it comes back in the spring or sometime shortly after saying: "You know what? We have a major problem. That 2 per cent that we have right now really is 60 per cent of the fatalities on our roads. We just didn't do a good enough job of collecting the data" – I'm all for lowering this. But I do believe that the .08 – there is a lot of science that went into that. Again, it's called the impaired level, and everybody who is driving is impaired to some extent or another.

Ms Blakeman: So this is not evidence-based decision-making.

Mr. Hinman: No. This is not evidence-based decision-making. This is popularity. This is a need for revenue.

I'm disappointed that the government in its haste wants to bring this forward, with the Premier saying that she wants this by Christmas. Again, all we've done is that we've changed the head of the beast, not the behaviour of the beast, which isn't good enough for Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that we'll do a little bit more research. I would love to hear if there is a robust discussion in caucus. I cannot believe that you don't want to share some of your robust thoughts with Albertans in Hansard. It's amazing.

Ms Blakeman: Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Hinman: I'll let you ask them all of those things.

Ms Blakeman: Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Hinman: Please, let me try and concentrate in my last 30 seconds.

I believe it's going to be small towns and rural Alberta that will be punished the most with this bill. I hope that rural Albertans are looking at this and realizing what this government is going to force through here in the next two weeks. It's wrong. I ask people to vote against this. I will be voting against this. I want to speak out against driving drunk. Driving with impaired abilities is not acceptable. What we need to do – and there is this in the bill – is that we need to raise the penalty and the consequences for repeat offenders and those that are drunk and stop them and get them off the road. But this bill is not going to do it, in my opinion, in the current state.

I'll sit down and hopefully hear some more robust discussion.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much.

Hon. members, one of the long-standing traditions in this House, of course, is order and decorum. In fact, our Standing Order 13(1) requires the Speaker to maintain order and decorum. It seems that there was quite a bit of kibitzing going on and a lot of discussions occurring, trying to take the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore off his stride perhaps. Some of it was done in the spirit of joviality. I realize that. I allowed a little bit more to go on than I would normally do. I will not allow any more of it in the interest of preserving the time that is so precious to us here tonight.

Debate Continued

The Acting Speaker: With that having been said, I would ask if anybody wishes to address the previous speaker under 29(2)(a).

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The point is well taken.

I wonder if the member is party to the Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research literature on blood-alcohol level. I'd be happy to send it over if you'd like to see it. Their review in 2009 suggests the following:

A compelling case exists in the literature for keeping drivers with a BAC over 0.05% off of the roads. Scientific evidence accumulated over the past 50 years indicates a direct relationship between rising BAC levels and the risk of being involved in a motor vehicle crash.

I'll jump to the punch line.

While there is a wide variation in the effects of alcohol from one individual to another, the evidence shows that driving performance begins to deteriorate significantly at 0.05% BAC. There is also a general consensus that the skills that are most important to driving are also among the most sensitive to alcohol.

A review conducted by Chamberlain and Solomon found in both lab and field studies that driving-related skills such as vision, steering, braking, vigilance, and, more importantly, information processing and divided attention deteriorate after .05.

That's just some information for you.

Mr. Hinman: I appreciate the study and the studiousness in bringing that forward. But then the question needs to be: why don't we make it illegal at .05? Why would we possibly want to have this grey area, where all I see is revenue and punishment, that often is a consequence for people other than the individual who actually was impaired?

Again the numbers that I've got – and I realize there's that possibility. But if we really want to reduce the carnage on our roads, perhaps what we should do is pass legislation that nobody is allowed to drive without having – what do I want to say? – a policeman or whatever there to make sure that they're paying attention. Sixty per cent of our fatalities are not even related to blood alcohol, which is the majority of our accidents. It's people that are distracted in other areas. We're talking about 2 per cent, according to the studies that I have, of that .05 to .08.

Let's bring all this evidence together, and let's look at it so that we can make an informed decision rather than what I call a political or a revenue-driven decision or a popularity-driven one. We're not doing the research we need. Again, if we've got these other huge areas where 60 per cent of fatalities are, maybe we should be looking at that and saying: what's the problem? Maybe we shouldn't be allowing people to have multiple people in the vehicle because they're distracted when they talk.

The point that I guess I'm trying to make, hon. member, is that humans are subject to error. We have this capacity to be distracted. We are easily involved in other things. I mean, we have all these roadside signs that are up there. We have all kinds of things that can distract us, yet we seem to be focusing right now on 2 per cent out of a hundred and saying: "This is a problem. If we pass this by Christmastime, we're all going to go into the new year in a better place."

I'm very concerned about the consequences to small businesses and to those people that have been enjoying a legal substance. I have to say, Mr. Speaker, that it doesn't affect me. I was very popular in high school and university. I was always the dedicated driver, and I got my free pop. I don't drink, so I have nothing at stake in this personally other than the fact of the carnage of that person coming down the road and whether or not he's impaired.

Let's get out there and really enforce what we have. Let's get the checkpoints up. Let's enforce them and raise the punishment and the cost to those repeat offenders and those over the limit. Perhaps it should be progressive – .08, .12, .16 – and have a progressive penalty as it increases. That's where the carnage and the problem is.

8:50

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

I'd love to have the Deputy Premier and then the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As President of the Treasury Board I was acutely interested when the hon. member said that this was somehow revenue driven. As I said before, I'm very concerned about our young people on the road, but I'm also very concerned about those who, frankly, are my age and perhaps are not taking it as seriously as they should.

I do want to ask the hon. member where the revenue generation is that you speak of in this legislation because I don't see it.

Mr. Hinman: An excellent question. I guess sometimes we get caught up in the progressiveness of what they're going to pass. At this point it's just confiscation. I appreciate your point.

Mr. Horner: Progressive or not, hon. member, you mentioned revenue generation.

Mr. Hinman: Yeah, because this government does nothing but talk about a PST. It talks about new health care premiums. I believe there's talk of imposing a cash penalty as well.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. I regret that the time allocated for 29(2)(a) has elapsed.

Are there other speakers at second reading of Bill 26? I have Calgary-Mountain View on my list wishing to speak next, if that's the case, and then I'll recognize the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A really worthwhile discussion, and I'm very pleased to be a part of this. I think it's an important initiative that the government has taken on a critical issue of public health, Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011. The primary role of government, of course, is to create the conditions for health, safety, peace, and order in society. With nearly a hundred alcohol-related deaths annually and 400 injuries, the personal loss and costs to our society are very real and very serious. There is a need to review our approach always to drinking and driving as a fundamental responsibility of government. I'm pleased to see the discussion and debate here.

I mentioned a little bit about ACICR, the Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research. They reported in 2009 that 23 per cent of fatal collisions were associated with alcohol itself. Behaviour change is difficult, Mr. Speaker, and it encompasses a host of approaches, from education, through penalties, inconveniences, and changing cultural perceptions and cultural values.

The scientific literature, again, indicates that there is no specific threshold for impairment. Everybody metabolizes alcohol differently, and alcohol progressively impairs all of us. From the first amount of alcohol entering the blood, there is an impact on our ability to process information and to perform fine motor functions. It's just a reality. The literature indicates, for example, that after .05 very specifically we can measure changes in vision, in steering capacity, in braking response time, in personal vigilance, in information processing, and in the handling of divided attention and being able to respond.

The balance between individual freedom and community interest and security is always one of the great challenges in our democratic society. This legislation attempts to find a new balance, obviously, with greater sanctions and potentially a set of new cultural norms that might follow related to drinking and driving, not unlike the shift that I think we've seen around tobacco in the last 30 years, where there's a new intolerance, I guess, for tobacco use in our society, including in young people. We have seen the rates of tobacco use decline fairly substantially, perhaps mostly related to taxation. I think the evidence in the literature is that the cost of tobacco has had as much or more impact on smoking behaviour than anything else we've done, but so be it. We are shifting the attitudes to tobacco in public places and in private accommodations as well.

With 90 per cent of our collisions related to driver factors – inattention, fatigue, drugs, alcohol, speeding – these are individual behavioural choices. We have to decide what we can legislate without inordinate loss of individual freedom and cost. If we can do it without inordinate loss of freedom and cost, indeed, we should, even if it saves only a couple of lives a year.

The bottom line and the question I think many of the members here are asking is: will reducing the blood-alcohol limit from .08 to .05 result in fewer collisions and fewer deaths? What is the evidence? Where has it been applied? What will the negative effects be on our society if we change?

We hear concerns about potential waste of police activities and lost opportunities in areas where we could get better benefit if police were actually doing something else. We hear about the possibility of loss of income from alcohol sales. That's a concern for the businesses that sell alcohol. We hear about potential serious disruption of people's lives by taking away their licence and their vehicle. These are real, and they have to be taken into the balance.

Where I see us headed in terms of dashboard distractions is that if we're talking about inattention as being a fundamental cause of injuries and collisions, there are a whole bunch more risks coming in our dashboards, where people can get on a GPS, they can listen to music, they can text by verbal voice command, they can communicate, obviously, in different ways with people. These are a series of distractions that all are cumulative as I would see it. So a younger driver, less used to alcohol, has other people in the car: add to that a little bit of alcohol, and to me it is simply one more factor that is going to increase the risk of injury and death.

From the point of view of measuring risks and benefits, I think there is some real argument for making this shift, one which perhaps will help to shape a new cultural attitude towards drinking and driving. Anyone who has seen, as I have, dead and injured people in vehicles has a particularly personal and passionate feeling about this whole area.

British Columbia has had in place for several years now this provision where a blood-alcohol concentration of .05 is no longer tolerated. They have seen a remarkable drop in alcohol-related deaths. Roughly 20 individuals fewer die each year on B.C. highways.

Ms Blakeman: Well, in that five months.

Dr. Swann: In a five-month period. Thank you. They looked at five-month periods through the Christmas season, to be sure. Over four years of monitoring this for the five-month period each year, there were roughly 20 fewer deaths in B.C. Now, that was coincident with the change in legislation around blood-alcohol concentration. It wasn't necessarily caused by the change in law around blood-alcohol concentration but a very powerful correlation. Twenty lives fewer lost during that period of four years.

It's likely not related entirely to that legal change but to a series of changes that may have to do, in fact, with people taking drinking and driving much more seriously because they were hearing and seeing friends – more enforcement, more personal cost associated with it, more parents getting on their kids because of the cost and inconvenience of losing their vehicles, and so on – and more people perhaps speaking up about drinking and driving. Who knows? All the factors might have been involved.

What I approach this debate with is a healthy skepticism about the impact of laws in our society but a real sense that anything that we can do as legislators to reduce the carnage, to reduce the health care costs, to reduce the disability is something that we should seriously take a look at.

I'll be listening intently to a lot of the debate and looking at any more recent research that can help us make this decision in the best long-term interests of our public.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have just one question of the hon. member. That question very much is directed to a comment that was made that said that the rules of impaired driving have changed – I assume you meant the criminal rules – from .08 to .05. I just want to ask the hon. member if he knows what the guidelines are today for a 24-hour suspension for alcohol, in your professional capacity. I can ask you the question, or I can answer the question.

Dr. Swann: I'd be happy to hear the answer because I don't have the answer to that question.

Mr. Danyluk: Okay. Mr. Speaker, I will say to you that the guidelines are no different. The guidelines today are .05 to .08 for a 24-hour suspension when it's an alcohol-related offence. That is used today as a standard. It is used on a regular basis. Please understand that the front end of this bill is not any different from what it is today. It is the back end where the penalties are. That is the difference. A 24-hour suspension is what was being used and is being used today and what is being . . . [interjection] Sorry?

Ms Blakeman: Three days.

Mr. Danyluk: But that's the back end. The back end is that the penalty is stronger. The culture change needs to happen, but the criteria for the offence are not any different: .05 to .08; .05 to .08.

Thank you very much.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Hinman: Yes.

The Acting Speaker: Proceed.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. I have two questions for the hon. member, perhaps three. I appreciate his research and the thought that he's bringing forward. First of all, in that report does it have any correlation and talk about the amount of enforcement? Did it go up over those previous years, and do people know that there's more enforcement out there? Is that perhaps the reason why the offences have gone down?

I also need to comment, I guess, that the tragedies are real. My son is a co-worker of one of the gentlemen who lost their children in that tragic accident up in Grande Prairie. It's amazing how small the world is. My son was devastated by it as well. The discussion that went on in that community about the offence as the families got together were heart-wrenching as well.

The question that we need to ask here, hon. member, is: what really solves our problem? Again, we're looking at a small percentage here. What do we do to solve the problem? I just don't feel like what we're changing here has an effect. Are there many other variables that we could be looking at for this small percentage? Nobody wants the carnage; we totally understand that. Again I ask, you know: do we need safety officers to ride with us? Because that's where the biggest number of accidents are; 60 per cent are from so-called unrelated – just inattention. So does that mean we do that?

You've made mention that if we can even save just two lives, but sometimes the consequence – I do believe that there's a price because humans have that ability to make choices. We all have the choice: do we want to drink and drive? Do we punish everybody to stop, possibly, those two people, and what are the real consequences of that? I have concerns over that, to always say that if we just saved one, you know, all of a sudden the world is going to change, yet then five other people die for some other reason, and we don't always get to the root of what we're trying to do.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, is that a quick supplemental?

Dr. Swann: Just answering the question. Thank you. I mean that is the great debate that we're having, the balance. Let me say that my reading of the literature suggests that only 14 per cent of alcohol-related deaths are between .05 and .08. That's a small number of deaths.

To your question, it's a small amount, and there are multiple factors in that area, no doubt, that distract and increase the risk of injury. But it's not insignificant because it appears to be 14 per cent.

Mr. Hinman: What is not insignificant?

Dr. Swann: The surveillance effect that you talked about. Is it actually the result of more surveillance contributing to the reduced death rate in B.C.? Very likely.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. members.

The Minister of Justice and Attorney General on second reading of Bill 26.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to have a chance to make a few comments about this very important bill. Before I make my detailed comments, though, I do want to compliment all members here. This has been a very good discussion from all sides. Even though we may not agree with each other on some of the tools that we are proposing, there's no doubt that everybody has the same motivation here. Even those people who ultimately I might end up voting against I think have asked good questions, challenging questions, questions that need and deserve an answer. So I'm going to do my best to answer at least some of these.

First of all, this is obviously not easy. When you look back, we first criminalized in Canada drinking and driving back in 1921. This has been an evolutionary process. There wasn't a magic bullet then; there probably isn't a magic bullet now. There are all kinds of studies. In my job as minister I as well as a number of my colleagues have been actually bombarded by all of the studies. There is lots of information out there. We can all cite many, many studies. I'm not going to try here, although I'm very happy to share whatever I have with any colleague on any side of the House who wants it.

I would like to just summarize a few things that have come to my attention in terms of the studies. I think one of the things that the studies show is that drinking and driving is a behaviour that can be altered. Not all unattractive behaviours, undesirable behaviours are easily altered. I wouldn't say this is easily altered, but drinking and driving, the studies show, is one that can be altered. Another thing that the studies tend to show is that deterrence works. Another thing is that both punishments and treatments and, of course, education have a role. What I'm doing is repeating a number of things that have already been said, obviously. The perception of the risk of detection is very important, and swift and certain consequences are also extremely important.

There are two types of administrative actions that appear to be the most effective. One is licence suspensions. Another is action relating to the vehicle. One thing, interestingly, that the studies seem to show is that fines really don't do a whole lot.

Now, there has been a lot of talk about lowering the limit. This is actually one of my frustrations, and the Minister of Transportation has mentioned this as well. There is a lot of talk about how we're going to reduce the blood alcohol rate to .05. I'm really surprised at how many Albertans don't know that we have and have had sanctions in place, administrative sanctions, at .05 for a long time.

Now, we have to distinguish between criminal law and administrative sanctions. The Canadian Criminal Code, which the federal government has the jurisdiction over, says that it's a criminal offence to have a blood alcohol of over .08 when you're driving. The provinces do have the right and the power and the authority to levy administrative sanctions. I've heard charges that what we are proposing is the criminalization of drinking and driving between .05 and .08. Mr. Speaker, what we are proposing doesn't involve jail. It doesn't involve a fine. It doesn't even involve demerits. What it involves is withdrawing the privilege of being able to drive as the province has the power to both give and take back.

There have been arguments about the constitutionality of what we are proposing. There are three areas of constitutionality that have been discussed in terms of these provisions. One is that we're crossing over into federal jurisdictions, so it's a constitutional jurisdictional argument. The Supreme Court of Canada and provincial courts of appeal have said that it is not crossing over into federal jurisdiction.

Another argument is that somehow a person's constitutional rights are being taken away from them because they have the right to drive. The courts have disagreed and said that that is not taking away a constitutional right. There has been some criticism in the courts relating to the B.C. solution, which is not the same as the Alberta solution. That is why we have watched carefully what has happened in B.C., and we feel very confident that the measures that we have in terms of administrative fairness are well within what's reasonable and defensible.

9:10

I've also heard criticism that a person – now, this is specific to over .08, and you're going to have your licence taken away until the trial. This is not for when you're between .05 and .08. This is when you have blown over .08. Remember that this is now a federal criminal offence. People who are charged with serious criminal offences sometimes spend quite a bit of time in jail until their trial. The province of Alberta has the ability and the right to withdraw the privilege to drive until that person has had their trial.

Lastly, on the issue of .05, I've heard a lot of talk about how at .05 to .08 there's really no problem. I really appreciated the comments of the member for Riverview referring to a study that suggests otherwise. [interjection] Sorry?

Ms Blakeman: It's Mountain View, not Riverview.

Mr. Olson: Sorry. Mountain View.

There are many jurisdictions who have struggled with these issues. We're not the only ones. I'm going to just give a few examples of other jurisdictions that have administrative sanctions starting at .05 and lower: British Columbia, of course; Saskatchewan, which is actually at .04; Manitoba; Ontario; Nova Scotia; the Territories; Newfoundland; New Brunswick; and Prince Edward Island. Now, I should qualify that Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island have not yet proclaimed these measures, but they have passed them.

I want to mention a few countries that are at .05 or lower: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Costa Rica, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hong Kong, Iceland, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Latvia, Luxembourg, Macedonia, Netherlands, Peru, Philippines, Portugal, Slovenia, South Africa, Spain, Switzerland, Thailand, Taiwan, and Turkey. A number of these actually are even below .05 for certain kinds of drivers. They're down to .02 or zero tolerance. Japan, Sweden, Norway, and several others have .02 limits. This is an extensive list, and I just want to suggest that all of these jurisdictions have done their own research. We are not an outlier by using the .05 as a standard to say that people are on the edge, that they're at risk. I also want to say that if we can intervene early with somebody who's at .05, maybe we're going to stop them from being one of those people who is at 1.6 a few years down the road because we're going to force them to educate themselves, too.

With that, I want to thank everybody who has taken part in this. I think it's been a very worthwhile discussion, and I really ask all of my colleagues in the House to support this legislation.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Under 29(2)(a) I have the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I wanted to thank the minister for his comments and also just his class in being able to agree to disagree on things and not making it personal and so forth, which is a breath of fresh air.

I would ask him, though. You just cited a lot of different studies and very legitimately so. Like you, and like apparently a lot of us here, we've been bombarded with a lot of information on this, right? It just seems to me, Minister, that for something that is going to affect people's lives to the degree that this will affect them – I mean, this will affect many people's businesses. No doubt about it. You used the example of British Columbia: lots of businesses being affected. Of course, if that's going to save a large number of lives and it's worth that effect, well then, obviously, we have to do it.

It's going to affect people's social habits and what they do. Obviously, if it's in a good way and if it's a reasonable change in behaviour, great. But for a lot of people it means that, you know, they can't take the chance of having a drink or whatever.

An Hon. Member: Speed it up.

Mr. Anderson: I'm going to take longer if you keep distracting me like this. [interjections]

My question is: since we have all this information, wouldn't it make more sense, instead of trying to ram this through in essentially a couple of days, something that changes things this much, to put it to the all-party committee? Let's get this information out there. Let's discuss it as a group. Let's figure it out. Let's have people in from industry, from MADD, from all these different stakeholder groups. Let's talk about it and make sure that we get the right balance here.

One day the Premier just kind of came out of a meeting with Christy Clark, and all of a sudden it was like: "We're going to have new legislation. This is what it's going to be." And it didn't seem that there was very much thought that went into that. So why don't we do something like that?

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Would either the Minister of Justice or the Minister of Transportation wish to respond?

Mr. Olson: I would like to respond. Thank you for the comments. I was appointed into this ministry last February. One of the first briefings I had was about the work being done on this legislation by three different government ministries who had been working in collaboration very hard on it for a long time. I know there has been some reaction amongst some of my colleagues about this appearing to be a knee-jerk reaction. Frankly, all you have to do is turn on the TV after any weekend, and you pretty much can hear some bad news about some sort of a very sad event somewhere in the province.

This is not about any one event, any one tragic accident. It's not about any one meeting between several Premiers. This has been in the works for a long time. I think, again, just by the long list of other jurisdictions that are doing this, there has been lots and lots of talk. I agree that these are strong penalties, and we want them to be strong because we want to send a message.

I can remember as a young person always hearing: don't drink and drive. We seem to interpret that as: don't drink too much and drive. The safest thing is to just not drink and drive. But if you are going to drink and drive, the message is that it's your responsibility. If you go over what is a generally accepted limit, you are going to be responsible. Again, the research shows that a sanction that's immediate and has a bit of sting to it is what's going to be the deterrent.

The Acting Speaker: The Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Maybe I'll just make a couple of quick points, so I let the hon. member opposite have an opportunity.

I think that there needs to be some clarity on some of the discussions you had, hon. minister, because one of the things that has been talked about is that the .05 to .08 is going to have the biggest impact on people. I want you to, again, clarify that .05 and .08 are being used now.

The second part that I would like you to clarify is that when we talk about over .08 . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. minister. I'm sorry; the time for 29(2)(a) has elapsed.

We're going to proceed with other speakers at second reading on Bill 26. On my list I have Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by Little Bow, followed by Calgary-Varsity.

I've recognized the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

9:20

Mr. Boutilier: Are we all going to settle down now, so I can speak and get your undivided attention? And it's impolite to point.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm glad I have the floor and the attention of people.

Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, second reading. Mr. Speaker, I actually have consulted on this issue with people that I hang around with at the hockey arena and also at Tim Hortons doughnuts. And guess what they tell me? They want to understand why the government is moving from .08 to .05. That's the question that they're asking. To the minister who's bringing in this legislation, I will give him free advice on this particular point. That's what they're saying, and actually that's what they're saying at the farmers' market in his own constituency, that I was at last Friday between 3:30 and 5:30, the Lakeland county farmers' market. They were asking that very . . . [interjection] I didn't see you there, but I'm sure you are there occasionally. Just so you know.

Mr. Speaker, the Government House Leader has some comments.

The Acting Speaker: Through the chair, please, gentlemen.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Well, that's through the chair. Can you please . . .

The Acting Speaker: You have the floor, hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. The Member for Fort McMurray-Buffalo has the floor.

The Acting Speaker: Correct.

Mr. Boutilier: Not the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud. Okay. I'm glad that's cleared up.

The Acting Speaker: Carry on.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, Mr. Speaker, in proceeding with giving free advice to the minister bringing this legislation in, the people I talk to, the hockey moms and dads and the people that hang around in doughnut shops – I don't want to give free advertising to one particular doughnut shop. In fact, doughnuts are actually not even good for you.

My point is this. They are concerned that they, driving their families – the story that had come out was that discretion sometimes is not used properly even though many times it is. In doing so, the situation was that cars had been impounded when they were at .05, and the mom and dad could not drive their children to extracurricular activities for the next seven days, I believe it was, because of this discretion that was used by an officer of the law in British Columbia, who actually was fairly new to the position and lacked experience. Having said that, though, Mr. Speaker, this is the penalty that was invoked, and it placed quite a lot of undue burden. Clearly, they were within the legal limit, and I can say that the hockey moms and dads that were meeting with those hockey moms and dads – it was quite a discussion.

I can assure you that what was being proposed to the minister was not held in favour because B.C. and Alberta are similar even though I notice the minister has deliberately tried to say that we have learned from what B.C. has done wrong. Of course, I welcome some questions to him at a later point on what they have done wrong, and then, actually, the same position can be used in terms of what this government, I think, has been premature in presenting here.

Why you want to ram through something like this within two weeks I just don't get. It's going to upset your constituents. It is not going to make our highways any safer. I say that with a four-year-old who travels highway 63 on Fridays, when everyone else is coming out of Fort McMurray and I'm driving home with my wife and my four-year-old son. Believe me, no one is more concerned about highways, about infrastructure and transportation, or in terms of what people are doing when it comes to safety on our highways.

Mr. Speaker, I believe one of the suggestions that was sent across the way to the Attorney General has been that, quite simply, this needs to be brought to a committee because I've heard a variety of statistics being quoted by numerous members from the government and from different parties. Really, for the average Albertan they're looking at these statistics, saying: what is it that I'm to believe? So I think there is an opportunity for members of this Assembly to come together rather than something being jammed through in a two-week period, something that the PC caucus had not even talked about before your new leader had been talking about it. Now it seems like everyone likes the idea. I can tell you right now that I know everyone over there doesn't like the idea and that you are being whipped into shape to vote the way the Premier wants you to vote as opposed to what your hockey moms and dads are saying in hockey arenas and in doughnut shops across Alberta.

That creates somewhat of a dilemma for you. Who are you going to listen to? Your PC leader or your constituents, your real bosses? Just remember that you're going to be going back to your real bosses in a very short period of time. I look forward to going back to my bosses, and I'm sure some people in here are going to be looking forward to going back to their bosses with confidence.

As I speak about the farmers' markets that I've been attending and when I think of the feedback that I've been receiving, there are seriously some unproven statistics. We do not want to see anyone die on our highways because of alcohol-related accidents. What we do want, though, is greater enforcement. Greater enforcement by having more police on the highways. Greater enforcement by having more checkpoints on the highways. Clearly, I believe there is more work to be done. I don't blame the police. I want to ask the question to the government of the last 40 years: why aren't there more police on the highways? Why isn't there more enforcement? Why? Why is that? Because the question is: does this government have a commitment to enforcement? [interjection] Are we finished with the conversation so that I can continue? Just trading barbs there.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, please continue.

Edmonton-Centre, please allow him to continue freely. Thank you.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I want to say that, clearly, the former Solicitor General and, in fact, this member over here from Airdrie-Chestermere: I know they worked very powerfully together as a team. They were an incredible team, so powerful that they actually had bulletproof vests on. I'm looking forward to the new Solicitor General putting on a bulletproof vest. In fact, I'm even willing to be the guy with the taser gun.

Because of the issue of enforcement on this issue of alcohol-related deaths, we want to ensure that enforcement is beefed up. I thank the previous Solicitor General because that was something, I know, that he was committed to. He talks to the same people I talk to, people at Tim Hortons doughnuts and people at hockey rinks and people at farmers' markets. I strongly suggest that the minister who's tabling this legislation should consider the same because it's amazing what you hear when you talk to Albertans. They're our bosses.

Right now I believe more work can be done within committee before a government tries to ram through something because of one Premier meeting another Premier in B.C. The minister knows that's exactly how it happened. In fact, I won't name the members on the other side who were 100 per cent against the piece of legislation that you have brought forward based on what the Premier has told you to bring forward.

That being the case, Mr. Speaker, I think that if we go back to committee, if we go back to do this bill right, we can better serve Albertans in the future to protect my four-year-old son and all Albertans who drive on our highways. But let's not penalize people that are on the highways today, from the moms and dads to the soccer moms and the hockey moms and dads that are out there taking their children from point A to point B.

I believe that we should take a more thoughtful, a more centred approach to this rather than this entitlement of saying: we know best, so listen to us. Why doesn't this government listen to their bosses? If you listen to your bosses, you don't even need a focus group to tell you what the right thing to do is on this particular issue. Not only that, but I know the minister would be very interested to realize how this is going to be an extremely undue pressure on people in rural Alberta. It's not like you're in downtown Calgary or Edmonton and can call a Yellow Cab within the next minute or two, by the way.

This particular piece of legislation has not been thought through clearly, just like it hadn't been thought through clearly in British Columbia, and now British Columbians are now paying the price.

Mr. Speaker, we do not want to see one death on a highway in Alberta. One death is too many. In fact, I don't ever refer to them as accidents anymore because they are all preventable. Ultimately, what I think is most important is that all of us in here follow the law when it comes to highway safety and, in fact, what takes place in Alberta. You know, my wife and I were driving back with our son last weekend on highway 63, the highway that hasn't seen any pavement in the last four years. I want to say that one thing is for certain. When I take my son driving on that highway, one thing for sure is that I'm not concerned about the driving of my wife or myself. I'm concerned about the drivers that are coming that are over .08. That should be enforced because of a checkpoint along the way.

Right now your focus is wrong-headed, okay? It's like the horse in front of the wagon. It should be where we're enforcing those on the road that are driving highway 63 today that are clearly driving at limits that are endangering my family. Spend your energy on enforcing those who are over the .08 limit rather than making people criminals that are trying to get their children from point A to point B and enjoying this quality of life that we enjoy in Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

We're going to proceed to 29(2)(a). I think, Edmonton-Centre, you had indicated that you wished to comment, and Calgary-Glenmore did as well and then the Minister of Transportation. If we could ask people to be a little bit brief, we can perhaps get all the people who wish to speak in on the roster.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I'm just following on a thread that has been moving through here for a while. There are some claims from the members opposite that this is nothing new, that it's been in the legislation for some time. If they're referring to the Criminal Code, fair enough, but when I look at this legislation, I see that section 88 has been replaced. In the old section 88 it clearly says under the immediate roadside sanctions section: "Where . . . a peace officer has reasonable and probable grounds," blah, blah, blah. It goes down to under section 88(2)(b)(i): "That person's blood exceeds 80 milligrams of alcohol."

In the new section that is replacing it, under section 2(b) it says: "The peace officer has reasonable . . . grounds," blah, blah, and "in such a quantity that the concentration of alcohol in that person's blood is equal to . . . 50 milligrams of alcohol." So it is a change in your legislation from what you had before specific to sanctions, which I think was the point that the minister was trying to make. When I looked in the original Traffic Safety Act, there is a 24-hour disqualification for alcohol and drugs. It doesn't specify anything until you get down to the voluntary, and again it specifies 80 milligrams. That's section 89(1)(5)(a) and (b).

I don't know if the member has any comment, but I know the minister does. If he'd like to answer that.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, just be reminded that we're talking about the principle of the bill here, not a clause-by-clause analysis.

Ms Blakeman: This is an important principle of this bill, and I wouldn't take this frivolously at all.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, I appreciate that, but we're citing clause by clause, and if we could focus on the purpose of second reading in subsequent questions and focus it around principle, that would be appreciated.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. [interjection]

Mr. Boutilier: Okay. He wants to ask a question, too, so I'll be brief.

I thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. In fact, when I'm here at my condo in Edmonton, I actually live in Edmonton-Centre, and I hear positive things about the member. [interjection] I do. With that, I can only say that the comments made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre are right on the money, bull's eye, and I think that's something that the minister should take heed of.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, thank you. Again on some of these threads, I'd like to direct this to the hon. Member for Fort McMurray, and perhaps the Minister of Justice and Attorney General might provide some of his reports if they cover this. I believe what we're looking at here is trying to reduce the carnage on our highways. We're correlating this right now with this bill, in my mind, to go from .08 to .05. I guess I'd ask: if we look at these reports – again, I don't know – it seems to be an incredibly small world. I am familiar and close to some of the families in Magrath, where four teenagers died. No alcohol involved in that. Up in Fort McMurray four died. It was alcohol related.

My question is: when we're trying to assess and reduce the carnage, do we have any reports that have come in that show the percentage of these fatalities as age related? Is this below 21? Is it over 75? I mean, not that I want to go after any red herrings or go after another group, but we seem to be focusing on one issue. Do we, for example, put in lie detectors, where you have to get in and say: "You know what? I haven't been up for more than 18 hours before I get behind the wheel to drive." Is it fatigue? There are a lot of things that are involved in the carnage on our highways. Why are we all of a sudden focusing in on one that, it seems to me, is going to have a social and economic impact that we haven't taken the time to see the consequences of?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister – oh, sorry. Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, do you wish to respond?

Mr. Boutilier: Well, I thought I was taking questions. Yeah, I'd like to respond. I don't want him to respond for me.

The Acting Speaker: That's okay. Go ahead.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd love for him to respond but not at this time.

On the point that you raise, what I'd like to see the Minister of Transportation do is, in fact, have checkpoints in Alberta in a more predictable manner and, in fact, use dollars that are being wasted in here that can be used for more police officers. We don't need MLA offices, so we'll give it up, $350 million, for more police and more enforcement to make our highways safer.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) time limits have expired.

I have at second reading on Bill 26 the hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Quite an interesting point of view from a lot of different places. As the representative of a large rural riding I take it very seriously that this is an opportunity to pass on not my view but the view of the constituents who have contacted our offices to date.

To begin with, I have to indicate that not one of the views was talking about anything other than .05 to .08. I don't think that in my travels and when I talk to people anyone disputed the seriousness of the incidents that happen when there's an accident with alcohol involved over .08 – I want to make that really clear on behalf of the constituents – nor is there a concern with graduated licensing. That's pretty clear, and people appreciate it.

I did find, actually, through the phone calls and the people that I've talked to, quite a range of views. I have to indicate to you that they also represent quite a cross-section of people, from a young doctor with a young family who has had emergency room experience, who grew up in one part of the province and lives in another, to a young couple that are just going to have their first family, to bank managers. You know, it's been amazing, the number of people that have called, and very few of them were owners of licensed establishments, whether it was restaurants, hotels, or anything else. There were some from community groups who represented things in small communities like the curling rinks and the legions, that are vital to many of our small communities. So this doesn't come from the point of view of a big city.

A lot of the people made a comment off the bat that this thing isn't well understood and that it reminded them much of the long gun registry question. Who is going to argue against a motherhood statement? I believe that one of the comments I had made years ago on the long gun registry, the question to the people at the time, was: if you could prevent another war or prevent another death, would you be in favour of registering a gun? Well, who is going to say no? By the same token, if you use the same argument here, would you be opposed to increasing sanctions if you could save another life? Of course. Nobody is going to say no.

With that as a background and the people that call me and some of the questions that they had – they knew that I had sponsored on two different occasions an attempt as a private member to raise the legal drinking age from 18 to 19, which didn't pass in this Assembly. Now it seems to be something that people are kind of serious about talking about. They wanted to know – and I answered some of the questions as best as I could. I believe we just had a question here earlier: what is the percentage of people involved in alcohol-related fatal accidents, and what is the age group? My recollection from my research: by and large, the largest percentage was in the 18 to 25 age group.

I'm not going into the other statistics that have been brought forward tonight because I'd be repeating, but the .05 to .08 represents about 2.2 per cent. Actually, as we speak, there's a study being done about this very issue at the University of Lethbridge.

One of the other things that concerned a lot of them was a comparison to photo radar. Although they appreciate our law enforcement personnel, they also know that sometimes you can get a young recruit who's out there and is keen and eager to do a job. On a cold winter day they like to maybe put their nose inside the cab or the window of the vehicle. If they're going to smell liquor, they might just want to have you blow.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Well, that's all well and good if you're actually legally impaired, but they're really scared to death about being able to go out as a family for a supper and have one or two drinks. They're really afraid that they're not getting the accurate, true message on how it is that we're actually going to blow. Is that one or two actually going to put you over .05?

One of the neatest suggestions, although they didn't like this idea at all, came from a mom of four kids whose kids are all in communities now where there's public transit. The mom has preached at these kids for years. "You know, if you're going to drink, don't drive." Every time they go out, she phones and says, "Are you going to drink and drive?" They say: "Mom, we're not stupid. We've got a cab, or we've got a designated driver." But in our communities there are no public transit systems, and sometimes things happen. You get carried away at the curling rink, and there's nobody to drive. Everyone that's older will remember the time when it used to be a joke – it isn't politically appropriate today to make the joke – that you drove because you were too drunk to walk. Those days, thank God, are gone, but it used to happen.

Anyway, this same mom said: if you're going to pass the legislation, it's going to have an impact on our curling rinks, on our social centres in small-town Alberta. You know, the police – it doesn't take a rocket scientist – when they come into town in a town of 300, they know that the 12 vehicles around that bar belong to Joe and Fred and Mary and everyone else. They'll wait for three, four hours and catch you. I mean, that doesn't take a lot of brainpower. So this lady said: why don't you as part of your proactive thing make the licensee provide those tubes that you blow in? You have to pardon me for my ignorance, but I haven't drank for over 28 years, so I don't have to worry. I could make money being a designated driver. She wanted to know why we couldn't as part of the regulation make it available at the bars or the licensed outlets, where you can drink, so that if people are really concerned, they pick it up and they blow. If there's no taxi, no transit, they phone a friend and have them come get them.

Those were the kinds of comments I had, Mr. Speaker. I'm really mixed on this thing because they had some good questions. I heard the Member for Calgary-Buffalo talk about how the chances of getting picked up in a city are minimal. Well, I know that because in a city of a million with limited police resources the chances are that you can drive and get away with it. But I just want to reiterate that in a small community when somebody comes in to check the local bar, the local curling rink a couple of times a year, it's like a photo radar trap, you know. It's going to be there, and they're going to be able to pick you off pretty darn easy.

I think I've elaborated enough on the comments that my constituents wanted me to pass on. I just think they came from common-sense, ordinary people that had legitimate questions, and we need to do an awful lot of good communication.

The Deputy Speaker: Under Standing Order 29(2)(a) the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I just want to thank the Member for Little Bow. I've been pestering people all day and all night trying to get some of the government members to engage. Aside from the ministers, the Member for Little Bow is the first one that's actually stood up and talked about what constituents have said to him. I really appreciate you bringing that into the discussion because I want to know. I felt that there was going to be a problem with transportation in rural areas, and indeed that's some of what he's being told, so I really appreciate that. I'm wondering if the member got any reaction to the sanction for one of those people at the curling rink or one of the moms chauffeuring kids around to skating lessons, how they felt about having their car seized and their licence lifted for three days under this legislation for blowing between .05 and .08?

Mr. McFarland: Thank you for the question. That's the one comment I had written down here, and I meant to ask the minister because I think they wanted to have that clarified as well. They said that if you're going to have a legal sanction – I believe the words are "the administrative sanction," Minister – does the administrative mean acting on something where you're criminally liable if you're over .08, or is the administrative sanction really intended to be more like a suspension? I don't know if I'm asking it properly.

They didn't know if legally – and I believe you because you're a lawyer – asking somebody to give up their car for three days or give up their licence for three days is really an administrative sanction, or is it more appropriate to take it for a 24-hour suspension, the licence only? Can you take a chattel, I guess is what I'm saying, as an administrative sanction? Do you know where I'm heading here? I'm sorry; we're looking for people that are listening. They can't see me nodding. I'm trying to gesticulate. But that was the question, and I appreciate it because I forgot to ask it. I'm sorry.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a), the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I'd also like to thank the hon. Member for Little Bow in sharing with his constituents. It's interesting because I put out 16,000 drops to my constituents, asking them on this and a few other of the bills coming forward. My constituent helper there, Julie Huston, just sent me an e-mail saying that a hundred per cent of the e-mails so far coming in – I haven't got the other letters back – have been against the .05 per cent.

I'm just wondering, hon. member. You've been out talking. I think most of us have. It can be somewhat discouraging when we try to reach out to get the information back, trying to, you know, understand where our constituents are. Have you actually put out a letter or e-mail or anything to try and spread the discussion a little bit farther than those that you normally come in contact with? I know being in a rural area – you hit the nail on the head. If the police come into a town of 300, everybody knows, and they know who they are. Maybe you could share a little a bit more on how you've reached out and what else you're doing.

Mr. McFarland: I'm a dinosaur when it comes to new technology. I don't believe in popping e-mails and twitters and all that other kind of thing. I like talking to people. For that very reason I don't get on very much with these news hour, question-of-the-day things because – what? They're going to draw the attention of people that are against something primarily, in my opinion.

I don't have an answer for you. I don't put out 16,000. I go by experience and talking to people that I think are credible and people that don't have a problem popping me an e-mail or phoning and leaving a message with our office. I don't ask their political stripe or where they live or anything. I just take their message. So I don't have an answer for you, Member.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you have 25 seconds left.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah. Really quickly, will this have an effect on rural establishments: bars, restaurants, and so forth? Do you feel that this will have a negative impact?

Mr. McFarland: I can't say. I know what smoking did to our bars. We had one hotel that dropped 38 per cent on VLTs and 26 per cent on liquor.

The Deputy Speaker: On my list, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona on the bill.

Ms Notley: Thank you. There has been some really good discussion tonight about a lot of different issues on this bill, and I've been listening with a great deal of interest. I have to say that this is a bill upon which I am still personally deliberating in terms of my position on it and whether I would be supporting it or not because I think there are some good components to it. I think some of the objectives are not unreasonable, so I'm somewhat convinced by elements of it. On the flip side there are also concerns. There are also some significant concerns that have been raised by people, so I think I've changed my mind two or three times since I first started looking at it and thinking about it. I don't know that I've made up my mind yet.

I'm just going to raise some of both the positive and the negative elements of it that have struck me in my consideration and see what additional information is brought forward over the course of the debate on this bill. Probably all members of this Legislature have heard from people within the hospitality industry about their concerns with the bill. We've heard the statistics about who this bill actually would address, and with that I'm referring to that part of the bill that talks about the drop down to the .05 limit in terms of blood-alcohol level.

You know, it's interesting. We all have sort of different takes on the same statistics. I've heard some people say: well, you know, 61 per cent of accidents are not related to alcohol at all, and of the other 39 per cent 85 per cent of those are people that are well above .08 or at least above .08. That's quite true. That leaves us ultimately with this bill perhaps less but certainly at most really impacting about 6 per cent of the fatalities that we observe on our roads these days.

Some people argue that if it's only addressing 6 per cent, then it's a mallet being used to hammer in a tack. Others, though, might say: yeah, but that's 6 per cent that we're dealing with. When you're talking about fatalities, you can talk about 6 per cent or you can talk about 1 per cent. You're talking about preventing fatalities, so which is it? I suspect people will differ depending on their personal experiences in that regard. But I think it's important to understand that that really is at maximum the number of people that we're looking at dealing with through this, at least on the surface.

The other question, of course, then arises: well, if the level is at .05, will it ultimately result in more sort of self-management on the part of people such that it ultimately results in a lower number of people on the roads who exceed that .08 because they determine that there's no way they can know if they can have that one drink and be at .05, so they just opt not to drink at all, so we don't have people on the road who are in excess of .08? Perhaps that's true. It's certainly possible that bringing in that legislation might well result in more self-regulation of behaviour. I'd like to see the research in terms of what kind of impact that has.

The Member for Calgary-Mountain View brought up a couple of good points which I found quite compelling. He talked about the studies that come from the centre for injury control. I have a lot of respect for the work that is done by that body. It certainly sounded to me like there were some good points there around the merits of dropping the level to .05. Certainly, the preliminary information that we see out of B.C. is very encouraging. A 47 per cent drop is, obviously, significant. I think it's also, however, fair to say that that information is so preliminary that we can't really make any big conclusions about it yet because it's such a short period. Again, I'm balancing this. I'm torn because there are some good pieces there.

You know, I think at the end of the day, although there are concerns by a lot of people in the hospitality industry, I do think that if the evidence is there to show that this is going to help keep people safe and this is going to reduce the frequency of people being on the roads in an impaired state, whether that be .05, whether that be .08, whether that be 1.2 – of course, some people actually can be well over .08 and not be impaired. Certainly, what we want to do is reduce the frequency of people on the road in an impaired state. We want to reduce the number of accidents, and that really does need to be our priority.

I do believe that that priority supersedes the concerns that exist in the hospitality industry. It's not above and beyond the pale that we would see certain, you know, developments in the hospitality industry. If this came into play and we really did see the 30 per cent drop in attendance or whatever, who's to say that you wouldn't see the hospitality industry banding together to come up with designated driver programs, ride-home programs, bus-home programs: all those different kinds of options that might exist if we truly had a zero tolerance regime in place? A lot of good possibilities can come from this, so I am certainly not going to dismiss it out of hand.

There are other elements of the bill, though, which do raise some concern for me. Those are the issues around the application of the administrative penalty, particularly to those who have been found to be in breach of the Criminal Code and this whole notion of basically taking away someone's car and licence for a year if they're found to be in excess of .08 with these administrative penalties. That's worrisome because, of course, I happen to also as a lawyer be kind of fond of those principles out there that people get really tired of hearing about. Nonetheless, due process is actually really important. It sometimes seems to be inconvenient in a society that generally works well, but it is something that has been developed because in so many cases societies don't always work well. Due process is a really critical element, and compromising due process is something that you should do very, very carefully. I'm worried about that section of the bill that potentially represents yet another element of limiting due process and natural justice.

This government and the current Premier, when she was previously the Attorney General, have already, I think, introduced at least two other pieces of legislation that do the same kind of thing, that presume people are guilty and then they have to prove their innocence. That's always a concern when we see legislation that does that. Certainly, that's something that's in here, and I'm not comfortable with it. It's particularly bad because, as the Attorney General knows, we have some ridiculous delays in our judicial system. We, of course, have a profound – profound – failure on the part of our legal aid system, so people who need to challenge these things are going to be put at a tremendous disadvantage for at least a year in many cases, and that often could have a huge impact on their ability to make a living and that kind of thing. So I have some concerns about that issue.

The other issue that I am concerned about with respect to this bill, I guess, is a little bit more around the politics of it. While I do not want to depart from the fact that I think there may be some good elements to the bill and I do understand that there is some sound advocacy for the notion of moving to a .05 standard, I'm a little worried that what's really going on here is that we're endeavouring to look like we're dealing with an issue in a way that costs the government purse the least. Those kinds of solutions, although politically convenient, often don't end up being the best ones.

I believe I would not be the first speaker in this House to note that Alberta, I think, right now enjoys either the lowest or the second lowest per capita number of police officers in the country. Really, as we all say, you know, you need to enforce. You need to have people there to enforce. You can have the best rules in the world, but if you don't have people to enforce, if you don't have processes for enforcement, then it really doesn't matter.

We've seen indications that the police force in our province is strained to a tremendous degree and that we have a tremendous deficit in the number of police officers that we have in this province and that, in fact, the government made grand promises to hire whole bunches of new police officers at about this point in the election cycle in the last election, and we didn't get all those police officers.

Now we have this piece of legislation, and it's going to look great on the books, but if no one enforces it, then we're basically relying on those people who probably were already self-regulating in most cases to simply self-regulate. We're not really going to bring about any change because we're not enforcing those people who don't self-regulate. Whether .05, .08, 1.2, 1.9, it doesn't matter. They're not self-regulating, and we don't have enough police officers out there to do anything about it.

I am concerned that this is a bit of a political bill designed to create the impression of law and order and safety and enforcement and all those kinds of things, but it's an impression that will never be acted on as long as we continue to underfund our policing scheme to the extent that we currently do. I would certainly not want to see the government have the pressure on them that should be there on the basis of their obligation to properly fund our policing resources and to provide adequate resources. I wouldn't want to see that pressure released because people think, "Oh, well, I guess they're doing something on law and order, so I won't talk to them about law and order because they're kind of covering that file" when really, no, they've just passed a piece of legislation that no one really expects many in the police community to ever enforce.

I'd actually be quite interested to hear from spokespeople – from police chiefs, from people within the policing world – about what their opinion is of this legislation, whether they perceive this as something that will assist them in any fashion or whether, in fact, it may create more work.

There are a lot of questions that I think still need to be answered, and as I say, I'm conflicted because I think there are some positive elements in this bill. I am a big advocate of public safety, and I do believe that if you legislate for safety, there's an element of that that flows because people tend to be law-abiding citizens, so you're more likely to bring about an improvement. I think that there are a lot of things that are compromised or jeopardized through it, so you really need to properly think it through.

I'm looking forward to hearing more information about that as well as about the consultation that has occurred with the key stakeholders, who have clearly indicated a number of concerns with the bill.

That's where I'm going to leave it for now, and I look forward to hearing more information and debate from members of the government as the debate proceeds. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Under Standing Order 29(2)(a), the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you. Through the Speaker to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, as you were speaking and knowing that you have a legal background, I wondered about a person who was caught and who registered at .05 arguing whether or not they were impaired and whether they should have been pulled over in the first place.

Secondly, I'd like to hear your views briefly on whether you think the carrot versus the stick is a more progressive approach? You mentioned having more police officers.

Thirdly, is the stick sufficient to change behaviour? I earlier suggested demerit points off a licence rather than a 24-hour suspension.

Ms Notley: Well, I think the difference between blood-alcohol level and automatic penalties for blood-alcohol level versus the issue of impairment has existed in the law for a very long time, and they are two separate heads of penalty under the Criminal Code. I think that the reason that the federal Parliament originally introduced the concept of the blood-alcohol level was because the issue of proving impairment is a very difficult one in the courts. There was a public, collective decision that we needed to more actively get at people who were getting behind the wheel and driving when they were impaired. The whole process of proving impairment is complex.

Personally, I remember a case that I argued way back 15 to 20 years ago where a fellow was well over .08, but he was asking that his insurance company pay out his insurance because his insurance only disqualified him if he was impaired. We sued his insurance company, and we were successful because it was not possible for anyone to prove that he was impaired even though he blew – I can't remember – double .08 or something like that. There has always been a difference. So there is a reason for having blood-alcohol levels, because it gets at a group that you wouldn't otherwise get at.

The carrot and the stick. Well, you know, in other contexts we talk about worker safety. We talk about environmental standards. We talk about ways to get other players to behave properly. I am an advocate in those cases for ensuring that we have strong standards for employers to keep workers safe, for industry to keep our environment clean, and for enforcing those standards. This government is always keen to enforce and regulate the average citizen. They are less keen to regulate employers and industry.

However, when we're talking about employers and industry, my position generally is that sometimes the stick is what is necessary. I think there may be some relevance to that here because I think we do have a problem in Alberta. We still do have people on the roads drinking and driving, and that needs to stop.

I think there was one more question you had, the issue of demerits. I think the research is out there that demerits don't actually change behaviour in a huge way, so I think we do need to look at other ways to change behaviour. But I go back to my original point. I think that if people believe from experience that there are enough police officers out there to know that they will be caught, then that will also change behaviour. Until such time as we're able to put an adequate number of police officers onto our roads – that's probably the best bang for your buck.

That's something that this government should be working on. They've certainly made lots of noise about it for years and years, but they haven't actually followed through on it. I would say that that would be as or more effective than this. Whether it should be done in concert with this is another question altogether. But this bill should not be allowed to distract from the need for the government to put the same number of officers per capita on the road that Canadians in other parts of the country enjoy.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I very much want to compliment the hon. member when she made the comment that that should not detract from the ultimate goal, and that is to have more, if I can call it, policing, more surveillance. I know that if you look at New York City, where they decided that their downtown . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. minister, we've run out of time for 29(2)(a).

Any other member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call on the Minister of Transportation to close the debate.

10:10

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to make it very short. Of course, the short aspect of it is that this is a proposal, if I can call it that, for strengthening Alberta's approach to impaired driving. It is for safer highways.

I want to say that our main concern and our main area is for individuals that are repeat offenders over the .08. If you look at the legislation, if you look at the documentation, that is where the major emphasis is put.

Mr. Speaker, this is also a complete package. It does involve the graduated licences but does not have to be in the legislation. It can be done by regulation. I think you know what some of that says.

Thirdly, Mr. Speaker, it is about a culture change, and .05 to .08 very much is about culture. It is the area. That doesn't change. It hasn't changed what the police are using today and what we are bringing forward. It is the penalties at the end that have changed. It needs to have an impact on people who are drinking and driving.

Mr. Speaker, if I can, this is about the safety of our highways. This is about the safety of Albertans.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The Minister of Transportation has closed the debate, so the chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 26 read a second time]

Bill 21 Election Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Olson]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to speak in second reading on the Election Amendment Act, 2011. We've just had so much fun here tonight talking about different proposals that are flowing from the new Premier's campaign promises, essentially. This is another one of them, the Election Amendment Act.

Let me just take a step back. Really, why do you need fixed election dates? Who cares? Lots of people for hundreds of years managed not to have fixed election dates and have them called, essentially, by the government. I was plowing my way through a rather esoteric article, probably somebody's doctoral thesis, on sort of the history of fixed election dates, Dissolution of the Legislatures: Constitutional Change, Institutional Continuity, by Thomson Reuters Canada Limited's Doug Stoltz, bachelor of science, LLB. I'm just referencing it, but I'm not going to quote extensively, so I won't bother tabling it. He's referenced in his whole document what I've just said, that essentially there's a long history of governments being able to control when they call an election.

Really, the point of anyone asking for a fixed election date – and almost exclusively, I'll note, this tends to be called for by members of the opposition. I think the only one that actually called for it as an opposition member and then got in and did it is Gordon Campbell, and I don't know, if you asked him today, if he'd be too happy with himself for having carried through on that action.

However, the point of a fixed election is twofold. One is to provide certainty for all involved, and I'll come back to that point. The second is to curtail the government stacking the deck, being able to pick the most opportune time for the government members to get re-elected and to be re-elected into government. It's an unfair advantage, and I think the population looks at it as an unfair advantage. It's not fair ball. They're not playing on a level playing field, all of those sports metaphors that people are so fond of. But that's true. That's why people are interested in it. They want people to have a clear shot. That doesn't happen when government gets to pick the most opportune time, especially with a government that has a lot of resources, as this government does, to be able to do polling, for example, on issues or on how people are feeling about things. They can certainly manage to ascertain from those polls when they're doing really well, and that's the time to call an election. Therefore, it works best for them.

In knowing what date they're going to call, they can also take advantage of things like handing out the community facility enhancement cheques or the community improvement program cheques. The Member for Edmonton-McClung did a private member's statement this afternoon talking about how he'd managed to secure and hand out cheques to 13 of his schools for various projects. That's exactly the kind of thing that really shows him in an excellent light. If there's an election date called, well, gosh, he should be a good guy because he's managed to secure the funding for all of these groups and give credit to the government for having done that. That's exactly what I'm talking about. It was an excellent opportunity that he handed me today. Or, you know, things about building new buildings or rec centres, curling rinks, road paving, highway widening, any of those kinds of . . .

Mr. Hinman: Contracts with teachers.

Ms Blakeman: Contracts with teachers: perfect example.

Lots of ways that the government that is controlling the date can give themselves an advantage. They can make people happy and then call the election, and they're much more likely to do well from it. Again, people don't think that that's fair, and they don't believe that government should be allowed to do that. This government certainly enjoys the full benefit of calling the date.

You know, one of the things that has been brought out. I was reading through various press releases that were put out by the now Premier as she was campaigning. Oh, you're going to get so sick of this quote because you're going to hear it so often. There she was saying: "Fixed election dates give Albertans the opportunity to focus on issues that matter and mobilize for an election" – here we go – "without the behind-the-scenes deal-making and manipulation that sometimes characterize the timing of an election." That's the quote from the now Premier. She very clearly understood how a government can manipulate for their advantage, and she was trying to move away from that. This is why people are going to be saying – they already are saying it, to be perfectly honest. One of the newspaper clippings I've got here is from a reporter that's talking about how she's broken all of her promises, and this is one of the ones that they specifically highlight.

We don't have a fixed election date in this legislation. I think the credit goes to the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood for the phrase "election season." It's an election season. You know, it's an election 90 days. I don't know what else happens in 90 days. It isn't one day. It's a whole series. It's 90 days of possibility, which still allows the government to pick the best date for themselves.

The whole point of having a fixed election date is that it creates certainty and takes away that extra advantage that government likes to give to itself. I admit, you know, that's pretty tempting. I can't imagine a government not taking advantage of that. That's why you have to put in legislation so that they don't and they can't take advantage of it. What the government has proposed here with this legislation does not fulfill the promise that was made or any expectation or reasonable interpretation of that promise. A fixed election date is a fixed election date, not a fixed election three months, not a fixed election season.

The idea that somehow the government needs flexibility to be able to do this, that somehow they need to be worried about planting seasons or farmers. I went and looked at when other people have elections. In fact, Saskatchewan and Manitoba both have fixed election dates. Saskatchewan came in in 2007 and Manitoba in 2008. Now, you want to talk about farming and planting and harvesting and all of that. Those two provinces know all about that, just as much as we do, and they managed to land on one day, in Saskatchewan the first Monday in November and in Manitoba the first Tuesday in October. So the idea that somehow we have to be flexible because of farming requirements: clearly the other major farming provinces have worked that out, and they didn't need to do this. In my mind I start to ask: what is the impairment that Alberta is having to struggle with here that they can't manage to find a fixed election date when everyone else has managed to deal with this problem?

The other flexibility issue – I'm doing air quotes here – was evidently weather. Somebody said that in a media conference. Well, in Alberta, actually, I mean, it may change frequently, but it's actually pretty steady weather, not like weather in, say, oh, Newfoundland or weather in the Northwest Territories or in P.E.I. or even in B.C. You know, compared to them we're not getting the same kind of, you know, typhoons and hurricanes and things like that. Our weather is pretty steady. It's cold. It goes down. It comes up. But all things considered, you know, we don't usually have a lot of reasons for shutting things down. We all laugh and laugh when we see the pictures on the news when it snows in Toronto and those stupid Ontarians get out there and slide into each other. I mean, we think that is so funny because they can't cope with weather. We know how to cope with winter and snow. We can also cope with summer. So what's the impairment here exactly that the government can't deal with changes in weather?

The other thing I hear is that we need a made-in-Alberta solution, which somebody else referred to today. I get goosebumps and my blood chills a bit when I hear the phrase "made-in-Alberta solution" because always it's going to mean something that doesn't bode well for Albertans. They're going to have to do something just a little bit different so that they can still get away with doing what they wanted to do before. Where else have we heard about a made-in-Alberta solution? Well, the climate change and emissions fund. We know how well that is not working. I had a question in question period today, and the minister could barely manage to – well, she didn't answer me.

Oh, we had to have a made-in-Alberta solution with a law that the government would never go into debt again. That's a made-in-

Alberta solution. Ooh. All right. How about deregulation of electricity? That was a made-in-Alberta solution as well. Gee, that sure worked well for Albertans. How about continuing to own their own bank? That's a made-in-Alberta solution. No other province still owns their own bank. Pretty handy. That was a made-in-Alberta solution. Does that work to the benefit of all Albertans? Sometimes. Let's talk West Edmonton Mall and some special deals that happened there. That usually makes everyone over there button it. So made-in-Alberta solutions really don't seem to benefit Albertans. The government certainly benefits. Well, gee, let me go back here. Wasn't that one of the two criteria that we were trying to fix in that the benefit would not go to the government? Hmm, all right. That didn't quite work.

Let's talk about certainty. How in a 90-day period, a 90-day season, a 90-day gestation period, if we want to put it that way . . .

Mr. Hinman: Are you talking rabbits or mice?

Ms Blakeman: Could be. Where's the 90 days? Somebody's pregnant for 90 days. Don't know who. Anyway, gestation period.

How exactly is certainty created, then, for someone that needs to give their boss a notice that they are going to take a leave of absence to run in an election? "Sometime in these 90 days, boss, I'm going to be leaving." How exactly does that work? Now, we want to see a good mix of our society represented in this House. How do we do that if anybody that has a regular, Monday-to-Friday, 9-to-5 job who is trying to take a leave of absence from a job they could take a leave of absence from – so who would that be? Teachers, civil servants, nurses. I'm beginning to see why the government doesn't want this. It would mean that it makes it much more difficult for someone to give notice to the school board and say: I need a leave of absence because I'm going to be a candidate in the next election. Whether it's for your side or my side doesn't matter here, but there's no certainty there.

So they're really stuck again in an almost worse position than today because we have enough scuttlebutt, enough signs. It's like reading the chicken guts, right? There are enough signs that you're getting close to an election that you actually can kind of feel it out, right? We knew last time that the election was going to be at the beginning of March. Well, I started campaigning early, you know, full bore. I was out campaigning on the first of January. I knew, we all knew it was going to be then, and it was. In some ways without it we had more certainty. Putting this in gives us less certainty.

What about someone that's going to give a retirement notice? They're going to say: "That's it. I'm going to retire completely from this position, and I'm going to be a candidate, or I'm going to be a campaign manager." That's the same thing, right? How are they supposed to give notice over a 90-day period? "Well, I'll be retiring; I'll get back to you on which of the 90 days I'm going to be retiring." Can you imagine trying to replace them somehow? "Yes, I'd like to hire you. Are you available sometime in this 90-day period to commence work when we figure out when the person can give us the 90-day notice?" Hmm, I think this didn't create certainty here at all.

We've still got a situation where the government will know the date and will be able to pick it out of the 90 days. So they'll still be able to book the billboards, to book the radio time, the TV spots, the magazine front pages, and all of that. They know when it's going to be, but nobody else does because it's a 90-day period, which is a very long period of time. It's in fact longer than the House sits, just to give a perspective for my colleagues here. Ninety days is longer than we sit in this House. That's a lot of time. I know you guys feel you sit in this House way too long, so just imagine it being longer than that. You've got the period that we're now talking about for a fixed election date, but it's not an election date.

So can I support this legislation? No. This is a mockery of what was intended. I'm sure that very few of the hon. members opposite intended to make a joke out of this. I think they meant it to be a gesture. They meant it to be loyal to their new Premier. But it has ended up being an absolute mockery of what was intended. It creates no certainty. It actually removes certainty.

It certainly does not change the beneficial position that government has been able to work itself into. Again, I believe it actually enhances it because although we're supposed to know what's going on, the nongovernment side over here or anybody else – what are the people that are working in Elections Alberta supposed to do? Yeah, right. We're going to hire those deputy returning officers and all those poll clerks: “So, people, if you could just clear your schedule and be ready to work for us sometime in this 90-day period.” Right. How many part-time workers are able to say to you, “Yeah, I'll hang on and wait for you to come up with a date sometime in three months, in that 90-day gestation period”? An election gestation, that's what it is.

So this really is offensive, I think. You know, I'm trying to be jovial about it, but I think it is quite offensive.

Mr. Hinman: You're doing a good job.

Ms Blakeman: Of being jovial or offended?

Mr. Hinman: Oh, no. You're doing a good job.

Ms Blakeman: I think that's true; it is offensive. It was totally against what the Premier was putting out to Albertans as a way of saying: please vote for me; here are some of the things I'm going to do. She was supported, and she was put into office. Then to have this come out is a mockery of everything we do believe in or, certainly, that I believe in and my caucus on this side believes in. So I clearly won't be supporting this in principle or in any other way in second reading.

10:30

We will do our best to try and amend the bill in a way that might make it a bit more palatable, but given that this is one of these delightful bills that's, like, a page long – I am forever with too much stuff on my desk, and I can't find the darn bill. Here it is. Oh, look. It starts on page 1 and ends on page 1, so it's not a really long bill. I'm going to be a bit pressed on where I'm going to amend this exactly because, really, it has two sections. One is to say that no matter what happens in this act the Lieutenant Governor can still dissolve the Legislature in Her Majesty's name; and secondly, that during this period, this three-month period beginning on March 1 and ending on May 31, a general election must be held.

Actually, the general election has to be held or it has to be called? That is one question that I have on this. Can the government then call or ask the Lieutenant Governor to call, or however that actually works, an election on, say, February 1, so the election would be March 1? That actually makes this a four-month period because it is clear that it has to be held by May 31, which means that it has to be called 28 days before May 31.

An Hon. Member: Maybe February 29.

Ms Blakeman: Well, it would be three months, then. It would back up to the beginning of February and go till the end of April. All right. It's still a 90-day gestational period here.

Mr. Hancock: Except perhaps in a leap year.

Ms Blakeman: I'm so sorry. I've been corrected. Leap years would just totally mess us up here.

Mr. Hinman: And add to our flexibility.

Ms Blakeman: That's right. Maybe it does add to the flexibility with the leap years.

Really, I've been nice about this, but this act is bad, bad, bad. It really goes against a promise. I think that it is a broken promise, and I'm just disappointed in the new Premier. I thought there'd be more genuine support for her.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore on the bill.

Mr. Hinman: Okay. On the bill. Well, that's a tough act to follow, Edmonton-Centre. I think she snuck my speaking notes and took them over there. She hit the nail on the head so many times that that nail went right through the board and has come out the other side. Too bad it didn't come out there and hit them in the butt to get up and talk about this and realize: oh, I didn't realize that there were so many points that are so true. But there are. It's just one after another. This is offensive to the people of Alberta and, I truly believe, to all those people who even considered voting for this Premier as she quoted that the manipulation that goes on behind the doors is astounding.

I guess I want to focus on some of the big ones, on the selfishness side of this, just taking the opportunity to get the ads out there, to take up the air time, to take up the billboards. I mean, they have millions of dollars in the bank. They can and have in the past, I believe, actually taken up that ad time to make sure that once those chicken guts, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre says, start dictating that there's an election coming forward, they have the ability to tie all these things up. That unfair advantage is truly disappointing, one would think, in a country like Canada, where the rule of law and integrity are so important. It's just so disregarded when it comes to picking an election day.

Let's look on just the tax side for the citizens. Again, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre just kept hitting that nail till it's gone right out of sight. All of the election workers here in the province: I mean, there's no thought for any of these individuals. The cost of tying up and trying to find places that are available. When you know that it's March 31, 2012, you can go and make deals.

I mean, what rule of law gives benefit to is certainty. When you have certainty, you can carry on business. You can attract business. All of those things are critical to having a great society, and chaos drives all of those things out. It's great if you can be the one in the position of power and create chaos for others. It's wonderful. They don't even have consideration for their own people, though, to tell them: this is the date we're going to do it.

For myself, Mr. Speaker, it was a big decision. I took a leave of absence the first time on the 14th of July and campaigned through until November 22. The chicken guts were right, and off I went. I talked to my partners and said: “Look. I need to do this, but I don't know when it's going to be.” I took the leave of absence. The government could have easily waited until the next spring. Again, with that momentum that you're trying to cover, it's extremely difficult. All of these things are disappointing. The new Premier wouldn't want to add certainty and credibility.

I mean, if you want to talk about the Alberta way, it's the old saying: my word is my bond. There is no bond here. This is like a Greek bond; it's just on default. Why would you want to buy it? Is it the risk that you can sell it before it's not worth anything and leverage it out? It's just disappointing on so many levels that here is the one case where the Premier could have so easily given a fixed election date.

What adds insult to injury are the excuses. "Oh, we're thinking of the farmers. Not only will we tell you when the date is, we'll guarantee you a great haying season." What absurdity to think that they are putting this forward for other people. "We want to attract good people to run, so we won't tell you when we're going to start the race." It's truly incredible, the audacity, the arrogance of saying: we're setting fixed election dates. And I do love it: season. We have a winter season. We have a spring season. We have a summer season, and a fall season. Now in Alberta we have five seasons. An election season. What a benefit for Albertans. We now have a new Alberta advantage. We have five seasons in the year. What a blessing.

Ms Blakeman: Wow. What a selling feature.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I wonder if they're going to give us an extra holiday during that time so that we can go do a few things. Election day: are you going to make it a holiday?

I mean, that's another great example. There are lots of people that want to plan their holidays, and they plan it and leave, and then all of a sudden they miss an election. There are people that will actually plan because they want to participate in the election procedure, but they don't know which month to book off work where they could actually work some time to help the candidate that they want.

Ms Blakeman: So lower voter turnout.

Mr. Hinman: Absolutely. This is an affront to Albertans, saying: "What we want to do is manipulate it, but we're very generous. We're going to go from 12 months down to three months." I don't know whether it's generous, Mr. Speaker, or just arrogance thinking that is all the time they need in order to accomplish it. They can tie up the billboards, they can tie up the radio ads, they can tie up any of the other types of media that they want to, reach out to those advertising the office space. They know all these things.

There is nothing in this bill that I can see that says: we're doing this to try and engage Albertans; we want them to participate in an election here in the province of Alberta. It's an insult to Albertans. I cannot believe all of the flopping that this new Premier wants to do. Why would you want to flop on a set election date? I just can't explain it. I truly can't other than the fact that all it was about was: I need to make enough promises to get elected, and then it really doesn't matter. I think she's going to get a rude awakening this time, that it does matter. The election is too close this time to the promises made and the promises broken. That's going to be the problem.

I'm looking forward to the next election. I'm looking forward to allowing Albertans to come out and to make their little X in the box and pick the people who they want to represent them, who will actually do that.

I'm very disappointed that I wasn't able to get a standing vote on the traffic amendment to see how many of these members – that had such a robust discussion. Again, this open and democratic and free vote. [interjection] Oh, look at that.

Ms Blakeman: No. Little Bow spoke.

Mr. Hinman: No. I said for a standing vote. I wanted everyone . . .

Mr. Hancock: You weren't even here to vote.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, address the chair.

Mr. Hinman: Oh, yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for getting me back on track. I said, no, that it takes three. There were only two of us here. We don't have the . . .

Mr. Hancock: You weren't here.

Mr. Hinman: Did you have a standing vote to show that I wasn't here?

Mr. Hancock: No. But I knew you weren't here.

Mr. Hinman: Then you should have called a standing vote there, sir. If the Government House Leader . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, on the bill and through the chair.

Mr. Hinman: Was this on the three-dollar bill that this government wants to do it?

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you have the floor. On the bill and through the chair.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. Sometimes the temptation to respond to the Government House Leader is just too great when they have the arrogance to say that you're not here when there was no vote. I was here, present in this Assembly, when that was called. If he would have called for a vote, I was here. I would have been standing up.

The Deputy Speaker: On the bill, please.

Mr. Hinman: The point is: how many Albertans are going to be here? How many are going to plan and say, "Well, it's not going to be until April, so I won't come back until the end of March," only to be surprised that the Premier wants a March 3 election.

It's interesting. You know, I remember the last go-around. I've been fairly active in wanting what I call better government and believe that we can do much better. Many people believe that we're doing a wonderful job. I think that our potential to do better is immense. I do remember that back in January '08 Scott Hennig put out a little article. Again, the Premier at that time said: oh, we're not going to have an election till the fall, till November '08.

I was busy trying to help merge a few parties together. On the 19th of January we came to an agreement, and the Alberta Alliance and the Wildrose came together as one party, and that, hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, I believe was the impetus for this government to say: we need to go now; we don't want to give them any more time. And they called an election. On top of that, they spent over $1 billion in that 30-month period plus made contract agreements costing us over $6 billion, to buy an election, in my opinion. It was very crafty of them. I'll hand it to them. When they want to play politics, they're very good at it.

I want, though, to govern. I want to have a government that is focused on governing, not playing politics. Politics for me is divide and conquer. Politics is adding chaos. It's picking out issues. It's taking the emotion out of it. Governing is rational decisions, having an open debate, putting it to committee, looking at the stats, and being able to know when a decision is going to be made. March 1, April 1, May 1? Maybe we'll have a crisis, and we'll just say: you know, we need to change this law. And they'll do that in a minute because the polls are up. Worse than that, there's been an economic crisis, so we better postpone this election.

Mr. Speaker, not only is this an election season, a new bonus season for Albertans – the fact is that just like their law that we have to have a balanced budget, it gets changed 15 minutes before their new deficit budget, and they say that it's okay. So we can't trust this government. We can't trust them on their bills. They bring it forward with smoke and mirrors and the grandeur of a wonderful new Alberta advantage when, in fact, there is no advantage except for the governing party, except for the Premier to be able to say: now is the day to shoot the gun and say we're starting tomorrow. That's not right. This bill should be withdrawn by the Premier.

She should be just like she was when she said that there'll be no fall sitting. She was wrong, and she's just as wrong to say that we're going to have an election season sometime in the year. I guess I really look at this, Mr. Speaker, that if there's an economic crash, that this European crisis creates economic disaster here, I can fully see us coming back in the spring because of the massive deficit this government continues to accumulate on a cash basis, sucking up our sustainability fund, which again is another oxymoron. There's nothing sustainable about the way they're using up that savings account. They're spending it at a rate that one more year with the current economic situation and we're back to zero, and those deficit budgets will be deficits in the real sense and not in the fact that we can suck it out of the sustainability fund. Thank heavens that they had the boom that they did, or we'd be in more trouble than we could possibly throw a stick at.

Mr. Speaker, it's very clear that this government wants to govern with deception. They want to say that they've got a fixed date when it isn't. Like I say, if they're really serious and they want to put in a fixed date, put in a fixed date and also say that the only way it can change is through a referendum of the people and not the new law that's going to be changed 15 minutes before. We've had it in the past where there used to be recall in this province, and then when the people in power got in a little bit of trouble, they scrapped the bill.

Ms Blakeman: No. No. No.

Mr. Hinman: There are a few things that we just can't agree on, but accountability is critical in governing. Accountability in politics is . . .

Ms Blakeman: Don't get me started.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I won't.

Mr. Speaker, what we need this government to do is to make an amendment and give us a date or withdraw the bill and say: we're sorry; we apologize for being so arrogant as to say that we're giving you a fixed election season or date. I don't know what you want you want to call it. There are a lot of different terms, but it's wrong, wrong, wrong.

We need the Premier to withdraw this bill, apologize to the people of Alberta, or come and make an amendment and give us the date so that we can start to have Elections Alberta get the facilities booked and for people to be able to realize this is when it's going to happen. Perhaps more people will jump in and say: now that I know there's a date, I can start to plan around my business to get ready to do this. They can plan their holidays. There are a lot of things. If we're thinking of Albertans, if we're trying to engage Albertans, give them a date, give them the certainty, give them that time of accountability. Then they can see that all of a sudden when the government desires to spend a billion dollars, we can do something about it.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the next speaker. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you wish to speak on the bill?

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, it is not a pleasure to rise to speak to Bill 21 because it is really, truly one of the most laughable bills that I've ever come across since I've been in this job. I remember the meeting I was at when I first heard that this bill was coming forward, and I was inquiring about the date that would be included in it. Then when I first heard that, in fact, we were talking about a 90-day period, you know, silly me, I started laughing uproariously. I chuckled to myself off and on for about 24 hours. I actually said to myself: "Oh, there's no way they would actually introduce something like that. Oh, they couldn't be that stupid." Sorry. That's probably inappropriate, and I'll apologize.

I would just think about this to myself and just chuckle at the complete inanity of somebody going out there and making a grand promise that she was going to bring in fixed election dates and instead introducing legislation that could at best only be called random election seasons. It was funny because I just didn't think that these folks could be that arrogant to actually try and pull something like this off. You know, the arrogance of this Conservative government, having been in power for longer than the government in Egypt. I think we're not quite Castro yet, but we're getting there, the 40 years of being in government. It would have been bad enough if the arrogance sort of increased each year, but it's really an exponential one. I'm quite sure that they will start challenging, you know, the time-space continuum and thinking that that doesn't apply to them either.

Truly, what we've got going on here is just an arrogance around the English language. The Premier said: I will bring you fixed election dates. Then these guys bring in a piece of legislation that calls for a moderately fixed election season, and they actually have the temerity to look at people straight in the eye and argue that the Premier has kept her promise. And I'm thinking: is there a new language that's developed just overnight? Am I missing the development of a new language? You know, at what point do we hold people accountable for what they say? I certainly hope to goodness that Albertans are coming to terms with what this legislation represents, which at its heart is a neon sign announcement that the new Premier cannot be trusted to keep a single, solitary promise.

I like to say that, well, you know, with her when she makes a promise, folks, be really clear to read the small print. But now I'm at the point where, well, you know what? Don't read the small print either because it may well be written in Na'vi or some long-since-departed language, and even if it isn't, they just won't adhere to the normal rules of language construction because they don't think that any of the rules apply to them. That's what Bill 21 represents. It is the clear, broad proclamation to Albertans that: "We don't think the rules apply to us, and just because I said I was going to give you fixed election dates doesn't mean that I will. But I will not, under any circumstances, even take responsibility for the fact that I'm not keeping my promise." But Albertans can see that that's what's really going on.

Now, in this particular case it goes as well to the heart of how this government operates, which is to use its influence, its power, and its tenure in a way that is designed to keep itself in power and to hold on tight to power. It's not about good governance. It's not about the public interest. It's not about the greatest benefit to the greatest number of Albertans. It's actually not even about the greatest number of benefits to the most friendly group of Albertans anymore. This one is just raw, blatant grasping for power. That's what this bill is, and that's what this government has deteriorated to. That's what it's descended to. It's just a raw grasp for power.

When it comes to elections, you know, these guys are unmatched, I would suggest, across the country in terms of the way in which they make the rules to benefit themselves. It's not just this bill, but this bill is part of a long process.

We have election financing rules in this province, which – I suspect that if you looked at what the election financing rules were in some gold rush a hundred years ago, you would not have found them more corruptible than the current election financing rules. We have no limits on how much money powerful governments and powerful parties can spend in an election. We make sure that it is absolutely possible to buy an election in this province. Absolutely possible. No limit on how much you can spend, and that's unlike most other jurisdictions in the country. But here we want to make sure that the wealthy and the powerful are not in any way constrained in their ability to maintain, their ability to stay wealthy and stay powerful and stay in control of our democratic system or our political system here in Alberta. That's a problem, of course, when you combine that with the absence of a fixed election date.

Let me just talk a little bit about some of the practical issues that impact upon a smaller party that does not take corporate donations, that does rely on individual Albertans to finance them, that doesn't get great big, huge cheques from Enbridge and TransAlta and all these great companies that these folks are governing on behalf of but, rather, is just getting cheques from regular Albertans.

This is what happens when you have an election. You know, you try to have a campaign office. Well, do you spend $4,000 to get that campaign office for one month, or do you spend $12,000 to get that campaign office for three months? In the world of the Conservative Party of Alberta: "Three thousand dollars, $12,000; it doesn't matter. We've got millions of dollars to spend on this. We're going to outspend the opposition parties 5 to 1 because we're in charge and we've got all the contacts and we've got all the power. We will never change anything to make sure that the average Albertan who does not have that money has a vote that matters as much as the average Albertan who does have that money." As a result, when you look at, "Hmm, do we spend $12,000 renting a campaign office for three months?" sheesh, that's kind of a big portion of our budget. Well, over there in moneybags land it's not. "Who cares? It's a drop in the bucket."

For regular Albertans who are coming together as community members to try to put together a campaign based on donations out of their pockets, where they're making a decision about whether to spend a thousand dollars a month for the most expensive daycare in the country or whether they're making a decision to spend an extra $300 this month for the most expensive electricity costs in the country, when those people have to make those kinds of decisions and then they decide how much they can give to their local candidate, the question about whether you buy a campaign office for one month or three months: it matters.

I was particularly offended by the Premier in question period when she repeatedly said: "Yep. We're going to have an election, and everybody should start getting ready. Everybody can start campaigning." Well, you know what, moneybags folks over there? Sure, you can campaign for a year. You've got the public purse. You've got the PAB. You've got a $5 million election chest, so you can campaign forever. But there are a lot of Albertans that don't have access to that money. They'd still like a voice, and they'd like a government that was interested in giving them a voice.

This leads to the next problem because, of course, we have a government here where we had a majority of members on a committee, who happen to be members of this Conservative government, very intentionally select a Chief Electoral Officer who made it very clear that he didn't believe that increasing the number of people who cast a ballot in this province was part of his job. We have that same Chief Electoral Officer now tell us that landlords and condominium boards who are breaking the law and keeping families who live in apartments or condominiums off the voters list are not going to be prosecuted under the elections law. Why? Because it's not his job. Well, frankly, it is his job, and that's a whole discussion for another time. Yet, again, this was a Conservative government that used their majority on that committee to make sure that someone who was absolutely not interested in letting the average Albertan have their say – cast their ballot, be part of our system – who absolutely doesn't see that as part of his job, was who they put in charge of our electoral process.

This bill is just a continuation of the same pattern: whatever they can do to ensure that they stay in power, and it doesn't matter how disconnected it is from a promise. It doesn't matter how disconnected it is from the English language. It doesn't matter how disconnected it is from the very clear record in other jurisdictions across the country that a fixed election date – and I was going to grab a dictionary just to read it out. Does anyone here have a dictionary? It would be interesting just to read out the dictionary definition of the word "date" because I'm pretty sure it talks about a day unless you're talking about taking someone out for coffee. I wouldn't put it past the Premier to make that argument as well if that helped her slide under the radar in terms of actually adhering to what she promised. I think if we had a dictionary, it would tell you that date refers to a day, yet that's not what we've got. What we have instead is a fixed election period of time within which the provincial government will, on the basis of its personal political interests, make a decision to capitalize on and enhance its own electoral success. That's what we could call it. It's kind of long, but what the heck. That's another thing that we could call it.

11:00

This is just really incredible. I can't imagine how there aren't a few people over there that are embarrassed by this. I've got to think that when there was a discussion about this ridiculous piece of legislation – you know, when I first heard about it, I laughed. I know I could hear the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere laughing over the phone. I think he might have almost fallen out of his chair when he heard that this was the piece of legislation that was forthcoming. I can't imagine that folks over on the other side didn't laugh. There had to be some of you over there who, when you found out about this piece of legislation, rolled your eyes and started chuckling and saying: "Really? Is this really what we're going to do? Really?" I mean, come on. There had to be. You had to know that it was just the most ridiculous idea to come out. I know that there is a bit of insight over there in a few select little rare spots. I'm pretty sure there's some insight – I'm sure there are a few of you – just a teeny bit of insight. There had to be some laughter around the ludicrousness of this.

Anyway, here we are in Alberta. Once again, unlike most other provinces in the country, we don't have a fixed election date. Interesting how municipalities are able to have a fixed election date every three years, not every four years but every three years. They have far fewer resources.

Mr. Hancock: Isn't it amazing how low the turnout is for municipal elections?

Ms Notley: Well, jeez, you know, it's really interesting. The House leader talks about the turnout for municipal elections. It's interesting. Your Chief Electoral Officer told us: "You know what? Municipalities are a great example." Why should we worry about the fact that he can't enumerate Albertans because they don't enumerate in municipal elections, and it works just fine. Presumably, you guys don't have a problem with that because that's your Chief Electoral Officer's view of municipal elections, and they work just fine.

The House leader suggests that fixed election dates are the reason why municipal turnout is so low, yet strangely they have fixed election dates in B.C. [interjection] I couldn't quite hear what the House leader was saying. I believe he's got an entertaining point there, but I can't quite hear him, unfortunately.

You know, they do have fixed election dates in several other provinces, which have about a 20 per cent higher turnout than Alberta. I think that letting people know when they can expect the election to occur actually probably increases turnout.

I was kindly provided with a note from the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, and it is a dictionary definition of the word "date." It's as follows: time stated in terms of day, month, and year; a specified day of the month. That is the dictionary definition for date. I really very much appreciate the Member for Calgary-Mountain View providing all the members of this Assembly with that valuable piece of information.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, questions, clarification. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yeah. I'd like to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. You know, you went over a lot of the different issues again and the frustration that it causes with people. Even to get your campaign volunteers it makes a difference. I'm just wondering, again because of the area that you represent, if there's a time of year where you think a fixed election date would be most appropriate for your area and if you've done any consideration on when you think a good fixed election date should be: spring, fall, winter. I'm just wondering if you had any thoughts on that.

Ms Notley: Well, I appreciate that question. See, the poor member there has fallen victim to Tory-speak in terms of what's happened to the language. You talked about a fixed election date, and then you said, "Spring, fall, winter," knowing, of course, just to review our definition here, that date does not refer to a season. Date is a day.

What date would be good? Well, I could say any day, a specific day, that it happened repeatedly every four years. In my particular riding it would be good in February, March, or halfway through April. After that, it's not good because I have a lot of students in my riding. As much as this government has very intentionally constructed the Election Act to create maximum confusion with respect to the rights of students to cast a ballot and notwithstanding the Chief Electoral Officer's active participation in enhancing that confusion and generally not supporting the ability of students to vote in our province, I'd like students to be able to vote, and it would be helpful if they were in school at that time because then they'd be where they're living.

I would very much not like to see an election occur any time after, essentially, the second week of April. Of course, as you know, the election season that's currently been identified by our language-impaired friends across the way there includes a six-week option after university has finished. That was something that I believe members across the way heard from students about and chose to ignore. Nonetheless, that's my answer.

I understand there's another question, so I'll sit down.

Mr. Hinman: I didn't fall subject to them. What I meant was: was there a date inside one of those specific seasons? I have a time that I like. Again, it's that window where you should look at it.

Probably the most important thing for me during campaign time is the time that we can have at the door. I find that people are far more receptive when the sun is up. I know that wouldn't work as well for you, but I think that overall for Albertans to have some time in June is an excellent time. The sun is up for a long time. You can work the hours, talk to the people at the door. For me it's all about being able to meet as many people as possible during that election period. As much as there is a date, there is a period where we are able to do that, to campaign with people, engage more. I personally would love to see one in June sometime. I just was curious if that would affect you. I think they'd have a better voter turnout as well because people haven't left on holidays for the summer and everything else.

Ms Notley: Well, for the reasons I just outlined, I personally wouldn't support a June date out of respect for the many, many people in my riding who are university students. That is a more difficult time for them to vote.

I will say, though, that I do agree with you on the need to go out and talk to people and to be able to engage in efforts to talk to Albertans. Certainly, the clarity and the ability to enhance that would be greater if we had a date as opposed to a season. Personally, I find that the one upside to door-knocking in the dark when it's minus 25 out is that people are feeling so darn sorry for you for being there that you actually probably get more opportunities to speak to them. They feel bad closing the door in your face because you look cold, or maybe that's just me. It does work that way. But it doesn't work so well in those ridings that have more condominiums and apartments, which are big chunks of my riding as with others. We have a Chief Electoral Officer... [Ms Notley's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: The next hon. member on my list is the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to speak. I want to give credit where credit is due. Again, repeating what the Member for Calgary-Glenmore stated with regard to credit, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood nailed it when he talked about an election season. I thoroughly enjoyed the Member for Calgary-Glenmore's comment about the Alberta advantage, that every fourth year we have a fifth season. While sort of looking across the way at the Minister of Energy, who I know is a fond hunter, I couldn't help but think that, you know, every four years, instead of just having a hunting season, we should have a political punting season. That would make tremendous sense.

What I'm experiencing right now, what I referred to at the beginning of tonight's session as ADD, Alberta democratic darkness, is the silly season. It seems that whenever this government proposes legislation, there is a lot of silliness attached to it, and it's impossible not to talk about some of that silliness.

In my May member's statement I talked about a democratic deficit. When I examined the avian entrails, in my examination I predicted that there was not going to be another parliamentary session prior to an election. Believe me, I took no satisfaction in having my prediction flipped when originally the newly elected Premier felt that having a fall session of parliament was not sufficiently important and cancelled it. Then very quickly, I guess, with the sober second thought of members of her caucus – at least, that's how it was attributed – all of a sudden we had a fall session back, a whole big, whopping two-day session followed by a significant time period in between, and now we have a two-week session.

I couldn't help but think in terms of my reality as a teacher for 34 years. "Kids, sometime within the next 90 days this assignment is due." Then I thought: you know, extend the teaching analogy. "Kids, there is going to be a spelling test sometime in the next 90 days. If you can accurately guess the actual day, you'll receive an extra 10 per cent."

You know, we can have hockey pools. We can have football pools. We can have a voting lottery pool. Guess the date the Conservatives are going to announce the election within these 90 days, and you get to vote twice. You know, it gets supremely ridiculous. As opposed to fixing elections, which the government has been very successful at, we're talking about fixing the date, not fixing the season.

One of the things the Premier claimed within discussions today – and the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona pointed it out – was the notion that by narrowing it down to a 90-day period, there would be, potentially, greater voter participation. "Voters, you know, I want you to get really excited. Sometime between February and the end of May we're going to have an election. Now, don't book any holidays. You farmers, keep your seeders parked because we might be having an election. Forget the weddings, no births. Time your gestation periods around the fact that we're going to have an election."

Now, if we want to increase voter turnout, I'll tell you that having a 90-day period isn't going to be the magic elixir that is going to turn people from a dismal 41 per cent turnout. Twenty-one per cent of eligible Albertans elected the government. If you think you're going to have a greater voter turnout by saying that sometime within the next 90 days we're going to have an election, you're mistaken.

If you want to enable people, give them a fixed date. Let them put it in their calendars. Let them be able to plan. If democracy is important to them, allow sufficient time before that fixed date for them to vote. If you want to really make it easy for them, facilitate the voting practice. Don't just have the poll open on a specific date and quite often in an inaccessible place from 9 in the morning until 8 at night. Do what some European countries do and have the vote allowed to take place over a three-day sitting. So instead of a 90-day session, you can vote in the week prior to, and the polls will open at 7. They'll close at 9 on Saturday, April 2, and at whatever time on Friday, April 1, although I worry about April 1 given this Alberta advantage discussion.

There are so many things that we could do to increase voter turnout. Creating a season doesn't do it. When we were talking about seasons, I couldn't help but think of what was originally a poem, and hopefully I'm quoting part of it correctly. Desiderata. For everything there is a season. There is a time under heaven.

Mr. Elniski: That's actually in the Psalms.

Mr. Chase: Well, it was turned into a song by the Byrds.

Mr. Elniski: Psalm. P-s-a-l-m.

Mr. Chase: Psalm. Sorry. Apparently, it comes out of Ecclesiastes.

It wasn't David that wrote it in Psalms. It wasn't somewhere between the 23rd and the 91st, both of which are dear to me. The 91st Psalm; 90 days election. There are some synchronicities happening at this 11:15 hour on Wednesday night when I didn't get to watch Modern Family with the members of my family because I'm here debating not a nonfixed election date but an election season.

Think in terms of business. I gave you the school example. A number of you are or are former business individuals. Some of you are currently landlords. You say to the person renting your home or your apartment: "Yes. Sometime within the next 90 days I will be around to collect the rent. Don't sweat it. You just make sure that you have the equivalent of three months' rent ready for me when I call because otherwise I'm going to evict you. Don't worry about the eviction. I'm going to evict you in 90 days."

What kind of contracts . . .

Mr. Hinman: Sometime in 90 days.

Mr. Chase: Yeah, sometime in 90 days.

I mean, even in rental agreements 90 days is not acceptable; we have 30 days. When you have an opportunity to put forward an offer on a house, you don't put it over a period of 90 days. There's a fixed time period which is considerably smaller.

We can laugh about it, this proposal that the Premier has put that turned a fixed election date into a flexible season, or we can cry about it. The reality for those of you who are intending to run again, especially if you're opposition members, is the advantage this gives the government, as so many people have pointed out, in making sure they have constituency office space booked, making sure they have their campaign people ready. You know, if you don't have the Conservative trough fund to tap into, it eliminates a whole number of regular people in terms of being able to afford to run and to represent their constituents.

Mr. Speaker, I don't want to continue what I've seen as a silly season, but the silliest thing next to the Health Quality Council being turned into a judicial public review when we already have a public review act is this idea that sometime, somewhere over a 90-day period . . .

An Hon. Member: When you least expect it.

Mr. Chase: . . . when you least expect it, you're going to be on Candid Election.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

11:20

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me guess. We're going to talk about broken promises again. Oh, my gosh. It seems like every bill that we have talked about is a broken promise. Some sort of a pattern is developing here.

With the introduction of Bill 21, Mr. Speaker, the Election Amendment Act, 2011, this Premier is building a brick-by-brick legacy of broken promises. It is getting very, very difficult to believe anything that is coming out of this Premier's mouth when it comes to promises. These broken promises now include what we're talking about here tonight. In addition to that, this is the same Premier who promised more democracy and transparency. She then proceeded, as her first order of business after being elected, to cancel the fall sitting of the Legislature, then bring it back for two days, followed by a month-long vacation, followed by jamming in six controversial – somewhat controversial, some of them – and substantive bills into essentially four days of full debate. If that's more transparency and democracy, bring back the previous Premier because he was a lot more democratic than that, and that's saying something.

Ms Blakeman: I never thought you'd be saying that.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, I never thought I would be saying that.

The other broken promises by this Premier, obviously, include her vow on national television to repeal section 3 of the Human Rights Act to protect free speech. As a human rights lawyer who spent three years as Justice minister, you'd think this promise was a pretty solid one. Then as Premier she only tells her Justice minister to assess the appropriateness of section 3, whether to amend or repeal it in the human rights legislation. Again, had she not thought it through before she made the promise? Who knows what will happen now? Who knows? She made a promise. Whether she keeps it or not, I guess – who knows if we'll ever know if she keeps it or not?

Obviously, the public health inquiry: we've talked a lot about that. She promised a full judicial public inquiry to be conducted before the next election. She promised it during the election. It was the cornerstone of her election promises, and then she changed her mind. She made the judicial part optional to the Health Quality Council, so it's an optional judicial inquiry, and she made it literally impossible for it to be held before the next election.

As I said in my comments earlier, Mr. Speaker, I highly doubt that we would have the current Premier that we have – I think that we would have as Premier Gary Mar – if she hadn't made those promises. She made those promises. It probably made a 1,600-vote difference in the election campaign that she was a part of with the PC Party, and she won based on those promises that either she had no intention of keeping, or she just made them up on the fly and didn't really think through the ramifications of them.

Her opponents, the Deputy Premier and Gary Mar and the Energy minister and so forth, tried to make promises that they generally knew they would be able to keep. I would hope that those are the promises that they made. I'm assuming the promises they made fit that criteria. Because of that, they didn't get as many votes because they kept things in perspective as to what they could do, set reasonable limits to what they could do. Maybe that's the reason.

The point is that this Premier has no credibility. She made promises she couldn't keep or that she had no intention of keeping. Because of that, she has completely lost her credibility, I think, as someone whose word can be trusted when it comes to promises that she makes during elections. Albertans are nobody's fools. There's the old saying: fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me. Albertans are not fools. They will not be fooled again. [interjection] You should know. Your guy lost because of these broken promises. Good grief, hon. member.

Out of this long list of broken promises the easiest one to keep, and frankly the stupidest one to break because it is so easy to keep, is this promise of a fixed election date. You can't be clearer than what she said. She said that during her leadership we will have a fixed election date. Instead, she gets into power, and what does she do? I mean, this is unprecedented in North America that she does this. I did almost fall off my chair when the House leader . . .

An Hon. Member: What was your quote to him then?

Mr. Anderson: I just said: you've got to be kidding me. Honestly? You're honestly going to try to sell to Albertans, after making such a direct promise, that a fixed-election season is appropriate?

Let's review why other jurisdictions have fixed election dates and we still won't. The intention of fixed election dates, one of them anyway, is that it takes away the advantage of the sitting government over opposition parties in calling an election whenever it is most politically advantageous to them. Fixed election dates are nonpartisan in nature and place all parties on an equal playing field. They are designed to strengthen democracy, transparency, and accountability within the electoral system that we have. It allows Elections Alberta to get better prepared. It allows candidate recruitment to go better because good candidates – and, obviously, there are some good candidates that still get nominated. Who knows what kind of rock stars and fantastic genius legislative Einsteins we could have here if they actually could put a date on an election and work backwards from that so that people with real jobs, you know, could actually plan their lives in a way that they could run for office rather than kind of trying to maybe hope that they time it right for the election?

It's not like this is a new concept. We're not pushing the risky bounds here by taking a step into the dark with the fixed election dates. Eight other jurisdictions in Canada have already established fixed election dates for this very reason. Our neighbours to the west in British Columbia brought this in a decade ago, and their fixed date is the second Tuesday in May. Whoa. Hold the phone. That is pretty specific. What if there's rain? What if it's a tough spring in B.C.? They've never had any kind of flooding or storms.

Ms Notley: Never had that.

Mr. Anderson: Never had that, yet so specific.

Our neighbours to the east in Saskatchewan, the only truly conservative government in western Canada, just held their first election date, established by Premier Brad Wall, which is held on the first Monday in November. Couldn't be very cold in November in Saskatchewan, could it?

Ms Notley: It's very predictable.

Mr. Anderson: Very predictable weather in Saskatchewan.

Similar legislation exists in Manitoba. No problem in Manitoba. They never have floods or anything like that. Ontario, New Brunswick, P.E.I., Newfoundland – Newfoundland, a very stable climate – and the Northwest Territories, an extremely stable climate. In all these provinces a fixed election date singles out a specific day of the year.

Instead of committing to a common-sense legislative promise that almost every other jurisdiction in this country has recognized as good for democracy, this Premier has instead been playing fast and loose with the truth on this file since the recent leadership race for the PC Party began. On September 23 she promised PC members that she would commit to calling an election in March 2012 and every four years from that date.

You know, I remember the previous Premier. It's funny. Be careful what you wish for. The previous Premier, actually, was reasonably consistent on this. He would always say: "Look. Four years since the last one would be March 2012. Look for it at that time." You know, it's funny. I know in the Wildrose caucus we actually took him at his word. I'm quite sure that if he was still the Premier, I think he would have called it then. I think he would have. He didn't seem to have a problem with following through with what he said he was going to do regardless of whether it was good or bad, so we kind of believed him on that.

Not this Premier. Not this Premier at all. She was more specific. She specifically said: "I will set a date. I will set a fixed election date." Then she wavered. She waffled. Now we've got this three-month window, so be careful what you wish for. It again shows that the previous Premier was far more democratic than this current Premier, which is ridiculous because that's how she was elected, on a platform of transparency and accountability and respect for democracy. So much for that.

She even specified that Albertans are supportive of the idea and made reference to the fact that many other provinces currently use the model. What model was she referring to? Is there some model that I'm not aware of in Canada that has seasonal election dates?

Mr. Chase: It's a made-in-Alberta model.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, a made-in-Alberta model is indeed the case.

She went on to say that fixed election dates are important because Albertans, quote, don't believe any political party should have even a theoretical upper hand in managing the political agenda and then picking the election date accordingly. That is beautiful, that Albertans don't believe any political party should have even a theoretical upper hand in managing the political agenda and then picking the election date accordingly. Those are fantastic words, and they're true. She was dead on. The only problem is that she apparently forgot them the moment she said them because she flipped as soon as she was elected. That's what's so gross about this whole thing. I mean, it's gross.

11:30

You get elected on democracy and transparency. You say that you're going to do something right before an election. You've got other qualified candidates out there campaigning who are trying, I'm assuming, to tell the truth in what they're going to do. You win by 1,600 votes, which is nothing, obviously, in a province-wide race of any kind, and then you proceed to break the promises you were just elected on, including this one. Just preposterous. She has even been quoted as saying that the status quo of no election dates needs to be changed so as to deny the government "the behind-the-scenes deal-making and manipulation that sometimes characterize the timing of an election."

But these bold promises of a strengthened democracy were broken mere days following her election as Premier as she began to openly muse when an election could be held in the future. An example of this was on October 5 in an online chat with the Calgary Herald editorial board, when saying that an election date could be – this is October 5, three days after she was elected, after she had said all those things I just talked about – after a spring sitting or maybe after a throne speech or maybe in June as, quote, sometimes the Legislature takes on a life of its own, so a date is a little unpredictable, unquote. You never know what those Legislatures might do. What happens at the Legislature stays at the Legislature. This is crazy. This is just too unpredictable, you know.

We've got to make sure we have some flexibility. Pretty soon, you know, the members of the Liberal Party are rioting, you know, and the Wildrose is holding keggers in the government's room over there. I mean, who knows? Who knows what could happen? We've got to keep the flexibility.

Instead of taking a common-sense approach and mimicking successful legislation that all parties of all partisan stripes have accepted across this country, this Premier's government instead has decided to insist that they remain in control with regard to when they call an election.

This floating election season: we've got to have a name contest for this because there have been lots of different names. I like floating election season.

Mr. Chase: How about a U-pick election?

Mr. Anderson: A U-pick election. That's right. We should vote. What we should do is have Albertans vote on when they want to have their real election.

Mr. Chase: Yeah. We can have a selection election.

Mr. Anderson: A selection election. That's right.

The floating election season still gives the government the freedom to call the election on a date that gives them the best political advantage. The government still gets to shoot the gun to start the race when everyone else is guessing exactly when the election will start. This gives them time to buy ads, train their candidates, and organize their volunteers before opposition parties can be ready. People don't understand this.

Here's one example. When you buy ads, you have to do that in advance, obviously, if you want the best ad spots. Well, if you're the government, clearly, you can make sure that you get all the best spots because you're going to be the one that knows the exact date of the election, when it's going to start, what order, all that sort of thing. It's a huge advantage over the rest of the opposition parties, who kind of get the leftovers. That's just one example, but there are some nuts-and-bolts things that literally give the home team that kind of 1-nothing lead before the puck is dropped.

Mr. Chase: It's mostly nuts.

Mr. Anderson: Mostly nuts. That's right.

This is a shameful piece of legislation that sends the message to Albertans that they come second in the Premier's pursuit of power and the attempts to hold on to it. What other explanation is there for a Premier and a government to break such a simple, straightforward, clear promise? You certainly won't find one in any of these . . . [Mr. Anderson's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Yes. It was with deep regret that I heard the bell sound. I was inspired by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, and I was very anxious to hear the rest of his summation.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: All right. Thank you very much. I'll speed it up.

I want to go back to what the Government House Leader, who is here tonight, came out last week and told the public, that the PCs, the government, wanted the flexibility to form an election window. One of the reasons he gave was that there may be natural disasters to hit the province.

Despite this concern never being seriously raised in any other jurisdiction in the western world – in the western world this has not been a concern when it comes to fixed election dates. This government's bad spin is especially quite lame considering the fact that Albertans know that any threat of natural disasters in this province, whether it be forest fires or floods, doesn't really occur until May. May is the month where they'd have to hold it if they didn't like the polls in March or April, so there is a little inconsistency there.

Even more unbelievable were the claims by the Justice minister – and I like the Justice minister – stating that a fixed election date might fall on a day of cultural or religious significance. Well, let's take a look at that excuse. Though it is important to honour and respect individuals from all religious backgrounds and traditions, it is not necessary to create a three-month election window to maintain government control over the timing of an election to avoid any cultural or religious sensitivities. You can pick a date, as all these other jurisdictions do, that allows you to make sure that that date doesn't fall on a very special holiday for other people.

If this was truly their concern, this Premier and her government might have wanted to take a closer look at the legislation for fixed election dates in Ontario, where the government must call an election every four years that lands on the first Thursday in October. She may have even had the chance to directly talk to the Ontario Premier during her visit to Toronto about how to best get around this sticky issue. The law in Ontario allows for a date to be moved forward to any of the following seven days in the case of the odd instance where a religious or culturally significant holiday is in conflict with the fixed election date. It's a simple solution for what this government seems to think is a pretty complex issue.

The Election Act already states that if 28 days after the writ is dropped is a holiday, the election would be the following day. Imagine that, the following day. Holy smokes. If this type of clear and precise amendment to the legislation seems too constrictive to the government, there are other creative ways to get around these alleged problems with a fixed election date.

Surely this government has enough brain power, enough coals burning, to muster the creativity to get around these distressing loopholes that get in the way of more open, transparent, and effective democracy for all Albertans. Otherwise, this legislation will stand in the minds of Albertans as one of the most bizarre broken promises committed by any head of government in this province's long, long history. It's shameful. It's hypocritical legislation. As the Wildrose we will be voting against it and hope that the government, when they come, will at some point in the future change the legislation to reflect what Albertans want, which is fixed election dates. If they won't, I know a few parties, specifically the one I'm with, that will.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View on the bill.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. On Bill 21, the Election Amendment Act, 2011, I'm very pleased to raise my concerns also. At the risk of repeating some of what's been said, I too am disappointed that a government that says that they honour, respect, and want to fulfill their commitment to democracy would play games with a word or, more importantly, play games with a concept which is designed to give a stronger sense of connection and engagement by citizens, a greater sense of fairness in the whole political process, that they would play games with that and talk about a 90-day period. That's a long period.

More than anything, I'd like to comment today on a government that would be serious about democracy. What would it actually do to try to strengthen democracy and give all citizens a sense that democracy is sacred, that they wanted to support it, that they wanted to make it accessible, that they wanted more involvement, not less, that they wanted people to have confidence in the outcomes of elections because they were participated in with vigour and with enthusiasm and with the full knowledge that their vote, their participation, was going to make a difference?

In that context one would look at some other things besides fixed election dates that would actually build a stronger sense of democracy in this province. Heaven knows, with 40 per cent voter turnouts we do not have a strong democracy. We have, I would say, a discouraged electorate, young people that don't participate actively. In that sense we as legislators I think have to take some responsibility for a culture that has checked out of their democracy. They are not speaking a lot on public policy issues. They're not active on a lot of public policy issues. The recent Occupy movement notwithstanding, most Albertans are not actively involved in their provincial policy issues.

We have a responsibility to try to do everything we can to make the easy thing the right thing, to participate actively in the system. I therefore have to raise issues related to that which have to do with election financing, boundary distribution, easy access to polling stations, campaign financing. There are a host of issues where only once the pressure is insurmountable will this government actually make a tiny, tiny improvement in our democratic processes. We have to fight every inch of the way. Instead of a government that looks at the scope and scale of opportunities to strengthen our democracy and dives in to look at all of them and improve all of them, we have to push inch by inch to get even something as basic as a fixed election date, and that now corrupted and distorted by this period.

Public education on our democracy. How could the Chief Electoral Officer, for example, how could all of us be more actively engaged in seeing that people understand and appreciate the cost of a democracy both in personal terms and in terms of the sacrifices our forefathers have made and current military and others make to keep our democracy alive? How much is our Chief Electoral Officer investing in schools and engaging communities and looking at their opportunities for participation and debate, public forums, issues of current importance? How much is our Chief Electoral Officer involved with First Nations, engaging them in understanding how they can be part of and influential in our future as a province?

New Canadians. Surely they need encouragement and information and welcoming into the democratic processes, which may not be new to them but which almost invariably are different from where they came from.

Capturing a sense of people power, of people's influence and a sense of responsibility for our democracy, I think is at the heart of all of this. It's disappointing to see that there's so little enthusiasm on the other side for even the most basic change, which is a fixed election date.

As some of you may know, our former leader from Edmonton-Riverview has been the last two days in court still fighting over the last election and the mismanagement of the last election, some of the most basic issues that relate to people's prompt access to the poll. What's possible in terms of making polling more readily accessible on First Nations and for university students and more clear and communicated more effectively: some of those things were grossly neglected in the last election and discouraged people profoundly from getting involved in the democratic process. We intend to see the courts actually rule on this last election, 2008, and rule against this government in the very, very poor management that they demonstrated, some would say deliberate mismanagement for political purposes. That's another example of, really, a lack of commitment to our democracy.

The financing of campaigns. We've been fighting for years over the fact that corporations, unions, individuals can give up to $30,000 in one election year. That is totally inappropriate – totally inappropriate. Corporations and unions shouldn't be paying money at all for elections. It should be individuals that are donating to campaigns. If we really want to encourage democracy and give people a sense that they, not corporate interests or unions, are controlling our government, let's get serious about campaign finance reform in this province and, in relation to that, the most recent provincial bill hamstringing municipalities in their electoral process and now throwing into disarray and disrepute the whole electoral process in municipalities because of lack of accountability around spending in municipal elections, a lack of clear guidelines and clear, enforceable directions for municipal councillors. I heard this from the chief electoral officer of Calgary. They have no idea what to enforce or how they can enforce as a result of Bill 203, passed in this Legislature in 2009.

Campaign financing is another critical issue that is inappropriately influencing elections and giving more fuel to the occupation movement, saying that we're all bought. We're all the same. We're all overly influenced by money instead of the public interest and the principles by which we think Alberta could become the best possible place in the next 50 years. That's another example.

Communications is another area. Public relations, the Public Affairs Bureau and the millions of dollars that this government puts into spinning its own message and its party message ultimately suggests a very cynical view of communications. The import of experts, messages, flashy ads, things that are really not encouraging people to believe that the truth and the facts and evidence and objectivity in the media are even possible today because so much of what we see and hear is bought by corporate dollars, in this case by public dollars being spent through the Public Affairs Bureau, manufacturing consent for yet another term by this government that's totally bent on being re-elected. Another distortion of our democracy, another contribution to cynicism and lack of engagement by our citizens.

Those are some of the issues, Mr. Speaker, that this bill brings up for me. It's a government that's not really serious, not really committed to democratic reform and renewal and engagement but will do as little as is possible to give the impression that they still believe in democracy and, frankly, are fast losing the respect, the involvement, obviously, of our citizens. Unfortunately, even our children do not have any faith in the political process in this province.

We certainly will not be supporting this. It's not progress. It's not a reflection of a genuine commitment to strengthening democracy and engaging people and ensuring that we get the best people in government, that we use the best of processes to determine nomination meetings and the best people to represent us, and that we make the voting system accessible and understandable and easy to participate in. It's another example to me of a deeply cynical government that will do almost anything to look good and to communicate nice messages and to carry on in power indefinitely.

I don't have anything more to say. It speaks for itself that the Premier committed one thing and is delivering another in a number of areas. We will continue to say what we see. This is not acceptable. This is not about the people. It's not about the long-term public interest. It's not about encouraging a healthy, living democracy. This is a dying democracy. Until we get some changes in these most fundamental parts of our democracy, we're going to see more and more of this disengagement.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

11:50

The Deputy Speaker: Standing order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I'm well aware that the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View has travelled to former dictatorships. He and his wife worked as doctors attempting to help a public form of health care in South Africa. He also travelled to Iraq with the hope of coming up with peaceful circumstances. He's seen raw power first-hand.

My question to the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View. Some things the government does can be judged as foolish. Other things appear to be calculated. We know for a fact that the status quo, a low voter turnout, favours the existing regime. Do you have any comments as to whether you think this was simply a foolish act or whether there's a deliberateness to it?

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you to the Member for Calgary-Varsity. He and I both share a very strong commitment to public life, as I'm sure most people in this Assembly do. We have a recognition that the most profound impact on people's lives and their health isn't medical practice, isn't science; it's politics. Public policy has created the most profound changes in our societies in the way they relate to each other, in the way they transport goods and they deal with all of their resources. Governments have made the difference between life and death and the survival of cultures and the demise of cultures and species all over the planet. The impact of public policy is so profound for both the good and the ill.

When people don't take seriously their role in strengthening, in inspiring, in engaging people in this most vital role as citizens, it disturbs me. It disgusts me, frankly. The fact that we are so blessed that we can go from decade to decade and not experience huge, cataclysmic decline because we have such resources and such wealth and such technology to protect us from bad decisions doesn't relieve us of the responsibility to make this a much better, more engaged, more active, more authentic civilization, that should be leading the world in terms of democratic process and setting the highest possible standards in democratic engagement and electoral politics. Instead, we are dragging our feet and showing some of the worst dimensions of an entrenched government after 41 years that is not listening, is not really interested in thinking about the long-term public interest. It's one election to the next and using every means they have to maintain power.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a request. We'd ask for unanimous consent to shorten the division bells to one minute, if that would be okay, on a division.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member want to use 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Chase: Just leaving it up to the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View whether he wished to conclude debate or adjourn debate and call for a vote on the second stage of this questionable bill.

Dr. Swann: I will follow the suggestion and adjourn debate. I think we've had a lengthy discussion.

The Deputy Speaker: We have used the comments period under 29(2)(a) for a motion and suggestion. I don't believe that is the right timing, is it?

We should continue on the bill. Do you want to speak on the bill now that we have finished under 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, does the minister want to close the debate before I call the question? All right. Then the chair shall call the question.

[The voice vote indicated that the motion for second reading carried]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 11:56 p.m.]

[One minute having elapsed, the Assembly divided]

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

For the motion:

Ady	Fritz	Morton
Bhardwaj	Hancock	Oberle
Blackett	Horner	Olson
Calahasen	Jacobs	Prins
Campbell	Knight	Rodney

Totals:	For – 25	Against – 6

[Motion carried; Bill 21 read a second time]

Bill 22

Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate November 22: Ms Woo-Paw]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm going to apologize in advance because this is a monster bill to try and work your way through. In this sort of 10-pound binder that I'm showing people are copies of all of the acts being amended by Bill 22, the Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011. So although the government was kind enough to table the legislation on Tuesday, I just haven't had time to be able to work my way through 14 pieces of legislation to cross-check exactly what is going on.

This is going to be a painful debate here, folks, because I'm not as prepared as I usually am, but you are in a such a goldarned hurry here that I don't have time to be properly prepared. I don't like that, to be perfectly honest. I like to be prepared, and I like to be on top of stuff. It makes me very cranky when I'm not. Here's how far I have gotten in what we've done. I'm sorry. There's one other thing I just want to point out to everybody here. Prior to the changes – I think it was maybe in 2005 – to the standing orders, for an omnibus bill, which is what this is, a bill that changes more than one other existing statute, members were allocated more time to speak. If you would have had 20 minutes usually, you got 30 minutes to speak to an omnibus bill, which gave you a better chance of being able to cover some of the distance you're trying to with these 14 different pieces of legislation. That got wiped out during one of the standing order dictates. I won't call it a negotiation because it wasn't.

So I'm now in the position of trying to put on record the position of the Official Opposition caucus on these various amendments at a rate of just over a minute per piece of legislation or statute that's been amended in this act, which is not a pleasant position to be in. And I'm angry because I'm not able to represent people as well as I should or to offer alternatives as I like to be able to do.

From the get-go here we have changes to the Administration of Estates Act. What's happening here actually does appear to be fairly minor. I have a couple of questions because what it's doing is changing the language from "clerk of the court for a judicial centre" and widening who is able to do this. So it's a much longer list. Later it talks more about a judicial centre, which has kind of got me scratching my head. Isn't a judicial centre a court? Why are we changing that language?

Now, I go back and read the Hansard. For those people that like to follow along – God bless them – this discussion takes the Member for Calgary-Mackay, who sponsored this bill, through her brief overview of the act. It appears in the Hansard of November 22, from pages 1236 through 1238 if you want to follow along at home. She appears to be saying under the Administration of Estates Act that this is about avoiding duplication of grants that have been transferred from the Public Trustee's office to the clerk of the court. One of my first questions is that I can't find the references in the initial bill and the bill that we're amending that talk about these responsibilities being the Public Trustee's responsibilities. So I'm not quite sure where she gets that it's being transferred from the Public Trustee's office to the clerk of the court. In what's being mentioned here – and I actually have the whole act, so I can look at the sort of wider context, the sections before and after – it's not referencing the Public Trustee Act. Maybe she can answer that one when we get into Committee of the Whole.

Once again, what's a judicial centre? Isn't that a court? Where is the reference that talks about the Public Trustee currently having these responsibilities that are now being transferred to the clerk and deputy clerk or acting clerk at a judicial centre? What it appears to me to be doing is taking out any of the references for notification being given to the Deputy Minister of Justice and the Deputy Attorney General. I'm just sort of swimming around in this stuff here. Sorry about that. But essentially for the administration of an estate it appears that what's happening is that they're trying to make sure that there isn't duplication of people, that if somebody else has already applied for a grant, it isn't duplicated somehow, whatever that means. Okay. So that's the administration of estates. The sponsoring member says this is minor, and I'm not too sure of that. When you take out the notifications to the Deputy Minister of Justice and the Deputy Attorney General, maybe there's a good reason for that, but it's not clear why.

Moving on here to the second one that is mentioned, which is the Builders' Lien Act, there are two sections that are dealt with. Again, it's this language, and I'm not sure what we're trying to line up with here. If someone could let me know what it is we're changing all of this language to line up with, that would be helpful. We're striking out "The clerk of the court" and substituting "A court clerk in the judicial centre." Clearly, this is supposed to line up with some other legislation. But nobody is telling me what other legislation it's supposed to line up with, so I'm going to ask the question. It says that it's consistent with the Alberta Rules of Court, which – I'm sorry – I just don't have time to get and cross-reference to. So I'm questioning you on that because I don't have time to test it myself. The Builders' Lien Act does appear to be minor, but I'll put those couple of questions on the record.

Now we're going to move on. Yeah. There are two sections that are referenced. Oh, the seal. Sorry. Still under the Builders' Lien Act my question is: is there a legal significance to the seal? There usually is. We have a seal that belongs to the Clerk. I know that as an MLA I'm a notary public, and the seal itself is valuable because that's the stamp. If you lose it, you're in big trouble. You know, the thing that squishes the paper. This is changing that. It's saying that there doesn't have to be a seal. Where we would have had "a certificate under the seal of the clerk of the court," blah, blah, it's taking that out. Why? I'm wondering if there isn't some legal significance that's being lost here because we don't have the seal. I was led to believe the seal was important and legal and official, and now we're saying that that doesn't have to happen. It's literally striking out "under the seal of the clerk of the court" and substituting "from a court clerk."

Now, this might just be, you know: why are we going through all of this palaver and all of the paper squishing and stuff when this is strictly an administrative thing? Fair enough, but that's not what the member said in her comments, and that's all I have to go on at this point. So let me know about that. Right. Those were the two pieces in the Builder's Lien Act.

I'm moving on to the Civil Enforcement Act. Let me get the first little tab out here. Oh, right. The bloody sheriffs. Oh, I mean, the wonderful sheriffs. Let me make sure I've got the right section here. There is a change in the definition of what a sheriff is. You know, at the beginning of every act there's always that long, long, long list of definitions. The reason is that the definitions are put in if the definition is different than what you would normally expect it to be.

Oh, I'm so sorry. I truly am. I really apologize for being boring because I'm already losing some of the members on this side. I do apologize for that. I've put him to sleep, but maybe he's particular.

An Hon. Member: Impossible.

Ms Blakeman: Oh, there he is. He's back. There we go. Sorry. I didn't mean to wake you up. Honestly, you could have had a snooze there.

So this is under that definitions section, and when it appears here it's because the act needs you to understand that definition specifically and not under the sort of common usage of the language. In particular here, we're changing or adding – I'll tell you, this is going to make a very strange definition, but it's essentially saying that "sheriff" means a person designated as a sheriff by the Minister . . . to exercise the powers and carry out the duties of a sheriff under this Act." That's now what it's going to say. I don't know why that's important, but that's why it's going to say it.

The next section that we're going into is 15, a sort of subsequent amendment, I'm assuming, because as my notes say, there are so many sheriffs. It's like: there's so little time; there are so many sheriffs. What it is is that they're trying to make sure that all the new sheriffs, that this government is so fond of creating left, right, and centre – we get new sheriffs every day. Actually, in the second-last act that we did here there was yet a new designation of sheriffs being used, so it's exactly following from stuff in that. But not all of these new sheriffs have the same definition, and they get in trouble if they're wearing the insignia or dressed up in the outfit or if it's on their business cards that they're a sheriff if they're not a sheriff under the designating act.

We've now got so many more sheriffs that they're having to put in a section saying: well, if you're designated as a sheriff under another act, you're not in trouble for having the insignia or having it on your business card or wearing the clothes. That is consequential to creating new sheriffs in other areas and in their being able to perform duties under different acts. That, to my mind, is a subsequent amendment and is perfectly fine.

I'm still under civil enforcement. Yes, I am.

When we go to the next section, this is halving the time for personal property that has been under seizure. The agency can give notice to those that have a lien on it or some claim on this seized property that the agency is going to release it, and if they want to do something with it, they have to give them notice that they want to do something with it. Is that one clear to everybody?

So they cut the time in half. It used to be that once it had been under seizure for 90 days, then the agency would give 30 days' warning of their intention to release the property. Now once they've had it under seizure for 30 days, they're going to give 15 days' notice that they're going to release the property to whoever wants to fight over it. This is not inconsequential or insignificant in that it is halving the time, but I'm also wondering if that isn't perfectly appropriate.

In the sponsoring member's discussion she said that amendments will reduce the number of days of notice that must be given to creditors before seized property is released, that this will help avoid unnecessary storage costs. My question is: for whom? Is this for the agency, or is this for the person who still owns the property, or is this for the person who wants to seize the property? If she would be so kind as to clarify who is avoiding unnecessary storage costs by halving the time, I'd be grateful. [interjection]

Okay. Off the record there you got a very precise reckoning from the Minister of Human Services and everything else department about what that was about in that it saves time for everybody because there can be a number of different people involved here, including the person whose stuff was seized, who could buy it back or pay the fine and get it, or the people who had given notice that they wanted a piece of it because they wanted their money's worth out of this same thing. Holy geez. That one sounds okay, but I'd like to know on the record what that was about.

The next section in the Civil Enforcement Act is around – oh, no. Sorry. That's still the seizure stuff. These things are out of order for me. The note I've got here is that it eliminates the need for a court order, which, again, might just be simplifying something that is unduly bureaucratic or too much red tape. I mean, sometimes we make things such a big deal, and they really don't need to be. Now, maybe that's because it's just become much more common usage, and it's not such a big deal as it used to be.

I remember when going bankrupt used to be the end of the world. It was just terrible. It was a terrible disgrace to you and everyone in your family, and people sort of tiptoed around it. Now it seems like people seem to declare bankruptcy at the tip of a hat. They're proud of it. It doesn't seem to be a problem at all. So it may just be that things have progressed and they're used commonly enough that there is no need. It's so common that it's kind of silly to keep applying to the court for an order. I don't know, and again I'm not getting a clear answer.

There is a garnishee summons here that is also – right. That one does make sense to me. There is the opportunity here – and that is in section 79 – that when a garnishee summons is in effect, it's only good for one year, and this is going to increase it to two years. Actually, having tried to deal with that as a small landlord that was trying to chase somebody who stiffed us on the rent, that was really nice. We were trying to chase someone that was a waiter, and they just kept moving jobs, and we had to keep refiling the garnishee, so doubling it from one year to two years sounds like a good idea to me, but other people may not agree with that. Again, that is not insignificant, going from one year to two years, but it seems like that's kind of handy to me, that you don't have to keep going back and refiling that.

The section that is around – I might have missed this; I'm sorry – not needing the court order I seem to have lost.

There is a flat-out typo here as far as I can tell that appears where there's a whole long series where they keep talking about – again, this is about the garnishee – the enforcement debtor, and then all of a sudden they talk about an employment debtor. Clearly, the word “employment” is wrong. It just is flat-out wrong, and it should have been “enforcement.” I'm fine with that one. If you'd brought me that one as a miscellaneous statute, I would have been fine with it because it honestly was a typo. But a lot of times you don't bring me that; you try and do other things, so you don't get it.

Now, Court of Queen's Bench Act. We're just clipping along, just motoring, totally. Okay. Here we go. Once again we are changing a definition. The first thing that happens is that it's adding in a wider definition around masters in chambers under that section 1 definition. They're now saying a master, no “s” . . . [Ms Blakeman's speaking time expired] Oh, I can't believe I spent 20 minutes on that. Seriously. Look at this. I've talked about four acts. There are 14.

The Deputy Speaker: This 20 minutes are up. The next hon. member to speak on the bill is the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. Rather than trying to pick up where the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre left off, I thought I would start at the other end, and possibly the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View can meet us somewhere in the middle.

Now, based on my five years of studying Latin – and that wasn't because I failed three years and had to repeat it; that was grade 9, 10, 11, 12, and 13 in an Ottawa high school – my Latin reminds me that “omni” refers to all. For example, omnipotens potentis would mean all powerful. But the “bus” part of it causes me to create a bit of an historical anachronism. Therefore, omnibus means all bus. Therefore, an all-bus bill means a multi-passenger bill, formerly of the Roman empire. But, of course, there was no such thing.

To try to deal with this omnibus bill, which is all containing and attempts in one single bill to cover a whole series of former acts, is very difficult. Just as the Member for Edmonton-Centre had troubles, I'm having troubles with the interpretation, especially when it gives the former information but then doesn't say what the bill is going to be changed to.

For example, I'm looking at page 37 of Bill 22. I realize that in the Committee of the Whole there is the clause-by-clause analysis, so I'm going to try and skip over some of the highlights.

Under the Witness Security Act:

Amends SA 2010 cW-12.5

14(1) The Witness Security Act is amended by this section.

(2) Section 11(3) is amended by striking out “Adult Guardianship Act” and substituting “Adult Guardianship and Trustee Act”.

Now, I recall that in previous parliamentary sessions we talked about the importance of appointing a trustee and we talked about inheritance matters and who could be the spokesperson, the representative of the executor, and so on. So I understand a little bit of that.

Then it goes on to:

(9) Section 61(2) presently reads:

(2) The Minister may make regulations prescribing an amount for the purpose of subsection 1(b)(i).

Now, whenever I see the word “may” as opposed to “shall” and whenever I see the word “regulation” as opposed to “legislation,” it makes me uncomfortable because the idea that a minister is making regulations, which he or she may or may not provide to the individuals who are affected by those unilaterally – to use another Latin term, an omniscient regulatory system concerns me. Then it concerns me further when the wiggle room is added of “may” rather than “shall.”

(10) Section 109(2) presently reads:

(2) If a deceased, during life, has transferred property to a prospective beneficiary, a person who alleges that the transfer was intended by the deceased to be an advance against, or otherwise repayable from, the prospective beneficiary's share of the estate may make an application to the Court under this section.

This is what it currently says. I consider myself to be at least a reasonably intelligent person – I graduated with a degree in education and taught for 34 years – but I understand why it is that people pay such high fees to lawyers, to my son-in-law Vivek Warriar, who is currently a partner with Bennett Jones, and to my brother Greg Chase, who is a partner with Miles Davison. I understand why they receive the salaries they do, so that they can interpret the laws correctly to their family members, in one case the father-in-law and in the other case the brother.

(11) Section 111 presently reads:

111(1) Where a testator . . .

Or a tes-tey-tor. I'm not sure whether it's a matador or a ma-tey-dor. You know, I believe in control of the English language, but this is not a term I'm familiar with. Anyway, I'm assuming it's a person who gives testimony, whether it's a tes-tey-tor or a testator or whatever.

. . . purports, by will, to give a gift of property that the testator does not own,

(a) the gift is void, and . . .

That rather makes sense, that it's illegal to give away property that you don't own. I understand that, and therefore it makes sense that the gift is void.

It goes on to say:

(b) any rights that the owner of the property has as a beneficiary under the will are not affected by the testator's purported gift.

Then it goes on to add clarification, I suppose.

(2) Nothing in subsection (1) affects the right of a testator to make a gift of property that is conditional on a disposition by the beneficiary of property that is owned by the beneficiary.

Well, I talked about Latin and five years and, you know, that I taught English, but this is a different type of very specific, clinical legalese with which myself and, I would suggest, the majority of Albertans are not familiar. Yet we're asked to grant to the government without a terrific amount of explanation that the improvements, that aren't listed, are going to be better than what we currently have.

Under the Witness Security Act,

14(1) Amends chapter W-12.5 of the Statutes of Alberta, 2010.

- (2) Section 11(3) presently reads:
- (3) If a witness or an associated person is a minor or a represented adult as defined in the Adult Guardianship Act,
- (a) the guardian of the minor or of the represented adult, as the case may be, may sign a letter of acknowledgement on his or her behalf, and
  - (b) on the signing of the letter of acknowledgement by the guardian, the witness or associated person is deemed to have signed the letter of acknowledgement.

12:30

Now, I understand what we're talking about by a represented adult. You know, if a person has some type of mental disability and a person is acting in a guardianship role on that behalf, it makes sense that they would be allowed to act in the best interests of the person for whom they are providing the guardianship.

Obviously, because we're notaries public and commissioners for oaths, we have to have at least a limited understanding of what it is that we're signing when people come into our constituency office for that service, which is, of course, free and therefore very popular. But when it gets into the type of detail that we're describing here, there is a terrific amount of clarification that is required.

Now, instead of skipping ahead, let's skip back a little. Wills and Succession Act, page 34: 13(1) amends chapter W-12.2 of the Statutes of Alberta, 2010.

- (2) Section 4 is amended by striking out "an application" and substituting "a contested application."

That is a very definite change in intent. One is simply an application, but now it's being changed to a contested application. Obviously, the government in its wisdom and in its legal representation and departments felt that they had to spell out the fact that it wasn't an ordinary application, that there was another party contesting the original application, so they tried to cover both circumstances, I believe.

Then we come to

- (3) Section 5(1) is repealed and the following is substituted.

I don't have the book currently that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre is attempting to review on the spot because of the limited time provided, but it goes on. At least I know what, in this case, although I didn't know what was in the original, is being substituted because here it is:

Survivorship rules

5(1) If 2 or more individuals die at the same time or in circumstances rendering it uncertain which of them survived the other or others, all rights and interests of each of the individuals with respect to property must be determined as if that individual had predeceased the other or others unless

- (a) the Court, in interpreting a will or other instrument, finds a contrary intention,
- (b) section 599 or 690 of the Insurance Act applies, or

And again we don't have attachments here as to what sections 599 or 690 of the Insurance Act refer to.

- (c) a provision of an Act provides for a different result.

Subsection (c) basically is the catch-all. It's the none-of-the-above clause.

It's pretty hard to nail something down when you then allow the escape clause. For example, in my will my wife is the direct beneficiary, and should she predecease me, our daughter is our beneficiary. If we were both to succumb at the same time, obviously neither of us could benefit from the other's estate, and it would go directly to our daughter. It's this type of complication that is being crowded. To use the bus analogy, never mind the omni part, we're having so many things put onto this double-decker bus, and we're expected to comprehend, understand, and in the space of eight days simply say: "We take your word for it. This is good stuff." Trust us. Well, the "trust us" bit, unfortunately, doesn't work.

Rather than reading through everything else, let me come to the Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act. For those of you who are trying to follow my methodology here, I'm on page 32.

Amends SA 2001 cV-3.5

12(1) The Victims Restitution and Compensation Payment Act is amended by this section.

(2) Section 5(1)(a) is amended

- (a) in subclause (ii) by adding "or another person" after "civil enforcement agency";
- (b) in subclause (iv) by adding "or other person" after "civil enforcement agency."

The Deputy Speaker: We have Standing Order 29(2)(a) for five minutes.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View on the bill.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a real honour to speak to Bill 22, the Justice and Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011. Just a couple of comments here, building upon what the Member for Edmonton-Centre was trying so enthusiastically to present. This relates to the Court of Queen's Bench Act, section 4. It reads that section 1(b.2) is amended by adding "a half-time master in chambers, a part-time master in chambers" in relation to the amendment.

Some of the questions that I'm passing along: it looks like what we're trying to do is respect in the court system both experience and age by allowing over-60-year-olds who have completed 10 years of service to be masters in the Chamber, and where a master in the Chamber is approaching 70 years and has not attained age 70, to apply for part-time work as a Queen's Bench judge.

So what's the point here, I guess is the question. Are we trying to cut the costs by paying these folks half-time? Are we trying to keep more of the justice masters available? [interjection] It sounds like, from the House leader opposite, we're trying to hang on to experienced judges for longer and keep them going part-time. I guess the question then becomes: can they collect a pension and other benefits as well as the salary? Is it a question of double-dipping for these people, or does it mean that they are only paid one or the other? That's a question I'll leave.

12:40

The second has to do with the Justice of the Peace Act on page 16. Under the Fatality Inquiries Act section 7(2) – it looks like it should be section 2 – says that it's amended by striking out "voting" wherever it occurs in section 2. The implication here is that they either don't want voting members on the Fatality Review Board, or they want all members to have the same voting status. Is that really what they're saying? For example, under the revised reading:

2(5) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may designate

- (a) one voting member of the Board as chair of the Board.

Are we eliminating that chair as a voting member? That's what it implies under the revisions. That's a bit confusing. Why are we taking away voting privileges from people on the board?

In section (2) the section is amended by adding the following after clause (b):

- (b.1) "justice of the peace" means a justice of the peace who is appointed under this Act as a justice of the peace and includes an ad hoc justice of the peace.

It's difficult to know exactly what that means. Why are we giving people ad hoc powers as a justice of the peace as an improvement on a bill? Sitting and presiding is what's being eliminated? We're eliminating that by calling it an ad hoc justice of the peace? Okay.

Well, those are just some of the areas. Because we haven't had a lot of preparation time, we're just responding to a logical analysis of what we're seeing.

Mr. Speaker, that's pretty much all I have to add to the discussion tonight. I thank both the Member for Edmonton-Centre and the House leader for adding a little bit to each of those areas.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments, questions, clarification. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I just wondered if the member had noticed – I was sure that I saw this in here, but maybe I was imagining it – that there was a change that was allowing for interprovincial maintenance orders to be given more of a fair shake than they have been in the past. Now I can't find that, but I thought it was in here. I thought that was a great improvement because I know it's an area that has been a point of contention for, oh, you know, 20 years.

Anyone that has a maintenance enforcement order against them who moves to another province or, you know, moved on the breakup – so you're in Alberta trying to get a court-ordered maintenance payment out of somebody in P.E.I. They won't give it to you, so you're trying to get the P.E.I. maintenance enforcement director to chase down someone to get money for you back in Alberta. You can imagine where that ends up on the pile, as though they're really interested in chasing down a taxpayer in Prince Edward Island to get money out of them to send to Alberta. Oh, they would be thrilled.

Although we were always told, even way back when, when I was dealing with this stuff in the early '90s, that, yes, everybody treated it the same, no, they didn't. My impression was that there was something in here that was actually going to improve that, but now I can't find it. I'm just wondering if the member had noticed that.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you for the question. I think that's a critical area, but I don't think I know much about that. I'll have to pass.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you. We're all aware of the shell game where you keep moving the walnut shells and you try and guess where the pea is. Well, I don't know whether the Edmonton Oilers have it on their widescreen thing, but in Calgary it's the puck. Try and find where the puck is, and then somebody can win a T-shirt or a Flames jersey and so on.

Well, on page 20 I see that same circumstance. I want to see if the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View can find the pea.

Appointment of ad hoc justices of the peace

7.2(1) A justice of the peace appointed under section 4(1) or reappointed under section 7.1(1) may, if the justice of the peace is not disqualified under section 4(5)(a) to (e), be appointed as an ad hoc justice of the peace in accordance with this section.

Where is the pea or the puck?

Dr. Swann: Well, I think you've just solved my earlier problem, which was defining what an ad hoc justice was. Now I understand what an ad hoc justice is. I thank the member for his question because I now know something more than I did when I came in here.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member under 29(2)(a)?

Any other hon. member wish to join the debate on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 22 read a second time]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have made painful but very good progress.

Ms Blakeman: At times entertaining.

Mr. Hancock: And at times entertaining.

I would therefore move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 12:48 a.m. on Thursday to 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, November 24, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly an honour for me to rise and introduce to you and through you another great group of grade 6 students from Woodhaven middle school in Spruce Grove. As you will recall, I introduced two classes yesterday of great, energetic kids and was able to have my picture taken with them in the rotunda and talk to them for a little while. The future is indeed bright in this province not only because of where we're going and our economy but also because of these kids. They are accompanied by teachers Mrs. Miranda Niebergall, Mrs. Lindsay Imeson, Mr. Robert Coulas, and Mrs. Helen Kinnie and parent helper Mrs. Connie Hendry. I believe they may be in both the public gallery and the members' gallery. Whichever ones they are in, I would ask that they now rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Services.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a group of very bright individuals who are visiting the Alberta Legislature from my constituency. With us today we have 21 ESL students from NorQuest College west, who are seated, I believe, in the members' gallery. They are accompanied by their instructors: Ms Judy Carter, Ms Lesli Nessim, and Ms Debbie Stephen. As I've said many times before, I think it's so important for Albertans to visit the Legislature, especially new Albertans. I would ask them all to rise so that my colleagues may join me in giving them a warm welcome to the Alberta Legislature today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the hon. Member for Sherwood Park it's my pleasure to rise before you in this Assembly today and introduce to you and through you a group of 54 outstanding grade 6 students from École Our Lady of Perpetual Help Catholic school in Sherwood Park. This is the last stop on their tour of the Legislature today, and I hope they've enjoyed their visit. These bright and energetic students are accompanied by their teachers, Sinead Doherty and Marc St. Jean, and parent volunteers Karen Gilbertson, Collette Bird, Tianda Ogilvie, Roxanne Popowich, and Melanie Martinez. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that they please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly two very special people from Fort McMurray. Many of us know very well Iris Kirschner, the president of our PC association up there, who's also very involved in the community and is a member of the local health advisory council, and her husband, our good friend Dave Kirschner, who is also a member of the Northern Alberta Development Council and has done a lot of great work for this province. They're in the Assembly today, and I'd ask them to please rise and accept the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly students from the Faculty of Law at the University of Alberta who are enrolled in the course on legislative process and legislative planning taught by the Law Clerk, Rob Reynolds, and the Chief Legislative Counsel, Peter Pagano. I have a strong feeling that some of them will one day become politicians and sit in this Chamber. They are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a hard-working delegation from the municipal district of Greenview. They've been in the city all week attending the AAMD and C convention, and they stopped by to see the Legislature in action. I'd ask them to stand as I call their names: Reeve Janis Simpkins, Councillor Bill Harder, and Councillor George Delorme. I'd ask that we give them the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions today. I would like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly the star member of the team who on Saturday past collaborated on the removal on my moustache as part of the Movember prostate cancer fundraising event. I'll talk more about this experience in a moment, but for now I would like to introduce Jamie Johner, a grade 7 student at Mary Butterworth school, who eagerly undertook the task of shaving my fledgling moustache under the supervision of a crowd of curlers that, of course, included her mom, public school board trustee Mrs. Cheryl Johner. Jamie and her mom are seated in the public gallery, and I would ask them both to rise now and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, is the woman who shortly after we met told me I would be much happier if I shaved the moustache I had been growing since I was 18. This is the same woman who thought it was a great idea for Jamie to shave off the one I grew for Movember: my lovely wife, Barb Grodaes. Honey, please rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Everything else is still in place? [laughter]

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today I am very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly my guests from the Indo-Canadian Women's Association. The Indo-Canadian Women's Association's mission is to encourage and promote participation by new Canadians in social, economic, and political life in Canada. They're here today to help draw attention to International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women, which is tomorrow, and to remind us that gender-based violence is still a widespread problem which affects all of us. One of the programs through which they're doing that work is the elimination of harmful cultural practices education and action and, through that, the promotion of a new event entitled Daughter's Day.

The Indo-Canadian Women's Association has worked hard for 30 years and the Alberta NDP is very proud to have some their members here today as our guests. I would now like to ask my guests to rise as I call their names: Jagjeet Bhardwaj, Gita Das, Sabrina Atwal, and Mahvish Parvez. I'd invite members to join me in welcoming them to the Assembly.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Minister of Environment and Water.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly six outstanding leaders in the constituency of Drayton Valley-Calmar. I am pleased to have them join us here today. They are my constituents and representatives of Brazeau county council. With us today we have Reeve Wes Tweedle, CAO Ron McCullough, Councillor Anthony Heinrich, Councillor Robert Kitching, Councillor Dawn Konelsky, and Councillor Shirley Mahan. Please give them the traditional warm welcome this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Prostate Cancer Awareness

Mr. Elniski: The month of Movember is the one month a year when clean-shaven men everywhere have an excuse to grow a moustache in support of finding a cure for the most common of all male cancers, prostate cancer. While the Movember campaign is a fun and unique way to draw attention to the issue that most men would be quite content to never draw attention to, it effectively underlies the importance of the problem.

As I mentioned in my introduction, I started a moustache for Movember, and last Saturday at the fourth annual Calder Classic curling fun-spiel we graciously accepted a donation in exchange for the privilege of shaving it off. Mrs. Anna Janus, owner of my favourite bakery, the Wellington Bakery, was high bidder at the auction for the opportunity to do away with the nose broom. Sadly, Anna could not be with us here today as bakers work the kind of hours only shared by night auditors, but we know that she is here in spirit.

Mr. Speaker, this is the second year that Anna and her husband, Matt, have paid the price to help end prostate cancer. This year I must particularly applaud her choice of Jamie as her assistant. Now, this is the third year in my constituency that we have done this, and it was for me by far the least painful. Jamie was a great help and did her best to keep my need for Band-Aids to a minimum. She truly did a great job.

When it comes to prostate cancer, Mr. Speaker, we all know the statistics. Since Movember is an awareness program aimed at men, we can all feel for the other guy knowing full well that it won't happen to us. Given that it won't happen to any of the men here, there is absolutely no risk whatsoever in not taking the exam.

I urge all men as subtly as I can to accept the reality that if left untreated, this cancer can kill you, and if it doesn't, it will mess up some things that you'd likely prefer not to have messed up. Donate towards the research. Go for the exam.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Primary Care Networks

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Ensuring access to primary care – family doctors, nurses, and other health professionals – is a key element to maintaining good health and preventing disease and injury. If every Albertan had access to primary care, we would see dramatically better health outcomes, shorter wait times in emergency rooms, and reduced cost to the taxpayer.

Primary care networks, or PCNs, were created in 2003 to increase access to primary care, to increase disease and injury prevention and manage patients with chronic disease, and to improve co-ordination and integration with other health care services and professionals and multidisciplinary teams. There are now 40 primary care networks across Alberta covering nearly 80 per cent of Albertans, helping to place thousands of unattached patients to a primary care team every year.

Unfortunately, they are still operating at the same funding per patient as in 2003. A recent two-and-a-half-year evaluation of the PCNs, funded by the public purse and mysteriously prevented from public release, found that relative to patients not served by a PCN, the PCN improved access, improved management of patients with complex medical conditions, improved co-ordination of care, and fostered the development and expansion of multidisciplinary teams, just what the health care research supports.

Edmonton's south side PCN, for example, has provided more access to geriatric care and decreased visits to the emergency room. In Wood Buffalo the number of patients seen by doctors has nearly doubled with a PCN. Spruce Grove's PCN has also reduced emergency room visits significantly.

Primary care networks work. They are not perfect, and the staff I've spoken to are committed to making them even more effective and efficient in their use of public resources. That's why they're a key component to the Alberta Liberal plan to fix the health care system.

Unfortunately, this PC government appears to be moving in the wrong direction, creating instability and hampering the potential of PCNs by underresourcing them and now floating the idea of family clinics. What our health care system needs now is stability, and what PCNs and their passionate workforce . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Edmonton-McClung Schools

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This afternoon I feel honoured to speak to the Assembly about a very important group of institutions in the constituency of Edmonton-McClung, our schools. The constituency that I am fortunate enough to represent contains 15 schools, all of which are doing a wonderful job of preparing our children for the future.

From the Talmud Torah school, which teaches with an emphasis on Jewish culture, to the Centennial public elementary school to the Oscar Romero Catholic high school, the schools in Edmonton-McClung represent students from very diverse backgrounds while maintaining the educational excellence we have all come to expect.

As our constituency continues to grow, the Alberta government has provided the support needed to ensure that the educational needs of our communities are met. Mr. Speaker, last September Sister Annata Brockman Catholic elementary and junior high school opened its doors to 500 students thanks to a $23 million investment from our government. Over $22 million has been invested into the 850-student Bessie Nichols public elementary and junior high school, which is currently under construction in the Hamptons and is set to open in 2012.

Mr. Speaker, this government recognizes that an important part of building a strong and inclusive education system is having the essential infrastructure in place. For this reason, over the past three years we have invested $1.7 billion into the construction and the modernization of schools in Alberta. The future of our province depends upon a well-educated work force.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women

Ms Calahasen: I rise today to encourage my colleagues and all Albertans to wear a white ribbon to recognize November 25 as International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women. It saddens me to say that at least 1 out of every 3 women around the world has been beaten, coerced into sex, or otherwise abused in her lifetime, with the abuser usually someone known to her.

Violence against women and girls takes many different forms and is not limited to any culture, country, or specific group of women. No one should have to be part of a violent relationship where they feel threatened or insecure, nor should any child grow up watching a parent being abused.

The White Ribbon Campaign is the largest effort in the world of men working to help end violence against women. Established in Canada in 1991, it has evolved to include men and women standing together to help address this important issue. The campaign continues until December 6, Canada's National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence Against Women, which commemorates the tragic murder of 14 young women at l'école Polytechnique de Montréal in 1989.

Mr. Speaker, violence has tremendous consequences for our children and our families and should not be tolerated. Wearing a white ribbon is a personal pledge to never commit, condone, or remain silent about violence against women and girls. It is an important reminder that we all have a role in ending abuse. We cannot stand idly by while watching someone who suffers at the hands of another.

Eliminating violence against women is everyone's responsibility, and I encourage all Albertans to take a moment during the White Ribbon Campaign to reflect on what they can do to help support stronger families and build safer communities. Together, Mr. Speaker, we can help break the cycle of violence.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Remembrance Day Service in Vulcan

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year's Remembrance Day service put on by the Vulcan Royal Canadian Legion branch 21 was a great community effort. Along with the traditional service a group of young ladies from County Central high school and the Vulcan Community Choir offered up two songs: In Flanders Fields and Peace Song.

The highlight of the service, though, had to be the piping in of the Royal Canadian Legion colors by the Solicitor General's pipe and drum band. What an amazing sight to see coming through the doors. During the service they played a truly sensational version of Amazing Grace that had everyone trembling.

I would like to acknowledge a number of people who have made this pipe and drum band possible. Originally conceived, the idea was presented to former Solicitor General Harvey Cenaiko, our former colleague from Calgary-Buffalo. Then the idea was approved by our current Member for Stony Plain, who was then Solicitor General. I thank them for that initiative.

The band is made up of Pipe Major James Perry, Drum Major Simon Turner, Pipe Sergeant Greg Medley, Drum Sergeant Chric Robbins, Dick Ellsworth, Ken Knoll, Wayne LaRoche, Pat Matthews, Jim Medley, Warren Posch, Ryan Van Horlick, and Deputy Chief Chris Kluthe. These men volunteer their time and talent, taking this band across the province, Mr. Speaker. This is truly a wonderful display of their music and dedication as members of our public service. Their backgrounds: corrections, sheriffs, and RCMP.

On behalf of all of those who attended the service in Vulcan on November 11, my comrades at Vulcan Legion 21, and myself, thank you very much.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Public Health Inquiry

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier said in her emergency debate that we are not defined by our hopes and wants but by our actions. I disagree. Albertans are defined by their hopes and wants and actions, and they want a safe public health care system. By not calling a public inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act, the Premier stands in the way of the truth, improving the lives of our seniors, cancer sufferers, mentally ill, and all Albertans waiting in the waiting rooms. Does the Premier want to be defined as a flip-flopping promise breaker, or will she . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, we are doing the right thing. We're introducing legislation that's going to allow for a public inquiry that's independent, that's judge led, that can compel witnesses. That's going to ensure that we have a strong public health care system that serves Albertans.

1:50

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the Premier's answers are confusing because I have these articles saying that she promised a public inquiry, not a public relations exercise and a delay exercise as we already have the tools in place under the Public Inquiries Act to call the inquiry. Did the Premier really call for a real public inquiry, or are her comments in all of these recently tabled articles wrong?

Ms Redford: What we're doing as a government is entirely consistent with what I said that we would do. We are having an inquiry. It will be public. It will be independent. It can be judge led, and it can compel witnesses. Mr. Speaker, it can also ensure that a council that understands the issues related to health care is involved in the inquiry, and that's what matters to Albertans.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, the only thing that's consistent here is that the government is consistently breaking its promises. Given that the Premier's promise is well documented in these articles, news reports, and even her own website, will the Premier just end the charade and the confusion and say plainly whether or not she will call a public inquiry today under the Public Inquiries Act, and if so, when?

Ms Redford: The only person who seems to be confused is the Leader of the Official Opposition. We have been very clear, Mr. Speaker, that the most important piece of work in this legislation is that this inquiry will be fully independent, and we've put legislation in place that I hope this House passes so that we can ensure that public health care is supported in the province.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Here is another confusing issue. When questioned yesterday about kicking the mentally ill to the curb, the Premier said that opposition questions undermine the independence of provincial offices and institutions. Apparently, democracy under her rule is when everyone just shuts up and does what she says. Immediately after taking office, the Premier made political coronations that meddled in the ruling of a quasi-judicial body, the AUC. Isn't the Premier's interference in the regulatory process more dangerous to independence? How much more of this can Albertans expect as her reign continues?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's no doubt that that was a confusing question. I'll try to answer both parts of it. What I'll say is that we have a regulatory structure in this province that allows for independent decisions to be made. I respect that process and in no way interfere with that process.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The only confusing thing is what one minister says and what the Premier says.

Given that questioning the Premier is clearly thought of as dangerous to her democracy and our democracy and our provincial institutions, doesn't the Premier think it's equally dangerous not to understand the difference between having competent management staff and giving them the resources that they need to do their job so that you don't have to kick the mentally ill Albertans, as stated in this memo, to the curb?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I believe we're now talking about mental health issues. Again, I'm very happy to speak about that. They're very important to Albertans. One of the issues that came up yesterday subsequent to question period was comments from a Dr. Owen Heisler, who is the medical director for Edmonton zone, who made it very clear that there has never been anyone discharged to the streets who may have had issues that needed to be dealt with around mental health and the health care system.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's clear that there are many psychiatrists who have been discharged out of their profession and out of this province and country.

Given that over three years ago the Auditor General recommended properly implementing the mental health plan, creating better standards, accountability, funding, planning, and reporting of mental health services – and the list goes on and on – at a time when the Premier was in charge of SafeCom, why didn't this government take these recommendations seriously before Albertans were kicked to the curb? In light of this evidence what's the Premier and the government going to do to rectify this?

Ms Redford: The Auditor General's report, which has been the topic of this week, actually refers to the fact that a number of the recommendations that have been made with respect to mental health care and services for people that might have mental health care issues had been acted on in every respect. There was progress made on all of them, Mr. Speaker. I would remind the hon. House that as a government we've introduced the safe communities initiative, which has brought mental health beds to every community across this province that identified a need. In addition to that, we've seen a very active mental health plan that has begun to address these issues overall in rural communities.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

PC Party Benefit Plan Trust

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My first question is to the Premier. Is the benefit plan trust for the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Alberta funded from money collected by the party through the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act?

Speaker's Ruling Questions about Political Party Activity

The Speaker: I'm sorry. Questions dealing with political party activities are not part of the purview of the question period. [interjection] I'm sorry. That's in the rules.

Mr. MacDonald: That's not in the rules.

The Speaker: Okay.
The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Provincial Tax Alternatives

Mr. Hinman: This week the Finance minister and the President of the Treasury Board told Albertans that they are looking for new ways to increase taxes despite record revenues. First, the Finance minister openly speculated about introducing a new sales tax and went on to talk about taxing middle-class Albertans by introducing some new form of Alberta health care premiums. Then yesterday this Premier said that nothing is off the table on the next budget and was anything but clear when questioned by the media on new taxes. Albertans would like to know, Premier: what new taxes will they have to pay under your tax-and-spend agenda?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, yesterday when we were discussing this – we've discussed it every day in many public forums. The Minister of Finance, the President of the Treasury Board, and I have all discussed the fact that through public consultations we've been talking about what all of the revenue options are that could be available for the future.

Mr. Hinman: Yeah, new taxes.

This Premier has been anything but clear on how she plans on balancing the budget for 2013-14 and believes, like any good tax-and-spend Liberal, that the only way to balance the books is to tax individual families and businesses until she can pay for everything that she wants. What type of new taxes is she planning to bring to punish Albertans with?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, that might be the simplistic approach taken by the member of this party. It's not the approach that we intend to take. We're consulting with Albertans. We're ensuring that we fully discuss with Albertans the options. In fact, I think that's an incredibly simplistic analysis of what a fiscal framework would look like.

Mr. Hinman: My final question is to Kim Campbell – I mean, the Premier, and it's a simple one. Given this typical doublespeak about tax hikes from the deficit twins and the Premier and given her waffling on this subject, will she state here and now that she will not raise any taxes or introduce any new fees, premiums, or taxes on Albertans? She has a spending problem, not a revenue problem. Don't take it out on our children or the families here in Alberta.

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to listen to what Albertans are telling me about what they want the future of this province to look like. I will tell you that what Albertans are saying is that they are proud and optimistic and hopeful about the future, and they are not listening to this critical and cynical approach and simplistic approach to what a long-term fiscal plan for this province looks like.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Northern Gateway Pipeline

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Energy Resources Conservation Board has recently estimated that the percentage of bitumen produced in Alberta is continuing to decline and that by 2020 will be well below the government's own target. The Tories' failure to upgrade more bitumen in Alberta means a failure to invest in value-added industries and a missed opportunity to provide quality long-term jobs for Albertans. Will the Premier insist that the Northern Gateway pipeline be reconfigured so that it transports synthetic crude oil instead of bitumen as a precondition for the government of Alberta's support?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, as we move forward with Northern Gateway, there are going to be a number of issues that the private-sector proponents are going to have to consider. What we know is that in terms of economic decisions that will be made by investors in this pipeline, they'll take a look at where we're going in terms of our economic development. This is certainly a time when we have to consider all options. At the end of the day it will be for proponents to determine what the final construction should look like.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've never heard such a complicated non-answer.

Given that it's more profitable for corporations to export unprocessed bitumen than synthetic crude and given that this costs Alberta investment and jobs, why won't the PC government enact policies that ensure that the export of unprocessed bitumen is less profitable than the export of synthetic crude, upgrade it right here in Alberta, and do the right thing for Alberta's working people?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the leader of the fourth party knows very well that this government has undertaken to co-operate in a $5-billion new upgrading program that will process 40,000 barrels a day of bitumen. That will create 8,000 jobs in construction, 600 when they're operating, has the possibility of expansion to two or three times the current level, and is connected to a carbon capture and storage operation and enhanced oil recovery, which, actually, will more than pay for the project over time.

Mr. Mason: Sometimes things work out perfectly, Mr. Speaker.

Given that this Tory government has incurred at least $3 billion in liabilities and contributes 75 per cent of the operating costs to the North West upgrader, why won't the government adopt a policy of increased export price for bitumen relative to synthetic crude oil and let the private sector build the upgraders and incur the risk?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, again, the leader of the fourth party – that party has never been noted for its in-depth understanding of how the economy works. There involves a certain amount of risk taking in any operation. Whether an operation makes money or loses money, it doesn't matter whether it's public sector or private sector. We're sharing the risk with the operators, and that's what's going to build that new upgrader.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mental Health Services

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta psychiatrists are blowing the whistle on the critical lack of mental health beds and professionals in Alberta. According to Dr. Lloyd Maybaum, a Calgary psychiatrist threatened with dismissal when he expressed concerns, quote, the planning and announcement of the new five-year mental health action plan is another brutal example of the autocratic approach that Alberta Health Services and Alberta Health and Wellness routinely adopt. To the Premier: why were psychiatrists not consulted in this plan? Is this what you call engagement?

Ms Redford: Mr. Speaker, everything that Alberta Health Services has done and everything that has been done in Alberta Health and Wellness is about building a system that can provide wraparound services with respect to mental health. These suggestions that certain professions have not been consulted are entirely incorrect. We have people who are part of our health care system both as private medical practitioners as well as in Alberta Health and Wellness who've been fully consulted with respect to implementation. As we move ahead, let's remember that the way that government works right now is that we introduce plans, we consult ahead of time, and then we consult during further development. My understanding with respect to mental health plans at the moment that are being undertaken by the government is that we're going to do exactly that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That flies in the face of the evidence.

The new mental health plan makes no indication of the critical shortage of beds. What is this so-called plan based on?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't believe that a suggestion from the hon. member is proof or evidence of any particular fact. If he has further information, I'd certainly be happy to take that.

Mr. Speaker, what this mental health plan does is speak to the services that need to be available across this province for people that are dealing with those issues. Of course beds are a part of that, but one of the things that we know is that we're going to have services, some of which are in treatment and some of which are out of treatment and in the community. I will tell you as we move ahead that this suggestion that there is a critical shortage of beds is nothing more than an allegation from the opposition.

Dr. Swann: Well, it's clear that the Premier doesn't make a connection between shortage of psychiatric beds and ER wait times. Very unfortunate that she doesn't understand that. Will the Premier admit that such plans ignore both the evidence and the people primarily involved in mental health care and that this plan is a sham?

Ms Redford: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's an awful lot of people that I will take advice from about the health care system and whether or not emergency wait times and mental health care beds should be connected. I'm fortunate, I'll have to say, that one of them is not the member of the opposition because at the end of day there are many people who have opinions on the mental health care system and on the health care system. The job of government is to ensure that we have put in place practitioners and managers that understand the system intimately and understand the intricate connection between the day-to-day operations. All of these wild allegations that create fear in the health care system are not responsible.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Supply of Diesel Fuel

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the second year in a row Albertans such as farmers, truckers, and bus companies have faced a shortage of diesel fuel. This is exactly what you wouldn't expect in a province rich in fossil fuel resources. My question is to the Minister of Energy. How could this possibly happen two years in a row, and was there any impact on essential services like fire or ambulance?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the immediate or approximate causes for last month's shortage of diesel fuel were a combination of the fire at the refinery in Regina and also that the Suncor Edmonton refinery was not getting the supply of hydrogen that it needs to make the diesel. The hon. member is right. This has been a recurrent problem. The good news there is that the Alberta Economic Development Authority has made a set of recommendations analyzing the problem, and working with my colleague here, we are taking action to address the problem in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Diesel fuels our school buses, so a shortage can compromise students so they can't get to school. To the Minister of Education: what is the minister doing to ensure that this shortage and, hopefully not, future shortages do not impact the students' ability to get to school?

Mr. Lukaszuk: That is a good question because I'm sure that question is on the minds of many parents, particularly in rural Alberta. Mr. Speaker, I have to tell you that individual school boards have made arrangements with local diesel fuel providers. School buses are considered to be a priority in all municipalities, and I'm being told that at this point in time there are enough reserves in place to ensure that our children get to and from school safely.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is for the President of Treasury Board and Enterprise. In June of this year the Alberta Economic Development Authority submitted a report that examined the issue of fuel shortages in this province and made recommendations on how to address them. To the minister: are we acting on this report, or is it simply gathering dust on a shelf?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Minister of Energy indicated, the Alberta Economic Development Authority did produce a report, which identified three areas of concern: improving the fuel supply chain, maintaining adequate fuel inventories, and encouraging new sources of refined products. As was identified earlier in question period with the leader of the fourth party, we are doing exactly that in terms of identifying and encouraging new sources of product. In addition to that, the Minister of Energy and I are currently engaged in bringing the suppliers together so that we can have a discussion with them about those inventories and about where we need to go as it relates to the Alberta Economic Development Authority report.

Bitumen Royalty in Kind Program

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy. It just appears that the left hand of his government does not know what the right hand is doing. One minute you have a Premier saying that we believe there is an opportunity to do more upgrading in Alberta, and next we have a minister saying that upgrading in Alberta is a crapshoot. In any event, can the minister tell me: are they getting even deeper into the business of upgrading by extending the BRIK program, or are they getting out of the business of being in business?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the record is very clear on this. This government is proceeding with the BRIK program with the North West upgrader. We're in the process of negotiations with North West and CNRL at the moment. This is a risk-sharing operation between CNRL and North West and the government, and as I indicated in my earlier answer, it's going to provide 8,000 jobs in construction, 600 permanent jobs, new tax base in the county, and supplies of diesel, so less chances of the recurrence of the diesel shortage that was referred to in the earlier question.

Mr. Hehr: Well, given that the Minister of Energy, well known for his firewall letter wherein he stated that Alberta should be pulling government out of the business of subsidizing business, can this minister assure us today that he's not going to let blind Conservative philosophy get in the way of doing what is in the best interests of the Alberta people, which may well be to have our government play a larger role in bitumen upgrading?

Dr. Morton: I think what I said quite clearly, Mr. Speaker, is that I fully support and am taking responsibility for advancing the North West project. In terms of a go-forward basis I agree completely with our Premier that what's needed now is a robust discussion of the various instruments that government has at its disposal to incent more upgrading. That's the discussion that will be taking place in our caucus in the coming months.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's good to talk not only to your caucus members. Given that it's always important for the Minister of Energy to consult with industry players on something as major as bitumen upgrading in this province, can the minister share with us what views are being expressed to him about the possibility of the Alberta government being more involved in the upgrading process?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows full well, there is a whole spectrum of opinions on this subject. We receive all of them. There is a spectrum of opinions within our caucus. I think that if you paid close attention to what the Premier said in her remarks last night, she is inviting a full debate on what the options are. I think that's one of the marks of this new government: a full policy debate about not just choosing one option and charging down that road but discussing what the options are in advance.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Grain Marketing

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This spring our Legislature had a vigorous debate on a government motion relating to marketing choice for thousands of Alberta grain farmers. On October 18 the federal Minister of Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada, Gerry Ritz, tabled Bill C-18, Marketing Freedom for Grain Farmers Act, which will end the Canadian Wheat Board monopoly on western Canadian wheat and barley marketing on August 1, 2012. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. What is this government's current position on Bill C-18 and marketing freedom for grain farmers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for that question. The government of Alberta strongly believes and supports that wheat and barley producers should have the choice of offering their product to whatever market they should happen to choose, including the Canadian Wheat Board. So we do support this transition.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: given that producers are already making decisions for the next crop year, what impact will this have on Alberta's wheat and barley producers?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This decision will allow individual producers to make decisions to market their crops based on market signals and to plan their spring planting around that rather than around what wouldn't have been their choices before. Selling into niche markets and establishing relationships with customers from around the world as well as at home is part of the freedom of our grain industry in Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, I can say that since 1986 I personally have not had to use the Canadian Wheat Board, and I have grown and sold grain every year. There are markets here to access.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you very much. I like that last comment a great deal.

Mr. Speaker, my final question is also for the same minister. How is the provincial government helping Alberta farmers make this final transition?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Berger: Thank you once again. Alberta Agriculture is working diligently with our federal counterparts as well as our industry partners here in Alberta to provide clear, transparent, and unbiased information to producers so they can make the best decisions based on their individual operations.

Mr. Speaker, this decision will open up opportunities for value-added in rural Alberta. It will bring home our young producers that have gone off to the city to go to work. This is a great opportunity. It will build rural Alberta and bring back our youth.

Thank you.

Funding for Private Schools

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, government should support equality of opportunity. Equality of opportunity is the principle that whether you're born into a rich family or a poor family, you'll have the opportunity to succeed. This is a cornerstone of any democratic, equitable society. The way governments ensure equality of opportunity is through a publicly funded and delivered education system. To the Minister of Education. Given that the Premier stated that she is concerned with the continuing development of private and charter schools and that because of these the public system is at risk of being a second-tier level of education, how is the minister going to ensure that this does not happen?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, our Premier, like me and everybody on this side of the House, we are committed to a public education system. But we are also committed to choice. The problem is what we're hearing from the other side, this member for the last three days going out of his way trying to characterize private schools as elitist and only for the rich. As a matter of fact, that's not the case. We have Sikh schools both in Edmonton and Calgary. We have Islamic academies in Edmonton. We have many private schools that do not cater to the rich, do not cater to the elite of Alberta but simply cater to parents who want to exercise choice.

Mr. Hehr: To the same minister: given the Premier's concerns about the continuing development of private and charter schools what is this minister doing to address this situation given that we are creating a system that divides the wealthy from the poor and the religious from the secular? Does the minister understand that this is not developing an inclusive system?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this member should be less concerned about the Premier's concerns and be more concerned about facts because he is as far away from facts as he possibly can be.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, it's not a secret. It's a world-known fact that Alberta education is in the ranks of the top five always and usually the top three. Finland and Korea and Alberta, not Canada but Alberta, usually are the countries considered to be the leaders in education and partly because of the fact that we have choice. I choose to send my daughter to a Catholic school system. You may choose to send your children to public. Another person can send them to a charter, and the list goes on.

Mr. Hehr: Given that this government divides our children by funding private schools with public funds up to $127 million a year, will the minister cut public funding to private schools in order to act on the Premier's concerns about the continued growth of private and charter schools?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Again, concerned about the Premier's concerns and not concerned about the facts.

Mr. Speaker, we fund private schools only at a rate of some 70 per cent of regular funding. They build their own infrastructure. One could actually argue, if you want to use the twisted logic of the opposition, the fact that the private schools subsidize public schools because kids go to school and we don't have to pay for the infrastructure.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: Hon. members, as I understood this, the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo asked a question of the hon. Minister of Education. The hon. Minister of Education was giving the answer, and the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo was yelling at somebody and not listening to him. I've got to figure this one out, okay? If I recognize you to ask a question, I hope that somebody will listen to the response. I know it's Thursday.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Immigrant Nominee Program

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There have been many stories in the media about the federal government and the new numbers for the Alberta immigrant nominee program. My first question is to the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations. Can the minister tell us if Alberta's AINP numbers have gone up, decreased, or stayed the same?

Mr. Dallas: Well, Mr. Speaker, I've heard those stories through the media as well. As far as I know, the numbers for 2012 have not been officially released.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Back to the same minister. There are many different streams when it comes to AINP. How many people can Alberta bring in permanently through this program?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The federal government gives all of the provinces a number – it's a bit like a quota – and in our case the number is 5,000 that it's capped at for 2011. This means that there will be no more than 5,000 this year. Last year we nominated 5,000 workers plus their families for permanent residence, and obviously this year we'll nominate the same number.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. There are concerns in my constituency of Edmonton-Ellerslie regarding the shortage of a skilled workforce. How can we increase our workforce of skilled workers if we're capped at 5,000 every year?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you. Mr. Speaker, 5,000 is obviously not enough for our growing economy. In fact, when I was in Ottawa last week, I had this conversation with Jason Kenney, who is the federal Minister of Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism, and I stressed Alberta's need for more workers and our concerns with the cap. As I said earlier, the numbers for 2012 have not been officially released, but together with the Minister of Human Services we continue to work with the federal government to get more than the 5,000 previously allocated.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Landowner Private Property Rights

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My question is to the Deputy Premier on the issue of land rights. I looked at my calendar. Actually, it says November, but I thought it might have been April Fool's Day. The reason why is that the government has just announced a task force on land rights and property owners. I have to ask the Deputy Premier: why would you think that landowners would pay attention to the government now based on the shabby work of bills 19, 24, 36, and 50? Why would they trust you today?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, today at the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties I had the opportunity to talk to a number of municipal leaders in our province. Actually, they appreciated the efforts that we're doing on Bill 19, which the Minister of Infrastructure is bringing forward into this House, which is actually Bill 23 on the Order Paper here, which is an excellent piece of adjustment. They've also expressed to us over the last several months some concerns that they've had with other areas of legislation and property rights.

But it goes beyond that, Mr. Speaker. It's time that we started talking about the reality of property rights, not the myths . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please. [interjection] The hon. member, please.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thanks for the answer. I'll give him more time on this one.

Given the fact that landowners have said that this government hasn't been listening when it comes to the amendments on some of the bills – 19, 24, 36, and 50 – I have to ask him: why would the task force listen to you now since you didn't listen to them before?

Mr. Horner: Well, actually, Mr. Speaker, the consultation that went into the original land-use planning framework of the lower Athabasca and a number of the other plans across the province was based on consultation with Albertans and with landowners. I, as many members in our caucus, am a landowner. I own land in this province that I hold very dearly in my heart. It's a value that Albertans and pioneers fought in wars and settled this province to have and to hold. Nobody is taking away my property rights, and this government is going to protect Albertans' property rights.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that nonresponse, Mr. Speaker, I will table from the Athabasca Advocate a member of this cabinet and this government who, in fact, spoke so poorly about landowners in the comments, saying that they are just nothing more than fearmongering. I have to ask you. He is a member of your government and cabinet, and in fact I will table what his comments were about Alberta landowners. Do you think that, actually, landowners will believe that he will listen to them?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure that I understand that last question. There was an accusation in there that was unfounded. There was naming of a member, I'm assuming, that's in there that's probably unfounded based on what I understand to be a newspaper article. Rather irresponsible of a member of this House, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I'm sure that the document in question will be tabled at the appropriate time this afternoon.

Mr. Boutilier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: A point of order, too?

Mr. Boutilier: That's correct.

The Speaker: Oh, it has to be Thursday.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-North.

Funding for Bedbug Infestations

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Bedbugs are costing my constituents living in apartments, condos, seniors' residences, and shelters huge problems and a lot of money, but because there's no disease, the Alberta government considers them pests and has not developed an income support policy for low-income Albertans, including seniors and those on AISH. Without an official policy people have to know to seek director approval for any support. It's a wicked, wicked hide-and-seek for people under stress. To the Minister of Human Services: will the minister please co-ordinate with AHS to produce a public information campaign on recognizing bedbug infestations and the need for fast treatment?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For a moment there I thought we were going to be asked for an income support program for bedbugs.

I understand the hon. member's concerns and the issue that she's raising. It is a very important issue with respect to bedbugs this year in Alberta, as I understand it. I don't understand much more about it, and I will talk with the hon. member further about what's happening in her area and how we can assist those who are unable to afford the process themselves. It is an infestation that causes a problem we need to resolve.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Back to the same minister: well, Minister, given that treatment for bedbugs requires people to spend money to rewash clothes, purchase extra cleaning supplies, bags to wrap clothing, and to move and store furniture, will the minister direct his department to develop and distribute a policy on financial support for low-income seniors and AISH recipients for funding for bedbug infestations?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I'd go a little bit further than that to say that what I have indicated to people in our department is that they should use principle-based decision-making with respect to support for children and families who need support. In working with individuals who have a financial issue, they need to work through those issues with them and assist them with the right kind of support at the right time. We will be looking at our policies in that area. One of my mandates is looking at the whole social policy framework and, within that, the context of income supports so that we're supporting people in the right way at the right time, not just with financial support but also with family support to determine how they can do better for families.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Blakeman: Good. Thank you again. Back to the same minister. In some cases seniors and others may be required to find overnight accommodation while their unit or their floor is treated for bedbugs. Will the minister develop and distribute a policy to cover the cost of hotel accommodation if family or friends are unable to provide short-term accommodation?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I'm trying to establish as we move forward with the social policy framework and really look at our income support within that context is that rather than reacting to each specific instance with a new rule and regulation and a new policy, we look generically at issues to say: how do we need to support people so that they can live in human dignity, and how can we assist them to be as independent as possible? This would, in my view, fall within that purview of saying: how do we need to help people when they need help in the right way without a knee-jerk reaction of writing a new rule or a new policy?

Support for Caregivers

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, providing care for a family member in need is a centuries-old act of kindness, love, and loyalty, and as life expectancies increase and medical treatments advance, more of us will participate in the caregiving process. Unfortunately, caregiving can create serious burnout for the caregiver if they don't get adequate support. To the Minister of Seniors: have we considered the importance of caregiver support programs, and can you tell me if government programs are currently in place?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the member for the important question. I think all of us can relate to caregivers' stress. I know the time when my dad was so sick, how we saw my mom even get ill and how I saw my brother and my sister get ill. Caregiver support in a community is vital, and in some communities, you know, you don't have the network that other communities have. Under my ministry we have supplemented the efforts of families and friends and community members in assisting seniors and persons with disabilities to live as independently as they can in their communities.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mrs. Jablonski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: has the government considered developing caregiver support programs through initiatives such as partnerships for conferences, training courses, and a caregiver support line?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you again for that question. In fact, there are two programs in my ministry that provide funds to support caregivers. The PDD program that funds services that provide a break for primary nonpaid and paid caregivers on a temporary basis exists, and as well a special-needs assistance program provides funding for respite care for family care providers who provide care to a senior with a medical condition, sir.

Mrs. Jablonski: To the same minister: given that foster care programs for children have respite care available for foster parents, will the government put in place and ensure similar access to respite care programs to help prevent burnout for full-time caregivers?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity to be in Cardston a couple of weeks ago, and I saw the action of a community getting together with all their care providers and all their care agencies to find ways of supporting those caregivers in the home and outside the home. I know that this is an issue that the department of health is working on, and the ministry is taking lots of ideas right now from all the public. If any member here wants to get involved in this discussion, I'm open to this discussion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Highway Maintenance

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government plans to purchase an extra $15 million of salt, sand, and gravel for use in highway maintenance. Last year the province bought an extra $10.4 million worth of salt, sand, and gravel above the budget of $25 million and in 2009-10 an extra $13.6 million worth. To the Minister of Transportation: when the department misses the set $25 million budget consistently for three years, doesn't that mean more should be budgeted in the first place?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to remind the hon. member that in Alberta the weather is very volatile, and at times we need to be prepared. We need to ensure that we do have the sand and gravel and we have the salt so that if we have a weather system that comes through, we don't leave Albertans at risk. This is about safety on our roads.

2:30

Mr. Kang: This is three years in a row, Mr. Speaker. Can we plan in the first place? We can put more money aside. To the minister again: given that, why is the government buying salt, sand, and gravel for highway maintenance at all when we have contracted out highway maintenance in the province?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, at the end of the day it is the expense of the government however the maintenance takes place.

I want to just make a little reference to the comment that the individual member made at the beginning. That was three years in a row we had excess or we bought more. I want to say to you that I would rather buy three years of excess sand than I would have one year of not having sand and salt.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that, did the government invent a time machine over the summer and now knows that this year we will use 60 per cent more salt, sand, and gravel than it predicted at budget time, or did the government's groundhog see its shadow earlier this year and predict six extra weeks of winter?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, just a little on-the-side comment because if the hon. member can predict weather better than that, then he should be in a different occupation because all of the agriculture, all of the support industry, the maintenance industry that we have in this province would very much like to have that information.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say to you that this government needs to be prepared because we need to ensure that the maintenance of our highways is maintained, and we are ready.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Anthony Henday Drive

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the past two months we have seen the opening of the northwest leg of Anthony Henday and the new interchanges on the southwest leg. This is good news for the motorists and my constituency, Edmonton-Manning. My question is to the Minister of Transportation. After the countless years when can I tell my constituents this ring road will be finished?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Edmonton ring road is 90 per cent complete. I also want to say to you that we are looking at 2016 for the completion of the Edmonton ring road. In fact, we are now looking at three proposals that are bidding on the P3 project. I want to say also that in May 2012 we are going to make that selection, and construction will start in the summer of next year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: how much is that huge project going to cost taxpayers?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is no dollar figure yet, but I will say to you that we do have a total of 48 bridges on 27 kilometres of divided roadway, which includes nine interchanges and eight railway crossings and two flybys and two river crossings. We have invested $2.5 billion on the ring road so far. I can't tell you what the last end is going to take. I just say to you that we are in the process of finding . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: is this the right economic time to be focusing on this construction?

Mr. Danyluk: Mr. Speaker, let me say to you that Alberta is very much a commodity-based province. Being a commodity-based province, we need to move product from one end of the province to another, and we have to go through the cities or around the cities, so that is very, very important. Also, we have the opportunity, when we look at the roads around the city, to be able to deal with the individuals who support the city infrastructure. So is this the right time? Yes, it is the right time.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The last few months have seen economic crises rippling through Europe, tipping the world's economy toward the verge of disaster. Italy's, Portugal's, Greece's, and Ireland's economies are spinning out of control and bringing down those closest to them. At the same time this government is participating in negotiations to bind us to this turmoil, putting our economy at risk. To the Minister of Intergovernmental, International and Aboriginal Relations: will this government step up to the Premier's promise of more transparency in government and make public the Canada-EU trade agreement negotiations it has taken part in?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Dallas: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, I will comment and appreciate the hon. member's question. The negotiations that the hon. member is referring to are negotiations between Canada and the European Union. Those negotiations have advanced through nine rounds of consultation, and at the side of the federal government all of the provinces have been closely involved. We continue to make progress on that, but no agreement has been reached at this time.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Hopefully, Albertans will have a part in setting that agreement and will be informed along with the progress.

Given that the scarcity of water is a concern for all Albertans and that many communities are worried about the sale of this resource, can the minister reassure Albertans that the sale of our water is not a part of these international negotiations?

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, we have always been very clear. The Premier has always been very clear. Our water is not for sale.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. With reference to the Premier's clarity, it can change at a day's notice.

To the same minister: what guarantees can the minister promise Albertans as to debt contagion from Europe after this agreement is signed?

Mr. Dallas: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's no relevance between this agreement and financial issues that are raging in the European economy. We trade on a best-efforts basis with any and all trading partners around the globe, so I don't see the relevance of a particular jurisdiction's financial issues.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North West.

Noninstructional Postsecondary Fees

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I understand that the minister has asked that postsecondary institutions submit their formal policies for how students will be consulted whenever a new noninstructional fee is considered. However, as recently as this morning students were tweeting about the fact that student consultations on noninstructional fees is not enough. My questions today are to the Minister of Advanced and Technology. Are you going to listen to the students and address these concerns?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On this issue let me be perfectly clear. We do not support the use of noninstructional fees to circumvent the tuition cap for our postsecondaries in Alberta.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, my next question is to the same minister. Students are concerned that consultations are really just a heads-up on an increase and not an opportunity for input. How will students provide input?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've made it very clear to the postsecondary institutions that I expect them to seek ongoing and meaningful input from the students if they're considering any type of noninstructional fees. That means that the students will have the chance to ensure that fees are truly noninstructional, for real value, and the students get something in return for these fees.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, my second supplemental is also to the same minister. As my colleague from Calgary-Mackay asked in this House before, why not just regulate noninstructional fees the same way as they do tuition?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We have 21 publicly funded postsecondary institutions in this province, and these are very unique institutions. They're rural. They're urban. They cover a very wide cross-section. We don't believe one size fits all. We believe the measure of our success is finding a system that will work in each school, for each set of students, that will provide the opportunity for input and discussion around noninstructional fees.

The Speaker: That concludes the question-and-answer period for today. Eighteen hon. members were recognized. There were 103 questions and responses. There's a bit of business arising out of the question period that we'll deal with in the latter part of the Routine. In about 15 seconds from now we'll return to Members' Statements.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

U of A Punjabi Language Program

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and discuss the funding effort for the Punjabi language program at the University of Alberta and what it meant for the food bank. Sikhs all over the world celebrated the birthday of Siri Guru Nanak Sahib Ji on November 10. Siri Guru Nanak Dev Ji is the founder of the Sikh faith. His birthday is a special day in the hearts of the Sikh community. To remember Guru Nanak's birthday, the Sikh community remembers his three principles. [Remarks in Punjabi] Pray to God; make honest earnings; share with who needs it most.

In recognition of this day Gurdwara Siri Guru Singh Sabha Ji, Gurdwara Nanaksar Ji, Gurdwara Millwoods Ji, Siri Guru Nanak Sikh Gurdwara Ji as well as the Punjabi media radiothon jointly made an appeal to donate to the University of Alberta's Punjabi language program and the local food bank. Keeping a language alive and well for new generations is an achievement that benefits our society. Through their efforts and donations the Sikh community have so far raised over $41,000 for the University of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, you will remember that the Sikh community had previously donated over $2.4 million to the University of Alberta Mazankowski Heart Institute's healing garden in Guru Nanak's name. What is truly amazing is that this year over $11,000 has been raised for the food bank, and that does not include the tons of dry food donated as well. I hope there is more to come.

It was a pleasure being part of the cheque presentation with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie. Because of this fundraising effort I hope we can all see Albertans' charity and commitment to the arts.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Postsecondary Education Affordability

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Excellence in advanced education is vital to Alberta's future success and the quality of life for all of us, yet this government is pursuing policies that make access to superior education more and more difficult for many Albertans. They appear unconcerned that Alberta has the lowest enrolment in postsecondary institutions in Canada, with poor retention and graduation rates.

The high cost of education in Alberta has put it out of reach of many. Massive student debt on graduation is not something that many can consider. Differential tuition fees make some professions very tough to access, financial supports for students are disappearing, and institutions are using measures like noninstructional fees to desperately try to survive underfunding by the province. The PC government has forced postsecondary institutions between a rock and a hard place. On the one hand, they have significantly reduced funding to universities. For example, funding for the U of A and the University of Calgary was lowered by $27 million and $7.8 million, respectively, in 2010.

Precariously positioned, universities have come up with ways to fill their revenue gaps such as by levying huge noninstructional fees. This past year Alberta posted the largest increase in additional compulsory fees for both undergraduate and graduate students. Other students, mostly those in graduate schools, have had their tuition increased by more than 50 per cent due to ministerial approval. The high cost of postsecondary education not only limits access to those who can afford it but creates a learning environment in which youth from wealthier families gain a competitive advantage over those who do not.

If this government is truly concerned about having an educated Alberta, it must ensure improved public funding of universities, it must reduce tuition, and it must reverse student debt load. Only then will Alberta be the place where students are not limited in their opportunities to succeed, and a stronger future for all of us can be secured.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Premier.

Bill 27 Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011 (No. 2)

Mr. Horner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 27, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011 (No. 2), this being a money bill. His Honour the Honourable Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 27 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Two tablings today. One is from debate that occurred last evening and was raised in debate by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View. He referenced it. It is a legal blood-alcohol concentration position statement from the Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research. It's a position paper on lowering the legal blood-alcohol concentration for drivers.

The second one is copies of a letter sent by the mayor of Strathcona county, Linda Osinchuk, directed toward the Premier, in which the mayor is pointing out that the Strathcona county council unanimously resolved to prepare an application to the Alberta Utilities Commission to review and vary its decision on the critical transmission infrastructures. They're very concerned that this is a massive overbuild, and they urge the provincial government to reconsider its position.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In question period this afternoon I indicated I would table from the Athabasca Advocate comments that were made by the member.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. At this time I would like under Standing Order 7(6) to ask the Government House Leader to please share with those assembled the projected government business for the week commencing November 28.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would anticipate that on Monday, November 28, in the evening for second reading we would deal with Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011, if it's not completed this afternoon, and in Committee of the Whole Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act, and Bill 26, the Traffic Safety Amendment Act, 2011, and as per the Order Paper.

On Tuesday, November 29, in the afternoon for second reading Bill 27, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011 (No. 2), and in Committee of the Whole Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011, and Bill 24, the Health Quality Council of Alberta Act, and as per the Order Paper. November 29 in the evening in Committee of the Whole bills 24 and 25 and as per the Order Paper.

On Wednesday, November 30, in the afternoon in Committee of the Whole Bill 21, the Election Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 25, the Child and Youth Advocate Act; Bill 27, the Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011 (No. 2); and as per the Order Paper. In the evening in Committee of the Whole bills 21, 25, and 22; third readings on bills 23, 24, 25, 26; and as per the Order Paper.

On Thursday, December 1, in the afternoon for third reading bills 21, 22, 26, 27, and as per the Order Paper.

Speaker's Ruling Challenging the Chair

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have several items to deal with. First of all, I want to provide some clarification. I would draw members' attention to House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, 2009, page 497, where there is a section that says: Role of the Speaker during Question Period.

The Speaker has implicit discretion and authority to rule out of order any question posed during Question Period if satisfied that it is in contravention of House rules of order, decorum and procedure. In ruling a question out of order, the Chair may suggest that it be rephrased in order to make it acceptable to the House. Or, the Speaker may recognize another Member to pose the next question.

This afternoon, when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar rose on a question, I ruled it out of order. I would draw all members' attention to Beauchesne's section 410(17), which clearly states that "ministers may not be questioned with respect to party responsibilities."

Then I would draw all members' attention to House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, page 504, which states that questions should not be asked which "concern internal party matters, or party or election expenses."

2:50

To the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, I did what I am supposed to do, and I provided two citations. As you challenged the chair and said that it is within the rules, would you by Monday let me know where the citation is, in all of the books, that says that you can do what you did? That would be important because I like to expand my education base, and I'm always open to hearing. I know exactly what Hansard said.

Speaker's Ruling

Questions outside Government Responsibility

The Speaker: Number two, there was a possibility because – a number of members here today looked rather strangely at me when I allowed the question from Calgary-Varsity to proceed, a question which had to do with an agreement between Canada and the European Union. Neither the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity or the minister in question made it absolutely clear that in order for this agreement to proceed, it needs the support of the provinces. That's one of the conditions of the European Union. I met with the European Union on this matter, and they made it very, very clear, so that's why I let that question go through.

Some people said that that appears to be ultra vires and not within the mandate of the House, but it is. It is within the Constitution of Canada, the administrative procedures in part of this country, so that's why that question was allowed.

Speaker's Ruling

Unsolicited Items on Members' Desks

The Speaker: Number three, every time I allow members to put things on their desks, I get notes from other members saying: "Why should a pin, which shows the flags of Canada and the United States on it and has Keystone pipeline written on it, be allowed to be put on the desks of members of this Assembly? Speaker, don't you know that not everybody agrees? Don't you know that this is highly sensitive in some quarters?"

Listen, this has happened with other, previous things and at other times before. I've allowed, you know, the ribbons for prostate cancer and for other things to be put on the desks, but it seems that in way more than half of these cases I then get notes from other members saying: why is that on my desk?

Maybe the way we should approach this is that boxes can be put outside the door, as you come into the Assembly, and if members want to pick up a ribbon to support the cause of breast cancer or the cause of prostate cancer or, you know, a war against poverty, you pick it up and bring it in, and then we won't have this issue, which seems to cause heartburn for some members. You know, the greater thing is just to allow common sense to prevail, but I think we'll go with the other one.

Privilege

Misleading the House

The Speaker: Okay. We've had a situation dealing with a question of privilege that's been around for a while. The chair has listened to the arguments presented on the purported question of privilege brought by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and is prepared to rule on the matter.

Notice of the purported question of privilege was provided by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona to the Speaker's office on Monday, October 24, 2011, at 10:58 a.m., so the notice provision of Standing Order 15(2) was met. The notice was provided in the Assembly that day by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona and was deferred until the fall sitting resumed on November 21 pursuant to standing orders 15(3) and 15(4). The chair will have some comments later on the question of whether this matter was raised at the earliest opportunity as required under Standing Order 15(6). The alleged facts giving rise to this purported question of privilege are involved, so the chair will attempt to summarize them concisely.

In essence, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona argued on November 21 at pages 1205 to 1207 of Alberta Hansard for that day that the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek deliberately misled the Assembly when he answered certain questions during question period on November 30, December 1, and December 2, 2010, almost a year ago. At that time the member was Minister of Health and Wellness. Without replicating the Hansard excerpt for those days, the then minister was responding to questions about a PowerPoint presentation dated July 2010 entitled Alberta's Health Legislation: Moving Forward, tabled in the Assembly on November 30, 2010, as Sessional Paper 450/2010.

At the start of the fall sitting on October 24, 2011, the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona tabled an additional document, which appears to be a briefing from the Minister of Health and Wellness dated May 2010 entitled, and I quote, Minister's Report, end quote, and which stands as Sessional Paper 486/2011. As the chair understands it, the argument is that the May 20 document was the source for the July 2010 document as opposed to the source being views of Albertans as indicated by the then minister on November 30, 2010, at page 1691 of Alberta Hansard for that day.

Deliberately misleading the Assembly is an extremely serious allegation, which seldom satisfies the test for constituting a prima facie question of privilege. Many of the authorities were cited by the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, including the chair's ruling of November 7, 2007, which includes references to several leading authorities. Briefly, deliberately misleading the Assembly is a form of contempt of the Assembly, which is treated as a breach of parliamentary privilege.

The test that has been adopted in this Assembly and in the Canadian House of Commons actually originated in New Zealand. The test as articulated by David McGee, former Clerk of the House of Representatives in New Zealand, is found in the third edition of his book Parliamentary Practices in New Zealand, 2005, at pages 653 to 654.

There are three elements to be established when it is alleged that a member is in contempt by reason of a statement that the member has made: the statement must, in fact, have been misleading; it must be established that the member making the statement knew at the time the statement was made that it was incorrect; and, in making it the member must have intended to mislead the House.

This test is also referred to in House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, at page 86.

In this case and based on what the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek said in this Assembly yesterday, the chair does not believe that any of the three components have been met. It is not clear that the statement was misleading, it has not been established that the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek knew the statement was incorrect, and there is no evidence that he intended to mislead the Assembly.

Accordingly, the chair finds that there is no prima facie question of privilege, so that concludes this matter. However, with respect to timeliness the chair would like to comment on what is apparent to anyone who has followed this purported question of privilege. First, the statements that are the subject of this application were made almost a year ago. Second, the questions at that time were related to the impact of a document from July 2010. This purported question of privilege relied on what was in a government briefing document from May 2010, nearly one and a half years ago.

The chair wants to point out that an allegation of deliberately misleading the Assembly is one of the most serious matters that could be raised against a member. Allegations of this nature are seldom made out. To do so would require clear and convincing evidence. To resurrect an issue from nearly one year ago based on documents from one and a half years ago, there would have to be overwhelmingly persuasive evidence, which is clearly not the case here. Of course, the chair cannot and would not and will not restrict the ability of members to bring forward matters that affect their rights and immunities. However, the chair would ask members to carefully consider bringing forward matters that call into question the integrity of other members when the evidence is less than convincing.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo on a point of order.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, I was rising on the point of order relative to what the Deputy Premier had raised.

The Speaker: That's why I'm recognizing you.

Mr. Boutilier: He had raised a point of order.

The Speaker: No. I'm sorry.

Mr. Boutilier: He raised the point of order first.

The Speaker: Hold on. Government House Leader, did you raise a point of order?

Mr. Hancock: No.

The Speaker: No. The Government House Leader has not raised a point of order.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, since the Deputy Premier did not raise a point of order, I have no point of order.

The Speaker: I'm impressed with the gentlemen that we have here. Some might refer to this as an old boys' club, but let's not get carried away here on that one.

Ms Blakeman: And they'd be right.

The Speaker: I agree with you, Edmonton-Centre. I can assure you that I would never want to do that.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 23

Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate November 22: Mr. Johnson]

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased and honoured to resume debate on this important piece of legislation for Albertans. When I became Minister of Infrastructure, the Premier gave me the mandate to review the Land Assembly Project Area Act to address concerns about the act that landowners were raising. The amendments I introduced in first reading Monday address those concerns. The concerns that we heard from Albertans were to give more power to property owners, to landowners.

To draw a picture of what these amendments do, I have to begin with some history. Starting in the 1970s government began purchasing land for major projects such as the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads. The process that we used for those purchases was the restricted development area regulations, which put limits, of course, on development within the area that we were looking at for those large projects. Under the RDAs landowners had very limited rights; in particular, the government was not required to notify or consult landowners. The government was also not required to make decisions within a reasonable amount of time on what land would be affected by these potential projects. Government also decided when we were going to purchase the land. In other words, we decided when the landowners were going to be compensated for their land.

Mr. Speaker, the ring roads did get built, but the process of acquiring land was not as clear as it could have been, and it gave property owners very minimal control, power, or input into the process. That's why the previous Minister of Infrastructure – actually, it was the minister previous to the previous Minister of Infrastructure – introduced the Land Assembly Project Area Act three years ago. It was intended for property owners to have a clearer process when the Alberta government needed to buy or acquire land for very large-scale, long-term projects for the province. It's important to emphasize that this act, LAPAA, as I will refer to it, does not give the government any powers or abilities that it didn't have before. The government, of course, has always had the ability to acquire land for projects like this, projects for the public good, and governments of all levels have always had the ability to restrict development through various mechanisms, including zoning at the municipal level.

The critical piece of Bill 23, of course, is that it ensures that landowners are notified, consulted, and fairly compensated for their land. There are many good aspects to LAPAA as it originally sat, but it can certainly be better, and it needs to be better. Property owners expect and deserve nothing less from their government.

We've heard a lot of comments about the legislation over the last two years from stakeholders, various groups around the province, and, most importantly, individual landowners. The four main concerns we've heard, Mr. Speaker, relate to these areas. First, there's confusion about what kinds of projects fall under this act. The second is that there were concerns about whether Albertans are going to be able to get fair compensation when a LAPAA project is considered and if they will have access to the Expropriation Act and all the heads of compensation, the principles that we use to compensate landowners that lie within the Expropriation Act. The third is that there was concern about access to the courts, making sure that landowners have access to the courts in terms of disagreement on compensation and disagreement on enforcement orders. The fourth were concerns that Albertans raised about the penalties under the act. Some saw them as too heavy handed.

The amendments I introduced this week, Mr. Speaker, address all four of these areas and go right to the heart of the concerns that Albertans have been raising with my colleagues and I and our Premier. They meet the Premier's commitment to ensure that the three Cs are in place: consultation, compensation, and access to the courts. At the heart of Bill 23 is the government's commitment to ensuring that power is in the hands of the landowner. Our focus with these amendments is to ensure that landowners are consulted, to ensure that they are compensated fairly, and to ensure that they have full access to the courts.

By passing this act, we would be giving Albertans as many options as possible if their land is needed for a major water or transportation corridor project. The act gives landowners certainty of purchase. It ensures that the government will consult with them. It ensures that a court process is in place to handle disputes that arise over either land value or enforcement. Landowners will be protected by this legislation and the full range of legislation already in place like the Expropriation Act. The Expropriation Act has always been available to Albertans, but now it is much more clearly part of the legislation and linked within this amendment.

The amendments give the landowners the right to kick-start the expropriation, which is very significant. This important change for property owners, this reverse expropriation, or the ability to trigger, is a very important piece when we're looking at projects that may take decades to put together. Mr. Speaker, we have been listening to stakeholders and landowners for two years on this. We've heard them say that they want clarity about compensation, so the amendments ensure landowners will have access to all applicable types of compensation under the Expropriation Act. The amendments mean landowners will be able to trigger expropriation, as I said.

We've heard landowners say that they want clarity about what is an eligible project under the LAPAA legislation. Bill 23 will ensure more details about the size, scope, and character of potential projects and, maybe more importantly for some Albertans, what is not eligible as a project.

Landowners said that they wanted access to the courts. The amendments will give landowners access to a third party to determine compensation when the negotiating parties cannot reach agreement. Enforcement penalties are reduced, and the landowners, as I've said, will have increased access to the courts to contest any enforcement penalties.

[Mr. Zwozdesky in the chair]

Most of all, landowners want to be consulted during the project planning process. Landowners will be consulted during the planning process. The legislation requires it. More than that, we will be consulting with landowners and other stakeholders as we develop the regulations, which will come in coming months.

Mr. Speaker, as you can see by the proposed amendments before you, we have been listening to stakeholders, landowners, and Albertans in general. We have heard what they've said. I believe that as we move through second reading debate and Committee of the Whole, it will become evident that we have acted on what we have heard, with little things like the ability to have the first right of refusal on leasing land back when you decide to sell it for a LAPAA project and other pieces of the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we've addressed the concerns that we've heard from Albertans, but now I am very interested to hear what my colleagues and everyone in the Assembly have to say about this act. I encourage them to support it. Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to start my remarks on Bill 23 with this. I would like to offer my congratulations to you, sir, on being chosen the other day for the position of Deputy Chair. I'm sure you will do a very good job. In fact, I think you are eminently qualified for it. I heard the other day that you had been refereeing a hockey game if not last week, the week before. I'm sure the hockey game would be much easier than the Legislative Assembly. I wish you very well, sir. I wish you the best. And there were no complaints about the hon. member being a hometown ref. I can assure you of that.

Now, I would like to talk about Bill 23 here. I listened to the hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater and the explanation for the amendments, and I can't help but think of the people I met from the hon. member's constituency in the Eckville hall on the Thursday before the Easter long weekend. Eckville hall, of course, as many people know, was full of landowners from across the province. Many of them travelled for hours to attend this meeting.

In fact, the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka was there. I couldn't understand why he was so anxious to leave so quickly after the meeting ended, but he did. The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake stayed. The hon. Member for St. Albert was there, I believe. The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House was chairperson of the meeting. At least he was participating in the meeting. It was a very interesting meeting. I was glad I had the opportunity to attend.

Mr. Hinman: What about me?

Mr. MacDonald: Oh, I'm sorry. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore was in attendance. The hon. member's leader, Ms Danielle Smith, was in attendance. The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo was there and, also, the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, without his goalie gear. He didn't have his hockey bag with him that evening, Mr. Speaker, but he certainly was following the proceedings with keen interest.

Now, I was sitting and listening to some of the comments and some of the questions and the debate. The hon. Government House Leader was there as well. There was quite an exchange between himself and another member of the legal profession, Mr. Keith Wilson. I forgot, Mr. Speaker – I apologize – that the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, was in attendance. In fact, he along with the current Minister of Energy were involved in this debate with the member of the legal profession, Mr. Keith Wilson, who had a rather unique exchange with the Government House Leader. I'm not going to bore you with the details, but if you look at YouTube, you will find it, and it has a lot of hits.

It was a very interesting meeting. I'm sitting, and I'm listening keenly to what the landowners have to say, and I thought to myself: "Well, will this government do the right thing and repeal this legislation? Is this legislation really needed?"

I followed, of course, the exchanges, like a lot of other interested political parties, over the summer between various PC leadership candidates on what they thought not only of Bill 36 but of Bill 50 as well, because they were sort of a package earlier in this term by the government. I thought that this legislation would just be repealed. It wouldn't be fixed or amended; it would be repealed.

We had questions about this initiative right from the start. Many of our questions went unanswered during the course of the original debate, but those questions were also asked by landowners. Here we are months before the next provincial election. Property rights are certainly going to be a big issue. I was over at the AAMD and C luncheon today, and property rights, Mr. Speaker, and Bill 23 were the first topic of discussion at the table that I had the pleasure of sharing at lunch. They had many, many questions about why this government would do something like this. Why has this government lost its ability to listen? They were not satisfied that this bill was going to fix all of their concerns. They seemed to think that this was more of a public relations exercise to pretend that the issues had been addressed, and let's get on with the next election and get it over with.

I can certainly see why the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo would have questions today in question period regarding this matter because it was certainly a subject of interesting conversation. The government's approach and the new Premier's approach to this is still not satisfying many of the landowners. Now, this bill's political reason, of course, is to fulfill the hon. Premier's promises from the leadership debate. I didn't hear the word – and I could be wrong, Mr. Speaker. I could be totally wrong on this, and if I am, I will certainly stand corrected. But it's not about reforming this group of land-use bills, which have caused such significant political problems for the government. I never heard the word "reform"; I heard the word "repeal." Particularly, this one would be repealed, and we would start over. Well, I suppose you could say this is a legislative mulligan, but I wouldn't. This is certainly not starting over.

Now, across the province – and I can't stress this enough, Mr. Speaker – people took issue with this series of government initiatives. Again, it's the Easter long weekend. A lot of people have a lot of things to do. They drove from across the province to hear the debate. It was really nice, actually, to see democracy at work and to see a rather civil debate take place on a contentious issue, with anywhere between 500 and 700 people present depending on who you talked to. It was really, from my perspective, interesting to see. It was an experience I will not forget.

I also had the experience of attending a meeting this summer in the constituency of the former President of the Treasury Board, the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster. It was a fine summer evening, good moisture earlier in the summer in the growing season. Hay crops were abundant. There had been some nice drying weather, and farmers obviously had a lot of work to do to harvest their hay crop, not only harvest it but get it stored as well. At that time of the summer I didn't think any farmers could stop their harvesting activities to attend a meeting on these land rights bills. But, alas, Mr. Speaker, to my surprise, I pulled into Kitscoty and went to the hall, and the parking lot was full. It was about 9, quarter after 9 in the evening. The parking lot was full. Landowners from all over the area, including Lloydminster, took the time to attend Mr. Wilson's meeting and get informed on the real objectives of this government through this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, again, it was a sign that democracy is alive and well. This was a very well-attended meeting. People were very, very polite. When Mr. Wilson finished his PowerPoint presentation – which I would encourage all hon. members across the way to look at on the Internet. I'm sure you already have, but if you haven't, I would certainly get you the Internet address because it's well worth a look. It's well worth taking the time to go through that PowerPoint slide by slide. I'm sure if you have any questions that if you phone Mr. Wilson, he would be delighted to answer them because he certainly has a grasp of the issue.

You know, Mr. Speaker, I shouldn't say this, but I was sitting listening to the presentation by Mr. Wilson, and I was thinking that he would make an excellent representative here in this Legislative Assembly. If he had been here, maybe he would have been able to convince the government not to pass the bill in the first place. But he's not here. He certainly was at the hall in Kitscoty, and the citizens listened with interest to what he had to say. Some of the slides that he had were of great interest.

We think about that, that on a nice summer evening when there's a lot to do on the farm, people are still willing to get their chores done as early as possible and get to a public meeting to hear how their rights as landowners may be affected if this law remains.

I can give the government some credit for backpedalling or backtracking a little bit on this, but again I thought we were going to repeal the legislation and we were going to start over.

There are standing committees. They're all-party committees of this Legislative Assembly. Mr. Speaker, we could pick any one of those committees and put them to work by going out and hearing exactly what Mr. Wilson and his group heard from citizens and bringing that information back to this Assembly and to the minister.

Now, I would be real pleased to get an opportunity to go to Drayton Valley and attend a meeting out there. I know it's a big issue out there, as does the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. I don't know if his leader has had an opportunity to get out there or not. I know it's a big issue in Drayton Valley because people have phoned me and said: "What's with this crowd? What's with this government? Are they taking their right to govern for granted?" My response was: "You'll have to ask them. You'll have to ask them why they feel these bills are so necessary."

Specifically, with Bill 23, Mr. Speaker, as I understand it, the idea here is to mend an extremely controversial bill that was seen to limit, and in my view has limited, landowners' rights and controls over their land. We know there's an election coming in the next four or five months, and with this bill all the Progressive Conservative candidates – I don't know if I can say that word in here anymore after question period – in the next election, all 87 of them, will be able to say: "Oh, no. We listened. We turned around on this. Of course, we had Bill 23, which satisfied all of your concerns." I'm confident that people who attend election forums are not going to be satisfied with Bill 23.

Certainly, we hear that it's going to clarify and limit the government's restrictions on privately held land for the purposes of future development. That was seen to exist in the original act. I had a gentleman in the escalator at the Shaw Conference Centre ask me, "Is it true that this legislation can freeze activity on my land until my grandchildren have retired?" I asked him, "How old are your grandchildren?" He said: "They're very young. They're just entering elementary school." I think he had it, hon. members. He had this scoped out, as the kids would say.

Now, we also with this legislation are placing an advisory, a minimum 15-year time frame between land assembly and project construction for most projects. I understand that maybe the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre can clarify this. Is five years only for water projects?

Ms Blakeman: Yeah.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Okay.

More rapid projects would continue to use conventional exploration. Certainly, whenever we're talking about land use – and here's the hon. Minister of Energy, who was one of the star participants in Eckville the Thursday before the Easter long weekend at the debate. I'm glad here's here.

Now, whenever we look at planning, you know, and long-term planning, it's very important. I would use this as an example. The B.C. government is looking at – and I could be wrong, Mr. Speaker – a rather large hydroelectricity development in and around Pouce Coupe, a little bit south down in the Peace River valley, a dam that would create a reservoir that could be up to, I think, 80 kilometres long. It's a large volume of water, which could potentially produce over 2,000 megawatts of electricity. Now, that's certainly going to affect the fine folks in the Peace River district on the Alberta side. It's going to have issues with oil sands development, with water use. At some time maybe this government is planning a run-of-the-river development around the Slave River, but this is an example of why we need to do good planning.

This House, Mr. Speaker, as you're aware, passed, I believe it was, the Dunvegan Hydro Development Act, where we could have run-of-the-river electricity generation around the Dunvegan area. Of course, if we were to put further dams on the Peace River, how would it affect that potential project, which was of course set up by an act of this Legislative Assembly? Those are examples of where planning comes into place not only in our own neighbourhoods in our own province but also with our neighbours, in this case the province of British Columbia.

I'm sure the hon. Minister of Energy is providing the opposition out there with election tips. I'm sure he is as that fixed-date election gets closer and closer. Certainly, the right to compensation and legal recourse equal to rights under expropriation with preferential leaseback offered to original owners is, as the hon. member suggested, in this bill. That certainly was an issue that many questions were focused on in Eckville.

I don't know how much time I have left, Mr. Speaker, but I would like to ask the hon. member if Mr. Wilson was consulted when this amendment was considered and drafted. If I could have a response to that question in the course of debate, I would really appreciate that.

Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. It's going to be very interesting to hear how this amendment act proceeds through the Legislative Assembly as promoted and sponsored by the Minister of Infrastructure.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The Minister of Environment and Water.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to speak today in support of the amendments the government has introduced through Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011. I want to congratulate the hon. member for bringing this forward. It's the first step, I would say, in addressing property rights.

I was very proud today when the Premier announced that I will chair and the hon. Member for Livingstone-MacLeod will vice-chair a committee to go and do exactly what the Premier committed to when she was running for leadership. That is to go and listen to Albertans with regard to issues around property taxes and concerns that they might have. I'm very much looking forward to doing that, and in particular having a conversation where I and other MLAs and members of the task force will have the opportunity to listen and to bring back to our government what we have heard with regard to property rights in Alberta and the feelings and thoughts of Albertans. I'm very much looking forward to that.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, one of the most important responsibilities we have as elected officials is to ensure Albertans' rights are being respected. I am pleased that the amendments in this bill, introduced by our government, show that respect and give more power to landowners. Property owners deserve nothing less, and they expect nothing less from their government. These amendments are an important first step to fulfilling our Premier's commitment to addressing concerns about the rights of landowners. They offer real benefits to landowners. First, the amendments provide clarity; second, the amendments give landowners as many options as possible; and finally, the amendments give full access to all applicable categories of compensation under the Expropriation Act.

As I mentioned, clarity is a key component of the amendments. Government will be required by law to notify and consult individual property owners when a major long-term project is being considered. Government must also decide within two years which properties will be part of the project. Government must purchase an individual's property when the landowner chooses to sell. This is a transparent and open process, one that Albertans have every right to expect.

Another benefit contained in the amendments is choice. Landowners can now sell their land to the government. They can also sell their land to the government and lease it back until the project is ready to begin.

Finally, they can sell their property to a third party or leave it to family members in their will. This approach gives landowners the power to choose when to sell their land to government. If a landowner wants to sell but is not happy with the price the government is offering, the landowner will have the option to allow the courts to decide what price should be paid. This gives landowners the power to access all applicable categories of compensation for their land under the Expropriation Act as well as the courts. I am also pleased that the government will pay landowners' court costs.

As I said at the outset, Mr. Speaker, Albertans had a lot to say about the act as it currently stands, but the amendments tabled in this House by the Minister of Infrastructure provide some much-needed answers to landowners. Today I'm happy to say that the act is significantly improved. It not only reflects the concerns raised by Albertans, but it contains very real and very tangible benefits to our landowners. We listened, and with this act we are delivering.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available on Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011, pursuant to the previous speaker's comments.

Mr. Chase: A clarification to the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, who is currently the Minister of Environment and Water. Did you say that yourself and, I believe, the Member for Livingstone-MacLeod had gone out and consulted, and if that is so, what was the nature of the consultation? How many public forums and meetings were held? If I am wrong, then when is this consultation planned?

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, hon. member. What I did say was that I was very proud that the Premier announced today at the AAMD and C that I will chair a task force, and I will have a vice-chair, the Member for Livingstone-Macleod. We will be going out to talk to Albertans with regard to property rights and to listen to them about concerns that they have on property rights. We will then report back by the end of January with regard to what we have heard and recommendations that we will bring forward to the Premier.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar under 29(2)(a).

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the hon. Minister of Environment and Water. You stated that you consider these amendments a significant improvement or significantly improved. My question would be: then why was this bill passed in the first place, forced through this Legislative Assembly, and who drafted it?

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the question. It's a great opportunity to provide some clarity. Over the summer months and over the time that the Premier was running for leadership, she had the opportunity, as did other candidates, to go out and listen to Albertans on what the issues in many aspects were. This is one issue where the hon. Premier came back and said that this is something that is a concern for landowners, that it is something that's important to them, and therefore came back to our government and said that we need to address these issues.

Certainly, the hon. member, the Minister of Infrastructure, has done a very good job at articulating within this bill, through those that drafted it, the issues and concerns that were raised and brought forward during those months in the summer, from January to now, additional areas that people have commented on. I think that just says full what the Premier said about her transparency and her listening and addressing the issues that are important to Albertans. What she heard is now being, as I said, the first step, reflected in what Albertans told her with regard to this bill. That is why it is here today, and that is why I think the amendments are very good, because those months gave us an additional opportunity to hear concerns that Albertans were raising and to bring those concerns forward in this piece of legislation.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much. I would ask the hon. minister if she does not believe that in proposing this legislation, Bill 23, before she and the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod have a chance to interact with concerned landowners, it's in fact putting the cart before the horse. This business of "trust us, and then we'll consult with you later" I have concerns with.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. minister, briefly, as we can get one more in if possible.

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you. What I said in my opening comments is that this is a good first step to what we are bringing forward, the step that I'll be leading with the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod and other MLAs. We'll be then going back and talking on a broader scale, not specific to the previous Bill 19 but on a broader scale with regard to property rights. What does that mean for Albertans? When was there a time that property rights were working for Albertans? How can we have those kinds of conversations with Albertans?

We have the task force that will be going out. We have an opportunity where we'll be able to talk to associations and be able to talk to Albertans in different communities across the province and have the opportunity to really have a good dialogue on the broader issue of property rights. We know that it is very important for Albertans to have this discussion – it was raised with the Premier through the leadership – and very, very important for us to have a broader discussion with regard to property rights.

The Acting Speaker: Twenty seconds, Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, it's very sad to think that, you know, the 11,000 – I'd like to go back and look at the grid on how many rural Albertans actually voted for the Premier. After two years every member on that task force literally smeared lawyer Keith Wilson. They said that we were fearmongering here in the Wildrose. It just . . .

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on Bill 23 at second.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Yes. Mr. Speaker, I don't know whether you've had a chance to tune into a show that was filmed on the Tsuu T'ina reserve.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, I hesitate to interrupt, but we have a guest or two in the gallery which an hon. member has asked to introduce. If it's okay, could we revert to introductions briefly?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests (reversion)

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity. I notice that we're joined in the gallery by three of my constituents, hard-working councillors of Mackenzie county. I'd ask them to rise as I call their names: Dicky Driedger, Eric Jorgensen, and Jacque Bateman. They're hard-working councillors in Mackenzie county, which is about as far away as you can get from here. I ask you to join me in giving them the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: Welcome.

Thank you, hon. members, for allowing that brief introduction.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011 (continued)

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I don't know whether you or other members of this astute Assembly have had a chance to watch an AMC channel series that was filmed out on the Tsuu T'ina reservation. It's called Hell on Wheels, and it's about the building of the American railroad and all the problems encountered as they pushed this railroad across America. I think there's a resonance between that particular show and what historically might be the filming of the dispute over this particular land-use framework experience we're going through. I was thinking that a possible title might be Transmission Towering Inferno. We already have the very successful CBC Heartland. Maybe we could have a sequel, Heartland Transmission Troubles, because from the very beginning there have been problems.

We have had incidents of intimidation, first in terms of spying, and then following the spying scandal, that was associated with why this bill is now trying to be repaired for the second time, we also had the experience of what I would call intimidation. An octogenarian female was very concerned about being misled at one of the public hearings. It appeared that she was threatening one of the individuals. At further follow-up public hearings there was a strong armed presence of sheriffs. That could be seen as an overzealous need to protect individuals, or it might have seemed that tempers were flaring to such an extent, based on deceit previously, that they were afraid that the tempers would boil up.

I was not present at the meetings that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar discussed at Kitscoty and other meetings on this particular transmission line. I would bet that a number of the people that were there are the same people that I had a chance to talk with about concerns over fracking in Wetaskiwin, Trochu, twice in Ponoka, in Nanton, in Drayton Valley, Ma-Me-O Beach, and Red Deer. People are very sensitive about their land, as well they should be. There has to be a balance between preserving individual rights and public good.

Now, I don't want the hon. Energy minister to feel uncomfortable as I praise him, which I have previously done with regard to the land-use framework. The hon. member has gone through various ministerial transformations and, to his credit, has always landed on his feet. I appreciate that fact because I do believe that he is a person of intelligence and integrity. My biggest regret, Mr. Speaker, is that he wasn't able to finish the job he was first assigned to, and that was when he was the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development and initiated to a large extent – and I give him full credit for the initiation process – the land-use framework.

Now, I think that at least three years have passed, possibly four, since the hon. Energy minister, the Member for Foothills-Rocky View, was given that responsibility, but he took it on with vigour. I think part of the reason he took it on with such vigour is that he is, after a fact, a man of the land. Through his connection with fish and game clubs, through his own pursuit, enjoyment of the recreational sport of hunting, which my father introduced me to and I had many enjoyable years experiencing, he has come up with the idea – and I'm sure he had help – of setting aside seven regions based on water basins.

Now here we are, as I say, four years later, possibly longer – and the hon. member can correct me – but only two of the seven basin plans have had any degree of development, and only two of the seven you could even say are at the draft stage, waiting for further approval.

It's a large concern of mine that without a plan, without the equivalent of a traffic cop directing how things go, then an awful lot of development without a sufficient amount of scientific evidence or public forums, consideration, valuing the opinions of, say, Dr. David Schindler – I don't believe that's been allowed to happen. What we're having is a series of activities, spotted throughout the province, that aren't part of a cumulative plan, so it's business exploitation as usual, and the preservation, the balance, is missing.

Now, as I mentioned before, I would like to have seen the Member for Foothills-Rocky View allowed to complete that job. I have a degree of sympathy for a number of the ministers in this Assembly because they are so frequently changed that the opportunity to finish what they started does not occur. I do believe that they have exchangeable, tradeable talents. The hon. member who is now the Minister of Human Services has had a variety of ministerial portfolios, and I think his biggest challenge and certainly his biggest portfolio is now before him.

I am concerned about trying to fix something that is very badly broken. The expression "measure twice, cut once" applies to this. What's happened now is that this board that is trying to be mended has been cut twice. We all know from our own projects at home that at some point you realize that you've got to start again, that you've got to start over.

I know I have wasted a tremendous amount of time trying to make do with the materials I had on hand, trying to fix, trying to in some cases camouflage an error I made in a woodworking project, for example. We get so fixated on thinking that we can fix something that we do not realize that at some point you say: "Okay. Get real. You've got to get to the hardware shop, get the tools you need, get the appropriate screws because what you've done so far hasn't worked."

Now, I'm a big fan of Velcro. I'm a big fan of duct tape. I'm a big fan of binder twine. My father-in-law was a dairy farmer in the Ottawa Valley, and he, like so many other farmers, used binder twine to temporarily fix farm machinery, combines. I've used duct tape when I've been out in the wilderness in the Queen Charlottes to temporarily repair a hole in a kayak. These are great sorts of materials. Velcro I've used numerous times in designing my own sports equipment, creating cross-country ski packs and martial arts materials.

An Hon. Member: Relevance.

Mr. Chase: Yes, speaking very definitely to Bill 23. Thank you for refocusing my attention.

No amount of Velcro, no amount of duct tape, no amount of binder twine is going to put this Humpty Dumpty together again. Neither the king's horses, the king's men, nor the Member for Athabasca-Redwater can put this Humpty Dumpty bill together again. In trying to do so, all the members have accomplished is getting more egg on their faces. The yolk, Mr. Speaker, is literally on them.

Bill 23, Mr. Speaker, is a flawed attempt at gluing boards together which no longer meet. I don't know, again, for those men and women who have worked in the construction trade, but I can remember on one of my earlier jobs a foreman tried to trick me by sending me for a board stretcher. There's no such thing. It stretches the imagination that Bill 23 can be considered sufficient to repair a very damaged set of legislation.

As I mentioned earlier in the 29(2)(a) questioning to the hon. Minister of Environment and Water, how is it that we'll pass the bill? The government is calling upon opposition support and Albertans' faith to pass this flawed bill, and then they'll go out and consult. It doesn't work that way. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar – and I'm sure the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore will add to what he saw and heard at these meetings, the level of distrust and anger in rural areas, which he is considerably more familiar with than I am, having spent time in the Cardston area. But this comes down to trust, Mr. Speaker, and the trust isn't there.

In previous attempts to repair the legislation – I think it's bills

19, 24, 36, and 50 – the government rejected amendments that the opposition put forward trying to repair the damage that we saw when these bills were first introduced. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, instead of trying to reform or rebuild something that is inherently broken, we have to start at the beginning and get the kind of consultation that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was suggesting. Refer it to any one of our committees. Let the committee, as we did with the minimum wage or the milk carton returns, tour the province, call together individuals, meet them where it is convenient for them or arrange for them to come to Edmonton to meet with committee members. Let's get collaboration, let's go beyond just consultation, and let's build something that Albertans can agree to.

As it is, Albertans will not accept Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011. The government is about to go into election mode within a 90-day period in the spring, and this particular piece of legislation is the equivalent of an anchor. I would suggest that they would want to clear up the problems by starting from scratch. This just doesn't do it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to express my concerns and those that Albertans have shared with me.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. I have the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Mr. Hinman: I'd like to ask the hon. member if he's aware of the comments and what the different task force members have been saying for the last two years about this Bill 19. The fearmongering that people like Keith Wilson and Danielle Smith and myself and other Wildrosers – do you think that there's any credibility at all in this task force given that for two years they've been saying that we've been fearmongering, that there's nothing wrong with these bills? Even the Government House Leader in Eckville took on Keith Wilson and said that you were wrong, yet here we are now with all of these amendments, which is exactly the presentation that Keith Wilson has been making for two years. This government is saying that we don't need any of them, and now we have a bill. Does this task force have any credibility in your mind?

Mr. Chase: Thank you for that question, hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. What the government is asking us to do is to believe that in a two-week period we can fix a problem that has been growing for more than two years. Credibility is at stake. Whatever the rules are that balance the needs of individual landowners and the collective good of Albertans, this should be a piece of legislation that stands the test of time, and I'm afraid, Mr. Speaker, this wouldn't pass any type of test.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House under Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Mr. Lund: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member went through the horrible situation about the hearings. Some of those folks that were involved were my constituents, so I'm very familiar with it. But I was concerned when he was making the comments. What was the relevance of that to this bill?

Mr. Chase: Well, I would suggest that the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House is considerably more qualified, based on his rural positioning, than I am, but I would sort of turn it around. What were your constituents telling you? Are they all standing up and saluting this project? Do they think that Bill 23 is the best thing since sliced bread? What concerns did they express to you? Please share them. If they had none, put it on the record.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I would ask the member to please show me the relationship between that project and this bill. Please tell me: what is the relationship?

Mr. Chase: Well, the underlying relationship, Mr. Speaker, is obviously the government that's proposing this particular legislation. It's called the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011. Now, we've had similar project amendment attempts – I think it was Bill 10 – and it hasn't worked. The relevance is that when you're talking about taking people's land, you've got to very carefully, as I say, balance the needs of the individuals and the collective good. That's the connection. It's connected to the land-use framework. It's governance.

Mr. Lund: Mr. Speaker, I would submit that perhaps you should look on page 2 of the act and rationalize the clause that says:

A project is not a public project under subsection (2)(a) if it is a project solely for the transportation or transmission of oil, gas or electricity or of a natural resource that can be used as a source of any form of energy, or of any combination of [all of these].

That was a line that was being sought by a private company, not the government. It was not the government. As a matter of fact, this bill clearly states that it couldn't be.

Mr. Chase: I very much appreciate your clarification. I very much want to hear from other members, especially rural members, as we did yesterday, when concerns were expressed. This is exactly why we're here, to share information that's going to benefit all Albertans. I thank the member, and he can consider me confused. I look forward to being straightened out.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and speak in support of Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011. I believe the amendments that are brought forward in this bill clarify a number of concerns that have been raised by landowners. This legislation ensures government can plan for the long-term future for large-scale roadway and water reservoir infrastructure projects Albertans will need.

With these amendments the law recognizes more fully the needs, realities, and expectations of Alberta landowners. The amendments ensure landowners are consulted in a timely manner and fairly compensated, and that's important. It accounts for the varying circumstances that landowners may have – in other words, not all circumstances are the same – and this bill, I think, considers that. That's also important. Providing more options as to how landowners use their land and when and how they will sell it: I think that's also a significant aspect of importance with regard to this legislation.

Strategically balancing the law benefits landowners and Albertans in terms of future planning, focusing on carefully considering the needs of individuals while building to meet the needs of the province. This legislation helps ensure that together we continue down the right path with regard to planning for future projects in this province; that is, building Alberta's economic prosperity and planning the large-scale infrastructure requirements for today and for future generations.

A few examples. Projects like the Edmonton and Calgary ring roads and the Oldman River dam are good examples of how building large-scale public infrastructure has far-reaching benefits.

The ring roads help facilitate moving people, knowledge, services, goods, and dollars, which in turn stimulates growth. We all understand the importance of projects like these.

We also know that as Alberta continues to attract more and more Canadians and people from all around the world, we will need to stay ahead of that growth. As we continue to grow and move forward as a province, we need to do so with the entire community in mind. The infrastructure we plan and build today is crucial for the future health and growth of Alberta's communities. It's through this legislation that government is able to plan for the anticipated infrastructure needs of our communities by buying land.

Again, the Stoney Trail and Anthony Henday Drive are prime examples. Planning for these roadways began in the '70s. Forty years ago people had their future needs in sight and started accumulating land that would be needed for such roads. What it comes down to is that government's first and most important priority is to deliver what Albertans need today and will need in the future. The anticipation of future growth is extremely important. This legislation is another tool to help the provincial government plan for the long-term future of the province and ensure that Albertans have the infrastructure they need to support their quality of life as this province continues to grow.

Bill 23 sharpens this legislation's focus more strongly on benefiting and addressing the concerns of landowners. By planning with an eye to the future and by maintaining an open dialogue with landowners and Albertans, government can be sure it is developing processes, laws, and regulations that meet with Albertans' approval to facilitate the provision of the best public infrastructure we can to meet the needs of our families and of all future Albertans.

I would like to thank the Member for Athabasca-Redwater, the Minister of Infrastructure, for bringing forward this legislation and these amendments. I believe Bill 23 addresses concerns that landowners have relayed to me, specifically with regard to the development of these types of infrastructure programs.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity under 29(2)(a)?

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you. Just to make what I thought was abundantly clear, to echo, we have to have a land-use framework. That's why I've been a fan of the former Minister of SRD, the Member for Foothills-Rocky View, trying to put forward a plan. But that plan has to be done in consultation.

The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House, I think, was drawing my attention to page 2 of the bill where it says:

Land Assembly Project Area

2(1) Subject to section 3, if the Lieutenant Governor in Council is of the opinion that one or more areas of land are required for a public project and that

(a) the land is intended to be acquired by the Crown over a period of time, and it goes on to list a series of rules.

Now, this idea of the government by order in council – in other words the Lieutenant Governor in Council, in other words the cabinet – single-handedly making these decisions but without debate in the Legislature or, let's say, debate that is beyond a two-day session or a two-week session or subject to time restraints, that can make these unilateral decisions so frequently behind closed doors and claim that they're in the best interests of Albertans without that consultation, is very disconcerting for me. As I've said, I want to see this done right. I'll be gone, but my grandsons, hopefully, will be enjoying Alberta for years to come, and I don't want them having to pay for transmission lines that are unnecessary. I don't want them to have to pay for government deals whereby land for ring roads, for example, was acquired and then the excess land was sold off at a penny on a dollar. Individuals who had access to government information have made killings on what taxpayer dollars paid large prices for.

To the hon. member: you're obviously enthusiastic about this piece of legislation. What forms of consultation have you had with your constituents that give you that sense of surety about this legislation?

The Acting Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not sure you've actually seen me when I'm really enthusiastic.

Mr. Chase: When you're chairing committees, you're quite enthusiastic.

Mr. Doerksen: You're right.

I believe this legislation does address concerns that I think I've heard. I'm also a landowner, and I know that the principles of the Expropriation Act are well understood by landowners and Albertans. While nobody really likes being exposed to those situations where expropriation happens, I think people generally understand that there is a range of activities and heads of compensation and procedures that are addressed through the Expropriation Act.

One of the things that I heard was a concern with regard to what was going forward with regard to land assembly projects, that landowners wanted to be able to trigger that process of the Expropriation Act, and that's one of the things that I think is clarified in here. The other thing, part of all of that, is third-party arbitration and that sort of thing with regard to values and also the losses that landowners may experience with regard to their land being taken for large projects. Another thing is the fact that this is planning out into the future.

There were some questions about timing of a purchase and market value and how compensation would be determined. I think this legislation clarifies a lot of that. I appreciate the fact that the minister has brought it forward, because from my perspective I've heard the concerns of landowners. I'm a landowner myself, as are many others, and getting this right is extremely important. I believe this particular piece of legislation addresses that in a reasonable way. I look forward to some benefits from this because I know that even in my constituency there are some big projects that are under consideration that this legislation would address in terms of some water reservoirs and the opportunity for storage.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Second reading of the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act to Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, we often get up and say that it's a thrill or an honour to speak to these government bills, but this one really is. The reason is because after two years of a lot of hard work and getting it right, this government is finally following the lead of the Wildrose and individuals like Keith Wilson and landowners. So I am excited to talk about this bill because they're bringing in three, what we think are four, of the faults of this bill. And 75 per cent is an incredible hitting rate for this government, so we're pretty excited about that. We hope that we can make one more amendment. As we pointed out, again, we think that the government has suffered enough infliction on this to think that they need to get it right.

People like Keith Wilson are really patriots to me. The amount of time and effort that he has put in to fight a tyrannical government that says that property rights aren't important is incredible, Mr. Speaker. I personally want to thank him. I also think that this government, starting with the Premier, should give a public apology to Mr. Wilson and should perhaps give him the honour of an Alberta recognition for the work that he's done for the people here.

Mr. MacDonald: An Order of Excellence.

Mr. Hinman: An Order of Excellence. Absolutely.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I wonder if we could address the comments to the chair and not to the person speaking. Everyone will have their fair chance at speaking to this bill, I assure you.

Please, hon. member, proceed. Uninterrupted, I hope.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. You'll recall that we made this effort for some time on the Alberta Land Stewardship Act. We repeatedly pointed out how little regard there was in this centralized superplan for the rights of landowners, businesses, and municipalities. The government kept trying to say that we were fearmongering, that there was no cause for alarm. They even said that we were making things up. But what's the only piece of significant legislation that came up this last spring? It wasn't the Asia bill; it was Bill 10, which made a bunch of amendments to improve the land-use framework. We still think that bill is too centralized and still doesn't give people the adequate compensation protection, but there sure were some significant changes to the bill those months before the government insisted that it was fine.

That's because over the last year good folks in rural Alberta have stopped trusting them. This spring they finally realized it, so they were scrambling to fix these horrible bills. Today they even announced a task force. They called it something like the win rural Alberta back from the Wildrose task force or something like that. Well, I have bad news for them. It's kind of like a spouse that's been lied to and neglected for so long. There is just so much resentment and mistrust there, and they think a couple of sessions with a marriage counsellor and a few bouquets of flowers will fix it up.

An Hon. Member: You didn't actually break all this down?

Mr. Hinman: Yes. You've got to be able to get it in there.

What they are doing here is admitting all along that we were right and they were wrong, that they've been misleading Albertans when they said we were just fearmongering and blowing things out of proportion.

But back to the latest bouquet of flowers, this Bill 23. This bill proposes radical amendments to the land assembly act, often referred to as Bill 19. This bill goes even further than the land-use correction bill that they did this spring. Since Bill 19 was passed, the Wildrose has been travelling the province and using every chance we've had in the House to inform Albertans about what an unnecessary and naked power grab this was by the government.

The bill came out of the government's experience in expropriating land for ring roads and other big projects over the last couple of decades, including expropriation for the power line from Calgary to Edmonton. Because they used a heavy hand and they trampled people's rights to appeal the compensation, there were numerous court cases that arose. Judges often sided with citizens. In the Nilsson case, for example, the judge used especially incriminating language in describing how the government was going around and confiscating land. So they decided: "Well, we're just going to make a few laws that will enable us to make these things legal. If we pass a law on it, then there's nothing a landowner or a judge can do."

So we got Bill 19, which gave the cabinet the power to declare that large tracks of land are now off limits to development by landowners because the bureaucrats in Edmonton decided they might want to use it for some project in the future. Bill 19 has a lot of problems, mostly about the scope of the power it gives the cabinet and the lack of compensation rights that it grants landowners. This is a very familiar refrain that this government continues to use.

One problem was that despite the government's claim, we argued that landowners couldn't trigger expropriation if they decided to freeze this land and it was too much for them. The government said that we were wrong. Then they decided to rewrite that section anyway to grant the right to sell it any time, that we were demanding, which is a great thing. We applaud you for doing that.

We complained that only offering market value for land that usually has a business in various stages of development was an unfair limitation and that all heads of compensation should be included. The government rewrote the compensation values section to be more fair to landowners. Thank you for that.

We argued that there was not adequate recourse to the courts for landowners who were not being offered what they thought was a fair deal by this government. They said: "Sure thing. You're just fearmongering. You can trust cabinet. We would never do that to the people here." But here we are. We have a rewritten section saying that the process in the Expropriation Act that grants recourse to the courts applies. Again, the landowners of Alberta thank you for that.

Now, the Expropriation Act is important. In fact, it's where we think this process should have remained this whole time because it does a better job of protecting landowners. This is some good news, but besides the fact that this bill isn't needed and that it's still a big stick that a centralized bureaucracy can use for its big plans, there is still one more big hole. Section 10 of the original bill talks about that every person with interest in property gets a copy of the cabinet order that puts a freeze on the land. This includes not only the registrar. So there is an order on the land title but on the bank holdings, the mortgage. This is surely going to have a chilling effect on a bank. Your land will be devalued because of this strict limit on the development. When the landowner goes to remortgage his land or if he wants to change the terms of his mortgage in any way, this cabinet order surely is going to give the bank cold feet.

It's not easy to resolve this, except by repealing the bill and making the province wait to expropriate land until they have a final decision. That's still the position that we take on this because the only people who had a problem before were the government. Even with these amendments the bill is still giving the government the power to execute their behind-closed-door plans despite landowners' concerns and rights. Frédéric Bastiat eloquently stated something more along the lines of what I believe. "Life, liberty, and property do not exist because men made laws. On the contrary, it was the fact that life, liberty, and property existed beforehand that caused men to make laws in the first place."

John Locke, another political writer, established our inimitable rights, including the rights to property, considered by many as the philosophical foundation of constitutional democracies. They came out of the British experience in 1688 and were influential in the French and American revolutions. In all of these cases there was a political fight against the ruling class for thinking that it didn't have to respect the property rights of individuals. The government cannot extinguish property rights for the sake of pursuing some executive notion on good order. They can't rescind them either, at least not without full and fair compensation. This compensation needs to be done by the courts or bodies entirely independent of the Crown. This is what it means to respect property rights.

This truth was established 800 years ago and then reinforced 300 years ago in England, but this government still hasn't learned the lesson, which it clearly demonstrated with bills 19, 24, 36, and 50. The simmering revolution across the prairies this past year finally caught this government's attention. But like James II in 1688, I am confident that no matter what amendments and task force this government throws out there, it's too late for this tired, old dynasty to keep hold on its power. Albertans need not worry, though. A government that understands and will protect their rights is ready to take over.

Mr. Speaker, there are some real concerns that I've heard when I was over there and listened to the Premier make her comments – how much time do I have left? – and say: we hear Albertans, and we understand. All we believe that they really hear – and Albertans know – is that there was a big kickback. They finally after two years realized: “You know what? Albertans aren't fools. We can't pull the wool over their eyes. We need to change the laws.”

These three amendments are very good amendments, but it's not good enough there. Again, I go back. You know, for two years they've gone around smearing Keith Wilson, saying that he was fearmongering, that he was making things up, that it wasn't clear. They owe him an apology. [interjection] The House leader is yapping at the moment, Mr. Speaker, but he's saying something much like the disrespect that he showed Mr. Wilson in Eckville when he was speaking, who gave the greatest respect and time to him. But for some reason his rhetoric likes to continue on.

It's interesting when you go out and actually talk to landowners, their concerns about what's going on. The real problem here and why these bills should just all be rescinded and we can use the Expropriation Act is because of the past behaviour of this government. It's unacceptable in rural Alberta, a place where their bond is their word. These individuals have no credibility to go back out there and all of a sudden say: we're listening; please come and tell us what it is. But if they want to save a great deal of time and money, they can just go to Mr. Wilson and say, “What is it that we need to put in here?” or, better yet, “Can this be fixed?” And he'll say: “No. Just scrap the bills. Pull them aside, and go back to what we have.”

It's a step in the right direction, but that isn't always good enough, especially when you have a government that's so infamous for backstepping. As soon as things change, turn around, they're right back at the door again demanding that they want more. They're going to take more, and they're going to spend more.

Mr. Speaker, they talk about respect. They talk about the need to ensure that these landowners now are fairly compensated. They talk about the need – again, it's in the bill, that we need to go through the courts if they're not happy. Again, it's incredible that they put in there to allow landowners to trigger the point and say:

“You know what? This isn't going to work in our interest. We need to trigger that purchase and then go through the valuations.”

4:20

On behalf of the landowners that have spoken to me, we thank the government for bringing forward these amendments. They are good amendments. We will be in favour of and voting for these amendments, this act, but we will be bringing forward one more amendment because of the fact of the registrar and what it does to the people that have mortgages on their land and the need to use it. We can go back through different cases. This is something that really kind of hit the tipping point when there were many service stations that closed down and the banks had mortgages on those, and all of a sudden the banks were being held responsible for the cleanup. Again, it went through court cases. It was nasty. This is still an area of concern.

I'm surprised that the government didn't listen and for some reason didn't respond to that last area of concern, but we are, like I say, very pleased with as far as they have gone. It shows that when the support is out there and the landowners rise up, there's only one thing that this government seems to recognize, and that's the fear of not getting re-elected, which we see is real and alive out there.

To finish off, I just want to say that this Premier says that she's going to consult with Albertans. They've done it for two years. All that they do is consult, and then they insult those that they consulted because they haven't listened to them. They say: “We know best. Here's what we're going to do for you.” What this government needs to do is repeal bills 19, 24, 36, and 50 and start with a clean slate.

With that, I'll sit down and take any questions that the members of the House might have.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you.

Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available. The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's just interesting to listen to the hon. member across the floor. First off, I assume from his comments that he's well versed in municipal land-use bylaws, municipal planning, and all that, so I've got a couple of questions for him to lead off. I'll list them through and let him answer.

I'd like him to describe to me what is a permitted use under a land-use bylaw at the municipal level and what would be a discretionary use. I'd like some examples of both of those so I could see what actually, as he put it, is frozen here. I don't know if he really knows of what he speaks. I need the difference in those.

As well, could he cite a couple of land-use bylaws for me in zoning and what they're zoned for and what the different zonings in a land-use bylaw are and how they're changed and those types of issues? I think that, again, he's not quite sure of where he's going with this. It's all about . . .

An Hon. Member: Is this a pop quiz?

Mr. Berger: Pardon me. It's all about a little bit of grandstanding around what he's calling a property right.

Now, property right and property value are determined from within as well as from without, so what's around you has an effect on your property. The actual property right that “You can build anything you want on your property; it doesn't matter; it's your property” affects the value on the outside of that property.

I think that there are some discretionary uses and permitted uses that the hon. member may not have a full grasp of, and I'd really like to hear him put that forward to me right now.

Mr. Hinman: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I find it fascinating that he wants to ask me those things. This goes right to the root of the problem. He's going to be co-chair of the task force, and he wants to ask me for examples. I could sit there, and if he wants to give me another 15 minutes to talk on this, I would be happy to go into more details, but I don't have it.

The truth of the matter is that this government and this task force do not understand those things. I can cite people that have had their property frozen. They're not allowed to build on that property, and it's damaged them greatly, and this government has the arrogance to say: give me some examples.

Why would I give that to them when we're going into an election? These guys are so arrogant to say, "We've got it right; we know what it is" when they've bungled it up so badly over the last three years. And they want to know if we have it right. They need to go back to their books. They've got researchers, a lot more than us. They have a lot more money in there to do the research and figure it out for themselves.

It's ridiculous, the pain and the affliction that they've caused. Then to say: where have we ever said that you can build anything that you want and not have an impact on the community? We understand zoning very well. That's all part of an important citizenship where we get along with our neighbours. Where did we ever say that we want to give the right for someone to build anything and everything they ever wanted?

This government is ridiculous. Their comments are ridiculous. They've intimidated landowners. They sent out spies. That's what started all of this landslide. It was sending out spies because they wanted to put in a power line, and they didn't go through the proper procedures. They didn't respect their own laws. They didn't respect the communities that were against these things, and they're doing the same thing, Mr. Speaker, at this time with the heartland. We had a procedure before. The only reason why they're going ahead with the heartland is because they're embarrassed to admit that they're wrong and they'd have to swallow a $700 million bill, that should have only been $200 million, because of what they authorized in some prestudies and to start to get ready on the assembly.

This government continues to fail to understand property rights. They're worried about zoning now. They want to ask the opposition these questions. They need to go back to their own offices. They need to go back and talk to lawyers like Keith Wilson and listen to them. [interjections] See, even now they're going to heckle him when what they should be doing, Mr. Speaker, is apologizing to him and thanking him for the work that he's done. He's a patriot here in Alberta. He deserves the Order of Excellence for what he has done for the landowners here.

He went to war against this fearmongering, bullying government that has arm twisted, sent out spies, did whatever they wanted when they wanted, and when they were challenged by the court in such cases as the Nilsson case, they said: "We need a new law to strip any land rights away from these people so they can't stop us. Why? Because we're like the Soviet Union. We know what's best. We'll take this land, we'll tell them what it's worth, and they can't take us to the courts." They've shown all of this in the last two bills that have been the amendments.

You know what? Albertans aren't fools. They do understand. They don't want to do this. "We're in trouble in rural Alberta, so therefore we'll bring an amendment." But they won't apologize.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake.

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, seeing the time of day that we're at, I don't think I'm going to start on a big, long speech here, but I do have to say that I do support Bill 23, the Land Assembly Project Area Amendment Act, 2011, because it's a very good act. The last few minutes in this House, listening to the rhetoric that was going on when we really are here trying to do the proper work that a governing body is supposed to do and look after the good people of Alberta – that's what we're here to do today, not sit and listen to somebody talk about how bad things are, fearmongering about all different sorts of things that they absolutely know is completely false. They know that what we're here to do is to protect landowners because a good percentage of our caucus are landowners. Absolutely, we are not going to do things to harm ourselves or harm any Albertans, that we're all here to represent.

Yes, Mr. Speaker. I believe that some of those people worked very hard to get here to try to represent their constituents, but when they don't understand what's going on, how can they do good representation? We've proven over 40 years – we've proven – that we've done the right thing. That's why we've been here this long, and that's why people are prepared to keep us here. They know we'll do the right thing.

Because of the time, Mr. Speaker, I will sit down today and carry on at a later time.

The Acting Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. I hesitate to interrupt; however, pursuant to Standing Order 4(2) and noting that it is now 4:30 p.m., I will adjourn the House until Monday at 1:30 p.m.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, November 28, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

On this day, as our work in this Legislature continues, let each of us pray for those whom we remember who died and those who had the courage to stand up to their oppressors during the Ukrainian famine and genocide, the Holodomor. We resolve to comfort the families, friends, and communities who have keenly felt the loss of loved ones through these acts of violence and the disregard for the sanctity of that which is most precious, life. Amen.

Hon. members, ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, we'll be led today in the singing of our national anthem by Mr. Paul Lorieu, who is in the Speaker's gallery. I'd invite all to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to rise and introduce to you and through you two gentlemen in the Speaker's gallery: Mr. Peter Bidlock, along with another good friend of ours, Mr. Mike Cardinal, someone who is no stranger to this Assembly. As we all know, Mike served as an MLA for 19 years representing the constituencies of Athabasca-Lac La Biche, Athabasca-Wabasca, and Athabasca-Redwater, the constituency that I now serve. Mike held five cabinet posts during his time in elected office and was Alberta's first-ever First Nations cabinet minister. He is a true pillar of his community and certainly has left me with big shoes to fill.

Peter Bidlock is a member of the Strategic Tourism Marketing Council of Alberta and the owner of four hotels in the Edmonton area. He's an active member of his community and the province and has served as director of the Edmonton airport authority, chair of the Royal Alexandra Hospital Foundation, director of the Alberta Hotel & Lodging Association, and in many other roles. I would ask both of these gentlemen to please rise as we give them the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to start three introductions today by introducing to you and through you to all members of this Assembly someone who should be familiar to many of us here, a former colleague and, we hope, someone who will serve us again. Weslyn Mather was the Alberta Liberal MLA for Edmonton-Mill Woods from 2004 to 2008 and a lifelong educator. Before entering politics, she was vice-principal at J. Percy Page high school in Mill Woods. She is here today with a group of seniors to help them voice their health care concerns to all members of this Assembly and to all Albertans. She is seated in the Speaker's gallery, and I would ask her to accept the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

I would also like to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some guests that are very close to my heart. In fact, they will be very close to all of our hearts once they graduate. Twenty-one years ago I graduated from the U of A medical school, and today the next generation of bright, young doctors is here to meet with us and with many members of the House. They are the future of medicine, and after meeting them this morning and listening to their concerns, I'm confident in their ability to care for all Albertans and seniors, like the ones here today, once our generation retires. They are seated in the members' gallery, and I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly as I read their names: Sheehan Chowdhury, Mila Luchak, Kevin Zuo, Max Buchko, Sarah Stonehocker, Haitham Kharrat, Amirali Surmawala, Amandy Cheung, Charley Switzer, Stephanie Lim, and Roshan Abraham.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, those seniors I spoke of. We have 10 members of a large group of Edmonton seniors concerned about health care. They're here to advocate for better health care and better care for our seniors. These seniors want to make sure that they are looked after. I ask the seniors from Mill Woods to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a great honour for me today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the House some truly extraordinary guests who are here to help all of us commemorate the third anniversary of the Ukrainian Famine and Genocide (Holodomor) Memorial Day Act. As noted during the special commemoration that you hosted today in our rotunda, which was attended by members from all parties of this House, this particular famine and genocide is one of the worst tragedies of modern times.

I would ask these guests to rise as I call their names individually and to please remain standing until all have been introduced, and then we can salute and thank them with our accolades. I'll begin with Mr. Roman Krutysy, a visitor from Kyiv, who is head of the Kyiv Memorial Society in Ukraine and director of the Museum of Soviet Occupation of Ukraine; Mr. Jaroslaw Szweczek, president of the League of Ukrainian Canadians; Mr. Petro Dackiw, vice-president of the League of Ukrainian Canadians, and his wife, Motria Dackiw; Ms Luba Feduschak, president of the Ukrainian Canadian Congress, Edmonton branch; Mr. Steve Romaniuk, vice-president of the Ukrainian Canadian Congress, Edmonton branch, and his wife, Maria Romaniuk. I would also like to thank Ilia Simcisin and that wonderful crowd who provided the memorial borscht and bread in commemoration of this event. Hon. members, please welcome these special guests we have with us today.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through to all members of this Assembly a group of 37 students and their teacher and an accompanying parent from St. Stanislaus school in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. These students are here this week participating in School at the Legislature. St. Stanislaus is a French immersion school. I'm very proud to have them all here this afternoon. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. With us today in the Assembly are some 30 students, parents, and teachers from St. Timothy school. They are in grade 6. As you know, as per the Alberta curriculum they are studying democracy and government right now in their classrooms, so coming to the Legislature is definitely a treat for them. Those fine students are accompanied by parents and teachers, and they are Mrs. Leana Perri, Miss Laura Hebert, and Miss Elaine Wu. I would ask them all to stand and receive our traditional welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

1:40

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 58 students from one of the greatest schools out there, George McDougall high school in Airdrie. It just so happens to be the same school that I spent some time in during my younger, more colourful years. With them today are some teachers and parents, including a former classmate of mine, who was a very good example. I didn't follow that very much, unfortunately. It's Mrs. Devon Sawby and Mrs. Stephanie Fitzgerald as well as Ms Bijal Dattani. Their parents helpers today are Mrs. Deb Bachand and Mr. Drew Siewert. They made the trek up those dangerous roads all the way from Airdrie to here, so I hope we can give them a warm welcome from the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an incredible honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly an accomplished team of student researchers from the University of Lethbridge. These students are from the International Genetically Engineered Machine, or iGEM, competition, as it's referred to. I'd like them to rise as I introduce them. We have the VP academic and provost, Andy Hakin. We have the U of L chancellor, Shirley McClellan. We have the student supervisor, Hans-Joachim Wieden. We have student researchers Issac Ward, Justin Vigar, Jennifer Hill, Ryan Pederson, Boris Lam, Dipankar Goyal, Harland Brandon, Sutherland Dube, Dominic Mudiayi, and Dustin Smith. I would ask that they receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed an honour and a privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly eight individuals representing Catholic Social Services, here in recognition of their organization's 50th anniversary. I would ask the guests, that are seated in the public gallery, to rise as I mention their names: Mr. Peter Murray, the chairman of the board; Mr. Chris Leung, the chief executive officer; board members Gloria McKee, Muriel Dunnigan, Esmeralda Agbulos, and Donna Farrell; and two long-time staff members: Mr. Marc Barylo, senior manager, and Father Brian Jayawardhana, the chaplain. I would ask that the Assembly please give them the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Holodomor Memorial Day

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. [Remarks in Ukrainian] As a proud Albertan of Ukrainian heritage it is truly an honour for me to rise today to recognize the third anniversary of Bill 37, Ukrainian Famine and Genocide (Holodomor) Memorial Day Act, as introduced by my good friend and colleague from Edmonton-Mill Creek.

The Holodomor was a tragic event in Ukrainian history that occurred between the years 1932 and 1933. It was a horrific man-made famine that resulted in the death of approximately 6 million to 10 million people due to a forced starvation by the Soviet regime of the day. The Holodomor was a crime against the people of Ukraine that must never be repeated or forgotten, and it's important now more than ever that we continue to preserve the memory of those afflicted by those atrocious acts. We must also honour the determination of those who survived and their ability to recover after such tragedy.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in the importance of tying together Ukraine's past with its future. The Holodomor act seeks to do this by honouring the memory of those fallen victim to this cruel act of genocide by proclaiming that every fourth Saturday in November will be a day of remembrance for Albertans. This day helps to memorialize the victims of Holodomor and to preserve the legacy of its survivors for the more than 300,000 Ukrainian descendants living here in Alberta.

I know that the Holodomor act is very meaningful to all the members of the Assembly, and I'm so proud to be part of this very same government that passed the act three short years ago. May eternal memory be upon them. [Remarks in Ukrainian] Never again.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Physician Supply in Rural Alberta

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning I had the privilege of meeting with a dynamic group of Alberta medical students. These gifted young men and women represent the future of our health care system and our province. I was glad to have the opportunity to listen to their concerns, along with many other MLA colleagues here, and their hopes for health care in this province.

We discussed several important issues, including accessibility, not just for patients but students themselves, especially rural students. Here's what I mean. Think about the state of health care in rural Alberta. Citizens have a right to accessible quality health care, whether they live in a big city or a tiny hamlet, but right now rural Albertans often have to travel hundreds of kilometres to access important medical services.

What we need to do is start by training family doctors, nurses, paramedics, and all other health professionals right in rural Alberta: in Grande Prairie, Medicine Hat, Fort McMurray, Fort Macleod, Camrose, you name it. We need to make this education affordable, and right now our faculties of medicine are filled. Well, Mr. Speaker, frankly, they're filled with a lot of rich kids from the big cities. Everyone with the brains and the talent and the drive should have the opportunity to attend postsecondary education, yes, even medical school, and serve the public in the health care field.

Just as patients don't always have access to our crowded system, many future fine doctors and nurses don't have access to an education. Unfortunately, there are high barriers stopping kids from reaching their full potential: high tuition fees, long distances away from home, high costs of living. We need a comprehensive strategy to lower these barriers. Young rural Albertans need opportunities. Rural Alberta needs family doctors and nurses and other health professionals. It's our collective responsibility to commit to fixing the public health care system by training Alberta kids in Alberta, especially rural Alberta.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

University of Lethbridge IGEM Award

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is with great pride that I share with you today the exceptional accomplishments of a team of undergraduate students from the University of Lethbridge. At the recent International Genetically Engineered Machine, or IGEM, world jamboree held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology near Boston the U of L proved to be the best team from Canada and made it to the sweet 16 round from a field of 66 international entries.

IGEM is the world's foremost undergraduate synthetic biology competition. Essentially, Mr. Speaker, organizers provide teams with a list of parts and ask them to design and build an entirely new genetic machine. The U of L team researched and developed a petrochemical-eating bacteria that can be used to help clean water in the oil sands tailings ponds. Their work has attracted support from several organizations, including the Oil Sands Leadership Initiative. Considering they were in competition with teams from such prestigious institutions as MIT, Harvard, Imperial College London, Tokyo Tech, and Zhejiang University in China, the U of L team certainly proved that they can hold their own with the best students and bioengineers that the world has to offer.

I would also recognize the University of Calgary's IGEM team, whose project won the best environmental project award.

Mr. Speaker, I believe these results illustrate clearly how the undergraduate experience is enriched when students have the opportunity to work with world-class researchers like Dr. H.J. Wieden, who supervised the U of L's impressive group. These results are also indicative of Alberta's postsecondary system.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, congratulations to the students on a remarkable result.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Long-term Care for Seniors

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government's assault on our seniors began in 2008 by cutting public long-term care beds, privatizing the delivery of home care and long-term care, and nickelling and diming our seniors with fees to make up for a growing list of delisted services. The Premier said that allowing industry to meet seniors' needs will create more jobs, quote, unquote. The only extra jobs will be for bankers to count the profits off the backs of our seniors. To the Minister of Seniors: why is this government turning our seniors into commodities to be sold on the market to the highest bidder?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for that question. You know, I totally disagree with the member's comments. The aging policy framework, that I was very much involved with, dealt with the demographic change and where this new department is going with the Department of Seniors. There is nothing of more importance than the seniors for me as a new minister. I will make this commitment to you and to everybody here that seniors are not a commodity. They are a very important piece of this province, and they'll be treated that way.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, I wish that were true. In fact, standing up for the seniors is what got me chucked out.

Given that the previous and current Premiers promised to add 1,000 new continuing care beds to the system without mentioning if any of them would be publicly delivered, to the minister of health: what are your marching orders from this Premier, and exactly how many of those beds will be both 100 per cent publicly funded and 100 per cent publicly delivered?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is, in fact, the position of this government that we are working to offer a range of housing options for seniors across Alberta and, for those seniors who need health care, to offer a health care component that allows those seniors to age and to be served in place.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the only options are a range of private, for-profit options and given that the Premier has made a promise to increase funding to home care, which has also been overly privatized, to the Minister of Finance – yeah, you over there – how much more money will go into public home-care delivery, or is it all earmarked for private contracts and your PC privatization buddies?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, this member knows very well that that will be part of the budget that will be delivered in the new year.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier's maiden speech shows that this government has no clue how to fix public health care. It doesn't see the link between jammed emergency departments and ideological starvation of public home care and public long-term care. Now couples who can't afford private facilities face involuntary separation or abandonment in the hospital emergency departments. To the Minister of Finance: will you end this government's betrayal of our respected seniors and the values that Alberta was founded on and invest more in the public delivery of health care services to our seniors?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure where this member has been. This government supports seniors better than any other government in the country of Canada, and this minister here will ensure that that continues to happen.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know exactly where I've been. I was on the wrong side.

Given that the Premier plans to open Pandora's box by lifting the seniors' housing cap and allowing private operators to charge whatever they can get away with, will the Minister of Seniors, please – will you, please – show some mercy to middle- and lower middle-income seniors, who will be priced out of the market by the Premier's decision, and please reverse this ill-advised plan?

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to make sure that all people on the programs that we have today know that low-income seniors will always be guaranteed the support of this government. I was just looking at a list of recent announcements. Banff, Beaumont, Black Diamond, Calgary, Camrose, Claresholm, Edmonton, Leduc, Red Deer, Rocky View, Spruce Grove, St. Albert, Vegreville, Tofield: we're building seniors' facilities, and the Premier has made a very strong commitment that . . .

The Speaker: The hon. leader. [interjection] The hon. leader, please. [interjection] Third time, the hon. leader.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that Albertans are waiting for action and results, not announcements, and given that the Premier's misguided quota system creates a huge crowd of second-class citizens waiting in the breadline for affordable housing and home care and the line grows every single day, doesn't the Minister of Seniors see how wrong – how wrong – it is to leave so many of our seniors without any options that they can actually afford?

Mr. VanderBurg: Again, Mr. Speaker, let's not feel that the public sector is the only way to resolve this issue. The private sector does have an opportunity to play a great role in this. It's the outcome that I'm interested in – the outcome. Let's talk about some of these projects that will be completed in the next 12 months: Grande Prairie, Edmonton, Peace River, Strathmore.

Mr. Speaker, we are acting on our commitments.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

PC Party Benefit Plan Trust

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. My first question is to the Minister of Justice, who is responsible for the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act. Under that act are the contributions to the benefit plan trust for the former Premier eligible for tax receipts? You don't shake your head. Let him answer the question.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, the short answer to that question is: as I stand here right now, I don't know the answer to the question, but I'll get it.

Mr. MacDonald: You should.

Again to the same Minister of Justice: what is the value of the benefit plan trust of the former Premier, which is outlined on page 2 of the Premier's public disclosure statement, made pursuant, Mr. Speaker, to the Conflicts of Interest Act, an act under your authority and one which you tabled in this Assembly last week.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, that's information that I don't have top of mind. I'll undertake to provide the information to him.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again to the Minister of Justice: why is it necessary to have a benefit plan trust for the former Premier and the former leader of the Progressive Conservative Association of Alberta when in 2008 we all received such large substantial pay increases?

Mr. Olson: Same answer again, Mr. Speaker.

North West Upgrader

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, last week it was reported that this PC government had guaranteed $3 billion of taxpayers' money over 30 years to the company North West Upgrading Inc. In fact, a spokesperson for Alberta Energy said that if the North West upgrader should get built and then fail to stop processing bitumen for the government, Alberta taxpayers would still have to pay the costs of building the upgrader. To the Energy minister: this sounds an awful lot like a taxpayer-backed loan guarantee to a private business venture; is this accurate?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, the opposition parties are always sitting over there saying: when are we going to do more upgrading in Alberta? Right? So we've undertaken a venture with North West based on a sharing of both risk and opportunity. Are there some risks on the government's side? Yes, but there's risk on the private-sector side, too. It's a variation on the P3. If the opposition parties want to see more upgrading done in Alberta, they'd better be prepared for that type of balance of risk and opportunity.

Mr. Anderson: I didn't know that the Alberta government was back in the business of being in business, Minister.

Minister, given this deal's obvious risk to taxpayers as well as the uncomfortable questions that arise when government funds a private company in this manner, will you immediately release to the public the signed contract between your government and North West Upgrading so that we can verify whether this is, indeed, as you say, a good deal for Alberta taxpayers or whether this is simply corporate welfare gone mad?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, maybe the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere should tell the people of Alberta whether he thinks the government of Alberta made a big mistake back in the 1970s when it took a similar investment to get the oil sands started. We have a long history of co-operation and partnership to get ventures like this up and going. As far as the contract goes, there is a lot of information. All of the fundamental facts of the deal are on the website now. Some of the finer detail will be released as the deal goes public.

Mr. Anderson: Let me restate what you are saying so that you can confirm it for all Albertans. Are you saying, Minister, that your government has guaranteed $3 billion to a private company, which has been lobbying PC MLAs for years, including while I was still in that caucus, and that taxpayers have to pay that $3 billion even in the upgrader goes belly up, and you're now telling the people of Alberta, you know, the ones that are paying for this whole venture, that they can't be shown the contract because it has to be kept secret? Are you serious, Minister?

Dr. Morton: Mr. Speaker, obviously, I'm not saying that at all. Again I repeat: it's a combination of sharing risk and opportunity. I would think somebody who has legal training such as the hon. member knows that these types of take-or-pay contracts are absolutely normal in a large capital project where the investors have to be assured of the fact that the product that will be upgraded continues over a 30-year period.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Long-term Care for Seniors (continued)

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government's proposal to lift the $40-a-day cap on long-term care fees will expose seniors and their families to gouging by the private sector. In one private facility in Alberta, photos of which I will later table, two elderly women share a small room and a bathroom with two more. Each senior pays close to $3,000 a month for this tiny, tiny space. The question is to the Deputy Premier. Will he today rule out lifting the cap on long-term care fees, and if not, why not?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I'll ask the minister to supplement, but I can tell you this. This Premier is dedicated to not only all of our seniors but to making sure that our seniors can age in place together as couples, that they can get the health care they need in the proper facility at the right order of time and in the right delivery method, where they want to be. That's what the thousand units are all about. That's what this Premier is all about.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that this Premier's plan is to deliver long-term care facilities by the private sector, will the Deputy Premier admit that lifting the cap on accommodation is necessary in order to allow private operators to make a profit at the expense of seniors who are struggling to make ends meet?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the minister stated earlier, what we want are outcomes. We want quality care. We want good, safe places for seniors to live with dignity and respect. What we want is to change the way that we've been doing things so that we can accommodate seniors across this province. That's what we want.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that this Premier and her government's privatization agenda for long-term care facilities is one that will continue to force the elderly and their families to shoulder growing financial burden in order to benefit the government's wealthy friends, will the Deputy Premier rule out raising the cap on long-term care fees today?

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, I'll say it again. What we're after is the outcome. I'll have the Minister of Seniors talk about what that outcome is going to look like for Alberta seniors.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let's get it straight. Whether you're a foundation, whether you're the Good Sam Society, whether you're a private operator, whether you're the government of Alberta, these all play an important role in providing housing options for seniors. There is no discussion that we're going to abandon our low-income seniors. There's a policy today where we leave so many dollars in your pocket. We're not changing that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Political Party Financial Benefits

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the Minister of Justice. Will the minister bring forward amendments to the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act to require registered political parties to disclose the exact value of any special allowances, reimbursements, financial trusts, or any other financial benefits granted by them to their leaders and sitting MLAs?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I sense a bit of a theme here. I'm going to have to investigate this question. I'm being very honest with the member when I say that I do not have the answer for him, and I'm going to have to investigate it.

Dr. Taft: Well, I sense a bit of a theme in these non-answers, Mr. Speaker. We'll try again. Does the Minister of Justice admit that these kinds of special allowances and so on could easily become an end run to legislative safeguards that require full disclosure and protect against conflicts of interest?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure what the member is after here, but I will say that either of these members could have easily given me a call, talked to me. I could've prepared myself for this discussion. I would have been happy to have it with them.

Dr. Taft: Again to the same minister. Maybe we'll return tomorrow and get full answers from him. In the interest of open and accountable government does the Minister of Justice agree that the public has a right to know who is providing what financial benefits to their Premier and other elected officials?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, there is already disclosure made, and if the member wants to discuss it further with me, I'd be more than happy to meet with him.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Calgary Windstorm

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions are all for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Yesterday high winds of up to 149 kilometres per hour caused significant damage to downtown Calgary office towers and caused access to downtown to be closed by city emergency management staff. Do you think the city made the right decision to close access to downtown?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know that I've had some media ask me about this, too. We never question the work that local emergency officials do. It's their decision to make. They manage the situation. The province is there through the Alberta Emergency Management Agency to help in co-ordinating services and that. The local staff did an exceptional job of making sure that nobody was hurt, and we're very thankful that no one in that situation was very seriously hurt.

Mr. Johnston: My first supplemental: what support did the government of Alberta provide to the city yesterday?

Mr. Griffiths: As I started to lay out, Mr. Speaker, it was about 1 o'clock yesterday when local emergency officials stated that they were going to activate their emergency operations. At about 2 o'clock they accessed the Alberta emergency alert, which is a service provided by the Alberta Emergency Management Agency, to send out a notice that we were in an emergency situation. We also sent our management field officers out to several locations to help with co-ordinating the events. Lastly, we used the Alberta Emergency Management Agency to co-ordinate with the Department of National Defence.

Mr. Johnston: My final question. These emergency events can be costly. What support can the city of Calgary expect for yesterday's windstorm?

Mr. Griffiths: Well, Mr. Speaker, the province of Alberta runs disaster recovery plans, and they come into effect when there is a widespread disaster for a unique circumstance against uninsurable items. Now, the city is focused right now on its cleanup, which it should be, but when it comes to a full assessment, they can make an application to the province. We do typically on a DRP, if it's a widespread event and it meets all the criteria, cover the operational emergency costs for that municipality.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Seniors' Benefit Program

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In her opening speech to this House on October 24 the Premier promised: "Couples that have loved and depended on each other for decades will no longer be split up." Yet reports have emerged of at least three senior couples in Medicine Hat driven to divorce in order to qualify for the Alberta seniors' benefits they need to pay for long-term care. To the Minister of Seniors: is this just another in a string of broken promises?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me get this straight. Involuntary separation is not divorce. Whoever thinks of that as divorce and whoever thinks that this department would make anybody legally separate is foolish.

Mr. Chase: I suppose, Mr. Speaker, that involuntary separation is acceptable.

Given that the removal of the daily accommodation fee cap will only increase costs further, what does the minister have to say to lower income seniors driven to take such desperate measures in order to pay for long-term care: don't worry, it's involuntary?

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, just to put some further clarification into this, if a senior couple is in the unfortunate circumstance where one partner has to go into long-term care and the other partner stays at home, just pick up the phone, call our department, and we'll make sure you have an income-splitting opportunity to maximize your benefits. No form required.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Will the minister commit today to equalizing the eligibility criteria for married and unmarried recipients of the Alberta seniors' benefit?

Mr. VanderBurg: Again, I'll say it slower. All you have to do is pick up the phone, let me know, let our department know. We'll make sure that you can split your income halfway down the middle, that you both get maximum benefit on the seniors' benefit plan. It has been working fine. Our department has been doing this for years. People don't have trouble with it. Involuntary separation is a federal incentive to maximize the guaranteed income supplement and the old age security. We don't require a form. We don't require anything. Just notify us.

Community Spirit Program

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There have been numerous reports lately regarding pressures on nonprofit organizations due to the sluggish economy. Representatives have been telling me for some time that their demands are growing and they have to stretch their limited funds further and further, but they are close to their limits. To the Minister of Culture and Community Services. Can she please tell us: how are these groups expected to meet their challenges with limited funds that are decreasing as days go by?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know there are challenges out there. We also know that Albertans are among the most generous donors to nonprofit and charitable organizations in Canada. We support Albertans by giving through the charitable tax credit, which is a community spirit program. Through the tax credit Albertans can receive a nonrefundable tax credit of 50 cents on every dollar they donate over $200. Albertans should take advantage of this and donate to their favourite nonprofit group before December 31 this year.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do have only one supplemental for the minister. I'm wondering what proof she might have that the community spirit program is having any effect in communities across the province. What kind of specific numbers might she be able to share with the House and with Albertans?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We know that many nonprofit groups have benefited from this program. Approximately $52.9 million has been distributed to about 5,031 applicants in the past three years. For example, in the member's constituency there is a group that provides support for a learning environment for children with cancer and other serious illnesses, Jamie's preschool, which received $50,000 from the community spirit program. So we know this is a very important program for Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw.

Inspection of Long-term Care Facilities

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In 2005 then Auditor General Fred Dunn found unsafe and degrading conditions in the province's long-term care facilities. Some centres used restraints without authorization. Half of the facilities visited did not ensure annual medical exams, and the majority were not following medication rules. To the minister of health: why has the minister not achieved consistent inspection and enforcement of basic service standards in the province's long-term facilities?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, in fact, the province has made great progress since the Auditor General's report in 2005. While we have worked to ensure the appropriate application of standards, we're currently doing some of what I think is very promising work to harmonize the inspection process, that often creates a burden on both patients and families, residents and families, and staff who operate these facilities.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, what proportion of institutions now have achieved the standards of inspection and enforcement?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the inspections are carried out on a periodic basis, as the hon. member well knows. To my knowledge, all facilities in Alberta at this time are meeting the standards that are required, both for continuing care accommodation standards and continuing care health standards. Where there are deviations or where, more often, there are recommendations for improvement, I have every confidence those are being acted upon promptly and appropriately.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, that's not consistent with the most recent Auditor General's report. Given the string of broken promises, what confidence can Alberta seniors have that they will be cared for appropriately?

Mr. Horne: Well, I don't know specifically which recommendation the hon. member is referring to. What I can tell you is that the last Auditor General's report expressed satisfactory progress in most cases on the recommendations upon which we had been asked to follow up. We are not satisfied, obviously, with only a satisfactory rating. There is room for improvement. In fact, Mr. Speaker, we're attempting to create a culture of continuous quality improvement.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Accessibility of Medical Education

Mrs. Ady: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As someone who's watching a hospital rise up in the south of Calgary, I eagerly await its opening this spring. I know one of the questions I get asked is: what about doctors? Today in the House we have several students from Alberta medical schools. They've been visiting with us as members, and they've talked to us about some of their concerns, one of them being a lack of diversity in our medical schools. It seems that medical schools in particular seem out of reach for students. My questions today are to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

The Speaker: I think it's time for a question here.

Mrs. Ady: Why doesn't Alberta have specific financial supports?

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you for that question. I am very pleased to see the medical students here visiting today. It's always great to get feedback from the students.

You know, we have strong supports for our students in this province. First off, the taxpayer does pick up a major portion of medical school costs, but beyond that, it does leave the students with a significant cost to attend school. So we have in place student loans with flexible payback available, and we also have bursaries in place for aboriginal students. We continue to meet with the students to look for other options.

Mrs. Ady: Mr. Speaker, what about our friends in rural Alberta? Are we doing things for them when it comes to doctors in rural Alberta communities?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You know, it still is a challenge to attract doctors to rural settings. We are working to speed up the process to supply doctors into rural communities. We're increasing the number of doctors graduating. We're providing opportunities for rural clerkships and opportunities for students to get out and have an opportunity to sense what smaller communities are like to see if we can get more doctors to move into rural practices.

Mrs. Ady: Finally, Mr. Speaker, what that hospital also needs is medical professionals and nurses. Are we ensuring that we're going to have enough to fill these new hospital beds?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you. You know, it is important that we have all of the support staff, like practical nurses and nurses. We've expanded the programs across the province for nurses and for practical nurses. A good example is the new midwifery program at Mount Royal University, which this year had its first intake of midwives, with some of the positions protected for aboriginal midwives. This is a step forward within our medical system and will really provide an opportunity to enhance the training of these.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Grain Marketing

Ms. Notley: Thank you. This PC government showed their antidemocratic colours today when the agriculture minister put out a press release outlining his support for Harper's decision to slash the Canadian Wheat Board's single-desk selling power. Now the PCs are thumbing their nose at the 60 per cent of wheat farmers across the prairies who voted this summer to preserve the Canadian Wheat Board. To the Deputy Premier: why has this PC government, under a Premier who has yet to face the voters herself, arrogantly ignored what a majority of farmers say they need to run their operations?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, as someone who actually created a value-added industry in agriculture in this province, specifically not in a board grain because of the Canadian Wheat Board, I feel somewhat qualified to answer this question. We have had a number of referendums where farmers and producers have responded to the question: do you want choice? This is about choice. Alberta has been on the record for a number of years to provide producers with choice for their products. That's democratic.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, 60 per cent of farmers voted against it just three months ago. Given that family farmers are in the fight of their lives to keep their smaller operations afloat with heavy debts, high fuel prices, and corporate farms creeping in and given that the Wheat Board has for decades allowed the small family farmer to punch above their weight in massive international markets, why is this government abandoning family farmers in small communities in their fight for survival?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, a lot of good advertising in there for the Canadian Wheat Board, suggesting that they are the sole reason why the family farm survives today. I would suggest to you that the sole reason the family farm survives today is because of the quality of the farmer on that farm. They know where they can sell their product, and we want to give them the choice to show it.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that those high-quality farmers need, for instance, short branch lines and producer cars and that those will be at risk when the Canadian Wheat Board loses its single-desk selling power and given that these measures help farmers, especially in remote communities, why won't the minister admit that his government's attack on the Canadian Wheat Board isn't about offering more choices but, rather, about selling small farmers out to grain corporations?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would challenge the hon. member to have a discussion with me about how you work producer cars. As someone who used to sell grain through a producer car and arrange for those producer cars, I can actually tell you that giving the producers choice and giving private enterprise and some of the other smaller co-operatives an opportunity to sell on an international stage without going through the Wheat Board might just surprise the hon. member in that we're a little smarter than she thinks we are.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

AIMCo CEO Personal Investments

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, my questions are to the Minister of Finance. Earlier this month the Ontario Securities Commission issued what was described as a stunning warning about the operations of real estate in a wealth management company. The top executive at AIMCo has been involved in the centre of this controversy and what is apparently his personal investment. Is the minister concerned that the top official at AIMCo, which manages some $70 billion in money for the Alberta government, is embroiled as a director of a company under an OSC investigation?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, there were a lot of inflammatory words in that question, like "embroiled" and "controversy" and all of those other things, to try and make a story out of this particular incident. I was informed by the CEO of AIMCo about this unfortunate situation and have had a chance to have a look at it. I think that everything, as far as I'm concerned, the information that I have, is perfectly fine.

Dr. Taft: To the same minister, then: what rules are in place to govern the personal investment activities of AIMCo managers so that conflicts of interest with their public-sector investments and other problems such as lost credibility are avoided?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, again, in the question the member is talking about, he used the term "lost credibility." This particular organization is recognized in the short period of time that it's been in existence as one of the premier investment organizations in the country. I had an opportunity last week to meet with the board, and I can say that we've got an outstanding board and an outstanding CEO.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that before working at AIMCo, this same official managed a $35 billion public-sector fund in Australia that was caught in a scheme that lost $500 million in an investment that was made, according to investigations, on the basis of a Google search and a sales pitch, what oversight does this government have in place to protect Albertans' investments in AIMCo?

Mr. Liepert: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, I will look into the googling that the member did to see whether, in fact, it has any substance or not, but the organization is one that, I said earlier, is recognized internationally, and to somehow leave the impression that a particular individual within this organization can be misappropriating Albertans' funds is – actually, it borders, Mr. Speaker, on what I would say is – I'll leave it at that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Child Poverty

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Alberta is one of just three provinces that does not have a specific child poverty reduction plan in place. My constituents in Edmonton-Mill Woods are concerned about this. My first question is to the Minister of Human Services. What, in particular, is your ministry doing currently or planning to do to reduce and ultimately eliminate child poverty in Alberta?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are, really, essentially three elements to that. First and foremost, government policy in a number of areas addresses poverty's underlying causes, including health, unemployment, education, housing, and child care. Human Services as a department works with other departments in government and agencies to support those who need help and to assist them in acquiring the skills that they need to break the poverty cycle. Most importantly, we've been charged with developing a social policy framework for government which will look comprehensively at the issues of improving human dignity in the province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Providing child tax benefits is one of the most effective ways to reduce child and family poverty. Can your ministry introduce a child tax benefit for low-and modest-income families?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the things that we're doing within the department through Alberta Works is helping individuals get the skills that they need so they can raise their income level because a tax benefit doesn't help much if you don't have income to get that tax benefit against.

We could also indicate that Alberta has one of the highest personal exemptions and the lowest personal tax rate in the country. We offer parents the Alberta family employment tax credit to help them with the costs of raising their children, and our federal partners also offer all parents the universal child care benefit and the child tax benefit. So on the tax side I think there's a lot of work happening, but we can always look at that to see if it can be more effective.

Mr. Benito: Again to the same minister. Alberta does provide subsidies for child care, but still many low-income families cannot afford the current fee above the subsidy. What can your ministry do to address this?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, currently we provide subsidies for about 20,000 children to help their parents pay for quality child care. It's just one tool that we have in place to help lower income families with child care costs as they improve their work skills or take on the higher paying jobs that will help them support their families. We do closely monitor the child care fees, and we will continue to look at this issue because we want to ensure that quality, affordable child care is a high priority and will continue to be a high priority so that Albertans can support their families.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Medicine Hat.

Public Health Inquiry

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta Health Services continues to state that doctor advocacy is one of the most important ways in which health care can be improved. Under the proposed Health Quality Council of Alberta Act there is no evidence that the bullying and intimidation of our health care workers will be put to an end as the decision to call a judicial inquiry still needs to be made by either this cabinet or the Premier. My question is to the health minister. Will the health minister commit today and to all Albertans and to all health care workers to call a judge-led, independent inquiry?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, as you know and as the hon. member knows, this topic is the subject of a bill currently under debate in the House. I don't propose to waste a lot of the House's time delving into that today. What I will say to the hon. member is that that bill does provide for a judge-led health system inquiry.

Thank you.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, that bill also provides for them to have the panel submit when they want it, so maybe he'd like to do that.

Given that the transparency is necessary in an inquiry for Albertans to have their faith restored in the health care system, can this health minister guarantee that any type of inquiry held will be open to the media, it will be open to the public, and it will not be held behind closed doors?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, the answer to all three questions is yes. Once again, all those details are covered in the provisions of the bill currently under debate.

Mrs. Forsyth: Good. That's what it says; we can read that.

Given that this Premier talks a lot about trust and accountability, will the health minister tell Albertans whether this government will commit to calling a judge-led inquiry and have the results ready before the next election?

Mr. Horne: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad those details were readily available to the hon. member and that she had the benefit of reading the bill, which is under debate.

Once again, there are provisions in the bill that deal with that specific question, and the answer, again, is: the bill provides for a judge-led health system inquiry.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Cypress Hills Provincial Park

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past few years area ranchers, cottage owners, and park users have become increasingly concerned about the risk of fire in the Cypress Hills provincial park. This summer many were pleased to participate in information meetings that were held to discuss the integrated forest fire and management strategy for the park. My questions are for the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. A couple of weekends ago I visited the park and was surprised to see what appears to be a fairly extensive logging operation under way south of Elkwater. Mr. Minister, is this apparent destruction of our precious forest really necessary to protect it from fire?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. First, let me assure the hon. member that commercial logging is not permitted in provincial parks. We're selectively removing trees to prevent fires, and it's part of our integrated forest and fire management strategy. The local residents are very aware of the efforts that we're making. The townsite and park include hundreds of cabins, campsites, a hotel, restaurants, and other tourism facilities, and an uncontrollable fire would be catastrophic in that area.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that the old burn area at the top of Ferguson Hill appears to be the most impacted by the tree removal program, why remove all the trees in such a wide swath next to the road rather than simply removing potential fuel and cleaning out the underbrush?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, there are different methods that are used in different areas. In some areas underbrush removal is the answer, but in the area that the member is speaking about, underbrush is not the problem; the density of the forest is, so the removal will take place. Also, remediation will happen next year with new planting.

Mr. Renner: Given that most of the work appears to be in close proximity to the campgrounds and townsite, how can my constituents and, indeed, all Albertans be assured that the rest of this isolated forest in southeastern Alberta is protected from fire?

Mr. Hayden: Well, Mr. Speaker, we have of course worked very closely with SRD on fire prevention. We have mobile sprinkler systems that will ensure that we have a fast response, and we have programs and secure processes in place to be able to respond very quickly if a fire happens.

Funding for Private Schools

Mr. Hehr: During her leadership campaign the Premier openly expressed concerns that the continued development of private and charter schools placed our public education system at risk of becoming a second-tier option. Through discussions I've had with parents regarding this issue, some are choosing private schools as a result of lower class sizes. To the Minister of Education: given that most private schools have smaller class sizes, why does this government continue to subsidize these organizations with taxpayers' dollars instead of implementing the government's own Learning Commission report, that would see class sizes in the public system be smaller, a promise this government made back in 2003?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, this member continues to attack private schools and parents' choice for the last few days in this House already. The answer is simple. As a matter of fact, we are doing a province-wide review right now of the public education system, making sure that the public options always – always – produce the best possible education for our children. However, having said that, in this province it has always been and it will be for as long as this government is in place the situation where parents can choose what kind of a school they send their children to. There is nothing elitist about it. We simply support choice.

Mr. Hehr: Given that some private schools in Alberta charge parents up to $17,000 a year and that these schools still receive a large per-student public grant, doesn't this go against the minister's own mandate to create an inclusive education system?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, if these parents choose to spend that kind of money on their child's education and, I would argue, not getting any better results than our children are getting in the public school system, that is their choice. Their money; their choice. But at the same time I can guarantee all Albertans that having my child in a publicly funded, not private system: she is receiving as good an education, if not better, than in a private school. I'm exercising my choice; they're exercising theirs.

Mr. Hehr: Given that last week the minister was lauding a private Islamic school in his community, I was wondering if the minister knew that this school's advertising campaign to attract people away from the public education system is to openly state that they do not let special-needs students enrol. Why are we funding an organization like this that clearly is not interested in supporting an inclusive educational mandate?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, that is offensive to the operators of these private schools. We also have a Sikh school, a Khalsa school. The fact is that private schools are mandated to accept children as long as the parents choose to put their children into those schools. We have a variety of schools, but at no point in time is the funding of public education in any way sacrificed. As a matter of fact, these children that go to private schools – those buildings are built by private dollars, which offsets some of the costs for public education.

Peavine Métis Settlement Grade 7 Students

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, I've been receiving many queries from Peavine Métis settlement parents regarding choice of educational opportunities for their children in grade 7. They have met with administration, the local school board, and the corporate board with their request and have been refused to have their children bused from Peavine to High Prairie. My question is to the Minister of Education. Why are grade 8 students given the choice to attend school in High Prairie and allowed to ride the bus when grade 7 students do not have the same privilege? Why?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is a very good answer to that. The fact is that locally the school board is developing programs year by year. Right now grade 7 is available. Next year grade 8 will be available. The year after, grade 9 will be available. As education is being made available to these parents locally in their community, the school board simply is not interested in busing children to another, distant school. Where classes are available in that grade level in their local community, parents are invited to send kids to the local school. If they choose to exercise the choice, like in the previous question, to ship far away, they have to pay the cost of shipping.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, given the fact that the minister always talks about choice for parents and that the buses travelling from Peavine to High Prairie are only half-full of students, why then would Northland school division negate their use by the grade 7 students?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, these parents who insist on having their children move to distant schools and do not want to send them to a local school are welcome to speak with Northlands school division and see if they can find an accommodating agreement. At the end of the day it's a school board decision. Yes, choice comes with cost. The fact is that if you choose to ship your children to a school that's more distant simply by the virtue of choice of not sending them to your local school, there are certain costs that come along with it. Whether the school board is willing to pick up those costs: that's the school board's decision.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Gravel Extraction Management

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Ground and surface water interact, and alluvial aquifers, gravel beds, are key to this interaction. These shallow-bearing gravels bind surface and groundwater into one functioning body. Now, mining of gravel is covered by municipal, for zoning, and secondly, by environment and SRD. To the Minister of Environment and Water: since aquifers are so important to water cleanliness and movement, will this minister require local governments to consider environmental concerns in their initial stages of approval?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the member for the question. Certainly, we'll work with local municipalities as they work through some of these applications. Groundwater is certainly important for us. As we go through different groundwater studies in the province, that's part of it as well.

Thank you.

Dr. Swann: I think she said yes.

Ms Blakeman: No. I don't think she said anything.

Okay. To the same minister: will the minister ensure that regulation of water, ground or otherwise, is not included under the new energy superboard?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you. Well, I don't believe it's called a super energy board, first and foremost. I think we're looking at having a single regulator where all three – Environment, SRD, and the ERCB – together will regulate through that process. The government of Alberta will be responsible through those departments for policy setting. The regulator then will regulate and implement the policies that we put forward.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. That one she answered. It's the first time out of everything I've asked her.

This question is to the Minister of SRD. Given the Auditor General has been making recommendations on reclamation, security deposits, and other issues surrounding gravel mining for years, what is the department doing to better verify quantities of aggregate mined to ensure a vigorous reclamation process and that sufficient security deposits are being collected?

Mr. Oberle: Well, I guess we'll continue doing what we're doing. We have no outstanding recommendations from the Auditor General's office in our department, Mr. Speaker.*

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Postsecondary Education Preparedness

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There have been reports that Alberta students are losing out on university seats and scholarships because our standards are too tough and make it difficult for our students to compete against students from other provinces who may benefit from lower standards and grade inflation. My first question is to the Minister of Education. What processes are in place to ensure that Alberta students are not being shortchanged when it comes to scholarships and access to postsecondary seats when they graduate?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, this is actually a very good story. A study from Saskatchewan just showed a few days ago that for an Alberta grade 12 graduate, when she completes her first year of postsecondary education, her mark only drops by 6 per cent. That's the lowest difference in the country. In Ontario and other provinces their marks drop by as much as 20 per cent, which means that our students are ready for postsecondary education, and the mark they actually receive truly reflects their knowledge base and their understanding of curriculum.

Now, there is some twisted logic. Some are arguing that we should artificially inflate their marks so they can qualify for scholarships.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As a former teacher I do know we have the best education system in the province.

My next question, first supplemental, is to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. What is being done to make sure that Alberta students are given equal treatment by postsecondary institutions when compared to the rest of Canada?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, admission requirements are set by institutions, and they vary from program to program and from institution to institution. They set the standards there; they are not set by the ministry. More importantly, our goal is to prepare our students to succeed at postsecondary, so we give them the appropriate schooling and education so that they can be successful. We don't want young people entering postsecondaries and then dropping out of school. That's not a benefit to either of us. We want to prepare them properly and get them ready for postsecondary.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: That's it.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the Oral Question Period for today. Today 20 members were recognized. There were 114 questions and responses.

In 30 seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine and Members' Statements.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Catholic Social Services

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This year Catholic Social Services celebrates its 50th anniversary. Since 1961 this organization has continuously worked towards its mission, to enhance human well-being in a spirit of compassion, justice, freedom, and solidarity throughout central and northeastern Alberta.

While its goals are rooted in the Catholic teachings of social justice, Catholic Social Services assists and employs individuals regardless of faith and culture. I'm certain its founder, the late Monsignor William Irwin, would be proud to know that his vision for the organization remains strong and true today.

Catholic Social Services, as an accredited organization, assists over 60,000 individuals and families, Mr. Speaker, each year through its offices in Edmonton, Bonnyville, Cold Lake, Lloydminster, Red Deer, Wainwright, and Wetaskiwin. They offer over 100 different programs, including adoption support, vocational programs for individuals with disabilities, and immigrant settlement services.

Mr. Speaker, one of the fundamental characteristics of Albertans is their capacity for reaching out to help others. Indeed, this trait is a living example of the Alberta spirit, and it is truly exemplified in this organization as it works to identify and respond to the needs of communities throughout northern Alberta.

Catholic Social Services has a large annual fundraising initiative called the Sign of Hope campaign, which raises over $2 million each year. A remarkable 91 cents out of every dollar raised in that campaign goes directly to helping people in need. The Sign of Hope campaign is a tremendous undertaking which is supported by a strong team of community leaders who generously volunteer their time, talent, and resources.

Mr. Speaker, I am deeply moved by the impact this organization has made in assisting others over the past 50 years. I commend them for their deep compassion for those in need and for their tireless dedication to service in our communities. Their contribution is immeasurable.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine-Hat.

Mount Royal University/Medicine Hat College Joint University Degree Program

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On November 7 I had the privilege to attend the launch of a very exciting collaboration between Mount Royal University and Medicine Hat College. Together these two institutions launched a joint business administration degree, which will be offered at Medicine Hat College. Students will now be able to take the full business administration degree in Medicine Hat and at the end receive a Mount Royal degree.

I want to commend both Medicine Hat College and Mount Royal University for their enduring vision, exceptional leadership, and continued drive to help students in our community reach success. Mr. Speaker, I believe this speaks strongly to the idea that Alberta's postsecondary institutions need to collaborate and co-operate to create better opportunities for students in rural postsecondary institutions. This program is a shining example of that.

This program will do a lot for Medicine Hat: for businesses, for students, and for families. First, it will help employers in my region to have greater access to the skilled workers they're looking for. Second, it will allow more of our young people to take advantage of the educational opportunities they want right in the community they grew up in. It's good for families by allowing families to stay together while students pursue their education at home, and it reduces the financial burden that will accompany students studying away from home. Finally, Mr. Speaker, it fulfills one of the minister of advanced education's mandates, to encourage more students in rural communities to pursue a postsecondary education.

This approach will provide a framework through which the vision of Campus Alberta can be realized and be a template for other rural colleges as they seek to partner with universities across our province. This fulfills our government's commitment to working alongside our Campus Alberta partners to help institutions offer the programs students want, where and when they want them. It's our commitment to support the current and future needs of all our students, all the while building an innovative and skilled workforce for today and tomorrow.

I want to once again thank and congratulate everyone who has worked so hard to make this program a reality. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Foreign Qualifications Recognition

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Both government and Alberta employers often talk about an estimated labour shortage of 77,000 workers within the next decade. In fact, there's a good chance this number could rise substantially in the near future.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, immigration has been identified as an essential strategy among other initiatives that the government of Alberta has undertaken to address current and future labour market needs. The foreign qualifications recognition unit in the Human Services department has made great strides in ensuring our province benefits from new immigration and the talent it brings. The FQR's success over the past few years can be attributed to their ongoing dedication to collaboration and consultation with key stakeholders and ministries within government.

To date over $1.3 million has been dedicated to the FQR innovation fund. This government program allows professional regulatory organizations to bring forward funding proposals to improve delivery of services. The commitment to work together with professional regulatory organizations, postsecondary institutions, employers, settlement agencies, and other partners provides the foundation for meeting our current and future labour market needs.

Mr. Speaker, having newcomers work in occupations where they are qualified is important to workers, and it also provides a major benefit for Alberta and the economy as we try to fill these vacant positions with qualified workers. The FQR's focus on collaboration rather than legislation is just some of the recent progress that has been made by the FQR and the government of Alberta.

I look forward to reading the FQR's 2011 progress report, which will further highlight additional achievements and goals and which will be released in the coming months. I applaud the foreign qualifications recognition unit.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Quilt Donations for Slave Lake Fire Victims

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week our colleague the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake paid tribute to the many good Samaritans that provided all kinds of assistance to the residents of Slave Lake during and in the aftermath of the devastating forest fire that destroyed half of their town and left thousands homeless.

This afternoon I'd like to relate a specific story about a group from Ontario and one individual in particular who took the initiative and came to the aid of Slave Lake residents. Lynne Carr, a former resident of Devon, Redwater, and Edmonton but who now lives in Oakville, Ontario, is a member of the Oakville quilters league. When they heard about the Slave Lake disaster, they set out to sew 120 quilts: large quilts, small quilts, quilts for babies – you name it – all shapes, sizes and patterns. Through the kind auspices of WestJet airlines the quilts were all shipped to Edmonton, where I picked them up along with their master organizer Lynne Carr, and in due course we set off to Slave Lake to deliver the quilts.

The ladies at the local quilt shop were ecstatic to receive such a large quantity of quilts which would fulfill their pledge to provide a quilt to every man, woman, and child who had lost their home. One box was immediately opened, and they hung them up on every wall, easel, desk, and door to display them. Little did I know it at the time, but Lynne had also arranged with some of her former nursing classmates from all across Canada to prepare quilts and ship them direct to Slave Lake, where they arrived at a later date.

Mr. Speaker, the object of this little story is that our country is so blessed by so many kind-hearted individuals that will always rally to the call when disaster strikes. My heart and the heart of the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake and I'm sure the hearts of all those residents of Slave Lake go out to Lynne Carr and the Oakville quilters league for their thoughtfulness and generosity in Slave Lake's time of need.

A special thanks also goes out to WestJet airlines for flying the quilts out to Edmonton at no cost.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As chair of the Select Special Information and Privacy Commissioner Search Committee I'm pleased to table five copies of the committee's final report, dated November 28, 2011, recommending that Ms Jill Clayton be appointed the Information and Privacy Commissioner.

2:50                    Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, then Calgary-Currie, then Edmonton-Strathcona.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the appropriate number of documents relating to one of my questions today. There are actually two. One is a letter that relates directly to the question I raised today, and the other is a news article directly related to the question I raised today.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling five copies of a letter from the mayor of Calgary expressing his support for private member's Bill 205, the Municipal Government (Delayed Construction) Amendment Act, 2011, which I believe will come up for debate this afternoon.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. First, I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a newspaper editorial concerning the process and deadlines involved in the construction of a new Royal Alberta Museum.

Secondly, I'd like to table the appropriate numbers of copies of a blog, which includes information and photographs which were referred to by my colleague the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood in his questions earlier today.

The Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to section 17(2) of the Lobbyists Act the chair is tabling five copies of an investigation report from the Ethics Commissioner dated November 28, 2011, with respect to activities of the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers, an organizational lobbyist registered under the Lobbyists Act.

Are there others? The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Horne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter to the editor published in the Calgary Herald, dated November 27, 2011. The letter is written by Dr. Leland Baskin and Paula Hall. They are writing on behalf of the hundreds of staff and physicians who provide pathology lab services through Calgary Laboratory Services. The letter outlines the many benefits and quality validation procedures under way in connection with this transfer of service.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on a purported point of order.

Point of Order False Allegations

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The portion of the standing orders that I would cite are 23(h), (i), and (j), probably most specifically (h) and (i), and it relates to the response from the Minister of Finance to questions I asked concerning AIMCo. These are questions I took great care in drafting. The minister, as I heard it, alleged that I claimed the official, who I had been very careful not to name, the official at AIMCo to whom I was referring, had misappropriated funds. The minister alleged that I made that claim. It's a completely false statement from the minister. If that were to be done, that would be a criminal act. I was simply asking what safeguards the government has in place.

My questions were: what rules are in place? What oversight does this government have in place? I never ever suggested and, quite frankly, even thought that there were any funds misappropriated. It's particularly disturbing coming from a Minister of Finance, who carries such responsibilities for the words he utters. I believe it's pretty clear he was making allegations against me that were completely false. He was imputing false or unavowed motives to me, which is 23(i), and frankly under 23(j) it was, I believe, abusive language of a nature likely to create disorder, and that is the reason that I called a point of order.

Thank you.

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I don't think there's a purported point of order here at all. What the member did – and, you know, this happens very often in this particular Assembly, and I think, frankly, it's sad because, maybe with the exception of the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar and the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, these kinds of things seem to come regularly from members of the opposition. We use someone out there who can't stand in this Assembly and defend themselves and make implications. The implication was clearly there in that member's question. I'll have a look at the Blues tomorrow and determine whether or not there was something inappropriate, but my recollection was that there was not. It was an attempt to clear the air for this particular individual because that member left the air very fuzzy. So there was no point of order here, and I hope you rule that way.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Deputy Government House Leader on this point.

Mr. Denis: Yes. Thank you for recognizing me, Mr. Speaker. I just want to add to the hon. Minister of Finance's comments here. The Member for Edmonton-Riverview had pointed out that the hon. minister had used abusive or insulting language. I've done just a quick review of Beauchesne's 489 and thereabouts. There's nothing that the Minister of Finance had actually indicated that was abusive towards that member or that other individual. Rather, he was simply trying to clarify the comments that were made, and I think that, if anything, he had a duty to do so as a member of this House.

The Speaker: From time to time there are questions of a certain nature that do provide for a considerable degree of innuendo. Without any doubt when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview presented his first question, he referred to an individual as a top executive at AIMCo and then further went on as having been "involved in the centre of this controversy."

Then the Minister of Finance's responses were a lot of inflammatory words: "embroiled," "controversy". Then the hon. minister in a further answer says: "in the question the member is talking about, he used the term 'lost credibility'."

Then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview goes on to say, "this same official managed a $35 billion public-sector fund in Australia that was caught in a scheme that lost $500 million."

Then the hon. minister went on to say:

I will look into the googling . . . to see whether, in fact, it has any substance or not, but the organization is one that, as I said earlier, is recognized internationally, and to somehow leave the impression that a particular individual within this organization can be misappropriating Albertans' funds actually is – actually, it borders, Mr. Speaker, on what I would say is – I'll leave it at that.

I think we've had just a bit of a clearing up here in the last little exchange, and we're going to move forward with Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Seniors.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At this time I'd ask the House for unanimous consent – is it a good time to do this, sir?

The Speaker: Yes, it is the most appropriate time. The hon. Minister of Seniors is requesting unanimous consent. This is an administrative matter. If I understand this correctly, the hon. minister – and you'll explain this yourself – is listed in the Order Paper on page 15 for today with respect to being the author of private member's Bill 207, Seniors' Property Tax Deferral Act. Since that act was introduced, the hon. member is no longer a private member; he's now a minister of Executive Council. I believe, sir, what you're doing is asking for unanimous consent to have the authorship of this bill transferred to another member.

Mr. VanderBurg: That's right.

The Speaker: Please stand up and say that, and then we'll see if the members agree.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you for that clarification, sir. Yes, indeed, I'd like to ask the House for unanimous consent to switch the sponsorship of private member's Bill 207, Seniors' Property Tax Deferral Act, to the MLA for Red Deer-North as this bill may be coming up for debate in the House next Monday, sir. Bill 207 would establish a property tax deferral program for seniors in Alberta.

The Speaker: You don't have to explain the content of the bill.

Mr. VanderBurg: I just want to make sure we're clear.

The Speaker: No, no. This is the authorship of the bill.

Mr. VanderBurg: Okay. Thank you.

The Speaker: When the draw occurred, the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne won the position to have private member's Bill 207. Since that time, he's no longer a private member. He's now become a member of Executive Council. The bill is listed as 207. Potentially it will come up for discussion and introduction next Monday. The request is: can the authorship of the bill be transferred to another member, in this case the hon. Member for Red Deer-North? So I will ask the question, just one question. Is anyone opposed? If so, say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: The records will show that that has happened.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you.

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 203

Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed to move third reading of Bill 203.

Mr. Rodney: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise and move third reading of Bill 203, the Alberta Get Outdoors Weekend Act.

I would like to sincerely thank all members for the productive and thoughtful debate we've engaged in throughout the process. I truly appreciate the 100-plus organizations from across our fine province who have taken the time to officially endorse the concept of establishing the Alberta get outdoors weekend. It's been exciting to witness all the support that this bill has received over the past couple of years, as a matter of fact.

Through second reading and Committee of the Whole we better examined what this act could achieve in Alberta, and these debates offered us a long list of reasons as to how the Alberta get outdoors weekend will benefit each of us. We discussed the fact that establishing this annual event would set a great example for our residents about the importance of participating in physical activity, and I trust that we can all agree that GO weekend is an excellent way to showcase all the natural wonders that Alberta has to offer.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

It will also promote additional internal tourism in our beautiful province. After all, many people who are new to Alberta and have not yet taken the time to experience our incredible backyard will have a kick-start to do exactly that. The opportunities to get outdoors in our province are so vast that even those who were born and raised here can always find new sites to discover.

Mr. Speaker, during the debate we also heard about the incredible work that countless organizations will do to promote the day which will encourage active living in Alberta. Alberta get outdoors weekend will afford these outstanding groups an invaluable venue to educate Albertans on the services and activities that they offer, and it will also provide an annual occasion for valuable collaboration between these groups.
