Mr. Liepert: I don't have those numbers right in front of me, Mr. Chairman, but I'll take the question, and we'll respond appropriately so that he has the precise information.

I guess I just want to make two comments. There was a lot of rambling going on before that last question, and I'd like to respond to some of it. The member talked about: if we do what we are proposing today with transmission, industry is just going to pick up and move to B.C. Well, maybe the member should take a look and see whether the B.C. government has not done exactly what we've done, and that is to determine the need for transmission. The Ontario government has done the same thing. So for the member to say that somehow we're doing something that no other province is doing is just false.

He's sort of mentioned a few times now, trying to relate things to the royalty review that was undertaken – I wasn't in this portfolio at the time. But I do recall that the royalty review – and I remember when it was brought to caucus – was actually brought there and supported by the former finance minister who, I happened to read in the paper the other day, is the newest adviser to the Wildrose caucus. So if the member wants to continue to ramble on about the former royalty review, I'd suggest he sit down and have a good, long conversation with the former minister of finance who's now the big supporter of this particular group of people.

Mr. Hinman: I appreciate that. We're going off a little bit, but that's okay. It's interesting that he was the only former finance minister that's balanced a budget over there. We do have some members over there that are coming to the light and leaving this sinking ship. I don't think you have anything to brag about that your former new royalty regime was a great bonus for Albertans; it wasn't. It was a major heart attack that you caused to the industry . . .

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Hon. members, let's get back to the estimates.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

Anyway, to ask the question, then, because you didn't answer it, on the 180 days: could the minister please tell me how long it is to have the same regulatory questions answered in Saskatchewan, B.C., or the U.S.?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, with all due respect, these are the Alberta estimates, not the B.C. estimates or the Saskatchewan or the U.S. estimates. I think I said to him that I would get the information as best we could in writing. I don't have that information in front of me.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Hinman: Okay. Thank you. I thought that you would do an assessment, though, an evaluation to see if we're competitive or not. That's what you failed to do with the new royalty framework, and you're failing to do it with this. You're not doing the estimates to see what the costs are. I don't think that you have any idea what the transmission costs are in other provinces and in the States versus what they are here in Alberta. You need to do those cost estimates.

I want to switch because we're running out of time here.

Mr. Liepert: Can I get clarity, please? Can I get some clarity? I thought you were asking us about the regulatory relative to oil and gas as it applied to other provinces. You've just sort of rambled into transmission now. I have no idea what you're asking for, so maybe you could clearly state what you're asking for, and I'll get you the information.

Mr. Hinman: Well, you could go back to Hansard. I think it'll be there. But the reason why I'm running out is because we're literally out of time. Twenty minutes does not do any justice to asking questions.

To quickly switch over to the support of large-scale carbon capture and storage – again, a major concern that the government here is picking winners and losers – he talks about kick-starting this industry. How much money is going to have to go in after the $2 billion? Is that the last amount that's needed to go forward? If, in fact, we're wanting to reduce CO<sub>2</sub> emissions and overall emissions from vehicles and everything else, has the government even looked at the natural gas strategy to see the difference it would make in reducing the use of low-carbon fuels like natural gas and propane versus their program right now to put ethanol into our gas and reduce it a miniscule amount? Switching to propane and natural gas would be tax dollars, money far better spent than it would be for carbon capture and storage.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, we are working with the natural gas industry in the province to explore some of these options. I know that this is questions from there and answers from here, but I'd be curious to know whether the member would support the government substantially subsidizing the infrastructure that would be required to move to a natural gas fuelled province.

Mr. Hinman: It would certainly be something where the government could commission some of their researchers to see what it is, but I think, more importantly, if you looked at the new generic tax frame, if we could have the incentives there like we did to incent the oil sands development, that would in fact see a major boom if we quit taxing it. Another area that I see in the numbers is the fees that are going to be collected from industry of $143 million, I believe, going up to $150 million. Could the minister elaborate on why that fee is going up? Is that increased business? Are you raising the fees? Why is that fee going up? It's just another tax on industry.

Mr. Liepert: Could I have you repeat it? I was so engaged with whether or not in the budget that the Wildrose put out the other day, they had budgeted to say that we should invest in infrastructure for natural gas fuel. I'm not sure I saw that in there.

Mr. Hinman: We didn't say for you to invest in it. We said: create a fiscal regime that would do that.

On page 56 with your revenue you have industry levies and licences going up from $142 million to $150 million. What's the reason for . . . [Mr. Hinman's speaking time expired]

The Deputy Chair: The hon. leader of the fourth party.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to ask the Minister of Energy some questions. I know he's been anxiously waiting. I mean, he couldn't even wait. I'm happy to go back and forth. I do appreciate very much the political shots, but if you could mix the odd answer in with them, I'd be very appreciative of that, Mr. Minister.

I want to start with performance measures. This year there are only eight. Some of the measures that have disappeared include upstream oil and gas investment, ethane demand in Alberta, ethanol production in Alberta, biodiesel production in Alberta, and the number of microgeneration sites. But the plan has kept the measure in which Albertans assess their own knowledge of the energy industry on a scale of 1 to 7. So it seems to me that we have eliminated a lot of very relevant, hard data information that would allow people to track the progress of the energy industry in this province, and we've retained an extremely subjective and, I think some would argue, relatively unimportant measures. Why have you eliminated those performance measures? Why, specifically, is there no performance measure actually relating to renewable energy?

Mr. Liepert: Well, the member raised a good point. I think what we need to try to do in government – it's one of our objectives – is to focus and streamline. There's no question that when you have a myriad of performance measures, I think you need to focus on what your core business is and continue to ensure that you meet those objectives. Now, that being said, we will on a periodic basis ensure that those kinds of things that we have been measuring in the past are reported in some form.

The hon. member has unlimited ability to ask written questions on the Order Paper. If he wanted to put those on the Order Paper, I would be more than pleased to respond to him in an appropriate way as we move through the year.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I know that the minister is expecting me to ask about royalties. I hate to disappoint, so I'd just like to indicate that since 1997 oil sands royalties and land sales have totalled about $20 billion, and the total value of the bitumen produced in that time is $205 billion. Now, in 2009, the worst part of the economic downturn, a low estimate of oil sands companies' pre-tax profits was $14.3 billion, and in that same year the companies only paid $2.2 billion in royalties and land sales. The bottom line here is that the government's share of oil sands revenue has averaged 8 per cent since 1997. I'm specifically leaving aside conventional oil and gas and unconventional gas. I'm just talking about oil sands. I've actually gotten used to saying oil sands, too, so I'm sure you think that's progress. I would like to know why the minister is satisfied with capturing such a small amount of the value, a small amount of the economic rent coming out of the oil sands.

The two original sites, Suncor and Syncrude, were called by Pedro van Muers, who was a consultant on the original royalty project under Lyle Oberg, now with the Alberta Party . . . [interjection] Sorry. I apologize. The Wildrose Party. When he increased the royalties, you know, I just think that – where's my train of thought going here? Sorry. I shouldn't have gotten diverted by your tactic about Lyle Oberg.

Basically, what Pedro van Muers said – there it is – was that Syncrude and Suncor are two of the most profitable enterprises on the face of the planet.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, a point of order has been called.

Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you have a point of order?

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: Yes. Absolutely, Mr. Chair. The last finance minister to balance the budget, Dr. Oberg, clearly did not raise the royalties. Royalty rates were raised under this government after Dr. Oberg had retired. He did put the committee together, but the facts show . . . [interjections]. Yes they do. Be truthful for once in your life. Be truthful. They were not raised by him. They were raised by this government. You can chuckle all you want, but that's the truth and that's the fact.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, I don't notice a citation, and I don't think there's a point of order here. He's made a comment. I appreciate the comment, but we'll carry on.

The hon. leader of the fourth party.

Debate Continued

Mr. Mason: Or you can even say NDP. We don't mind.

Mr. Chairman, just to that last point, I was actually here when that happened, and I know who was in charge. You know, obviously the Premier made him do it, but he did do it.

The question, really, to the minister is: why are we settling for such a small percentage of the value of this tremendous resource, considering all the advantages we have? We're well located to American markets. They're extremely concerned about the security of their energy supply. We provide that. We have a third of the oil reserves that are available. We have huge advantages. It really seems to me that we could leverage them far more than we're actually doing.

Mr. Liepert: The leader of the fourth party, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, if I can call him that – I can remember that – referenced one of the members of the Royalty Review Panel and some of the comments that he made. You know, I don't agree with many of those comments from the Royalty Review Panel, which was set up by Dr. Oberg. I don't happen to agree with those comments, and I don't know that they were actually factual.

What we do have to remember with the oil sands is that it's a huge upfront capital investment, so we have a royalty regime in place that pays a lower front-end royalty till capital costs are recovered. As we move forward, we're now seeing many of the smaller plants reaching payout, and when they reach payout, they pay a much higher royalty rate. I think that the amount of investment that we've seen in the oil sands, the number of jobs that have been created for many of, I'm sure, the constituents of the hon. member, trades folks, I think speak for themselves. We're not going to apologize for our regime that has encouraged investment, that has put in place literally hundreds of thousands of jobs and, frankly, is driving the Canadian economy today.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. And so much of the value is leaving the province.

I want to ask now about the negotiations with Suncor and Syncrude that took place a few years ago when the new royalty regime was brought in, when they were entitled by the previous agreements to go to bitumen valuation for their royalties, and the government undertook to negotiate with them to raise that. I think they got an agreement with one to raise it half of what the drop was, and then I don't think they could get a deal with the second one. I can't remember if it was Syncrude or Suncor. Did that end the deal that was made with the first one? What's the status of the government's attempts to negotiate a higher royalty revenue for those two plants?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Chairman, I have to respond to the very first comment that the member raised. It was something to the effect that all of this benefit of oil sands development is leaving the province. Well, if the member would look in the estimates, our three-year business plan is showing that the forecast for bitumen royalties in this particular budget year is over $4 billion. It increases to 5 and a half billion dollars in '12-13 and over $7 billion in '13-14. I don't know how he can say with a straight face that the benefits are leaving the province. The benefits are clearly there. In fact, Mr. Chairman, I can't calculate it in my head, but I would suggest that that equivalent is probably somewhere in the range of a 10 to 15 per cent sales tax. I know that the particular party that this member represents loves to tax people, but this government doesn't like to tax people. We like a fair investment and a fair return on what that investment is giving its shareholders, and I believe that's what we have in place.

I will take way less time to answer the last part of the question. We have amending agreements with both Suncor and Syncrude. We are currently in negotiations with both of those companies. There is a process laid out in the amending agreement that in the event we can't reach agreement, there's a process to determine the final results. We hope we don't need to go there. What we want to do is reach a fair agreement for both those companies and for the residents of Alberta. That's where we are right now.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, to clarify, he spent most of his time responding to my comment and very little time responding to the question, but I do appreciate the response I did get to that.

I want to ask a little bit about bitumen. I'd like to know how the government establishes the royalties on bitumen and whether or not bitumen royalties relative to other royalties on unconventional crude can be used as a tool to encourage more upgrading and more value-added in Alberta.

Mr. Liepert: Well, part of how you establish the true value of bitumen is exactly what I just said we're going through with Suncor and Syncrude right now. We have a regime in place for the other producers. But we have to remember that there is no template out there to use to establish these baseline prices, so there's a lot of negotiation with the companies. That, as I said, is where we are with Suncor and Syncrude right now.

What the member I think is asking is for us to put some sort of penalty in place with industry that if they don't upgrade in Alberta, they pay a penalty. We simply don't agree with that. We believe that there's a better way. In my answer to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo I talked about our BRIK program. We believe that's a better program, and we will continue to strive to meet our projections in our energy strategy to have 60-plus per cent of our bitumen upgraded in the province.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I hate to make more comments because I know that that's what's going to eat up the response time, but I can't help it either. It really seems to me that, in fact, it's a legitimate tool to increase value-added. I mean, it's not a penalty. It's a royalty rate, and you can set royalty rates in order to accomplish objectives of public policy. I think that that's really what that is.

I want to ask about the whole question of the very large investment that is being proposed for transmission infrastructure. Now, even if we use the minister's numbers of $4 million or $5 million . . .

Mr. Liepert: Billion.

Mr. Mason: Billion, yes. Sorry.

. . . and relate that to the total value of existing infrastructure for the entire province, which is $2 billion, you're more than doubling. If you use some of the other numbers, going a little farther into the future, you know, it's even more. My constituents have a really hard time, when this comes up, understanding what we're possibly doing with such a massive increase because the projections for electricity use and production in the province don't bear out that kind of an increase. It really strikes people that there must be some other reason for this massive increase. I know that the minister denies that this infrastructure will be used for the export of power from the province to the United States, but it certainly seems excessive for domestic use even if we see continued growth.

With respect to the question raised by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore around the generation proposed by Enmax, it seems to me that if that went ahead regardless of loss of efficiency because of altitude, that would be more than compensated by line loss from the Wabamun area, and it would eliminate the need for a significant amount of that transmission. So the question is, you know: why are we going towards this massive increase in this?

The second question which I'll throw in is: what is the reason behind the policy decision that electricity consumers will have to pay this? It's not necessarily absolutely required that that should happen because, as the minister knows, the previous policy was to share the costs between producers and consumers. So that is a policy option, and the question is why consumers have to pay the full freight on this multibillion-dollar project.

Mr. Liepert: Well, I know that this member comes from a party that doesn't understand economics all that well. He says: why does the consumer have to pay? But I ask the question: if the consumer doesn't pay, who will? I mean, it boggles my mind how you can have the thought that somehow the consumer ultimately doesn't pay. I don't know how I could answer that question any better than that.

Now, he didn't mention it, but he will always drag out the bogeyman about us exporting power. Well, you know what? I hate to poke a pin in his balloon, but we actually have right now a proposal to construct a line from Montana into Alberta. I'm sure he's going to be running back to his researchers to say: how can we say that that's for export? You know what? It's not. The market is here in Alberta, and the reason you've got the private sector prepared to build a line from a wind farm in Montana into Alberta is because they see a growing market, and they're prepared to invest their dollars because they believe it's a good long-term investment and that the market will be here long term.

We can only as a government make our decisions based on the best expert advice we can get. It's not from 70 members of caucus sitting around making a decision; it's from the best long-term assessment we can have, and that comes through the Alberta Independent System Operator. All of the projections that they have presented to us show significant growth in the economy. We're talking about a transmission system that's going to serve Alberta for the next 30, 40 years. So I don't know how I could answer the question any more than to say that the need is there, the determination is there, and long term it will be proven to be the right decision.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. Well, I'm going to take the bait, I guess. You know, in terms of the understanding of economics, it consistently amazes me how the proponents of free enterprise fail to understand how it actually works. The supply and demand issue is a very interesting one. If you don't let the power companies pass on all of their costs to the consumers, then they have to take it out of profits. That's just the way it works.

As well, there is elasticity of demand, just a little economics lesson for the minister, and at a certain price people stop buying the goods or they use less of the goods or they find substitutes for the goods. Therefore, there is a limit on what price you can raise it to. Then that limitation means that your profits are less. So there is an offset between the profits of a corporation and the price that consumers pay. The whole concept that the consumer will have to pay everything in the end is an absolute myth. It can come from profits instead of from the consumer.

You know, I know the Tories don't get this stuff because they don't actually read economics.

Thanks, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie. I assume you're going to use your 20 minutes back and forth?

Mr. Taylor: In a back and forth if the minister is amenable to that.

The Deputy Chair: Okay.

Mr. Taylor: I don't know where to begin now. Let's pick up on a little bit of this conversation about the transmission grid as proposed, where there's massive popular doubt that that carrying capacity of electricity transmission is needed in this province. I was talking to somebody from the REDA group the day before yesterday, and he was suggesting to me that the 500 kV line that you want to build to the Industrial Heartland is projected, you know, 15 to 20 years out to still only be operating at 30 per cent capacity.

We have this issue of the customer having to pay the full freight for these lines, which they don't particularly want in many, many cases, and it seems to me that the notion that the customer has to pay – because the minister said: well, if the customer is not going to pay, then who is going to pay? If the customer is going to pay, the customer normally gets some choice in the matter in terms of saying: well, I don't want that level of service. You know, a discussion about free enterprise around what is essentially a transmission monopoly doesn't really seem to make a whole lot of sense.

Actually, if the minister insists on going ahead and building this gold-plated transmission grid, I'd be okay with him exporting a bunch of power down to California and making the Californians pay for our lines. So to come back to this issue of power export, which the minister kind of dodged in his back and forth with the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, you made the point about a line from Montana to import power to Alberta. Are you categorically denying, then, that we're ever going to export power after we get this grid built?

Mr. Liepert: Well, all I can say is that this line is not being built with the export of power in mind. I don't know how anybody could stand in this House and say that for all time there would never be export of power. That would be absurd. But in the 20-year plan that the Alberta Electric System Operator has produced, there is no contingency for the export of power. That's as specific as I can be around the export.

The member made a couple of comments relative to information that somebody had mentioned to him that was fact. I don't know if it is fact or it isn't fact, but I can say that there is a reason why we have something that is called the independent Alberta Electric System Operator. It is to give us the best long-term advice that we can get, unbiased, and that is the information we're getting from our Electric System Operator. I have to and I would assume the member would have to trust those who deal in this business every day of their lives, and that's exactly what they are established to do. I know there are comments out there that the line is only going to be half used. This comment. That comment. I can only take the advice of the experts, and that's what we're doing.

I think that answers the two questions.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you. Mr. Chair, I think the amount of controversy that has developed around this transmission grid as proposed by the AESO, if I were in the minister's shoes, which I'm not, might prompt me to seek a second opinion.

Goal 3 in your business plan is: "Lead and support the development of energy-related infrastructure, innovation, markets and regulatory systems." Under that is 3.1: "Energy related infrastructure is built and sustained to support government objectives." Shouldn't it be built and sustained to support the citizens of Alberta? I mean, what's this: support government objectives? Are government objectives more important than the needs and the wants of the people who live here? The people give government the mandate, not the other way around, Minister.

Mr. Liepert: One of the government's objectives under this minister is to keep the lights on, and this is one way we're going to achieve that objective. I would think that if our objectives and the citizens of Alberta's objectives are clearly out of line, we won't be government for very long. So I don't know why it would be different in line.

The one thing that I think both of these hon. members would be interested to know – I think both have expressed interest in the past about a greener production of electrical generation – is that one of those critical transmission lines is across the southern part of the province. It will ensure that all of the wind power that's developed in the southern part of the province, in constituencies where not a lot of people live, gets to the major markets. I did want to add that, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Fair point. It's also a fair point that that transmission grid can bring a lot of power from coal-fired power plants west of the city of Edmonton to where the people live as well. You know, the coal-fired plant does not really fit with my definition, anyway, of greener and cleaner energy generation.

Now, maybe carbon capture and storage can help out somewhat in this area, and I'll ask a couple of questions about that. Referring you to the statement of operations on page 133 of the estimates, you're putting $73 million this year into carbon capture and storage, which is a significant jump up from the $2 million that you spent in this fiscal year just coming to an end. You know, you budgeted a hundred million dollars for that a year ago. The numbers are bouncing all around the place. In 2009-10 you spent $538,000. So what's going on here? Are you really going to spend $73 million on carbon capture and storage this year? What are we going to get with that?

That's question number one. Well, you know what? I'll let you answer that question first.

Mr. Liepert: I think it is important. Before I lose track of what the question is, the answer relative to the $73 million is that we believe that is an accurate number.

Let me just explain a little bit about the other numbers. Certainly, when we launched into this and did our three-year business plan two years ago, there were some assumptions that would have been made. Number one, the assumption was that by now we would have had a federal and probably even a U.S. price on carbon. That has not happened. That has factored significantly not only into the economics of these projects but also into the timing of these projects. The ability to actually negotiate an agreement with these private projects and get them out the door has taken longer because of some of these external factors. That's the reason why the funds have been reprofiled into future years.

Right now we have the one project, that we announced a couple of weeks ago, with Enhance Energy, off the upgraders east of Edmonton. That project is ready to go. We believe and I'm hopeful that before year-end all three other projects will be ready to be announced. Again, we are in this kind of a grey zone, where we are waiting for something to happen at a national level around the price of carbon.

Mr. Taylor: So the $73 million, then, is a projection for this year, which may or may not come true depending on which way the wind is blowing, all of those issues?

Mr. Liepert: No.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. I guess the other question I wanted to ask is around alternatives to carbon capture and storage. It really is better if you can avoid producing the CO<sub>2</sub> in the first place than it is to have to go out and recapture it after you've made it and pump it underground somewhere, unless you're going to use it for, you know, tertiary oil recovery in conventional reserves, where there's still up to two-thirds of the capacity of that reserve underground because only the first third has been, quote, easy to get out. I can see the application there.

The rest of carbon capture and just pumping it underground and storing it somewhere till the end of time: I'd rather we didn't make the carbon dioxide in the first place if that was possible, which seems to connect with the very, very low price of natural gas. You are forecasting a low price this year, $3.45 a gigajoule. The price looks like it's going to come in for the last fiscal year at $3.26. You estimated four and a quarter a year ago, so you're a bit off on that one. You are forecasting the price to go up over the next two years to maybe $5 a gigajoule, but I think the minister would agree there are a lot of gas producers who will say that it's pretty hard to make a buck at below $7. Correct?

We've got all of this excess supply of natural gas on the North American continent. We're having a hard time getting our gas to market. There are some competitive disadvantages to our gas because it has to be transported so far to market. There are alternatives that we could be pursuing, I think, a little more aggressively, whether that's using natural gas to generate electricity, whether that's exploring the possibilities with natural gas as a motor fuel. It's cleaner. It's not a hundred per cent clean, but it's at least a 40 per cent improvement over coal in terms of burning a fossil fuel to generate electricity. Are we being aggressive enough, Minister, in terms of trying to find alternatives to the heaviest producers and emitters of carbon dioxide in the first place?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think the member is quite aware that we don't determine the investment in electrical generation. Clearly, we're seeing that the next iteration of power generation is probably going to be natural gas. As I said earlier in answer to one of the questions, TransAlta is planning Sundance 7 and is planning it to be a natural gas fired generating plant. That being said, the member, I think, alluded to it but didn't say specifically that we should be under no illusion that natural gas meets federal emission controls. Again, in the absence of what those rules are federally – I'm not the investor, but I'm sure that some investors are a little skeptical of investing a lot of money in a natural gas plant that's going to have a 30- or 40-year amortization and within months of making that investment the federal government comes in and changes the rules.

We certainly are encouraging it where we can. I said earlier that we're working with the natural gas industry relative to: what is it we can do? What is it we can collectively work towards to get a better usage of natural gas? You know, as a motor fuel it takes significant infrastructure. Is that something that Albertans want us as government to be plowing a lot of money into, to develop the infrastructure, or is that something the private sector should do? These are the kinds of questions we're trying to answer.

Mr. Taylor: Again, fair comment. But you're pouring a fair amount of public money into another very expensive infrastructure, which is the capture, transport, and storage of carbon dioxide. So you've chosen one as opposed to the other. There certainly are fleet operators who have expressed interest, if the infrastructure was there, in converting their fleets to natural gas. It's probably something that initially would have to be done internally within the provincial boundaries, but it has the opportunity, the potential to be expanded to the west coast down the Canamex corridor, all the way. That sort of thing. It's probably not, Minister, what you and I are going to run our personal vehicles off of any time in the near future.

There seems to be a role for the government to play, if it chooses to, in encouraging, incenting, giving a nod under goal 2.1, that "Albertans are aware of and understand existing and emerging trends and opportunities relating to energy development and use in Alberta." There seems to be a role that could be being played here, that is being played in CCS by this government, that is not being played by this government in terms of natural gas.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, that's a fair comment. That's exactly what we are working with industry to say: what is it we can do as government? The one thing we are not prepared to do is change the royalty structure. We said when we made the changes last spring that the book is closed on the royalty structure. So we're somewhat limited in what we can and cannot do. In fact, industry doesn't want us to change the royalty structure.

I do want to go back to some of the earlier comments around CCS. You know, there are several things that drove us toward CCS. One is that we have I think it's 800 years' supply of cheap coal. If we can make CCS work on coal-fired plants and coal becomes as clean as wind, why shouldn't we use that low-cost production? Secondly, we have the geological formations that not only give us the opportunity for enhanced oil recovery, but those geological formations probably are as good as anywhere in the world to show that you can sequester carbon in a safe way.

I can tell you that when we happened to spend a week earlier this year in London and Brussels, there was a lot of talk in the European Union about how green they want to become and all these sorts of things and all these carbon capture and storage initiatives, but they haven't done anything. Whatever they've done has been pretty miniscule. Norway has done some work, but all of the big talkers – be they France, Germany, even the U.K. – in all cases have a lot of coal-fired generation. But when it's in their own backyard, they aren't necessarily prepared to walk the talk. So they're watching what we're doing. They're watching very closely whether our project with TransAlta works on coal. They're watching very closely how successful we are in getting the project with Shell Quest off, where it's pure sequestration, because in those countries they don't have the ability for enhanced oil recovery.

We are leading in this area, and we're going to continue to do that.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you. I want to ask a quick question about energy revenues and your forecasts there. You're forecasting the revenues a bit on the conservative side in the 2011-12 budget and more ambitiously in the forecast for 2012-13 and especially 2013-14. The numbers are $89.40 a barrel for oil this coming year, $95.50 a barrel next fiscal, $95.75 a barrel the following year. Those are the oil prices projected. The revenue projections are considerably higher as we go forward: $8.3 billion this year, $10.2 billion next year, almost $11.9 billion in 2013-14. You know, relative to the average – the minister has made somewhat of a deal of explaining how forecasts are arrived at for revenues and prices and that sort of thing. You're conservative this year, and you're on the high side next year and the year after. I'm wondering what's going on here, whether it wouldn't be more fiscally prudent to maintain conservative estimates of revenues moving forward. Why the change?

Mr. Liepert: The member may not have been here earlier when I answered a similar type of question. Let me explain again. There are really three factors that drive those revenues up. Number one is a forecasted slow price increase. We are being conservative on the price increase. I mean, all we have to do is look at where it is today relative to what we're budgeting. We are being conservative on the price.

The second factor is that production is going to increase significantly in the oil sands as we move out, much higher ramp-up than the actual increase in the price per barrel.

The third one is one that many don't realize, that our royalty regime for the oil sands is low front end until capital is paid out, and then the royalty rate bumps up significantly. We're going to be reaching a number of projects over the next few years that are going to hit payout. So that significantly bumps up as well. I know, as an example, that one of the first was Foster Creek, Cenovus's plant on the Suffield base. Their royalty rates jump significantly when they reach payout.

So the combination of the three things is what we believe is a fair increase in royalty revenues.

Mr. Taylor: That re-explanation from the minister clarifies things a good deal.

On bitumen, I guess, a couple of questions. Number one, since we're the only folks in the world with any significant supply of bitumen, do we have control over that price? As we move to more and more bitumen and less conventional oil, do we have any price-setting capacity where bitumen is concerned?

Number two, this leads to the obvious question. It would be easier to set a price for bitumen if we had more than one customer. Therefore, what can the minister tell us about this government's plans to facilitate the construction of some sort of transport vehicle, whether it's a pipeline or rail or whatever, that moves our bitumen to the west coast and from there loads it onto tankers to take to Asia? [A timer sounded]

Mr. Liepert: Can I finish?

The Deputy Chair: Go ahead.

Mr. Liepert: The answer to the first part of the question is no, we are not a price setter for bitumen. You've got to remember that you've got to take it down a step. Bitumen gets refined into sweet crude, so that sweet crude then has to compete with other sweet crude from around the world. You can't obviously overpay for the feedstock to get to that sweet crude.

I won't take any more time on it because I did earlier – and you may not have been in the House, hon. member – talk a fair bit about what we're doing relative to the pipeline to the west coast. In deference to others who might want to ask questions, I'd ask that if you have other questions, send me a note. I'd be happy to respond.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. Just a couple of fairly short questions here. Mr. Minister, earlier today you were asked some questions by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon with regard to abandoned wells, the location. I'd like to expand on that and generalize it somewhat. Now, under the land-use framework and GeoDiscover several departments are working together on a few projects to co-ordinate and compile accurate records of all infrastructure. Is your department – and the ERCB, in particular, would be the agency – collaborating on these projects specifically as it relates to accurate as-constructed records of abandoned wellheads and pipelines and any other underground facilities?

Mr. Liepert: One of the things from the question earlier today that needs to maybe be elaborated on, when we aren't constrained to a 35-second answer, is that the ERCB has an extensive data bank of abandoned wells, but the ERCB's job is not to spend all day on the phone contacting municipalities and saying, "Are you thinking about expanding?" and "Where are you thinking about doing subdivisions?" So the onus, really, has to be in reverse. The municipalities have to recognize that that information is there and access it.

We know that we've got some work to do relative to pipelines and abandoned wells. We also have, and I think you're familiar with it – it's in the estimates – the orphan well program that we fund. I also know that this hon. member has raised on several occasions the issue around pipelines, and that's certainly a matter for debate. I think that the system we've got in place right now is pretty exhaustive and extensive, but clearly that doesn't mean to say we can't continue to do a better job.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Minister. I appreciate that comment. I would commend the ERCB on their records for high-pressure pipelines. I think they're excellent. As you're probably aware, most of my concerns with pipelines are not with regard to those. They are on some of the low-pressure and, in particular, on the gas co-op lines, which, I must say, have been improved a lot in the last number of years. I recognize that's not under the jurisdiction of the ERCB.

I think it's very important that you mentioned that the ERCB is not in the business of providing every municipality with records. That's the beauty of a comprehensive land-use database where one agency manages all that data. People can either inquire online or inquire through that agency rather than contacting the ERCB for this information, the gas co-ops for another piece of information, and the municipality for another piece of information. That's what the land-use framework is going to depend on, accurate land information, in order to do the land-use planning.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, we're on the estimates.

Mr. Allred: Okay. Thank you.

5:00

Mr. Liepert: Well, I'll just respond very briefly. The member makes a very good point. We've recognized that. As I said earlier, we have pretty extensive records but, clearly, need to do better, and I'm informed by both the chairman of the ERCB and by the deputy minister that that's work that is actually happening right now. As the member, I'm sure, recognizes, it's not work that's going to be done quickly and without a lot of due diligence.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you. Just on the estimates, really, my question is more aimed at: is that sort of a comprehensive program within your estimates?

Mr. Liepert: I don't think it's necessarily a line item within the budget, but as I said earlier, some $230 million is our department budget. It's work that is under way along with a whole bunch of other stuff that the department does.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you. I'm sure it's part of the operation, and that's great. I hope that that will be expanded and you will work towards collaborating with those other agencies to get it in place.

Thank you. That's all my questions, sir.

The Deputy Chair: Response? Okay.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. It's great to be able to get up and to talk a little more about these estimates and where they're going. What's critical for us is that, again, as important as these estimates and all of these numbers are, it's the policy that's going to drive whether these estimates are accurate and whether we really have the income.

Again I'm going to go back to the new royalty framework. The estimates were that we were going to increase royalties by $1.4 billion if we raised this royalty. They went, supposedly, to their experts and said that this is going to be great. It still just amuses me to hear them talk about all the things that we spoke about, why not to raise the royalty, why not to bring in the new royalty framework, because it doesn't create stability; it's not predictable. All the things that the minister now talks about were points that industry brought up and said why not to do it.

I need to go back again to goal 3, energy-related infrastructure. This is what the minister and this government are saying is going to provide the future for industry here in Alberta, and it just blatantly is not. Again, the minister had the audacity to say that it was the former finance minister, Dr. Oberg, who brought in the new royalty framework when it was this government. More importantly, he left in March of '08. This government implemented that on the 1st of January '09 and had a whole year to recall that. They waited another year, after we had billions of dollars of damage. That affects the estimates.

That's why I want to talk about the estimates and the revenue this government says is going to come in. If we look at their estimates on revenue, bitumen is going up. It's interesting that they're even saying that coal royalty is going to go up. Why is it going to go up? Are they going to increase the royalty rate, or are we actually going to be supplementing plants to come on board because of these free power lines? So the question to the minister is: why do you feel in all of these estimates that we do not take into account the actual cost of these power lines?

Why, for the life of Albertans and the life of industry in Alberta, are we not going to have an independent needs process to go through? You know what? This government is outdated and is out of step, as they were with the new royalty framework, took two years to realize and spent billions of dollars. This government is estimating spending billions and billions of dollars on these power lines, and there's nothing in here. They're bypassing the needs process. Why are we bypassing the needs process, Mr. Minister, for these estimates?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I will repeat what I said in my answers a few minutes ago. I know we can't comment on whether members are in the House or they're not, but we had a pretty extensive discussion around the need. There are different ways of looking at need. You can sit in a room with four people and pontificate all day long, like I think this member is exhibiting here this afternoon, and determine that the need isn't there, or you can have an independent group of experts called the Alberta Electric System Operator. The Electric System Operator has the expertise, has done the long-range planning, and this is their best advice. We in government tend to take our advice from experts. We don't take our advice from a group of four people sitting around over coffee in a coffee shop somewhere, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Chairman, what we need to do is to be competitive, and that's what the whole new royalty framework was about. It was because it was uncompetitive. They changed it, and then they came in with a new one. The experts they brought in was the Hunter report. These are the experts? I mean, we had experts from the Caribbean coming in to say we need to raise the royalty, saying that this is what we need to do. What we need to do is to go back to having a needs process. In every other place in the world where we have regulated government industry, we go through a needs process and not some cabinet minister who talks about – I don't know if they even drink coffee. It think they're sipping something a little bit stronger because they're not thinking clearly in saying that we need to do this.

The untendered power lines: when we talk about the cost of electricity and what we're going to get on that, why are these power lines not tendered and gone through a proper process so that we do have competitiveness and we don't have an overbuild because they're guaranteed money for something that we don't need?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, this member keeps rambling on about the royalty review. My recollection of the royalty review was the former finance minister, Dr. Oberg, appointing a royalty panel, and they came back with some recommendations. So now we see that the particular member that was, in my view, responsible for that royalty review that these guys continue to rail on about – and it was the same Dr. Oberg that the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo supported in the leadership race. The only one, I recall. [interjections] Well, he keeps talking about the royalty review. I'm just giving him some history on the royalty review and who was actually responsible for setting up the panel that produced this report. It was the former finance minister, now the number one adviser to that caucus, the same guy who ran for the leadership and was supported by the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, we'll get rid of the politics in this, and we'll get back to the estimates, okay? Thank you.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Well, according to these estimates, then, how much money could we save? If the energy minister wasn't responsible for those new royalty frameworks, and if the Premier isn't the one who was the first to announce during his campaign that, "I'm going to review the new royalty framework," why don't we get rid of the energy department if it's the finance minister who's running it all? It's laughable, as you can hear members doing, to go in that direction.

Again, I want to go back to the Shepard plant, 800 megawatts in Calgary, that was approved last fall; the Crossfield plant, 120 megawatts; the Bonnybrook plant, that's in the process of going forward at 165 megawatts. The fact is that we have a current capacity of 2,000 megawatts of transmission between Wabamun and Calgary, and Calgary's peak capacity is only 1,600 megawatts. Why do we need to have more power lines put in there when we have plants coming online close, and we have more than enough capacity for years and years? Why do we need to go through these direct-current government-funded power lines that are going to be turned back over to the industry to run, and the taxpayers are paying for it? Why are we doing that, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I will resist the temptation other than one comment, Mr. Chairman. You know, the member talked about the Premier. The thing I remember was the Premier determining after the Royalty Review Panel that the former finance minister, now adviser to the Wildrose caucus, came up with that it wasn't what was right for Alberta. He asked the Energy Minister at the time, now my colleague the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development, who commissioned something called a competitiveness review. The competitiveness review came back with the right information, not the information that was established by Dr. Oberg with the help of his buddy from Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

As a result of the competitiveness review, Mr. Chairman, we have the most effective fiscal regime in this country right now. We have a regulatory review that has been conducted that is going to streamline regulations for this province in the oil and gas industry. All you have to do is look at the investment in this province to say that this is the best province to do business in if you're in oil and gas. And if you're going to invest money in oil and gas, you're going to invest money in plants. You probably need to have the appropriate infrastructure in place because electricity runs those plants.

Mr. Hinman: Again he's failing to answer the question. He's giving ridiculous information about the former finance minister, the new royalty framework. This government implemented it. He was gone for eight months when it got implemented. The government didn't turn it back.

But the question is: why have we thrown out the independent needs process for power lines? Why have we thrown in guaranteed prices for power lines that should be tendered? Why are we doing that? This is all unwarranted. Why is the minister pushing ahead with another faulty regime that they've put in place, saying that this is for the future of Alberta? Why untendered power lines?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Chairman, I said earlier that we are not the only province who determine the need. British Columbia has determined the need. Ontario has determined the need. I think if you look across the country, just about every province has determined the need for transmission. For this member to say that there is I think he said something like no control over costs is an absolute falsehood because that's exactly what's going to happen under the Alberta Utilities Commission hearing that's going to be taking place in each case under each one of these applications. I would encourage the member to go sit in on the AUC hearing and see how diligent the commission is in ensuring that the cost is appropriate.

Mr. Hinman: Why are we bypassing the needs process, then? Why don't we have to go forward and push the needs like we did in 2003, when they went forward? Again, had that gone properly and the government hadn't spied on landowners and been inappropriate and got thrown out of court – because of the behaviour of this government and what they asked the board to do, we now have Bill 50 because they say: "Oh, we can't go through all of that. The lights are going out. The lights are going out." Why is there not a needs process in place to determine the need of those lines?

Look at this: the School of Public Policy, from Calgary, saying that we don't need the transmission lines. IPPCAA is saying that the power companies are going to go off-line. Are these experts that you totally disregard and say that we don't need them? There's report after report and expert after expert and business and industry after industry saying that if you increase our transmission costs, if you put those power lines in at your needs assessment that you've passed in Bill 50, we will lose industry.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, I can only say that we as government take our advice from independent experts, not from the School of Public Policy at the University of Calgary when it suits us. So I'm going to hold to listening to the experts, not to the School of Public Policy when what it says suits my political needs.

Mr. Hinman: Very interesting.

We'll go to a few simpler questions that perhaps the minister will answer, then, and we can get a few answers on record because so far we certainly haven't received any. We look at page 56, the revenue coming in under industry levies and licences. I've said to them that $142 million to $150 million seems like a huge tax must be going on, but underneath that is other revenue. It's gone from $45 million down to this year budgeted $10 million. Could you tell me: was there excessive gouging going on? What is this other revenue, and why is it dropping approximately $35 million in this budget year?

Mr. Liepert: I'll get an answer on the revenue in a moment, but what I do need to answer is the question relative to the extra $10 million in levies. What we are doing with our budget this year is that we require $10 million to fund the implementation of the regulatory enhancement project, and that $10 million is no longer being assigned to the Energy Resources Conservation Board as part of its budget. The Energy Resources Conservation Board budget will stay whole, and the percentage will go from a 60-40 split with government and industry to more like a 65-35 split with industry and government. Just before the member jumps up and makes some wild comments, industry is in concurrence with this, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Hinman: Could the minister please answer whether or not they've actually dropped any regulatory burdens or actual licensing that's going to add to the efficiency, as B.C. and Saskatchewan have?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, I'll have the chairman of the Energy Resources Conservation Board send a package of all the various public releases that they've made over the last year on regulatory streamlining, that the member can read at his convenience because they've been substantive and many. They've all been made public. Actually, he could probably, if he's really anxious, go tonight onto the website and find that information.

Mr. Hinman: Well, that's good news to hear.

Under capital investment programs there's approximately a 75 per cent drop in resource development and management from $9.5 million to $2.3 million. Could you give us a brief explanation on that?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, I'll get back to him in writing on that. I don't have that information right in front of me.

Mr. Hinman: Okay. The next one is energy regulation. You've talked a great deal. Again, I don't know if you were the orchestrator. You give a great deal of blame to people that have failed. I'm wondering if you'll take the blame, then, for the superboard and, supposedly, the superefficiencies. Energy regulation, from $15 million to $24 million: is this part of the amalgamation and trying to streamline all of these regulations that it's going up so much? Why do we see such a huge increase on the energy regulation side of things, especially when I thought you said that industry was stepping up, not stepping down, and that they coincided or agreed with your policy?

Mr. Liepert: I'll get back to him on that.

Mr. Hinman: Okay. The coal royalty: we've been bringing in $30 million actual; budgeted for this year, $35 million. Is there any explanation for that? Especially when coals plants are being shut down, why are you optimistic? Are you increasing the royalty to the coal industry? What's the ongoing increase that we see there when we're talking about a policy of wanting to shut down coal plants?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Chairman, in many of these situations there are anomalies that change from year to year which affect revenues, which affect various costs. I'll make sure that we get the accurate information for each one of these anomalies and respond accordingly.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you. Going back to priority initiatives on page 53, "Alberta has a competitive and effective royalty system, incenting development and maximizing benefits to Albertans." Your bitumen royalty in kind is supposed to be an incentive. My question is: why do you not go with a fiscal regime that would allow all industries and entrepreneurs with ideas to have the capital breaks that we do for the oil sands?

It just seems that if we really want to stimulate and want the entrepreneurs to come here for whatever their ideas are, whether it's biotechnology, whether it's new electrical stimulation, whether it's, you know, the toe-to-heel air injection – this government has picked CO<sub>2</sub> sequestration, which to most economists and people that I've talked to is the most expensive. It's the furthest one out there on whether we're going to be able to achieve it, whether it's ever even going to be energy efficient. Why do you not work with the federal government for a fiscal regime that will actually attract investment capital rather than taking our tax dollars and picking a few winners and saying, "This is what it's going to be" when government is very poor at that?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, the member is not correct when he makes some of those statements, which surprises no one in the House. It needs to be pointed out that it was, I think, the Conference Board that just recently said that Alberta is investing $6 billion in clean technology, which is more than every other province combined. What we have is a series of initiatives, whether it's carbon capture and storage, whether it's our biofuels program, whether it's our clean technology fund, that comes from the $15-a-tonne carbon tax. There are a number of initiatives, and I could certainly spend a lot of time here talking about each one of them, but they're all public. They're all there for the member to take a look at if he so chooses.

Mr. Hinman: It's interesting. What they have a series of, Mr. Chair, is a series of boondoggles that are going to cripple our economy again, just like the new royalty framework. They continue to deny that or now blame it on ministers that are gone when they implemented it. It's astounding.

Our federal government has the astuteness to at least say, Mr. Chair, that they're not going to implement any carbon tax or cap and trade or anything else outside the step of other jurisdictions. We heard a great deal of rhetoric two and a half years ago on what the U.S. was going to do. Our federal government says: well, we will match what they do. They haven't done it. Why are we following this boondoggle of spending billions of dollars so that we can be the ones to prove that this technology isn't going to work? There's better technology, what we call a natural gas strategy, that would have a far greater impact than CO<sub>2</sub>. Why do we continue down this dead-end road of CO<sub>2</sub> sequestration to the detriment of our industry here?

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I have a few comments I'd like to make. First, I'll start with the Canadian Energy Research Institute. As you know, Mr. Minister, it's the most prestigious energy economics research institute in the world. This organization and its top-notch research team benefits businesses, government, academia, and the public. They provide relevant, independent, and objective economic research in energy and environmental issues. Has your department supported this institute within this budget and, furthermore, in the 2011-14 business plan outgoing for a number of years?

Mr. Liepert: One of the ways that we feel is effective in participating in research is to ensure that we have industry, the federal government, and the province all involved. At the end of the day the research we do benefits Canada as a whole. We certainly have committed within this budget an allocation for the Canadian Energy Research Institute. I know that the member is a key part of that, and they do exceptionally good economic research. It's the type of research that we would very much take into account in terms of policy-making within our government, and we value the work they do. We are supporting them in this budget and are prepared to commit long term. We would like to see industry and the federal government also step up on this important project.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you for those comments. In your meetings with the federal minister have you had an opportunity to talk about the importance of this institute not only here in Alberta but nation-wide, North America-wide? Will you have the opportunity in maybe upcoming meetings? If you could schedule those discussions, I'd appreciate it. I'd like to hear your comments on that.

Mr. Liepert: I haven't had that many opportunities to have lengthy discussions with the federal energy minister. It seems as though there are a lot of balls in the air, if you will. I can't recall us having discussions specific to this particular institute. I'm more than happy, as a result of the member's encouragement, to have those discussions.

In fact, we're going to be very fortunate here in Alberta this year. We're going to be hosting the federal-provincial energy ministers' conference in Alberta this year. We have some significant input into the agenda. We have focused the conference around trying to work towards agreement among the various energy ministers across the country on at least agreeing on the goals and objectives that could lead us to a national energy strategy or a national energy framework. That's been our major focus, but let me see if there isn't a role or a placeholder that this could fit in relative to that energy ministers' conference this July.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Minister, I'd appreciate that. I know the federal government has stepped up to the plate and has been a very good partner in this, but I'm just concerned about future budgets and the implications of nonsupport, so I would appreciate that.

I'd like to move on to the business plan, page 53, as it relates to 1.1. "Alberta has a competitive and effective royalty system, incenting development and maximizing benefits to Albertans." I'd like to talk about an important project that's in my constituency and on the edge of my constituency, the Swan Hills Synfuels project. Can you tell me, so that I can relay the comments back to my constituency, how that partnership is going, how the support from your department and the government of Alberta has incented this group to develop? What will we see in the near future with the economic spinoffs not only in the mature fields of Carson Lake or Eddy Creek or Virginia Hills, but what will see as an immediate spinoff in the next, well, I guess I'll say within this business plan, up to 2014, because of that incentive that the government of Alberta has been involved in?

Mr. Liepert: Well, the member raises a very good point relative to one of the four carbon capture and storage projects that I will remember, as we move forward, were termed "boondoggle" by people who were going to try and take your job away from you, hon. member. I hope that in the next election you remind your constituents about what these guys are talking about, the project in your constituency.

The Synfuels project is one that I think holds incredible promise for this province, not only in an environmentally friendly way, but I think that certainly from my discussions with those who head up the Synfuels project, we see this as a project where ultimately the next projects probably can proceed on their own. You know, if we can use CO<sub>2</sub> to gasify coal, why wouldn't we do that? Well, because if you keep your head stuck in the sand, then it'll never happen. But we want to make sure that we're looking forward, that in 50, a hundred years from now your grandchildren will look back and say: that was a pretty darn smart, strategic government to get into some of these other initiatives like coal gasification.

While we haven't yet finalized the contract to Synfuels – these are difficult negotiations – we believe that that will be a project that will be, I hope, under construction before year-end and completed, I guess, about the conclusion of this business plan or a year or so beyond that. I think it will be an economic generator for this province for years to come, that technology, not just that plant.

Mr. VanderBurg: Again, further on 1.1, the enhanced oil recovery opportunities abound, and I can't say enough about what I've learned about it. Have you any proof that the enhanced oil recovery process at Swan Hills Synfuels is going to work in the area and any kind of estimates of the possibility of how many billions of barrels we could extract from a 40-year-old oil field that's in my area?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, we rely on experts, and the climate technology group has done their research work, their work with geologists, with scientists. They say to government that the potential for enhanced oil recovery, the potential of $25 billion in royalties, is very real. You know, we can call this initiative all of the names we want to call it, but the name that I would put on it is an economic generator for the future.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you very much for that. The other part of it that I would like to know about is again on 1.1. What will we need to do to incent development of the use of the gasification of coal to develop the power industry in our area, and what opportunities are we going to see to drive major power generation because of this gasification opportunity in my area of the province?

Mr. Liepert: I think that as we move through this session, we'll have an opportunity in this Legislature to probably consider some legislation that will go a long way to ensuring that this actually happens. Again, you raise a good point relative to cogeneration. There are opportunities for clean production and generation of electricity. I come back to the fact that it's no good producing the electricity if you can't get it to where the market is. It again comes back to the need and requirement. We have to be in a position that wherever electricity is generated in this province, it has the ability to get to market.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you.

I'm going to move on to another topic, 1.2: "Energy and mineral resource revenues are accurately calculated, collected and reported." Some two decades plus ago we kicked off some major oil sands developments. There was an incentive by the province of Alberta through a discount given to those companies to develop and over time write off their capital expense. I understand that soon those projects will move into a full royalty opportunity. How is that going to be reported, collected? How are Albertans going to get the information that, you know, we're moving from a 1 per cent to a full royalty on those projects? Which projects do you expect in this business plan will be affected by that?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as the member raised, the Auditor General had some advice for the department in terms of how to ensure that that is transparent and understandable. We have made the changes that were suggested, and the Auditor General has clearly told us that we're doing it right.

I don't want to get into sort of specific plants in the province that will be hitting payout. I know that last year the Cenovus plant at Foster Creek on the Cold Lake air base hit payout. There's a substantial jump in the royalties paid once the plant moves from the upstart royalty rate to the full payout rate. I know that there are a number of others, especially in the in situ area. The mining operations tend to be larger in scope and higher in capital cost and, you know, obviously take a little longer for payout, but the in situ projects, because they're smaller, tend to hit first. I don't have the exact number or who they are in front of me, but there will be certainly over the next three years several of them that will be hitting that payout number.

Mr. VanderBurg: Further with 1.2 – and I've raised this earlier in the Legislature. There seems to be misguided information about how Alberta compares to countries like Norway – Alberta is a province; Norway is a country – and about the collection of the resource and royalty fees. As you know, the federal government collects billions of dollars each year from resource extraction, and that seems to be forgotten. People just seem to think about what's collected here in Alberta.

How come those comparisons between Alberta, Canada, and a country like Norway are not accurately conveyed to Albertans? You know, we are a province. The feds collect their share, we collect our share, and here's this Norway with a big, huge bank account. I mean, wouldn't it be nice to have the royalties that the federal government collects in our bank account? I think something is lost in the messaging there. Is there a way in this business plan that you can get that message across more accurately?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I don't know if the business plan is the right approach to get that message across, but the message is absolutely right. You have a situation, I think, in Norway as well where there's a whole different personal tax structure and all of those other things. It's not a fair comparison.

We have done a pretty extensive review of how we compare to other relative jurisdictions albeit in North America. Once you start comparing things like offshore, many of your offshore production facilities are huge producers. There are whole different cost structures around offshore versus onshore, whole climatic changes. It's difficult to compare Alberta to Norway. You're absolutely right. The total take goes to Norway. It's also a state-owned operation, I think, pretty much exclusively.

I don't really think that we can get into that comparison, but we have certainly got into comparisons on other jurisdictions on the North American continent that are more relevant. I can tell you that we stack up very, very well.

Mr. VanderBurg: I'm going to move on to 1.4. "The ministry and its partners have the required policies and programs to encourage value-added development in Alberta." I'm sure the minister knows this, that the precious mines and minerals industry is a very important industry. It's just about to take off and be the next industry in the next couple of decades.

As you know, I'm sure, the first diamond ever found in Alberta was found in my constituency. Kimberlite pipes have been found all throughout this province. Your ministry has spent big dollars making sure that the mapping is accurate and working with those industries, especially the junior mining companies, to develop that. To date most of the kimberlite pipes that are found are in the north. Many are diamondiferous, and many are being surveyed right now and drilled and tested. What is in your business plan to help develop that precious mines and minerals industry, and what are your thoughts on that going forward?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I guess it would be fair to say that I might not be quite as enthusiastic as the member is relative to where this industry is going to be in 10 years. I hope he's right and I'm wrong, actually. We know that there is potential in the mines and minerals sector, but it's been slow to develop. The member probably points out something that is, I think, worthy of us taking away, and that is that we have to address whether we have the right regime in place to encourage this kind of activity. I would suspect that we don't have quite the right regime in place.

I don't know if it will necessarily apply or not, but as the member knows, we're doing some terrific work on the regulatory front. I think that once we get the regulatory enhancement project recommendations out and implemented, that could spur on some of this activity. I don't know that I could add much more than that. We will take away the encouragement to see what it is we could do to maybe enhance some of the opportunities, I guess.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Minister. I know that 20 years ago people in the Territories would never have thought they would have had the infrastructure that they have in place today.

Some of the world's most prestigious diamonds are the polar diamonds that are found in the north. It started with some companies out of this province making some major finds of some kimberlite pipes in the Territories. I don't want to limit our opportunities. I want to make sure that, you know, we get the best out of Alberta that we can get and that we don't sterilize land and that we don't think small. I think we need to think big, and we need to think bigger when it comes to the precious mines and minerals industry.

That moves me on to my next topic, and that's potash. I understand that it's not just Saskatchewan that has potash deposits, that it's also the government of Alberta. What in your business plan have you done to encourage potash development in Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I don't want to make light of the question, but in the I guess about a year and a few days now that I've had the privilege of this portfolio, I can honestly say that we haven't had a lot of discussions around potash other than talking about what transpired in Saskatchewan over the past period of time. I am not a geologist and don't even try to profess to be one, so I can't even comment whether that's an opportunity for Alberta or not.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I'm looking forward to this. I think we can get some good information out here. I'll go a little bit easy. I don't want to hurt the minister's feelings. I know he doesn't like his feelings hurt.

I want to first talk about oil royalties. This is on page 136 of the estimates. The reason I'm worried, of course, is because this is the minister that decimated our most important core social service, health care. I'm hoping he doesn't decimate our most important industry. The reason I have some trepidation on that with regard to the bitumen revenues that we have coming in here is that I distinctly remember challenging the people sitting around the caucus table over and over again on the royalty framework and getting dumped on along with a couple of other people that are still over there on that side of the government and then watching while this minister and several other cabinet ministers sat like bumps-on-a-log and did absolutely nothing whatsoever to defend the oil industry.

I find it a bit rich that he's over there talking about, you know, just how wonderful this government has been with regard to the royalty framework. They've been a disaster for this province. They've cost us billions of dollars, thousands of jobs. To claim that this minister in particular had anything to do with reversing them – the reason that they were reversed is because of the pressure that they were feeling politically. Anyway, I am worried about the health of our bitumen royalties and about our industry with this minister at the helm of this ministry.

What I want to talk about today and get some answers regarding is Bill 50 and these transmission lines, which I think, frankly, are this government's version of the federal sponsorship scandal. It smells that bad. It's a shameful act, what's been done there. It's an absolute affront to the processes that we've put in place here to guard against government corruption and so forth. To put this bill in, just the appearance of it, is just offensive to anybody who respects democracy, respects transparency, and who respects rule of law, frankly. One thing we will do as a Wildrose government after 2012 is repeal Bill 50, and we'll take great glee in doing it.

What I want to talk specifically about surrounding Bill 50, to start with, is these plants that the minister seems to know so little about, these natural gas power plants around my community, two of them. The one in Crossfield, that just went online last year, produces 120 megawatts of electricity from natural gas. The other one is a plant that is due to be online in 2014 by Shepard, which is also in my community, which is to bring on 900 megawatts of electricity. Then, of course, there is the Bonnybrook plant, which is going to bring on about 150 megawatts of electricity. In total that's about 1,200 megawatts of natural gas powered electricity right in the Calgary area, this during that same time frame when 560 megawatts of electricity was taken offline from Sundance 1 and 2.

So we have almost 1,200 megawatts of new natural gas electricity being put together in Calgary. We have 560 megawatts of electricity coming offline at Wabamun on Sundance 1 and 2. Between Wabamun and Calgary we have 2,000 megawatts of transmission capacity between those central Alberta plants and Calgary, and somehow this minister can't seem to understand how different the landscape is from when they first contemplated this bill.

Everything has changed. The price of natural gas has crashed. It's in the toilet. We get cheap natural gas, and we can build cheap natural gas power plants right beside where the demand is in Calgary and in other centres. Not only that, he has not taken into account the cogeneration of electricity at these industrial plants all across Alberta. Hundreds and hundreds and even thousands of megawatts of electricity are going to be generated this way thereby making a lot of the need for these new, massive 20-storey transmission lines obsolete.

Now, we can go back and forth and have a debate about whether these new transmission lines and the costs associated with them are needed. That's the whole point. I'm not an expert on electricity. But you know what? This minister is less than an expert on electricity, and it's very clear from his comments that he doesn't understand the grid, you know, half as well as the Member for Calgary-Glenmore does. So I get a little perturbed when he throws out things that he doesn't know what he's talking about and contradicts himself every five minutes.

What I'd like to know is why he feels a need – with all of this change and with all of these facts in place, why does this minister not do what should just be a normal course of action and demand that the ERCB oversee that the AESO, which is this independent arm, as he calls it, goes to the AUC, goes through an independent needs assessment process by the Alberta Utilities Commission? Let them determine in the next year or so whether or not these billions and billions of dollars of new transmission capacity are in fact needed.

Frankly, there's a huge debate – and it favours my side of the debate – that these are no longer needed in the amount that you're talking about here. I would like him to comment on that and explain why he felt the need to skip an independent needs assessment process so that he could give Alberta, you know, billions and billions of dollars of new transmission lines that we probably don't even need given the differing circumstances that have come up.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Chairman, this member just proves again that he's a dreamer when he's talking about who's going to be the government after 2012 and also about two power plants next to Calgary. He stated in question period the other day that there are two plants under construction. Well, there are not two plants under construction. There is the Shepard plant, which is on hold by Enmax, and there is the Bonnybrook plant, which hasn't even gone through the application process yet.

You know, there are some people you can reason with; there are some people that just flat out aren't interested in the truth. I've responded to all the other rhetoric that he's just gone on about, and I don't plan on repeating myself.

Mr. Anderson: Well, then, what this minister can do is go on the record right now to say that in the next three years the Bonnybrook and the Shepard plants are not going to be online. Go on record, then, and say: these are mythical power plants that aren't going to go online.

I'll tell you that the only reason they wouldn't go online, Minister, is because you've put a whole bunch of free transmission lines into the hands of several companies up north, particularly TransAlta and others, ATCO, AltaLink. You've given them these contracts, and if they decide not to go ahead with those projects – they still will go ahead – that would be the reason that they don't go ahead because you meddled in the industry, and frankly just like a big, you know, socialist, left-wing government decided that you were going to pick winners and losers. If there is a loser in this, it's going to be business that could have done this cheaper and more effectively right by Calgary. That's a fact. But they will still go ahead, almost certainly, because there is a demand for it in Calgary and because natural gas is so cheap.

The point is, sir, that you talked earlier about: oh, well, industry wants these new power lines. Well, look at this, the IPCAA. Maybe you can read through the report. The Industrial Power Consumers Association of Alberta, which represents billions of dollars worth of companies working in Alberta right now, is saying that these transmission lines are completely unnecessary and completely unneeded. They talk a lot about cogeneration and other things that have changed the economic realities here, but they also say that it's going to drive business out of this province.

Mr. Boutilier: I think you hurt his feelings.

Mr. Anderson: I know. I probably hurt his feelings.

That's what the Industrial Power Consumers Association of Alberta is saying, and this is the document that they presented to caucus and to members of this government long before Bill 50 was passed. You know, once again, he says one thing, yet reality is completely different. The Industrial Power Consumers Association of Alberta. Industry doesn't want this, sir, so don't make it up. It's not true.

How about another respected report? The University of Calgary School of Public Policy put a very good report together on whether Bill 50 was needed and whether you handled it correctly by usurping and skipping over the independent needs assessment. That's what this report says. You can go through it. You can read it. It's very well thought out, great statistics. That's what it says, yet you ignore it. You sit there and you laugh and so forth, and that's fine. You know, it just shows the arrogance. It shows you can't answer the question either.

The fact of the matter is that the School of Public Policy at the U of C, IPCAA, many other nonpartisan groups that have skin in the game – in other words, it means that they have businesses that they have to pay power bills for – have said over and over again: the lines are not needed. And we're not even asking – not even asking – this minister just to simply take our word for it. Go to the AUC, the Alberta Utilities Commission, Minister, and say: let the AESO do an independent needs assessment. Make the determination yourself. Why not do that, Minister? Why won't you do it? Let him do it.

Mr. Liepert: Well, my only comment, Mr. Chairman, is that this member wants me to go on record saying something. I'd like him to go on record and justify his comments from the other day, which said: there are two natural gas fired generating plants next to Calgary that are under construction. Under construction. To me that means there's actually something happening there. That's exactly what he said. If he wants to go look in Hansard, have him go look in Hansard.

Mr. Chairman, this particular member – you know, I really, really sit here and watch. I've never seen a member of this House that has such a chip on his shoulder, and I really wonder sometimes. He gets so angry that we all sit here and wonder when he's going to have a heart attack. But you know what? That's theatre, and he loves to be in the theatre. So we'll just sit here, and if he wants to talk till the time is up, let him go ahead.

But I'd like him to show me where these two plants are under construction, that are going to generate 1,100 megawatts of energy. If he can't do that, I'd suggest, then, he's got no credibility in anything else that he says.

Mr. Anderson: That's fine. I did not say under construction; I said that are planned to be constructed.

Mr. Liepert: Look in Hansard.

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely. I will look in the Hansard. I will look in the Hansard, sir. [interjections]

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Whoa. The hon. member has the floor.

Mr. Anderson: You're going to have a heart attack in this Assembly. Holy smokes. Look at that red face.

Anyway, what I will say is that construction to me means – there are many segments to construction. One is a planning phase. I know that's hard because you don't do much planning, Mr. Minister, but there is a planning phase in construction, and part of that planning phase says: "We're going to go and make the engineering designs, and we're going to go ahead with the construction. We're going to buy the land." The land has been bought. The equipment is being moved in there. There is stuff happening on the ground by Shepard. Go take a look. It's happening.

I don't know what they're waiting for. Probably, you know, they're at some regulatory process right now. But the fact of the matter is that those plants are being undertaken right now. He can talk all he wants and yap and yell like he always does and have his little daily heart attack, but he doesn't know what he's talking about, just like he didn't know what he was talking about with health care.

Anyway, this goes to the last question I have for him. Let's pretend that these lines are just absolutely critical and necessary.

What possible excuse does this one have, other than underhandedness, that in his mind and in the mind of this government would allow them to give these contracts to two companies, AltaLink and ATCO, to just give them these contracts without any competitive bid? A guaranteed rate of return on a multibillion-dollar set of projects, and you sit there – and these guys are sponsoring some of your dinners for crying out loud. Don't you just see the appearance? Don't you see the appearance of wrongdoing here? Why wouldn't you put these out to an open tendering process, sir?

Do the right thing. Save Albertans some money. Put it out to a completely open tendering process, and then go forward with it. I want to know why you won't do that. Why will you not do an open tendering process and make AltaLink, ATCO, and all these other companies from around the world tender it?

You know, it's funny. Just before I actually left the government over the stench of this garbage – I don't regret it one day – I talked to one of your assistant deputy ministers in Energy, and he confirmed to me that there was no open tender to this. So there's no spinning this. You can't have it both ways. You didn't tender the contract, sir, and Albertans are getting ripped off. The question is: why? You bring up the need for these power lines, that doesn't exist, and then you give them to your buddies. You give them to your buddies without open, competitive bidding. I'm not saying they shouldn't have been able to bid, but at least make them compete. You could save Alberta taxpayers money. Why didn't you do that? Why did you just sit and do absolutely nothing except turn a blind eye to it?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I said when I don't think this particular member was in the Assembly – but I'll repeat it – these particular proponents are going before the Utilities Commission. The Utilities Commission will determine whether the lines are approved. The application could be denied.

The Deputy Chair: I hesitate to interrupt the hon. minister, but pursuant to Government Motion 5 agreed to on February 23, 2011, three hours of debate has passed. The Committee of Supply shall now rise and report progress.

I'll give a few seconds for the staff to leave so that we can conclude.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration resolutions for the Department of Energy relating to the 2011-12 government estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, reports progress, and requests leave to sit again.

The Acting Speaker: Does the Assembly concur with the report?

Hon. Members: Concur.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed? So ordered.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that we stand adjourned until 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:59 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, March 10, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As we conclude for this week our work in this Assembly, we renew our energies with thanks so that we may continue our work with the people in the constituencies we represent. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As everyone here would know, today is World Kidney Day, and it's my great pleasure to introduce to you and through you two very special individuals from the Kidney Foundation, Northern Alberta: Sheelah Zapf, president, and Heidi Erisman, executive director. Sheelah has served on the board of directors since 2007. She has a son who is a paraplegic and a kidney transplant recipient. Heidi has been with the organization since 2005, and she played a very key role in working with Alberta Health and Wellness to implement the living organ and donor reimbursement program. I would ask both of these special guests to please rise and receive the enthusiastic applause for being here from our colleagues. Thank you.

It's also my great pleasure to introduce to you six or seven visitors here from the L'Arche Association of Edmonton, which is housed in my particular constituency. Along with their caregivers we have Janis Radink, Jessica Rodriguez, Kate Kim, Irina Bezrukova, Kanako Kikuya, and Abigail Lee. They come to us from Korea, Japan, Russia, Costa Rica, Germany, and right here in Edmonton. If they could please rise and receive the warm, enthusiastic welcome from the House, that would be great. Welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday I had the privilege of introducing two classes of bright young students from Sir Alexander Mackenzie school in St. Albert. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and the Assembly 45 more grade 6 students from Sir Alexander Mackenzie school in St. Albert, who are equally as bright as their colleagues from yesterday. I'll ask them to stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is, indeed, very rare I get visitors to this Legislature from my constituency. Today I am so proud to have the pleasure of introducing to you and through you 31 bright, rambunctious grade 6 students from St. Andrew's school in High Prairie. They're here to watch their government at work. As you know, grade 6 studies government. They are joined by teachers Mr. Al Baird and Mrs. Emily Ferguson and, of course, parent helpers Mrs. Elaine Rederburg, Mrs. Ruby Walker, Mrs. Rachel Kemp, Mrs. Rosemary Halldorson, Miss Stewart, Mrs. Pardell, Mrs. Gauchier, Mr. Cross, Mr. Lanigan, and Mr. Lamouche. They're seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask that they all stand and receive the warm welcome of this Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you two of my constituents, Jason Edmonds and Samson Kandie. They both work at the Balwin Villa centre, which recently opened and had its grand opening. Jason has not been to the Legislature since his grade 6 field trip 10 years ago, and Samson, originally from Kenya, is a newcomer to Canada. They're both seated in the public gallery, and I'd ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my distinct pleasure to introduce to you and through to all members of this Assembly two very distinguished members of the Public School Boards' Association of Alberta. The first one is Madame Patty Dittrick, president, and the second lady is Mary Lynne Campbell, executive director. We had a very productive meeting a few minutes ago about the discussion on the education act. They're looking forward to seeing the introduction of this legislation in the House and the inclusion of the definition of inclusiveness, natural persons, and enabling public school boards to achieve educational and community goals. I would ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this fantastic Assembly.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two groups of guests to introduce today. First, I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly representatives of the Tunisian community living in Edmonton. Tunisia was the first site of the many recent popular uprisings across North Africa and the Middle East calling for democratic reforms. Tunisians have achieved remarkable success in ending the unjust Ben Ali regime. Our guests today are lending an encouraging hand to those in their home country by developing support and solidarity with the Tunisian people across Canada. They are currently mobilizing around a petition campaign across Canada to be sent to the federal government advocating for government support in resolving continuing injustices against the Tunisian people and ensuring a quick transition to a peaceful and democratic society.

I would now like to welcome the members of the Tunisian community who are seated in the members' gallery of the Legislature. I would ask that they now rise as I read their names: Fathi Ben Mardas, Hounaida Ayed, Abdennaceur Salem, Adel Laifi, Nariman Saidane, and there may be others with them whose names I do not have. I would ask them now to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of the Assembly.

My second group of guests, Mr. Speaker, is the new members of the NDP caucus staff as well as one individual who is leaving after a number of years of remarkable service. Rob Pearson has served as our director of outreach for three and a half years, and he has done an outstanding job of increasing the engagement of Alberta's diverse society with the political process in this House. I want to thank him very much for his contribution to our caucus. He will indeed be missed. I would also like to take this opportunity to welcome some of our new and very talented staff, who bring a wide range of skills and have already demonstrated their determined work ethic and their passion for their positions. They are sessional researcher Geoff Brouwer, outreach assistant Myles Curry, research officer Kate Millar, and Carissa Halton, who is my executive assistant. I would ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

Statement by the Speaker

Election Anniversaries

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have a few introductions today as well. On March 11, 1997 – that's 14 years ago – eight members in this current Assembly were elected to this Assembly for the first time. So congratulations to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, our Minister of Education; the hon. Member for Sherwood Park, our Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations; the hon. Deputy Speaker, the Member for Calgary-Fort; the hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane; the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills; the hon. members for Edmonton-Centre, Edmonton-Gold Bar, and Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo. Congratulations on your 14th anniversary.

On March 12, 2001, 10 years ago Saturday, 11 members in this Assembly were elected to this Assembly for the first time and will be presented with a 10-year Mace pin momentarily by the pages, who will assist me in this regard. The pages may move as I speak. To the hon. Member for Innisfail-Sylvan Lake, our Minister of Transportation; the hon. Member for Lac La Biche-St. Paul, our Minister of Infrastructure; the hon. Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster, our President of the Treasury Board; the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs and Member for Dunvegan-Central Peace; the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky and our Minister of Sustainable Resource Development; the hon. Member for Calgary-Shaw and our Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation; the hon. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, our Minister of Employment and Immigration; the hon. former Deputy Premier, the Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert; the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow; the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne; and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview: congratulations on your 10th anniversary. Please wear your Mace pins with pride.

On March 12 it'll be happy birthday time to the young Member for Stony Plain.

Members' Statements

Alberta Business Awards of Distinction

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, on March 4 the Alberta Chambers of Commerce held its 20th annual Alberta business awards of distinction at Enoch, just outside of Edmonton. Out of the 11 awards the Alberta government sponsored five: three from Employment and Immigration, one from Aboriginal Relations, and one from the Alberta Human Rights Commission.

These awards are presented to the province's top employers, organizations that have excelled as employers of youth, aboriginal people, and persons with disabilities. Other awards noted excellence in entrepreneurship, marketing, exporting, and developing relationships with aboriginal organizations and communities.

This year's Premier's award of distinction, the ceremony's top award, was presented to PTI Group, Inc., an Edmonton-based company employing more than 2,800 people around the province. PTI is a key player in our province's oil and gas sector by providing the many services needed to set up and service remote work camps. It has established an excellent reputation for developing strong relationships with First Nations and Métis communities. PTI has found a way to balance local businesses and economic goals with First Nations' rights and environmental and cultural concerns.

I would like to congratulate PTI Group, Inc. for this award and for being an example of an exceptional employer and contributor to Alberta's workforce and economy. I would also like to encourage the Alberta government to continue to foster strong partnerships with business and industry through organizations like the Alberta Chambers of Commerce.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Long-term Care

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There's much talk these days about the legacy of the current Premier. He seems eager to claim that it will be some rosy time for Alberta seniors, with couples able to stay together through the years in comfort and security. The reality being created by this government is much less attractive and should be alarming to both those who will need more care and their families and friends. Either this Premier does not know the difference between long-term care and continuing care or he is determined to confuse Albertans with deceptive language.

Long-term care spaces are where those needing medical care will receive it as part of a fully public health care system. They will not have to drain savings and create massive obligations on family and friends. This development is not in any way keeping pace with the demographic growth of those needing such care. The refusal to plan for what lies ahead will lead to a major crisis in the next few years. We need to do much more to assure everyone of affordable assisted living options and good home care, but this will never be completely adequate. The vision the Premier lays out of people staying together is a pretext for inadequate and unaffordable care based on a for-profit model where every bit of care costs extra fees.

Promises to create new long-term care beds have been broken. The language has been changed to boast about inadequate and costly continuing care spaces whenever questions are raised about vitally needed long-term care spaces. We are moving to a full-blown crisis, when it will be impossible to act quickly enough to prevent unnecessary suffering for many seniors.

This so-called legacy is already spilling over to impact all Albertans in need of health care. Medical experts assert that the crisis in emergency departments will not be solved by new protocols that create hidden waiting rooms for people to wait in for days but only when large numbers of acute-care beds are not being used by those who need long-term care.

We hear of families that have had to quit jobs or wipe out savings to get care for loved ones. We hear exhausted and stressed staff in facilities saying that they cannot provide the care needed because even the inadequate facilities that now exist are understaffed.

Mr. Speaker, the Premier's slavish commitment to . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Vandermeer: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. More than 23,000 Albertans are affected by fetal alcohol spectrum disorder. FASD results in a range of lifelong disabilities such as brain damage which is caused by premature exposure to alcohol. Alberta has a 10-year innovative plan that aims to establish awareness and prevention, assessment and diagnosis, and research and support for individuals with FASD and their caregivers.

Alberta is also a member of the Canada northwest FASD partnership, which is an alliance of provinces and territories working together to reduce the incidence of FASD and improve the quality of life for those living with FASD. Last week was the 4th International Conference on Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder.

Mr. Speaker, you will be pleased to know that the Minister of Children and Youth Services assumed the leadership of the Canada northwest FASD partnership for the year 2011-12 on behalf of Alberta. This partnership will create a supportive environment for building community capacity and providing the appropriate training, education, government leadership, evaluation, and research. Alberta's participation in the partnership will help in the prevention of FASD and assist people living with FASD and their caregivers.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to say congratulations to all the partners for 10 years of hard work and especially for the work our minister is going to be doing, and congratulations to Alberta for taking a lead in this.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Childhood Obesity Initiatives

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about a national initiative that has been created to look for solutions to a very serious health issue. On March 7 provincial health representatives joined the federal Minister of Health, Leona Aglukkaq, to launch a national dialogue on childhood obesity. Alberta's own chief medical officer of health, Dr. André Coriveau, was part of this national launch.

Mr. Speaker, the factors contributing to the rising rates of childhood obesity are complex. Reduced levels of physical activity, unhealthy eating habits, increased time spent in front of computers and televisions are just some of the contributing factors to this national epidemic. In fact, current statistics tell us why a national dialogue on childhood obesity is such an urgent issue. More than 1 in 4 children and youth aged two to 17 are either overweight or obese, a trend, I'm sad to say, holds true for Alberta. Obese children are being diagnosed with a range of health conditions that were once only seen in adults such as type 2 diabetes and high blood pressure.

Mr. Speaker, the national dialogue offers a number of opportunities for Canadians to participate in a conversation about how to tackle the obesity epidemic, including a website, online and in-person discussions as well as a national summit. This national initiative complements the wellness forum, hosted by our own Minister of Health and Wellness last December, as well as an international wellness symposium planned for the fall. Discussion is now under way to have the Alberta symposium serve as the national summit for the dialogue about national healthy weights.

We have a number of Alberta initiatives that promote healthy lifestyles. These include the Communities ChooseWell program, that has involved 162 communities, promoting wellness over the past four years, and the healthy school communities award, that celebrates school communities that support healthy choices and healthy environments for kids.

Mr. Speaker, Albertans are encouraged to participate in the healthy weights dialogue by visiting the website www.ourhealthourfuture.gc.ca. Finally, as the business of public health care in Canada increasingly becomes the business of managing chronic disease, I can think of no other important conversation . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Community Chili Cook-offs in Calgary

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford for the perfect segue to my member's statement today, and that is on chili night in Calgary North-Hill. This isn't a formal event, but last Saturday I got to participate in two different chili cook-offs in my constituency, that being hosted by the Mount Pleasant Community Association and the other one by the Highwood Community Association. These events brought community members and families together and included not just sampling the various chilies that were made but also other activities such as sledding, drumming, lip-synching, and dancing.

I personally and my fiancée got to taste over 20 different chilies, Mr. Speaker. They had multiple flavours, from spicy to sweet to smoky, with different ingredients. Some were vegetarian, some were your standard beef chilies, and some had turkey in them. There were more different kinds of beans than I or my fiancée care to remember.

What is most important, Mr. Speaker, is not the different types of chili or whose was best, but it was the fact that this allowed many different members of the communities to come together with their families and have fun for the evening. I want to thank all those who cooked the chilies during the day as well as those organizers and volunteers who spent the time to put these events together for these two communities. It certainly allowed lots of friends and neighbours to be able to break bread over dinner.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: You forgot to tell us when you're going to marry this wonderful young woman.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Emergency Medical Service Delays

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Premier said, "I am here to support our doctors." That's hard to believe because ER doctors don't trust Alberta Health Services' sham review into 322 cases of compromised ER care dating back to 2008. The doctors say that this review is nothing more than a witch hunt. Dr. Paul Parks is quoted: Alberta Health Services won't provide us with written assurance of immunity if we do hand over the details, and without the details it's impossible to do a meaningful investigation. Why has the Premier chosen to cover up that the Alberta Health Services internal review went absolutely nowhere because doctors are afraid to speak?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I said yesterday that I'm not going off on some wild goose chase after baseless allegations of payoffs to doctors. However, very reckless statements in this House have caused ordinary Albertans to question the care they receive from doctors and other health care professionals. This is about maintaining confidence in the health care system. Accordingly I've asked the Minister of Health and Wellness to work with the Health Quality Council of Alberta to clear the air, reassure Albertans that they will get good care when they need it.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, the Premier continues to confuse all of us by talking about other allegations. We're talking about 322 cases of compromised ER care. Are you or are you not going to have the Health Quality Council investigate these?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again, this is a quote that was in Hansard. "How can Albertans, including the health care workers in this system, have any trust in this government when since 2008 you have failed to investigate 322 concrete cases of malpractice?" Doctors deliver service. So to say that this wasn't against doctors is totally wrong. I can tell you that we are supporting doctors. That's what we're all about.

The minister has further details in terms of the extent of the review.

Dr. Swann: Well, that's embarrassing, Mr. Speaker, that the Premier continues to avoid answering the question Albertans are asking, that professionals are asking. Three hundred and twenty-two cases in emergency since 2008, Premier: are you going to investigate them through an independent Health Quality Council investigation or not?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Health and Wellness will be working with the Health Quality Council – and the terms of reference will be very clear – to investigate all the matters that have been raised, to clear the air once and for all, and to make sure that these baseless allegations that were made in this House are addressed. Again, our aim here is to reassure Albertans that they do have confidence in the health care system.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Let's try this again, Mr. Speaker. For the benefit of the 322 patients who received compromised care in 2008, the time has come for the Premier to stop playing games. Show true leadership. Do the right thing to restore confidence in the health care system. It's time for the government to listen to the growing chorus of professionals who are demanding an independent investigation of 322 cases, Mr. Premier. Will he finally keep his word and direct the Health Quality Council to independently investigate the 322 cases?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, in fact, we're going to go beyond that. It'll be up to the Health Quality Council to investigate all matters that have been raised with respect to the 322 concrete cases of malpractice, I suspect by doctors the way I read this. We're also going to look at ER waiting times, look at a cancer strategy. The terms of reference will be entered into and agreed upon by the Minister of Health and Wellness and the Health Quality Council. They will do a thorough review of all of the practices, the amount of money going in, how we can improve access to health care, and to make sure that we're getting good value for the dollars that we're investing.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, I guess I have to ask the Premier if the fact that he knew about these cases since 2008 has anything to do with the fact that he is trying to hide the facts by not allowing an independent Health Quality Council investigation.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Health Quality Council is independent. They are independent. They receive evidence under the Alberta Evidence Act, which will be kept perfectly confidential.

They have various powers under their own act. They are independent. Learn what you're talking about once and for all. Just stop these baseless allegations and get to the facts. They will investigate everything, including the statements made by this hon. member in terms of accusing doctors of malpractice in 322 concrete cases. Those are his words, not mine.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think I heard the Premier say that he is allowing the Health Quality Council to investigate. That's a good sign. That's very good news. I guess I want to ask if he will take the next step now and make the Health Quality Council report to the Legislature instead of to the health minister? That would truly prove his intentions to make them independent.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, without any issue in terms of making the report public, that report will be made public. It will be presented here in the Legislature. It will also be made public to all Albertans so that Albertans can see for themselves what is in the report and the recommendations coming from a very qualified group of professionals that are going to do a thorough review.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Water Quality Monitoring in the Oil Sands

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The water monitoring report released yesterday said exactly what everyone expected it to say, that monitoring is insufficient and the government has no clear idea of the impact of the oil sands on the environment. Now, the minister continues to respond that they need time to implement a monitoring system, but this government has had 40 years to create a monitoring system with the growth of the oil sands, and all it has done is deny and stall. To the Minister of Environment: in the new monitoring system will the government actually be doing the monitoring? I'm not asking who's paying; I'm asking who's doing.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member knows perfectly well that I have appointed a panel that is led by two pre-eminent Albertans whose job it is in consultation with highly qualified scientists to provide me with recommendations on how the system should operate. For me to try and presume what that recommendation is going to be in advance of the report from that committee would be inappropriate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Back to the same minister. I asked about who was going to do it. Now I'm going to ask about who is going to pay for it. Who is going to pay for this monitoring system that is being developed? Is it going to come out of the minor $17 million system that the government has right now, and what percentage will be covered by government?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, that's another part of the terms of reference for the panel. If the member would like a copy of those terms of reference, I'll be happy to provide them. It's a public document. I've asked the panel to provide me with advice on how the system should be paid for, but I can say at the outset that the lion's share of the cost will be borne by industry. We have a very firm commitment that that is the case, and that will be the case. The balance of the costs should be borne, I would expect, jointly by the provincial and federal governments.

Ms Blakeman: Well, that's a bit of an answer.

Back to the same minister: has the minister learned the lesson from the inadequate water monitoring system and started reviews on other monitoring and reporting in the area? In other words, can he get some work done while we wait for more panels to report back on what an extensive monitoring system should look like?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, if the member would take the time to actually read the report that came back yesterday, she would see that, in fact, the panel reported to me that the work that has been done to date is actually very good, high-quality work but that the work that was done by Dr. Kelly and Dr. Schindler was focused in a different area. The main point that was made yesterday was that there needs to be a much more co-ordinated approach among the various medias. We can't separate air and water and have them going down two different paths. They have to be co-ordinated. That's what the panel will be putting together.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

2:00                      Emergency Health Service Delays (continued)

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Dr. Paul Parks has now joined Dr. Tyrrell, chair of the Health Quality Council, and many other doctors who say that enough evidence exists to conduct a full public inquiry with full immunity for witnesses regarding an avalanche of health system failures in our ERs, yet this government continues to run and hide and do nothing. To the health minister: Albertans want to know why you're so scared of calling a full public inquiry to look at these 322 cases, with immunity for witnesses who want to testify.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I believe the Premier just indicated that he's given me instructions to direct the Health Quality Council of Alberta to conduct a review, and that's what I'll be doing.

Mr. Anderson: We don't want a review. We want a full public inquiry with witnesses called and immunity. That is critical.

The evidence we're all talking about, except for you, was leaked last fall from ER docs at a single Alberta hospital, 322 ER horror stories. This already tabled document, which we all have, is your evidence. Your government has known about it for three years, but all they've done is evade, evade, evade. To the minister: will you call a public inquiry to investigate what is going on in our ERs?

The Speaker: There are no preambles.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to repeat this now for the second time, after the Premier repeated it four or five times. I'll try and do it slowly enough. I wonder if I could have unanimous consent to go over the 30 seconds to make sure that everybody hears it.

The Speaker: No. I'm not asking for permission from the Assembly. We're in the question period, the Routine. Go.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Okay. Then I have 10 seconds left. I am directing the Health Quality Council to review wait times for emergency rooms as well as for cancer services in relation to health quality provisions in this province.

Mr. Anderson: A review is not good enough. We want to be able to make sure that who people come forward are able to testify openly with full immunity, sir – full immunity. Will you give them that immunity during this review?

Mr. Zwozdesky: They will have that full immunity. Subject to the Alberta Evidence Act section 9(5), there will be no liabilities in that regard. They will have full protection of the regulation and the law of this province, and that guarantees their anonymity.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Villa Caritas Geriatric Mental Health Facility

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. At the grand opening of Villa Caritas earlier this week the health minister publicly stated that the facility was safe and that he had no reason to believe that it was not. What he didn't say was that a few days earlier a patient had tragically died at that facility. My question is to the minister. When was the minister informed of this tragic death?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I believe I found out about it when this member asked the question in this House. But let me tell you what else is out there in the public. The family contacted Mr. Rutherford on his radio show this morning, and the family said this. They were upset that the leader of the NDP was using their father's death as a political weapon. They said the NDP leader was, if I could use the word, lying and making assumptions. They said that the family is convinced it could have happened anywhere, and they do not blame Covenant Health or Villa Caritas for anything. So if you'd like to take this opportunity to apologize.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, I will never apologize for trying to make our facilities safe, something this minister should do.

Given that both the Public Agencies Governance Act and the Alberta health minister's mandate and roles document say that the minister must be notified of any adverse event that affects activities, operations, or the well-being of Albertans, it's clear that this minister should have been informed, and not by me. So if the minister insists that he was not told, will he explain why he was not informed of this by his staff as the law requires?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, my office was informed. I was not personally informed. However, what is important to know here is that sometimes after a circumstance like this occurs, the family requests a period for condolences, for sympathies. That period, as I understand it, was offered, certainly by my office, certainly by me. I'm surprised that this member wouldn't understand how grave this situation is and how much worse he is making it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We're trying to make the facility safe, and this minister is stretching credulity by saying that he was not informed by his staff. Frankly, I don't believe him. He categorically told this House that he was not informed, so he must either take action against the people who didn't inform him or admit he knew about the death and still chose to tell Albertans that Villa Caritas was safe despite the tragedy.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, these allegations are unbelievable. This is an extremely safe location for people with mental health difficulties, specifically geriatric people. It underwent a lot of review. People were interviewed, people with expertise in mental health. There were other people who went and visited other facilities of a similar nature to ensure that we had state-of-the-art facilities there. Again, there are things like 19 monitored cameras in all the hallways. There are shatterproof glasses. There are barriers in the stairwells. There are a number of safety precautions, and I would tell you that there are no hooks in this facility either.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East. [interjections] Lethbridge-East, you've been called.

Safety in Psychiatric Facilities

Ms Pastoor: Mr. Speaker, these questions will be delivered with absolutely no disrespect intended. Whenever a patient dies unexpectedly in a health care facility, health care providers are left wondering whether there was anything that might have been done to prevent it. It's a deep concern for front-line health care providers. To the minister of health. It's been noted publicly with respect to the recent death at Villa Caritas that Alberta does not have detailed safety protocols governing safety at psychiatric facilities. Mr. Minister, why is that?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, to my knowledge there are policies and procedures at all of these facilities that they follow. In fact, there are exactly those kinds of safety procedures in place at Villa Caritas. The policy, in fact, I believe, was faxed over to my office, and if you'd like a copy of that, hon. member, I'd be happy to provide it to you.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Given that there are internationally recognized codes and standards on safety and security in psychiatric facilities, will the minister undertake to review them within a time frame of six months to ensure that Alberta has not fallen behind in patient safety?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'll give the hon. member assurance that that will be done.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you very much. To the same minister: given that this particular case has focussed attention on the neglected area of mental health in our health system, will the minister please review the need to reinstate the Mental Health Board to ensure a voice for the mentally ill?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I've spoken with Alberta Health Services about an issue similar to this, and in fact they are working through some of the details right now to create a mental health advisory council the same way they are looking at creating a cancer advisory council. So the short answer is that almost the same thing, or a similar function at least, to what you're asking for will be created.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Stony Plain, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Sundance Power Plant Unit Closures

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, TransAlta recently announced a notice of termination for units 1 and 2 of its Sundance plant. Under the terms and conditions of the power purchase arrangements, referred to as PPAs, these units produce almost 600 megawatts for the grid and will now be sitting idle even though the expiry date of the PPA is 2017. My questions are to the Minister of Energy. Is this decision by TransAlta an indication that the terms and conditions of the PPAs are inadequate?

Mr. Liepert: No, I don't think that's the case at all, Mr. Speaker. In fact, under the terms and conditions of the PPA that's in place, there are provisions for this type of situation. It is my understanding that TransCanada, which is the purchaser of the power under this PPA, has a period of time to contest the decision of TransAlta. If necessary, there's a dispute resolution mechanism that is defined in legislation, and that's a process that needs to be followed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Lindsay: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Will this force majeure cause an increase in cost to power consumers in Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I don't think it's any secret, Mr. Speaker, that the electricity prices in the province have increased from the previous month since the unexpected shutdowns. You know, it's a matter of simple economics, supply and demand. But I think we also have to recognize that, I believe, next month the Keephills 3 plant is due to come on stream and add some 450 megawatts of power, and there was a very positive announcement today that Greengate Power has received approval from the Utilities Commission to start construction on Canada's largest wind farm in southern Alberta.

Mr. Lindsay: Mr. Speaker, will this minister commit to a review of the PPA process to ensure that other generation units in Alberta don't end up in early retirement because the PPA does not allow for sufficient funds for major rebuilds?

Mr. Liepert: I wouldn't want to leave the impression that there's an overall review of the PPA process, but I'm certainly pleased to look into that.

At the end of the day the decision on whether to rebuild these units or shut them down is one that has to be made by the owner. There's no question that when it comes to coal-fired power generation, it is operating under some uncertain market conditions today due to some federal carbon policies which haven't been fully explained. But as I said earlier, next month the Keephills 3 plant will come on stream.

Health Services Financial Reporting

Mr. MacDonald: Much to the surprise of the health minister, the Auditor General's report last October indicated that Alberta Health Services found numerous errors in the way data was being processed from the ledgers of former health authorities, including Capital health. One error resulted in more than $500 million in misclassified expenses; another resulted in the omission of $420 million of expenses. To the minister of health: how does the minister explain these errors in expenses totalling $920 million?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, when Alberta Health Services was doing their review of the books, they found that some items had been put into the wrong categories. It's like putting beverages in with entertainment or lunch or something along that line. Now, obviously, the numbers are much larger than that, but I use that simple example.

The other thing is that there were nine different health authorities, and some of them had their own classification systems. So when Alberta Health Services had to bring this all together, they had to reclassify some of those items.

Mr. MacDonald: Again to the same minister: is that $500 million that the Auditor talks about in misclassified expenses that needed to be corrected in the topside ledger, or the ledger of Alberta Health Services, an example of one organization having two sets of books?

Mr. Zwozdesky: No, Mr. Speaker. That is so ridiculous. I'll already cleared this all with the Alberta Auditor General in relation to some allegations that surfaced a week ago Monday. There is no such thing as two sets of books. What there were were some entries that had been put into this category, and they should have been put into that category. The Auditor General flagged that, and so did Alberta Health Services. They've straightened it all out. No money is missing. No money is misappropriated. It's all there, it's all accounted for, and it's all been audited.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: given that the Auditor indicates in his 2010 report that $420 million of expenses was omitted between what was in the Alberta Health Services ledger and what was in I believe it's Covenant Health's and Capital health's ledgers, is that not another example of this organization, the one that you are in charge of, sir, having two sets of books?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Not at all, Mr. Speaker. I fully resent the accusation or allegation or innuendo that underlies the tone of that question. The fact is that Alberta Health Services spent considerable – considerable – amounts of time to reclassify 1,300 different entries. They did it manually to ensure that it was properly done and that it passed the smell test of the Alberta Auditor General, and it has.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Gas Station Leak in Bowness

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Residents of the Bowness neighbourhood in my constituency continue to deal with the impacts of a gasoline leak from a local gas station. They're concerned that as the months pass, all they see is one plan after another. My question is to the Minister of Environment. When will my constituents see actual work being done to clean up the contamination so that their lives can get back to normal?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I would like to express my support for those residents in Bowness. This must be a very difficult situation for them to deal with. I can assure them and I can assure their MLA that work has already begun to clean up this incident. In fact, 3,000 litres of the estimated 7,000 to 9,000 litres have been collected. I've instructed my staff to do everything that they can to speed this process up. They're delineating the plume as we speak, and that will help to put the plan together.

The Speaker: The hon. Member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental to the same minister. Remediation takes time and money. What compliance tools does your ministry have to continue to push and place pressure to ensure that the company is held accountable?

Mr. Renner: Well, the fact that the company is held accountable is really the underlying premise for everything that we do. We have in place at this point an environmental protection order that gives us the ability to demand that services be performed by the company. We continue to work with this company, with its environmental consultants to monitor the work that's ongoing. Mr. Speaker, at the end of the day I can assure members of this House that it is the polluter who is responsible for paying, and we will ensure that not only is the work done in a timely manner but that the taxpayer is not left on the hook to pay for it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplemental to the same minister. The mayor of Calgary has appointed a point person from the city to handle this issue on their side. Will he consider doing the same?

Mr. Renner: Well, we have a regional director in our southern region office who is the lead person on this file. Our staff have been working with the residents and making themselves available to discuss issues and also, in a similar vein, with city officials because the city is involved with this as well. We've had a number of neighbourhood meetings. In fact, just last week our staff met with the residents. We'll continue to provide updates and answer questions as necessary. We understand the importance of this issue to the local residents.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

All-terrain Vehicle Safety

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In Alberta the rate at which children and teens less than 16 years of age are killed in ATV-related deaths is astounding. Of those children who have died, 47 per cent were not wearing a helmet. Mandatory helmet legislation is not only a necessity but should be common sense for this government. To the Minister of Transportation: does this minister know how many deaths have occurred due to weak and insufficient ATV safety legislation?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I've got to say that one – one – innocent person dying or one person dying is too many if it can be prevented in any way. It's very, very important what we do for safety with ATVs in this province. We work every day on trying to better our education system, on making sure that people are educated before they get on these powerful pieces of equipment.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We require helmets for bicycles. Why not for ATVs? To the minister again: why has this government done nothing to protect these innocent children that the minister is talking about?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, we do a lot to protect these innocent children. There's no one under the age of 14 years that's allowed to ride an ATV in this province without direct supervision by either riding with the person or riding beside the person. You can't legislate common sense, but you sure can try to educate people, and you work with people all the time. I have ATVs myself. I never allow anybody on them without a helmet.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. You can legislate common sense. We have done it with seat belts.

To the minister again: will this government make a commitment today to support helmet requirements for ATV operators under 16?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, we're looking into that all the time. I've got to tell you that before you pass legislation, you have to make sure that you can look after all the unintended consequences that could come from that legislation, and that's what we're working with. We can only enforce on public lands. We can't enforce on private lands. Therefore, we're working on what the best piece of I'm going to say education can be to keep educating people. It's not just helmets. There are all kinds of safety equipment that people should be wearing when riding those ATVs.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

2:20 Social Assistance Programs

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In 2008 a review of social-based assistance programs was announced with the goal of simplifying the process for those Albertans who rely on these key programs. My questions are to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Since you were asked to lead the cross-ministry review and since we haven't seen any results recently, does that mean the review is no longer a priority of your ministry?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, there is nothing further from the truth. In fact, this is not just a good-news story; this is a great-news story. This government is very committed to the Alberta Supports program and its goal of improving and simplifying the delivery of its social programs to eligible Albertans. The commitment is confirmed in the latest budget with Alberta Supports receiving $14 million in the '11-12 budget to support this worthwhile initiative.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: how will this investment benefit Albertans, and what does it mean to my constituents who rely on these social-based assistance programs in their day-to-day lives?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, Alberta Supports will make it less complicated for Albertans to find information, access services, and get help when they're transitioning between programs and when they're looking for programs. Currently we've launched the provincial call centre and a web portal. As well, several pilot projects are being implemented to test new approaches to delivering services to Albertans in person. Results from these pilot projects will guide future improvements to our in-person delivery of services.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. While these plans are encouraging, they're just that: plans. When will Albertans actually notice a tangible difference from Alberta Supports?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we've already started to make a difference. Along with other changes the Alberta Supports contact centre and the web portal were launched last year, and already these tools are catching on. Last month there were 6,000 hits on the website, and there have been over 40,000 hits since last June. The contact centre received 25,000 calls last month; there have been over 100,000 calls to the contact centre since June.

The vision for Alberta Supports is to give Albertans the choice of online, telephone, or face-to-face to receive and provide information that can help them to get the right services at the right time.

Water Quality of the Athabasca River

Ms. Notley: The Minister of Environment is on the record claiming that toxins in northern Alberta water are naturally occurring and unrelated to oil sands activity, yet yesterday a scientific report found that industrial activity is contributing to water contamination and that government monitoring had never been designed to test for the impact of oil sands on the contamination. So will the Minister of Environment now apologize to Albertans for repeatedly making scientifically unfounded claims that the lower Athabasca water quality is not threatened by industrial operations?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I stand by my comments. I've always indicated that there are no detectable levels of contaminants and that we have done everything we can to ensure that the water quality in the Athabasca River is maintained by prohibiting any discharge of any industrial fluids into the river.

What the report yesterday identified is that there are very small quantities of emissions that come through the air that could theoretically end up in the water and that more testing needs to be done to assure ourselves that we have control of that.

Ms. Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the Minister of Environment is also on the record lauding the RAMP monitoring system as adequate and given that yesterday's report concludes that the notion of RAMP as an adequate system of environmental monitoring is incorrect, will the Minister of Environment apologize for consistently and repeatedly providing the wrong information to Albertans about the quality of environmental monitoring in the lower Athabasca?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, RAMP has done an admirable job of doing what they were intended to do, and that was to monitor inputs into the system. However, the science has changed. The concept of environmental management has changed since the inception of RAMP, and now it's time to move on. It's time to begin to think about how we're going to monitor, to understand the impact from a cumulative effects perspective from all media: from water and air and land and biodiversity. RAMP was not intended to do that.

Ms. Notley: Given that 40 years of inadequately monitored development has occurred under this government's watch – and it didn't just change yesterday, by the way – and given that after all this time change had to be initiated by an outside scientist not under the thumb of this government or industry, will the Minister of Environment tell us how exactly Albertans are ever supposed to trust this government to protect Albertans' environment, public health, or international reputation?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, I have to dispute the assumption that this member makes that this was somehow initiated by someone from outside of Environment. The panel that we have in place today was put in place for the implementation of cumulative effects environmental monitoring. I've been talking about that long before the report came from Kelly and Schindler. The fact of the matter is that we passed in this House the Alberta Land Stewardship Act. The Alberta Land Stewardship Act is the regulatory authority . . .

Drug Shortages

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, I rise to address an issue of life-and-death importance that doesn't get enough attention. The Pharmacists Association is concerned that over 90 per cent of pharmacists have difficulty filling prescriptions for common medicines, including antibiotics, antidepressants, and heart drugs. Patients are often frustrated and angry, and patient health is being affected. To the minister of health. The pharmacists' top recommendation is to set up an information system about drug shortages. What's the minister doing to get such an information system in place?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I met with the representatives from the Alberta College of Pharmacists just a few days back. We are making some progress on this, perhaps not as quickly as even I would like to see, hon. member, but nonetheless the discussions are taking place, and we are moving it along reasonably quickly.

Dr. Taft: Given the severity and widespread nature of this issue, I'm wondering what the provincial government as a major drug purchaser with a direct impact on supply and demand is doing to bring in policies that will promote rather than hinder timely supply of drugs?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has indeed flagged a very important issue. I want to point out to Albertans that this particular shortage that occurred, for example, in Calgary not that long ago wasn't only local to their area. For those particular drugs it was also a world-wide situation. There are issues of chemical supply to make some of these particular drugs that are at play, and there were other issues with a couple of the manufacturers to do with their assembly lines. So there were some reasons for that. That's why we flagged it a couple of weeks ago to try and get something done about it here.

Dr. Taft: Well, given that the patient always comes first, what does the minister of health say to Albertans who need medicines like penicillin or other antibiotics or antidepressants or heart drugs and cannot get them because of drug shortages? What do you say to them?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, by and large the shortages that occurred were with respect to generic drugs. So what we have said is that we will cover the cost of the brand-name drug. So they still have access to the same drug, and we'll cover the difference in pay.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Assured Income for the Severely Handicapped program, known as AISH, is a very important program for vulnerable Albertans. The rising cost of living has put great pressure on our AISH recipient constituents, who are already on very tight budgets. My questions today are to the hon. Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. Can the minister explain why the overall AISH budget was increased but not the monthly $1,188 payment to our AISH constituents?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the AISH budget was increased by almost $50 million to a total of $783 million this year. This increase allows us to maintain the current maximum AISH monthly benefit while still being able to accommodate caseload growth. The AISH living allowance is $1,188 per month, as the hon. member mentioned. There have been five increases totalling $290 million since 2005, and three of these increases have happened under this Premier.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Minister. To the same hon. minister: when our AISH constituents are faced with emergency situations, what other assistance is available to them?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, in addition to their financial assistance, AISH clients may also be eligible for personal benefits for needs such as special diets, child-related expenses, medical transportation costs, and emergency situations. As well, AISH clients, their spouses, and dependent children are all eligible to receive benefits, including prescription drugs, eye care, dental care, and emergency ambulance services. The average amount per client for health benefits is about $370 per month.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same hon. minister. Our AISH constituents have expressed concern over having the AISH payments reduced when they receive CPP disability payments. Can the minister explain why this reduction is allowed?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, our government has been working with the federal government for years. The AISH program works together with federal government programs such as CPP; it does not replace them. Benefits from the CPP disability program are considered replacement income, intended to cover basic-living needs. The income is nonexempt and is considered dollar for dollar when determining a client's monthly AISH assistance. This process is consistent with the treatment of CPP income by other social assistance programs in the country.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Support Programs for Doctors

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has a family doctor shortage, and it's time to remind the health minister about this, considering that nine programs that support family doctors are set to expire before March 31 if negotiations aren't agreed on. These programs are essential for family doctors to operate, and they must continue. Why, Minister, are you trying to destroy the trust between family doctors by eliminating the dollars you provide for more complex care and the time that they have to spend with their patients?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, nobody is trying to destroy or diminish or whatever she's alleging. In fact, we're working very closely with doctors on a number of initiatives pursuant to our five-year health action plan, and that's going very, very well.

With respect to the AMA negotiations I think I've already indicated in this House on numerous occasions, Mr. Speaker, that I am not part of the negotiating committee. Each of the three groups – Alberta Health Services, the Alberta Medical Association, and Alberta Health and Wellness – has negotiators at the table, and I wouldn't be surprised if they're still at the table even right now.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Minister, you are the Minister of Alberta Health and Wellness. Speak up.

I want to follow up on something that you said. Given that you continue to talk about your five-year funding plan, the first of its kind in Canada, how do you plan to keep family doctors in this province if you're going to eliminate these programs?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, nobody is talking about eliminating programs. They're negotiating how to go forward with those programs. That's what negotiating is all about. But let's not lose sight of the fact that we have some harsh fiscal realities in this province, and we are fortunate that we came through them as well as we did under the leadership of this Premier and this entire government caucus.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the health minister. You stated several times that your goal is to attract and retain family doctors. Why, then, are you attacking the family doctors in such a callous way by eliminating their physician and family support program?

Mr. Zwozdesky: I don't know where she's getting this notion that anything is being eliminated. There are negotiations going on, and to the best of my knowledge our folks are not negotiating through the media. We have a lot of support already for the clinical stabilization initiative. That's about $42 million. There's the business cost program, that helps physicians get established. That's about $62 million. We've got a physician on-call program. That's about $91 million. We have a specialist primary care initiative program. That's $10 million. We have physician benefits of $16.8 million, of $5.9 million. And I could go on, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Economic Recovery Initiatives

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the past couple of years we have been hit with the worst recession since the early 1930s. We were prepared for it, but we did not come out completely unscathed. My first question is to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. What is this government doing to help get the province's economy back on track?

Mr. Snelgrove: There's no way I can answer that in 30 seconds, but I'll try. Mr. Speaker, first we brought out a budget that reflects what Albertans want to do. It keeps them healthier, educated. It keeps them working. It keeps Alberta as a very solid, stable place to attract investment. We have reassured the business community, including Albertans, that we have confidence in them and their future. I just look down the line: the drilling program, that put thousands of Albertans back to work; the agriculture initiative to sell our food to other markets in the world. The province is on the right track. We've never lost sight of that. It's just a little detour.

Mr. Benito: Productivity and being competitive are two very important ideas in moving forward. My first supplemental is to the same minister. What specific initiatives does your ministry have in place to ensure that Alberta remains more productive and competitive?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, quite honestly, the answer is in the question. We have to be more competitive, and we have to be more productive. We established Productivity Alberta in 2008, that can bring different industry and Alberta initiatives together to work on it, and we've got the Competitiveness Council, that is looking at a broad range of how we can maintain our competitive advantage around the world. I look forward to their report, which should come to us early in the summer.

Mr. Benito: To the same minister: what assurances and commitment can your ministry give to Albertans that every possible measure is being taken to speed up our province's economic recovery?

Mr. Snelgrove: Well, Mr. Speaker, one of the challenges that business has identified to us is skilled labour. We invested more money in advanced education. We're working with Employment and Immigration to make sure that we have the training in the regions where the upgrading needs to take place. You know, the tools need to be there for industry to create the wealth and create the jobs, and that's really, quite honestly, where the government is. We need to create the environment, both socially and economically, for businesses to locate or re-establish themselves in Alberta and provide that job so that that Albertan has some jingle in his pocket.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Forensic Pathologist Supply

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Calgary medical examiner's office will soon be inoperative after its two remaining forensic pathologists resigned. The indications are that overwork and stress were major contributing factors to the departure of these last two doctors. My questions are to the Minister of Justice. Are these resignations indicative of the province expecting too much forensic work to be done by too few doctors?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to thank the hon. member for raising this issue. It's one of which we are well aware, and we're very concerned about it as well. I would just point out that this is a problem that's pervasive around North America, if not the world. Medical examiners of this type are highly trained, and they're in great demand. Everybody is looking for them. We're aggressively out there recruiting. We have received notice from several of the examiners that they will be leaving. They're not gone yet, and we're taking that time to recruit.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a shame that 20 positions for medical training were reduced at the universities this past year.

Given that justice delayed is justice denied, how can the absence of Calgary-based pathologists not unnecessarily delay Calgary court cases?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you. There are a number of initiatives that we're undertaking in the short term. We will be looking at locums. We're also looking at using hospital pathologists. I will say, too, to the hon. member that we have an arrangement with the University of Alberta, which will be training interns to work as medical examiners. We want to train our own people. That's very much part of our plan. We're also looking at a business plan to increase the number of medical examiners.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I hope part of the solution is foreign-trained upgrading, more seats available to upgrade foreign physicians, foreign-trained pathologists.

Given that upgrades to the Calgary morgue were made in 2009-10, is this yet another example of the government funding facilities without providing adequate staff and resources to operate them?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, in recent years we have increased the number of medical examiners in Alberta from four to seven. As I said, we're looking at a business plan to increase it even more. It's a tough, competitive market out there to recruit medical examiners. As I say, they're in great demand around the world, but we're quite confident that Alberta is an attractive place for medical examiners to come and work.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Barbless Fish Hooks

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the past number of years there have been more and more regulations for sport fishing in Alberta: catch-and-release only, bait bans, and barbless hooks only. A number of studies, however, have indicated that the utility of barb hook restrictions as a management tool is severely limited if not lacking altogether. My questions are all for the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development. Given the fact that there is no clear scientific justification for barbless hook requirements, Mr. Minister, would you consider eliminating that regulation?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, the member opposite makes a very good observation. That is, in fact, backed up by the Fishing Phile, written by the venerable Bob Scammell, that indicates that this should be looked at. The department, of course, is committed to improving Alberta's fisheries through a variety of initiatives. This happens to be one that was undertaken in probably 2002, 2004. I would say to the hon. member . . .

The Speaker: We'll keep setting out the lure.

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, will the minister consider relaxing the regulations at least for younger fishermen so that we can get them involved in the sport of angling?

Mr. Knight: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, the business of relaxing regulations: I don't think that's exactly what the member would suggest that we should do. As long as the regulations and the conservation efforts that are put forward by our department and by all anglers in the province of Alberta are maintained, I think that there's adequate opportunity to bring younger anglers into the sport in Alberta.

Dr. Brown: Can the minister advise the House what he's doing to encourage young kids to get out fishing and to join in the sport of angling?

Mr. Knight: A number of things, Mr. Speaker, but I think the one that we might look at as an outstanding piece of work is that, you know, we've got a number of educational opportunities. We stock a lot of bodies of water in the province with fish. There is good opportunity, I think, for youngsters to be involved. The Bow Habitat Station in Calgary is probably one of the major pieces that we do that helps educate youngsters relative to the angling industry.

The Speaker: I could declare a recess, and we could all go fishing for the next few days. Of course, the Government House Leader could propose a motion that we take the next week off to go fishing, too.

That was 18 members who were recognized today, with 108 questions and answers. In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine, with part of Members' Statements. We'll continue in about 20 seconds from now.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Calgary Ring Road

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Infrastructure keeps a city moving and its economy growing while giving its people the means to pursue a high standard of living. Projects such as the Calgary airport tunnel ensure that communities are able to thrive and prosper. But it's not enough to simply build a tunnel or an intersection or a bridge or a road. These projects need to be done the right way, in the right place, and at the right time.

All of this is especially true when it comes to Calgary's ring road. For three full decades this government has failed to come to an agreement with the Tsuu T'ina Nation, preventing the south-west portion of the ring road from being constructed. So now as an alternative this government is back to considering the five options of their plan B, the best known of which involves going either under or over the ecologically sensitive Weaselhead natural area, an important green space for our growing city.

Mr. Speaker, this is no solution. This government must find a way to bring the Tsuu T'ina Nation back to the negotiating table so that the Sarcee Trail extension can move forward with minimal environmental impact as well as achieving a positive economic impact for the Tsuu T'ina. It's time to breathe new life into plan A and get moving on the only real viable option for Calgarians. Completing the Calgary ring road will provide immeasurable benefits to the city and to the province. It will improve quality of life, economic opportunity, and even environmental benefits as vehicles merely passing through Calgary won't have to waste time stuck in the city, burning fuel while idling at stop lights.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the Premier and his ministers to complete this project in a timely manner without damaging the Weaselhead. Our city must grow, but it must do so with respect for the environment and sensitivity towards the delicate ecological balance.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

World Kidney Day

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak about World Kidney Day, being celebrated on this, the 10th of March. World Kidney Day aims to raise awareness about our kidneys' role in maintaining our overall health and wellness and to reduce the frequency and impact of kidney disease and related health problems world-wide.

The theme of this year's World Kidney Day is Protect Your Kidneys, Save Your Heart, reminding people that kidneys play a key role in the regulation of blood pressure, filtering the blood, and bone health, to name only a few. Amazingly, the kidneys filter a litre of blood in the body every minute, removing waste, regulating blood pressure, and balancing the body's chemicals. The kidneys often exhibit the first signs of larger health problems, including diabetes and hypertension. They are, in essence, our body's smoke alarms.

These are issues that affect a growing number of Canadians. More than 22,000 people in Canada are on dialysis, and almost 160,000 are living with transplanted kidneys. In Alberta an estimated 1,900 people are on dialysis. One-quarter of all Albertans will experience some loss of kidney function after they reach the age of 65.

While the health implication issues such as high blood pressure, diabetes, and kidney failure are obvious, there's also a high cost to treating kidney failure in Canada. While only .1 per cent of patients in Canada suffer from chronic kidney disorder, nearly 2 per cent of Canada's health spending goes towards dealing with this disorder. Maintaining healthy kidneys and being aware of their importance to our overall health will produce a cascade effect that can only benefit Alberta's health system in the long run.

On this World Kidney Day I encourage all Albertans to be active, to make healthy food choices, to cut back their sodium intake, and to work to reduce their blood pressure. Mr. Speaker, these conscious efforts will go a long way in ensuring that all Albertans live a long and enjoyable high quality of life.

Presenting Petitions

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, as chair of the Standing Committee on Private Bills I request leave to present the following petitions that have been received for private bills under Standing Order 98(2):

- (1) the petition of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties for the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Amendment Act, 2011;
- (2) the petition of the Galt School of Nursing Alumnae Society of Alberta for the Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act;
- (3) the petition of the Auburn Bay Residents Association for the Auburn Bay Residents Association Tax Exemption Act;
- (4) the petition of the Cranston Residents Association for the Cranston Residents Association Tax Exemption Act;
- (5) the petition of the New Brighton Residents Association for the New Brighton Residents Association Tax Exemption Act;
- (6) the petition of the Tuscany Residents Association for the Tuscany Residents Association Tax Exemption Act; and
- (7) the petition of Glenn McNamara, Chair of the Board of Governors of Hull Child and Family Services, for the Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2011.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that on Monday, March 14, 2011, Written Question 9 will be dealt with and Motion for a Return 2 will be accepted.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on behalf of the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Justice System Monitoring Act

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce Bill 204, the Justice System Monitoring Act, on behalf of my colleague from Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Speaker, there's a famous saying: justice delayed is justice denied. Too often when it comes to serious crimes, victims' suffering is compounded by long, drawn-out court cases. In the rarest cases in which innocents are charged, every extra day it takes to clear their name is a travesty. While the Criminal Code is a federal matter, this province is responsible for administering justice. Simply put, Alberta's Justice department needs to do a better job of ensuring that court cases are handled in a reasonable amount of time. It is not only victims that suffer from delays; our remand centres are overflowing and prosecutorial staff are overworked. Something practical and tangible needs to be done. As with most things, the first step towards making improvement is understanding the problem and then measuring your progress.

Bill 204 would mandate the Justice department to track and present statistics on various measures of efficiency, including length of time from laying a charge until verdict, total time of court hearings in a case, length of time between reporting an offence and laying a charge, number of delays exceeding three months, number of prosecutors involved on each file, number of adjournments granted, number of trials that begin on their designated day, approximation of costs of delays in terms of peace officers and prosecutors as well as witnesses, victims, and jurors.

While respecting the personal information of those involved, this bill will cast light on our justice system and better enable all Albertans to understand where the efficiencies in the system are. It will also provide a baseline from which the government can tangibly report progress. The ministry will have six months after the calendar year-end to present a report online providing the statistics outlined in the act. If the House is not sitting, the report must be tabled within 15 days of the next sitting.

These reasonable measures will ensure that the public, the House, and the Minister of Justice are all aware of the state of our justice system and that there is an ongoing dialogue about where improvements need to be. Victims of crime as well as those falsely accused deserve verdicts as swiftly as possible. Bill 204 is an important step in that direction.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 204 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a letter that I wrote to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo regarding the Election Finances and Contributions Disclosure Act and the Chief Electoral Officer's role in reviewing possible contraventions of that act.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of the Law Enforcement Review Board's annual report for the year 2009.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As per the standing orders I'm tabling the requisite number of copies of a letter I've mailed to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of the advisory task force report Building Financial Capacity for School Board Trustees and Superintendents. As chair of the task force I've brought together stakeholders from the Alberta School Boards Association, the College of Alberta School Superintendents, and the Association of School Business Officials of Alberta to review school board budget systems and processes as well as the financial oversight. I'd like to thank all those stakeholders for their tireless work on this particular task force.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of three documents which deal with barbless hooks and angling. The first of these is an article from the August 2010 issue of the Alberta Outdoorsmen. The article is titled Mandatory Barbless: Good for Fish or Gormless Boondoggle, by Bob Scammell. The author points out that the scientific data does not support the ban on barbed hooks and that lots of enforcement time is wasted on unnecessary regulation.

The second is an article entitled Effect of Hook Type on Mortality, Trauma, and Capture: Efficiency of Wild Stream Trout Caught by Angling with Spinners, authored by Robert DuBois and Richard Dubielzig of the University of Wisconsin-Madison. It's published in the North American Journal of Fisheries Management and indicates that a biological advantage with the use of single- or barbless-hook spinners with wild stream is not justified.

The third article is titled Barbed Hook Restrictions in Catch-and-Release Trout Fisheries: A Social Issue, by D. J. Schill and R. L. Scarpella from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, published in the North American Journal of Fisheries Management, which concludes that managers proposing new regulations should consider the social costs of regulations such as barbed hook restrictions that produce no demonstrable biological gain.

The Speaker: Ordinarily I draw to the attention of the member the length of the statement with respect to the tablings. This being such an intriguing subject, I just couldn't bring myself to do it.

Mr. Anderson: A very intriguing subject as is this, Mr. Speaker. I have a number of tablings today and I'll try to work through them as quickly as possible.

The first is the Thursday, March 3, 2011, copy of the Calgary Sun. The front of it has a picture of the federal building, House-Poor Idea, of course, referring to the waste of the federal building, $115 million this year.

The second is the Edmonton Sun, one of the favourites of all blue-collar workers around the province. I love the Sun as well. It's entitled The Money Pit. A very interesting article there.

There's also an editorial, again from the Calgary Sun, called Expensive Symbols of Our Discontent, outlining how this was a gross mismanagement of taxpayer funds at this time.

There is a further editorial, also March 8, from the Calgary Sun, called MLAs Play and We Pay. Again it talks about the utter waste of taxpayer dollars on the federal building at a time of deficits and increasing debt.

Also, going out to rural Alberta, we have an article entitled What Will We Do When the Piggy Bank's Empty? A fantastic article there on the federal building and the gross waste and mismanagement of funds by not delaying that project.

There's also Canadian Newsstand, which also goes out to many rural papers. Budget 2011: A Sea of Red Ink. It goes through many of the wastes with regard to the federal building.

We have the Vegreville Observer right in the Premier's home riding, I think that is. New MLA Offices Not a Priority. Again it's an editorial saying how much of a waste this project in the federal building is.

Then, of course, we have another Sun Media article on March 3: MLAs' $275M Home Blasted. It goes through and essentially savages the government on their gross mismanagement and wasteful spending on the federal building.

We also have one of my favourite papers, the Airdrie City View. Again an editorial saying that the renovations, the $275 million, to the federal building, were a complete utter waste and something that should not have been a priority for the government.

I have 30 or 40 more of these, but I will wait to table them maybe on another day. Thank you.

The Speaker: I'm always amazed when a member stands up and says "I'll be brief," and then takes seven minutes to be brief.

Hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, do you want to continue your legacy?

Mr. Chase: Yes, I do.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. And I sincerely hope the government will inform members of the opposition prior to the demolition of the Annex.

Mr. Speaker, I am tabling e-mails from the following individuals who are seeking the preservation of the Castle wilderness and believe clear-cutting, otherwise known as block cuts, will damage the ecology, watershed, wildlife, and natural species and must be prohibited at all costs: Clark Davis, Sue Allen, Jenifer Guillemine, Jane Stanley, Claudette Chase, Marlene Osterberg, Matt Hornland, Shawna Trudel, Judy Wright, Marg Sutton, Tanya Brunelle, Amanda Doyle, Janice Cook, Randal Clark, Kerry Pitt, Craig Hall, Nick Aikins, Wendy Glossop, Kathy Ponto, Angela Wiens, Alain Robert, Lyn Schwarz, Pamela Gordon, Kirk Miles, and Mintje Jacobson.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I think, hon. members, Standing Order 7(7) now kicks in. It says, "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly." Shall I call Orders of the Day?

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders

Third Reading

Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board and Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my privilege to rise today and move third reading of Bill 9, Appropriation (Supplementary Supply) Act, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to read Hansard, but I also like to read supplementary supply estimates. After question period I had time to do that, hon. member, and I have more questions for you.

An Hon. Member: You do?

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. There are lots of questions in here. My first question would be, of course, the Treasury Board minutes that are referred to in the supplementary supply document, not in the bill but in the estimates. For a government that claims that they're open and transparent and accountable, why can I not go to the library downstairs and look up the details of each and every Treasury Board minute?

I'm just going to pick one, for instance, in Service Alberta for 10 and a half million dollars, Treasury Board minute 47/2010. Why is that so difficult for taxpayers to have access to? That would be one. Transportation: I have more questions on the Transportation adjustment here in a moment, but there's a Treasury Board minute, 41/2010, where there is an adjustment of $205 million. I would appreciate the details. I think taxpayers would appreciate the details. Treasury Board minutes are not public documents, and I must say that I was surprised and disappointed to learn that. I just naturally assumed they would be public documents if one knew where to look, but that's not the case.

Now, to the hon. minister. The adjustments to the gross amount include an increase of $306 million as a result of an approved carryover of 2009-10 unused capital investment appropriations, and this is according to the Financial Administration Act. Most of it is in Transportation. There's some in Tourism, Parks and Recreation, Sustainable Resource Development, Solicitor General and Public Security, Service Alberta, and $66 million in Infrastructure. I assumed after reading this that this was transferred forward to these estimates, and I cannot find those amounts. The unused amount was carried over. Carried over to where? If I could have, Mr. Speaker, an explanation on that, I surely would appreciate it. That's a significant amount of money.

I know in the health care budget, certainly, $300 million: what do we care if we can't find it? That's sort of the attitude over there. I know the Treasury Board president doesn't share that view. He would look after every nickel, every dime, every quarter, and every dollar. I have confidence in that. But other ministers: I don't have the same confidence. I just don't. I read the Auditor General's reports, and I think to myself: my, still in cabinet?

Now, Mr. Speaker, with Bill 9 this side of the House has certainly reviewed the budget for Aboriginal Relations that's requested and for Advanced Education and Technology. I would like to note with Advanced Education and Technology that I was surprised last week to receive a call from an unemployed apprentice who was endeavouring to become an electrician. This young man made many trips to NAIT, many trips early in the morning, to get in the lineups to see if he could take a class, and he could not. We're looking at – and I'm a little skeptical on this one – a labour shortage right now. There are so many people in this province who want to get training or additional training who cannot. They can't seem to get access to the system. I'm curious as to how we are deploying our financial resources in Advanced Education. It seems to me quite odd that individuals who are unemployed and who want to upgrade their skills seem to be having such difficulty accessing the classroom of their choice.

We talked in committee on Children and Youth Services. We talked about Culture and Community Spirit. I read in Hansard what other hon. members had to say about the Culture and Community Spirit request, and I have nothing to add.

Now, Employment and Immigration. We have certainly gone over that. Environment, Infrastructure, Municipal Affairs, Seniors and Community Supports, Service Alberta, Sustainable Resource Development, and Tourism, Parks and Recreation, of course, looking for a $300 million amount. That may not seem like much. One can read off those names of various departments, and what is it? It's three-quarters of a billion dollars. Oh, well, we missed the mark again. There are some valid reasons for these requests, but there are some that I'm a little skeptical of. I'm a little skeptical. Yes?

Mr. Liepert: It's the first time you've ever been skeptical.

Mr. MacDonald: I never was skeptical, Mr. Speaker, until I read the 2008-09 Health and Wellness annual report, signed off by a certain hon. member of this Assembly. What is said in the audited statements is certainly not repeated in the minister's, if I can call it, brag book section. A brag book section: that's the first part of an annual report, where we talk about performance measures and we try to meet the general accounting standards and we have the minister's speech. Yes, hon. member, I am skeptical, and I'm skeptical for a number of reasons.

With that report in question, 2008-09, I would be skeptical for $69 million reasons because I for a number of days have had a great deal of difficulty trying to balance what's in one part of that annual report and what's in another. So there, Mr. Speaker, would be my reasons for being skeptical of this government's overall ability to manage money and budget so that we do not have such an issue each and every year with supplementary supply.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate an explanation at some point from the government members about the adjustments that are noted on page 7 in the estimates, which are formulated in this bill. If I could have an explanation of where precisely that $306 million that's carried over goes. Is it into general revenue, is it into the next year, or where? I would appreciate that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona now becomes the third speaker in this debate. The speaking time now is 15 minutes, and 29(2)(a) is available at the conclusion. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to be able to rise to speak briefly to Bill 9 and the elements that it contains. In general, I mean, this is a bill, of course, that's geared towards accessing additional funds from those that were initially planned for in the budget of 2010-11. There are certainly reasonable grounds, in certain cases, for when the government would have to be coming back to us for more funds, depending on whatever sort of unpredictable situation arises. However, I would suggest that most of the places where they're coming back to us for more money are places that were actually quite predictable.

I'm not necessarily disagreeing with some of the requests that are coming forward. Some of them are of concern to me, but many of them I don't disagree with. What I do disagree with is this notion of trying to pretend that these cost pressures have gone away and then underbudgeting the need for this expenditure, disrupting the planning accordingly, and then coming back to this Legislature seeking more income.

It seems to me that this arises primarily from the political liability associated with introducing a budget that has a deficit which is bigger than members of the government believe is politically palatable. Fair enough, you know. As, certainly, myself and my colleague from Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood have stated repeatedly in this Legislature, our party actually has the best record in the country for introducing the greatest number of balanced budgets over the last 25 years, so I understand the value of introducing a balanced budget. That's a valuable thing, and it's what Albertans and taxpayers expect.

I would suggest that rather than underestimating the resources that are necessary to meet the needs and the expectations of Albertans, instead what needs to happen is that the government needs to more responsibly look at its revenue side of the budget. In particular, the government needs to look at collecting the fair share of royalties that are owed to Albertans as a result of the exploitation of resources which belong to Albertans.

This government has over the course of the last five years actually reduced quite significantly the amount of money that Albertans collect and enjoy as a result of oil company utilization of our oil and gas resources. In so doing, they then create a false pressure to reduce spending in order to balance the budget. Then we get into this situation where they, in fact, claim that they're reducing spending, which anybody would reasonably expect could not be done. So we get into the situation where a year later we're looking at trying to have the Legislature approve this spending of additional funds. As I said, I'm not necessarily opposed in all cases to the spending of additional funds, but I am opposed to this pattern of budgeting and the complete unwillingness on the part of government members to collect a fair return for Albertans on our oil and gas resources.

Having said that, there are a few areas within the supplementary supply estimates that I have some concerns with. The first relates, of course, to the additional funding that's being requested by the ministry of advanced education in the form of an additional roughly $60 million for student loans. It's worth noting that a mere two years ago this government was coming to us looking for roughly $130 million for student loans. If we pass this bill, we will look at actually expending $260 million for student loans.

What that represents is a significant and profound increase in the debt load that we are shifting to the shoulders of students in this province. That is happening for a variety of reasons, not the least of which is this government's failure to honestly address the need for tuition freezes as they impact students. They suggest that they are kind of freezing tuition in relation to the cost-of-living formula, but then, of course, they're letting institutions willy-nilly go out and come up with arrangements around those freezes in order to increase the costs shouldered by students in the form of noninstructional fees. Notwithstanding that there were suggestions that they wouldn't allow that to go ahead, it clearly is going ahead at, you know, 70 to 80 per cent of the rate which was first proposed. That's going ahead, and that's creating more pressure for our students. Obviously, the institutions themselves in many cases need that extra money.

Then the question becomes: is this government truly interested in investing in a greater level of education for its citizens in order to fund this transition into what we hope someday will be a new economy, a knowledge-based economy, using the government's language here, or are we just interested in saying that we're going to do that and then making students shoulder unnecessary levels of financial burden?

Quite frankly, in many cases what it will do is ensure that only those students who come from families that are comfortable with taking on $60,000, $70,000, or $100,000 debts in order to finish their education will go to university, only the kids from those families. Kids from families that are not comfortable with taking on that kind of debt, usually because they are lower income families, working-class families, will no longer have unfettered equal access to our systems of advanced education, which we should be encouraging in this province if we are truly going to educate our workforce. What I see, then, in this extra ask in this bill for advanced education is a clear decision to move the cost for advanced education onto the shoulders of only those students that can afford it, and that's a concern.

In aboriginal affairs I had a question that we discussed in estimates, but I do believe it actually relates to the year passed, which would then be appropriate for this conversation. Under the First Nations development fund, which is the lottery fund, which I understand is actually coming in under budget – and we see that in this bill – I had noted that there appeared to be some reporting inconsistencies in that one particular band appeared to have received a total of about $30 million from the First Nations development fund, yet the online listing of recipients of the funds from that fund only showed about $20 million of what those dollars were used for. So there appeared to be about a $10 million gap, and I'm inquiring as to whether this $8 million shortfall that is related to that is somehow related to that misreporting. It's just a question. Certainly, any light that can be shed on that would be appreciated.

Obviously, as well, one of the areas that we have a significant concern about is the area of Employment and Immigration. I recall very clearly two years ago and last year sitting in the budget discussion with the Minister of Employment and Immigration and suggesting that their plans to reduce funding for income support programs were very poorly thought out, that it was clear that the demand on those programs was going to increase, and that as a result of the economic slowdown more and more people were going to need to access those funds. Those concerns were ignored, and we went ahead with a budget that clearly underestimated the demand on those line items.

Once again and for the second year in a row, maybe even the third year, we are back in this House seeking more funds for income support programs. I'm concerned when the government does that. Clearly, there is still a need for this, and I am very concerned about what kind of institutional gatekeeping and pressure on applicants has occurred in order to reduce the number of applications and reduce what is coming back into this House. On one hand, we see that the ministry clearly doesn't have a good sense of what the pressures are out there; on the other hand, we see that they have a tremendous desire to dramatically decrease the level of income support provided.

So I certainly worry that what we've actually got is some pretty significant examples of institutional gatekeeping as far as people's access to these programs when they need them. You know, I am concerned that that's the case. Why wouldn't we simply acknowledge what the best guess is in terms of providing proper support for Alberta's lowest income citizens rather than consistently overestimating the amount to which the demand for that will decrease? To me that just doesn't seem like good planning. It doesn't seem like responsible financial management.

Another area which I'm concerned about as well is the Ministry of Environment. We see that, in fact, we're looking to have more money paid out in that ministry, but that is primarily due to a legal settlement. The settlement was greater than what the ministry is coming back to us for because the ministry has found additional savings within itself on the operating side of their budget. In particular, they have found an additional almost $8 million in environmental assurance, which, of course, includes monitoring. I'm really quite concerned because last year this ministry cut about $18 million for monitoring. Now what I see is that they didn't actually cut $18 million; they cut $25 million. This was in the same year that we had all these independent, third-party scientists come out and clearly identify that the government is not doing its job on this issue, that they are breaching their trust with Albertans, that they are letting Albertans down day in and day out in terms of failing to properly monitor the environmental implications of increased development, in particular in the oil and gas sector although not exclusively.

Then, of course, we have now the spectre of government keeping that line item stable and static at the same time that they anticipate significant increases in industrial activity as part of their predicted revenue streams, not an increase in the rate of what they're collecting, certainly – we couldn't possibly have that – but an increase in the amount of industrial activity. Yet we have no corresponding increase in environmental protection. What this bill does is that it essentially has this Legislature approving after the fact additional cuts made to environmental monitoring last year above and beyond what the minister brought before us when we first looked at this budget. In the current context of the complete lack of credibility of our environmental monitoring system both provincially and internationally I am very, very concerned that this Legislature would now be asked to condone mid-year additional cuts in this very, very, very important ministry. That's a concern to our caucus.

The last area that I want to talk about really quickly is the area of Seniors and Community Supports. This relates to an issue that I had started to discuss with the minister in that area but, of course, didn't get through because estimates are so ridiculously short in this province. In this what we've got here is the minister coming to us for approval for expenditure of an additional $39 million for the ASLI programs. That's great unless you identify that, in fact, last year the minister came to us suggesting that we were going to spend an extra $75 million on affordable living accommodations for seniors. An extra $75 million, not $39 million but $75 million.

Of course, this was raised through the bond issue that the government came up with last year. We didn't spend all $75 million last year. We only spent $39 million last year. That's fine. There's a good reason for that, but what that means, of course, is that going forward, we should anticipate an additional $36 million in this year's budget. Now, in this year's budget we don't actually have $36 million; we have $75 million. What we should have is $86 million. What it means is that the government has cut quite significantly its investment in affordable living spaces for seniors as a result of having issued the bonds last year. Basically, what this shows is that they issued the bonds, and they asked Albertans to pay for the bonds and said that that would provide for our seniors, but we've actually just taken other money away from it.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. Any hon. members wishing to take part?

Seeing none, any others wishing to speak on the bill?

The chair shall now call the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 9 read a third time]

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Drysdale moved that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour Colonel (Retired) the Honourable Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate March 3: Mr. Hancock]

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, do you want to speak on the throne speech?

Mr. Benito: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to rise today and respond to the Speech from the Throne, delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. Before I share my thoughts on the merits of his speech, I would first like to thank His Honour for his service to our country. During his time with the Canadian Forces he served in some of the most dangerous regions on Earth. While there he brought with him our Canadian values of tolerance, freedom, and the rule of law. I thank him for his sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to thank our hon. Premier for his leadership and guidance. His stewardship of our province has enabled us to ride through the recent economic storm better than any other jurisdiction in Canada. I thank him for his vision.

In my mind the Speech from the Throne is highlighted by Bill 1, the Asia Advisory Council Act. As His Honour stated, our province has relied heavily on a single customer, the United States, which buys about 85 per cent of our province's exports.

If Alberta is to grow to its greatest potential, we need to diversify our product development through technology and take advantage of other markets.

In simple terms, Mr. Speaker, Alberta needs to look beyond the United States for trading partners, and without a doubt the best place to look is the emerging economies of Asia. Nations like India and China are growing at an outstanding pace, and they will need the resources and skills that Alberta has to offer. Alberta is blessed with food, timber, and energy. These will be needed as the building blocks for these nations' growth.

Beyond these resources, Mr. Speaker, these nations will need the skills and expertise that Albertans have to offer. As is often stated, our people are our greatest resource, and it falls to a wise government to ensure that its people are as trained and as qualified as they can be. That is why I am optimistic about His Honour's words when he stated that "we will continue to beckon the world's best researchers, innovators, entrepreneurs, and investors to join us in areas of strength such as energy and the environment, biotechnology and bio-industries, and health research." Innovation, Mr. Speaker, and advancement of technology will be imperative to our future economy, but right now they will be imperative to the advancement of economies around the world and instrumental in connecting Alberta to the expanding global marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to touch briefly on His Honour's comments regarding infrastructure. As His Honour stated: "Infrastructure is a critical foundation for our province's future. It is an economic enabler and a driver of competitiveness, and it helps support the quality of life Albertans enjoy." That is why I'm so pleased to see that even during these challenging economic times this government has had the foresight to build. Alberta will return to economic prosperity, and when that happens, we will need schools, hospitals, and roadways. We must have the infrastructure in place that the people will need.

Building right now makes sense. Not only is the price of construction down, but spending now employs people when they need jobs the most. By not panicking and cutting spending carelessly, we have managed to mitigate the worst of the economic storm and keep people working. This is sound governance. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that His Honour's speech highlights this sound leadership, and I am excited to see what 2011 brings to the people of Alberta.

In closing, I would like to again thank the Lieutenant Governor for his touching words and for his service to the people of Canada. I would also like to again thank the Premier for his leadership and steady hand. With that, I will conclude my comments, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

3:30

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions.

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've been looking forward to sharing my thoughts on the recent Speech from the Throne delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. He is certainly a figure that all Albertans can be proud of, and I certainly share that sense of pride.

Having said that, residents here and residents of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo share that respect and pride. But I want to say that as the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo I do not share the same respect pertaining to the governing party relative to important issues. Specifically, I want to say that I talk to my constituents on a daily basis, and it's important to look at and reflect on the Speech from the Throne because my constituents feel, like many people, that we need to rescue important rights when it comes to the issue of where we go forward.

I want to proudly say that the people of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo have priorities that I think are so important, Mr. Speaker, and as we go forward, we must centre on important issues. Those are important issues that really capture the feeling and the spirit that the people of Fort McMurray, that Albertans are looking at. The big picture talks about: how do we have a important focus on Albertans? I believe that as we go forward, it's important to not lose sight of the people of all Alberta.

Most importantly, let us not forget the goose that is laying the golden egg. I believe that the goose that is laying the golden egg is in the oil sands area, and when it comes to the oil sands, the resources are coming from the area of Fort McMurray. I believe the oil sands are truly the goose that is laying the golden egg when it comes to this valuable resource, a resource that is so important. It is something that we proudly – proudly – contribute to the future for the benefit of all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, we all care deeply about the future and about what is next. I proudly can say that my wife and I are so interested in the future. Where we go forward is so important to the future. I will say as a proud father of a three-year-old son that we believe that future is so important. I say that as someone who is now just 50 years old, that that is so important, so important from the perspective of where we go forward.

I think all Albertans and all members of this House clearly believe that the future of Alberta was never more important than now. The issue is: where do we go from here? We all proudly want our province and Alberta to go forward in a manner that is so important to our future, and as we go forward, I sincerely say that I believe that we all care deeply about the future of Alberta in all parties, representing all Albertans.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in the important area of my community of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo and its contributions. The resources that we have in Fort McMurray, called the oil sands, are so important. Consequently, I think all of us in this Assembly recognize the role that the oil sands play.

Now, it's interesting that when we talk about the oil sands, there have been issues relative to the oil sands. What's most important with the oil sands is the energy that it contributes to the rest of the world. So I do believe, Mr. Speaker, that the oil sands are so important in contributing.

For instance, the issue of health care and the issue of seniors are important. The Speech from the Throne, that was tabled by His Honour, is something that we believe is so important to the rest of all of Canada.

Consequently, I believe that as we go forward, the big picture is simply this. Our real bosses – our real bosses – are Albertans. As our real bosses I think the issue of our seniors is so important to them. Our seniors are so important that it is my hope and my prayer that a long-term care centre will be built in Fort McMurray. I think all people across Alberta, especially our seniors, are people that we will never forget. Specifically, the long-term care centre in Fort McMurray is important so that at the end of the day we will treat with respect the seniors that, in fact, have built this province.

As we go forward, I believe, Mr. Speaker, that we will not forget our seniors, who have built this province. Let's be proud of our seniors and never forget our seniors, who built this very province that we enjoy together, collectively, our children and our youth, seniors and young people, for the future that is so important. I believe we shall never forget historically the importance of our seniors.

The Deputy Speaker: We still have Standing Order 29(2)(a) for five minutes of comments or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore on the throne speech.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to rise and address the throne speech. On behalf of the Wildrose Alliance caucus and our leader, Danielle Smith, I'd like to congratulate the Lieutenant Governor on the delivery of his first Speech from the Throne.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the Speech from the Throne is to articulate government's vision for Alberta, but unfortunately this speech lacked vision entirely. It did nothing to eliminate the wasteful spending that has been a hallmark of this government. It did nothing to reverse the record deficits that this government has fallen into as a result of irresponsible spending. The already meagre savings of our resource-rich province are being vaporized by this government's spending addiction, and their only solution is to hope that they can save this by another royalty boom.

This government's first bill, a bill that's supposed to set the tone for the rest of the session, was the establishment of a committee to discuss trade with Asia. Mr. Speaker, whether this government's grand vision for our province is to host a geography lesson for the cabinet or whether it's an economic lesson to find out where the Asian tiger is at, we're in serious trouble.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to be clear. The Wildrose caucus is not here solely to point out the failures of this PC government. We are here to offer meaningful alternatives to what we see now. We have an alternative vision for where this province needs to go, a vision where Albertans want to go, and our vision is one where Albertans can trust their government to ensure that health care is accessible, our finances are stable, our environment is cared for, and our property and democratic rights are respected.

Before elaborating on that vision, I want to make one thing clear. While we believe Albertans are ready for a change and that only a new party can offer the change that Albertans want, the members of the Wildrose caucus are committed first and foremost to representing our constituents. In doing so, we will support the government when they bring forward good legislation, and we are committed to working with them to find solutions that we can all be proud of. That said, like most things this government has done in recent years, this Speech from the Throne was a disappointment for us. We did not see meaningful steps towards fixing our broken health care system or our ailing democratic system, nor did we see any meaningful recognition that past mistakes were made with regard to property rights.

Mr. Speaker, I'm going to talk a bit about our vision for Alberta, about some of the things that were missing from the throne speech. The Wildrose vision for Alberta is one to prioritize Albertans' rights and needs rather than the government's wants. Rather than being about government entitlements, we see a government that focuses on what the people of Alberta are entitled to. It is a vision that seeks to root out the mismanagement we see throughout our provincial government and replace it with a government that is not only competent but which is truly accountable and transparent.

Our vision is for a successful and vibrant Alberta, one where business enjoys a clear competitive advantage over other jurisdictions instead of receiving failing grades for the regulatory burden our government inflicts on entrepreneurs.

Ours is also one where the environment is meaningfully protected for the future. Our land will be better protected by respecting those closest to it, the landowners and municipal authorities. Our air can be helped by ensuring that pollution is reduced and that a natural gas strategy is adopted. In addition to ensuring our rivers are clean, the Wildrose will remedy the growing water problem in the south by implementing a strong water storage plan.

Ours is a vision of Alberta where property rights for individuals are sacred instead of one where the system is systematically ignored or rights are even extinguished. Bills like 19, 24, 36, and 50 would be repealed, and land-use planning would ensure that locally elected councils are where the decision-making authority would lie.

It is not only in land-use planning that local autonomy would be respected but also with school boards, hospitals, PDD delivery, infrastructure, parks, pore space. Over the last few years this government has embarked on a shocking crusade to concentrate as many powers as possible around the cabinet table. In the Westminster system there is already a tremendous amount of power in the executive. Here in Alberta we have a big legislative majority on the government side, where the Premier and cabinet go virtually unchallenged even from within the caucus. We have witnessed a few challenges followed by expulsion. The common saying I hear is: this is not the mountain to die on.

Here in Alberta there is a need for greater independence for municipal authorities and less direct interference from cabinet ministers in delivery of services, governance of land use, and other local matters. There is also a need for greater transparency in things like infrastructure spending. This government has been spending our savings in a mad rush to get MLAs to as many ribbon-cutting ceremonies as possible before the next election. Our vision includes a transparent and public infrastructure priority list so that infrastructure projects go forward on a community-needs basis, not strategic pork-barrelling and vote buying.

Albertans need to know if and when roads and schools will be built, and the construction industry deserves the stability that comes with long-term planning and prioritizing. This also includes a funding regime for municipalities that allows the municipalities to determine the projects that deserve the highest priority. We would replace the Green TRIP fund with more independent and predictable municipal funding because a city's infrastructure decision should not require the satisfaction of the whim of the minister. The transportation needs of municipalities should be planned and administered by municipalities, not by the province. Whether it's education, infrastructure, or health care delivery, a Wildrose government would have fewer ministries, with less over-reaching powers, allowing for local decision-making by those most affected.

Our vision focuses on fiscal responsibilities, which we haven't seen in this province for some time. Savings funds would be added to rather than emptied. The heritage and sustainability funds were meant for a time when our natural resources could no longer provide the vast revenue streams that we now enjoy. It's true that the natural gas revenues have fallen, but the fact remains that oil is yielding more royalty revenues for this government each year. The result is that our royalties right now are relatively high compared to past standards and astronomically high compared to other provinces. While this government acts like Saudi princes who think that their money can never run out, they're vapourizing our savings and jeopardizing our future.

Like I said earlier, we need to respect the checks in our system to ensure executive powers do not get carried away. The biggest check is with the people. In our vision for Alberta democratic reform would play a major role. Citizens would be empowered to trigger referendums and to recall their members of the Legislature. Accountability, Mr. Speaker, would be a top priority for a Wildrose government instead of being just something to pay lip service to at election time.

Mr. Speaker, the government has failed to stand up for Albertans and govern responsibly. Reannouncing projects and writing legislation to hold committees is not what Albertans are asking for. People are literally dying because of the mismanagement of our health care system, and this government's Speech from the Throne did nothing to calm their fears. We are falling into a fiscal black hole, and this government is doing nothing for the future except praying for another royalty boom.

Danielle Smith and the Wildrose have a vision for Alberta to grow into. We know that centralizing planning and decision-making is wrong. We have a vision for a prosperous province, one that is full of opportunities for all Albertans, not just those with good political connections; an open and competitive market where government and public infrastructure is always tendered openly; a focus on health care; and democratic reform with recall, referenda, set election dates along with free votes. The entrenching of property rights is paramount.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I will close with a vision of where this government is blind, and that is one of fiscal responsibility. One must live within one's budget, actually having the discipline to save for the future, creating an actual heritage fund that reaches $100 billion or $200 billion, where annual income could actually reduce other taxes in the province to ensure the Alberta advantage in the future. We hear on a daily basis from Albertans that they want a balanced budget. Yes, that means that you have to do a good job in prioritizing your spending, but we can do it, we will do it, and we look forward to serving Albertans in the future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Seeing none, does any other member want to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a thrill for me to speak to the Speech from the Throne. I've prepared for this for a long time.

An Hon. Member: It better be good.

Dr. Taft: It should be good. That's right.

This speech, that was delivered on February 22, spends a fair bit of time on the economy, on investing in infrastructure, competitiveness, adding value to raw resources. It refers to gas and the oil sands and so on. I thought that I would address some of those issues, Mr. Speaker, but do it from a somewhat different perspective. It's a perspective of reality, actually, a perspective that's based on the best available data, provided by primarily Statistics Canada but by a number of other groups as well.

To start off, Mr. Speaker, if it had been a throne speech that we had delivered, we would probably recognize first of all what an incredibly prosperous place Alberta is and what a huge opportunity we have here.

I just want to read a few statements into the record, Mr. Speaker. On a per capita basis Alberta has one of the largest economies in the world: so said the TD bank in 2007. Alberta has a small population, equivalent to about metro Montreal or metro Seattle, and it's spread across an area about the size of Texas or France. It sits in one of the wealthiest, most stable countries on Earth, and we are next door to the largest economy in the history of the world, the United States.

What really sets us apart are the oil and gas resources of this province. On a per capita basis the people of Alberta through their government own the largest reserves of recoverable oil in the world – that's on a per capita basis – 51,900 barrels per person according to the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers, and that was in 2007. One of the unique things about Alberta is that those reserves are actually increasing, unlike in most areas of the world. If you were to value that resource at $80 a barrel, that's equivalent to over $4 million per citizen. That's just oil resources. In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, we're one of the largest exporters of natural gas in the world. So it's not surprising that about half of this province's economy is directly or indirectly supported by oil and gas.

A couple of other pieces of information from the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers. A full 87 per cent of the world's known oil reserves are state owned or state controlled by countries like the members of OPEC and Russia. Only 13 per cent is openly accessible to international oil companies. Almost half of that accessible oil, 6 of the 13 percentage points, is in Canada's oil sands. Mr. Speaker, in other words, Alberta contains almost half of the entire world's oil reserves that are available for free market development. If private corporations are going to be in the oil business, sooner or later they're almost certain to come to Alberta.

As a result of this resource, in 2010 CAPP forecast that over a trillion dollars – that's a thousand billion dollars – will be invested in Canada's oil and gas industry over the next 25 years. So Alberta really has a supersized economy, Mr. Speaker, and it makes me wonder why so much of the discussion in this Assembly is about cutbacks and restraints and deficits when we should be talking about opportunities and savings and building up our heritage fund and so on.

A couple of other pieces of information. This is information from the TD Bank Financial Group, from a pretty well-known study they did in 2007 on the northern tiger, the Calgary-Edmonton corridor. The Calgary-Edmonton corridor enjoyed a $15,000 U.S. advantage in GDP per person over the United States. That's in 2007. That's pre-recession, when the U.S. economy was booming and Alberta's economy was actually generating $15,000 per person more than the Americans. Alberta's GDP per capita is larger than every country in the world except Luxembourg.

Here's something that TD also identified, which I've done some work to develop a bit, Mr. Speaker. This doesn't come up often. Corporate profits – corporate profits, not investment, not revenues – as a share of our economy in Alberta were 22.8 per cent. In other words, almost one-quarter of Alberta's entire economy went to corporate profits, not to government, not to personal income, not to capital investment but to corporate profits. Now, if that seems high to any of the members here, 22.8 per cent, it is. If you look at other provinces, it's about 12 per cent. If you look at the United States, in a good year in the U.S. about 12 per cent of their economy goes to corporate profits. More typically it's running at 9 or 10 per cent.

Alberta's economy is producing for corporations profits at more than double the level of what's normal in the U.S. or other provinces. That's something we need to think about. Is that sustainable? No. Is it smart? Well, it's great if you're an investor in a corporation in Alberta, but if you're a citizen of this province thinking long term, maybe we want to say: "Hmm. Is that the way to build the future?"

With that information in mind, then, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask a few questions. I'm going to start by just trying to address the common sound bite that's thrown out there – we hear it from the third party constantly and frequently from the government – that public-sector spending in Alberta is out of control, that it's soaring, that it's going to bankrupt us all, that we have to cut taxes further or cut royalties more, or we have to cut services. The truth is that once you adjust for inflation and our booming population, that's just not the case.

I spent some time with a couple of economists from the U of A running through the Statistics Canada data, which is pretty readily available, actually, adjusting for our growing population and adjusting for inflation. The Statistics Canada data runs over 20 years. It's available province by province from 1989 up until 2008.

What did we find? Well, once you adjust for inflation and population growth, believe it or not, average spending by Alberta's provincial government in the period 2004 to 2008 was 3.7 per cent lower than it was for the five-year average for 1989 to 1993. In other words – and this was 2004 to 2008, before the brakes were on at all on government spending – we were still spending less than we were 20 years ago. That's not out-of-control spending. All of our incomes are up. Corporate profits have soared.

But if you really look at the trends, government spending is flat. Actually, I shouldn't say flat, Mr. Speaker, because if you plot the annual spending on a yearly basis, it looks a little bit like a roller coaster ride. From 1989 to 1993 it was just over $8,000, between $8,000 and $8,500. Then in 1993 with the election of Ralph Klein there was a dramatic cut. It bottoms out in about 1998. It climbs rapidly from that natural gas boom.

There's a bit of a spike in 2001, which, coincidentally, was the year of a provincial election. We'll all remember the cheques that were mailed out to everybody, I think, over the age of 16 – wasn't it? – in Alberta. Maybe it went to everybody. Maybe it went to every last citizen of Alberta. Yeah. So there's a huge billion-dollar spike in spending on that. As well, there was a very generous settlement with the nurses that actually threw the health care system right across the country out of sync because it was so generous, and it had to be followed up with a generous settlement with the doctors. So you see a real spike there in conjunction with the election in 2001.

Then it tails off a bit, and it climbs up finally in 2008 – and these, I should say, are all standardized to a currency of 2002 dollars to adjust for inflation – to just under $9,000. So over those 20 years, it went up and down and up and down but showed no long-term trend of rising.

In fact, there are other measures, Mr. Speaker, which are important. Alberta's spending has shrunk as a portion of our overall economy. If we think of our economy as a pizza, 20 years ago it was a medium-sized pizza, and it's grown and grown and grown. It's an extra-large pizza, but you know what? Public services are still just getting two slices. They were getting two slices in 1989; they're still just getting two slices.

An Hon. Member: But they're bigger slices.

Dr. Taft: They're not bigger slices. They're the same slices. It's a bigger pizza.

The question is: who's eating the rest of the pizza? I tell you, there's some good news in here. To some extent personal incomes are up. In our economy personal incomes are up, so individuals are getting a somewhat bigger piece. But you know who's getting most of that pizza now? Corporate profits. That's what's happened.

We need to, I hope, through that information concede two things: first of all, that provincial spending, once you adjust for inflation and population growth, is virtually the same today as it was 20 years ago and that the incredible wealth of Alberta is actually flowing mostly into big business. I think we need to ask ourselves: where is that money going? I don't have that answer. You can't get the answer from the Statistics Canada information, but my hunch is that a huge amount of that money is flowing to Wall Street and Bay Street, right out of this province. I'm concerned. As a Legislature I would have liked this to be in the throne speech. I want to have stronger control as a government over the resources of this province, over the incredible wealth here, because we're going to wake up one day, Mr. Speaker, and the party will be over, and we'll be the last ones to realize that the money is all gone.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I'm probably starting to run out of time. We did an analysis on a whole lot of other areas of spending. We looked closely at health care, and it revealed some very interesting questions. What it shows, actually, is that the biggest increase in health care by far has been not in hospitals and not in doctors and not in prevention. In fact, in all of those areas it's about the same as it was 20 years ago. A huge jump, starting in 1996, in what's called other services: administration, drugs, and contracted-out services. That's the only area there's been a real increase in spending.

Mr. Speaker, I would have liked to have seen a throne speech that addressed these issues and was based on this kind of information, which is available. I think the challenge to all of us is to think long term, and I think we probably all want to do that. I think we need to have the backbone, as the former leader of the PC Party, Peter Lougheed, used to say: to think like owners. We own per capita the largest oil reserves on the planet. Are we being sharp? Are we being smart? Are we being assertive and aggressive? Or are we rolling over and playing patsy for the rest of the world? My goodness. We welcome in the government of Kuwait, the government of China, the government of Norway, the government of France, the government of Korea, the government of Thailand, and who knows who else to invest in our oil sands. We ourselves are too timid.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Yes. I was quite enjoying your conversation there. In particular, I had a chance to read through some of the research that you had done that formed the basis of that talk, and I'm wondering if you could tell members a little bit about some of the conclusions you came across with respect to the percentage of social spending and antipoverty spending as it relates to the share of the pie that's been going to corporate Alberta and, more likely, corporate U.S.A.?

Dr. Taft: That's a very interesting question, and I think it's telling. When we ran the numbers – you plot them on a graph, and a graph is essentially just a picture – sometimes the results were startling. I think for me the single most startling picture, maybe not quite – it was one of the most startling – was the one on social services spending per capita in 2002 dollars. We tracked that over 20 years. We didn't torque the numbers at all. We just took the straight Stats Canada data, adjusted for inflation and population growth. It's actually a dramatic picture because what it shows is that from 1989 until 1993 Alberta is spending $1,500 to probably about $1,800. It actually peaked in 1992-93 at about $1,800, and we were above the Canadian average. This is spending on services for people living in poverty, for seniors, for people who are struggling to get through daily life.

Then from 1993 to '94 this line, that was trailing gradually up and above the Canadian average, just plummets. It's actually quite dramatic. The Member for Foothills-Rocky View is close enough to see how dramatic that line is. Alberta goes from the highest spender, or at least well above average, to dramatically lower than the Canadian average, in one year a 50 per cent decline, in fact, clearly, the lowest supports in the country for needy people, and it stays there. In one year it's cut in half. It goes from about $1,800 to below $1,000, and it sits there year after year after year.

Some members here, the Minister of Education and many others, will have heard me argue passionately for support for school meals. Let's feed our hungry kids, kids who go to school every day who are without a meal through no fault of their own. And you know what? I run into a stone wall. I run into a stone wall, and this graph, this information, reflects that. This province alone among the whole country won't put together a bit of money for school meal programs.

In contrast, you know, I want to give credit where credit is due. I think we need to understand reality. A reality-based throne speech would be nice. If we look at the education system, for all the controversies and issues around education I think most of us would admit Alberta has a pretty good education system. Well, if we look at funding for education, not only is it significantly more stable than funding for health care, but it's consistently, other than a very few years in the middle 1990s, just a little above the Canadian average. We can find it in our souls to be just a little bit more generous than others in supporting our education system, and I suspect that stability and that generosity goes a fair ways to explaining why our students consistently do among the best in the country.

I could go on about other issues, policing issues. I was surprised. Policing spending in Alberta actually comes out well below the national average. I didn't expect that. Environment spending is very erratic, up and down. It's often higher than average. Sometimes it's lower.

Anyway, numbers can tell a real story. They do reflect a reality, and it was a reality, as I say, that I could only wish was reflected in a throne speech.

Thanks.

Mr. Campbell: Mr. Speaker, I move to adjourn the debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 11 Livestock Industry Diversification Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today and move second reading of Bill 11, Livestock Industry Diversification Amendment Act, 2011.

The primary purpose of this amendment is to enable Alberta Agriculture and Rural Development to exercise full legislative authority for domestic cervids. At present legislative responsibility that deals with the regulation of farm cervids is shared by Alberta Agriculture and Rural Development, ARD, and Alberta Sustainable Resource Development, SRD. SRD's current role pertains to the issuance of certain licences and permits in respect of farm cervids as identified in the Wildlife Act and wildlife regulations. Sustainable Resource Development is supportive of the initiative and has been working closely with ARD for this purpose.

Through these amendments to the Livestock Industry Diversification Act a one-window approach to dealing with domestic cervids will be created. In turn, this will reduce the regulatory burden upon both the industry and government in two ways: first, by streamlining processes and, secondly, by reducing unnecessary administrative duplication. These amendments also reflect a cultural shift in the domestic cervid industry that has occurred over the last 20 or so years, when the Livestock Industry Diversification Act was first written. Indeed, they reflect the application and adaptation of recognized modern agricultural practices to domestic cervid farming as a valid agricultural operation. As such, industry response has been overwhelmingly in favour of this transfer of responsibility, as was indicated to us through stakeholder consultation that took place in late 2010.

This act also has the potential to improve the economic diversification of rural Alberta. In addition to adding domestic cervids to the LIDA act, ARD seeks to broaden the scope of this act so as to have the future ability to regulate other nontraditional livestock species. It is important to note that there are no plans to make any legislative changes to the Livestock Industry Diversification Act as it relates to hunt farms in Alberta.

This amendment is an important step forward for both industry and government.

At this time I would like to move adjournment of debate on Bill 11. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 3 Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate March 1: Mr. Rogers]

The Deputy Speaker: Opposition, do you want to speak first?

Mr. Hancock: With respect, Mr. Speaker, it's been moved, and now it's the Official Opposition critic who gets the next opportunity.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, please continue.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was just trying to surprise everybody and be courteous to the government here.

This particular bill, the Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011, is I think probably worth supporting when we've had a look at it. It's not a bill that's going to change the course of history, but it's one that addresses some issues that are worth addressing. It would replace the current practice of geology and the practice of geophysics with a new consolidated practice of geoscience. That's perhaps a good thing. I think it reflects a broadening of our understanding of both geology and geophysics.

We would rename the act to the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act and rename the association that we know as APEGGA, just take out one of the Gs as it would turn out, and it would become the Association of Professional Engineers and Geoscientists of Alberta. I think it's worth noting here that APEGGA is a huge organization. It reflects what I was saying in my comments on the throne speech, the massive natural resources, particularly oil and gas, that we have in Alberta. As a result we have a huge number of engineers and geoscientists, as we'll be calling them now.

Geoscience won't just include geophysics and geology, but we're talking here about, for example, geochemistry. It's really a bill that keeps the language of the professions moving. It keeps in time with how the world is changing and how we're beginning to understand that all of these different fields are interrelated. They're all part of the same thing. In fact, you know, the geochemists will be working on, I suspect, fluids and chemicals that will be pumped into the ground for fracking. That fracking is led by geologists, and it has geophysical implications. In fact, I think I just heard the other day that Quebec or some of the American jurisdictions are raising concerns about fracking related to earthquakes, which seemed like a bit of a stretch to me, but maybe it's happening. You know what? I would want a geoscientist to give me information on whether that was true or not, so that's the kind of reason I'm supporting this bill.

Mr. Knight: Kevin, it's 20 after.

Dr. Taft: I'm getting good-natured support from the Minister of SRD.

I will conclude my comments, such as they are, just with a definition of geoscience from Penn State University. Pennsylvania is one of the first places that oil in substantial volumes was discovered in North America, and that's why we have Penn State oil in our racing cars.

Mr. MacDonald: Quaker State oil.

Dr. Taft: Quaker State oil. Sorry. I just watched the Frost/Nixon movie the other day, and I didn't realize that Richard Nixon was a Quaker. I'd forgotten that. [interjections] Focus. I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker.

What is geoscience? Geoscience includes all the sciences (geology, geophysics, geochemistry) that study the structure, evolution . . .

Oh, maybe this is more controversial than I thought.

... and dynamics of the planet Earth and its natural mineral and energy resources. Geoscience investigates the processes that have shaped the Earth through its 4600 million year history and uses the rock record to unravel that history – it is concerned with the real world beyond the laboratory and has direct relevance to the needs of society.

Modern geoscience is founded on plate tectonic theory.

Now, Mr. Speaker, plate tectonic theory is something that Canadians should be very proud of. Plate tectonic theory was developed by a Canadian named Tuzo Wilson, a very famous Canadian. I don't think he won the Nobel prize. He might have; he should have. It's a great story about how he came to realize that the Earth's crust was divided into huge plates that moved and shifted against each other. It was one of those truly revolutionary theories. I just thought that was a note worth making.

Back to the definition of geoscience.

Modern geoscience is founded on plate tectonic theory which states that the outer part of the Earth (the lithosphere) is composed of a series of interlocking plates in relative motion. All geological processes such as mountain building ...

And we have beautiful mountains in Alberta.

... earthquake and volcanic activity are directly or indirectly related to the motions of the plates.

That's what geoscience is. This bill formalizes the place of geoscience in the laws of Alberta, and I like that, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I will be brief but wanted to have a chance to get up and speak to this bill before it passed second reading. This is a bill that certainly on its face appears relatively benign. I guess the concern that we in the NDP caucus have is on what's driving this bill, and of course what's driving this bill is the desire of the government to accommodate the obligations under TILMA, which close followers of the proceedings of this House would know is not something that members of our caucus support.

It is a concern because one of the things that we were not supportive of that is a component of TILMA is this notion of potentially sort of a race to the bottom between various jurisdictions and also the capacity that TILMA has to expand the scope of business control over the authority of the Legislature. That arises from the structure of the language around TILMA in that it sets out that everything that's not specifically excluded from TILMA is included, which means that over time that which is included under TILMA grows and grows and grows. By including various matters under TILMA, then the ability of the public bodies to exercise the control, which is vested in them through our democratic system, over the activities of businesses under TILMA is slowly diminished over time, and for that reason we are not supportive of TILMA.

This bill is a bill that's being brought forward in an effort to streamline and facilitate the application of TILMA. I note, actually, that back when we were having debates about the application and the introduction of TILMA, it was, in fact, members of APEGGA who identified that they were concerned about the application of TILMA to their profession and concerned about what it would do to the ability of members of the Alberta profession of geologists, engineers, and geophysicists to control the quality of work when they were compelled to compete against similar organizations from other jurisdictions that weren't necessarily governed in the same way, that were not necessarily demanding the same quality of work out of their members. As a result they raised those concerns.

I'm not sure what the outcome of that was, and I'm not sure how this bill addresses those concerns or if it does address those concerns. I'd put on the record, though, that given its relationship to TILMA, we have some suspicions, and until such time as the sponsor of the bill is able to assure me that the original concerns identified by members of APEGGA have been addressed, then we will not be supporting this bill. But I'm certainly open to being convinced otherwise.

Those will be my comments for now. I'm pleased to have had the opportunity to speak about it. I do think it's an important issue because of the relationship of this bill to the slow, creeping application of TILMA to the affairs of Albertans both in the public and private sectors and the slow reduction of the public sector's ability to make decisions in the best interests of the population as opposed to simply being compelled to subject themselves to whatever business deals might be established under the auspices of TILMA. At the end of the day that does not make for good public policy. As a result this bill raises some concerns for us.

I certainly do await assurances from the sponsor of the bill that the concerns identified by APEGGA have been addressed and are no longer there, and certainly if that's the case, then, you know, we are open to reconsidering our position on the bill.

With that, I would like to move that we adjourn debate on this bill.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, seeing as it's 4:30 and the normal adjournment hour, I guess I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 p.m. on Monday.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Bill Status Report for the 27th Legislature - 4th Session (2011)

Activity to March 10, 2011

The Bill sponsor's name is in brackets following the Bill title. If it is a money Bill, ($) will appear between the title and the sponsor's name. Numbers following each Reading refer to Hansard pages where the text of debates is found; dates for each Reading are in brackets following the page numbers. Bills numbered 200 or higher are Private Members' Public Bills. Bills with lower numbers are Government Bills. Bills numbered Pr1, etc., are Private Bills.

*An asterisk beside a Bill number indicates an amendment was passed to that Bill; the Committee line shows the precise date of the amendment.

The date a Bill comes into force is indicated in square brackets after the date of Royal Assent. If it comes into force "on proclamation," "with exceptions," or "on various dates," please contact Legislative Counsel for details at (780) 427-2217. The chapter number assigned to the Bill is entered immediately following the date the Bill comes into force. SA indicates Statutes of Alberta; this is followed by the year in which it is included in the statutes, and its chapter number. Please note, Private Bills are not assigned a chapter number until the conclusion of the fall sittings.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, March 14, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Grant that we the members of our province's Legislature fulfill our office with honesty and integrity. May our first concern be for the good of all our people. Let us be guided by these principles in our deliberations this day. Amen.

Hon. members, I am now going to invite Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us in the singing of our national anthem and would invite all to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

Ms Evans: It's a great privilege to rise today and introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly some very special guests who have joined us here this afternoon. Dr. Andrew Pocock and his wife, Julie Pocock, who are resident in Vancouver, are here with the consul general of the United Kingdom, Alexander Budden, and a trade commissioner from Calgary, Tracey Grindal. The British high commissioner was only appointed a scant two months ago, and within the first seven weeks on the job he determined that he wanted to come to Alberta and make this a priority. He recognized very quickly that there are incredible trade opportunities between both large and small companies, including technology companies, in Alberta. He wanted to be here. Most of all, Mr. Speaker and members of this Assembly, he wanted to visit our oil sands. We congratulate him for that choice. We're thrilled that he's here. He is seated in your Speaker's gallery with his delegation. I would ask Dr. Andrew Pocock and his delegation to please rise and receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Transportation.

Mr. Ouellette: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It always gives me great pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of bright young students from my constituency. We have with us today 38 grade 6 students from Bowden Grandview school, who are seated in the members' gallery. They may not be in here yet, but I'll introduce them anyway. I've said many times before that they will be tomorrow's leaders, so it's great for them to be able to come and experience the Legislature on a tour. With them they have some teachers and parent helpers. They have Mrs. Jo Anne Pearson and Mrs. Jill Admunson as teachers. They also have parent helpers Mrs. Cheryl Bradshaw,

Mr. Gordon Wood, Mrs. Brenda Stacey, Mrs. Tammy Bodman, Mrs. Lianna Scott, Mrs. Dana Fox, Mrs. Alicia Heit, Mrs. Carla Sparks, Mr. Kees Verhoef, Mrs. Kyra Bona, Mr. Kevin Robinson, and Mrs. Tammy Cocke. I'd like them to rise if they have gotten here. If not, I'd still like to have the members give them a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce on behalf of the MLA for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert the Camilla school group. There are 37 students here and teachers Amanda Murray and Jessica Garner. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

As well, I have three guests from the Northern Gateway school division. They had a meeting with me today. I have Chair Judy Muir; Jim Govenlock, with whom I served 15 years on town council; and superintendent Kevin Andrea. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. There's a beautiful little school in my constituency called Chinook Winds Adventist Academy. I'm very pleased that they have come to the Legislature to learn more about government and to get a little taste of it themselves in case this might be something that they want to do in the future or just to get more of a feeling for how government works. I'm very pleased that they're here. There's one teacher with them, Mr. David Elias, and two parents, Mrs. Wendy Dobbin and Mrs. Darlyne Lessard. If they could please stand and if all the members would welcome them, that would be wonderful.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 15 grade 9 students from the Yellowhead Koinonia Christian school. They are accompanied today by their teachers, Mrs. Pamela Graham and Miss Michelle Stewart, and parent Mr. Henry Fousert, who is also the chairman of the board. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly. They're in the members' gallery.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to all hon. members of this Assembly a visiting group from St. Gabriel school. There are 40 visitors from the school, and it is another fine public school in the Hardisty-Capilano neighbourhood of Edmonton-Gold Bar. This group is led today by teacher Mrs. Svetlana Sech. She is accompanied by Mr. Zdunich and Ms Zapisocki. I would now ask this group—they're in the public gallery—to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm delighted to introduce to you and through you to all members today 86 visitors from St. Augustine school in my constituency of Edmonton-Rutherford. The students are accompanied today by teachers Mrs. Nancy Ellestad, Ms Carmen Chevalier, and Ms Roberta Stevens and also by parent helpers Mrs. Leanne Hafso-Shepherd, Mrs. Marivic De Guzman, and Ms Maria Fiorini. I've had the pleasure of visiting with these students on a couple of occasions, and I'm just delighted to be able to introduce them today. I'd ask them all to please stand and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Children and Youth Services.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly five members of the Alberta College of Social Workers who are seated in the members' gallery today. They've joined us as we celebrate National Social Work Week. I would ask that our guests rise as I introduce them and to please remain standing until we can give them the warm welcome of the Assembly. We have Alison MacDonald. She's the associate registrar at the college. Derek Chewka works for Children and Youth Services and is a council member. Scott Stewart is with Covenant Health and is the chair of the gerontological social work committee for the college. Brandy Delaire is a caseworker in adoptions, and Peter Smyth is the supervisor of the high-risk youth unit in Old Strathcona. Peter's son Braden is a page here in our Assembly. I'd ask that the Assembly please join me in thanking these wonderful people, that work hard on our behalf every day on behalf of children and youth, and give them the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some students who are here today from Greenview elementary school and volunteers from the Ladybug Foundation. These students, inspired by the Ladybug Foundation's efforts to help the homeless, fund raised and donated money to help the homeless in Edmonton. One of the best things about this job is visiting schools, and I had the privilege of meeting with these students and their local MLA last month, when I was rather moved by their efforts to help homeless people as well as raise awareness of the particular topic in this province. The students are joined by their school principal and student helpers. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask that these great Albertans rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to introduce to you and through you to this Assembly two very distinguished individuals, Sheila Thompson and Jim Hawkins. They are both educators that have worked in the Elk Point-St. Paul area since 1975. They have been very active volunteers in the community. Sheila has been a leader and an integral part of the establishment of the trail systems in our area, in part the Iron Horse Trail. Also, Jim has been very involved in minor hockey and in being a mentor for so many youth in the community. As an aside, I'd also say that he played hockey with the hon. Member for Stony Plain and was his bodyguard for many years. It is indeed a pleasure for me to introduce to you my honoured guests. Jim and Sheila, would you please stand and receive the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Mr. Marz: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to introduce to you and through you two good friends of mine, Mr.

Jeff Carlson and Mr. James Carpenter. They are both very successful businessmen from the Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills constituency association, and I'm very pleased that I have the benefit of their counsel as board of directors for my constituency association. They've often heard me talk there of the time-honoured traditions of this Assembly and especially about the exemplary and respectful decorum that's exhibited in this House on a regular basis. They're here today to experience that for themselves, and I trust we won't disappoint. They're seated in the members' gallery, and I'd ask them to stand to receive the very warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature two remarkable Albertans. William and Susan Prettie are dedicated volunteers, celebrated artists, and passionate members of my constituency. William and Susan are very active in making the area of Highlands-Bellevue a more livable, accessible, and beautiful place for all. They've taken a strong role in the Walkable Edmonton initiative and are currently working with a neighbourhood planning group to encourage the green streeting of 112th Avenue.

In addition to this, Susan and William have been nominated several times for the city of Edmonton's good neighbour award as well as its front yards in bloom award. They're both photographers and provide all of the photos for the Highlands-Bellevue Highlights quarterly magazine, and they strive to facilitate community awareness and participation through their work. Susan has won photography awards in a province-wide competition called Open Photo and in the Edmonton Horticultural Society's annual Bench Show. William was recently a featured artist at the Spruce Grove gallery. Susan and William will also be showing in an exhibition at the Jubilee Auditorium this summer. I would ask William and Susan Prettie, who are seated in the public gallery, to please rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly.

Ministerial Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations.

Japanese Earthquake and Tsunami

Ms Evans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today not as a minister or MLA but as a citizen of humanity. I speak now mindful of the compassion expressed by the Premier in his words over the weekend. It has been only four days since an earthquake of horrific intensity struck Japan on March 11 at 2:40 p.m. When the shaking finally ended and tears of emotion began, northern Japan was struck by yet an even greater disaster. A 30-foot wall of water engulfed the region around Sendai, swallowing villages and in an instant changing lives.

Thousands of lives have been lost, and tragically the numbers continue to rise while hundreds of thousands more are displaced from their homes and living in evacuation camps. The suffering and the distressing images we see taking place are both heartbreaking and difficult to watch. It reminds us all of our human fragility and that a natural disaster can strike anywhere at any time on any continent.

On behalf of Albertans I join our Premier and members of this Assembly to extend our deepest sympathy and heartfelt condolences to the Japanese people, to all Albertans, to all Canadians of Japanese descent as well as to the many Canadians living in Japan. Our thoughts and prayers are with our friends in Japan.

Mr. Speaker, while this is a disaster of incredible proportions, we're encouraged by the tenacity and resilience of the Japanese people during the last few days. It gives all nations hope that individuals can come together as one to overcome what is almost insurmountable adversity through acts of compassion, bravery, and inspiration. While we recognize the enormity of this tragedy, we're inspired by the strength of the human spirit. I believe Mother Nature only has one equal, human will.

Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to share with all members of the House a letter I received from dear Kyoko Minemura, wife of Yasuo Minemura, who departed recently for Japan to assume another post. She writes:

When the earthquake hit at 2:40 p.m. on the 11th, I was on the 10th floor of the Takashimaya Department Store in Shinjuku.

I felt swinging and heard screaming. Some china started to fall off and break. I was grabbing onto a huge pole to hold myself. It lasted for a long time and before it became stable, the second one came. I have never felt that big of an earthquake before. I tried to reach my husband and my son but my phone didn't work at all.

I knew that no train service was available. I was left alone to imagine the worst. But at last I received a phone call from my son at 7:30 p.m. while I was sitting on the stairs at the station. Later I had new information that some train lines were moving, and it would take me close to my house. So I headed to the subway station. I waited a few hours more and managed to finally reach home at 1:45 a.m.

I feel so sorry for the folks in Tohoku. This earthquake was the biggest one I have ever felt in my life – I have never experienced this kind of emergency whatsoever.

She goes on to thank me for my concern and says: Iris, I feel I am not alone.

It warms my heart that my good friend was able to make it home to see her family; so many didn't. It does also to know that our office staff in Tokyo are all safe.

Mr. Speaker, I know Japan is not alone and that Albertans, Canadians, and the international community are ready to provide whatever assistance is needed to help survivors start over. It reminds us all of our resilience and of our shared future on this planet. I am confident that Japan will find the strength to overcome the sorrow and the courage to rebuild. We are with them in spirit and in the strong hope that they, indeed, will.

Thank you.

The Speaker: On behalf of the Official Opposition the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Thank you, Madam Minister, for those words of understanding. Like all members of this Assembly – indeed, like hundreds of millions of people around the world – I was horrified by the images and the videos of the devastation in Japan. The toll of human suffering caused by this massive earthquake and the following tsunami is already horrific and only grows in scope with each passing day. Like the dreadful Indonesian tsunami of 2004, once again humanity is faced with a natural disaster of epic scale. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the people of Japan, who now face what their Prime Minister has called the greatest calamity they have faced since the Second World War.

There are many ways in which Albertans can help: the Red Cross, Doctors without Borders, Save the Children, Salvation Army, GlobalGiving, and a host of other charities and nongovernmental organizations are rushing to deliver assistance to victims of the disaster. All of these organizations are accepting donations, and thanks to the Internet and smart phones, it's now much easier to be able to do this. The issues that we debate in this Assembly are important; there's no question. The Official Opposition will continue to do its duty and hold the government accountable for the people of Alberta. That's our job. But a disaster like this really puts everything into perspective.

In Sendai entire communities have been utterly destroyed, mercilessly washed out to sea. I can't even wrap my head around something like that, thousands of people lost in an instant. I'm very proud of the countless Albertans who have already donated to the relief efforts, and I know that more will join them. A disaster of this scale touches everyone on the globe, and we Albertans are certainly there in spirit.

The Speaker: I've been advised that additional members would like to participate. In order to do so, unanimous consent of the Assembly must be given. I will raise one question. Is any member opposed to allowing additional members to participate in response to this ministerial statement?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the Assembly. Albertans are citizens of humanity, as the minister mentioned earlier. It is a sad circumstance that I speak to the tragic situation in Japan. I know all members of this Assembly and all Albertans' and Canadians' thoughts and prayers are with the people of Japan as they recover from this massive earthquake and the subsequent tsunami that struck last week. Thousands upon thousands of lives have been lost. Homes and entire villages have been wiped out and have disappeared as Canadians, Albertans, and the rest of the world have looked on in horror.

Because Japan is home to the most earthquakes in the world, they are the most prepared in dealing with natural disasters, yet no one could have ever imagined the devastation of an earthquake that was 8.9 on the Richter scale. I applaud the people of Japan, as I know all members of this Assembly do, in their organized response because the devastation to people and to the environment could have been much worse, even with the horror that we looked onto.

The Japanese are a resourceful and resilient people. Earthquakes and tsunamis literally are a fact of life. The Japanese people have pulled themselves up before and, clearly, have built one of the most advanced and largest economies in the world. No matter what the setback the Japanese have always moved forward stronger than ever. We believe in the power of spirit, and now the world must join together. Every brick we lay in rebuilding Japan will honour those who have been lost in this horror, in this tragedy.

I've also been inspired by the charitable spirit of Albertans. When Haiti was struck by an earthquake, Albertans stepped up and raised money. Every dollar helped to aid relief efforts. The same spirit when Hurricane Katrina struck New Orleans. I do have hope, Mr. Speaker, about the future, and I thank all Albertans who continue to do their part in helping those less fortunate in times of suffering such as what is being experienced today with the Japanese people. Our thoughts and prayers are also with Albertans and all Canadians who are currently in Japan and with our Japanese community right here in Alberta, in our province. Our thoughts and our prayers are with them all, and God speed.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you also to the minister and to the subsequent members for their kind thoughts on this day. The past days have deeply touched the hearts of Albertans as we've see the terrible news coming from Japan. The loss of lives is tragic. The continuing suffering and anxiety as people search for loved ones and as authorities struggle to deal with the problems at their nuclear power plants are situations that we feel here in Alberta despite the distance from our nation. Our world is very closely connected today, and we see the images and even here can feel just a little of the horror and pain that this means for those in the midst of the catastrophe. At the least we can be clear that we care about the agony that so many are experiencing, and we can also be clear that we are inspired by the heroic efforts that have been demonstrated by the Japanese since these tragedies occurred.

People of Japanese origin have been contributing to life in Alberta for many decades. To these friends and neighbours in particular we extend a caring hand. We know distance does not reduce the feelings when something like this happens, and we are ready to support you in every way.

None of us ever know when disaster might strike or how, and the events of the past days in Japan are a clear message that when this happens, it is essential for us to remember our common humanity and to add our caring hearts and our practical services to support those who are afflicted. It is good to see people and nations around the globe moving forward with offers of assistance.

These events also remind us that we must be as careful as possible with all human developments that add to dangers in the world such as nuclear power because it is clear that there are already so many matters over which we have no control.

Mr. Speaker, the NDP opposition sends its deep condolences and sympathies to every person in Japan and especially to those who have lost loved ones or who are dealing with injuries. We look forward to coming together with Albertans from all walks of life who will reach out in efforts to raise money and provide whatever support is needed to ameliorate the tragedy suffered by the Japanese nation.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What happened recently was an absolute tragedy. I'd like to thank the hon. minister for her kind words and thank everybody else here. Our collective humanity has faced major challenges recently from the earthquakes in Haiti to the floods of Hurricane Katrina as well as the floods in Pakistan. This is a time for us to remember that Canada and Alberta are the world's hope. We are from everywhere in the world, and Albertans have a value of giving back to their community. This is a tremendous opportunity for us to do what we've always done, come to the rescue of people most in need.

It's just an honour for me to be an Albertan. It's an honour for me to be a member of this Assembly. I look forward to Alberta playing a major role in helping these poor people in Japan. As human beings this is the one thing that unites us all when we suffer, and I believe that we can do much more.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With a dark cloud hanging over this government by increasing allegations of intimidation and misconduct, Albertans have no reason to trust this Tory government. If this Premier truly cared about the health of the people he leads, he would immediately support the united opposition call for an independent public inquiry. The opposition will not allow our doctors and nurses to be threatened for telling the truth, and we will not allow public health care to be destroyed by this government's dishonesty. To the Premier: will he finally recognize that this health care investigation on the fly won't suffice for these damning new allegations of government misconduct and that Albertans deserve a fully independent, public inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, my interest is in having the best performing publicly funded, publicly administered health care system here in Alberta, and I also want to support the 90,000 or so people that are working in the health system every day that are bringing care and compassion to Albertans. I informed this House that if emergency care or cancer care has been compromised in any way by waiting lists, we want the Health Quality Council to ensure they bring that evidence forward and tell us why and how to prevent it in the future. And if there are any other allegations out there that are going to be made by physicians or nurses or anybody in the health care system, they are free to bring that evidence forward to the Health Quality Council.

Dr. Swann: Of course, Mr. Speaker, that's not at all true. They cannot bring anything forward without threat to their future, to their career. Only a public inquiry can do that.

Are you willing, then, to come clean about your government's dishonesty and incompetence by disclosing all cases where the government, Alberta Health Services, regional health authorities . . .

An Hon. Member: Point of order.

Dr. Swann: . . . paid any form of compensation to people for their silence? Are you willing, sir?

The Speaker: I have that point of order.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There is a point of order there. The hon. member should know better. We'll deal with it later.

Let me make it very clear to this House and to the hon. member asking the question that I have ordered an independent review by the Health Quality Council of Alberta, which even he himself is on record numerous times over the past several days supporting. In fact, he asked for the Health Quality Council to be brought in. They are going to do an independent review. It will be made public. They will set their own terms of reference, Mr. Speaker, and they will determine exactly who participates as the review panel. That's very, very accountable.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, will this Premier support the united opposition call for an emergency health care debate today to openly discuss these allegations from doctors that were intimidated, punished, and paid for their silence by this government?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I find it really interesting that a group of politicians stands up on a little stage on Friday, and after jostling each other to get to the microphone first, they say this has nothing to do with politics. Come on. This is all to do with politics, and you know that.

The important point here is what they're trying to do with these innuendoes. They're standing up there besmirching the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Alberta Medical Association, and the two faculties of the University of Alberta and the University of Calgary for political reasons.

Mr. Anderson: Point of order.

The Speaker: We have another point of order. One thing is clear to me. We've now arrived at 2 o'clock, and if I look at the time, we're never even going to get to the subject on the agenda called Notices of Motions before 3 o'clock.

Second Official Opposition main question. The Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Only this Premier would have the audacity to blame his failures in health care on the opposition. In his statement yesterday, the Premier said, "Let's focus back on the facts and less on the theatre." Well, the fact is that this Premier and ministers knew about the 322 cases of compromised ER care over three years ago and failed to act. This Premier again failed to act when these cases became public six months ago. To the Premier: why has it taken three years for the Premier to finally act on these 322 cases of compromised ER care? What were you hiding?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again the hon. member is raising a letter that was sent to me, I think in March '08, where I clearly identified to the writer of that letter the steps that we are taking as a government. We have met all those commitments that I made in '08.

With respect to all of the other allegations, as the minister of health said: anything and everything can come forward to the Health Quality Council under absolute confidence. I have huge trust in the Health Quality Council to do their best.

Dr. Swann: Well, absolute confidence my ass, Mr. Speaker. I'm one of those . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: Okay. Please. [interjections] Please. [interjections] Please. [interjections] There are children in the galleries today. They have schoolteachers. I believe the schoolteachers would reprimand their children.

The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: I apologize for that statement, Mr. Speaker. But I was one of those this government fired in 2008. I know you cannot speak with impunity to this government. Don't give me that.

Why do you believe that both you and your minister should escape accountability? Why, Mr. Premier? Why should you escape this?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, you know, on March 3 this same Liberal leader said: ask the Health Quality Council to investigate the cases of delayed or compromised care. Well, we're doing that. On the same day he said: can the Health Quality Council give confidence to the people by looking into this seriously? Well, they're going to look into it seriously. Then, a couple of days later he said: return these 322 cases to the Health Quality Council. He went on making good references about a good organization that he knows very well has the trust, faith, and confidence of every member of this House and of all Albertans.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, are Albertans expected to believe that it was merely coincidence that this Premier finally agreed to the Health Quality Council review just hours before McNamee's allegations of intimidation and compromised patient care surfaced?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, again, you have a statement of claim by one doctor against a statement of defence where another doctor is implicated, as is a health authority, as is a credible hospital in our province. This is a statement of allegations. This is a statement in defence against that. Allegations are not necessarily fact, and you don't substantiate one allegation by raising more allegations. I expect that by the time the day is over, we'll see even more allegations but no proof and no evidence.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Ciaran McNamee

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier said in this House that health care workers have an obligation to come forward when they see compromises of patient care, yet it is alleged that a senior executive of the Capital health region told a prominent surgeon who raised these patient safety concerns that advocacy would not be tolerated. This is the same surgeon who presented his concerns to the current minister of health, who was the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness at the time, as well as several members of the PC caucus in this cabinet, all of whom now conveniently claim they have no recollection of him. Mr. Premier, were you aware of Dr. McNamee's presentation to caucus and that the Capital . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Premier. [interjection] The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I don't know the doctor that the member is referring to. All I know is that the allegations have been made and raised by the member that just rose. They were made in this House under immunity. There were allegations made against third-party members, and as of this minute there is no substantiating evidence tabled in this House.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given the fact that the Premier just said that there's no substantial evidence tabled, I have tabled Dr. McNamee's statement of claims to the Legislative Assembly.

My second question is to the Minister of Health and Wellness. Were you aware when you were the Associate Minister of Health and Wellness, way back when, in 1999 to 2001 that the Capital health region made claims against Dr. McNamee about his competency and mental health prior to . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I believe he's talking about a time before I became the associate minister. I became the associate minister approximately May 15 or so of 1999, and I was in that position until approximately March 15, or whenever the election was called, in 2001. Do I have any vivid recollection of any sort regarding Dr. McNamee? Absolutely none. Did he appear before some committees where I may have been in the room? Possibly. I just don't recall it at all, hon. member.

The Speaker: Hon. member, I'd just refer you to Beauchesne 409(6). "The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his or her present Ministry and not for any decisions taken in a previous portfolio."

Please proceed.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My last question is to the Minister of Justice. Given that the Premier has said that health care workers have an obligation to come forward when they see compromises to patient care, will you release Dr. McNamee from his nondisclosure clause in his out-of-court settlement to allow him to come forward and speak publicly to the Health Quality Council and to a public judicial inquiry?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would just point out that there is ample protection for whistle-blowers. The Criminal Code has protection. The contractual documents that Alberta Health has has protection.

One of my concerns about this whole process is that there have been some very serious allegations, allegations that could point towards some criminal activity, financial mismanagement, and so on. We have a process for that. It's called the police. The police can investigate. They're professional investigators. If there is evidence, then they can move on to prosecute.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, last week in this House the health minister said no, no, and no on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday to a Health Quality Council investigation. Then on Thursday in a stunning display of crude politics the Premier said yes just before a news broadcast that would shine light on allegations of his government's silencing and intimidation of a prominent Edmonton surgeon. To the health minister: why did you resist our demands on those days and months before and put the health of your political party ahead of the health of Albertans?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's so unfortunate that you have a number of members making allegations, and we are living with that. Now you have a member misquoting, again for some simple political gain. At no point did I say: no, never. I said clearly: "No, not at this time." I said clearly that I will take appropriate action at the appropriate time with the appropriate information. I took that action, and I think Albertans understand that even though this member may not.

Mr. Boutilier: That's unbelievable, Mr. Speaker. He should have said: not at this time.

Given that the current health minister was the junior minister from May of '99 to March of '01, the entire period in question as it relates to allegations of silencing and intimidation, does he not see the obvious conflict of interest in having the Health Quality Council investigate the actions of his department and then report directly back to him?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, I find it very interesting that this hon. member can on one day stand up and say one thing and then just flip right over and say something else totally erroneous. He's asking for an independent review by the Health Quality Council. That was on March 8. He made other references in the days before and after that where he said the Health Quality Council said that there should be an investigation. Well, I agree, hon. member. And you know what? There will be. It will be made public, and it will be totally independent of this House. Even that member can appear if he wishes to.

Mr. Boutilier: Given that the Health Quality Council investigating the health minister and then reporting back to him constitutes an obvious conflict of interest, will the Premier of Alberta call an immediate and full public inquiry independent of conflicting political interests? To the Premier.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, let's be really clear. It's true that I was an associate minister of health. I was responsible for AADAC. I was responsible for bringing in the electronic health records. I was responsible for early detection and screening of important diseases and so on. That was my responsibility as an associate minister. I was not the minister of health in any way, shape, or form. Perhaps this member would like to stand corrected on that fact at least.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I've got here a letter to the Premier signed by the Leader of the Official Opposition, the Wildrose Party, the NDP opposition, the House leader of the Alberta Party, and the MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark calling for a full, independent public inquiry. Why will the Premier not call a full, independent public inquiry?

Mr. Olson: I'd just like to clarify. I think a lot of people are confused by all this talk of inquiries. An independent public inquiry, first of all, is directed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, so it would be the government that would be creating that. Now, I suspect that that may fall under some criticism, but that's what the law says. You have a judge or somebody else who is appointed as a commissioner, and at the end of the day what you get is a report. You do not get action. You get a report.

Mr. Mason: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Well, perhaps action would be too much to hope for from this government.

I want to come back to the question about the conflict of interest inherent in a Health Quality Council that reports to the minister of health and has to investigate activities under the minister of health's purview. How can you think that's acceptable?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to table copies so that this member can maybe read it and understand it. This is an independent review in which the Health Quality Council itself is going to set its own terms of reference. They will choose whom they wish to speak to or people who wish to come to them to speak. They will make that report public. They will determine who is going to be on the interview or review panel, and that, as was said this morning on a popular radio show, may likely include people from outside the province to give it yet even more independence. As soon as that report arrives, it will be brought forward and made public.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that the Health Quality Council is not competent to investigate whether health professionals were intimidated or fired or coerced and given that it's not independent from the government, then I want to ask the health minister once again: why are you trying to prevent an adequate investigation into this very, very serious matter? It doesn't even have the power to call witnesses or to subpoena evidence.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, they can contact whoever they want, and I'm sure they will. They do have credibility because they are from and with and part of the community that delivers health care or they're formally involved in it. People feel confident and comfortable coming to them. That's the reason we appointed them to do it, an independent review. Otherwise, as the Justice minister just said, you would have cabinet determining a public inquiry. That's not what I hear Albertans asking for. They want an independent review, and that's what they're going to get.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Usually what the guilty always say is: show me the proof. The current Minister of Health and Wellness was associate minister of health at that time. He completely sloughed his responsibility. I was his associate minister of health. I spoke up, and I have a duty and a responsibility not only as a physician but as a legislator when I'm aware of these cases of physicians begging for resources, and the minister completely sloughs any responsibility he has as a legislator. Minister, can you . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the last I recall, in this country you are innocent until proven guilty. I challenge this member to provide some evidence that would make somebody feel guilty before they have had a chance to prove it otherwise. Stand up and provide it. Stop this game playing. You're making a bunch of wild accusations, and you're bringing forward allegations. Hon. member, we're giving you a chance here. You've got the stage. You've got the platform. Do something with it that is evidentiary.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All I've heard is: we have no proof; show us the proof. To the Premier: are you actually the Premier of this province, and do you have the authority to investigate these matters, or do you require me to give you the proof that you are the Premier before you act?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there are questions that deserve answers. Then there are questions that don't deserve to even be asked, and that would have been one of them.

What we have here again is something that has been requested even by this member himself, who on February 28 said, "Will he call the Health Quality Council of Alberta and carry out a fatality review?" Well, they're coming in to carry out an independent review. If there were fatalities caused as a result of some negligence, I can assure you that the proper steps will be taken, the proper bodies will be brought in, the proper mechanisms will be kicked into force, and they will get to the bottom of it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Doctors have over the years pleaded for help and no inquiry, no immediate action was taken until a CBC report was going to come out. Doctors will be coming out in droves, and I will be tabling further evidence in the near future. If the Premier and the current Minister of Health and Wellness refuse to order a full public investigation with the ability to subpoena witnesses . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, if this member inside this House or outside this House has evidence or knows of evidence that has to do with real corruption, as he is alleging, or some other performance with respect to fraud or other words that he has used, you have a duty to take that to the police, hon. member. You have a duty to do that, and I would encourage you to do that because the police have ways of dealing with allegations like that. If you have proof, take it there. If you have financial malfeasance proof, take it over to the Auditor General.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Health Services Financial Reporting

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Between 2003 and 2009 the Calgary health region provided a detailed breakdown of the $1.7 billion incurred in expenses under its Other column in the annual reports of Alberta Health. In the same time period Capital health had $1.6 billion in other expenses and failed to provide a breakdown like Calgary. To the minister of health: why did this government allow these two health authorities to report some of their expenses so differently over a seven-year time period?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, what the hon. member leaves out of the Auditor's report is probably the most telling statement. It says, "Our auditor's opinion on [the ministry and department's] financial statements for the years ended March 31, 2010 and 2009 is unqualified." That means they are without question and correct. Read the whole story.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm talking about the period between 2003 and '09 and the annual reports from the ministry of health, nothing to do with the Auditor's report.

Now, again, given that the Capital health authority failed to provide any details on over $300 million of a $1.6 billion expense that they incurred in the seven-year period, why did this government allow Capital health to avoid any disclosure of the $300 million in expenses while Calgary gave an account of the money?

Mr. Snelgrove: In their entries held to by their predecessors, there are different auditing types. One of them in the $500 million was misclassified expenses that needed to be corrected in the topside ledger, and with Covenant Health as, too, with Capital health they had a unique classification that was not picked up by the topside ledger, and approximately $420 million of expenses were omitted. The topside ledger layered on top of multiple legacy general ledgers does increase the risk for error. However, it took considerable time to reconcile the two accounts.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, I'm talking about Alberta Health and Wellness annual reports, not the Auditor General's report, but I appreciate the minister's earnestness.

Now, again to the minister of health: has any of the $300 million undisclosed by Capital health been used to fund any of the court settlements, the lawsuits, or legal fees against doctors who have spoken out against this government about your policy and direction on public health care?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, none of the $300 million that he's alleging is unaccounted for. They are all audited. Alberta Health Services, Capital health, and Calgary health: all the health regions were audited. All of our books are audited. They are included in our consolidated statement, which has been given unqualified support by the Auditor General.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Vulnerable Infant Response Team

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have heard from constituents in the community of Bowness increasing concerns about infants at risk of harm, so I was pleased to attend an announcement on Friday by the Minister of Children and Youth Services that a million dollars was being allocated to establish an Alberta Vulnerable Infant Response Team in Calgary. My question is to the Minister of Children and Youth Services. What has changed with at-risk infants to cause you to establish this rapid response team?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Fritz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Six months ago I was very concerned when I saw increasing reports of infants aged zero to three months in Calgary who were at risk of harm due to abuse or neglect. That's between 45 and 55 infants per month. Sixty per cent of the concerns were raised by health professionals; 15 per cent were raised by the Calgary Police Service. The minister of health, the Solicitor General, and I developed a partnership with our child and family service authorities, with public health, and with the Calgary Police Service to address this serious situation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's heartbreaking to hear of infants coming to harm through abuse and neglect, but it's also heartbreaking to hear of babies being separated from their parents during those critical early parent-child bonding days. To the same minister: can the minister please explain how this one initiative will help protect those vulnerable infants without the need to take them into provincial care?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, we know that many parents are not prepared for having babies, and for some it can be very overwhelming, especially families that have complex issues like addictions, mental health issues, or family violence. So that's why we'll have four CFSA caseworkers, four public health nurses, and one Calgary police officer all working together as a critical response team. They will assess at-risk infants and their families, they'll develop safety plans, and they'll connect those families with intensive supports in the community. I hope that that will help to ensure that their babies are safe and cared for.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: why is the Alberta Vulnerable Infant Response Team only benefiting children in Calgary?

Mrs. Fritz: Mr. Speaker, I anticipated that that question would arise. This member has discussed that with me. We know it is vital, as I said earlier, for new, at-risk parents to get the assistance they need with their babies early on. This is the first time in Canada, actually, that we're going to have an integrated approach where we provide immediate resources and supports for infants aged zero to three months with the four caseworkers, four public health nurses, and a police officer working closely together. Our plan is to take that information from that model and to ensure that it's developed in Edmonton by August.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, due to the tragic events in Japan it's come to light that there's a clear danger of a nuclear leak occurring. Given our proximity there's a possibility of the jet stream carrying radiation through the upper atmosphere to Alberta. To the Minister of Environment: is there any action being taken by emergency services, our air monitoring systems, or other protection agencies to prepare for the possible risk of radiation spreading to Alberta through the jet stream?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the responsibility for emergency management in Alberta falls under the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, so I won't begin to try to answer on behalf of that ministry. But I can assure this member that all kinds of contingency plans lie within their responsibility, and I'm sure that they have begun putting some contingencies in place.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Energy: given the events with the nuclear power stations in Japan and the Bruce Power application that is being included in the AESO long-term capacity forecast, does the minister support nuclear power in Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, first of all, there is no assumption of anything happening relative to nuclear power in Alberta, and to sort of tie this together at this time I think is inappropriate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. What role, if any, does the Alberta government play in assessing safety impacts of nuclear power development in Alberta? Or is that inappropriate as well?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, any applicant under our open, competitive generation market makes application and has to abide by a certain number of rules and regulations. Until such time as an application may be received, it's hypothetical.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Farm Safety Advisory Council

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Farm safety is an important topic in my constituency. My question is for the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. In November the minister announced the creation of a Farm Safety Advisory Council. Can the minister tell us what has happened since then?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, today we announced the 15 members of the Farm Safety Advisory Council. They include members from diverse backgrounds in primary agriculture, agribusiness, and safety areas. The council will be co-chaired by one of my assistant deputy ministers. It came about through recommendations from a consultation process that involved groups that represented 50,000 primary and agrifood businesses throughout the province.

Mr. Berger: To the same minister: how do we know one sector of agriculture will not overly influence the direction of this council? In other words, is this council going to work in the interests of all agricultural producers, not just one sector of the industry?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, all areas of agriculture are represented: forage, grain, beef, and dairy. Even beekeepers are represented. These people are all well known within the industry and all have a good background in concerns with respect to safety. I know that they're going to work very well together and be a good board.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. My final question is: what will the council be doing in regard to on-farm industries that actually have nothing to do with food production?

Mr. Hayden: Well, Mr. Speaker, a priority of the council is going to be to develop a joint industry and government action plan on farm safety. In addition, the advisory council is going to be responsible for helping government enhance the safety programs and training that we have in place right now and co-ordinate a communication approach and strategy with the industry. Agriculture is a very unique industry, and we've always said that government shares the responsibility for the safety of these people.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Farm Worker Safety

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The former member probably looked at my questions because this is an excellent segue. When an explosion at a natural gas well in Edson injured 12 workers earlier this month, provincial safety inspectors rushed to the scene to investigate. But when two Albertans were tragically killed in December, safety inspectors sent to the site had to turn around and go home. Why? The second incident involved paid farm workers, meaning that occupational health and safety inspectors are not allowed to investigate. To the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: will the minister support the Alberta Liberals' call earlier this year to make investigations mandatory for serious farm safety accidents?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What the minister will support is what has been recommended by the industry. Alberta's farmers and rural Albertans are no different than urban Albertans. They want government out of their face. They want us to help them with the tools that are available, and we're going to do that. We're not going to complicate their lives. But what they are unanimous on in rural Alberta and urban Alberta is that they have no respect for ambulance chasers.

Ms Pastoor: How is the government supposed to design an adequate program to reduce the number of farm worker deaths and injuries when you don't even investigate the causes of the incidents?

Mr. Hayden: Mr. Speaker, we do investigate. We take a great deal of pride in the work that we do along with the producers in the province and the different organizations to try and ensure that we save lives of Alberta farmers and agriculture industry people by reducing injuries, and we're doing that. That's where our concentration is now, and that's what the industry has asked us for.

Ms Pastoor: Will any of those investigations be made public, and will the newly appointed farm safety council have any power to request inquiries? A simple order in council could address this. I might add that there's only one representative south of Calgary.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We will do as we've done with the original consultations: we'll take very seriously any recommendations that come forward. We do have Laura Nelson from Raymond, Alberta, in southern Alberta, which is very close to the border. We've got people throughout the province. I suppose it depends where you want to put a pin on the map. If you want to go to the middle of our province, that's Swan Hills, then all but two members are in southern Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Land Sales

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My questions today are all to the Minister of Energy. Last week Alberta had another land sale record, earning approximately $160 million for the province. This follows a record year of land sales with revenues over $2 billion for the first time in history. Mr. Minister, can you tell me if these land sales are because of the price of oil, because of the new finds, or because of our new competitiveness review?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the short answer is probably all of the above. What it really boils down to is that it's a situation where as government we worked with industry to see what needed to be done in order that these land sales could take place. I think a lot of what we did last spring in changing the fiscal regime was around new technologies that are now being employed, things that I don't know much about but that certainly are part of the industry – horizontal drilling, multifracking, those kinds of things – and it's paying off.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, again to the same minister. All of those technologies are centred in my constituency of Whitecourt-St. Anne, a very important service sector. Can you tell me how soon these benefits will reach the northwest part of our province?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think that it's pretty evident that it's reaching all of the province, Mr. Speaker. It doesn't matter what corner you go to in this province, from High Level to Milk River, the activity is very buoyant. I know that last week's and a couple of the other major sales that happened recently were actually in my colleague's constituency of Grande Prairie-Smoky, but they're very close to where this particular member represents, and I'm sure the economic spinoff will impact positively his constituency.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, in our part of the province we all know that in Whitecourt-St. Anne we service the Grande Prairie-Smoky area as well, and we do that, you know, with a lot of the sector that's in Grande Prairie and in Whitecourt and in Edson.

The Speaker: Now, finish with your question there.

Mr. VanderBurg: So, Mr. Minister, when will we expect to see the wheels rolling on our machinery?

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think the wheels are rolling right now. In some cases I know industry is expressing concerns about labour shortages, about inflationary costs relative to input costs. But it's a good problem to have. I was very interested on the weekend, Mr. Speaker, where one of the economists was quoted in the daily media as calling Alberta the job creation machine.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Wildrose health critic I've been hearing all week from doctors and health care professionals, and these are not preposterous allegations despite what the health minister has indicated in the past. One doctor – let's call him Dr. X – called me to say that he knows of nondisclosure agreements that have been signed by health care workers who were silenced after advocating for patients. My questions are all to the health minister. Given that there is more than one doctor willing to testify, will you immediately call a public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know who Dr. X is, but Dr. X is certainly welcome to speak to Dr. Y, and Dr. Y is Dr. John Cowell.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, Mr. Speaker, the health professionals I'm hearing from indicate that that's not enough.

Given that I was e-mailed a letter, that I'm now happy to table, from a doctor – and let's call him Dr. Y – who indicated that there are many cases of physicians being intimidated and discredited and that there's a daunting culture of silence that needs to be broken, Mr. Minister, will you please immediately call a public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't see the need for a public inquiry at this time because we already have an independent review going on, and I've explained that.

What I'd like this hon. member to do is explain to us how five politicians would stand there from the opposition on Friday and make some outrageous remarks that somehow infer that there was some grand conspiracy, which there never was, that involved the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the Alberta Medical Association, the two faculties of university in Edmonton and Calgary as well as a former health authority, and they stand united by that.

Mrs. Forsyth: Minister, I don't think that Albertans would call what we did on Friday outrageous, quite frankly.

Given that it's not only doctors I'm receiving calls from – as well, there's the case with Nurse Z who complained to me this weekend about the silence imposed on everyone because of the strict Alberta Health Services code of conduct – will you immediately call a public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, in this case I think she referred to a nurse. I would encourage that nurse to get in touch with the Health Quality Council. They can also get in touch with CARNA or any other organization if they wish. The point here is that there is a process in place where all of these suggestions or points can be made, and that process is to contact the Health Quality Council of Alberta, a credible, knowledgeable, and very skilled organization.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Fort McMurray Apartment Evacuations

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Over the weekend more than 300 people were evacuated from several apartment buildings in Fort McMurray after engineers found the buildings unsafe. Albertans have a long list of complaints when it comes to oversight of the construction industry. To the Minister of Service Alberta: beginning with the home inspections can the minister explain what interests continue to delay action on this issue 18 months after Service Alberta announced it was consulting with the stakeholders?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This is a serious situation, and the regional municipality of Wood Buffalo has taken action in the interest of safety. There are multiple legal issues involved, and I will take this under advisement and refer it to the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans are hurting out there, and the government is so slow taking any action about the plight of Albertans. To the minister again: with the Alberta economy heating up, when can Albertans expect the minister to finally put forward amendments to the Fair Trading Act to give some protection from shoddy workmanship?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the independent municipalities are responsible for, I guess, the enforcement of the safety codes. There's no doubt that the safety codes and building codes are brought forward by this government, but municipalities are responsible for making sure that those safety codes and building codes are implemented.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All those codes are inadequate, and we should have some uniformity there and some enforcement in the building codes. To the minister again: given that in the Fort McMurray episode the condominium association had to shoulder the costs of the inspections, can the minister tell us when we might expect some results from the long-running Condominium Property Act review?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to say that as far as building codes and safety codes, they are being readjusted all the time and being updated, and the hon. member has an opportunity for input.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Métis Settlements Land Tenure

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 1990 the government of Alberta passed the Metis Settlements Act, giving the Métis settlements a form of self-government. The legislation also established a unique form of communal land tenure on the Métis settlements.

Unfortunately, this communal land tenure does not allow for the land to be mortgaged. To the minister of aboriginal affairs: has the effect of this legislation been reviewed by the Métis settlements and/or your department?

Mr. Webber: Well, thank you, hon. member, for that interesting question. I can say that yes, absolutely, the legislation effects have been reviewed by the Métis settlements, and it was done a number of years ago. They did submit a business case to the government back in 2007, which did recognize some of the challenges that they face with the current Métis land structure, but the business case, Mr. Speaker, also identified a number of options to deal with these challenges, including investment through land planning and creating long-term land leases.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the noted economist Hernando de Soto has posited that citizens need to have title that they can leverage by way of mortgages in order to establish themselves economically in society, does the hon. minister feel that the Métis settlement system of land tenure is viable to establish self-reliant communities in the Métis settlements?

Mr. Webber: Mr. Speaker, the Metis Settlements Act does have the ability for them to develop and carry out policies that will contribute to self-reliance. I can tell you that the settlements did insist on the current land structure when the legislation was passed back in 1990. Over the years the settlements have remained consistent in wanting their land secured the way it is for their future generations.

Mr. Allred: Thank you. Given that the Metis Settlements Act has been in place for 20 years now and the original monetary settlement has been extended for three years, when does the minister think that the Métis settlements will become self-sustaining?

Mr. Webber: Well, Mr. Speaker, first I need to clarify that the original funding agreement ended in 2007. We entered into a transitional funding agreement in 2008, which provided an additional $18 million over three years, and it does come to its scheduled end here this month. In regard to the hon. member's question on self-sustainability the settlements have made a lot of progress since the legislation came into effect, but like any local government each settlement is at a different level of achieving its goals.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Abandoned Wells

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. This government talks big when it comes to the oil and gas industry covering the costs of cleanup after development, but collecting $12 million this year to cover the cost of cleaning up abandoned or orphaned wells and $820 million for the life of the fund for reclaiming the oil sands simply won't cover it. To the Minister of Environment: when the government has collected only $12,000 per hectare from industry to pay for a cleanup that will actually cost closer to $150,000 per hectare, why is the taxpayer inevitably on the hook?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let's be very clear. It is the industry who is on the hook to do the cleanup. The funds that the member refers to are only contingency funds in case the circumstance should arise that the industry that created the disturbance is no longer economically viable. That is by far the exception, not the rule.

Ms Blakeman: Sorry. The bottom line is that the buck stops with the taxpayers if there's no oil company to cover it.

Still to the minister: why won't the minister require companies to put up the cash for cleanup at the start of a project with the opportunity for top-ups as the project expands instead of allowing oil sands companies to push payments to the end of the life of the project? That increases the risk and the liability for taxpayers if the companies go bankrupt or walk away.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I'm a little confused. I don't know if the member is referring to oil sands development or oil and gas well development.

Ms Blakeman: Both.

Mr. Renner: Well, she says both, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, there are two sets of rules, so I can't answer the question in the way that it was asked. I will say that we have been developing a very robust new revised regime for mine liability. I announced last week that we would be coming forward with the details, and I encourage the member to stay tuned because it should be later this week.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. The final question is to the Minister of Energy. Why did the minister give cleanup of the environment no consideration at all when developing the oil sands progressive reclamation strategy, proposing virtually no payment from the oil sands sector for reclamation until the end of the life of the project, where they can determine when the end of the life is?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the program that the member refers to was developed by Alberta Environment, and that's the program that I referenced earlier. Despite the fact that the opposition felt it necessary to release the documents in advance of our scheduled announcement, the announcement is still scheduled, and it will be later this week. I encourage the member to come and get all of the details.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

School Construction in Beaumont

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The town of Beaumont is one of the fastest growing communities in Canada, with about 25 to 30 per cent of the population being of school age. The schools are bursting at the seams. To the Minister of Education: why was nothing included in this year's budget to rectify this situation, and when can the parents and the students of Beaumont expect some relief?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of communities across this province which are suffering from the same issue. That's a wonderful issue to suffer from. It's an issue of growth, it's an issue of people wanting to come to this province and work in this province because of the good opportunities here, and it's an issue of people having their families and raising their families in Alberta. The fact of the matter is that the capital spending for a new school in Beaumont wouldn't hit the actual budget for two years out or three years out. We're working on the issue with respect to the capital plan. We hope to be able to do some things which will help communities like . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member now, please.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister: thank you for that answer. It's encouraging, Mr. Minister, that you suggest that there may be some relief coming in the near future on the capital side, but assuming that an announcement is sometime soon, nothing would start for three to five years. What is your department doing to work with St. Thomas Aquinas and Black Gold schools to mitigate the current overcrowding?

Mr. Hancock: Actually, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, I've met with both of those jurisdictions on a number of occasions over the past year to discuss the issue. We have moved forward in approving STAR, St. Thomas Aquinas Roman Catholic, to move ahead to lease space, not the best space possible but at least where they can start a school in Beaumont and have some accommodation for students. We're working with the Black Gold board to acquire more modulars so that they can deal with their population growth.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I do thank you for that, Mr. Minister, on behalf of the parents of Beaumont. That temporary school really has made a big difference in the community, but with the growth that is going on not only in Beaumont but in Leduc and many other parts of the area that I represent, how can the parents be assured that this situation will not occur again in the future?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In the Department of Education we have some very good people who have developed with help a very strong demographic modelling tool which allows us to work with school boards to predict growth in student population, to take a look at where we need the new schools, where the growth is going to be, where the student spaces are needed. We also have in our capital development department a group that works with school boards in regions to do value reviews to see how we can make the best use of the public space that's available regardless of what school board owns it. We can do appropriate planning to determine what we need to do with respect to improvement of schools that we already have and where we need to build new. There's a considerable amount of work that's happened and considerably more work now in terms of how we finance and build.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that now concludes Oral Question Period for today. Seventeen members were recognized. There were 102 questions and responses.

Because of the time and the requirements of our standing orders and the 3 o'clock situation, we are going to move forward immediately now with Members' Statements, and I'm going to call on first of all the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, rather than interrupt a speaker while they're speaking in Members' Statements, I wonder if it might be appropriate now to ask for unanimous consent to waive the standing order and allow the Routine to move past 3 p.m.

The Speaker: I can certainly do that. The request is that we allow the Routine to move beyond 3 o'clock p.m., and I'll ask it in such a way: if any member is opposed, please say no. Is any member opposed? Okay.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have received on behalf of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta a message from Her Majesty the Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, a message for dispersal this Commonwealth Day titled Women: Agents of Change! I now would like to invite the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, Alberta's representative on Canadian Women Parliamentarians, to present Her Majesty's message as part of her member's statement today.

Commonwealth Day Message from the Queen

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Last week, on the 8th of March, we marked the hundredth anniversary of the first International Women's Day. The idea of having a women's day was first proposed against the backdrop of the rapid industrialisation in the early twentieth century. From small beginnings, this idea has grown to become a widely recognised way of celebrating women around the world. While some people use this day to acknowledge the love, admiration and respect for women, others use it to remember the great social and political strides made both by and for women in the last hundred years. There is no right or wrong approach.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

In the Commonwealth, every year, 26 million girls are born; and this equates to one new baby girl arriving almost every second of every day. In the time it takes to hold the Commonwealth Observance Service at Westminster Abbey, nearly four thousand girls will have been born in Commonwealth lands. And every one of these births marks the start of a new life, a journey which begins with the hopes of parents, families and communities, and which is continued through the aspirations of those girls themselves.

This year, the Commonwealth celebrates the important role that women already play in every walk of life and in every Commonwealth country – from the richest to the poorest areas, across continents and oceans, from villages to places of international debate, in every culture and faith – recognising that women are "agents of change" in so many ways: as mothers and sisters, teachers and doctors, artists and craftspeople, smallholders and entrepreneurs, and as leaders of our societies, unleashing the potential of those around them.

And also this year, the Commonwealth reflects on what more could be achieved if women were able to play an even larger role. For example, I am encouraged that last year the Commonwealth launched a global effort to train and support half a million more midwives worldwide. In all this work the commendable goal is to create a greater opportunity for women as children and adults to pursue their hopes and dreams, to attain their goals, and to make best use of their talents and knowledge.

Thank you.

Health Care System Public Inquiry Request

Mr. Hehr: Trust, accountability, and openness are absolutely vital to Canadian democracy. When a government loses the confidence of its people, when citizens take everything the government says with a huge grain of salt, our entire society suffers. This government's mismanagement of public health care and its ham-handed approach to criticism from health care professionals at the heart of the system have shaken people's trust and confidence.

That's why on Friday representatives of all opposition parties as well as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark issued a joint call for a full public inquiry, an independent inquiry with full protection for witnesses, led by a justice of the Crown. This unprecedented step was taken because of startling new suggestions that at least one doctor was intimidated into keeping quiet about problems in health care delivery. If there is even a grain of truth in these allegations, then we must get to the bottom of the affair and any others that have yet to come to light.

It's time to clear the air. It's time to stop intimidating doctors. It's time to learn the full sordid truth about this government's mismanagement of health care and its alleged attempts to cover up this mismanagement. I urge this government to leave a legacy it can be proud of, to allow a full public inquiry free of government censorship and interference so that Albertans can regain their trust in government and so that our health care professionals can finally feel free to speak out about the challenge they face in properly treating their patients. It's the right thing to do.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

National Social Work Week

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today in recognition of National Social Work Week, which celebrates an important profession with a long history of commitment to improving the well-being of people in our province. Social workers help people facing some of the most difficult and challenging circumstances of their lives, assist families in need, and reach out to others facing social, health, and financial problems. They provide counselling, advice, and support for people who want to better their situation. This year's National Social Work Week theme is Social Workers for Dignity and Inclusion: Upholding Human Rights.

In promoting human rights and inclusion, social workers help to improve the dignity and well-being of all. Social workers ensure that children and youth are kept safe, that people with disabilities receive assistance, and that families receive the support they need to be strong and to stay together.

Alberta is privileged to have skilled and dedicated professionals delivering programs and services to our children and families. Thank you to all of those who are in this honourable profession and who undertake the task of working with our most vulnerable.

I encourage all members to take the time this week to recognize the important contribution social workers make to the lives of all Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Vulnerable Infant Response Team

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. A sad reality in our world is that an increasing number of vulnerable infants are coming to the attention of Calgary and area child and family services authorities each month because of neglect or abuse. We must deal with such circumstances proactively, before a precious child suffers. We must aim to keep families together.

That's why I'm very pleased that this past Friday the Minister of Children and Youth Services announced a new Alberta Vulnerable Infant Response Team in Calgary. This new, $1 million initiative is a team of child and family services caseworkers, public health nurses, and a Calgary police officer working closely together to assess families with vulnerable babies, develop safety plans, and provide immediate and strong supports to families before a crisis occurs.

Depending on the challenges a family faces, supports may include addictions or family violence counselling and access to mental health care. Mr. Speaker, through this initiative at-risk parents will get the assistance they need early on so they are able to provide a safe and nurturing home environment for their child. The new Alberta Vulnerable Infant Response Team will help at-risk parents with challenging life situations learn parenting and coping skills to keep babies safe and well cared for and families together.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Community Initiatives Program

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Churchill said that the loudest sound he usually heard was that of axes grinding. We live in a noisy world, and we work in noisy places. All the noise, however unpleasant, cannot drown out the sound of the good such as the sounds of a senior with Alzheimer's clapping her hands to a long-forgotten song played on a new baby grand piano or the cheering of a gymnasium full of junior high students celebrating the work of their principal and teachers in getting them a new workout centre. These are the sounds and the joys of small yet mighty community initiatives program grants.

Each of the two groups I talked about used roughly $16,000 in grant money to make a big difference. In the first example the Rotary Club of Edmonton West raised $32,000 for a baby grand piano for the Grandview seniors' home in the Edmonton-Riverview constituency. I'm told that Senator Tommy Banks has offered to christen the piano and that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview has offered to sing the opening song. I look forward to being there as it should be a night to remember.

Spruce Avenue school principal and former Edmonton Eskimo Chris Morris raised a similar sum to turn part of his school's stage into a fitness centre. Spruce Avenue school is in my constituency of Edmonton-Calder. The fitness equipment supplier sold the school a fully refurbished workout centre, exactly the same equipment he sells to the football team. It's high-quality stuff. If it stands up to the players, it should last a long time in a junior high.

So to groups like the Rotary Club of Edmonton West, the downtown Rotary, the staff and parents of Spruce Avenue school, thank you for your foresight, your creativity, and efficiency in making these things happen. I have listed but two of hundreds of small expenditures that make big differences. You have in your own way made life a better thing for those close to and around you. It didn't cost much, but it is worth a great deal.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Community Facility Enhancement Program

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize an outstanding program and speak to how it benefited the constituents in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. The Ministry of Culture and Community Spirit established the community facility enhancement program to help foster the unique characteristics of Alberta's many communities. This program has been designed to respond to local facility enhancement needs and to work in partnership with community groups and volunteers.

The community facility enhancement program assists communities with the construction, renovation, or redevelopment of community public-use facilities and is designed to help enhance the quality of life in communities across the province.

Mr. Speaker, two Saturdays ago I was able to see first-hand how the community facility enhancement program benefits local communities. In my constituency I was able to present a cheque for $125,000 to the Ghana Friendship Association for the purchase of a community centre. The cheque presentation coincided with the 54th anniversary of Ghana's Independence Day, Edmonton's Ghana Week, and it saw a large number of Ghanaians and members of the African community on hand. I feel that this $125,000 cheque for the purchase of the community centre will make Mill Woods a better place to live and raise a family.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

3:00 Firefighters at Robb Gas Well Blowout

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to rise today to acknowledge the events which happened at the Husky natural gas well near Robb last Monday. In an unfortunate incident 11 workers, including four firefighters, were injured due to a flash fire caused by fracking operations at the well. The firefighters showed great courage in their battle to contain the blaze as they fought to extinguish the flames and rescue injured individuals despite suffering burns to their hands and faces.

These firefighters were employees of HSE Integrated, an industrial safety services firm, and the company president, David Yager, stated: "Every single one of our firefighters came out with another injured worker. They're heroes."

Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to say that our government is committed to ensuring that these firefighters and all firefighters injured on the job have the best care. The burn unit at the University of Alberta hospital is among the best in the world, and I'm sure these four firefighters will receive unparalleled treatment through the duration of their stay.

While the names of these injured firefighters have not been yet released, I commend them for their valour and courage, and I wish them the very best in their recovery.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, Mr. Speaker. At this point I'd like to give oral notice of a Standing Order 30 request, and I have the appropriate number of copies to be distributed. The request is that we would suspend the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the new evidence that has surfaced demonstrating that the government silenced critics of the health care system, thereby contributing to the crisis in Alberta's health care and undermining confidence in public health care.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Under Standing Order 30 I'd like to serve notice that the ordinary business of the Legislative Assembly be adjourned to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, that given the willingness of multiple health professionals to now come forward under the protection of a full and independent public inquiry, the need for the government to immediately appoint a commission under the Public Inquiries Act to investigate allegations that health care professionals may have been intimidated or faced the loss of employment or professional certification or had their character or mental health questioned unfairly in order to prevent them from speaking out publicly about deficiencies in the delivery of health care such as excessive wait times for cancer surgeries, leading in a number of cases to unnecessary death, and, further, that individuals may have received payments from public health authorities in exchange for their silence.

I have the requisite table copies.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The President of the Treasury Board and Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011. This being a money bill, His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor, having been informed of the contents of this bill, recommends the same to the Assembly.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Wills and Succession Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce first reading of Bill 14, the Wills and Succession Amendment Act, 2011.

The Wills and Succession Act governs how and to whom property is transferred when a person dies. Bill 14 will amend this legislation to clarify that the new court powers to validate or correct wills may only be exercised in respect of wills of those who die after the act comes into force. This amendment corrects an issue in the original act which seems to allow correction powers such as the power to rectify a will by adding words that were mistakenly omitted to apply to wills of people who are already dead. We want to avoid uncertainty and to avoid costs or delays caused by people trying to open closed matters or hold up administration of estates.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 14 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I move that Bill 14 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Bill 15 Victims of Crime Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise and request leave to introduce a bill being Bill 15, the Victims of Crime Amendment Act, 2011.

Mr. Speaker, this bill seeks to amend the Victims of Crime Act, hence the crafty name. We hope to ensure that the services we provide in Alberta to victims of crime are both timely and fair.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 15 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: I have down here the hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View. Is there a tabling? Hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, proceed.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be tabling on behalf of my colleague the Member for Calgary-Mountain View, Leader of the Official Opposition. These are actually tablings from last week that had been corrected. It's the five copies of a letter concerning gender reassignment.

Nine letters are from physicians who are again asking why there's going to be a cut in the physician support programs.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling e-mails from the following individuals concerned about block cutting, otherwise known as clear-cutting, in the Castle wilderness: Roger Gagne, Larry Semchuk, Julie Walker, Katrina Kellner, Richard Collier, Annette Le Faive, Timothy Petkau, Lisa Hurst, Sean Willis, Joan Poulsen, Morris Prokop, Margaret Roberts, Rebecca Hohnsbein, Debra Bornhuse, Wendy Francis, Catherine Diebel, Adrian Thyse, Jeremy Derksen, Leanne Silva, Daniel Rudy, Elaine Roberts, Gene Oleksin, Robert Reeves, Terry Hrudehy, and Dorothy Tovell.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two sets of tablings today. The first is a letter to the Premier that was sent to him today, signed by the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, the leader of the Wildrose Alliance Party, the House leader of the Alberta Party, the MLA for Edmonton-Meadowlark as well as myself, leader of the NDP opposition. The letter calls for a public inquiry, and it goes on to say that the Health Quality Council cannot compel witnesses to testify nor require evidence be produced and lacks power to overrule non-disclosure agreements. It does not have sufficient independence from government, or sufficient separation from the medical establishment.

My second set of tablings, Mr. Speaker, is a series of documents outlining the public statements of the Premier. The first one, from March 9, is entitled Premier Rejects Health Inquiry. The second one, from March 11, reads: Health Inquiry Ordered. Finally, on March 14 it says that the Premier quashes inquiry calls. I'm expecting another one in a few days.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the appropriate number of copies of a poll recently released regarding the future of the Castle special management area. The poll finds that over 85 per cent of Lethbridge and Coaldale residents oppose logging in the Castle special management area west of Pincher Creek. A similarly overwhelming majority instead support the establishment of a wildland park, and 94 per cent of residents favour protection of the Castle watershed and wildlife habitat over recreational use. The Legislature, therefore, ought to act to protect this special area.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to table three separate tablings. The first is a letter dated September 10, 1999. It's on Capital health letterhead. It's about a physician who had a conflict with the hospital administration over patients suffering and dying in emergency rooms. It's a notice under the Trespass to Premises Act for the physician not to attend the hospital facilities anymore.

My second tabling is a letter dated September 14, 1999. It's on Capital health letterhead. It's about that same physician and his privileges being brought into question, and it's signed by an executive vice-president and chief clinical officer of Capital health, also the associate dean of clinical affairs for the Faculty of Medicine & Dentistry.

Then I have a third tabling dated June 5, 2000. It's from the deputy registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons about the said physician in question, saying that there is "no negative entry in your personal file at the College offices. You are in good standing at this time," and you're free to practise medicine. There are no impediments based on competency or mental health issues. Mr. Speaker, that physician is this current member of the Legislature.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others? Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll be tabling a letter that I got from Dr. Y and that I referred to in my questions in question period, where he said:

There are so many of us, wanting to do the right thing for patients, but who are working in fear of retribution if we speak out.

I have direct knowledge of several health professionals, who were negatively impacted by their efforts to advocate for better healthcare. They were silenced or worked out, or discredited, one after the other. I have also been . . . impacted by this "muzzling of physicians voices", and this "culture of silence" was simply reinforced. Anyone questioning the status quo would be "dealt with" rapidly and effectively.

He goes on: "Our moral distress continues . . ."

The Speaker: Hon. member, table the letter. It is not necessary to read the whole letter.

The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise and table with you the appropriate number of copies in follow-up to an answer I gave during question period earlier today. It's basically my letter to Dr. Tyrrell, chair of the Health Quality Council of Alberta, in which I am asking them to do an independent review and "determine, to the extent possible, the impact of wait times on a group of emergency department patients identified by emergency department physicians, and others." The letter goes on similarly with respect to the impact of wait times on cancer patients. This, again, will be a fully public document once they finish their review.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Okay. Thank you.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Stelmach, Premier, a partial transcript dated March 9, 2011, from the Rutherford show, CHQR/CHED radio, with guest Dr. John Cowell, Health Quality Council, with attached 630 CHED web page dated March 9, 2011.

On behalf of the hon. Mr. Hayden, Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to the Livestock Identification and Commerce Act the Livestock Identification Services Ltd. summary of activities April 1, 2009, to March 31, 2010, fiscal year 2010, with attached financial statements dated March 31, 2010.

On behalf of Dr. Sherman, hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, Court of Queen's Bench amended statement of claim dated August 27, 2002, between Dr. Ciaran J. McNamee and Ciaran J. McNamee Professional Corporation, plaintiffs, and the University of Alberta hospital, Capital health authority, and Dr. Robert Bear and Dr. Tim Winton, defendants.

The Speaker: Hon. members, we also have three points of order to deal with. The first one is from the hon. Government House Leader, who rose on a point of order. The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Parliamentary Language

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today during question period the Leader of the Official Opposition was very intemperate with his remarks on a number of occasions, as he has been both in and outside the House. Specifically, I would raise a point of order under 23(j), "uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder," and (l), "introduces any matter in debate that offends the practices and precedents of the Assembly."

I would also draw the Speaker's attention to a number of citations in Beauchesne's, referencing at least one of the statements that was made by the member, where he talks about: "come clean about your government's dishonesty and incompetence by disclosing all cases," et cetera.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is parliamentary practice to ask questions and even to be aggressive in asking questions, but under Beauchesne's 409(7) at page 121 "a question must adhere to the proprieties of the House, in terms of inferences, imputing motives or casting aspersions upon persons within the House or out of it." Beauchesne's 411: it must not be hypothetical and be only in relation to current portfolios; it must not reflect on character. The short of it is that as parliamentarians there's a duty on us to act in the public interest, and that includes letting the public know. That's 410(4), that I was going to cite. "In the view of the watching public, decorum is of importance."

It is absolutely inappropriate to use language alleging dishonesty and corruption except in one very, very important circumstance, and that is the circumstance where you're prepared to bring evidence to show it. In that case it's appropriate to have that referred to the appropriate officer of the House or to the police for investigation. But if you do not have evidence of dishonesty or corruption, it is absolutely without the proprieties of the House to use that language to describe members or a collective of members in this House. The hon. member today offended that propriety with his language.

Mr. Speaker, I raise this as a point of order because it is important. We've talked about this on a number of occasions in the past. We can disagree on important matters of public policy and on issues important to the public without being disagreeable, and in fact we have an obligation to do so. If we cannot engage in this House in appropriate levels of public discourse and exchange of ideas and viewpoints without rancour and without allegation and without bringing in accusations about other members, what kind of an example are we setting for the discussion of public policy in this province?

This is a very important role that we have. It's important that we carry out this role with a sense of dignity and decorum, as befits this House, and I would ask you to ask the hon. member to apologize for his offensive language.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do rise at this time to refute that there is a point of order in this particular instance.

Now, I'm going to take it that the Government House Leader was referring specifically to the one phrase that he put on the record, that had been uttered by the Leader of the Official Opposition. I agree with him that there are many times where we can find language to disagree with each other in this House, but I will say that over a prolonged period of observation, especially in this session but going back several years, there is a movement on behalf of members of the government that genuine questions, backed up by proof of any kind that you wish, are asked by any member of the opposition, and they are met with, generally, a denial, then a trivialization of the issue, and then some sort of insult about the intelligence of the person asking the question or their ability to comprehend the issue or the problem at hand or some other offhandedness. So the respect in this House, for both sides, has been disintegrating for some time. That tone does get set, and it does get set by the government members.

Now, we have had a particularly spirited discussion back and forth about the need to have an inquiry to investigate the issues that have been brought up around the deaths of the 322 people in emergency care and various forms of care. What we have had from the government is: "Well, we don't answer these questions. I'm not the minister any longer, so I'm not going to answer that question." Or the administration says, "That was then; this is now; that's not our problem" as though it were somehow a different government that was in charge, and that's simply not true.

From the position of the oppositions in this House and, particularly, the Official Opposition we have to try a little harder, yell a little louder, and dig a little deeper to try and get the information out. In fact, I believe that when the Leader of the Official Opposition talked about coming clean and about dishonesty, we have one that has been presented with proof, and that is that we've had a doctor who was in fact chased out of the province, lost their licence, lost their privileges. There was a deal made – and that has been brought on the public record – and there was a payment. If there was nothing wrong – I've never seen the government move with such alacrity to settle something as they did in that particular case.

So proof is on CBC and on their website and now in a number of other media. [interjection] Well, there are interviews with the individual, and if you don't want to listen to the interviews, I can't help you. But it's certainly public reference. It's certainly available from a number of places. If the government wants to argue about how much proof is enough, okay. We can have that argument. But you said, "Prove that this has happened," and that proof has stepped forward in public, on the record.

To say that the government was dishonest in saying, "This has never happened; it's not our problem; we've never heard of this," yes, I think that a person on the street would see that as dishonest. We have had a number of high-profile medical personnel who've left their positions, Mr. Speaker. We've had four medical officers of health in the Edmonton region, the previous head of the Provincial Laboratory of Public Health. We've had a medical officer of health with Palliser, who is now known as the Leader of the Official Opposition. We've had Dr. O'Connor, a physician for the Fort Chip area, where the government asked both the college and the AMA to review his record. So right there are a number of examples where we have brought forward or the individuals have brought forward that there was an issue, and we can't get any information from the government.

As far as whether or not the language should have been used, it has to be looked at in context, Mr. Speaker, as you have well advised us many times. As I reviewed the citations that were made by the member and that appear for us in House of Commons Procedure and Practice, clearly there are examples where on language and decorum the deciding factor is: did it create disorder in the Chamber? Through that question period there were a number of times that disorder was created, and I cannot say that that particular time was the largest disorder. I think, in fact, it was one of the smaller disorders. I can give the Speaker 619 as that particular quote and also, on the previous page under 618, a ruling on the basis of the context in which the language was used.

I would respectfully argue back to my colleague that he believed at the time that he used it – he probably still believes it – that that particular choice of language was in order based on what we have seen and that that was an appropriate choice of language for that time. It's not hypothetical in this case, which was quoted using 411(5). This is not a hypothetical case anymore. It's not. And that's what keeps happening to the opposition. We bring issues up, we're pooh-poohed by the government, and then we're able to back it up. This is another example. We've backed it up. You asked us for evidence. We provided the evidence. Now the evidence isn't good enough; that's not the language that we should use to present it.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to speak, but I do deny that there is a point of order in the context of what was said today and in the context of the larger question period.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to support what the hon. House leader on our side has said, and I want to draw some clarity to the issue in terms of some of the allegations and some of the references that were just made by the previous speaker.

I don't think there's anyone in this House or anyone out there who would not understand the difference between an allegation and truth. I don't think there's anybody who would not understand the difference between a statement of claim, which is a statement from one particular party's interests and from one particular party's side of the argument, and what a statement of defence would be. The fact is that some of the issues they've dealt with seem to fuzzy the issue. They don't provide any clarity.

What the hon. member on the opposition side did today is, in my view, a point of order. I would hope that you will find in that respect. But let's not start dragging in all kinds of other issues to do with clinical skills or practices in medicine that do or don't apply in this case. Let's stick to the point of order. I'm hoping you'll find that there wasn't one.

We'll have ample time perhaps, if the vote goes a certain way, to discuss some of the other issues that this member wishes to raise. Until then, let's get back onto the business of the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark on this point of order.

Dr. Sherman: Mr. Speaker, thank you. Having taught medicine and law to medical students for years and having served as an expert witness many times on medical lawsuits, lawsuits are settled three ways. Either the person drops the action, or they go to court, or it's settled. In that particular action Dr. McNamee is unable to speak. The action, therefore, I assume, is settled.

The Speaker: Hon. member, there were no names mentioned in the point of order before us. Let's stay on the point of order. Are you continuing on the point of order? No names mentioned.

Dr. Sherman: My apologies.

With respect to the evidence that was produced in the statement of claim, with Dr. McNamee not being able to speak openly, there are certain allegations . . .

The Speaker: Please sit down. Okay? I think we'll move on if you don't mind.

Who else would like to participate on this point of order? We've got all afternoon. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview. Don't hold back. We're dealing with a point of order.

Dr. Taft: On the point of order, if there was no evidence, then why did the government pay a settlement?

The Speaker: Anybody else want to participate? No?

Well, okay. Here's what happened, just so that everybody can remember, because it's important to get back to the point. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition is already partway through his answer, but I think these are the words that caused the hon. Government House Leader to rise.

Are you willing, then, to come clean about your government's dishonesty and incompetence by disclosing all cases where the government, Alberta Health Services, regional health authorities paid any form of compensation to people for their silence? Are you willing, sir?

I do believe that it was at that point the hon. Government House Leader rose and dealt with this matter.

Now, it's very, very clear that in our rules – and they've been commented on by various speakers in here already this afternoon – you cannot say that deliberately about any individual member. We have a situation here where it was not really deliberate to one particular member, but the comment was about "your government's dishonesty and incompetence," so clearly some people could make the argument that you are making a direct accusation against another member.

I'm going to just read again because it's kind of important for us to be reminded of these things: page 618, chapter 13, Rules of Order and Decorum, House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, 2009, under Unparliamentary Language.

The proceedings of the House are based on a long-standing tradition of respect for the integrity of all Members.

Good way to begin.

Thus, the use of offensive, provocative or threatening language in the House is strictly forbidden. Personal attacks, insults and obscenities are not in order. A direct charge or accusation against a Member may be made only by way of a substantive motion for which notice is required.

If language used in debate appears questionable to the Speaker, he or she will intervene, as happened this afternoon, when a particular member stood up and referred to a part of his derrière.

Nonetheless, any Member who feels aggrieved by a remark or allegation may also bring the matter to the immediate attention of the Speaker on a point of order. Points of order may not be raised during Members' Statements or Question Period, however, the Speaker may address a matter of unparliamentary language at once if he or she believes the matter to be sufficiently serious to merit immediate attention, which happened.

Normally, the matter is dealt with at the conclusion of Question Period. Since the Speaker must rule on the basis of the context in which the language was used, points of order raised in regard to questionable language must be raised as soon as possible after the alleged irregularity has occurred.

And that certainly did happen.

Then there's something in here about if the Speaker didn't hear the words. Well, the Speaker did hear the words, so that paragraph doesn't apply.

In dealing with unparliamentary language, the Speaker takes into account the tone, manner and intention of the Member speaking; the person to whom the words at issue were directed; the degree of provocation; and, most importantly, whether or not the remarks created disorder in the Chamber. Thus, language deemed unparliamentary one day may not necessarily be deemed unparliamentary the following day.

This really helps in arriving at a conclusion, by the way, hon. members.

The codification of unparliamentary language has proven impractical as it is the context in which words or phrases are used that the Chair must consider when deciding whether or not they should be withdrawn. Although an expression may be found to be acceptable, the Speaker has cautioned that any language which leads to disorder in the House should not be used. Expressions which are considered unparliamentary when applied to an individual Member have not always been considered so when applied "in a generic sense" or to a party.

Therein, I think, is where we arrived at this afternoon.

I certainly do not believe that the language is parliamentary in terms of the tradition of the province of Alberta, but by the same token it was not against a particular member although some might argue that it is. No member can accuse another of a deliberate falsehood, and in this case the Leader of the Official Opposition does not directly accuse another member, but it's pretty close to the line. So this is not good reflection – not good reflection – but it's also not going to be upheld as a point of order.

Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you have a point of order.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief.

The Speaker: Oh, take your time.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, exactly. Shovel it under the rug, right?

The standing order is 23(j). What I would just say is that the hon. minister of health said that at a news conference on last Friday members of the opposition besmirched and attacked the credibility of the members of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, the AMA – that's the Alberta Medical Association – and other health professionals. This statement is categorically untrue and, I think, is abusive and insulting language, and I would hope that the minister would retract that completely untrue statement that he talked about. But with that, I withdraw my point of order. I just wanted to make sure that was on the record.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Sorry. You made an accusation against someone and then withdrew it?

Mr. Anderson: Well, no. Sorry. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to make sure that it was clear that we did not in fact besmirch the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the AMA, as was alleged by this minister. I'm not asking him to withdraw his comments, and therefore I'm withdrawing my point of order.

The Speaker: I don't know what point you're rising on, but go ahead.

Mr. Zwozdesky: I'm not sure. I think at the very least we need some clarity because at the beginning of his point of order he made some innuendoes about the Speaker shoving something under the rug, and I think he should be held to account for that. I know we don't do points of order on points of order, but since there wasn't a point of order at the end – he's withdrawn it – I'm raising a point of order.

Point of Order Reflections on the Speaker

The Speaker: If the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere said something similar to what you've just said, I would have no choice but to have him disembowelled, but I'm going to give him a chance. I did not hear that. If you said that, honourable sir, have the integrity to stand up and take responsibility.

Mr. Anderson: You know what? This guy wouldn't know the truth if it hit him in the head.

The Speaker: No, no. I want to know.

Mr. Anderson: It's a very shameful comment. I didn't say anything to you about that, and he should withdraw that remark. He's being untruthful and dishonest with this House. [interjections]

The Speaker: Okay. Look. [interjections] Whoa. Settle down here, please. I did not hear any such comment, okay? I asked the hon. member in front of all of you if he'd said the comment. He said he had not. So I'm cool, okay? I feel good about myself. I feel okay, and I don't feel challenged. I'm not taking the medical procedure against the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

We have no point of order, and the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness is happy because he's got a smile on his face. You're okay? You're happy?

Mr. Zwozdesky: It's okay. Fine.

The Speaker: That's good. That's good.

Okay, hon. Government House Leader. The third point of order.

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, again rising under 23(h), (i), and (j), (h) being making allegations against another member – in this case it was against another member; it was against the current minister of health – “imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member” and “uses abusive or insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.” Also, I’m rising under the appropriate rule in Beauchesne’s, which indicates under 409(7), “must adhere to the proprieties of the House” and one of the other rules, that says you can’t ask somebody about . . . Oh, sorry. On page 122, 410(16), “Ministers may be questioned only in relation to current portfolios.”

The language which was offensive essentially was when the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark persisted, actually, in asking questions about a previous portfolio and actually did so after he was admonished by you that it’s not appropriate to ask those questions. But when the first question was responded to by the minister of health, the minister of health very clearly indicated that at the time the member was talking about, he was the associate minister of health, and I very clearly heard him enunciate the responsibilities that he had in that context.

The Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark then went on to say something to the effect – and I don’t have the benefit of the Blues on this one – that he completely sloughed off his responsibilities. Now, that would seem to be a milder characterization than what we heard previously, but again I go back to the propriety of the place. If we want to really have discussion on public policy that’s meaningful, if we want to engage the public in discussions, then we really do have to be people of good order in this House and set an example in debate. The hon. member was specifically admonished by you not to ask questions about previous portfolios, so he turned the question into a slur and made an allegation against another member and, in his language, made aspersions about the member’s character and conduct.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to respond to this, too, because I do believe there is a point of order that has to be made. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere made some statements here that are simply not true. They don’t even actually probably deserve this much level of debate. I want to assure the member that everybody was listening and watching when five politicians, five opposition politicians stood together on Friday on a platform and, united they stood, said things like:

Investigate whether or not Health Authorities, the Alberta Medical Association, professional organizations or any other body, including medical faculties, participated in any of the activities included in [the first point raised] and whether or not they did so in conjunction, directly or indirectly, with the Government of Alberta, any of its ministries or with any of its officials, elected or non-elected.

What was item 1, that they all stood there united and solidarity reigns forever? Item 1 was:

Investigate whether or not health care staff and professionals were subject to intimidation, including retribution, professional or employment discipline or the threat thereof.

The quote goes on.

Another member standing there on Friday said words to the effect of: all of these organizations – the universities, the Alberta Medical Association, College of Physicians and Surgeons, the government, and health authorities, and perhaps others – engaged in a climate that fostered fear and intimidation. They all stood together, and now they’re trying to distance themselves from it.

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, I very much enjoyed the last few minutes. I’m trying to conclude in my mind what it has to do with the point of order that has been raised.

As far as I can understand, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark said the following.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Usually what the guilty always say is: show me the proof. The current Minister of Health and Wellness was associate minister of health at that time. He completely sloughed his responsibility. I was his associate minister of health. I spoke up, and I have a duty and a responsibility not only as a physician but as a legislator when I’m aware of these cases of physicians begging for resources, and the minister completely sloughs any responsibility he has as a legislator.

I believe, hon. Government House Leader, that it was at that point in time that you rose on a point of order.

So we’ve now heard from the hon. Government House Leader and the hon. minister of health. Does anybody else want to get involved in this point of order? Oh, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, by all means.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is truly an honour to be served my first point of order as an elected official for speaking up on an important issue of public safety for Albertans. I was faced with an ethical and moral dilemma. I became aware of something very serious.

The Speaker: Hon. member, with the greatest degree of delicacy, please would you just have a chair. The point here is about the words you used, not about you. It’s about what you said today in the House. It’s not about you. It’s not about the past, not about three weeks ago, four months ago, but today, this afternoon, in the House, the words you used. That’s what this issue is about.

Dr. Sherman: In that case, Mr. Speaker, with respect to using the word “sloughing,” I will apologize to you and the Assembly.

The Speaker: In the history of our Assembly when we receive an apology, we move on. We accept everything, and we move on. So that has now been dealt with. I do believe that that’s cleaned up the three points of order that we had this afternoon. Thank you, hon. member.

Emergency Debate

The Speaker: Now we have the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre on a Standing Order 30 application, urgency being the key.

Health Care System

Ms Blakeman: Yes, sir. Thank you very much for the opportunity to bring this standing order before the House. I did do the oral notice as required, and it was delivered to the Speaker’s office and also a copy to all of the other caucuses and the independent member. If I may be bold enough to say, I have been asked to make sure that people understand that all of the opposition parties and the independent member are asking for this emergency debate to take place.

I just want to quickly run through the requirements of urgency given that we’re looking for issues that are specific. They are urgent and important and require urgent consideration. Under Beauchesne 387 and 389 as well as – I’m sorry; this is the older version – Marleau and Montpetit, parliamentary reference, 585 and the parameters set out in Beauchesne 387 to 398 we’re looking at an opportunity for debate.

Now, the budget debate, Mr. Speaker, is on April 13. However, that is four weeks from now, and this issue has more immediacy than four weeks away. As well, the format for the debates is now very narrowly focused and doesn't allow for a back-and-forth, wide-ranging debate. There was no mention of this particular issue in the throne speech regarding public inquiries, the 322 cases, or the wait times that connect to them. There was nothing outlined in the government media release of February 14 on the spring session. There's no private member's public bill or private bill on the Order Paper. There are no government motions. There are no motions other than government motions that are likely to come up in any kind of a short time order. The department of health was not included in the supplementary supply budget at all.

In Oral Question Period, obviously, this issue has been raised a number of times, particularly around the issue of public inquiries, but Beauchesne 408(1)(e) and (f), 408(2), and 410(7) all speak to brevity, and none of them encourage the kind of debate that we're actually seeking under Standing Order 30. The written questions: there are questions on health and recruitment, but the government did not call them today, and otherwise they are not called and due until day 17, so they are not available to us at this time. There is a motion for a return sponsored by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, again not due until day 24.

None of this is giving us anything that we can work with on an immediate basis given how pressing the public interest is on this particular issue. In that, I'm referencing Beauchesne 389, that the public interest will suffer if this issue is not given immediate attention. Certainly, the government has been aware of the 322 cases and the surrounding controversy since 2008. There was no public inquiry called. We're not aware of an internal inquiry.

The Health Quality Council is not sufficient for the level of whistle-blower protection and witness immunity or to address issues of health care professionals' intimidation or the loss of employment. The recruitment and retention of health professionals has been an ongoing challenge in this province, and the urgency of this issue for a public inquiry continues for this House and for Albertans. It is so urgent that the opposition parties and the independent member have joined together, and despite the derision that the health minister seems to hold for that, I think that is generally recognized in the public as a very strong illustration of the seriousness of this issue.

We have had a number of examples that the opposition members have brought forward – and I'm speaking wider than the Official Opposition – and those as general situations and some specific ones have been denied by the government. Then when we try to press further, we're told, "No, I'm no longer the minister there; I'm not responsible," or we get the general response from the government: that was then, this is now, and we're not responsible for what the same government with the same political party made choices about four or five years ago or three years ago. Well, somehow they're not responsible for any of the choices that were made although most of the people there were there for that decision-making process and are still there. Somehow they forget. I guess it's selective amnesia.

It is a crisis of confidence for the public. We know from the recent polling that two-thirds of Albertans do believe that there is an issue around management and mismanagement in the health care system. We wanted to be able to allow a public inquiry and a debate around a public inquiry to allow the government to show their proof, and certainly we've already put ours on the table. Where we're lacking is in the response from the government on why they wouldn't do this.

We have to be able to offer immunity to the witnesses. We have to be able to conduct this as a public inquiry with the full protocol of the quasi-judicial structure. We need to be able to compel witnesses, sir, because otherwise those witnesses may not come before us. That would be including some of the people that are opposite me on the government benches as well as people working for the government. The government has always denied these allegations, but there is proof, specifically in the case of Dr. Ciaran McNamee, and that is definitely on the record.

What needs to happen today is that a debate needs to go forward. There is no structure or venue for doctors to speak out, and that is why a public inquiry is needed and why we need to hold the debate in this House, suspending the regular order of business in order to debate that public inquiry. I ask the Speaker respectfully to rule in favour of this motion and to put the question to the vote of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would dearly love to stand here and take the same amount of time to refute the rather spurious allegations that have been made by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. However, I do agree with her on one particular issue, and that is that there is an issue of urgent public importance. It's none of the ones that she has raised. I feel a bit like a boxer taking a fall in a fight. It's none of the issues that she has raised. The issue of urgent public importance, that is framed rather ineptly in the motion, is these allegations that are being made about government being corrupt, about government being dishonest, about all those things, referring to character of members of this government rather than to the public importance of issues. It says in the motion, "The new evidence that has surfaced demonstrating that the government silenced critics . . . thereby undermining confidence" in the health system, clearly referring back to earlier statements about allegations that have been made.

Now, a statement of claim is not proof of anything. A statement of claim is, in fact, an allegation. The Member for Edmonton-Riverview said: well, if a statement of claim is issued and an issue is settled, that means there's proof of something. It means absolutely nothing of the sort. Lawsuits are settled all the time for all sorts of reasons and usually without any acceptance of responsibility whatsoever. The hon. member really cannot say that the issuance of a statement of claim means anything.

But there is a matter of urgent public importance here, and that is that we have a discussion in this House, which is the most appropriate place for the discussion, about the allegations that have been raised by the members opposite with respect to the conduct of this government, and that doesn't need a public inquiry.

Members opposite should be prepared to come this afternoon – I presume they've been planning this in concert as a coalition over the weekend – with whatever proof they might have, not just allegations, not just insinuations, not just recklessness. Bring some proof and have some discussion this afternoon of where the government has done wrong. If all they can allege is that some HR manager someplace did something or that management throughout the health system resulted in somebody being fired, that's not proof of corruption. That's not proof of dishonour. That's not proof of fraud. That's not proof of payment of people to go away. Bring the proof, bring it this afternoon, bring it before this Legislature, stand behind what you say, and then go outside and say it again.

The Speaker: Hon. members, under the rules the chair can hear from a number of speakers with respect to this, but here's the dilemma that I have for you. Normally we can get to Orders of the Day by 3 o'clock. If we would have addressed this matter prior to 3 o'clock and if the ruling would have been in favour of waiving the Routine for the day, there would have been upwards of 180 minutes available for debate. The rules say 10 minutes per speaker. That could have been 18 members to participate. We've now arrived at 6 minutes to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and I can invite additional people to participate on this, or I can come up with my ruling now. If I invite additional people to participate in this, I suspect we're going to be here until 20 after 4, which means that the number of speakers, if it were to be in the affirmative, would be limited to very few.

There's a real dilemma when we have the Routine of the type that we had today, with lengthy introductions, lengthy tablings, ministerial statements, responses from everyone, 14 members' statements. There is very, very little. So I'm going to look at your body language, and I'm going to conclude in my head that the appropriate thing for me to do is to deal with this matter now.

I have listened to the debate. We received the notice at the appropriate time, by 10:12 this morning. I'll let you read House of Commons Procedure and Practice, pages 689 to 696. The motion has already been dealt with.

There's one thing that is very apparent in dealing with one of these matters dealing with emergency debate, and that is of the willingness by the hon. members to proceed with the debate on this matter. I believe that in looking at and hearing what I've heard in the last several hours, there is a willingness to proceed to waive the ordinary business of the day, so I find that the request for leave is in order primarily because of the willingness of the members to participate. By saying that the request for leave is in order, if members are opposed to my decision, you can stand. Well, all right.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, proceed with your motion under Standing Order 30. Ten minutes per speaker. Oh, by the way, just before you proceed, we do have an issue at 5:15 this afternoon in that we have to deal with the motion that says: in reply to the Lieutenant Governor's speech. At 5:15 the Speaker must put the question, and following that, there's a question on Government Motion 10. So if everybody wants to speak 10 minutes, there is a small number of people who are going to participate. If you speak five minutes, you double up the numbers. I'm going to go in rotation: one opposition, one government, one opposition, one government. That's the way we're going.

Proceed, Edmonton-Centre. You have the floor.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Just as a point of clarification, then, my 10 minutes starts over?

The Speaker: It starts right now, 15 seconds ago.

Ms Blakeman: Excellent. Thank you so much. I appreciate the willingness of the House to approach this subject because it's clearly one that has caused a great deal of discomfort, if I can say that, on the government side or perhaps anticipation. [interjections] Outrage? Outrage. I'm corrected. My colleagues opposite want to make it clear that they feel this has caused them outrage.

On this side of the House it has created, I have to say, an unprecedented coming together of opposition members, which has indeed made for some interesting coalitions. This is clearly an issue which has transcended the normal boundaries of ideological differences, and people have come together on it, so it is an important one.

Now, let me go back to where this all started because this is about a health care system. Really, do I believe that this health care system is going to end tomorrow? No, I don't, but we as legislators are dealing with the public trust and the credibility of the health system, and every time the government tries to make the system better, they fiddle with the administration, which actually impairs the delivery of the system, so we have a declining public belief in the government's management of a health care system.

Well, what makes that level of belief improve? Generally it's fresh air, sunlight, openness, transparency. If somebody says something and someone else says, "No, it isn't," then you need to be able to show your proof and get it out in the open so that the public can look at that and go: "Okay. Person A said this. Person B said that. All right. I've looked at both of them, and this is who I believe."

Our problem on the opposition side is that repeatedly we see things happen in the health care system. We question the government on it, and as I said, you know, first of all the issue is trivialized. "Oh, that's not a problem." Well, it is a problem. We raised it. People have identified it to us as a problem, and therefore we put it on the table, so to speak, on behalf of Albertans, on behalf of citizens.

The second part of that is that then they somehow are derisive of the person asking the question, that we don't understand and that we don't have the intelligence to do it, et cetera. That's not transparent. That's not giving us the information that we're looking for. I mean, this government is repeatedly voted the most secretive government in Canada, and I know they're proud of that, but it's not something that Albertans are proud of because we're just trying to find out.

I mean, freedom of information and protection of privacy, as is often said in Alberta – and this involves swear words, so I'm going to put asterisks in place – doesn't mean asterisk off; it's private. It means freedom of information and protection of privacy. It was intended to give the government a process by which they could open the doors of information and give it out to the public so the public could see what they were doing and how they had made decisions.

So what do we have here? We have the case of 322 cases that were brought to the attention of the government several years ago, three years ago now, backed by health professionals the government had hired. These health professionals said: "There is a problem with these cases. Things have gone wrong. You need to do something." Now, the government may well have answered them at the time. I have no idea because they won't tell me, and they won't give me any records that show me that they did answer that. What we see are more health professionals that come forward and go: I'm really concerned about the state of health care, and nobody will listen to me on the government side.

I'm trying not to use people's names, so I wrote down the titles. The representative of the ER doctors in Alberta also had a long e-mail that went public, again describing and referencing many of those original 322 cases and continuing to talk about wait-lists and problems in accessing ER. This time there came out the concern that they were not able to speak out, that there was consternation about the government putting something in place that was muzzling them. Then we get other people coming forward. In fact, that's when we get a member of the government's old caucus coming forward, saying: "That's absolutely right. That's what's happening. Doctors are feeling they can't speak out, that they're muzzled, and more than that, aside from their concern about it doing damage to their patients, it's doing damage to them."

I referenced a number of people that as a citizen I go: "What the heck happened there? Why can't we know what happened?" I am not interested in prying into delicate human resource negotiations.

If there was something else going on there, fine; it's enough that you can say that to me. But nobody did. So we don't know why we ended up with three respected health professionals who were medical officers here in Edmonton who all left their jobs and, I think, even left the province: one, two, three. What?

Now we've lost a number of pathologists from Calgary. Gone, gone, gone. What? Why? If you've got a good workplace and you're supported and you're being well paid and you're not being incredibly overworked, why would you be leaving? These people don't feel they can tell us anything, or perhaps they've signed something that means they can't tell us anything. What does that mean for the citizen? That means they can't find out what's going on in the health care system. How do we find that out? Well, generally, I'll have to say that in the worst-case scenario – by that, I mean in the penultimate scenario – we have to keep pushing this government until everything explodes.

I mean the whole episode with the flight manifests and the flight logs and the: well, you use this word; I use that word. Tomayto, tomahto. It rolls and rolls and rolls. It took a year, and finally all of this stuff comes out. Not incredibly complimentary to the government; I'll give you that. I can see why they didn't necessarily want all that information out there, but finally we did get it out there. It took a lot of pushing to get it, and in this case the pushing is about a public inquiry, and thank you, all, for your willingness to hold that.

I'm not getting it from the body language, but I'm hoping that members of the government will have the information to be able to stand up and actually give us some information about why these people that have signalled there's a problem, you know, why there's no need to look further into what they've raised, or tell us that they will do a public inquiry or that we'll get some kind of information about what's actually gone on here. Since 2008 we've had a series of these.

Let me reassure you that, honestly, there's enough work on my desk and in my constituency office that I don't need to make stuff up. I don't. There's lots for me to do. So if the opposition has gone to the point – well, hey. I'm the critic for Environment. Do you think I wouldn't have done four environment questions if I could have gotten on the board? But I can't get on the board because the rest of my colleagues are so concerned about trying to dig out some answers around what is happening in health care. We don't give over those kinds of presents to others to be able to raise questions without a fight, but those ones, clearly, are going to trump me on the board. They did today, and they did last week, and they did the week before that.

Now we get down to the thing about: you put your evidence on the table or button it. Well, frankly, I'm willing to . . . [Ms Blake-man's speaking time expired]

The Speaker: Hon. members, I have a minimum of 16 speakers ahead that I have on my list, and I'm still dealing with members. So please remember the time frame. We're going to go in this regard for the next four speakers: the Minister of Health and Wellness, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, then the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Proceed, please.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise in support of this Standing Order 30 having come forward because I think we do need to have this discussion and to clarify several things. I can tell you from the calls that I'm getting, from the e-mails that I'm getting, from letters, and from people stopping me on the street that Albertans have had enough of these unsubstantiated allegations. What they really want is for someone, anyone who is making these allegations or someone they might know who is behind these allegations or somehow connected to them to come forward with something along the lines of some evidence, preferably with some proof to back that up. If they can, then let's get on with the next steps that might be necessary.

But at this time and at this stage there's just nothing to substantiate such outlandish allegations from the opposition politicians: you know, allegations and claims that people may or may not have died on cancer wait-lists, allegations that doctors were somehow paid hush monies, allegations, for example, that there were possibly two sets of financial records or to cover up payments are absolutely ludicrous. I can't imagine that the Auditor General of this province would ever have signed off in the past or would ever sign off in the future anything that caused him some kind of concern. I'm sure that he would stand by that.

I also want to mention this coalition that occurred last week. The coalition of opposition politicians who stood so valiantly together, united, who provided a brave, unified front last Friday was all about politics.

Mr. Anderson: Hear, hear.

Mr. Zwozdesky: I hear the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere saying, "Hear, hear," which means to me that he supported everything that was said there because they stood behind each other. If that's the case, then let them stand up and say so.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

What they alleged but offered no proof of whatsoever were comments such as that the Alberta Medical Association, the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta, the two faculties of medicine in Alberta, the former health authority, the government, and Lord knows who else somehow colluded in some alleged conspiracy to create a climate of fear and intimidation. That's what some of their members said at that press conference. I know they stand united behind all of that, and if they don't, then stand up and distance yourself from it. We'll see how long you stay united, because those comments were made. So let's hear what you have to say about that.

Let's also hear what you have to say about some of the other allegations to do with the alleged two sets of books. If somebody here has information about two sets of books or some other phony, nonsensical notion of that sort, bring it forward or take it to the police. It's that serious. If you don't, then kindly withdraw the statements, make the apology, as has been shown and demonstrated in this House earlier today, and let's move on with it. I'm not going to stand here and have these innocent people and these innocent health and health service organizations be maligned by these malicious comments that the members over on the opposite side in the opposition there feel so united behind. If you have proof, offer it up.

But what do they offer? They offer some disagreements. Mr. Speaker, people who understand the democratic system, the court system in this province understand what a statement of claim is, and here is one. Here's a statement of claim made by one doctor in which he is saying that his clinical skills were brought into question, that his clinical skills were deficient. In the same statement of claim he says that somewhere there was incomplete or preoperative staging, and investigations were incomplete. In this same statement of claim he's indicating that people were accusing him of an overly aggressive approach to surgery, of unplanned pneumonectomies, which is the unplanned surgical removal of certain body parts. The list goes on of allegations that this doctor is trying to comment on.

Then you have a statement of defence saying: no, none of that is true. None of that is proof. None of that allegation is evidentiary. As a result, they have a disagreement.

So you have a statement of claim alleging one thing over here. You have a statement of defence denying those claims over there. [interjections] At the end of the day, Mr. Speaker, the two sides got together, as is parliamentary rule – did you want to rule against the interjections on the other side?

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, are you on the list for later on?

Mr. Hehr: No. I'm just wondering if he'll tell us what a settlement is. No, I don't want to be on the list for later on.

The Acting Speaker: Well, then the hon. minister has the floor.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you. I don't frequently interrupt them, and I'd appreciate if they could stop interrupting me.

The point here, Mr. Speaker, is that disagreements do occur. They occur in every profession in every province of this country. When people have a disagreement, there's a process to follow. If it gets to the point where one feels it has to hit legal parameters, then that's what they do. They bring forward a statement of claim. But a statement of claim is simply one person's opinion about something. In this case it's one doctor arguing with two other doctors, a health authority, and a university. That's what that is all about. That's not proof of anything. That's not evidence of anything. That's simply a disagreement. It was settled somehow between the two parties, and good for them. They went their separate ways.

I want to also talk really quickly here about some of the comments that have been made in Standing Order 30, which talks about "undermining confidence in public health." Mr. Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. We are not undermining public confidence. The opposition are trying hard to do that. Why? For political gain. When you have five opposition politicians standing up on stage together, vying for the media's attention, saying one thing and then coming in here like they're chatting and yapping today, trying to distance themselves from that, you know it's all about politics. That's all it's about. It's about pure politics. They are the ones undermining it.

What we're trying to do is strengthen it. Are there problems in health care, Mr. Speaker? Of course there are. There always have been, and there probably always will be some. Are we doing something to address those problems? That's the question. The answer, directly and honestly, is absolutely. That is why our government made a commitment to a five-year funding plan which guarantees certain incremental increases in each of the next five years. At the same time we backed it up with a five-year health action plan and with 50 key performance measures. Why did we do that? Certainly not to undermine the confidence in the system, as the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre is alleging in here and as others over there are agreeing with, I'm sure. However, the fact is that we did that to put confidence into the system, more confidence, to improve that confidence. That's what we're doing.

We're also doing other things. For example, we know that as a result of the tablings that were brought into this House, in particular the issues that were brought to me by the emergency docs shortly after the Thanksgiving Day weekend last fall, the number of emergency in-patients is dropping. This is a very good thing. That means we're moving them through the hospital system to a proper bed more quickly.

How are we doing that, Mr. Speaker? We're doing that by adding at least a thousand – in fact, probably closer to 1,300 – new continuing care spaces in our province as we speak. We're doing that by adding 360 new – net new – in-hospital beds, acute-care beds, mental observation beds, medical assessment unit beds, palliative care beds, mental health beds. The list just goes on and on. We're doing everything we can to help strengthen the system while the opposition members are doing things that would hurt it. We're adding 3,200 more cataracts over and above the 30-plus thousand that we do per year right now. We're adding 5,000 more general surgeries. We're adding 9,000 more MRIs. We're already doing about 165,000 MRIs in this province, and now we're adding 9,000 more to help speed up access, to help reduce wait times. We do over 250,000 surgeries per year. We're adding 5,000 more to that. We're adding dozens if not hundreds more staff – more health care providers, more doctors, more nurses – more of everyone who is needed to help out, and that we're doing to strengthen it, certainly not to undermine it.

I'll talk about a couple of other things here. In the area of cancer care, Mr. Speaker, we've just made the most significant commitment to cancer care facilities and cancer care improvements in the history of this province. We're adding hundreds of millions of dollars to build three new cancer radiation therapy corridors. One has just opened in Lethbridge. Another one will open in a couple of years in Red Deer. Another one will be part of the $520 million hospital, the brand new one we're building in Grande Prairie. I'm sure we'll probably need more elsewhere, perhaps even in Fort McMurray at some point, and we'll look at that. We're adding more equipment, we're adding more staff, we're trying to get more physicians here, and we are succeeding.

Finally, I just want to say that I have ordered the Health Quality Council to conduct a full, independent review of emergency wait times and of cancer wait times. Why do we do that? We're doing that because it's time to put those facts on the table and to have people come forward and talk to the Health Quality Council, which is highly respected, as members in this House have said on numerous occasions.

Mrs. Forsyth: Oh, my gosh, Mr. Speaker, he talks and he talks and he talks, and he dances and he dances and he dances, but he doesn't get anywhere near the facts. You know, I've been in this Legislature a long time, 15 years with the government, now as a member of the opposition for a year and about six weeks. There's a reason that happened. It's something that one doesn't take lightly after being a member of the Progressive Conservatives since 1976. I reflect back to the press conference that I was at on the 4th of January last year. I reflect back on the rationale that I gave Albertans and the reasons why I crossed the floor, and one of them, the number one priority at that time, was health care. You know, I quietly listened to this minister and sat here thinking: no wonder I left.

I don't know if the government thinks that as members of the opposition we have tea together every day and we sit around and we chat about how we're going to take down the government and that we get together and we have beer and we have lunch and we have coffee and we even maybe pray together about how we're going to take the government down together. Mr. Speaker, what happened last Friday was unprecedented. You do not get opposition members coming together in a joint press conference and agreeing. You had the member of the opposition from the Liberal Party, the Wildrose . . . [interjection] You can have your time to speak, Mr. Treasury Board. He's giving me this. Albertans should see this and see how polite the government members are on the other side. That's the minister of the Treasury, for Albertans that are watching. That's how serious he thinks this debate is.

We had the independent member, we had a member from the NDP, and a member from the Alberta Party, which, in my mind, is unprecedented.

I'm going to read a letter that I received. I want to make something very clear, and I want to make it crystal clear. The government minister has said that we do not support the Alberta Medical Association, nor do we support the College of Physicians and Surgeons. I want it on the record that as the Wildrose we support the AMA; we support the College of Physicians and Surgeons. I've met with the AMA. We've had numerous discussions about what's happening with health care. We've discussed with and talked to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and we have a great deal of respect for what they do in this province.

I will talk about, though, as the health critic for the Wildrose the number of calls, the number of e-mails that I'm getting in regard to what is happening. I tabled a document in the House today from a doctor that I'm going to call Dr. Y. The reason I'm reading this into the record is that I would probably guess that 80 per cent of the people sitting in this Legislature right now haven't bothered to even look at the tabling, and I need to have this on the record. I received this from him today.

Many of us within the system were not surprised. We had noticed the problems worsening over time, and the ongoing lack of leadership was evident. There are so many of us, wanting to do the right thing for patients, but who are working in fear . . . if we speak out. This culture continues to this day. It causes moral distress as we are placed in an impossible position.

What had been especially troublesome was the direct observation among peers that no level of public dissent would be tolerated by the Health Region (I worked in Capital Health) or by the later AHS. I have direct knowledge of several health professionals, who were negatively impacted by their efforts to advocate for better healthcare. They were silenced or worked out, or discredited, one after the other. I have also been negatively impacted by this "muzzling of physicians voices," and this "culture of silence" was simply reinforced. Anyone questioning the status quo would be "dealt with" rapidly and effectively.

Like colleagues around me, it was evident that the political decision-makers had a strong-hold on what had become a centralist, non-patient focussed health system. Like many other physicians, I felt and continue to feel intimidated by AHS and Government. Many of us are afraid to advocate for our patients. Yet, we have an ethical duty to advocate in the best interest of our patients. We have repeatedly observed the punitive consequences in those who did so, and realize that the risk is immensely high.

With the involvement of the AMA (Optics couldn't be worse on calls to MDs about Sherman's mental health; November 30, 2010, Edmonton Journal), many of us realized that the age-old strategy of discrediting dissenting voices was perhaps now at play. We learnt that upon receiving a phone call from Hon. Horne, Dr. White started questioning the mental stability of Dr. Sherman. Like had been the case with other outspoken doctors in the past, insinuations appeared very effective in making an example of Sherman. Physicians were reminded (yet again) that this fate might befall them if they chose to speak out against the system. The voices of several physicians were drowned out of fear for the repercussions, simply because the political appetite was not aligned with their advocacy efforts.

Our moral distress continues and is getting worse. Why is the Health Quality Council mandated to only investigate the wait times and cancer-deaths? What about the slew of suicides we experienced in Alberta? Like the one some of our Politicians knew about during the ceremony at Villa Caritas, but no-one spoke a word?

Anything short of a judge-led public inquiry, with full power and accountability, will not restore any level of trust in this Government and its Health portfolio. Many of us feel that we may be beyond a point of "repair."

The Acting Speaker: Hon. member, we have a point of order. What's your citation?

Point of Order Allegations against a Member

Mr. Hancock: Standing Order 23 (h), (i), and (j). With respect to the comments the hon. member is making, she just referred to a suicide at Villa Caritas. The hon. member is not allowed to skirt the rules of the House by reading from a document, whether using the names of members in the House, which she's used several times, or by casting aspersions on a member. By reading someone else's comments, she's adopting them as her own, and she is casting aspersions on a member of the House.

The minister of health a number of days ago, in response specifically to a question, indicated that he had not any knowledge of the suicide until it was raised in the House, which was after the ceremonies, and the hon. member ought to know that.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on this point of order.

Mr. Anderson: On the point of order. In the interest of time I will keep it short, but I will just say that this hon. member is reading a letter from a health professional. She has every right to read those words into the record. She's not adopting them as her own. She's saying that this is more evidence that exists, and she's reading it into the record. For this member to say that that is not permitted is utter nonsense, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker: Well, I'm willing to rule on this. First off, yes, the hon. member did mention the names of members in the House here. I know the hon. member said that she had tabled this particular letter earlier today. That doesn't give her the leeway to actually use their names. I let that go. I was waiting to see whether you were going to continue using them or not and ask you to withdraw that, but you didn't use them anymore, so fine.

With regard to that, as far as I can understand it, the letter was tabled. You were reading a letter that was tabled. With that, I don't call a point of order.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I apologize. You are correct on reading the members' names, so I will call him the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. You know, the doctor that sent us this letter doesn't understand House protocol.

Mrs. Forsyth:

Anything short of a judge-led public inquiry, with full power and accountability, will not restore any level of trust in this Government and its Health portfolio. Many of us feel that we may be beyond a point of "repair." Physicians who are intimidated do not make the best partners in rebuilding the healthcare system, and Albertans continue to pay the price with their lives.

As I do not consider myself immune to reprisal from those within AHS and [the government], I respectfully ask that you keep my identity secret if you wish to refer to this letter in any way.

The point is, I guess, that we sat in this Legislature in December and had yet another emergency debate on health care, about the length of time in emergency. The government stands up and they pretend that they all of a sudden are interested in that.

The letter came from a Dr. Parks in 2007, and I can guarantee you as a former member of this government that that would not have become front and centre if it had not been leaked to the press. All of a sudden we're dealing with all of these emergencies. The minister of health stands up, and he brags away about the protocol and talks about his emergency protocols that he's put in place. He feels like he's, you know, the star. Then he starts talking about the 1,300 continuing care beds that he's putting into this province. Well, I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that there's a huge shortage of long-term care beds in this province. The government can brag all they want about the continuing care beds, but as the minister had indicated, I don't think he's talked to people.

Let's talk about the seniors when they can't fit into the continuing care model anymore and all of a sudden they have nowhere to go. I live that every day when I deal with my mom at her assisted living and some of the seniors that are dealing with that. I brought that up to the minister of seniors during estimates. I guess that's another subject for another time.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General, followed by Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to just add a few comments to the discussion specific to some of the allegations that relate to criminal wrongdoing and financial mismanagement and wrongdoing. I think my colleague the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness has very eloquently set out the reasons why the Health Quality Council is a good organization to do what we're asking them to do here. That's exactly why they were set up. The rules are set up to allow them to investigate. The minister has gone to some lengths to explain that he's going to be asking them to be very liberal in their approach.

I want to talk about some of the other allegations that have been made that don't maybe specifically relate to the management of the health care system, which is what I would see the Health Quality Council working on. I want to talk about the allegations of things like pay-offs, fraudulent hiding of money, and so on and so forth. Those are serious allegations, and they need to be dealt with, I would submit, in a very efficient manner. Now, some have suggested that we need a public inquiry. I would just point out that public inquiries are provided for in the Public Inquiries Act, but they do not bring you to any action at the end other than a report from the commissioner.

I would suggest that if there are these serious allegations out there, anybody who knows of them, who has that evidence needs to bring that evidence forward and turn it over to the police. Certainly, if they are members of this Assembly, they should be doing that because I think it's a question of demonstrating our respect for the institutions of our government and our society. We have police there who are trained to investigate, to analyze evidence, to look at evidence. Again, I would agree with my colleagues who have commented on it that an allegation in a statement of claim is not evidence. Were that so, then any statement of defence that is filed with also allegations or, certainly, denials would, I presume, offset the allegations in the statement of claim. Then you're nowhere. Those allegations and the denials in a statement of defence all have to be weighed, and that hasn't been done in anything we've seen so far.

I would submit that if somebody has evidence, turn it over to the police. Let them look at it, and if there is fire where the smoke is, then charges will be laid. A court will deal with it, and at the end of the day there will be sanctions against anybody who is found guilty rather than just a report. I very firmly believe that that is the process that should be used when it comes to allegations that could be criminal in their nature.

I'd just also like to comment on the issue of financial mismanagement, financial fraud, and so on. The Auditor General, as has been pointed out, is somebody who is very thorough in what he does. Now, he doesn't work for this ministry. He works for this Assembly. He's an officer of this Assembly, and he decides what he's going to investigate. If anybody puts information before him that would be of interest to him, he could and, I'm sure, would investigate. There again, we have a process in place.

All I'm asking of my hon. colleagues who are talking about a public inquiry is to consider that there would be a more efficient way of getting to the bottom of some of these allegations and then actually doing something about them if they are substantiated by evidence.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Those are my comments.

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise and President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, I'm very glad that we've had a chance for at least a few members of the House to debate this issue today. I really did regret the scene that went on before we got around to having the debate with the points of order and the delays that that engendered.

Now, I believe that we need a public inquiry, Mr. Speaker. We clearly need something that is as independent as possible from the government. The Public Inquiries Act, in my view, is the right tool to use. Hopefully, the government would see fit to appoint a federal judge or a retired judge to oversee this.

There's been a lot of talk about whether there's proof or not, and the government is setting a very high standard of proof before they're even willing to consider this. Mr. Speaker, I submit that what we need is not absolute proof to have an inquiry because if we had it, we wouldn't need the inquiry. What we do need is evidence, and that is what the government has been calling for. The government has been calling for evidence to back up the claims from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, and that evidence is starting to flow. Quite frankly, I think that if the government doesn't seize this opportunity to have an inquiry, the evidence will flow in a way that they'll find very, very difficult a little bit down the road. We have evidence.

Now, the hon. Justice minister has talked about the need for criminal charges to come forward to the police if there are criminal acts. Many of the things that we're talking about, Mr. Speaker, are simply acts of intimidation and job-related actions, profession-related actions that are not crimes, but they are entirely inappropriate, and they need to be investigated. For example, when a physician is threatened with the loss of their licence, that is not a crime, but it's something that the public needs to know about and we need to know about, something that this government doesn't want us to know about.

I want to take the instance of Edmonton-Meadowlark because we all know some of the facts around there. I know that the minister has made a big stink about any mention of the Alberta Medical Association or the College of Physicians and Surgeons being bodies not accused of anything but whose roles are to be investigated as part of the terms of reference that the opposition parties put forward. They should be.

We saw, for example, that when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark was in debate, at the behest of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford the president of the Alberta Medical Association phoned a number of colleagues of Edmonton-Meadowlark's and said that there were some issues around his mental health. There have been suggestions made – and I think they've been substantiated – that specific types of mental illness were attributed to the hon. member. Then within a day or two the College of Physicians and Surgeons sent a psychiatrist to the hon. member's office in order to perform a psychiatric assessment on him – that's the Alberta Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons – based on a call from a politician on the government side, which was under a great deal of pressure at the time.

Mr. Speaker, here I very much regret not having been able to come forward with my point of privilege because those actions by those two bodies or officers of those bodies were taken not based on Edmonton-Meadowlark's performance in his job as a doctor but based on his behaviour in this Chamber. I think those officers and those organizations should have been brought before the bar of this Assembly and made to account for their attempts to interfere with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

We now have a statement of claim by Dr. McNamee. His experience, as recounted in his statement in a legal document, is eerily similar to that of Edmonton-Meadowlark: faced with a loss of licence. He was speaking up for his patients, and they were prepared to take away his licence. There were allegations made about his mental state and so on, and he eventually had to sign a confidentiality agreement, which prevented him from speaking about this, I would assume – I don't know – in exchange for financial compensation. That's normally how it's done. He left the province.

Then we have Dr. Maybaum. Dr. Maybaum is the president of the Calgary & Area Physicians Association, and he said that he received a warning letter in 2008 when he spoke out about this government's postponement of a new psychiatric wing in the south Calgary hospital. He said just this weekend: we need this judicial inquiry desperately; this is our chance to make a change in the system.

Mr. Speaker, also, a former member of the Calgary health authority by the name of Mairi Matheson has said, quote: an inquiry would reveal some shocking numbers; there have been untimely deaths in large numbers as an outcome of the closure of acute-care beds.

So, Mr. Speaker, people are starting to speak up. Now, is this proof? Of course it's not proof, and we do not require proof in order to have a public inquiry. What we need is evidence, and we need professional people who have been involved in the system and who have experienced this to come forward in increasing numbers to substantiate the experience and the allegations of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Paul Parks, another doctor, says that the health system is becoming toxic. There are many others. A lot of people will come forward, and I think that this is what the government fears.

So I want to say that I've wondered for some time now why we can't seem to fix the health care system. Certainly, the government throws money at it. I will give them that. They certainly put money into the health care system. Although two years ago they wanted to cut a billion dollars out of it, now they're putting some money in. But we can't fix it. Why? I think this is one of the reasons, Mr. Speaker, that we can't fix it, and that is because we've got a culture of intimidation in the health care system. The people who see problems for their patients, who see people dying unnecessarily are afraid to come forward. That is why this public inquiry is so essential. We need to change the culture in the health care system, which has come down from the government and infected the whole system, in my view, in order to make sure that people can speak up and carry out their Hippocratic duty to speak and put their patients' welfare first.

Mr. Speaker, I want to deal just briefly, while I can, with the whole question of why a public inquiry with a judge is appropriate and why what the government has proposed is not. Now, the Health Quality Council, as we've said, is not a bad organization, but its mandate is to look at health quality issues. So I think it's quite appropriate for this body to deal with, for example, some of the problems with wait times in emergency rooms. Perhaps it could deal with the relationship of the government's backward policy on long-term care wait times. It can look at cancer wait times. It can go back. It can examine many of these functions. But in terms of the policies of the government and, potentially, some other organizations in the health system acting as agents for the government in order to create this culture, it's not competent. It's not within its terms of reference, and it's not competent to do that.

The minister has strived to assure us that they'll be allowed to set their own terms of reference, but I think we need to be clear what the terms of reference are. I think that it's very important that those things include whether health care professionals were subject to intimidation, including retribution, professional or employment discipline or the threat thereof, or attacks on their character and professional reputations, in order to prevent them from speaking about issues which affect patient care and the effective delivery of health care.

Now, the other thing here, Mr. Speaker, is that the medical establishment in our province is relatively small. It's a small world, so you find, for example, that Dr. John Cowell, who is the CEO of the Health Quality Council, is a member of the same consulting firm as Dr. Bob Bear, the same guy that fired Dr. McNamee. So it's a pretty tight little group. I'm not saying that there's any problem with that relationship whatsoever, but it does say that we need a degree of separation. We need to get outside the medical establishment and have a truly independent look at it from outside.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the last reason is that the Health Quality Council cannot subpoena witnesses. If someone doesn't want to voluntarily come to answer questions, they don't have to. They can't subpoena evidence, and they can't protect people, so they can't get to the bottom of it. They won't be able to get to the bottom of it, which is exactly what the government wants. They don't want to get to the bottom of this, and that's the bottom line.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it is quite a stretch for the hon. member to say that what we really want is just a cultural change in the way that we look at our health care system. That's quite a stretch from accusing doctors of both giving and taking bribes. That's quite a stretch from accusing them of malpractice. That's quite a stretch from accusing the health authorities of keeping two sets of books. That's just about where they've gone. They seem to have forgotten what was put out on the table to start with. They're talking about the freedom of information. There's a balance that you are well aware of. It's called the protection of privacy, and people deserve that balance, so they can make all the allegations they want and say: well, we can't get the information.

Occasionally, Mr. Speaker, you have the right as an individual in this province to protect your privacy. It's a red herring that they want to throw out. They talk about how hounded they are for just sticking up and looking for more money. Well, I can let you in on a little secret. If everybody that worked for this government in Alberta got chastised for asking for more money, we don't have enough chastisement to go around. There isn't a department that doesn't come looking for more money, for goodness' sake. As if somehow health care would be immune from that or that somehow other provinces aren't faced with exactly the same challenges for money that we have, that their doctors don't feel the same pressure to provide more.

The amazing part of the coalition over there is that they cannot truly argue in one day. "Spend more. Spend less. No, it's something else. We're just mad, so we'll find a vehicle to somehow raise our level, and if we distract the public enough from what was actually said and what's actually going on, then it'll work to our favour."

The fact, Mr. Speaker, is that we have a democracy because of the rule of law, not in spite of it and not in the absence of it, and the law is used in a couple of ways. One, it can be used to prosecute people who deserve to be prosecuted on the basis of evidence, or it can be used to protect the innocent, and that is equally important. But one thing that law has to have is due process. People have to have access to the information about which they're being accused. You cannot in any moral character or fibre stand up in this House under the protection that this House offers and say things about people that they cannot defend themselves from. That is maybe within the law, but it's clearly outside any moral authority given to man. If you don't have the courage to face your accuser and let your accuser face you, then you have a very, very serious imbalance of priorities and certainly of respect.

To suggest, as even the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar tried to allude to the other day, that somehow there were inaccuracies in the books and, to the allegations from the hon. opposition, that there were two sets of books – yet here we have an Auditor General, Mr. Dunn at that time, who certainly would never be accused of playing favourites. That man got to the bottom of every issue he went after. Yet for those years that they're talking about, he says that the government of Alberta's books, including the regional health authorities, Alberta Health Services, the Department of Health and Wellness, are unqualified. It means every question that he could ask or everywhere that he could put processes or checks and balances in place to make them better was accepted, addressed, and moved on.

It does take time when you are bringing nine regions into one. Just the medical opportunities, the medical challenges, are enormous, and you have nine sets of books to try and bring together and get them into the same format with a $12 billion budget. It would be a real stretch to think that that would have gone like clockwork without the Auditor saying, "Well, you may have to do this," and they know that. To say in here, "You're running two sets of books so you can pay off doctors," well, giving a bribe and taking a bribe, Mr. Speaker, are against the law. There should be no one out there that should look at it any differently.

As the Justice minister has said, there is a part where the Health Quality Council can look. If they can find changes or improvements or things that we need to do in the medical system that they could recommend on, that's good. If they find something in there that might indicate to the Auditor that there are differences or something that doesn't add up, well, they can go to the Auditor first. If the Auditor finds that, then he goes to the police. You don't get a free ride because you're in government. If you cook the books, if you steal the money, you go to jail. It doesn't matter whether you're in health or education or out in Joe's Sand and Gravel.

If you get around to the fact that they find evidence, criminal evidence is exactly what it is. If someone has accepted a bribe to keep quiet over something they know to be wrong, then that person probably didn't deserve to ever have a licence of any kind for anything. You are as guilty as giving it.

They talked about no one feeling comfortable enough to come forward. Well, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that where I live, that's not the case. What my doctors and nurses tell me is that they are sick and tired of being in the middle of a charade of political posturing. They joined these fraternities because they genuinely care about people, and they want to heal, care, and cure people and get them back out into their lives. But in any group, whether it's a union or whether it's a bunch of farmers having coffee or whether it's a professional association, there will be those that seek publicity, that love to be in front of a microphone.

When you have 90,000 employees in Alberta Health Services, the biggest employer in Alberta, I would have bet there would be some disagreements, and occasionally there will be people that need to move on. It would be quite unrealistic to accept anything different. I would expect that if they wanted to put a tenth of the effort into looking in Advanced Education or Education, with their 65,000 or 70,000 people, there have been people that signed agreements and said: "This isn't working for either one of us. It's time to go." You come to a mutually agreed upon deal that both protects your privacy and the privacy of the people that you're dealing with, and you move on. That happens not just in government, Mr. Speaker; that happens in business.

They talk about: the information is coming high and fast now. If you keep writing yourself e-mails, most judges wouldn't agree that was a preponderance of evidence. As a matter of fact, they might think you have too much spare time on your hands. The one member talks about Dr. McNamee. His own member in the coalition says: "No, I never talked to him. He wasn't the reliable source I've got." Then to go on and say: "The doctors all know it. All of the doctors know." Oh, come on. With a single swing of the bat they can besmirch the reputation of every physician in this province and then get away with it and then pretend it's them that they're sticking up for? Their little charade on Friday made it very clear, Mr. Speaker. Whatever we can do to get attention and to distract from what's actually going on in there and the good things that are going on in health, we'll do. They say that politics makes strange bedfellows. That was quite a bed full, and it was certainly strange.

[The Speaker in the chair]

Mr. Speaker, I feel a little bit guilty that the hon. private member didn't have his opportunity to debate his bill today, but as the hon. Government House Leader said, it's time Albertans heard both sides to this story. I for one am sick and tired of the innuendo, the allegation, the accusations of malpractice against a 90,000-strong workforce, where 89,995 just go to work every day to provide Albertans with the best health care in this country, and that's what they want to get back to doing. That's what you guys ought to think about.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

Mr. Taylor: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an odd pleasure to join this debate, that's been going on as long as it has now and would have gone on longer if we had just been able to get down to business sooner today, closer to 3 o'clock rather than the time that we finally did.

I think the hon. minister of finance has kind of labelled us the Coalition of the Strange over here, so as a member of the Coalition of the Strange who was not present for the unified news conference that was held on Friday but who understands that it went very well and very effectively and as someone who gets one set of questions a week in this House and one member's statement every two weeks, as someone who has not been able to participate on a daily basis in the developing story around the public trust or lack thereof in Alberta's health care system, I feel like I can take a somewhat arm's-length, somewhat objective view of this whole thing.

Standing here, Mr. Speaker, I honestly cannot imagine how the government can take the fact that four opposition parties and an independent member of this House joined together to call for a full public inquiry, a judicial inquiry, presided over by either a working or retired judge, with the ability to subpoena witnesses, to call evidence from wherever, whenever, in order to clear the air around the allegations that have been made and could then say that this is some kind of political opportunism on the part of the various opposition parties.

Look, if we are the Coalition of the Strange, it's because there are many things about which we don't agree. I see the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere and the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood chit-chatting back and forth in the House from time to time, and knowing their respective political philosophies, I'm amazed that they're actually able to carry on a civil conversation. It gives me hope that we might actually be able to move beyond the polarization that governs this House and governs politics in this province on a day-to-day basis and actually work in a bipartisan or multipartisan fashion on behalf of the public interest for a change. That those two members can actually chit-chat and not come to fisticuffs is a good sign.

I mean, day in and day out there's no particular consistency to the various parties' views of how this province should work, and that, Mr. Speaker, is a very, very good thing because that's the essence of democracy, too. The more voices who get to be heard, the more opinions that get to be shared, the more opportunity we have to actually make an intelligent decision. I think it's come to the point where we need to hear some voices that are, quite frankly, protected from retribution, who can speak out and tell what they know. Then at the hands of a judge they can be put to the test as to whether their testimony actually stands up or not. A report can be written, and the air can be cleared. Public trust in our health care system, I would suggest, holding the recent Environics poll upside down to read the results that you want to see as opposed to the results that are in there notwithstanding, is at a low ebb right now.

Now, the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark a few weeks ago – what was it? – two weeks ago now, I think, two to three weeks ago made some fantastical allegations in this House, and they are, essentially, to this day unsubstantiated. The proof has not been provided by that member. We can all have our own thoughts, our own opinions as to whether that member is handling this situation appropriately or not.

The interesting thing is that at the end of last week, at the end of our last legislative work week, which ends on a Thursday, of course, after three straight days of denying opposition requests to have the Health Quality Council of Alberta investigate, which had made the offer to investigate, some of the goings-on that we've been talking about since last fall in health care in this province, dating back many years, suddenly the Premier and the health minister jump up in this house and say, "Well, we're going to give it to the Health Quality Council, and as soon as we make up the terms of reference" – we're doing this on the back of an envelope, Mr. Speaker – "We're going to get that thing going, and we're going to clear the air."

Not three hours later, Mr. Speaker, it comes out that Dr. Ciaran McNamee went through – I'll use the word "ordeal" – a situation about a decade ago not unlike the scenario that had been concocted, laid out by the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark. Now, the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark also said that he had not spoken to Dr. McNamee, that this was as much news to him as it was to the rest of us. And good on the reporters who ferreted out the court documents. You know, it gets to the point where you have to feel that if you have one case that pretty much lines up with the allegations that have been made, that are unsubstantiated, that the government has gone to great lengths to absolutely say are without any foundation whatsoever, and then you get an independent case that turns out to kind of have the same smell to it, well, then I think you have grounds to look further.

You have grounds even if you're one of those on the opposition side who called for the Health Quality Council to investigate. You have grounds to say: yes, we did call for the Health Quality Council to investigate, and now we're calling for a public inquiry because there is new information and the Health Quality Council investigation is no longer enough. The Health Quality Council does not really have the mandate to go as deep as a judicial inquiry would. That's why we're calling for a judicial inquiry.

You know, there are a few things that we in the Alberta Party believe would help address over the longer haul the issue of public trust and public confidence in our health care system in this province: the creation of an independent health auditor, reporting to the Legislature, who ensures that the health care system remains responsible and accountable to Albertans – the government has sort of gone down that route, except that they want their health guy to report to the minister – firm and fair whistle-blower protection, and the creation of internal disclosure mechanisms that would give fair options to health care professionals to speak to their employers before you get to the need for whistle-blower protection.

You need that there. There are jurisdictions in other parts of North America that have that, and it gives doctors and nurses and the guy who sweeps the floor in the hospital cafeteria the surety, the confidence that they can speak out about what they see that they feel is wrong and then find out whether it's wrong or not without any repercussions coming back to them.

The government wants evidence, Mr. Speaker, and the public inquiry can determine whether that evidence is there. Absent the public inquiry what we do have are unsubstantiated allegations, some of them pretty horrible, maybe overstated, maybe not. It's not for me to say; I think that's for the inquiry to say. We have a number of cases, brought up by a number of different people connected with the health care system, of substandard care, of problems in the emergency room. We have anecdotal reports going back 10, 11, 12 years from various health care professionals, that all basically end up sounding like this: things are not good in the acute-care system, and we're scared to speak out about it because even though we have an ethical duty to speak up for our patients, there's a chill imposed by management on us, and we could lose our jobs if we do.

Now, Mr. Speaker, members opposite have tried to portray allegations of the giving and taking of bribes. That's a long, long way from something that is absolutely legal, which is the paying of money in exchange for nondisclosure. [Mr. Taylor's speaking time expired]

Thank you.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford, followed by the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate the opportunity to participate in the debate this afternoon, and I certainly support the decision of the House to set aside Routine business in order to make this possible.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to talk about two things. First, I'd like to speak briefly about the Health Quality Council of Alberta review that has been ordered by the Minister of Health and Wellness and why I believe that process, in fact, is going to assist us not only in resolving the issues that have been put forward in this House and elsewhere but position us for the future to help ensure that elements in the culture of health care, if you will, that need to be addressed are in fact addressed, not in a punitive fashion but in a proactive fashion that truly engages the 90,000 people that deliver care in this province and those who support them.

I guess the second thing that I'd like to talk about just briefly, Mr. Speaker, is this whole question of our focus as an Assembly on the issue of health care and whether or not we might want to pause to believe it is well placed at this time, given the issues that we've chosen to raise in this debate so far.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, in terms of the Health Quality Council I think there are many members of this House that will have sufficient familiarity with their role and their review processes that they would be able to appreciate not only the powers of the council as set out in the Health Quality Council regulation, including the fact that quality assurance reviews operate under section 9 of the Alberta Evidence Act, but, I think, more importantly, the degree of engagement that we haven't seen this council demonstrate in previous reviews.

Most recently, perhaps, we could point to the H1N1 review that took place and was recently reported on. I think that, more importantly, for example, Mr. Speaker, we think of the review into infection prevention and control procedures in the East Central health region a number of years ago, where we saw a report that talked not only about facts that were identified in the course of the review that had to do with internal procedures within institutions and other health facilities but that also very pointedly spoke to cultural issues within that health region that led to situations where perhaps people were not comfortable in expressing concerns, where there was a culture that did not encourage people to report patient safety issues that were identified. It made some very substantial recommendations for how to change that for the future.

Mr. Speaker, I think that this review, that has most recently been ordered by the minister, has the potential to do the same and to go even further. In the letter of direction the minister tabled today, that he wrote to Dr. Lorne Tyrrell of the Health Quality Council – you know, a number of members have talked about this process not going far enough. If you take a moment to review the letter, you'll see that, certainly, in the first paragraph the council is directed to review issues with respect to emergency department services and cancer care services in the province and to make recommendations for system improvements. That is, of course, ultimately, the thing that is going to result in better experiences and better outcomes for patients.

If you go down a bit, Mr. Speaker, you will see that the minister has specifically directed the council to look at the question of the impact of wait times on a group of emergency department patients that were identified by emergency department physicians in the province and to determine whether as a result of that information, which has been tabled in this House, any patients experienced compromised care.

Similarly, in the next point the council is directed to determine if a group of patients waiting to receive cancer care and who were recently alleged to have died during their wait for care can be identified in this House. In the event that group can be identified, the council is directed to review the cases specifically and to make recommendations based on factual findings to improve, as required, health system performance. So, Mr. Speaker, I think that some of the claims in this House, that this review will not address some of the specific allegations that have been raised, are without merit.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, that I think we've got to consider is the powers of the council. As the Minister of Justice and Attorney General has pointed out, section 9 of the Alberta Evidence Act protects those who bring forward testimony before the council or who provide information to the council from any liability as a result of their testimony or that may result due to the information that they choose to share with the council.

Mr. Speaker, I think as well that the minister in his letter instructs the Health Quality Council, as is their purview, to exercise their full discretion in bringing in any external experts to support the review process, and that is as it should be because as we've found in this province on many occasions, year after year, the expertise and the experiences and the strategies that are employed by health systems that are perhaps better performing than Alberta's or Canada's as a whole are invaluable to learning how we can improve performance in the future.

I guess the next thing I want to talk about, Mr. Speaker, is something that I think is as important as any individual allegation that has been raised in this House over the last few weeks. In doing so, I want to say that I'm not suggesting for a moment that Albertans should not be concerned by what they're hearing in this House or should not be concerned by what they may be reading in the media. In fact, I know that a number of my own constituents have expressed great concern that some members in this House or the totality of our debate as a whole could be seen to amount to playing fast and loose with public confidence in our health care system. I recognize that there are, you know, many members around this House who may share those concerns. Nonetheless, I think what we've got to zero in on here is: what do Albertans really want us to do?

As someone who has spent a considerable period of time in the last year travelling the province talking to Albertans about issues in the health care system, discussions that resulted in recommendations like the establishment of a health advocate for Alberta, I can tell you that people are concerned about overall policy direction for the health care system and, more importantly – and we've seen this in recent months – the performance of the health care system, Mr. Speaker.

That performance is expressed in a number of ways. It's expressed through wait times for things like emergency department services and cancer care, performance in terms of access to family physicians, but equally important, Mr. Speaker – and this was certainly something that came out of the report that I delivered to the minister in the fall – they are concerned about opportunities for meaningful engagement in discussions about health care, and this is not limited to citizens who use the system. It is very much a feeling of providers of care, not just physicians but nurses, pharmacists, other health professionals, support workers who want to have a say in what issues the system chooses to focus on and strategies that will help us get to the outcomes that we're trying to achieve.

That, Mr. Speaker, I think is the larger challenge, and I think in many respects that the tone, if I may say, of the debate and some of the decorum that's been observed in this House has fallen short of Albertans' expectations. The way we're going to get to that is not by focusing on some of the rather outlandish allegations we've heard. If we spend all of our Assembly time on that, we're obviously not going to get to the issues of access and quality that Albertans want us to focus on. What I think will get us to those questions is exactly what the Minister of Health and Wellness has directed the Health Quality Council to undertake.

I think that as members of this Assembly we have two obligations. We have an obligation to support an honest and forthright and thorough review of the performance of our health care system in these two critical areas. We have an obligation as part of that same review to support the council in investigating the question of opportunities for engagement, the opportunity for staff to raise concerns, and any role that those things may have played in a resulting poor performance that we may have perceived in the last year and before. In doing so, Mr. Speaker, as parliamentarians we demonstrate that our focus is on building a culture of continuous improvement in the health care system in this province.

As has also been pointed out, Mr. Speaker, those who would stand in this House or outside this House or through whatever means make allegations of financial wrongdoing, of clinical malpractice, of improper treatment of employees by agencies, boards, and commissions of this government need to also take the responsibility to bring forward not just evidence but sufficient evidence, substantial evidence so that these can be . . .

The Speaker: I'm sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but your speaking time has now evaporated.

I'm going to recognize the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition but advise that in one minute from now I'll be rising to deal with Standing Order 19(1)(c).

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to step up to the plate and talk about something as close to my heart as health care and the freedom to speak in this province. I need to say that this is the first real opportunity I've had to address the reason I'm in politics, and I welcome that opportunity. I did not choose politics; it chose me when the Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, then chair of the board of the Palliser health region, fired me for no cause except that I was speaking out on issues that were affecting public health in relation to climate change.

I feel very passionately about the notion that this whole issue needs to go to a public inquiry. There is no confidence in the professionals today that they can speak with impunity. I myself spoke and am a living example of what happens when you speak.

The Speaker: Sorry to interrupt you, sir. I will come back to you. You still have nine minutes and 13 seconds of speaking time left.

Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 19(1)(c) I must now put the question on the following motion for consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's speech.

Consideration of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor's Speech

Mr. Drysdale moved that an humble address be presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor as follows.

To His Honour Colonel (Retired) the Honourable Donald S. Ethell, OC, OMM, AOE, MSC, CD, LLD, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Alberta:

We, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Legislative Assembly, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has been pleased to address to us at the opening of the present session.

[Adjourned debate March 10: Mr. Campbell]

[Motion carried]

Government Motions

Address in Reply to Speech from the Throne

10. Mr. Hancock moved on behalf of Mr. Stelmach:
Be it resolved that the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne be engrossed and presented to His Honour the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor by such members of the Assembly as are members of Executive Council.

The Speaker: This is a debatable motion. If no further participants are to be found, I will deal with the motion now.

[Government Motion 10 carried]

Emergency Debate

Health Care System

The Speaker: We now return to where we were. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As I indicated, it's purely as a result of the actions of the Palliser health region that after 10 years of rather exemplary service, with no identification on my file that there was any problem at all with either my communications, my standard of conduct, or my work for the health authority, I was summarily dismissed. Only after huge public outrage and a letter-writing and phone-calling campaign did they invite me back to talk about the conditions there and made it very clear to me that I would not be welcome back there, that I would not be welcome as a medical officer of health, and that I needed to stop talking about issues that might inflame the public around the connection between political decision-making, public policy, and the health of Albertans.

It's very clear to me after seven years in this House, very clear to me, again, from members that I've talked to in the public, members of the professions, including nursing and other professions – teaching and social work – that are funded by this government, that there is a prevailing concern about their jobs, their future, their opportunities if anyone speaks out of turn or challenges what the government is doing or where their priorities are.

I need to say at the outset, Mr. Speaker, that the Health Quality Council is a reputable body that can do good work in relation to process issues, access to the health care system, outcome quality. They cannot deal with the questions of financial impropriety, mismanagement in the leadership. They cannot deal with health professionals who are intimidated, who have been threatened, who have lost their jobs as a result of this kind of activity that we're seeking redress and an open and accountable response to.

As far as other physicians who have been affected, we've heard about Dr. McNamee today. I need to let you know about two more physicians who announced on television just tonight that they're going to come forward – and they have come forward – to say that they, too, were silenced. One was fired; the other was moved on. In one case a significant amount of money was transferred. Dr. Anne Fanning, who was the head of tuberculosis in this province, is now saying that she herself was fired as a result of challenging this government on its lack of leadership, lack of commitment to Albertans.

An Hon. Member: Where is your evidence, Dr. Swann?

Dr. Swann: Well, just listen to the news. Dr. Anne Fanning will be presenting her evidence. A senior retired official with tremendous credibility now working with the World Health Organization in Africa because she was dismissed by this government.

Four medical officers last year were dismissed under a cloud of uncertainty about why they were not rehired, particularly at a time just leading up to the H1N1 epidemic, and why we have the highest death rate in the country raises questions about, again, mismanagement, how we deal with professionals, how professionals are intimidated from speaking out and dealing with the very fundamental issues of caring for people, making sure that we get value for money, improving efficiency at the front line, and ensuring that people, especially those with an ethical duty, as physicians, nurses, other health care workers have, are free to speak and make the kind of changes that all of us know must be made to make this the best, most efficient, best accessible health care system in the world.

I come back to the need again, Mr. Speaker, for a public inquiry. We are not saying that the emergency room cases, the 322 cases, need to have a public inquiry. The Health Quality Council is well able to deal with this. What we are saying is that the culture of fear and intimidation across this province – the suppression of information, the lack of open and accountable financial information that we've been able to get as opposition members, and the clear indications from a host of professionals that they have been terminated, that they've been given a fee, and that they were to sign a confidentiality or a nondisclosure agreement – is becoming more and more open now to the public, and there's no way of eliminating this through the Health Quality Council. They simply don't have the powers to subpoena. They don't have the ability to make immune those people who are risking their careers, their futures, as a number of physicians have now experienced, including myself.

There's no question that if this government has nothing to hide, they have nothing to lose from a public inquiry. They have everything to gain from bringing forward people – respected professionals, nurses, others – who have been harmed or not by this government's mismanagement of our health care system.

I am in politics today, as I say, because I want a better health system. I want a more accountable government. I want freedom to speak for all Albertans, including my family members, my future generations, and all Albertans who care about the future of this place and, particularly, this most sacred trust that we've been given as members of the Legislature to protect the health care system of millions of people in this province. There is no question in my mind that if you're serious as government members about getting to the bottom of the issues that we are raising and that physicians are now coming forward with at risk to their own futures, we have to go to a public inquiry.

I don't see and I don't think Albertans will see any excuse now for this government to back off on a public inquiry, which can protect professionals, can protect patients who want to speak, and can protect this government if they're willing to open up the books, if they're willing to open up the information that physicians and the law courts have available as a result of actions taken either by government against physicians or nurses or the reverse, actions taken by health professionals against this government or against the health services or against the previous health authorities.

The evidence is incontrovertible now. We have two members in the House who have suffered from the question of intimidation, threats, and ultimately dismissal, and now we have increasing numbers of health professionals saying: it's time for us to come forward as well. If you are serious about trying to eliminate this problem and moving on to solutions, as the hon. member has asked before, then be serious about installing a public inquiry. I see no other opportunity to clear the air and ensure that people in this province have confidence again, trust in the leadership in this health care system, and move on to getting solutions, listening to the front lines, and ensuring that the management of this system is trusted and that people are dealing with issues as they emerge with much more of a sense of purpose, clarity, integrity, and fulfilling their own ethical duty to make constructive solutions to the problems we face today.

I can tell you that the morale of the front-line health workers has never been lower. I speak to physicians and nurses intermittently during the week. They have never felt so demoralized about the management of the system, about where health care is going, about their ability to make a difference. There's just no question in my mind.

I, like most of you, want to see solutions. We want to see action. We cannot get there under the current climate of fear and the culture of intimidation. We simply cannot get there. I'm imploring the House that if there's nothing to hide, move on. Let the Health Quality Council do what they can do on the emergency cases. Let us move on with a public inquiry to look into the potential – I'm saying: potential – intimidation, threats, severance packages with confidentiality or nondisclosure agreements, the violations, basically, of the principles of health professionals to speak their truth, to see change enacted in good faith and not be faced with the possibility of being eliminated or having their future compromised since we now have only one hiring mechanism in this province for all health workers. It's even more difficult, with only one health authority in this province, to find any work in this province if you say something that offends or discourages or in some way compromises the leadership of the health care system in this province.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I thank you for this opportunity. I see an option; I see a practical solution. It's the reason we had the emergency debate today. It's the reason we have united as opposition members. There is simply no question that we cannot go on as we are, stumbling from one solution to another, one crisis to another, when the underlying issue is public trust.

The Speaker: Thank you, sir.

The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition sent me a note. Do you want to deal with that matter contained in your note now?

Dr. Swann: Yes, please.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Dr. Swann: I would like to request the unanimous consent of the House to extend the debate to the usual time of adjournment, 6 o'clock, Mr. Speaker. There's much more to say about this issue.

The Speaker: That would be a point of order or a point of administrative – I'm going to come back with that prior to 6 o'clock. We're going to continue so that we do not deny an opportunity for other members to participate at the moment.

The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today to discuss this important matter. Dealing with rule 30 does not happen that often, and I don't take it lightly. I was prepared to vote in favour of having this debate today as there has been a lot of discussion in and outside of this House about this particular issue ever since two weeks ago, when the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark made the allegations, that I took very seriously, allegations of payoffs, bribes. These are things that I take very seriously. Over the weekend, then, in fact, a statement of claim was filed. That's something that greatly interests me as someone who's got a legal background.

Mr. Speaker, a claim is just that. It's a claim. It's something that has yet to be proven, and indeed anybody can put anything in a claim. As the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness had stipulated earlier, the claim itself was defended. It has not gone through any discoveries. There have been no examinations. There have been no witnesses called. Again, it is just a claim. It is not, in particular, evidence. When I started to look at this, somebody said to me over the weekend, you know: is there any proof for this? It reminded me of the infamous Jean Chrétien quote dealing with: a proof is a proof. Everybody knows that infamous quote as well.

There have also been some suggestions that some people are silenced when they say something untoward. This is really just the opposite in the policy that I was actually able to find earlier, and the policy that I was referring to is from Alberta Health Services. It states:

Any member of AHS Personnel who has a reasonable basis to believe that Improper Activity has occurred or is occurring within [Alberta Health Services] is required to disclose the information on which the belief is based.

In the next question it does give: well, what about that person's protection? Well, you can just look down further in the policy.

AHS will not take or condone any adverse action (including demotion, suspension, termination, harassment, or denial of service or benefits) against any AHS Personnel or other individual who: (a) is the purported perpetrator of the Improper Activity, in the absence of reasonable evidence; or (b) in good faith and without malice or desire for personal benefit, reports Improper Activity in accordance with this policy.

Mr. Speaker, that is pretty clear. That not only talks about protection, but it talks about a positive duty to go and report these particular things and about that particular protection from any reprisal that that individual may have as well. The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General spoke earlier about Criminal Code protection, and I won't go and berate that dead horse.

There are a lot of accusations here, but the one thing that is very clear to me just from what I have heard in and outside of this particular issue is that there is an established lack of proof. I want to look at some of the allegations here. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark on Twitter called my party a gestapo. He later apologized for that. I give him credit for that. He said that physicians were silenced while people were dying. He said that good guys have been railroaded. He said that he's playing the middle card of a royal flush. Mr. Speaker, again, these are very, very serious allegations.

I've talked about the positive duty to report, but in addition to the positive duty to report, I would also put out there that any one of us has a moral duty as an officer of this House to actually report anything negative that we see. Who do we report that to, Mr. Speaker? Well, if you see some wrongdoing, I would put it to every member of this Assembly that we should report it, in fact, to the police. These allegations are serious, and they erode public confidence in the system and members of all parties. We have a positive duty to report this to the police. If we want an independent inquiry, what's more independent than if we report something to the police? They go and lay charges if there are any, and it goes to that particular court.

I have seen quite a few more allegations, again, on this particular topic over the last little while. The Member for Airdrie-Chestermere today in the Calgary Beacon said: with such revelations beyond any reasonable doubt. Wow. I didn't know that we had gone to court on that yet. He also alleges criminal wrongdoing. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that this member has a positive duty to go to the police and tell the police what exact evidence he has. Those are very, very serious allegations.

There are some other allegations. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition talked about corruption. There was a leader of another party who said that she wanted a federally appointed judge. Well, if you go to the police and they lay charges, Mr. Speaker, you actually get, typically, a federally appointed judge if it's an indictable offence. The leader of the Alberta Party, whom I have not met, at Friday's news conference talked about fear and intimidation. I suggest to her – again, she talks about fear and intimidation – that intimidation is a tort. Go to the police. The Member for Calgary-Buffalo suggested earlier today about intimidating doctors, censorship, interference. Again, if that's the case, this member should go to the police.

Moving forward here, Mr. Speaker, I don't see any evidence that warrants that, but, you know, I'm not a law enforcement official, and that is exactly where this belongs. An impartial body? Well, that's what the police, in fact, are there for.

So, Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, there is no evidence that I've seen that warrants an inquiry beyond the Health Quality Council. The Member for Edmonton-Rutherford quite correctly stated that there is an immunity under the Alberta Evidence Act, section 9(5). [interjections] Even though I get all these rude comments and gestures from these members across here, I will pay no attention. As much as they may talk, the reality is that there is no evidence here. If there is, the proper place to go is to the police.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. minister, I do believe you quoted from a document. Are you prepared to table that document with the appropriate copies?

Mr. Denis: I quoted from several documents, actually.

The Speaker: Then we'll do it tomorrow at the appropriate tabling time.

Mr. Denis: Absolutely, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When he tables those documents, I would ask that everyone read them. It's a very good read, I must say.

The hon. opposition leader has first-hand knowledge. He's been through a situation where he lost his job for speaking out. The Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark got kicked out of caucus for speaking out about health care and for not retracting his comments. As someone who's coming into this – obviously, I have no background in medicine, any of those things. The thing is that when I came in to join this party over on the other side of the House there, the PC government, I have to say that, you know, I was excited. I really was. I mean, I really felt that here was an opportunity to contribute. I met some of the members over there, awesome people, you know: the Justice minister for example, the Member for Athabasca-Redwater, from Calgary-North Hill, and others. I mean, these are awesome people that, for my part anyway, I still call friends and respect a great deal.

There is an insidious culture that I was not aware of. I don't know who all over on that side of the House is involved in that culture. I really don't know. I do hope that it is a small group, if any, of people over there. I hope, you know, that if there are folks over there, hopefully it's just people under them, who report to them, and that maybe they've been kept out of the loop. I don't know if the minister of health is involved. I don't know if the Premier had any knowledge. I don't know, and Albertans don't know.

That's the point, Mr. Speaker. There are a lot of things going on that just aren't right. You see it every day right now in the allegations coming forward. You're right; they are just allegations. They are. But there is evidence because people keep coming forward. Has it been proven beyond a reasonable doubt? Has it been proven in a court of law? No, not yet. It hasn't.

What clearly has come to light is simply this. Look, I was in that room behind there when the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark let me hear the phone message that he had on his cellphone, and it clearly was a doctor warning this member, after a call from the Member for Edmonton-Rutherford to the head of the AMA, that, you know, he was essentially trying to drum up support to look into the mental state of this member. That's a fact. I heard it. [interjection] I heard it on the phone. You can deny it all you want. You haven't heard it on the phone. I have heard it on the phone. [interjection] Good. Well, there you go. That is exactly what was said.

The fact of the matter is that that's the culture of intimidation we're talking about. That's evidence. Now, does it prove that everything that we're saying is true? Does it prove everything that the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark has alleged in this House? No, it doesn't. But it's a start. It is evidence; there's no doubt about that. It's evidence, and a judicial inquiry should be given the opportunity to see if there is anything to these allegations.

We have Dr. Fanning on the CBC just a few moments ago coming forward and saying: I need to step forward now and take a risk because I don't like what's happening in our health care system, and people need to know about the culture of fear and intimidation that exists. They're all using that wording. They're all using that.

There was the quote from a woman doctor. Her face was blacked out, but the CBC was talking with her, and she said that there was a culture of suppression and even vindictiveness, that when she started speaking out and advocating for her patients, she was demoted, marginalized, and eventually fired. And here's the kicker. Her mental sanity, her mental state was questioned by the health authorities.

Are we seeing a pattern here? We saw this with the allegations of Dr. McNamee. Those need to be looked into. These are all pieces of evidence, and I don't know where the puzzle leads. Hopefully, it's just a couple of, you know, tyrannical bureaucrats that are running around making a mess of things, and their stupidity is causing great shame upon the entire health care system. Maybe it's just a couple of people. Well, let's find those people. Let's make sure that they are not in a position of trust anymore. Let's clear everyone's name in this House from wrongdoing, if that's the case, if there was no wrongdoing by any member of this House. I hope that's the case. I really do. I know that the vast majority of the members opposite – I just cannot fathom that they would be involved in something like this.

I'll tell you what I do believe. There's no doubt in my mind, let's put it that way, that there is a culture of fear and intimidation out there. I don't know who is involved. All I know is that we keep getting e-mails from this good doctor.

The Member for Calgary-Fish Creek said, you know, Dr. Y. Well, we have to say Dr. Y. The members opposite were laughing at that. We have to say that because he asked us to. He says: as I do not consider myself immune to reprisal from those within the government and Alberta Health Services, I respectfully ask that you keep my identity secret if you wish to refer to this letter in any way. We did look him up. He is a credible senior physician in this province, someone who's been around a long time, someone that, if you knew, you'd say: wow, that guy is not lying.

These are serious allegations. There is no doubt. But there is serious evidence to say that something is the matter here. If we bury our heads in the sand right now, hon. members across the way, and close our ears – you know, see no evil; hear no evil – and pretend it's not happening, then what happens is that you become culpable in this. You become culpable in the wrongdoing. Your job is to protect the trust that Albertans place in their health care system. These are your constituents. These are your constituents. It's just a matter of calling a public inquiry and giving this former or current justice the right, the power to subpoena witnesses, the power to compel documents that are relevant to his investigation. These are things that a judicial inquiry is suited to do.

You can't ask the Health Quality Council to look into potential wrongdoing like this, into allegations of wrongdoing. That's not what they're qualified to do. They're qualified to look into issues of health quality, so they should be and they are investigating the 322 cases of suboptimal outcomes, I guess you would say, in the emergency rooms. They're investigating the long cancer waits and whether or not people may have passed on while sitting on those wait-lists. That's what they're qualified to do. They look at the system. They kind of take it apart and say: "Okay. Why are these long wait-lists happening?" Then they make recommendations to stop it from happening again.

But that's not what a public inquiry is for. A public inquiry gives these justices the powers they need to find the truth, to get to the bottom of it, to look into the wrongdoing. That's something we can't ask the good doctors at the Health Quality Council to do. They don't have the tools to do that nor the expertise. We all know that. The Minister of Justice knows that. The former Minister of Justice, who's running for the leadership, knows that. The hon. Member for Calgary-Egmont, who just got up before me, knows that. This is absolutely tailor-made. You could not get a better, a more relevant, a more appropriate situation to call a public inquiry than what we have right now.

Let's just clear the air. Let's all clear the air here. If you've got nothing to hide – and I honestly believe that the majority of the government members, if not all of the government members, have nothing to hide. If that's the case, let's call the inquiry. Let's get it all out in the open. Let's find the people who are responsible for these allegations if they, in fact, are true. They're still alleged. But if they are true, let's find the people responsible, and let's relieve them of their duties. Let's make sure that they are not allowed to perpetuate this culture of fear and intimidation over and over and over again.

You listened to the letter that the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek received at 10 a.m. today. He says: we had noticed the problems worsening over time, and the ongoing lack of leadership was evident; there are so many of us wanting to do the right thing for patients but who are working in fear of retribution if we speak out, and this culture continues to this day, and it causes moral distress as we are placed in an impossible position.

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member. The letter in question, that was just referenced, was returned to the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek because it did not abide by the rules of the Legislative Assembly for filing. I want all members to know that.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Ms Woo-Paw: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak today to provide an added perspective on the subject matter that we are speaking about today. I wish to speak today as someone with family members that have had close interactions with our health care system over the last number of years as well as having close family members who are part of the system.

Mr. Speaker, my mother was diagnosed with lung cancer five years ago. Our family actually discovered her cancer quite by accident. In a very short time her family doctor and all of us in the family realized that she was in need of a heart operation to start with. She immediately received that operation, and from there she was put through a number of tests and finally diagnosed with a small cell aggressive lung cancer. She was almost immediately put through consultations, orientations, and linked to the appropriate health specialists in the system, and in December 2005 she went through both radiation and chemotherapy.

Our family was very impressed with the care and quality of service she received and the fact that she was admitted into the system in a most timely way. She was connected with other related service agencies and volunteers, and together the system and the service agencies and family supported her through that treatment and recovery process. I'm very pleased to say she was told by her oncologist just a few months ago – and I was with her – that she no longer needed to see him every three to six months, a relationship my mother deeply treasured and appreciated.

Some of the recent discussions and focus on health have made me reflect on my own relation to the health care system in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, I was reminded that my father was involved in a car accident just under a year ago. Even though he got a clean bill from the initial assessment and tests, we realized a few months later that he was suffering from hemorrhaging in his brain. Once his symptoms and conditions were recognized by the urgent care centre, he was immediately admitted, examined, operated, and also linked to the therapist to assist him with recovery. In both of these cases my parents received quality care and very timely services.

Two of my children actually are currently proud members of the 90,000 of the Alberta health care system, and I'm reminded regularly that the hard-working, dedicated health care providers do recognize the need for change and improvements in our health care. As young people they do expect to see concrete and constructive changes in a reasonable time frame from all the people who share the responsibility to sustain an effective and efficient system.

Mr. Speaker, it is hard as relatively new members of the system, after all the long hours and long days of very hard work, whether it's transporting patients, looking after abuse victims, 15 straight hours of surgery, or working in full neonatal intensive care units, to be bombarded by the created public confusion about the roles and performance of the various health entities, to become frustrated by the political rhetoric that has dominated the public discourse on health. These are the current practitioners in the system and future leaders of our health care system, and they're not impressed by the level and form of the debate on the health discussion today. The health care providers that I have spoken to are aware of their obligation to report on patient safety issues, and they do take that obligation very seriously.

My life prior to becoming an elected official did include taking on the role of community advocate from time to time, so I do have some understanding that it is indeed not easy to be an advocate, a road that is often driven by a deep sense of concern and commitment to an issue, to a cause. People who take on that role not only require courage, dedication of time and resources but also have to face public scrutiny, threats, and intimidation. However, people who have concerns and wish to advocate for change must be clear and fair about ownership and responsibility for the problems. We owe it to the public and to this House to ensure that we provide clarity in our debate, and we're also responsible for upholding the integrity of this House.

Mr. Speaker, to close, my intent this afternoon is to try to bring this discussion back to the ground with the hope that we can actually have this very important discussion with a greater degree of balance. Let's all be reminded that Albertans by and large are receiving high-quality health care in a reasonable time frame in our province. I would also like to reinforce that we have many people who are working very hard every day to provide quality care to Albertans. Many of these people do share the interest and desire with all Albertans to see an even more effective and responsive system to an evolving population and environment. We know people are getting quality care once they get into the system, and the system is responding very responsibly to those with acute-care needs. There is no doubt a need to take a critical look at the wait time issue, and that should be our priority focus.

A public inquiry which will not provide resolutions and must be based on an investigation of all the facts, which is precisely what is being put in place as we speak, should be given the time, space, and support to do its job as the most appropriate immediate action.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the rules with respect to the Standing Order 30 application, rule 30(5): "the debate will conclude . . . at the normal hour of adjournment in the afternoon." That's at 6 o'clock today. The only way that this could be waived would be unanimous consent of the Assembly.

Mr. Hancock: I wasn't asking for that. I was just asking to go to 6.

The Speaker: We are going to 6.

Dr. Swann: I have requested beyond 6.

The Speaker: Listen. This is not going to be a debatable thing. If you want to raise it, Leader of the Official Opposition, raise it now because we're denying another member the opportunity to speak.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, again, Mr. Speaker. I respectfully request that with the unanimous consent of the House we extend the emergency debate on this vital issue to all Albertans.

The Speaker: I take it: beyond 6 o'clock to whatever time it terminates. Okay. Such a request will require unanimous consent of the Assembly; that is, to go beyond 6 o'clock to an unknown destination point on this debate. I'm going to ask one question. Does any member object? If so say no.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, you're good till 6.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am disappointed that I am, unfortunately, the last person that gets to speak to this because I know there are many members who would like to, particularly given that, basically, with only 45 minutes or an hour left in this debate, even additional information was reported, which, of course, was not dissimilar from the kind of information that was first discussed late last Thursday, which generated the need for this debate. That new information is information coming from yet two more doctors, one who has come forward in his entirety and another who has come forward although wishing to remain anonymous.

In both cases those doctors raise some very, very serious concerns, concerns that, strangely, replicate the types of concerns that have been identified by previous people. In the case of one doctor we have that doctor suggesting that when she went to raise concerns with the region for which she was employed and with, ultimately, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, her issues were not heard and there was really no response. Then her employer engaged in what she believed was a process of, first, marginalizing her administratively and then, ultimately, her being demoted and then dismissed. That, obviously, is the type of thing that we've heard about from other doctors as well.

Then, the other doctor suggested that, in fact, when she raised concerns about the effect of funding cuts to the TB program on her ability to do her job and, more importantly, on the health of the patients for whom she was required to care, once again, she was fired for raising that issue.

We now have one, two, three doctors that have come forward since Thursday who are prepared to talk to the media about this culture of fear and suppression. So this is something that I think the government has to take seriously. Now, members from the other side have suggested: wow, you are putting forward some pretty crazy allegations, and you should take those to the police. Well, first of all, it's not us putting them forward; we are simply bringing into the House statements that have been made by a number of physicians from within the system.

But more to the point, my question back to members opposite is this: is this government really suggesting that the standard of behaviour for a government should drop as low as, "Well, no one's proven that we've breached the Criminal Code yet; therefore, nobody has any right to be concerned"? That is exactly the argument that the government is making at this point, and it is specious. There are repeated allegations that have been made out there by a number of people that go to the very heart of our ability as legislators and as the government, who are administrators, to get at what's really going on within our system.

Now, the government says: "Well, it's all right. We can send it over to the Health Quality Council, and they'll deal with it." But here's the problem with the Health Quality Council. That may well be the place to look at sort of best practices and what can be done in order to improve the ER wait lists and the cancer wait lists, and that's fine, but the Health Quality Council, first of all, are not appointed with a view to their ability to assess whether coercion or intimidation has occurred.

Secondly, the Health Quality Council regulations which govern how they function very clearly state that any report that they prepare must first be reviewed and must be approved by the minister of health, which, of course, right away raises the issue of the degree to which we can count on the independence of that body. That's not a function of the individual members of the body; that's a function of the process that this government wants to subject this inquiry to. It is the government's decision to make the body accountable that much to the minister that makes the work that they do less than entirely trustworthy as it relates to that issue.

The final thing about the Health Quality Council is that the regulation itself says that they will be given "reasonable access to information." It doesn't even say full access to information, just reasonable access to information. So quite clearly the Health Quality Council will not be given anywhere near the scope or the ability to seek information that it needs in order to address this issue, which is one of a decade of suppression and coercion and intimidation of public health professionals within the health care system. They have no ability to subpoena, and most importantly they have no ability to provide immunity to those staff members who would come before that council to talk about the problems in the system.

Let us be very clear. We've had members here talk about this ridiculous AHS policy. Well, anybody who practices law in this area knows that an employer policy is not binding when you get before an arbitration. The employer gets to fire you first, and you get to use whatever means at your disposal afterwards to try and get your job back, and you may or you may not be successful. An employer policy like that is in no way binding nor does it set out any kind of remedies. So if I were a lawyer for a doctor, I would look at that policy and say, "Sorry. That gives you no protection." If I were a lawyer for a union that was helping nurses or other health care professionals, I would say, "You know what? That document gives you no protection."

Members of this government know that that document gives their employees no protection, yet they continue to speciously refer to it as though somehow that will ensure an inquiry that is fair and open. But it's not. It won't do it. They are clearly setting up a kangaroo court that is not designed to get at these very serious allegations that deeply undermine the ability of our system to improve itself and serve the best interests of Albertans and their health needs.

Ultimately, I mean, that really is where all of this ends up. What we all want to do is make sure that we have a system that will work effectively, that will deal with the wait times in ER, that will deal with cancer wait times, that will deal with our impending and extensive crisis in seniors' care, that will deal with our failure with respect to mental health and our failures with respect to children's mental health. None of that can be done within the chilled climate that currently exists within our Alberta Health Services, and none of that can be done through the Health Quality Council given its limited scope. The government knows that. They are not interested in getting to the truth; Albertans are. Albertans care about their health care system.

By the way, that is a political decision. People who care about their health care system getting genuinely better, talking about it in a political setting, that's what they should be doing, and anyone who suggests that people should not be linking this to their democratic right to ultimately vote this government out of office is someone that does not respect democracy. But we do, and the members on this side do.

That's why we came together, because this government right now is doing everything in its . . .

The Speaker: Thank you, hon. member.

The Assembly stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

In 30 minutes from now the policy field committee will reconvene in this Assembly for consideration of the main estimates of the Department of Employment and Immigration. This evening's meeting will be video streamed.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, March 15, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon and welcome.

Let us pray. Guide us so that we may use the privilege given us as elected Members of the Legislative Assembly. Give us the strength to labour diligently, the courage to think and to speak with clarity and conviction and without prejudice or pride. Amen.

Please be seated.

Statement by the Speaker

Anniversary of the First Session of the Legislative Assembly

The Speaker: Before we proceed, hon. members, there is some significance to this date in the history of the province of Alberta. One hundred and five years ago today, on March 15, 1906, some 4,000 people attended the opening of the First Session of the First Legislature in the history of the province of Alberta. This was at the Thistle rink here in Edmonton.

As its first item of business the new Legislative Assembly elected Charles Wellington Fisher as its first Speaker. Premier Rutherford's speech at the opening of the First Legislature explained that the House would be "laying the foundations of empire in this new land."

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two distinguished visitors that I would like to introduce to you. They're seated in your gallery. I would like to introduce my counterpart from the province of Saskatchewan, the Hon. Dustin Duncan, Minister of Environment, and with him his chief of staff, Cam Baker. I'd ask all members to welcome them.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of the Member for Red Deer-North it's my great pleasure today to introduce to you and through you the students of Gateway Christian school. This is an innovative and creative school that looks beyond the classroom to the world. They're here today to observe the Legislature and to observe members here in the House. The hon. Member for Red Deer-North would have liked to be here to make this introduction and hopes that each of our guests enjoys their time at the Legislature. I'd now like to introduce teachers Mr. Jim Driedger, Mrs. Klaaske de Koning, and Ms Sherry Glebe and parent helpers Mrs. Anna Haar and Mrs. Jenni Duke. If I could ask our guests to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to this House a group of very bright grade 6 students from St. Martha school and their teacher, Shelley LaFontaine. I had an opportunity to have a chat with them. They raised a lot of questions about this Legislature and also about my duty as an MLA. I'd like to ask them to rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today it is my honour and pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Legislature a delegation from the city of Grande Prairie. They have joined us here today to meet with several ministers to promote the interests of the beautiful city of Grande Prairie. The talented mayor, councillors, and city manager are proud of the strong northern community and are incredibly dedicated to representing the issues of the citizens of this outstanding area of our province.

At this time I would ask the guests to please rise. I am privileged to introduce Mayor Bill Given, Councillor Lorne Radbourne, Councillor Alex Gustafson, Councillor Justin Munroe, Councillor Dan Wong, and Greg Scerbak, the city manager. Mr. Speaker, the Member for Grande Prairie-Smoky and I would like to thank this hard-working group for visiting the Legislature today. I would ask them to remain standing and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm truly blessed today because I get to introduce to you and through you a vibrant, beautiful, bright young lady who hails from Widewater, 20 kilometres west of Slave Lake. She has been a principal consultant of Milestone Consulting, in fact, for the last five years now and has worked with and for nonprofit organizations to raise dollars, carry out projects, do research, and write great proposals. She is a third-term councillor with the MD of Lesser Slave River No. 124, and her name is Ms Darcie Acton. She is seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask that Darcie please stand and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you four very special people from Newthorad Seniors Housing based in Thorhild. The first is Shelly Hanasyk, a third-term councillor of Thorhild county and chair of Newthorad Seniors Housing. You can stand, Shelly. Next are Kevin Grumetza, a fifth-term councillor and deputy reeve, and Julian Topolnisky, an administrator of Newthorad housing. Interestingly, Julian attended school with our Premier. I'm sure he's got a few interesting stories to tell. Finally, Nick Hoffman, who's a loyal and dedicated maintenance worker at Newthorad whom residents very much enjoy visiting with every morning. I'd like to thank them for everything they do for our constituency and invite the Assembly to give them a traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly Nicholas Ameyaw and Grace Owusu, who are seated in the public gallery. Mr. Ameyaw is the president of the Ghana Friendship Association of Edmonton, and two Saturdays ago they celebrated the 54th year of Ghana Independence Day. The association is very much thankful to the Alberta government for the $125,000 in funding for the purchase of their community centre in Edmonton-Mill Woods. I would ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of individuals who you may have visited over the lunch hour today, the Harmony Dialogue Group, who were serving their Noah's pudding in the lower rotunda. Harmony Dialogue Group is a nonprofit organization that focuses on intercultural dialogue promoting unity among all cultural heritages in the city. Each year as a symbol of this unity the Harmony Dialogue Group serves Noah's pudding in public places across Edmonton, giving them an opportunity to interact with their neighbours and strengthen our overall community. I thank the Harmony Dialogue Group for their visit with us here today and for their continued contributions to our community, and I would ask that the seven representatives, who I believe are in the public gallery, please rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I believe, hon. members, that there is a group of grade 6 students from Aldergrove elementary school, located in the constituency of Edmonton-Meadowlark, who are here today as well. I'd ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Members of the Legislative Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Canadian International Hospital

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's not every day that someone comes up to you and says: hey, I think we have the same DNA. So when a member of the third party said that very thing to me over a pizza not so long ago, I didn't really think very much about it. As events unfolded, however, I began to wonder how someone could possibly know a person's DNA unless they had access to some pretty advanced medical technology.

It turns out that one of the finest places on Earth to get such information is the Canadian international hospital in Hanoi, Vietnam. Now, this is a five-star facility. This 200-bed luxury hospital, fully staffed with Canadian physicians, operates the most modern diagnostic and treatment facilities, including patented DNA sequencing technologies.

Now, I've never been to Hanoi, but clearly there must be some link here. I was not surprised to learn that the chairman of this facility, this private, for-profit luxury hospital that caters to the seriously rich sick people, happens to be none other than a well-known doctor, former cabinet minister, and recently proclaimed Wildrose policy adviser on health.

The Canadian international hospital, which sounds more like a resort than a hospital, has the finest, most modern facilities. I am particularly impressed by the accommodations for the 30 Canadian physicians who will move to Hanoi. I mean, so long as you have a surplus of doctors in Alberta, how can the loss of 30 really matter? Of course, it does translate into about 200,000 cancelled appointments per year over here. But, really, who's complaining? You can get in to see one of these doctors. All you have to do is fly to Hanoi. Of course, that's only about $2,700.

Again, that's 30 physicians that a key supporter of the third party has just shipped offshore, at a time when the third-party leader today, Mr. Speaker, talked on the radio about a shortage of doctors in the province of Alberta. Thirty physicians will no longer be in a position to accept patients right here at home, 30 physicians who, if they worked 1,800 hours a year, could see 200 patients a year, and they will in Hanoi, Vietnam.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Health Care System Governance

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The floodgates are starting to open, and this government is scrambling for the life rafts. First, the government attempted to cast Dr. McNamee's story of silencing, intimidation, and dismissal as a one-off, a human resource dispute. Yesterday we had no fewer than five physicians emerge with their stories, some with personal details of being victimized by this government's playbook when it comes to suppressing advocacy and dissent in our health care system.

Dr. Fanning says that she was fired after criticizing the government over health care. Dr. Maybaum says that doctors and health care workers must be liberated from the culture of intimidation and that government politicians are insulting health care workers in this province. Dr. Francescutti says that doctors, nurses, and paramedics must be allowed to come forward to tell the truth. Two more doctors, still fearful of this government's retribution, remained anonymous in saying that a culture of silence and personal intimidation has repressed health care workers for years.

Make no mistake, Mr. Speaker, that what we are seeing right now is 15 years of centralization, which has necessitated a culture of intimidation, mismanagement, and political corruption within our public health care system. This same government, who never misses an opportunity to brag about their record for the last 10 or 15 years, now is trying to distance themselves from the reality of the system which they created and nurtured. To say that it was some other government or some other party responsible for these unforgivable acts of bullying and intimidation is wrong.

Forty years ago a tired old government was replaced. Today Albertans have a tired but powerful old government that is no longer able to hide the incompetence, arrogance, and abuses of the power within their system. This government is way past its best-before date. There should be more following the Premier's example and announcing their resignation. The next six months will show what 40 years of unbroken PC rule has inflicted on our democracy. The emperor does not have new clothes. They are exposed.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mighty Peace Watershed Alliance

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Peace River watershed is the largest in Alberta and covers about one-third of the province. Its water and aquatic systems are critical to the health of Alberta's natural environment. That's why this is an exciting week for my constituents. On Friday the Mighty Peace Watershed Alliance will hold its first meeting and elect its inaugural board of directors. The alliance is a partnership between the Alberta government, environmental organizations, aboriginal communities, industry, and others in the Peace River watershed. Its role is to provide an opportunity for people to improve their knowledge and understanding about the watershed and to safeguard the health of the aquatic system in the region.

The Mighty Peace Watershed Alliance will be Alberta's 11th watershed planning and advisory council. These councils are a key component of Alberta's long-term strategy to manage water resources: water for life. This bold plan aims to ensure secure, safe drinking water and healthy aquatic systems for all Albertans. It will accomplish these goals through knowledge, research, partnerships, and water conservation, positioning our province as the leading jurisdiction in North America for water management.

I'm happy to see that northwestern Alberta will soon have its own officially designated council. Watershed planning and advisory councils provide important information to help government make the best water management decisions possible. They also provide valuable information to all Albertans by reporting the state of the watershed.

Mr. Speaker, I commend the members who have joined the Mighty Peace Watershed Alliance as they embark on its critical journey of leadership, stewardship, and education. I encourage those in my constituency and all Albertans to get involved in the protection of our precious water resources. After all, the success of these groups often depends on the passionate individuals who volunteer their time and effort to safeguard our environment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Hospital Services Utilization

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just before session started, I hosted a town hall meeting on health care. Donna Wilson, a nurse, professor, and researcher, presented an update on health care here in Alberta, an update that shatters the old Tory myth that seniors are responsible for rising health care costs. Ms Wilson's research indicates that in 1993, when we had a $4 billion health system, we had 110 hospitals, with 13,000 beds. That's one bed for every 200 Albertans. Then came the Conservative cut-backs. Over 12 per cent of nurses were laid off, and 6,500 hospital beds were closed, most of them in Edmonton and Calgary. Then came the constant restructuring of health care governance, which resulted in growing wait-lists and rapid cost inflation, culminating in a single nonelected board. Wait-lists have gotten even worse, cost issues continue, and quality of care is suffering.

Last year our $15 billion health care system still had 110 hospitals but only 6,800 beds, one bed for every 600 Albertans. Seniors didn't lay off these nurses or close these hospitals. In fact, they're not even using the hospitals as much as people under the age of 65. Seventy-six per cent of all hospital admissions and 84 per cent of all emergency room, day surgery, and outpatient care are for people under the age of 65. These statistics absolutely refute Conservative myths and claims that an aging population is driving up health care costs. In recent days this government has made a big deal about saying that 60 per cent of people have confidence in the health care system. Well, before, it was 90 per cent with confidence in the health care system. In just nine years, Mr. Speaker, health care costs have risen 110 per cent, more than double. This government should stop blaming seniors for those rising costs.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Farm Safety Week

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. March 13 to 19 is Canadian Agriculture Safety Week. Here in Alberta agriculture is our largest renewable resource, and we have more than 50,000 farms. Farm safety is a year-round priority. We believe the key to safe farms is education and awareness. This week the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development announced a new 15-member Farm Safety Advisory Council. The council was formed in response to consultations with more than 20 stakeholder groups, representing more than 50,000 producers.

Its membership includes a variety of representatives with backgrounds in safety, business, and agriculture, all of whom have a deep commitment to farm safety. This council will be co-chaired by industry and government. The advisory council is tasked with developing an action plan on farm safety and will be responsible for helping government enhance farm safety training and education to address the needs identified by industry.

Agriculture and Rural Development's Safety Up! awareness campaign is targeted to new and young farmers and the farm safety club, educating children four to 12 years of age about safe behaviour on farms and working with 4-H to promote agricultural safety. All of these efforts increase local delivery of farm safety knowledge through rural partnership.

The focus of this year's farm safety week is on implementation of safety procedures to manage risk and control hazards. I would like all Albertans to recognize Agriculture Safety Week, and I strongly encourage rural Albertans to look at ways to participate in their community, whether by implementing a farm safety plan or by teaching their children how to play safely on the farm.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Late last week Albertans learned that these Tories forced respected surgeon Dr. Ciaran McNamee out of his job for complaining publicly about surgery wait times and inadequate patient resources. These damning allegations against the Tory government make it clear a Health Quality Council investigation is not enough and that Albertans deserve a fully independent public inquiry completely free from government interference, control, or intimidation. To the Premier: if your government has nothing to hide, will you support the opposition call for a fully independent and open, judge-led public inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, what I do support is a complete review by the Health Quality Council, allowing physicians and nurses to come forward and talk about how better to improve the system so that we can learn from the past.

On the other, if there is any wrongdoing on behalf of anyone in the system, it is the duty of those to report directly to Alberta Health Services, or if somebody has their hand in the cookie jar, a criminal matter should go directly to the police.

Dr. Swann: Will the Premier do the right thing and release the financial terms of settlement for Dr. McNamee, including the terms of the confidentiality agreement he was forced to sign, so that all Albertans can see how this government muzzles health care professionals for speaking out?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that's not a matter for this Assembly to even consider. Let's get this straight. You have a disagreement. You have doctors on one side who are working hard for their particular area of practice. You have other doctors who are working hard for their side of a particular practice. What they've done is come to some kind of an impasse. As a result of that, a statement of claim got filed, a statement of defence got filed, and guess what? Both sides had their arguments vetted between themselves. They agreed to walk away from it, and that's where it ended.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, the denials continue. Will you continue to ignore the facts, Mr. Premier, or will you finally concede that health care staff, including Dr. McNamee, are subject to intimidation and retribution, are disciplined for speaking out on behalf of patients?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't think we saw anybody attempting to muzzle the doctors who spoke out on the Thanksgiving Day weekend last year. I can tell you that nobody at the AMA conference last weekend felt intimidated by my presence there or by my staff's presence. What they felt was the building of a good, solid relationship, and we're continuing to foster that while you folks on the other side are trying to undermine it.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Patient Advocacy by Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The list of damning allegations against this government is growing as well-respected doctors, including Dr. Anne Fanning and Dr. Lloyd Maybaum, are speaking out against this government's culture of fear and intimidation. Dr. Maybaum went as far as to say, and I quote: there is just plain fear you'll lose your position. There are a number of different ways that people are fearful and can experience the backlash that occurs when you speak out. End quote. When will the Premier get off his soapbox by saying that health professionals like Maybaum are free to come forward when he says otherwise, with evidence of a culture of fear and intimidation making it impossible?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I've said many times in the House, physicians, all those that may have had some disagreements in the past within their organization: come forward to the Health Quality Council and bring those allegations forward and have the Health Quality Council look at it. These are physicians that sit on the Health Quality Council. They are professionals, and they are better able to judge what is coming to them in terms of evidence, real, hard evidence of all of these allegations of hush money and allegations.

Dr. Swann: Seriously, Mr. Premier, what do you have to lose by holding a public inquiry, a transparent public inquiry, into allegations of intimidation and financial misconduct? What do you have to lose?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I have to stand up and again remind the member to take a look at the tabling I made a few days back, where the Alberta Health Services leaders, the College of Physicians and Surgeons leaders, and the Alberta Medical Association signed a letter jointly last June. Here's what it said.

The Alberta Medical Association (AMA) stands behind any physician who advocates on behalf of his or her patients. Similarly, the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Alberta (CPSA) and Alberta Health Services (AHS) also strongly support and encourage patient advocacy.

There it is in print. You should read it.

Dr. Swann: A lot of good that did me in 2002, Mr. Minister.

Instead of finding real solutions to the culture of fear and intimidation, this government is advising health care workers to call the cops. Well, Mr. Speaker, that's hardly a solution. Is that what you're expecting, Mr. Premier? You want us to call the cops when there's a problem?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, just hearing the comments from the hon. member, I would suggest that he maybe look to the Alberta Medical Association and to the college, really, to find out why they weren't there to support him during an issue that I suspect he had – what? – over 10 years ago.

The Speaker: Both the Leader of the Official Opposition and the Minister of Health and Wellness: you quoted from documents. I'd ask that you table the appropriate numbers of those documents during the tabling routine.

Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

State of the Health Care System

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Let's do a checkup on health care basics because that is where this government started to lose credibility, and it doesn't look like the diagnosis is improving. To the minister of health: why do 250,000 Albertans still have no access to a family doctor?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there are number of initiatives that we're doing to strengthen primary care, and that's one tremendous benefit of a commitment to five years of funding, of a commitment to a five-year health action plan and to the performance measures. We are working very hard to ensure that those people who don't have a doctor or perhaps didn't think they needed a doctor will have access to one. There are two primary parts to this. One is improving access in health care, and the other is reducing wait times. If we added a third, it would be to strengthen primary care, and that's precisely what we're doing.

Back to the same minister: why do more babies die of congenital syphilis in Alberta than in the rest of Canada combined if not for the fact that this government refused, intimidated, and fired the medical officers who were working on that very issue?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know about the allegations that have just been made, but I can tell you that there is a syphilis problem in this province, as there is perhaps elsewhere, and we're doing something about it. Very soon, within a few days if not a few weeks, you will see our approach to this matter. You will see the augmentation of dollars into that area because we have to let people know that this is a serious issue, and we're treating it very, very seriously immediately.

Ms Blakeman: No. This government is flatlining on health care.

Back to the same minister: why are waiting lists for nonemergency procedures still months and months and months long?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, as I said, one of our primary goals is to reduce wait times. Why do you think we gave a guarantee of 6 per cent increases? Why do you think that our province is among the fastest growing rates of doctor personnel? I'll tell you why. Because here we have a plan, and the plan is starting to work, and they don't like it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Anderson: Every day more and more evidence mounts, unveiling a pervasive culture of fear and intimidation against our doctors and other health care professionals wanting to speak out for their patients' safety: those aren't my words, Mr. Speaker. Those are the words of Dr. Lloyd Maybaum, president of the Calgary physicians' association. The good doctor says that health professionals are fearful of AHS backlash that can occur when speaking out for patients. To the health minister: why won't you call a public inquiry with full powers of subpoena to investigate what has become a total breakdown of confidence in our health care system?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, just a week or two ago his colleagues from Calgary and Fort McMurray were practically begging for the Health Quality Council "to investigate the 322 cases that were documented previously." They said among other things, "We applaud the Health Quality Council's effort to restore public confidence in health care." Others said, "Will the minister of health today commit to all Albertans . . . to launch an investigation?" Well, guess what? That's exactly what we've done. We've brought in an independent review that will be done by a very highly respected body called the Health Quality Council, which two weeks ago they were praising.

Mr. Anderson: Minister, the Health Quality Council is not qualified or sufficiently empowered to investigate allegations of wrongdoing and political interference. You know that, sir. Minister, if evidence continues to be released substantiating a pervasive culture of fear and political interference in our health care system, will you commit to Albertans that you will call a full public inquiry, or will you continue to refuse? It's starting to look like you or your government is hiding something, and I sure hope for your sake that that's not the case.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, allegations followed by more allegations. The fact is that we have an independent council that is setting its own terms of reference, that is choosing its own people to serve on that committee, that may well bring in people from outside – I don't know – and they'll make all of that public. That is a tremendous accountability. Otherwise, if you follow this member's advice, you'd have cabinet and government determining those things. That's not what I see necessary at this time.

Mr. Anderson: Four new doctors bravely came out of hiding just yesterday, sir – Dr. Maybaum, Dr. Fanning, and others – and there are more coming forward every day. How much more evidence do you want? Given that Dr. Maybaum says, quote, there is a clear and present problem in the health care system, and anybody who suggests that this is preposterous – like this minister always does – quite frankly, is insulting health care workers, unquote, why then does this minister continue to say that the allegations are preposterous? Are you saying that Dr. Maybaum is lying, sir? Is that what you're saying?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I've never said words to that effect, and I don't think you'd ever hear me saying that. What I am saying is that there are occasionally disagreements that happen such as was the case with some cases that were brought forward, and perhaps there will be more. As people go and they find differences in their opinions or differences in their perspective because they're lobbying hard for this or they're lobbying hard for that, obviously some separation of those agreements sometimes occurs, and that's all that's happened here so far that I've seen.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, please table the appropriate documents as well at the time coming up.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, more doctors are stepping forward by the day with similar allegations – intimidation, questions raised about their mental health, firings – yet this PC government flippantly dismisses these allegations, telling those concerned to go to the police. Will the Premier admit the obvious, that the government has actually no intention of getting to the bottom of this scandalous situation?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I've said many times in the House, the minister has asked the Health Quality Council to draw its own terms of reference and do a full review of all of the allegations that have been made and also how to improve the system given all of the evidence that will be coming forward to the Health Quality Council. I suggest that we give them the opportunity. They're going to move forward almost immediately, and we will have a full review of not only the allegations that have come forward but how to improve the system well into the future.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that in his written instructions to the Health Quality Council regarding this review the minister excludes any mention of investigating charges of intimidation and retribution against doctors or other health care professionals, will the Premier admit that he is merely pretending to get to the bottom of these allegations?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Health Quality Council membership is comprised of health professionals, people that know how to deliver health care services. They'll be able to look into all of the allegations and sift out all of the information that is going to come forward. They've always done good reports in the past. They looked at H1N1. They looked at a report coming soon on medevac services in this province. I have tremendous confidence in them to do the right thing for all Albertans.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Given that more and more doctors are clearly saying now that they will not come forward and co-operate with this government's so-called investigation for fear of retribution, will the Premier please admit that that is exactly what he wants?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, you know, over the last number of years there has been no province in Canada that has seen such a large increase in the number of physicians practising here. They are the best paid, with the lowest taxes and also a five-year funding commitment going to Alberta Health Services. Yesterday – good news – the AMA reached an agreement with government in terms of a three-year funding agreement. That tells me that we have an increase of 22.5 per cent in the number of physicians. They want to come here because it's the best place in Canada to work.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Severance Agreements with Physicians

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Taxpayers deserve for once a straight answer from this government. My first question is to the minister of health. Where in government books can interested taxpayers find the details revealing the financial settlements made to doctors who stood up and spoke out against this government's health care policies?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, if there were any kinds of severance agreements and payouts related to that – and I suspect there were – then they will be accounted for in the category for that. I don't have the details for it right in front of me, but I can assure you that it would all have been audited by the Auditor General, and it would all be appropriate.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. You should have those details, sir.

Again to the same minister: what is the total amount paid out by this government to silence doctors who stood up and spoke out on behalf of their patients about how you were running health care?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I suspect the number is zero. What I do think, however, is that there were some honourable negotiations that took place. Some differences of opinion were voiced. In some cases it resulted in separation. In other terms it might have resulted in divorce. But the fact is that the agreements were made. They are sealed in accordance with the nondisclosure agreements that were signed by the parties in question.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that over $42 million – that's $42 million – was listed last year by Alberta Health Services under other fees, can you please tell taxpayers how many of those other fees were spent in these negotiations to settle with doctors whom you were trying to silence?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, there is a process in this government called Public Accounts, and that's the point where members are able to get into the detail of just those such agreements, and if I'm not mistaken, the chairman of Public Accounts is the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. Maybe he ought to do his job in Public Accounts and ask those questions there.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Physicians are alleging that they're being silenced, that they're not allowed to speak up for patients. To the Minister of Health and Wellness: do we need a public inquiry to help create an atmosphere where physicians can speak up?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, physicians are speaking up. They do it daily. They've been doing it for quite a while, I suspect. I think what we need is the independent review that has been ordered and that the Health Quality Council of Alberta will carry out. In fact, no one is telling physicians they can't advocate. The exact opposite would be true. The document I referred to earlier, which I had tabled quite a while ago but will table again at your request, explicitly states, in addition to what I've already said, that "if a physician feels that it is necessary to advance the interests of patients, then he or she should do so."

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Has our relationship with physicians broken down in some fundamental way?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe so. I think the point that the Premier mentioned a little earlier, that we now have an agreement in principle between the government, Alberta Health Services, and the AMA, is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work. I just want to say thank you to the Alberta Medical Association and all of its members for recognizing our economic situation, the worst since 1930.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question, again to the same minister. The fact remains that some physicians are saying that our relationship with physicians does not work, and they feel that our government has dismissed their concerns. Have we?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. If we had, we wouldn't have an agreement in principle, obviously. I think what has happened here is that doctors more and more are finding Alberta to be a very attractive place to come and practise, and that's why we have had the highest growth rate in attracting doctors of any province over the past 10 years right here in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Air Quality Monitoring for Radiation

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, due to the tragic events in Japan it has now been confirmed that radiation is leaking from nuclear plants affected by the tsunami. Meteorologists report that there is danger of nuclear radiation spreading through the atmosphere to Alberta. Accordingly, my question is for the Minister of Municipal Affairs. What action is being taken by emergency services' air monitoring system or others to prepare for the risk of radiation spreading to Alberta through the jet stream?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, first, I want to indicate that this is such a tragic situation, and our hearts certainly go out to everyone that was affected by this disaster. Having said that, my department is in regular contact with our counterparts in Ottawa, and at this time they're telling us that the radiation leak in Japan is not expected to pose any health or safety risks in Canada.

Mr. Hehr: Well, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister of Environment: given that meteorologists worry that radiation may in fact reach Alberta, does our air monitoring system have the capacity to measure for radiation in order to protect Albertans?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we work very closely with our federal counterparts, and this would be a case where it's not only national but international. The kind of monitoring and measurements that the member refers to would not only apply just in Alberta but would be on a national scale, so we would depend upon our national and international experts to advise us on the ongoing issue if there is one.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, my final question is for the Minister of Energy. Prior to a nuclear plant proposal going forward in this province, will your ministry commit to establishing an expert panel to consult with the public to see whether a nuclear power plant is a viable option for this province?

Mr. Liepert: Well, first of all, I think the member may not be aware, but the first step that any nuclear plant proposal has to clear is the federal government, so I would suggest that he might want to direct that question to the federal government.

Spring Flooding in Southern Alberta

Mr. Mitzel: Mr. Speaker, last June my constituents in southeast Alberta faced significant and devastating flooding, which resulted in the largest disaster recovery package in our province's history. With warmer temperatures now occurring, my constituents are again facing real flooding concerns. A high water table and larger than normal snowpack only exacerbate the situation. In fact, many have been in close contact with me, and they are worried. My constituents need to know their government is on their side. To the Minister of Environment: what are you doing to ensure your department is providing all assistance necessary to mitigate potential flooding?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, let me point out that not only are this member's constituents concerned but mine, as we are in adjoining constituencies. I can assure all of the residents of southeastern Alberta that we are doing everything that we can to prepare for any kind of negative impact. We've just today activated the Flood Response Coordination Centre to co-ordinate the flow of information between the city and the county and the residents. This morning we issued a snowmelt advisory, and we will continue to work very closely with city and county officials to ensure that appropriate actions are taken.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Given that this may just be the start and that two homes I know of currently have water running through them because of this early melt, I'm sure there will be more. What plans do you have in place to assure and assist this area of the province with the flooding they are currently experiencing?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The southeastern area of the province is certainly experiencing localized flooding. We've been planning for flooding and working with the county of Cypress and the city of Medicine Hat to get prepared. As of this morning we've got an emergency management officer on site, and we've arranged for the loan of a sandbagging machine from the city of Calgary and authorized the purchase of a Candam, which is a 300-metre dam made in Medicine Hat, that will help prevent the spread of water.

Mr. Mitzel: My second supplemental is to the same minister. As this is now a new flood and all claims are not yet cleared from last year and residents are still dealing with the effects of the flood from last year, what's being done or what will be done to help them?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, our efforts to assist the affected Albertans are ongoing, and our goal is to ensure that they receive the maximum amount of dollars that they are eligible for under the disaster recovery program. We've successfully provided first cheques or closed 98 per cent of the residential applications in this area. While we're running nine disaster recovery programs throughout the province, we continue to pay special attention to southern Alberta. We're all working together to prepare as well, and we're watching closely to see what Mother Nature might bring us.

The Speaker: Thank you, Minister.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Farm Worker Safety

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'll stay on the health-related theme for today. Agricultural work makes the top-five list for high-risk occupations in Canada. This government is aware of that, yet the rights of farm employees in Alberta continue to be ignored. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: where is the logic behind the decision made by this government to have mandatory investigations for some workplace injuries in the case of the 12 industrial oil workers?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, let me try to explain the logic, and if what I say doesn't make sense, I would encourage the hon. member to meet with some actual farmers, and maybe they can reinforce what I say. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that the majority of farming in Alberta is done on family farms, where people not only work and farm their own land but actually live and play and entertain on that land. Obviously, the presence of occupational health and safety in a setting where you have people living and working at the same time is not very conducive.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a total red herring, and this minister knows it. He knows we aren't talking about family. We are talking about employees, corporate farms.

As the president of the Alberta Federation of Labour stated, the Farm Safety Advisory Council is a blatant example of public relations. Why another stall tactic instead of action to provide paid farm workers with the same rights as other workers in Alberta?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, all farms are incorporated; hence, they are corporate farms.

I have to tell you that our minister of agriculture has just put in place a plan on how to deal with the health and safety of farmers and individuals who work on farms and who live on farms by way of educating, sharing best practices, and actually having farmers help farmers, having individuals who know something about farming, unlike, perhaps, the hon. member and myself, institute safety on the farm.

Ms Pastoor: When members of the board instead of its chair are already speaking about their views on farm safety in the province, it's clear to me that shared views with the government have already again led to membership on a board. Is the minister just looking for confirmation of a decision that he's already made?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. These wonderful Albertans that offered their time to serve on this board came from all over the province and put forward their names. I had it reinforced for me again this morning in a meeting that I had in Trochu, Alberta, with a group of 25 agricultural producers when I asked them right flat out how we could help them and they said: no more regulations. I said: are we moving in the right direction with our farm safety instead of workmen's compensation and occupational health and safety? They said: absolutely; this is what we want.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Allegations of Criminal Wrongdoing

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the past few weeks opposition members have implied or accused the government, the current and former ministers of health, the University of Calgary, the University of Alberta, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Alberta Medical Association of everything from breaking the law through blackmail and payoffs to fraudulent bookkeeping. All my questions are for the Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Can the minister explain once again how any allegations of criminal misconduct should be dealt with and who they should be reported to?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do feel as though there's a need for some precision in language here. The debate in recent weeks has passed back and forth between allegations relating to management issues and so on, which I would submit are certainly a good subject for the Health Quality Council to deal with, but from time to time they've crossed over into allegations of criminal wrongdoing, and there is only one answer for that situation, and that is the police and police investigation.

Mr. Johnston: To the same minister: further to your first response can you then explain to the House what a public inquiry can and cannot do?

Mr. Olson: Well, a public inquiry is not meant to be a substitute for a criminal investigation. So referring to my first question, if we are talking about allegations of criminal wrongdoing, there is only one process. That's the courts. That is an independent judge, and it has sanctions at the end. If we're talking about something else such as management issues, then there is an appropriate venue already in place. If there were a public inquiry, what would a judge do? He would need experts to help him such as the Health Quality Council.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The opposition members have been using a statement of claim as supposed evidence to prove wrongdoing by this government. Can the minister explain to the House what is contained in a statement of claim and what its purpose is?

Mr. Olson: Well, Mr. Speaker, a statement of claim contains allegations in a civil matter. It's usually met by a statement of defence, which contains either further allegations or denials. We can't base decisions on allegations and denials in a statement of claim and a statement of defence. We need evidence.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Nuclear Power

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Minister of Energy brushed off the dangers related to nuclear power, but with the tragic events in Japan, we are seeing prudent governments – Germany, Switzerland, and Austria, for example – taking strong actions to respond with measures to increase safety. Indeed, the EU just today completed an emergency debate on the issue and agreed on a number of preventative actions as a first step. Will the Minister of Energy join this discussion and reassure Albertans that nuclear energy is one hazard that this province will steer clear of now and in the future?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I assume they had an emergency debate because they have nuclear power. Alberta doesn't have nuclear power. I'm not quite sure what the member is trying to get at.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that the Minister of Infrastructure recently joined the Member for Athabasca-Redwater at a meeting to defend its deeply unpopular land-use bills and that those attending were told that the need for a massive proposed power line is to facilitate a nuclear power facility in northwest Alberta, will the Minister of Energy admit that the government is actively enticing Bruce Power to bring the nuclear industry to Alberta and commit to reversing this position immediately?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, you know, I have no idea what the member is talking about because I wasn't at any particular meeting. But I did hear the member who I think was referred to, who happens to sit next to me, express some outrage when that particular accusation was made. Considering the track record of that member and the accuracy of some of her preambles, I'm just going to pass on it.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that Albertans have already expressed strong opposition to nuclear power and have so far been ignored by the Tories and given that the events in Japan demonstrate that the most fail-safe nuclear plants are never actually completely fail safe, will the minister assure Albertans that nuclear power is excluded from all consideration as an option to provide power for the province?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, again the member's recollection of what Albertans expressed through the public consultation process that we undertook is wrong. What Albertans expressed to us is that we have an open, competitive generation market and that at such time that an application is filed, it should be considered along with any other particular proposals, provided, of course, that it gets approval at the federal level, which is the first step that any project would need.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Strathcona.

Education Funding

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government claims that education was protected in the budget this year, but parents, teachers, and school boards have been crunching the numbers, and they are saying that that's simply not true. To the Minister of Education: are struggling school boards, larger classes, and staff layoffs what the minister had in mind when he talked about Inspiring Education for the past three years?

Mr. Hancock: No, Mr. Speaker. When I was talking about Inspiring Education, I was talking about the kind of education we need to have for the students of our province now and in the future so that they can be citizens of the world and compete in a global economy as well as in the local economy. We're talking about students with 21st century skills – literacy skills, foundational skills, and numeracy – those types of things which make it possible for every child to succeed. In Inspiring Education we are talking about every child having value and every child being able to succeed to their potential.

Mr. Chase: It would seem, Mr. Speaker, that every child, if they're to have value, should be invested in, but that's not what's happening with your cuts. At a time when other countries are looking to copy the Alberta initiative for school improvement in their own schools, why is this government cutting AISI by 50 per cent? How is that progressive?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, the fact that this year we have a restrained budget and we need to show restraint at a time when revenues are not as high as they have been in the past means that we have to make some very tough decisions, and education is not immune from those tough decisions. I would grant, hon. member, that cutting the AISI budget was one of the most difficult decisions that I've had to make as minister because AISI is a very, very important program.

Mr. Chase: Obviously, AISI is dependent on oil and gas revenue rather than sustainable funding.

If this government needs to save $40 million, why not trim the $170 million taxpayer dollars going to subsidize private school tuition every year instead of cutting projects that help public schools improve student learning?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, as I said in my first answer, every student in Alberta has value. Every child in Alberta has value, and every child in Alberta, I'd go on to say, needs to have a place in the education system. Some people choose to be in the private school system, and those students are supported by public dollars to the tune of 70 per cent of the operational dollars that public school students get. So if we were to cut the funding to the private schools, I would suggest that we would find more of those students in the public schools, and we would end up having to take the dollars for the public school system and spread them even more thinly.

The Speaker: I would like to remind all members again that this is question period. Budgetary questions and particularly Education's budget will come before the House on the afternoon of April 19. There will be three hours that could be devoted to this subject.

The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Employment and Immigration Funding

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As Alberta and the world emerge from one of the worst recessions in decades, the number one concern is ensuring that Albertans are back at work. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Has Alberta regained all of the jobs it lost during the recession?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, no, not entirely. As a matter of fact, there has been good news coming to Alberta from Statistics Canada, showing that we are regaining jobs at a leading pace. However, during the recession Alberta had some 2.08 million people working, and now there are approximately 2.06 million, so we still have some way to go. However, we're on the right track, and we're leading the country right now in job recovery.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. On Friday Stats Canada released encouraging numbers, showing Alberta tied for the second-lowest unemployment rate, but I still have constituents looking for a job or for a better job. What's your department doing to help them fully participate in the labour force?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A number of initiatives are in place. Our 59 LMIC offices throughout the province deliver a variety of programs. One of them will be the building and educating tomorrow's workforce strategy, which allows for programming for upgrading skills, providing some foundational learning for Albertans and also providing benefits and a subsistence allowance for those who choose to upgrade their skills and re-enter the workforce at a higher level of pay and a higher level skill set.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. Youth unemployment is high in parts of the province, yet the minister has cut the Youth Connections program from his budget. Why did you cut this program?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the answer is obvious. Some budgetary decisions had to be made. This ministry has a budget diminished by some $70 million. The budget may be diminished, and the offices may not be available any longer, but I have to assure you that the services will continue to be delivered to our youth through our 59 offices throughout the province and through the use of social media and other delivery methods that actually, perhaps, could be much better received by our young people.

The Speaker: I'm going to repeat what I just said to the previous member with respect to budgets. This budget for this department was dealt with in this Assembly last evening for three hours. This is the question period.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday, when questioned by the Wildrose, the health minister denied that he'd ever categorically said no to a Health Quality Council review, instead insisting he said: no, not at this time. Days later the Health Quality Council review was announced. Later in the day, when I asked him if he would call an independent judicial inquiry, he said: no, not at this time. To the health minister: given that you've set the precedent for changing your mind, and you're going from no to "not at this time," when can we expect you to say yes and call a public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's like saying: I love you, but I'm not ready to marry you at this time. What part of that don't you understand? No, not at this time.

I said that I would review and take appropriate actions at the right time. That's all there is to it. After I had more information and we looked at it and had a chat about it, we decided to call an independent review as requested

2:30

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Yikes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are you going to accept? He's already married.

Mrs. Forsyth: No. Not at this time. [laughter] Holy mackerel, Mr. Speaker. You've got to be kidding me. Whoa.

Given that the health minister has said no and not at this time – and I'm not talking about marriage, thank you very much – and the Premier continues to say a flat out no, will you on behalf of Albertans and the medical profession fulfill your role as a health minister and push for a public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'll go through this again. On March 7 this same member said, "Given that the Health Quality Council can't investigate until directed to do so, why hasn't the health minister given such orders?" Guess what? I did. Later that day this same member who's asking the question said, "Mr. Minister: will you call in the Health Quality Council to investigate the 322 cases that were documented previously?" Yes, I will. And, yes, I already did.

Mrs. Forsyth: I'm pretty good at convincing people, and that same minister said no. Then he said: not at this time. Then he said yes. So thank you.

My final question is to the minister. If you truly care about the health care system, if you want to live up to your commitment of an open and transparent government, and if you really believe health care professionals and doctors shouldn't be silenced and they shouldn't be muscled, will you reassure Albertans and call for a full public inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, a public inquiry, which clearly they don't understand, would require cabinet to direct and dictate the terms of reference. Who would conduct it? Who would sit on it? That's not independence the way people want an independent review to be done. I find it quite interesting that on one day they are praising the Health Quality Council, and now they are casting innuendo against the people that they stood behind just last week. I don't understand that. It sounds very confusing on their part.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Temporary Foreign Workers

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the government announced changes to the way noncompulsory tradespeople employed as temporary foreign workers can apply for permanent residency. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Why was there a need to make this change now?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's a case of walking your talk. I strongly believe that not only Alberta's but Canada's immigration policies have to reflect what is good for Canada and what is good for Alberta. We have a cap of 5,000 appointees under the provincial nominee program, and it is imperative that we nominate the skill sets that are needed by our economy right now and allow them to stay.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: on the whole is Alberta getting immigrants with the skills needed in our province to ensure that our economy has a sufficient supply of labour?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, for those immigrants that are appointed through the provincial nominee program, the answer will be yes, 100 per cent yes. Those immigrants are matching exactly the needs of our economy. Other streams through which immigrants come in: some happen to have the skill sets that are compatible to our economy but not all.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister. The fact is, Minister, that after employing every Albertan and Canadian, we still need immigration. What concrete steps are you taking in your meetings with your federal counterparts to increase the flow of skilled immigrants to Alberta?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I continue to impress the urgency upon our federal colleagues. The fact is that we're facing a perfect storm. Baby boomers are retiring as of this year, natural population growth is slightly above zero, our economy is growing at a great pace, and our appetite for services is insatiable. What does it mean? It means we will have severe shortages of workers for many years to come.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Security of Health Data

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. What personal information could be more private to individuals than information about their surgery and wounds labelled with their names? This is the sensitive information that has been reported missing from the Misericordia hospital. The Health Information Act is supposed to protect the privacy of this kind of health information but has repeatedly failed. My questions are to the minister of health. Why doesn't the minister conduct random audits to ensure compliance with security standards, especially for encryption of mobile IT devices?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, what happened with respect to the file that went missing may well have been a simple case of human error. I know that Covenant Health has accepted full responsibility for that, and they are going to do everything possible to ensure that it doesn't happen again. Unfortunately, human error does occur to even the best of us, hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: You have to have health privacy that includes the human error. Why are you unable to do that? You have to be able to work human error into your privacy legislation. Why haven't you done it?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, as new technologies, new procedures are developed, we look at them. We consider them. We try to keep up as best we can with these changing technologies to provide the very assurances this member is looking for. I can assure her and I can assure all Albertans that we take cases like this very seriously, as does Covenant Health.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Well, back to the same minister, then. As more and more databases are being strung together and personal health information in electronic form can be sent across the world with the hit of the send button, what protocols has this government identified for connected networks where information gets secondary and tertiary use like the new TALON system?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, that's a pretty good thought there, and I'm going to have to take a look into the exact details of what Alberta Health Services has in terms of its own operations and what Covenant Health has in terms of their operations. I'm sure that they have taken this already under advisement and into account, and I would be equally sure that they also have some protocols to offer the maximum protection possible. But in the end you still have human people doing human entries, and human error may still occur, unfortunately.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Degree Granting Approval Process

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I think it's fair to say that Alberta is known for the quality of our postsecondary programming. We need to ensure that these high standards are upheld and new programs of study are introduced that meet society's needs as well as the needs of students. The Campus Alberta Quality Council makes recommendations on what new degree programs are offered in the province. However, I'm told the process can be very slow, and I'm told that the process is more subjective rather than objective. My questions are to the minister of advanced education. Minister . . .

The Speaker: We'll hear from him now.

Mr. Bhullar: . . . tell me why it takes so long.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and respond to that. In my travels around the province and in talking to institutions I, too, have heard concerns about the time that it can take to get a new degree or new diploma approved. It can be quite onerous. So I talked to the department, and there is a process that has to be followed. First, the program has to be reviewed by the department to ensure that it meets the institution's guidelines, that the program is needed, that the funding is available to deliver the program. Then there are experts recruited from around the world, actually . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member. [interjection] The hon. member has the floor.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister tell me what specific process improvements he's considering to ensure that institutions don't have to wait many, many months or even years to get an answer?

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We are constantly looking at program reviews to shorten the timelines on these new degree programs. One of the key things is making sure that the application is complete when it comes in. Often we have to go back and work with the institutions to continue to garner information until we get a complete application that can be reviewed. This can take some time as we develop the process, but we're trying to streamline that each time we do one.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you again, Mr. Speaker. My final question will be to the same minister. Minister, what if a postsecondary institution does not agree with the council's decision? What appeal mechanisms do they have, if any? What mechanisms do they have to make sure that the actual answer was based on the best interests of Alberta students?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Through the department we also do review these, but each institution has the opportunity to reapply for any program that may have been brought forward with some changes made to it. So there's never a no. We try to work with institutions to ensure that each program has the best opportunity to be approved. So we'll continue to work with institutions, and we'll try to make sure that all of these get a fair shake and get a chance to be approved.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Residential Building Code

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. More than 300 tenants of the Penhorwood apartments in Fort McMurray were evacuated after a report commissioned by the condo association identified major structural problems. Unfortunately, this is a situation that is being played out in communities across Alberta with increasing regularity. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: will he admit that his lack of oversight and inaction on the regulation of construction file has led to the erosion of construction standards?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the opposite is, actually, what's happening. It's because of the due diligence of the inspectors and looking at the building codes that we're able to identify such buildings and actually work with individual residences to make sure that the buildings are safe for occupancy.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. They had to hire separate investigators to find things out.

To the minister again: why has the minister been so reluctant to exercise the authority granted to him under the Safety Codes Act to intervene in cases where homeowners impacted by poor building practices are unable to get satisfaction from their local municipalities?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the changes to the building codes occur because of the comments that we constantly receive from Albertans, and those concerns and issues are brought forward. That's how the codes are improved and enhanced.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the minister again: given the minister's very public comments about introducing legislation this spring to protect homeowners from poor building practices, why has he failed to do so?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I continue to work with my counterparts and with industry, and it's still our intent to look at changes in legislation in the very near future.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes Oral Question Period. There were 19 sets. Nineteen members were identified today and 114 questions and responses.

Just a bit of a follow-up from the question period, there are some tablings that will have to be dealt with. I asked the Leader of the Official Opposition to table some documents that he quoted from. Hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, I believe you indicated in a subsequent question that you had already tabled that document, so that won't be required to be redone. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you were requested to table some documents as well.

In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine, and the Routine is dealing with Members' Statements.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Health Care System Administration

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My constituents are excited about two things today, the return of spring finally and the feeling that after years and years we're finally getting close to getting some answers about what's wrong with the management of our health care system.

Mr. Speaker, it is no secret that the people of Alberta continue to have great faith in the ability of our system to deliver great health care provided they can find the secret password that allows them to access the system in time. In other words, the people continue to believe that if they're facing a serious illness or a medical emergency and they can get in, our acute-care system will likely save their lives. But it's also no secret that the people of Alberta have next to no confidence in the administration of Alberta's health care system, and that is true no matter how far the current minister puffs out his chest and spouts righteous indignation at his critics. They've been watching it get worse for 15 years now, through three massive reorganizations, about a dozen different deputy ministers of health, and enough 180-degree changes of direction that it's a wonder our kids haven't all been born dizzy.

Here's the thing. The people who deliver great health care are, among others on the front line, our doctors; and the administrators, the people who run the part of the system Albertans have no faith in, are from this government on down the people who would be in a position to silence and intimidate the front-line docs and others who are responsible for speaking truth to power when they see a problem.

We now have the case of Dr. McNamee and that of another Edmonton doctor who has told CBC she was forced from her job and her mental stability questioned. She remains anonymous because of a nondisclosure agreement. Dr. Fanning has now gone public. Dr. Maybaum says health care professionals have to be liberated from the climate of intimidation that pervades the system. I'd bet you, Mr. Speaker, that every single opposition member has had doctors tell them horror stories ending with the words, "But I can't go public; it'll cost me my job." I know I have.

A full public judicial inquiry would clear the air, Mr. Speaker. In fact, it's the only thing that can.

Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 99 the Standing Committee on Private Bills has reviewed the petitions that I presented in the House on Thursday, March 10, 2011, and I can advise the House that all but one of the petitions comply with standing orders 90 to 94.

The committee has considered the petitions and recommends to the Assembly that Standing Order 94(1)(b) be waived for the petition of the Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act subject to the petitioner completing the necessary advertising in accordance with the standing orders before the committee hears the petitioner.

Mr. Speaker, this is my report.

The Speaker: Hon. members, do you concur in the report just provided? All in favour, say yes.

Hon. Members: Yes.

The Speaker: Opposed, say no. It's carried.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Municipal Government (Delayed Construction) Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to request leave to introduce my private member's bill, Bill 205, the Municipal Government (Delayed Construction) Amendment Act, 2011.

This bill will allow municipalities to better regulate construction within their own boundaries and to ensure that projects are not significantly stalled, suspended, or delayed for unreasonable lengths of time. The legislation would give municipalities clear authority to intervene when construction sites become significantly stalled, suspended, or delayed. In these cases I propose that municipalities should hold the authority to require the owner of a delayed project to improve the appearance of the site within a specified time frame.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Motion carried; Bill 205 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the requisite amount of copies of two documents to which I referred yesterday during the Standing Order 30 emergency debate.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to table the appropriate number of copies of the website pro forma for the Canadian international hospital.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have the requisite number of tabling copies of a letter to the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development from Bill Leithead, an Albertan, pertaining to his concerns and not getting responses to the issues surrounding Bill 36 and Bill 50.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to table on behalf of the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition an article from the Calgary Herald, dated Tuesday, March 15, 2011 – this, of course, comes from question period – where Dr. Lloyd Maybaum, president of the Calgary & Area Physicians Association states: many, many cases of physicians being intimidated and threatened.

The Speaker: Hon. member, that was the tabling document that I requested?

Mr. MacDonald: That's correct.

The Speaker: Okay. It's completed, then.
The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling e-mails from the following individuals who are seeking the preservation of the Castle wilderness: C. Morag Dornian, Randy Zielke, Patricia Sullivan, Fred Vermeulen, N. Sjoman, Gwen Wozny, Denise Wall, Eileen Kosior, Robin Hitchon, Dwayne Hebron, Bernie Schaloske, Lorraine Nordstrom, Andrew Burla, Maddy Gustavson, Marion McFall, Ann Card, Dr. Maureen McCall, Janice Pitman, Bonnie Denhaan, Dawn Macdonald, Noreen Sundstrom, Dave Collyer, Matthew Johnson, Patricia Gaviller, and Alan Kane.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you sent a note with respect to the tabling that you must provide to the House. You said in a note to me on the back of an envelope: the quote was taken off a CTV broadcast report, not print; how do I table that? Well, very simply. What you do is get a copy of the television broadcast. You get it translated into English, you have a notary public declare it to be true and correct, and you come back tomorrow and table it in the House with the appropriate copies. Not a problem.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following document was deposited with the office of the Clerk: on behalf of the hon. Mr. Olson, Minister of Justice and Attorney General, a letter dated March 7, 2011, from the hon. Mr. Olson, Minister of Justice and Attorney General, to Mr. Drysdale, chair, Standing Committee on Public Safety and Services, regarding a letter dated February 15, 2011, from the hon. Ms Redford, former Minister of Justice and Attorney General, to Mr. Drysdale correcting costs related to administering and supervising a leadership disclosure system.

Victims of Crime Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to move second reading of Bill 15, the Victims of Crime Amendment Act, 2011.

Mr. Speaker, victims of crime in Alberta must be treated with dignity and respect, and I believe that these amendments will help us to provide them with the services they deserve. The impact of violent and serious crime can be profound for victims, and we want our legislation to provide as much support as possible.

The number of victims applying for financial benefits has increased significantly; therefore, our current processes are also being reviewed to ensure they continue to effectively handle this increasing volume. As part of the review we held consultations with stakeholders in January, Mr. Speaker, and we asked for public input via a website, an online survey. The input received during consultations is reflected in the proposed amendments.

Mr. Speaker, two core programs serve victims of crime in our province: the financial benefits program and the victims of crime grants program, which allocates funding to organizations that provide information, support, and referrals to victims of crime. Albertans who are victims of violent crime can apply for a one-time financial benefit for their injuries through the financial benefits program. This program is unique in North America because benefits are based on the severity of injury. It is not a compensation program. For example, it does not require victims injured in a violent crime to provide records of expenses or to show a loss of income. It's an acknowledgement that the victim has suffered due to injuries associated with a criminal act. The benefits program does not compensate for property damage, motor vehicle collisions, or lost wages.

This year, Mr. Speaker, we are providing $14 million for the financial benefits program. Organizations in Alberta that provide services to victims of crime receive funding from the government of Alberta through the victims of crime fund. In the province there are currently 121 police-based and 29 community-based organizations that provide such vital services. Last year $9.7 million was allocated between these 150 programs, which, in turn, provided support for more than 60,000 victims of crime and trauma in our province.

Mr. Speaker, I'll go briefly into some detail about the proposed amendments. They relate to four main areas, the first of which involves administrative processes relating to the Criminal Injuries Review Board, or the CIRB. Amendments relating to the CIRB will safeguard the rights of applicants to receive fair reviews and will help increase the efficiency of the CIRB processes. We propose that the board only review the evidence before them rather than accepting new evidence. In addition, we propose that the board must send an application back to the director when new evidence or information is uncovered. This clarifies that the board does not reinvestigate, and it will ensure consistency and efficiency, resulting in timely decisions for victims.

Our amendments also state that the board chair can appoint up to three members to sit on a review panel. This will also improve the flexibility of the review process. We also wish to amend the processes for providing notification to the parties involved and for making submissions to the board. In addition, we propose that the board must refer matters back to the director when a decision on eligibility or dismissal of an application is overturned by the review panel. Mr. Speaker, these proposals will result in a more efficient and equitable review process, ultimately resulting in better service for victims of violent crime in Alberta.

This bill will also bring the director's authority in line with the applicant's ability to challenge a board decision, Mr. Speaker. Currently the applicant can appeal to the Court of Appeal while the director seeks judicial review at the Court of Queen's Bench. The amendment will give the director and the applicant the same rights of appeal, leading to consistent interpretation of the act. We also wish to replace the word “hearing” with the word “review,” which will help clarify the intent of the process.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, in this area we propose a transitional period to allow reviews already in progress to be concluded in accordance with the relevant legislation. This will ensure that people already involved in the appeals process are treated fairly.

These changes will reduce the amount of time required to bring an appeal forward to the CIRB, Mr. Speaker, which means quicker decisions for victims. Also, each time new evidence is introduced by a victim on appeal, the case will be sent back to the program. This will again result in quicker decisions.

We also wish to set the death benefit in the regulation, a solution which will be fair and compassionate to victims and surviving family members.

With respect to the length of time to apply, Mr. Speaker, currently the department receives applications for injuries that are decades old. There may be no police or medical records available, and without such independent verification the likelihood of fraudulent applications increases. So we propose to introduce a 10-year limit on applications. This is in line with the Limitations Act, which sets a limit of 10 years on civil matters. For child victims the 10-year period would start when they reach the age of majority to ensure that they have access to the financial benefits program.

At the moment applicants must apply for benefits within two years from the date that they become aware of or know or ought to have known the nature of their injuries. However, the current legislation allows for open-ended discretion on this time limit. We propose to change the above reference to: should have known that a crime has occurred or 10 years from the date that the crime occurred, whichever expires first.

We also wish to address grant funding for victims of crime programs and organizations. The bill will make sure that victims of crime legislation is current with other acts, such as the Youth Criminal Justice Act, that reference the victims of crime fund. In the current act the minister can only introduce or improve programs or initiatives to benefit victims of crime by amending the act. This has limited the government's ability to be innovative and to fund new programs. In this bill we are proposing to allow the minister to make recommendations for grants both with and without the recommendations of the victims of crime committee, making the process more responsive to the immediate needs of organizations serving victims. Mr. Speaker, the change will not impact the grant application process funding for police-based or community-based programs.

Other proposals state that definitions may be added, amended, or deleted to help modernize the act. For example, Mr. Speaker, the term “law enforcement agency” is being replaced with “police service” to provide clarity. We also propose giving the Lieutenant Governor in Council the authority to make additional regulations as required. This again will make programs more responsive and current.

Mr. Speaker, this government and my ministry are committed to ensuring that victims of crime continue to be treated with dignity and respect. The amendments being proposed today are needed to ensure that the services, programs, and financial benefits currently available to victims of crime continue to be provided efficiently and fairly. As a result of these amendments victims will be able to receive a financial benefit sooner, new government programs can be introduced in a more timely fashion, and the appeals process will be faster. The amendments will also provide support for those organizations that assist Alberta's victims and will recognize the hardships that victims experience through no fault of their own.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for the opportunity to provide these comments. At this time I would move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 12 Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Mr. Dallas: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and move second reading of Bill 12, the Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2011.

The Alberta Investment Management Corporation, better known as AIMCo, is the government's investment manager. AIMCo is responsible for managing nearly $70 billion in investments for the government, including the Alberta heritage savings trust fund, the sustainability fund, and public-sector pension funds.

3:00

AIMCo was formed in 2008 with a mission to seek the greatest financial returns with an acceptable level of risk for the clients on whose behalf they invest. Now that AIMCo has been in operation for a few years, amendments are needed to its governing legislation to allow AIMCo to continue to invest Albertans' money as effectively and efficiently as possible. An amendment within Bill 12 would provide AIMCo with additional indemnification powers for its employees and directors.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Under the current legislation AIMCo can already grant indemnity, or legal protection, to a person who acts or acted as a director or officer of a directly owned corporation. The amendment essentially broadens the scope of people who can be indemnified as part of their investment process. It will now include those whom AIMCo appoints indirectly as directors on boards of corporations or similar entities they make significant investments in. It would also ensure that AIMCo employees who act as directors of indirectly held corporations are covered.

A second set of amendments within Bill 12 would see changes to the section which outlines directors' responsibilities. We are adding a provision to the act that clarifies that AIMCo must consider the best interests of the designated entities, which are their clients, in providing investment management services. The act already contains a requirement for directors and officers to act in the best interests of the corporation. This amendment makes it clear that what is in the best interests of the corporation is to act in the best interests of its clients. This change replaces the current wording in the act, that requires AIMCo directors and officers to have due regard to the interests of the Crown and designated entities.

As well, a conflict of interest subsection is being added to protect the corporation and its directors further. This addition will effectively provide the same conflict of interest provisions that apply to directors of any company under the Business Corporations Act.

The remaining amendments within Bill 12 deal with some minor technical changes. For instance, language is being added to explicitly state that compliance with any directive issued by the government is deemed to be in the best interests of the corporation. This would relieve directors from liability provided that they comply with the directive in a prompt and efficient manner.

We're also clarifying the legal ownership structure of AIMCo. Since the act states that AIMCo is a corporation with one share owned by the Crown, it is confusing to also say it consists of a board of directors. We're clearing up the confusion by removing those words with no legal consequence.

As you've heard, the amendments within Bill 12 are needed to ensure that AIMCo has the proper governance in place and can continue to operate effectively while investing the province's substantial assets on behalf of Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With that, I move that we adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Wills and Succession Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure to rise today to move second reading of Bill 14, the Wills and Succession Amendment Act, 2011.

The Wills and Succession Act governs how and to whom property is transferred when a person dies. Bill 14 contains a small but important amendment to the Wills and Succession Act, which was passed in this Legislature in the fall of 2010 and will likely come into force in January 2012.

The new act will allow courts to correct certain deficiencies in invalid wills to make them valid. This correction power applies to wills or, more accurately, invalid wills made after the act comes into force. For example, under the Wills and Succession Act a court can add words to a will if there is proof they were omitted by mistake.

As this act reads now, it appears that the correction powers can be used to re-evaluate wills of people who are already deceased. This creates the immediate potential for disputes, delay, and expense. In fact, there are already a few cases in which parties are holding up estates and probate applications so that they can try to get wills that are invalid under current law validated under new law. There may also be attempts to open closed estates.

The intent of the Wills and Succession Act was that the new act operate on a go-forward basis. This amendment in Bill 14 will make it clear that the new will correction powers will not apply to the estates of people who are already deceased. Justice officials, the Alberta Law Reform Institute, and similar reforms proposed in British Columbia all support the proposed approach.

As this is already affecting the administration of some estates, it is important that we act quickly to incorporate this change. I urge all hon. members to support this important change.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to move to adjourn debate at this time. Thank you.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 13

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to move second reading of Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011.

The Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011, will provide funding authority to the offices of the Legislative Assembly and to the government for the period of April 1, 2011, to April 28, 2011, inclusive. It is anticipated that funding authority for the entire fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, will be provided on that date. The required funding authority for the full year is detailed in the 2011-12 government and Legislative Assembly estimates tabled on February 24, 2011. These interim supply amounts reflect both the anticipated date of full supply and the fact that many payments are monthly. Other payments are due at the beginning of each quarter and at the beginning of the fiscal year.

The act would provide spending authority for the following amounts: $4.94 billion in expense, $252 million in capital investment, and $43 million in nonbudgetary disbursements.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and have a few things get on the record regarding Bill 13. It's not unusual for this government to request interim supply. It's not unreasonable. When you go through the list – well, everyone is included in this list, as far as I can see, including the offices of the Legislative Assembly. Certainly, the one that catches my eye is the office of the Chief Electoral Officer, which is to receive 2 and a half million dollars from this bill. Hopefully, that is money or funds that will be used to plan the enumeration that is to occur, as I understand it, in September. I believe it's the last week in August and the first two weeks of September. Hopefully, we will have a thorough enumeration that will provide to all political parties accurate information on the 87 constituencies we now have. That would certainly be one expenditure of note.

With the office of the Chief Electoral Officer I find it odd that many of the returning officers for the next election have been appointed through Elections Alberta, but I have yet – now, I could stand to be corrected – to see a list of those individuals who have been selected by Elections Alberta to manage or conduct the next provincial election. But looking at that item, certainly this amount of money and what was provided last year should fund the administration of a provincial election, not only fund it but make sure that it is fair and even for each and every political party.

Now, the Health and Wellness budget – of course, we're looking at getting started there – at the end of the year will be probably above $15 billion. It is a lot of money, and I for one don't have confidence in this government's ability to manage the health care budget. That's right. I do not have confidence in this government's ability to manage the health care budget, manage the $40 billion in expenditures as well.

I don't have confidence, hon. minister, and this is why. For the last week or so we have been asking questions, Mr. Speaker, regarding Health and Wellness. We know Health and Wellness would always put out, essentially, two annual reports, section I and section II. Section I dealt with the ministry, the budget of Health and Wellness, and section II would deal with in this case the nine RHAs, the Alberta Cancer Board, the Alberta Mental Health Board, and the Health Quality Council of Alberta. The Health Quality Council of Alberta would be the last entity noted in the financial reports.

When you look at the financial reports and you compare them from one year to the next, you certainly see a lot of differences. Now, Mr. Speaker, this is why I think we have to be very, very reluctant whenever we're authorizing this government to spend money on behalf of citizens because there are some changes made in these financial statements that relate to the questions we have asked. The first change: this is in the unaudited portion, and I'm going to use 2008-09 as an example. Why would you, for instance, make a statement under the financial highlights? Again, I would like to stress that these financial highlights are not audited. They're unaudited. So if you want to hopefully get correct information, you would go to the audited statements.

Now, I asked questions about this last week. I didn't get any answers. The government is asking for a lot of money, over $2.2

billion, for health care. My questions were around the one-time funding. If we look at the annual report, Mr. Speaker, we can see where the government indicates:

Excluding one-time funding, Alberta Health Services received a $522 million, or an eight per cent, increase in base operational support. If one-time funding is included, it equals an $830 million funding increase, or 12.5 per cent, primarily attributed to population increases and inflation. One-time funding for 2008/2009 includes a $97 million payment to the former Chinook, Calgary and Peace Country health regions for 2007/2008 net accumulated deficit elimination.

In other words, that's money that was provided to those three health authorities; $97 million was provided to those three health authorities for a previous year's deficit.

Another one-time $80 million payment was required to support the transition of provincial health service delivery to a single health authority.

There are a lot of different things going on in that one health authority, Mr. Speaker, now. That $80 million was transferred out to the old East Central region, and it was used for everything from transition costs – that's correct – to severance payments, to top up those pension funds, including, of course, the one big pension, the $22,400 a month pension for life, that I believe is indexed, to Mr. Jack Davis, the former administrator at the Calgary health authority. That's where that $80 million was slotted for.

Now, you have $80 million, and you have $97 million. That totals $177 million. Perhaps in the course of debate the minister of finance can finally shed some light and clarify this. When you look and you do the math, you have a lot of money left. You have $131 million. We know that, for instance, in supplementary supply that $97 million allocation was made, that $80 million allocation was made, but the additional money – and if we go to another portion of the annual report, we can see where it is outlined. There are $200 million of overexpended amounts in the books. So, of course, you get this $377 million total.

To clear up the confusion around this, the government could provide an explanation as to where that money came from, the $200 million. If it was spent on one-time funding, where? I can't find any details on this. The only thing the government can do to try to defend themselves is to say: "Well, it's audited. It's audited, and if you don't like that, go to the cops."

I was listening in question period, you know, Mr. Speaker, and I was thinking: "K Division is not that far north on 109th Street. Maybe that's the place to go for an answer." But I think in the course of debate with this requisition, those details on how this government is going to budget and manage their money this year are related to what has happened in the past. And if hon. members of this Assembly are a little bit reluctant to support Bill 13, well, there are a number of reasons.

If you read the Auditor General's report, which I'm sure everyone in this Assembly has, you can clearly see in his report from October of 2010 where the Auditor makes some key recommendations to this government. In fact, I was surprised. I'm sure that under the minister of finance's watch we're going to see a budgeting process that's not going to be a repeat of what happened in previous years when, incredibly, Alberta Health Services with their $8 billion plus budget had to work three times – three times – to finally get it right with their budget.

I heard yesterday the minister, and the minister was very, very defensive in trying to explain, unsuccessfully, the reasons why there was a $500 million error between two ledgers and a $420 million – it wasn't described as an error. It was described as a misclassification, I believe.

Mr. Speaker, those would be examples of what the Auditor General has had to say, and those comments in those reports only add to the suspicions of the public about this government and how they're managing health care and the dollars that are allocated to provide that essential service to sick Albertans.

When you look at all of this discussion, when you look at what the Auditor General has said, and then you look at the fiscal plan of this government, and you note at the very back in the small print of the fiscal plan that it is going to take the government until 2013 before they get their transition act in order with this Alberta Health Services one system of delivery across the province, essentially it's going to take them five years, Mr. Speaker, from the firing of the regional health authorities and the creation of the one superboard before they have a plan to manage their money. During that time, if you can believe the government's own budget documents, there will be well in excess of $47 billion spent on public health care. I would point that out as one of the reasons why citizens don't have confidence in this government when it comes to managing health care.

Now, this $2.2 billion amount that we're talking about in Bill 13 certainly is going to get the fiscal year off to a start, and we will see what happens. But year after year, Auditor's report after Auditor's report, there are flags going up, there are suggestions about how this money can be managed more effectively and more efficiently, but the government doesn't seem to be able to get it right.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, hopefully when Bill 13 is passed and the money is allocated to the appropriate ministries, this government will try once and for all to ensure that we are getting fair value for every dollar that is requested here.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I conclude my remarks on Bill 13 and cede the floor to another hon. member of the Assembly. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore on the bill.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to stand up on Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011. My biggest concern on Bill 13 and the interim supply appropriation is that when this Premier came in, they were going to start having early sessions. We were going to get in here, we were going to have the government budget out early so that we could debate all these things. What this is is just poor planning, looking at extra work and having to double cover for the first month. Had we met earlier, gotten the budget out earlier, we could go through that, and we wouldn't need to go through the interim supply appropriation to ensure that we have a month of funding in order for all the programs to go in there.

What we kind of have is double jeopardy, every department wondering: "Well, okay. Are we going to get our interim supply appropriation? Yes, of course we are. But is it going to be good for the rest of the year?" The biggest comment is that what we need is a government that's efficient, that's effective, where all of the departments know the budgets months in advance, can have them debated, and have that consistency going forward.

Once again, it's just disappointing that we're having to spend the time to go through the interim supply appropriation because this government wasn't able to get its act together, to bring forward a budget in a timely manner, and to bring it in here to debate.

With that, I'll sit down, and we'll see if there's anybody else to speak on it.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask, please, a question to the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore. Are you concerned, sir, about the cost of information technology expenses within Alberta Health Services? In 2007 there was roughly $180 million spent, and this has increased dramatically to 2011, where it's anticipated to be close to $340 million. That is a significant increase. I'm wondering if you could shed some light on how this government is spending their money, particularly in health care. This is just one example where we see IT expenses going up and up and up. For instance, we saw in the media here the other day where there was a breach of information technology and the private information of some citizens was jeopardized.

Mr. Hinman: I really appreciate always the astuteness of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar and the details that he is able to focus on when he's going through all of the different money bills. Yes, it's a major alarm bell going off. Again I think this is all relative to the so-called centralization of this government. I've spoken with many different doctors' offices that were frustrated. I actually have gone to a clinic that specializes in radiology and the digital imagery that they're dealing with in having to upgrade and meet the government standard.

I think that when we look at technology, the Internet and it's ability, it's very interesting when we look at, you know, the big computers that were originally built and everybody having to have access to that big computer versus the current system of the Internet, where you can get wired into the smallest computer to the biggest server and it's all there. This government has made, I believe, a poor decision in wanting to basically be the master of all of the programs and saying that we're going to create them.

I mean, the gun registry is just another wonderful IT boondoggle on trying to manage all of this digital . . .

An Hon. Member: It's federal.

Mr. Hinman: Yes, it is federal. You guys seem to be following in the footsteps of some foolish decisions by centralized government, making big deals with big corporations. You have to wonder about the validity of it and what they're trying to accomplish in bringing these programs forward.

I'm very alarmed. I don't believe that they've gone in the right direction. Again what we're most vulnerable to right now is the loss of that information. I think your colleague from Edmonton-Centre asked some very good questions today on: what are they doing to have that secondary and tertiary involvement in these records, and how are we going to protect them? We've spent a lot of money for a system that is quite vulnerable at this point it seems, and we don't know if it's efficient and if the access is there. It's costing the different doctors, the different clinics a lot of money, to say that they have to buy into this program in order to be part of Alberta Health Services.

I hope that answers the hon. member's question.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, it does.

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. members wish to speak on 29(2)(a)?

Seeing none, any other members wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair now shall put the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a second time]

Government Motions

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Canadian Wheat Board Act

11. Mr. Hayden moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge all members of the Canadian House of Commons to pass Bill C-619, An Act to Amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act (notice of opting out and licence for activities), allowing western Canadian producers to opt out of participating in the Canadian Wheat Board, thereby giving Alberta farmers the choice to market their product as they choose.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to move Government Motion 11. I believe it's imperative that I bring the attention of this Assembly to Bill C-619, which was recently introduced into the House of Commons. This bill will amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act and will allow western Canadian wheat and barley producers the option to market their wheat and barley as they choose.

Currently farmers in Alberta and in other western provinces are obligated to sell their product through the Canadian Wheat Board only. They have no choice, Mr. Speaker. With this amendment, however, western producers will be given the choice to opt out of participating in the Canadian Wheat Board for a minimum of two years. Bill C-619 will bring parity to western farmers and will allow them the same marketing opportunities for wheat and barley as farmers in eastern Canada currently enjoy. Eastern Canadian farmers are able to freely market their wheat and barley as they choose.

Mr. Speaker, over the last several years the federal government has pursued changes to the marketing system for wheat and barley in western Canada. Some of the highlights are that in April 2007 the federal government proposed amendments to the Canadian Wheat Board regulations which would allow for marketing choice for barley, which would have taken effect August 1, 2007. However, before that could happen, on July 31, 2007, the Federal Court ruled in favour of the Canadian Wheat Board retaining its monopoly on barley marketing. The federal government subsequently appealed this decision, and in February 2008 the Federal Court of Appeal ruled against the federal government. Unfortunately, this reaffirmed the decision that barley cannot be removed from the Canadian Wheat Board jurisdiction without opening up the legislation.

In March 2008 the federal government introduced Bill C-46, An Act to Amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act and Chapter 17 of the Statutes of Canada, 1998. Bill C-46 passed first reading in the House of Commons in March 2008 but subsequently died on the Order Paper when the Governor General dissolved the House of Commons in September 2008. In May 2010 the government of Canada introduced Bill C-27, the Canadian Wheat Board Payments and Election Reform Act. Unfortunately, once again the House of Commons adjourned for the summer before this bill made it past first reading.

Mr. Speaker, as of today western Canadian farmers are still waiting for the changes to be made. In 2007 the federal government's barley marketing plebiscite revealed that 62 per cent of farmers across western Canada and 78 per cent of Albertans are in favour of an open market for barley. It is clear that western Canadian farmers want choice. Our government strongly believes that wheat and barley producers should have the right to freely market their own grain products however and to whomever they choose. International markets need our products. Farmers need competitive options for maximizing those marketing opportunities. Alberta's wheat and barley farmers make incredible investments and take great risk, but they do not have the freedom to market their products as they see fit.

Understandably, Mr. Speaker, they are frustrated. Marketing choice does not mean a dismantling of the Canadian Wheat Board but, rather, a transition to an efficient and voluntary organization that effectively competes in an open market. Bill C-619 would allow farmers who opt out of the Canadian Wheat Board to opt back in if they so choose. Options are always good for Alberta producers, and this motion is a step in the right direction.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This has certainly been, as has been pointed out, an extremely contentious issue over the last number of years. I'm not a farmer. I don't sell wheat, and I don't sell barley. As far as making a comment about whether it's a good idea or not, I don't think that I'm qualified to make that judgment. I know I've listened to both sides of the argument, but I think my problem over the years has been the process.

The Canadian Wheat Board is a duly elected board. I don't believe that either the federal government or any provincial government should be trying to bring in legislation through the back door or sideways to be able to change what an elected board has decided that they would do. There are appointments to the board, and I know that they have tried to get people elected that would be able to change it from inside, and that hasn't happened yet.

My whole problem with this is the process. I just heard a few moans when I bring this forward, but I think it's a democratic process that has to be questioned. Because an elected board or because people outside of that board can't get their own way, they go and have the government change the legislation or change the way that the board would operate. Clearly, the courts have not agreed with that premise either, with both of the decisions that had been spoken of previously.

Mr. Speaker, I will sit down and let others speak. Particularly, I want to of course hear from the farmers. I'm sure many in the House, from my understanding, are in support of having choice. That's fine, but the process still should not be through any level of government that interferes with a duly elected board.

The Deputy Speaker: I have on my list here the hon. Member for Highwood, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am a farmer, and I'm pleased to rise today to speak in support of Government Motion 11, which encourages all members of the House of Commons to support Bill C-619, an Act to Amend the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Speaker, this proposed legislation has been a long time coming. For decades farmers in western Canada have been obligated to sell their wheat and barley to the Canadian Wheat Board whereas farmers in eastern Canada, as the minister has just stated, have been able to market their wheat and barley as they want. This two-tier system is unfair, and Alberta farmers deserve the same choice and freedoms as their eastern counterparts. Under this legislation farmers in western Canada would be able to opt out of participating in the Canadian Wheat Board by providing proper notice by April 1 of each year. Farmers that choose to opt out would then be able to sell their wheat and barley products to purchasers of their choice. For many farmers this could mean more profit from sales of wheat and barley, but again it would be their choice.

I strongly support such a practice. It is a fundamental of the free market system that individuals and businesses are able to sell their products to whomever they choose, and this legislation will ensure farmers in western Canada are free to market their wheat and their barley as they like. After all, it's the farmers who work year-round to monitor and plant and harvest their crops, and these same farmers take on huge risks as the capital investment and time investment required are more than substantial. It is only right that in a free market economy farmers are able to be rewarded for their time and effort by marketing their product as they choose. Mr. Speaker, international markets need our products, and farmers should be able to take advantage of these international markets if they so desire.

Certainly, a small percentage of farmers have expressed concerns with this proposed legislation, but Bill C-619 will not end the Canadian Wheat Board. It will simply make participation in the board optional. This would allow the board to make a transition to an efficient, voluntary organization that competes in the open market. The Canadian Wheat Board would still serve the interests of those who choose to participate in it. Although some farmers are opposed to the change, the fact remains, as was mentioned, that 78 per cent of farmers support an open market for barley, as the 2007 barley plebiscite showed. We will stand up for these farmers' wishes so that they have access to the same markets as their counterparts in eastern Canada do.

Mr. Speaker, I would encourage all members of this Assembly to support this motion. The current legislation and practice limits Alberta farmers' ability to market their products, once again, as they choose. Bill C-619 will ensure that Alberta farmers have the option to market their wheat and barley to a purchaser other than the Canadian Wheat Board. This act is imperative to maintaining free market principles for producers from all industries. We should support the wish of the majority of Alberta farmers – I stress the Alberta farmers in this for we are in Alberta – and encourage members of the House of Commons to support Bill C-619.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's good to rise today and have the opportunity to speak in support of Bill C-619 from the motion of the hon. Member for Drumheller-Stettler. It's always good to speak to a motion like this because so often in this House, lately especially, we've been giving the government some, obviously, pretty heavy criticism on their handling of the health care file and the finance file and the land-use framework and other disastrous bills and initiatives that they've undertaken. So it's always nice to be able to stand up and lend full support as a member and as a caucus for a government motion that is completely appropriate and healthy for this province and will be a good thing for this province. I commend the minister of agriculture for bringing this motion forward.

You know, the biggest thing for me that this represents is choice. We can't cloud the fact that some folks will say: "Oh, the Canadian Wheat Board is elected. It's duly elected. Therefore, it's appropriate that we kind of leave it alone and just let it do its thing." The problem is that just because a body is elected does not mean that the way that it's constituted is right or is acceptable.

In this case the Canadian Wheat Board, essentially, is a board that forces our grain farmers to sell their wheat to it while their competitors in other areas of the country, in eastern Canada, do not have that same mandatory requirement. It is, essentially, a western wheat board monopoly, and it's completely unacceptable and completely out of line with any principles of democracy or free markets or anything that I can imagine that our province would be based on principlewise.

Our caucus along with our leader, Danielle Smith, believe that wheat and barley farmers in western Canada must be provided with the same choices as wheat and barley farmers in Ontario or Quebec or anywhere else. This does not mean completely dismantling the Canadian Wheat Board but merely affording farmers the right to operate independently. The board could remain a producer-controlled entity providing the same services that it does today. Other jurisdictions, including Ontario and Australia, have successfully transitioned from a single-desk approach like the CWB to an open market.

Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Wheat Board became mandatory for farmers during the Second World War so as to ensure a steady supply for the duration of the war. It has been 66 years since the war ended, for those keeping count, yet farmers are still subjected in our province to a monopoly that prevents them from choosing how best to maximize their profits. In 1996 numerous prairie farmers were arrested and subsequently tried and convicted in a court of law for simply trying to make a living. One of those, a constituent of the Minister of Transportation, Jim Chatenay, was hauled off to jail for having the audacity to sell his wheat to the United States. What an absolute travesty, frankly, what a pathetic joke that we would ever have our police officers arrest somebody and prosecute them under this act. Just ridiculous.

They were all sentenced to pay large and unjust fines as well. In protest some chose to spend a number of months in jail rather than pay, like Mr. Chatenay. In fact, one farmer was fined $2,000 for donating a bushel of wheat – $2,000 for donating a bushel of wheat – to a 4-H club in Montana. That was not even about profit. That farmer was simply trying to perform an act of charity for our neighbours to the south. That's how ridiculous and pathetic the Canadian Wheat Board monopoly had become.

In terms of international relations the Canadian Wheat Board has proven to be problematic baggage in trade negotiations. As a result of the board's monopoly and government-mandated price guarantees the United States views the Canadian Wheat Board as a subsidy and often mentions its dissolution as a condition for U.S. support. An even more alarming element is that the Algerian grain board has stated that they enjoy very low prices on Canadian wheat. This is at the direct expense of Canadian wheat farmers, that could find, clearly, higher prices elsewhere if they had the right to market their grains elsewhere.

It is true that some farmers support the Wheat Board because they believe they cannot market their grain effectively without it or because they believe the Canadian Wheat Board is getting a fair price on their behalf. There is also a concern that without the Canadian Wheat Board farmers might find themselves in a situation like that in the early part of the 20th century, when they were at the mercy of big agribusiness and the railroad monopolies. However, times have changed, and it is obvious to us that nonboard crops such as canola do not face this type of problem. The introduction of market forces can only benefit western farmers. Choice can only benefit western farmers.

We must realize that many western grain farmers are already transporting, selling, and exporting products not regulated by the Canadian Wheat Board such as canola, pulse crops, and oats. For them or any others this bill would simply give them the freedom to broaden their businesses' activities to include that of barley and wheat.

Obviously, I come from a 'rurban' constituency, as it's called. We have cities. We have the city of Airdrie, with about 40,000 people. We have Chestermere, with about 15,000 people, and we have about 15,000 people in Rocky View. Many of those folks are grain farmers, and I want to make sure that those farmers have the same opportunities as any other wheat and barley farmers across this nation to market their wheat to whomever they so choose.

I also want to make clear that the Wildrose and myself personally support still having the Canadian Wheat Board as an option – an option – a choice for farmers if they so choose to utilize it, but it should never be forced upon them. It's still ridiculous that we live in a country that forces this type of unjust monopoly on one region of the country, and I think that as Albertans we should stand up against it.

Fiscally measurable costs to farmers of the single-desk approach exist. According to one study they vary and could be as high as $20 per tonne in any year for wheat. Taxpayers' costs could be another $5 to $6 per tonne. For barley growers the hidden costs of the board are larger than $20 per tonne, and the taxpayer costs are approximately $9 per tonne. All of that wasteful spending could be avoided.

Mr. Speaker, while our party rarely finds itself, obviously, in agreement with the government these days, I must congratulate the minister of agriculture, Drumheller-Stettler, on raising the profile of this important bill. I know it must be difficult for him to hear me agreeing with him so profusely and showing such praise, but he deserves it. I hope that this government will continue to push this file in ways like this to support our friends in the federal government in getting rid of this intrusive and unacceptable monopoly for our wheat and barley producers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. Horner: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and speak to this government motion as it relates to the bill in the House of Commons and to the Canadian Wheat Board. I rise to speak on this because it's been something that has been intertwined with my family and my business and my operations for some 25, 30 years now, and it's also been something that has been discussed a lot not only by previous ministers of agriculture, our current minister of agriculture but, certainly, producers in the province. I think it would be good to have a little bit of an historical perspective so that you would understand why this is close to my heart.

When the Canadian Wheat Board was created, it was created so that we could gather the product and prepare it for a time of war, really. It was also a time when we could originate the grain and bring it forward to the areas where that grain would be processed to reach other markets and to reach the consumer, and those processing areas were in eastern Canada. So it's no surprise that the Canadian Wheat Board's legislative mandate only applies to British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba but not to Ontario and Quebec or any other provinces. It was designed to move raw materials from the west to the east to be processed and then sent out to those markets, and at the time that probably seemed like a pretty good idea.

Then it morphed into – well, now we have the ability to have a single-desk seller. In the '40s, '50s, and '60s perhaps that was a good idea because farmers were not as sophisticated in terms of managing their own hedge accounts, in terms of managing their own sales, in terms of finding that customer. Not many farmers in those days could have arranged the logistics of a small vessel to go to Mexico or a small vessel to go to the Ukraine or anywhere else in the world. Today times have changed, Mr. Speaker. Producers are doing those things. They are managing their own hedge accounts. They're managing their own currency evaluations. They're putting product in bags, and they're shipping it all over the world.

We were one of those producers, Mr. Speaker, in our operation. We would look to create a pearled barley product in western Canada because there was only one that was doing it, and we thought it would be a good idea. Then we thought: "Well, what about oats? Why not get into oats, oat processing, good old Quaker Oats? Why not do that?" In those days it wasn't the granola bar; that came a little bit later. We realized that the only processor or oats was actually located in Peterborough, Ontario, the Quaker Oats plant. There was a plant that was in Winnipeg but burned down the year that we were looking at it, so that would have been about the mid-80s. That plant was actually scheduled to be rebuilt in Ontario.

We started to do a little investigating to find out why those plants were there, and our first thought was that, well, it's because it's close to market: easier access to your market, easier access to the customer. What we discovered, to our chagrin, was that you had to sell all of your oats to the Wheat Board, then you had to buy it all back from the Wheat Board if you were within the Wheat Board zone.

That becomes a bit of a nightmare for a processor. Rather than deal with that nightmare, Mr. Speaker, the processor simply moved out of the jurisdiction and stayed in Canada, but they stayed in Ontario. It wasn't until oats were removed from the Canadian Wheat Board, very similar to the kind of process that we're talking about today, that processing of oats – the majority of the production of oats is in western Canada – started to happen in western Canada.

Today the majority of the production of oats for human consumption is done in western Canada, and there's a reason for that, Mr. Speaker. It's because we can buy directly from the producer. We can do research on varieties of oats that will increase our yield. There are a number of reasons why we want to be able to deal directly with the farmer. We're creating food product. We want to have a source of supply that is consistent. That made a tremendous difference to the food production value and the value-added chain in western Canada.

So why not barley? Why not wheat? It's a very interesting question. Why not? If you're not going to do it for just western Canada, why not, then, extend the Canadian Wheat Board to the rest of the country? In fact, Mr. Speaker, I suggested that to the federal government one time. The governments of Quebec and Ontario flatly refused to have anything to do with the Canadian Wheat Board. That should tell us something right away. A federal law should apply to all portions of Canada, not just our provinces.

International sales experiences that I've had over the last 25 years, prior to being elected to this honourable Chamber, told me that, yes, people dealt with the Canadian Wheat Board because they had to. But when I came to them – and we were doing transactions on canola, on oat products, on raw oats, on feed oats, on various other products – they appreciated the fact that they could deal directly with an Alberta customer and an Alberta client in providing that product.

I had the interesting experience in a previous portfolio, Mr. Speaker, of sitting down and talking to one of the largest brewery companies owned by a family in the world. I was talking to one of their executives, who happened to be one of the sons of the owner. They had just recently built a brand new malting plant in a state directly south of us. I asked them why they didn't build it in Alberta. We grow some of the best barley in the world. They said: well, this way we can deal with your single-desk seller, but we can do all of the contract growing and the research directly with the farmers in the United States. That's a tremendous loss to the producers of Alberta, and it's one we will never get back, and it's one of the reasons why I believe choice is an absolute necessity for western Canada. It's an absolute necessity for our producers, and it's an absolute necessity for our market.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere mentioned the international trade issues that the Canadian Wheat Board brings up, and they do. As a previous minister in charge of the WTO file I had the opportunity to sit in a room and listen to other members of the WTO tell us that the Canadian Wheat Board being a choice would go a long way in advancing Canada's position in the trade talks. That was then. Perhaps it's different now, Mr. Speaker; I'm not there. But I can tell you that it's an irritant that needn't be there because it would benefit us as much as it would benefit Canada and the rest of the WTO.

The global food markets are changing. They're not the same as they were when we developed the Canadian Wheat Board. The environment that the Canadian Wheat Board developed in is not the same. The voting mechanisms that are in place today are not relevant to the type of production that producers in western Canada do. It's time, Mr. Speaker, that we finally deal with this, and I fully support the federal government's proposal to create choice in the Canadian Wheat Board. I, too, would not like to see the Canadian Wheat Board gone. I would like to see it run like a grain company but not like a subsidized grain company.

With those comments, Mr. Speaker, I'll take my chair.

The Deputy Speaker: Again, Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions. The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As somebody who's actually just received a cheque for some durum that I sold, I'm at a loss to understand. I know the experience that the former speaker has had both as a minister and as a marketing agent in international trade. Why would it be an advantage to stay in a system involuntarily because it's duly elected and I'm part of a zone that covers Saskatchewan and Alberta, where there's a variation of freight rates? Why is it advantageous for me to stay in a system where it costs me $1.35 a bushel to ship grain to a point artificially, that never went there, when I only get $3.60 a bushel back?

Mr. Horner: Well, I think the hon. member answered his own question, Mr. Speaker. I think that what we have to recognize – I go back to what I said before – is that the producers that we have today are considerably more sophisticated in how we do business in the grain industry than ever before. They have the knowledge about freight rates. They have the knowledge about what it takes to load the car. They have the knowledge about what it takes to market that car.

There are agents and brokers that are working very closely with producers today on other grains, and canola is the best example of this that one could look at. If you're going to look at marketing your canola and the returns that producers have received on canola even in times of price distress, there's no pool. There's no interest rate recovery. There's no prepayment. It's based on what the producer does and what he does with his partner in marketing. I would suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the returns for those producers have been considerably more. They've had the choice of whom they deal with and to whom they sell it, and when they do the selling, their returns have been much better.

There is no advantage, in answer to the hon. member's question.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the hon. member as the recent Minister of Advanced Education and Technology – well, I'm not wondering. I know he's aware of a plant and pilot project in south Edmonton that produces a sugar-type substance from a natural source, particularly starch. I wonder if the hon. member would care to comment on the difficulty for people who want to start plants like that here of acquiring a direct source of starch in the neighbourhood, with people having to sell their product to the Wheat Board and then have it bought back?

Mr. Horner: Well, Mr. Speaker, imagine if you were the company that wanted to get rolling and you had a great idea. You took – well, I don't know – let's say, barley, and you figured out a way to take the aleurone layer out of barley, to separate only that piece out, and it had some very interesting properties. Maybe you weren't even going to use it for food, but you might use it for food and pharmaceuticals. So you go to a group of farmers, and you say: "I want you to grow a particular type of barley for me. I want a particular weight and protein, I want a particular moisture, and I want it delivered at particular times throughout the year because my process is going to be steady, but perhaps I'll only need a little bit at a time." Fabulous. You find a farmer. You think that's great. Then uh-uh. The Wheat Board comes in and says: "No, no. He has to sell it to me. Then you come to me, and we'll tell you what the price is." Then there's no guarantee that the producer is going to be able to keep his product separate from anybody else's that the board might be buying that day.

It's an impediment, Mr. Speaker, to the creation of value chains within our province on either new and innovative starches or new and innovative foods or, in fact, new and innovative pharmaceuticals. In some cases I know of companies that have been importing product that is, actually, within the purview of the Canadian Wheat Board, but they've simply disguised it as a soup base or some other base and then used that product because it was cheaper, actually, than going and getting it from the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Speaker, this is just simply something that was designed in its infancy to create raw commodities moving eastward to process in eastern Canada, and it's never left that situation. We need to provide choice to companies and producers who want to create new products.

The Deputy Speaker: Twenty-five seconds under Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've been listening to the hon. members speak about Government Motion 11, and I've found the speeches certainly interesting. This is an issue that doesn't seem to go away, and I'm confident that it's not going to go away any time soon. Of course, that's the issue of what role the Canadian Wheat Board should play in the marketing of wheat and barley, mostly in western Canada.

Now, certainly, we've heard a historical perspective on all of this from a previous speaker. We know that in the past there have been efforts made through Agriculture and Rural Development to support the side, of course. The side on this issue that the government is supporting through the Alberta Grains Council and others is that we need to offer this supposed choice option, that farmers want more choice.

Well, farmers should decide and have decided in the past across B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba what they would like, and I think we should leave it at the direction of the farmers. They can vote. I certainly read – and I would encourage all hon. members of this Assembly to have a look at it – a recent feature in the Globe and Mail on the Wheat Board and the politics around the Wheat Board with the provinces and with the federal government.

Now, certainly, the federal government has changed some of the rules recently regarding appointments to the Wheat Board, and I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that the city of Winnipeg should for sure have two things, the Jets and the corporate headquarters of the Canadian Wheat Board.

An Hon. Member: Why? Are you from Winnipeg?

Mr. MacDonald: No. Those are two things that I'm confident Winnipeg should have. They also have – and I'm not going to get into that, hon. member – very competitive electricity rates. But I'm not going to go there.

Mr. Danyluk: You ought to move.

Mr. MacDonald: I'm not going to move, but industry is going to move from this province, hon. minister, because of this government's mismanagement of our electricity file. Low-cost electricity is going to attract a lot of industry from Alberta, unfortunately, to Manitoba.

Now, when you look at how the composition of the Canadian Wheat Board has changed, obviously, the federal government that we have now wants to see significant changes. Many MPs elected from western Canada certainly want to see significant changes.

I think the farmers' interests would be much better served if there was an effort made to change some of the unfair trade laws. We have spoken on that issue in this Assembly in the past, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, there are many countries which have unusually high tariffs on many of our agricultural products, including wheat and including barley. I heard an hon. member talk earlier about the World Trade Organization and what would happen or what could happen or what might happen if the Wheat Board's wings were clipped, so to speak. I would like to urge the hon. minister of agriculture to stand up and defend the farmers in this province and their interests in places like South Korea, where they have up to an 80 per cent tariff on agricultural products from this area.

Hon. members previous to me had spoken about all the trade and the trade patterns from the pioneer days to Ontario and to Quebec. Well, the trade patterns are now going west to the Asian markets. That's why I would encourage this government and the federal government to try once and for all to reduce some of those tariffs in many of the markets in the Far East, where there is a growing population and people are moving from rural areas to urban areas to participate in the industrialization of their economies. Of course, they're not growing their own food, so naturally one would assume that this is a fine place to source that food. That is what I would like to see this government do.

I find it interesting to hear the Wildrose Party's take on this Government Motion 11. When I first read it, hon. members, I just assumed that this massive majority had read the latest polling numbers, where in rural Alberta the Wildrose, if they're not number one, are a strong second and coming up. I thought that this was just political mischief by this government, who knows they're in trouble where their power base is and are trying to protect the last remnants of their vote from this party. I originally saw Government Motion 11 as a political move to try to convince rural Alberta that this government was standing up and speaking out on behalf of their interests.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Danyluk: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My question is very simple. The hon. member had a lot of discussion about individuals leaving Alberta and that they were leaving Alberta partially, I believe his innuendo was, because of the high electricity costs. So when the hon. member talked about this province having higher electricity costs than other provinces, going to the comments about Manitoba, I just want to know if he took into consideration the data that right now Manitoba has between $7 billion and $8 billion debt against electricity costs or their energy production and also that a planned modernization, or I can call it an upgrade, is estimated to cost $18 billion. Is he taking that into account in the cost of electricity?

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. I would like to start by expressing my gratitude to the hon. minister for the question. The first thing I would like to correct in the minister's assumptions is that I didn't say individuals; I said businesses. There are already businesses that are so frightened and so upset at the cost of electricity and the uncertainty of the market here with our power that they're looking at relocating to Manitoba because they have low electricity costs, including businesses that are currently sited in Lethbridge, because businesses cannot afford to pay the power bills that this government has created as a result of deregulation.

Now, regarding Manitoba's debt I don't know how this hon. member could stand up and make that statement when this government has now forced up to $14 billion onto the bills of consumers of electricity in this province, whether they're residential or whether they're commercial or industrial users, to pay for the expanded infrastructure system that you're promoting through your land grabs through your bills. Think of what you said. Because of electricity deregulation here, we now have an infrastructure deficit which has to be paid by the consumers of this province. We, too, have a deficit.

Mr. Danyluk: Who else is going to pay for it?

Mr. MacDonald: Who else? Well, certainly the generators, hon. member. In fact, it was your government that arbitrarily and behind closed doors changed the regulatory decision made to share the cost 50 per cent between generators and consumers. Behind closed doors this government decided that consumers would foot the whole bill, which is $14 billion. So, please, don't compare yourself to Manitoba.

Mr. Danyluk: You did. You did.

Mr. MacDonald: Manitoba is a well-run, well-managed province and on occasion changes governments to New Democrats, to Conservatives.

Mr. Danyluk: Answer the question.

Mr. MacDonald: I am answering the question. You asked me to answer the question, sir, and I'm answering it. You might not like the answer.

Mr. Danyluk: You didn't answer the question. So the answer is no.

Mr. MacDonald: Please don't interrupt.

When you talk about deficits, and you pluck a number out of the air from Manitoba, I would ask you to consider the electricity deficit that you and your government have created as a result of electricity deregulation.

I appreciate the discussion on electricity deregulation, Mr. Speaker, even though we are talking about Government Motion 11, which is to promote the elimination of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: We have 35 seconds left. In 35 seconds?

Mr. Lund: Yes.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Mr. Lund: I would like to ask the hon. member: who all is able to vote for the board of the Canadian Wheat Board? Who is allowed to vote?

Mr. MacDonald: If you sit down, I'll answer the question.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. Every time there's a vote, this government has had suggestions and, certainly, the federal government has had suggestions as to who should vote. It's a selective vote.

The Deputy Speaker: Now we get back to the motion. I have a long list of speakers here: the hon. members for Lacombe-Ponoka, Calgary-Fish Creek, Cardston-Taber-Warner, Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, Rocky Mountain House, Calgary-Glenmore, Little Bow, Calgary-Bow, and Red Deer-South.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to rise and add my comments to the debate on Government Motion 11, which urges all members of the House of Commons to support and pass Bill C-619.

I realize that this is a federal issue, but it has serious implications to farmers, especially farmers in the prairie provinces. Bill C-619 would bring parity to western farmers, allowing them the same marketing opportunities for wheat and barley as farmers in eastern Canada. I believe that wheat and barley producers should have the right to choose how and to whom they market their grain products.

The Canadian Wheat Board has had a monopoly on marketing wheat grown in western Canada since 1943. The government at that time made selling wheat through the board mandatory to ensure or to guarantee that we'd have a supply of wheat to Europe during the war years. This may have been a good idea in 1943, but we are living in a different world now, and it is time to change this monopoly, which only affects western farmers, to reflect the realities of 2011. Changing the current monopoly will lead to increased innovation in secondary and tertiary processing in the wheat and barley industries. This is what our maltsters and other value-adders need to be competitive in the 21st century.

I want to just talk about how it affects people in my area. Rahr Malting in Alix is in my constituency of Lacombe-Ponoka. It is a large malting plant. It's the largest single-cell malting plant in the world, and it's located in central Alberta because of the availability of the best malting barley in the world. To access barley, they can contract with local farmers, but it has to be done through the Wheat Board.

When the farmer delivers their grain directly to the malt plant, the plant has a couple of options for paying the farmer. They can pay part of the money directly to the farmer, and there is a fee paid to the Wheat Board as well. The other option is to pay the full amount to the Wheat Board, and the Wheat Board will keep their portion of the fee and send the balance of the payment to the farmer at some other time, at a much later date and after some pooling costs and other costs are deducted from this fund. Either way, the farmer is paying a fee to the Wheat Board, which comes off his bottom line or the bottom line of Rahr, you know, if Rahr pays more money for the wheat in order to get it from the farmer.

The problem with this is that often the charges from the balancing pool that the Wheat Board keeps are for demerge on ships or other costs that have absolutely nothing to do with delivery of the barley to the malting plant. Neither the farmer nor the malster receive any services from the Wheat Board for the marketing or transportation of their product. In fact, the very fact that Rahr has to contract with the Wheat Board makes it more difficult for them to contract with their customers as well.

Currently the Wheat Board fees being collected at the Rahr plant, right in Alix, are between half a million to a million dollars a year. Year after year not only in Alix but in every grain-processing plant in western Canada millions and millions of dollars are being paid to the Wheat Board in fees, and the farmers have no choice of where they market their grain. There are good examples of marketing choice in other jurisdictions around the world, and good models have been developed in Canada. I would encourage everyone to support Government Motion 11.

In fact, one of the models for marketing has been developed right here in Red Deer, I think, with the Chambers of Commerce, and one of our hon. members, Red Deer-South, was part of that process to develop that model. This is the kind of model that needs to be promoted so that farmers in western Canada have that same parity.

I would ask all members here in our Legislature to support the motion and speak to Members of Parliament to support Bill C-619 so that it will eventually lead to marketing choice for all farmers in Canada, which is absolutely critical to the future success of not only our farmers but to the processing industry in Canada.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to rise and support this motion. Everybody will know that this is a true urban girl, with very little rural background. I was honoured to have a rural buddy, when I was making my way through the Legislature, in the Member for Rocky Mountain House, who decided to take me under his wing and teach me about all of the rural issues and all the farm issues that I think were important. I was lucky to be able to have his expertise as I became a little bit of an expert on some of the rural issues. I had grandparents that were farmers, but they ended up in Saskatchewan, moving to the city.

I do not have a lot of rural expertise, but I've been lucky to have some expertise, including my colleague from Calgary-Glenmore. In recent developments, being a member of the Wildrose, you learn very quickly as you travel the province and talk to people in the rural areas because there are only four of us plus our leader. I'm pleased to stand up and support the government motion.

I think what I've learned is that farming is extremely hard work that is fraught with risk. Grains are, obviously, sensitive to the weather, and finding the right balance is always a tough task. The weather can be too hot. It can be too cold. It can be too wet. It can be too dry. If someone is going to take risks and work hard, they need to be rewarded, and they need to know that they will enjoy the fruits of their labour. This is why the government motion calls on all Members of Parliament to pass federal Bill C-619. It will allow farmers to opt out of the Canadian Wheat Board. I think the bill is quite reasonable to all sides in that it lets farmers opt out of the board in a timely and orderly fashion so that farmers that choose to remain in the pool are not negatively affected.

Because so few Albertans today work on a farm, they have a tough time relating to agriculture issues, but I always like to try to dig a little deeper and put the issues in context. I've always asked a few questions. My colleague from Rocky Mountain House knows that. My colleague from Calgary-Glenmore knows that I ask a lot of questions. They're pretty simple questions, but when you're an urban girl – my colleague laughs at me because he's been very, very kind in helping me through the process of some of the agriculture issues that I don't quite understand. As he explained to me one day, there are no stupid questions, only stupid answers. He's been very patient. As I explained, I like to dig a little deeper, and I put the issues in context, and I've asked a lot of questions.

For those farmers who have refused to abide by the Wheat Board, who felt like they have worked so hard and have their efforts controlled by someone else, there have been severe consequences for disobeying the Wheat Board's monopoly. As has been mentioned in the House, in 1996 a Manitoba farmer was tired of having his grain sold by the CWB. He decided to take some of his harvest across the border and sell it in the United States, and because of what he did, he spent five months in prison. If you grow barley or wheat, you must sell it to the CWB. It's up to them to market and distribute the grain. No one else can. Imagine owning a bakery or a greenhouse and having to sell your hard work to someone at a flat price. If you don't, they'll throw you in prison.

Throughout my career I've always asked myself: what are the priorities of Albertans? If you take the time to meet face to face with Albertans and truly listen to them, they will not tell you they want the government investigating farmers for selling their products. Albertans want the government going after drug dealers for selling their products. They want pimps to be in prison, and they want prostitutes getting the help that they need. Albertans want safe streets. They want to know that when someone is convicted of a crime, they will pay their debt to society, not be released early for being nice in prison.

Albertans also know that resources are limited. There are only so many dollars to go around. Priorities have to be questioned here. We need the police on the street. We need violent criminals off the street. We need hard-working farmers on their fields. We want the hard-working farmers feeding Albertans and growing not just grains but the Alberta economy.

We will, as has been mentioned before, support Government Motion 11. We think all members of the House of Commons should pass Bill C-619, and I think that with this government motion on the floor today it sends a strong message that we support our Alberta farmers, and we want them to have the choice to market their products as they choose.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm happy today to rise and speak in support of Motion 11, urging the federal government to pass Bill C-619. I think this is an important bill, and I think it brings choice and balance to this debate. I acknowledge to this Assembly that I have many friends and associates in my constituency who are strong supporters of the Wheat Board, and I respect their views. The thing I like about this bill is that it protects their right to keep the Wheat Board because those who want choice would have to opt out, stay out for two years, and then would have to be given a year to get back in. I think this is a good bill and would satisfy many of the concerns.

I want to make a couple of points today, Mr. Speaker, and the first point I want to make is that monopolies do not create a healthy business climate. They do not encourage free enterprise and free markets, some principles that I espouse totally. Under the Canadian Wheat Board monopoly the western farmer has been the loser. There are no incentives to cut inefficiencies, no competition to encourage better returns to farmers.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to just share a brief story with the Assembly which I've shared before, but I think it's worth repeating. It's from Don Baron's book Canada's Great Grain Robbery. He tells some stories about some wild hogs in Horseshoe Bend. I believe this story makes some points that are relevant in this debate.

The story is told that years ago there lived a herd of wild hogs in a great horseshoe bend down a river deep in the southern United States. Where those hogs came from no one knew. But they survived floods . . . freezes, droughts and hunters. They were so wild the greatest compliment a man could pay to a dog was to say it had fought the hogs in Horseshoe Bend and returned alive. Occasionally a [hog] was killed either by dogs or a gun – and became a conversation piece for years.

One day, a lean-faced man came by the country store on the river road and asked the whereabouts of these wild hogs. He drove a one-horse wagon, had an axe, some blankets and a lantern, a pile of corn and a single-barrelled shotgun. He was a slender, slow-moving man who chewed his tobacco deliberately and spat very seldom.

Several months later he came back to the store and asked for help to bring those wild [hogs] out of the swamp. He said he had them all in a pen.

Bewildered citizens all gathered together to go view the captive hogs in Horseshoe Bend and wanted to know what happened.

"It's all very simple," said the patient lean-faced man. "First, I put out some corn for them. For three weeks they wouldn't eat it. Then some of the young ones grabbed a cob and ran off into the bush. Soon, they were all eating corn. Then I commenced building a pen around the corn, just a little higher every day. When I noticed they had stopped grubbing for acorns and roots and were all waiting for me to bring the corn, I built the trap door.

"Naturally they raised quite a ruckus when they seen they was trapped. But I can pen any animal on the face of the earth if I can just get him to depend on me for a handout."

In view of my comments about free enterprise, choice, and not having others be responsible for us, I think this story makes a good point.

The other point I'd like to make today, Mr. Speaker, briefly, is that I have constituents who years ago wanted to add value to their wheat by milling it into flour. It was a good idea, and as the former minister of agriculture pointed out to us, you know, it would have worked. It would have brought business and jobs to our area. But because of the Wheat Board monopoly and because they couldn't market their own wheat and had to sell it to the Wheat Board, who would then sell it back, the economics didn't work.

You know, I think the point needs to be made here that this is a monopoly. Monopolies are against competition, against free enterprise, so I am very much supportive of this bill and of choice.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

4:30

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, followed by the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You know, I hate to wreck the party here, but I don't think I'm going to be supporting this motion. That may not be a great surprise for hon. members. I want to just indicate that I believe that the bill that is being introduced in the House of Commons by Bruce Stanton of Simcoe North – that is, Bill C-619 – would allow farmers to opt out of having to market their wheat and barley through the Canadian Wheat Board. I believe that the present circumstance is far more preferable and far more democratic, to allow the Wheat Board to make that decision and to continue to allow the farmers to elect their own representatives to the board of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Now, it's interesting to me that the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner acknowledged that many of his friends, many of his constituents favour the Wheat Board. I find that this is actually a fairly widespread situation. I do in fact get out to rural areas and talk to people and talk to farmers, and it's clear to me that this government's position and the federal government's position, the Tories in Ottawa, do not represent necessarily even a majority of wheat and barley farmers in Canada or in Alberta. I note that in the last election to the Wheat Board four of five directors that were elected took a pro single-desk position, and the one that was re-elected in the Peace Country was re-elected very narrowly. This is fairly typical of these elections.

Now, I know that some hon. members are going to say, "Well, you know, it's just the small hobby farmers and so on that outvote the big corporate farms and so on," but I don't buy it. In fact, not so long ago, when the minister was Chuck Strahl, the federal government had 20,000 people removed from the voters list in that campaign. They were deemed ineligible for such reasons as not having delivered grain in the past two years or not having produced enough wheat and so on. Those people have been removed from the voters list, but we still see a situation where despite repeated interference from the federal government and repeated urging of this government, the farmers continue to elect people that will represent them.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that there are some different interests at play here among farmers. In my opinion, the corporate farms or the very large producers have the resources, they believe, to market their own barley and cut their own deals. But I think the majority of farmers, being middle and small farmers, benefit from the single desk, and I think that's why they regularly elect the pro single-desk directors.

Now, there are people or interests in the United States and in the European Union, some of our biggest competitors, who would dearly love to see the dismantling of the Canadian Wheat Board. I think that what would happen is that it would accelerate the loss of the family farm, of small farms, and it would tend to increase the rate at which there was a concentration of ownership in fewer and fewer hands.

Mr. Speaker, I think that this Legislature should instead oppose Bill C-619 and support the democratic right of wheat and barley farmers to make their own decisions with respect to this matter. I know that the argument is being made that we're not going to get rid of the Wheat Board. It will continue; we'll just let farmers opt out. Well, of course, it will be the biggest farmers that will opt out, the ones that produce a lot of the grain, and it will seriously weaken the position of the rest of the farmers that want to participate in the Wheat Board. It's a way of undermining and eventually rendering irrelevant the Canadian Wheat Board.

This has been tried, Mr. Speaker, in Australia, and it was not a success. It has not been a success there. It's just that the Conservative government in Canada and the Conservative government in Alberta have tried a number of different approaches to get rid of the single desk. The approach they're taking now is to say: "Well, we'll keep the Wheat Board. It'll still market your wheat if you want to participate." The big guys or anyone who wants can leave. The big guys, of course, will, and the ability of the Wheat Board to market grain and get a good price for the people participating will be diminished, so I don't think that we should support this motion.

I think, Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, that I don't accept this government's repeated attempts to try and eliminate the single desk. They're acting for a smaller group of agricultural producers and not for the small operator, not for the family farm, and it's not something that we're prepared to support. We believe that most wheat and barley farmers do want to retain the single desk.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions. The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

Mr. Lund: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Once again, the hon. member mentioned the elected board and that there were four out of five that supported the Wheat Board. I would be curious to know the criteria. Who all could vote for the members of the board? If the hon. member would answer that question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar dodged it and didn't answer. I don't think he knows.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order.

Mr. Lund: If he knows, then I would hope that he would answer.

The Deputy Speaker: You want to raise a point of order right now?

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. MacDonald: Yes, I do, Mr. Speaker. Under 23(h), (i), and (j) – and that's certainly reflected in the standing orders – I would ask the hon. member to withdraw that comment that he made regarding my exchange with him earlier because that simply is not true, and the hon. member knows it.

Mr. Lund: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd be only too happy to withdraw it, but I would have thought that he would answer if he knows.

I will redirect the question to the person that I was asking the question to in the first place.

The Deputy Speaker: So you have withdrawn your comment?

Mr. Lund: Yes, I've withdrawn it.

Mr. MacDonald: Further, to clarify that, Mr. Speaker, I didn't even have time to finish because the clock had run out. There was a five-minute . . .

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, you raised a point of order. The hon. member has withdrawn the comment, so we'll continue on.

Debate Continued

Mr. Mason: Well, I'm happy to give the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar some of my time if he wants to answer the question. I was hoping he'd help me out, Mr. Speaker, because I think it's a trick question.

I'm not familiar with the specific requirement, but I know that farms who produce one tonne of grain or more are eligible for a ballot, and I know that some farms receive several, but incorporated farms only receive one. If the hon. member can further enlighten me and the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, that would be great.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Infrastructure.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I just have a question for the hon. member. He very explicitly talked about that wheat and barley farmers should have control of their position or, if I can interpret, their destiny and have the opportunity to vote. He also made mention that the hon. Strahl took out 20,000 producers. Well, if I can just ask him because it contradicts your statements: does he really believe that if you are not in the wheat and barley production, you should have the eligibility to vote on something that you have nothing to do with?

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, you know, I know that farmers change crops, and they are affected by droughts and other weather conditions and so on, so I'm sure there is some variability in who's eligible. Perhaps the system doesn't fully reflect that. I don't know.

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, as long as an individual is able to take out a permit book, regardless if he has production that year or not, he's able to vote, and that is a continuing process that takes place. Just to make that blanket statement is completely erroneous.

Mr. Horner: I just wanted to pose a quick question to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. If you had a group of small family farms in the province of Alberta – and I would hope someone would define for me one day what a family farm is. Let's say you had a group of them together. They were wheat growers, and they wanted to start their own flour mill. Would you be opposed to the fact that they could combine their production of, say, five or six families into a nice little co-operative, which I'm sure the hon. member would support, and have their wheat flow into there without any interference by any other force, create a flour, and sell it into the marketplace? Would you be opposed to that, hon. member?

Mr. Mason: I would think it would be great to establish that kind of co-operative, and I'm sure that the Wheat Board would be happy to supply them with all they wanted.

Mr. Horner: Mr. Speaker, if the Wheat Board were to decline such an opportunity for those farmers, if the Wheat Board were to say, "No, you cannot; you must sell it to me first, and we'll add on what we want and sell it right back to you," would you be opposed to that, hon. member?

Mr. Mason: I just said: they could buy the wheat that they wanted from the Wheat Board.

The Deputy Speaker: Can we get back to the motion? The hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Lund: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I want to take this opportunity to thank the hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for bringing this forward and giving us an opportunity to discuss it and to send a clear message to the legislators in Ottawa about the inequity that many of us have to face out here simply because of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Now, I want to make it very clear that years back the Canadian Wheat Board served a very good function. Back in those days we used to produce and take it to the gate and expect somebody else to pick it up and market it. But those things have changed.

In fairness to the Wheat Board, they have made some baby steps in opening up. I can remember when we couldn't even sell some of our feed grain to a neighbour without processing it first. If we processed it, then we could do it legally. Of course, there was grain changing hands. Seed grain could also, but it was very small quantities that you could do.

I think there are a couple of things we need to get on the record. One, the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East commented about the court ruling. The court ruling wasn't that the federal government couldn't change it. They had to change their legislation before they could do it, and that was the ruling. They couldn't do it the way they wanted. They had to change the legislation first.

This question that I was asking the two members about: who was eligible to vote for the board members? You have to have delivered grain. I don't remember the exact quantity, but I believe it was something like 40 tonnes that you had to deliver before you could get a ballot, and you had to prove that you'd done that. Just having a permit wasn't good enough.

The comments about the minister removing a number: that was because they simply were not delivering grain to the Canadian Wheat Board. We tried to get a ballot this last time, this last election, but we couldn't because we hadn't delivered. We stopped growing grains that we had to sell through the Canadian Wheat Board.

Now, the hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert commented about a maltster that he talked to. When I was minister of agriculture, we also had a large pasta manufacturer that wanted to establish here in Alberta, but when he learned about the problems that they were going to have to go through with the Canadian Wheat Board, I believe it was North Dakota that they ended up building their plant in. That's because of the hassle to go through the Canadian Wheat Board. You've got an interim step there that costs money. It adds no value, but it's a cost to the producer.

I remember talking to the owners of the malt plant in Alix, that the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka talked about. From our farm we were shipping two cars of malt, two-row barley, and it was going to Thunder Bay. He was telling me that he was getting some two-row barley, a similar variety even, and it was coming from Manitoba to Alix. So loaded cars are meeting. Well, guess who pays for that? The farmer does. That was all because the Canadian Wheat Board also steps in if it's a maltster. You can sell feed barley – you can't sell it outside of the country; you can sell it in the country – but you can't sell malting.

Now, there's another side effect to all of this that I want to mention, and that is that in the processing and malting there are certain characteristics that the maltster wants. When you think about contracting directly with a farmer to get the exact kind of qualities, some of the qualities that you want, the maltsters are prepared to spend a lot of money on research to get the product that they want and then would of course contract back directly to the producer. So there's a huge advantage.

Now, it's kind of ironic, I guess, that we're discussing this today because one of the things that the Canadian Wheat Board does – and we're not trying to get rid of it – is they do have an initial payment, that when you deliver, you'll get that payment. Today and yesterday the grain market has been just plummeting, so those of us that won't ship through the Wheat Board, of course, we're losing quite a bit of money these last two days. It'll come back, but it does fluctuate. So that's something.

Things have changed now that we've got the Internet all through the rural area. I know on our farm we're looking at those prices hourly and watching where they're going, watching the trends, and have the ability to phone in or e-mail to the buyer, and out comes a contract, sign the contract, send it back, and that's how the system works. But if you're going to go through the Wheat Board, you've first got to sign a contract.

I can tell you right today that there is a huge problem developing. There is a large grain purchaser at Joffre. The Canadian Wheat Board had a contract that they put out for wheat back in the fall, and it actually was a pretty good price compared to what they had been paying, a long ways from the $8 that was in Chicago, but it was not too bad. That plant at Joffre: there were a million tonnes that had been contracted through there. They haven't delivered one bushel yet. Here we are in the middle of March, and the crop year ends, of course, the end of July. We don't know what's going to happen to all of those contracts. I guess the board will take it sometime, but the poor farmer is now stuck with that on his property. He can't move it, and he's got no cash flow, so he's got another big problem, and it's all because we don't have choice.

If you're going to grow that kind of product and sell it, you're going to have to go through the board. On our farm we've just stopped growing those products. We've gone to canola, a little bit of oats now that oats are out of the board, peas, and, of course, feed barley. The board has outlived its usefulness.

Another thing where it was handy for the federal government was the floor price. At times the floor price had been set too high, so the federal government would step in and cover the shortfall. That disappeared – I don't know – 10, 12 years ago, so there is no advantage there.

One of the other things that they did, though, to help eastern Canada and to keep the farmers down there quiet was the Crow rate. They would take feed grain from western Canada, ship it down to Ontario, and we would have to ship our feeder cattle down there to eat the grain that was grown here in Alberta. It makes absolutely no sense. But that's gone, thank goodness.

I would urge all members to support this motion so that we can send a very strong message to our colleagues in Ottawa. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions.

Mr. Mason: I appreciated the hon. member's comments. When I talk to farmers, what I hear is the tremendous difference between the input costs that they have to pay, so for their fuel, their fertilizer, and a number of things – all of their input costs keep going up, and they can't control those. Then the price they receive for what they produce doesn't cover their input costs or doesn't leave them any margin. Of course, people work now at multiple jobs just to keep the farms going. My question to the hon. member is: does he not see some role for marketing boards in helping the farmers get a return that will cover their input costs plus a reasonable margin?

Mr. Lund: Don't confuse this with a marketing board or supply management. Oh, I shouldn't say that because, really, what the Wheat Board does is it prevents you from forward contracting and all of those things, so in some ways, yeah, it's supply management. Your supply of opportunity is diminished because you've got to go through the Wheat Board.

The input costs: yes, that's a problem. But I don't know what kind of board you're talking about that would be able to solve that problem. There's everything from your machinery to your labour costs to your fuel costs, and the list goes on.

One of the things, of course, that's really going to cause a problem for us is all of the so-called climate change/clean stuff. We bought a tractor a year ago, partly to get ahead of what's coming. Diesel motors now all will have a thing on them where they put urea into the exhaust, which is supposed to clean it up. It does nothing for the efficiency of the motor. It does nothing to reduce your costs. As a matter of fact, it increases it. The tractor that I'm familiar with costs around $300,000. With this urea thing on, it's an additional $30,000.

Another thing that's coming up, the biofuels. They're not as efficient as our low-sulphur diesel, so that's going to be an additional cost.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Highwood to comment.

Mr. Groeneveld: I assume time is short, but I would just like the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House to comment to help some people with the voting process, dealing with the fact that so many of our young people that have gotten out of the barley and wheat business because of the Wheat Board don't have a permit book anymore, have no ability to vote, and wouldn't even if they could right now. Would you comment on that?

Mr. Lund: Thanks, hon. member. I made the comment that we on our farm were wanting to get an opportunity to vote because this time we could have voted for somebody that was wanting to implement change and give the farmers the opportunity, but by the time we would apply for the permit and deliver the grain, it was too late. They mail out the ballot – archaic, but that's the way they do it – and we just missed out on the opportunity.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's truly an honour today to rise and speak in support of Government Motion 11 and to talk about the importance of Bill C-619 at the federal level and how that will really, I feel, if passed federally, be a boost to agriculture here in the province of Alberta. It's a great opportunity – and I've enjoyed the discussion so far in the House here – to talk about the importance of choice, to talk about the importance of the free market.

I guess I just want to start by referring back to the principles of prosperity and where that root is. It's never been rooted in a government that wants to regulate an industry. We can look at many of the Eastern bloc countries, where government stepped in and confiscated the land and redistributed it amongst the citizens and said: you can have stewardship over this land, but we're going to be the ones to tell you what and where and how and when to grow your crops. Those people, basically, were put into a situation where they couldn't even feed themselves, and they had to import grain from such great countries as Canada, the U.S., Australia, where the free market was somewhat allowed and agricultural producers were efficient and could produce for their own benefit.

I think that one of the things that we've maybe got a little bit off on in this discussion is that we've talked against the Canadian Wheat Board. I must, again, agree. In my previous life I was a farmer. I can't remember if it was in 1989 that I quit. I was so disgusted that I never renewed my permit book and went straight off Canadian Wheat Board grains so that I wouldn't have to deal with them because I was so frustrated with them. They were one of the reasons that I actually got involved in politics, along with many other government restrictions that didn't allow for myself as an individual to be an entrepreneurial businessman, that I wanted to be. I invested in a hay-cubing plant way back then so that we could start exporting and growing our hay. There have just been many aspects.

The important thing is that Bill C-619 is not an attack on the Wheat Board. What it does is that you're allowed you to opt out. It's an option. Let's say that 80 per cent of Alberta farmers did want to stay with the Canadian Wheat Board. It's there for them. This isn't an attack, to say that we're going to destroy it; we're going to take it away. Thou shalt not grow grain for the Wheat Board. It's just the opposite. It's that freedom. It's allowing for that entrepreneurial farmer, who realizes that in the U.K. there's a selenium deficiency and there's a need for high-selenium wheat. So he does his research, and he realizes: "You know what? I live in a region where there is a high selenium content. I've done the extra work on analyzing my wheat, and I meet the criteria of high-selenium wheat." But can he now go over to Great Britain and say, "Here's the product that you're out looking for on the market; I'd like to sell to you"? No.

The biggest problem that we see, Mr. Speaker, when we don't allow that freedom, that entrepreneur, that risk taker – farmers are incredibly high risk takers. When you look at the capital that they actually have invested in their business versus the return on that capital, it truly is a miracle that we have agricultural producers that are willing to stay out there and continue to work the land and enjoy that lifestyle.

We want that entrepreneur to be able to grab and seize a market. Whether that's rolled oats, whether it's the bioenzymes from barley or from some other product, we want them to have that freedom. With the Canadian Wheat Board it's not there.

I am familiar with some of those farmers who have actually gotten together and created a mill, yet the viability is challenged. One of the few that is still functioning is south of Magrath. The viability, though, is challenged every year because of the cost of having to buy their own grain back through the Wheat Board. It serves no purpose other than to prohibit – I shouldn't say prohibit but to make it virtually economically unviable to try to vertically integrate grain products here in western Canada. It was mentioned once, and I need to mention it again, that this is a federal law, yet it's not for the whole country. Do we or do we not live in a country where it's one law, one land? It's just wrong. It's wrong to say that the federal government is going to what I would refer to as inflict pain on western producers, to say: thou shalt pay for this Wheat Board.

Whenever we create monopolies, it generally always leads to inefficiencies in the market. The monopoly is created. The people that are there say: oh, we have this cost; we have that cost. There's no competition, and the price starts to rise.

It kind of reflects back to the hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner, who talks about Don Baron's Canada's Great Grain Robbery. I've always loved that story. Why it's such a great story is because it's true. Any time we can hand something out and say that it's free and have individuals become dependent on that only to find themselves trapped when the gate is shut and they say, "Aha, now you have to pay," there's always a day of reckoning. There's always a day when you have to pay the piper who is giving away that freedom. They give it away. That's the enticement.

It amazes me how well that continues to work today. When we look at all of the marketing of new products, of products that we need to use, whether it's cellphones, new iPads, whatever, they're more than happy to say that the first three months are free. Why? Because they want people to come and try it, and then we say that we can't live without it. They don't give it away for three free months. What they've done is reduced the price by 25 per cent over a year so that you will go into that, so you will buy into their product and try it. It's never free. There's a high cost.

It's argued by many entrepreneurial farmers, who say: there's an extremely high cost when I'm involved with the Wheat Board. The hon. member that has spoken at length about, you know, not renewing his permit book is very frustrated. There are many, many Alberta farmers who have gone that route, saying: you know, I'm not going to renew my quota book because we're going to grow other products. That has not been in the best interests of Alberta, yet the cost efficiencies have been there. To say that if they don't have this monopoly, they'll destroy their ability to market in the world is, again, fearmongering. It's scary.

The most important thing with Bill C-619 and why we need to support the federal government in doing this – it's interesting that it is an MP from Ontario who looks over into western Canada and realizes this is wrong. There's nothing more powerful than speaking out when you see an injustice being committed. When this bullying goes on, it's important that it's that third party who steps up and says, "This is bullying; we can't allow this" and speaks up on behalf of that individual or that region that's receiving those injustices.

Bill C-619 allows the freedom of choice. It allows for the free market to come back into effect in western Canada and allows our wonderful entrepreneurial businessmen to go out around the world and say: "Hey, we've got the best barley. We've got the best wheat." They're going to reach out and develop new markets that the Wheat Board would never consider doing because of the size of that market. It might be a small market of only 100 tonnes of high-selenium wheat that opens the doors to realize a new potential. It might be a vertically integrated pharmaceutical-based company that opens up the door that changes the whole dynamics of the genetic breeding of our canola, our barley, our wheat. I guess with the canola we can already do that.

Again, we saw the breakthrough in the '70s with the breeding of dwarf plants. Now what's the genetic breakthrough that we can have by putting the genetics together for valuable crops, nutritious crops for various areas of the world? Whether it's selenium or whether it's disease-based, there are many, many potentials there, but because of the Wheat Board that entrepreneurial spirit goes down south of the border. It goes to another country to set up.

Mr. Speaker, it's an honour to vote in favour of this motion. It's exciting to think that once again, after six decades, western farmers might have the opportunity to have the freedom of choice to grow their wheat where or how or when they want to do it. I'm excited to see, I guess, the overall support here in this House and look forward to sending that message to the federal government to say: yes, we support Bill C-619, and we hope that the federal legislators will pass it for the benefit of western farmers.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

See none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Little Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My comments are more as an actual grain producer. We can talk about philosophies and history all we want, but for many of us who actually produce grain – and I have for some 39 years – it comes down to dollars and cents as much as anything.

You know, in 1972, when I first started to farm, we had a variety of grains that we grew. We had some oilseeds. Over the course of years because of an interest in conservation we've switched to some hay. We have over the years switched to a lot of nonboard grains. I'll call them nonboard. Those are the ones that don't have to be marketed through the Canadian Wheat Board. The reason that our family farm did that – and I consider myself proudly a family farm. I would be one of the first that would bail if I had an option to leave the Wheat Board. I'm not a large farmer. I guess by today's standards we're somewhere between small and medium.

The fact is that when I have to grow grain and I have to market it through a Wheat Board that selects the time of the year that they'll call for so much grain, and then I only get a partial payment on that grain for the balance of the year and at some point in time finally receive what's called a final payment and, if you're really lucky, an interim adjustment in between, you finally get paid for your own inventory at some point way in the future.

Sometimes I've talked to urban cousins, and I have explained it this way: if I had a men's clothing store in Calgary or Edmonton, and I had somebody telling me that I couldn't sell all the sweaters that I had on the shelf this winter season, that I could only sell a percentage of them, would I be in that business? Would you hold that inventory and not be able to move it through and make all your commitments as a businessperson, pay your taxes and pay your operating expense and your light and your power? I don't think many of them would. If you want to further compound it, would you like to be told that you could sell 60 per cent of your inventory, but you had to sell it at about 70 per cent of what you thought the real value was, and the 70 per cent may or may not cover all the input costs of operating that business. That's a parallel that I see between operating a business in the city and farming.

You know, there were other points that made me decide I wanted an option. I'm not against having the Canadian Wheat Board there. I think they do a wonderful job selling grain internationally. There's no amount of grain that I or my neighbours will produce that could meet a big contract to Algeria when it comes to, say, durum, one of our biggest competitors. I grow durum, Mr. Speaker, which is turned into pasta, and I grow malt barley, which becomes beer, and I grow rye, which becomes drinkable rye, and I grow mustard, which is a condiment mustard that you put on your hot dogs. So I think I kind of understand where a lot of this stuff is coming from.

But what I resent more than anything is the fact that when I sell my grain, I have to sell it, if it's a board grain, through the Canadian Wheat Board through an elevator company, and I pay the freight all the way. I pay it from the time it leaves the farm till it gets to an elevator. The elevator, in turn, gives me an advance payment on behalf of the Canadian Wheat Board. In the meantime, while that grain is being transported out to a terminal, whether it's Vancouver or Thunder Bay, at any point in time there are something like 13 different unions that could hold up the movement of that grain. That puts our reputation as reliable suppliers of foodstuffs at risk, and I still have to pay the freight.

If in the meantime you want to consider how people have not advanced in today's trade technology, only about one-third of all the grain producers are actually trying to market something outside the Canadian Wheat Board.

I always come back to durum. I mentioned this earlier to one of our colleagues. I just sold two super-Bs of grain. That's about 80 tonnes, about 1,770 bushels each. That 1,776 bushels netted me $6,236, but I paid over $2,400 on top of that for artificial freight and elevator charges and holding charges for a grain that may not even get out to Vancouver. In all likelihood it's going to go from the elevator to a local flour mill in Lethbridge, Alberta, which, in turn, has to pay freight artificially for the grain to come back through the Canadian Wheat Board from a terminal in Vancouver that may not have seen that grain. So those things alone add up to a lot of cost.

In my world 28 per cent additional cost for something that isn't valid, that isn't provable, that isn't even there is a huge profit margin potential for any farm or, in the case of any of my colleagues in Alberta, an opportunity for them to stay in business whether they're big, whether they're small, or whether they're in between.

I just wanted to put that on the record, Mr. Speaker, because I do support choice. I do support the Canadian Wheat Board to the extent that I think they do a good job marketing internationally. I can't compete with that. But I do want the opportunity to sell my grain to the Alix processing plant, in the case of malt barley, without it being artificially sent somewhere else. I want the opportunity for my durum to end up in a pasta plant somewhere in Alberta without them artificially charging me as though it were to go to Vancouver and then charge that same production plant to haul it back here to turn it into pasta.

I think I've gone on long enough, but that's a point of view from an ordinary grain producer. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a) is available.

Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am aware that this tends to be very much a rural issue, but I did want to speak up on behalf of Calgary-Bow, a very urban constituency, just to express our dismay in terms of our own sense of fairness. It makes no sense to us that there would be Canadian laws that apply differently depending on whether you're an easterner or a westerner. So just basic fairness. It really offends us.

The other thing is that, you know, as urban people most of us don't actually produce that much. Maybe we do some crafts. We have artists. We have writers. Again, it really offends our sense of fairness that someone would work very, very hard to produce something and then not be free to sell it to whomever they chose to sell it to, whether it's arts, crafts, or whether it's wheat. It just really offends our sense of fairness.

I did want to say that we do wish the Canadian Wheat Board well. We also realize that if the Canadian Wheat Board had proper competition, the Canadian Wheat Board would probably be a much better organization. So we do wish them well. We want them to be the best that they can possibly be.

As a representative of the constituents of Calgary-Bow we wanted to support our rural neighbours in this motion. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available should there be questions. Comments?

The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I won't speak long on this topic, but it is my privilege to stand up and speak today in favour of Government Motion 11, which urges the members of the Canadian House of Commons to pass Bill C-619, that would provide marketing choice to western Canadian grain farmers. I would also like to thank the minister of agriculture for raising this issue in the House and for providing us the opportunity to support that initiative.

This is certainly an issue that has been talked about for many years. It's been important to Canadian agriculture producers. I think the opportunity to advance the marketing choices for western Canadian grain farmers is significant and important.

As someone who's had a permit book – I've marketed grain, board grains and nonboard grains, for many years – this isn't about criticism of the good work that the Canadian Wheat Board has done for Canadian grain farmers. But we live in a day where agriculture producers are certainly sophisticated in their ability to market the products that they grow. There are multiple examples of the success of that initiative by individual producers, as has been noted by my other colleagues. I think the opportunity to move that forward is important, and we should take advantage of it. I certainly hope that as a result of the support that's lent from this House, that will be advanced at the national level. It is an initiative that the federal government needs to move on, and I hope that we're successful in that.

As someone who has sons involved in the future of agriculture and involved in young farmer initiatives across this province, across this country, I think it's important that we give these young people a range of opportunities to do the best they can in agriculture. It's a challenging business. Certainly, in any market reality it's challenging. But adding costs unnecessarily: we need to avoid that. The opportunity here to advance this cause I think is a positive one.

With that, I would lend my support. I appreciate the comments that other members have made in favour of marketing choice. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 29(2)(a). The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Yes. I'd like to ask the hon. member – I wasn't sure whether he was there or not, but one of my proud moments as an Albertan was on October 31, 2002, when I was at a Lethbridge rally, where there were 13 farmers who did their patriotic duty to say no to a law that wasn't, I guess, applicable to all Canadians, and they went to jail. There were different members, I believe, in the House that were there at that time. I'm just wondering what his thoughts were on those individuals that have fought this law for a long time and, if he was there at that rally, how he felt about it back in 2002.

The Speaker: Hon. member, if you wish.

Mr. Doerksen: Well, thank you for that question from the Member for Calgary-Glenmore. In fact, I wasn't there. I didn't have a permit book at the time. In fact, I believe I was on the board of the Alberta Beef Producers at the time and working on behalf of Alberta cattle producers on a range of issues. But I was certainly aware of that initiative. I guess that's part of the history that I spoke of and that others have spoken of, and it's important that we take opportunities to advance that cause.

I mean, you look at the level of sophistication of agriculture and the importance of that. There have been comments about the family farm, but that doesn't and can't compromise the level of sophistication that agriculture producers need to bring to this business. Whether it's a family farm or an individual or a large company, the importance of these issues is similar. I think that we need to advance the cause of agriculture from that perspective, looking forward, not trying to protect something that was yesterday's approach to business.

I'm not criticizing that in any way, but the importance of looking forward and making sure that we've got the regulatory framework in place to allow and to encourage people to succeed as a result of their own hard work and initiative: those are the things that have been the highlights of the success of Canadian agriculture and Alberta agriculture for many years. I look forward to that continuing as a result of the things that happen in this House as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you for that answer. I guess the reason I was wondering about that is because, you know, with the transportation inequities that were there, it had a major impact on the beef industry, I guess, before that was changed, where we were losing our grain to the east and then our cattle going to the east to follow the grain because of that. So that's why I thought that perhaps you'd be involved.

Do you see any downside to the beef industry, then, with the opening up of the freedom of choice for whether or not you participate in the Wheat Board?

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you for that question. The Member for Calgary-Glenmore makes a good point with regard to the fact that inasmuch as single-desk selling keeps feed grain prices low, it was good for cattle producers. I recall during that time frame that some friends of mine, some people I knew well, made the argument also in the Canadian agriculture press that, in fact, the Wheat Board in fact was favourable to the livestock feeding industry in this province, whether it was hogs or beef.

I think the big picture with regard to livestock producers is, in fact, the importance of access to international markets, and inasmuch as single-desk selling was raised as a concern at WTO and those types of discussions, it's a concern for Canadian beef producers. In that light, the opportunity for choice and the opportunity to advance markets and to make it easier to get in and stay in markets is extremely important. The argument that was made was there, but I think the opportunities are in choice.

The Speaker: Additional comments or questions?

Hon. members that exhausts our speaking list unless there's an additional member who would like to participate.

Shall I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate March 1: Dr. Brown]

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, I'm pleased to rise today to speak to Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. Family violence has devastating consequences for many people in our province. Preventing and addressing family violence remains an important priority for our government so that all Albertans feel safe in their communities and homes.

The Protection Against Family Violence Act provides for the safety of individuals and families affected by family violence through protection orders to protect those who have experienced family violence and to prevent further violence. The most significant amendments to the act are to add provisions for prosecuting breaches of these orders. Currently breaches are prosecuted through civil contempt or the Criminal Code, where the penalties available vary considerably. The proposed changes will clearly spell out in the act that breaching a protection order is an offence with specific consequences, helping to ensure consistent enforcement across the province.

If this bill is made law, Alberta's penalties for violations of protection orders will be among the strongest in Canada, which will send a strong message to perpetrators that breaches will not be tolerated. These changes reflect advice and feedback the province has received from key stakeholders, including police and the courts.

Mr. Speaker, if passed, the proposed amendments will improve our response to this issue, increase protection for individuals and families affected by family violence, and hold those who breach protection orders accountable. I ask that all members of the Assembly show strong support for Bill 2 to help ensure that Albertans are better protected from the threat of family violence.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. It's a pleasure to get this opportunity to speak on Bill 2 as presented to the Assembly by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill. Certainly, our research on this side of the House indicates that this amendment act has the goal of establishing clear penalties for people who breach the emergency protection orders, with the intent that this will send a clear, strong message that family violence is, once again, totally unacceptable.

This legislation will make it clear what penalties there should be when an emergency protection order is breached by the respondent; in other words, an abusive family member. Prior to this the breach of the emergency protection order was dealt with under civil contempt proceedings or under section 127 of the Criminal Code, which states that it is an offence to breach an order of the court.

These two avenues, Mr. Speaker, do not specifically address family violence, and there was a wide variance in what penalties were used for breaches of emergency protection orders. Certainly, it is our view that Bill 2 clarifies the evidence which a Court of Queen's Bench justice must consider when reviewing the emergency protection order that was granted by the Provincial Court.

I think this bill as presented is certainly a step in the right direction. The majority of this bill is, one would consider, housekeeping in nature from a legislative drafting process, but there are six areas – I think there are six, Mr. Speaker – or sections dealing with changes to the Protection Against Family Violence Act, and these are all meant to make it in line with other legislation, again, to clarify issues that have arisen since the act was put into force. The main changes are removing the term “designated justice of the peace” and making it simply “justice of the peace” and clarifying what type of contact can be restrained in the emergency protection order and what evidence a justice at the Court of Queen's Bench must take into consideration.

Now, one amendment of note to this act is the inclusion of offences and penalties for the person who breaks the terms of the emergency protection order. This change, it is our view, will make it clear that family violence is a societal problem and that there need to be clear, defined penalties for those who break the emergency protection orders. I think everyone in this Assembly, Mr. Speaker, should consider supporting this bill as this will provide more certainty to the court in what they can consider as evidence and what type of contact is not allowed under an EPO, or emergency protection order, and it will also provide more clarity on what the penalties are for breaking that emergency protection order.

Certainly, I think the members on this side of the House will be supporting this piece of legislation, which deals with the unfortunate circumstances around family violence. I would like to get on the record and thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill for his work on this, and I will listen with interest to what other members of the Assembly have to say regarding this bill. I think it is something that we on this side of the House can support.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was the third spokesperson. That means that 29(2)(a) kicks in. Any questions?

Then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to have the opportunity to speak to Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. This bill takes great strides to improve protection available for individuals and families affected by family violence. Also, it goes beyond the awareness campaigns which are held every year in November.

The main element of this particular bill is in the introduction of offence provisions and the strong penalties for those who violate protection orders. Mr. Speaker, under the current Protection Against Family Violence Act protection orders can be issued to help protect abused persons and to prevent further violence, but if an abuser violates a protection order, current enforcement options vary, and they are applied inconsistently. The amendments within Bill 2 will add the offences and penalties right into this act, strengthening the legislation to show that breaches of protection orders are serious, with specific consequences.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that the proposed penalties reflect what government learned from reviewing domestic violence legislation from across Canada and from consulting with police and the courts right here in our province. The penalties proposed in the amendments include a $5,000 fine and possible jail time of up to 90 days for the first offence, mandatory jail time of 14 days to 18 months for a second offence, and of 30 days to approximately 24 months for third and subsequent offences. These penalties will be among the strongest in the country. Imposing mandatory jail time for subsequent offences sends a strong message that breaches of protection orders will not be tolerated and will have severe consequences.

The Protection Against Family Violence Act was first proclaimed in 1999. It was then amended in 2006 to include the following: to add stalking to the definition of family violence, provide a better definition of what constitutes family violence, broaden who is protected under the act, protect vulnerable people, including seniors, and remove barriers that prevented children from getting counselling and treatment. These changes increased the effectiveness of the act and helped to make communities across the province safer and demonstrated that the government is truly committed to ensuring that our legislation continues to evolve to meet the needs of families affected by violence.

Mr. Speaker, a recent report from Statistics Canada said that incidents of criminal harassment or stalking have been gradually rising in Canada over the past 10 years. By adding stalking to our legislation in 2006, we helped to make sure that those who are stalked or harassed can get the protection they need to feel safe in their homes and communities. Through the amendments proposed in Bill 2 we will take another step forward, Mr. Speaker, to help make sure that those who do violate protection orders understand the severity of their actions and that penalties applied reflect the significance of this activity.

Mr. Speaker, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act contains changes that will indeed improve protection for families and strengthen our legislation. I ask that all members of the Assembly strongly support Bill 2.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

I have no additional speakers on this. The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East to participate in the debate?

Ms Pastoor: Yes.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. One of the things that I'd like to mention right off the bat, before I go into some other comments – I'd like to repeat a comment that was made by Jan Reimer of the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters. This is a woman who, since she has stepped down as the mayor of Edmonton, has devoted all of her energies to looking after and bringing forward the necessity, which is unfortunate, for women's shelters. She said that people who aid victims of domestic violence have long been unhappy about the lack of consequences for abusers who breach emergency protection orders. She also states that she hopes the bill will encourage police to lay criminal charges when people do breach protection orders. One of the other things that I was pleased to see is that it isn't just physical contact that would fall under that. It is also any kind of contact.

Anyone who has worked in this particular area will understand how easy it is for the perpetrator of the abuse to be able to still have a tremendous hold over that person, and of course it's even worse when there are children because they're caught between the mother and the father. Even when parents are really bad parents, the kids still only have those two people as parents, so they're torn, and they're upset. Then they've got the father that will come and make all sorts of promises. It's a vicious, vicious circle that goes around. Very, very unfortunate. I'm sorry that we don't have even more women's shelters because the need out there is so great. I believe that Alberta has the third-highest rate of family violence in Canada, which is certainly nothing to be proud of.

The Protection Against Family Violence Act has been in force since 1999, but in 2006 it was amended so that additional protections were granted to victims of family violence such as improved protection against stalking and protection of relatives regardless of whether they're living with the victim, and it clarified when an emergency protection order can be granted.

Most of the amendments that are coming forward with the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act are of a housekeeping nature except for the new provisions to include a specific offences and penalties section for breaches of an emergency protection order. They're not easy to get, the emergency protection orders. There is a process that sometimes takes time. I'm glad that we can now have not a designated – what's the word? – justice of the peace but, rather, just one that can be used.

Often people will show up after midnight at women's shelters. It doesn't happen in the afternoon, when it's really easy to get hold of people within the justice system. The women that come need time. It's not just a 24-hour process. They need time. Some even need as much as three weeks just to be able to figure out what's going on. They're frightened. They're scared, their kids are upset, and it takes a long time and well-trained people to work with them to be able to get them on their feet so that they can say: "No. I won't put up with this again. There are other things that I can do to make it good for my children and myself. We don't have to go back to this." Although many still do, which is very, very unfortunate.

The emergency protection order is a tool that can be used to immediately address the safety of victims of family violence. It can provide that the abuser has no contact or communication with the victim and that the victim can stay at the residence while the abuser is not able to and other conditions that can provide for the immediate safety of the victim and the family members. When the women and their children go back to the house, unless these women can feel absolutely safe, they're always looking over their shoulder, they're always nervous, they don't sleep, and they're very mixed up.

Again, that circle of abuse can continue even if it isn't being done by the perpetrator of the abuse. It happens in the women's minds because they don't have that security. If they know that some have actually been prosecuted for breaking this emergency protection order, hopefully it will give them a little bit of security so that they can then try to go forward and not always have to be looking over their shoulders.

An emergency protection order can be obtained at no cost. Children and Youth Services caseworkers and the police can apply for it within 24 hours, seven days a week. Victims can also apply at the Provincial Court during court hours. If the EPO is obtained, it's always scheduled to be reviewed within nine working days, and this allows for the emergency protection order to be extended or to be changed to a Queen's Bench protection order. The Queen's Bench protection order can only be applied for by the victim and not by the caseworkers or police. I'm glad that it takes that long because most times the women involved are often very, very hesitant about bringing forth charges because they're still frightened.

The Edmonton Police Service has stated that they investigated 6,700 cases of spousal abuse in 2010, and in 2008 they investigated 4,000 cases. Clearly, this trend is going up. I'm not sure why, but I know that there are people doing research to answer that question. Often in boom times it happens, but it also happens in the bust times, when people are under such pressure. I'm hoping that the research would come forward and we could get some kind of an answer so that we could prevent some of this ahead of time or, in fact, allow some women to know what the signs are before they'd even marry people. Often the signs are there, but because love is blind and often very blind, they marry people that are just not suitable for them.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I'll take my seat. I think this is a very, very important bill. Hopefully, those numbers that I just spoke about in terms of spousal abuse will be able to be decreased all through this province, not just in Edmonton.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

To the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, there was a quotation from a document. Would you kindly table the document tomorrow in the House so all members can have it?

Ms Pastoor: Yes.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a second time]

Bill 3 Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate March 10: Ms Notley]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to indicate my support for Bill 3 and the role that it will play in advancing the geological and geophysical professions in this province. The present act, the Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Act, regulates three related professional groups: professional engineers, professional geologists, and professional geophysicists. With changing technology and the growth of the oil and gas industry in Alberta these latter two professions are sharing more and more common ground – pardon the pun – these days, so bringing them together under a single, broader nomenclature makes abundant sense.

Alberta is also unique in Canada in that 90 per cent of the geophysicists in Canada practise in Alberta. None of the other provinces have separate designations for geologists and geophysicists. Aligning designations nationally will facilitate professional administration under the agreement on internal trade as well as within the professional associations.

On concerns expressed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona about TILMA, I think it is fair to say that most professional associations had some initial concerns about TILMA and the potential for having a difficult time exercising their professional responsibilities across provincial borders. As I understand it, these concerns have all been worked out, and I believe all of the Alberta professional associations are quite comfortable with the arrangements under TILMA.

If passed, this amendment act will combine the existing professional geologist and professional geophysicist classifications in Alberta into a single new class to be known as professional geoscientists. These professional designations are granted by the Association of Professional Engineers, Geologists and Geophysicists of Alberta, or APEGGA, which approved these proposed changes in 2009. As my colleague the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon has indicated, these proposed changes are important to Albertans since we will all continue to benefit from the acceptance of professional responsibility for work done in these areas by qualified geoscientists.

Having a licensed, accountable professional in the position of approving work is the key to providing public safety in any field, whether it's engineering, land surveying, medicine, law, or, in this case, geoscience. That is the basis of professionalism, and it is the reason why the province grants regulatory organizations such as APEGGA the right to regulate those who work in the profession. As a government it is our responsibility to ensure that the safety and protection of the public is maintained. We continue to do that through the regulations of the professionals we entrust to protect the safety and well-being of the people of Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, it is important to note that the professional associations bear a huge governmental responsibility, relieving government of the cost and burden of maintaining competent professionals to deliver these highly technical and specialized services to Albertans. In exchange, however, for granting professional associations an exclusive field of practice and protection of title, those associations have a responsibility to ensure that their memberships are, firstly, qualified academically as well as experientially to engage in the practice of the profession but, more importantly, to ensure that those members, once admitted to practice, maintain their competency and keep up to date with changing technology and knowledge. This challenge, I would submit, requires not just vigilance on the part of the professional association but, more importantly, in the ethical pursuit of the specialty by the practitioner.

Just to capsulize the responsibility of the self-governing profession, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to offer this quote from Everett Hughes. "In place of the cautionary admonition of the market place – caveat emptor (let the buyer beware!) professional practice should substitute the encouraging injunction – credat emptor, (let the buyer trust!)"

Mr. Speaker, by passing this bill, we are also living up to commitments that have been made by the province regarding the interprovincial mobility of labour. Professional geoscientists are needed here. Our economy relies on their expertise and the innovative techniques that they use to explore, locate, and develop valuable natural resources. This proposed act builds on the expertise by creating an up-to-date and comprehensive scope of practice for Alberta's geoscience profession. It also allows the interprovincial mobility of geoscientists from other provinces to fill Alberta's demand for skilled professionals in this field.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.
The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, Bill 3, in light of what has happened across the globe in Japan, is to say the least an interesting draft of legislation for us when you consider that the definition of geoscience includes all the sciences – geology, geophysics, geochemistry – that study the structure, evolution, and dynamics of Planet Earth and its natural mineral and energy resources. Geoscience investigates the processes that shaped the Earth through its 4,600 million year history and uses the rock record to unravel that history. It is concerned with the real world beyond the lab and has direct relevance to the needs of our society.

Now, modern geoscience is founded on plate tectonics theory, which states that the outer part of the Earth, the lithosphere, is composed of a series of interlocking plates in relative motion. All geological processes such as mountain building and earthquake and volcanic activity are directly or indirectly related to the motions of the plates.

Geoscience. Across Canada there appears to be widespread acceptance of the umbrella terminology "geoscience," and other hon. members in debate so far have certainly covered that with Bill 3 and the changes to rename the act the Engineering and Geoscience Professions Act and rename the association which administers these professions to the Association of Professional Engineers and Geoscientists of Alberta. It would be APEGA, with one G, as I understand it.

Certainly, with what's going on in Japan, I'm certain that the members of this organization or body would probably be going there to study not only the effects of the earthquake but also the tsunami that followed quickly afterwards. I'm confident in saying that some of our engineers will probably be watching closely three of the four nuclear reactors that are located very close to tidewater and how they have been affected by these unfortunate events. In our part of the world we may forget sometimes the importance of sound engineering and how important it is that we follow not only sound engineering practices but that we ensure that our engineering professions are protected. By that, I mean the integrity of the academic programs. There are many people who want to shift a lot of our engineering offshore, and I'm not convinced the standards are the same in some of those locations as they are here.

With that, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to caution all hon. members of this Assembly that through our education system we train some very, very able people under the professions that we have earlier discussed with Bill 3, and I think that that should and hopefully will continue.

Now, this certainly is a lengthy bill. Bill 3, I think, if I am correct, is just changing the various geological fields, as we said, and grouping them under the single name, the one name "geoscience." Hopefully, this will work out for everyone concerned, and I would like it to formally be on the record that I appreciate the efforts of the Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon on this.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available.

I have no additional speakers. Shall I call on the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon to close the debate?

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have been listening intently to the comments made by my colleagues. As I alluded to in my previous comments, this is just a straightforward process of harmonizing our professional geoscience legislation with that of other jurisdictions and, in so doing, fostering labour mobility across our country.

Mr. Speaker, I look forward to further discussion in Committee of the Whole. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a second time]

Bill 4 Securities Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate March 1: Dr. Brown]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've just got to find my notes here. Bill 4, the Securities Amendment Act, 2011, also proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, is certainly an interesting bill. I have a lot of questions about this bill, and I appreciate the opportunity to speak at this time.

These amendments harmonize the passport system that originated six years ago in a memorandum of understanding between the federal and provincial governments. I don't think Ontario was included in that. The amendments here also support Canada's conversion to the international financial reporting standards. We are looking at creating a framework for regulating credit-rating organizations with this legislation. Bill 4 will also allow the Alberta Securities Commission to impose sanctions for late filing of disclosure. That is more similar to the British Columbia model. I believe there are also further amendments to ensure that Alberta's registration regime is harmonized with the other provinces.

Now, there certainly has been some interest in this bill. I had an individual phone me yesterday regarding this legislation. I had to inform this individual that I was sorry, that I had not had an opportunity to look at this bill in as much detail as I would have liked. I know this legislation has been discussed around the drafting table by the government. Probably the lawyers and Alberta Justice were diligent since last fall in preparing this legislative proposal for the House. But I had to inform this individual that I had not had a chance to have a look at it yet, that that's not the usual practice of this government. He was astonished to learn that, and he thought that was unfair, Mr. Speaker. He thought that all members of the House would be updated as this bill worked its way through the drafting process. He also was of the opinion that:

oh, well; it'll go to a committee, and the committee can have a look at it. I told him, with all due respect, that that, too, was wishful thinking.

This legislation certainly will allow for the harmonization or the mutual recognition of securities regulators in Canada throughout the passport system. Now, amendments have been made to securities legislation each and every year, that I'm aware of, since 2004. This happens across the country to bring the language of the legislation into a common baseline. There's a lot of back and forth, as they say, between the provinces . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, excuse me. You will be recognized again when this matter returns, but the Assembly now stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

I would advise all members that the policy field committee will reconvene in 30 minutes from now in this Assembly, at 6:30 p.m., for consideration of the main estimates of Tourism, Parks and Recreation, and that meeting will be video streamed.

So we will meet again tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, March 16, 2011

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. As Canadians and as Albertans we give thanks for the precious gifts of freedom and peace which we enjoy. We give further thanks for the gifts of culture and heritage which we share. As Members of this Legislative Assembly we rededicate ourselves to the valued traditions of parliamentary democracy as a means of serving our province and our country. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Visitors

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a man who has inspired millions of people with his courage and his vision. Twenty-five years ago his Man in Motion World Tour did what many people thought was impossible. He rolled his wheelchair around the entire globe to raise awareness of spinal cord injuries. He showed Canada and the entire world what can be done when someone has heart, determination, and courage to make it happen.

Over the past 25 years his foundation has helped raise money to fund important spinal cord research that is changing the lives of so many people. Now, 25 years later, he is planning another Man in Motion marathon across Canada. He is honorary chair of the Alberta Premier's advisory council for persons with disabilities and is here today to raise awareness of his upcoming relay. He is seated in your gallery. He's accompanied by Mr. Mark Aston and Nadine Jarry. I would ask Rick Hansen to give us a wave and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly. [Standing ovation]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two introductions to make this afternoon. First of all, it's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly members of the Brooks composite high school jazz band. They were in Edmonton this morning to compete in a jazz band competition and have taken the opportunity to come and observe question period with us here today. They are accompanied by their teacher, Mr. Brian Stone, and parent helper Mrs. Karen Peters. I'd ask them all to rise and enjoy the warm welcome of this Assembly. They're in the visitors' gallery.

My second introduction, Mr. Speaker, is to introduce southern Alberta irrigation districts representatives. They were in Edmonton this morning to provide the Premier with an educational video series called The Story of Water Management on the Bow River. They are the chairman of the Bow River irrigation district, Mr. Harold Unruh; the vice-chairman of the Bow River irrigation district, Mr. Ron Schlaht; the BRID manager, Mr. Richard Phillips; the chairman of the Western irrigation district, Mr. Dan Shute; a director of the Western irrigation district, Mr. Doug Brown; as well as the executive manager of the Western irrigation district,

Mr. Jim Webber. They are accompanied up there in the members' gallery as well by Mr. Mike Scarth, who is the executive director of the Alberta WaterPortal, and Mr. Jim Dau. They're all standing, and I'd invite you all to give them a warm welcome to the Assembly this afternoon.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege for me to honour a great Albertan who's actually joined my office for the short term of a week, filling in for another staff member. Sherry Wynnnyk works in the correspondence management unit at Housing and Urban Affairs, and tomorrow is actually her second anniversary with the government of Alberta. She's a strong advocate for animal rights, which makes for a lot of interesting conversation. I try not to hold it against her that she's a fan of both the Edmonton Oilers and the Edmonton Eskimos. Please join me in welcoming Sherry to this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mountain View.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to introduce to you and to all members two new friends from Calgary, Christopher Tahn and Vivian Jones. In 2005 Mr. Tahn volunteered in relief efforts in New Orleans, Louisiana, following the Katrina and Rita hurricanes. That experience inspired him to pursue his dream of providing equipment and services designed to mitigate loss of life and property from natural and man-made disasters through his company, EnviroDam Canada, a made-in-Alberta emergency service solution provider. Ms Jones served first as a nurse and as an addictions counsellor at Alberta Health Services adult addiction services in Calgary. She personally assessed and counselled over 100,000 Albertans in her 30-plus years, focusing primarily on skill development, group therapy, and addictions behaviour. She has selflessly dedicated her life to the health and well-being of others, and we're grateful for her service. I'd ask all members to give them the usual welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly Eric Musekamp and Darlene Dunlop of the Farmworkers Union. As a paid farm worker Eric deserves the same protection from occupational health and safety and WCB legislation as all other workers in Alberta. I'm glad that they're here today to help us celebrate farm safety week. I would ask all members to extend the traditional warm welcome.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members individuals representing the Alberta Federation of Labour: Joanne O'Hare, a member of the Canadian Union of Public Employees 3550; Xavier Cattarinich from the Calgary Workers' Resource Centre; Alex Shevalier, Calgary & District Labour Council representative. Our caucus had the pleasure today of meeting with these members to discuss women's equivalency and women's rights in the workplace. I can tell you that they are truly remarkable Albertans, and I strongly believe that as a result of their efforts we are moving towards our goal of greater labour equality for women. I would like all members of this House to extend the traditional welcome to the three individuals standing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature members of the Nigeria Association of Alberta. The Nigeria Association is a not-for-profit group established in 1985 by Nigerian-Canadian professionals with the aim of providing a conducive environment for their generation and future generations of Nigerians who want to make Edmonton home. The association helps nourish a united community to promote Nigerian cultural heritage. I would like to welcome the members of the Nigeria Association of Alberta, who are seated in the public gallery, to the Legislature. I would ask that they rise as I read their names to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: Dr. Mike Afara, Ikechukwu Okoro, Dr. Bede Eke, Dr. Patrick Iroegbu, William Nwaribe, Cajetan Ngede, and Dr. Eugene Nnamani. I apologize for the pronunciations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature two representatives of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. We met today as part of the Alberta Federation of Labour's lobby day and, like the previous member, had a good discussion on issues around women's rights and equality. These particular members work in the building trades. I find it interesting that as we are talking about the need to increase the number of temporary foreign workers and foreign workers in the province and at the same time have a huge wage gap between men and women in this province, we haven't done more to increase the number of women in the trades. These women serve as a fabulous example. I would now ask Amber Gaddy and Robyn Schaapman, who are seated in the members' gallery, I believe, to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Sustainable Resource Development.

Mr. Knight: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is a pleasure and a surprise for me today to be able to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly a very good friend and colleague of mine that I notice is in the members' gallery. Mr. Tom Burton has been a very long-time public supporter from the point of view of municipal representation, worked in the fire department in the community of DeBolt, worked tirelessly in the recreation area with respect to that whole community around DeBolt. I'd ask Tom to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Water Management on the Bow River

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This morning a number of colleagues and I had the opportunity to participate in the premiere of a new educational video series, The Story of Water Management on the Bow River. This premiere is timely as this is Canada Water Week, when all of us are reminded of the importance and significance of water to the things we do every day.

Water is a primary resource in southern Alberta as it is the lifeblood of much of the economic and people activity in the region.

Mr. Speaker, it was an eye for opportunity that initiated the construction of irrigation infrastructure on the Bow River more than a hundred years ago and has resulted in the dynamic and balanced development of this region in the interests of agriculture, industry, and people, and it is opportunity that will continue that growth into the future. Innovative, efficient, responsible, and increased use of the precious resource, water, will make that growth possible.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the Eastern irrigation district, the Bow River irrigation district, and the Western irrigation district for their foresight in producing this educational series of videos and the Alberta WaterPortal for agreeing to host it on their website. It highlights for all Albertans a better understanding of the important linkages between rural and urban Alberta created by wise stewardship of water and the many benefits that have occurred because of conservation efforts on the Bow River.

I would encourage all hon. members to visit www.albertawater.com to view the videos and learn more detail about the story of water management in the Bow basin and trust you will encourage your schools and community groups to do the same. This high-quality video series very effectively links the proud history with the dynamic of today and a bright and optimistic future for residents of southern Alberta. I would like to table a copy of the video series if I could, Mr. Speaker.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Gender Equality

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today the Alberta Federation of Labour is making the government aware that Albertan women are falling behind in gender equality. This unfairness is felt at all levels of society as on average women earn 72 cents for every dollar that a man earns, and Alberta women with university degrees earn only 67 per cent of the wages earned by men with similar degrees. At the same time Alberta families headed by females alone are the most vulnerable, with the highest lone-parent poverty rate in Canada. Alberta is the only federal, provincial, or territorial jurisdiction in Canada that does not have any institutional voice for women on women's issues and gender analysis of policy. The Alberta government is lagging behind other provinces in acting to address gender inequality.

Mr. Speaker, our province needs to improve family leave benefits and child care spaces so that women and our mothers may have the freedom to choose to raise their families without negatively impacting their careers or the well-being of their children, our future. Women's voices must be heard if this unfair treatment is to end. We have a very distinguished history of women pioneers in this province from the Famous Five to the Hon. Lois Hole and many elected women in this Legislature today, some of them ministers.

Alberta used to be at the forefront of the fight for equality. It is time for Alberta to take that leadership role back in this nation. The Alberta Federation of Labour hopes that this government and all Albertans join together and take action now to end gender inequality.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Nanotechnology Guinness World Record Achievement

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to take this moment to tell the members of this Assembly about a recent technological achievement in Alberta. More to the point, this achievement has earned a spot in the Guinness book of world records. Specifically, Dr. Robert Wolkow and his research team members, Dr. Mohamed Rezeq and Dr. Jason Pitters, at Canada's National Institute for Nanotechnology in Alberta have created the world's sharpest object. They achieved this milestone using patented fabrication technology.

Of course, we all know the importance of a fine edge on a tool. Well, Alberta really does have the finest edge possible on the smallest tool one could ever imagine. The world's sharpest object is a valuable tool in the specific scientific discipline of nanotechnology, where it allows for more accurate electron microscopes.

Many Albertans may be surprised to learn that nanotechnology research has been going on at our universities for decades. Alberta researchers were in on the ground floor of this new and emerging science, and to help us stay ahead of the pack, our government continues to support nanotechnology research and commercialization.

Mr. Speaker, the creation of the world's sharpest object is only one of the exciting projects going on in Alberta's nanotechnology community. Hitachi, the world's leading manufacturer of electron microscopes, is working with the National Institute for Nanotechnology and the University of Alberta to commercialize improved instruments using these sharper scanning probes. Acticoat bandages using nanosilver particles are manufactured in Alberta, and they are used world-wide. GE is working with Alberta researchers to use nanotechnology in applications that reduce the environmental impact of industry on our air and water. And right now students in Alberta universities and technical colleges are learning about nanotechnology and preparing for exciting careers in the field.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to extend my thanks to Dr. Wolkow and his team. Finally, I would encourage all Albertans to learn more about Alberta's burgeoning nanotechnology community at nanoalberta.ca.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Immigrant Nominee Program

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this week our government was proud to announce the changes to the Alberta immigrant nominee program. This change will not only make applying easier for temporary foreign workers with Alberta trade certification; it will also strengthen our province's workforce.

Each year the federal government caps the number of new AINP nominees to Alberta at 5,000. This relatively low number means that Alberta needs to make the most of our newcomers who want to live and work in this province. That is why foreign workers who are classified under one of the 31 designated optional trades in Alberta are now able to apply directly through the strategic recruitment stream without an employer's application. Previously optional trades applicants had to apply under the employer-driven stream.

This is a significant and positive change for temporary foreign workers in the optional trades. In the past these foreign workers would have to rely on their employer to apply with them for their permanent status, but the new change puts the future of the workers in their own hands. If the worker falls under one of the 31 designated optional trades, they can apply directly to the program once they obtain certification from Alberta apprenticeship and industry training in their trade.

Mr. Speaker, this is good news for TFWs and a big win for Albertans, too. Labour groups have also been applauding the decision. I just spent an afternoon and lunch hour with some of the people from the immigrant service sector, and they're very pleased with the change. We are facing a labour shortage in the next few years, and making sure we have more certified tradespeople as part of the annual 5,000 Alberta nominees will help us stay competitive in the global market as we enter the next boom.

Details on the application process are readily available. Our Immigrate to Alberta information service can be reached at www.albertacanada.com.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Patient Advocacy by Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. These Tories are not interested in truth or transparency. The list of damning allegations against their culture of fear and intimidation in the health care system grows daily. Today Dr. Abilio Nunes, a staff anaesthesiologist at the Grey Nuns, had this to say: I believe there needs to be a public inquiry, I have evidence that a culture of fear and intimidation does exist in the capital region, I personally have faced more than five years of intimidation for speaking out. End quote. When will the Premier finally concede that the only way to fully address this government's culture of fear and intimidation is a public, judge-led, independent inquiry, as called for?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, if you want to see a demonstration of an organization's culture, you look to its leadership. There has been leadership through the three associations – Alberta Health Services, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Alberta Medical Association – who issued a joint statement in terms of how to support patient advocacy by doctors and other health care workers. Subsequent to that, there were bylaws that were agreed to by 90 per cent of the physicians. Over a thousand physicians replied to a poll in terms of the medical staff bylaws. It's all in the staff bylaws. There is ample opportunity for any doctor to come forward.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, we've gone way beyond a reassuring letter from Alberta Health Services.

Will the Premier ensure that Dr. Nunes receives complete immunity from any disciplinary action for his comments condemning this government's culture of intimidation, or will he allow what was done to me to be done to Dr. Nunes?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, further to what I just said, there is also a letter that was distributed, signed by Dr. Chris Eagle and Dr. David Megran and Dr. Francois Belanger, that very clearly identified what the processes are for physicians and other front-line health care providers to provide evidence and advocate on behalf of patients. I will table those documents at the end of question period.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the Premier doesn't get it. He needs to take a reality check and realize that doctors don't trust Alberta Health Services to deal with these issues. They're not independent. Sorry, Mr. Premier. Calling the cops is an absolute farce, and the only way to restore confidence is through a public inquiry. When will you do the right thing, sir?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, when you see someone stealing a car in the back alley, you don't call for a public inquiry; you call for the police. If there's anything that's happening out there that is wrong, that's where it goes to. A public inquiry?

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Health Quality Council review on wait times for emergency rooms and cancer patients is a necessary first step, but it cannot clear the air on the issue of intimidating doctors and financial misconduct. Only a full, public, judge-led inquiry can subpoena witnesses and provide immunity. Everybody knows this. The evidence of intimidation continues to grow, and Dr. Paul Parks said this today: the public have the right to fully demand we get to the bottom of this. Anything less is unacceptable. End quote. Will the Premier finally agree with the many medical experts and call a judge-led public inquiry and put this issue to rest?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, the Health Quality Council will have the opportunity to look at any accusations that come forward, any allegations, this allegation about two sets of books. We have an honourable group. Alberta's Auditor General has no evidence of any two sets of books. But if somebody has some hidden books somewhere in Alberta, man, we've been at this now – for what? – since November. You would think we'd be able to find them and bring evidence to the Auditor General or to the police.

Dr. Swann: How hard have you looked, Mr. Premier?

The Premier likes to call the Health Quality Council . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. leader has the floor.

Dr. Swann: The Premier likes to call the Health Quality Council independent. I'm sorry; we all know that isn't the case. Who does it report to but the minister of health? How can you be called independent if you report to the minister?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, again yesterday this hon. member asked us, the government, to then make public a disclosure statement that was entered into by the Alberta Medical Association and the physician in question. We're not even a party to that agreement, and he wants to give this government power to open up a personal disclosure document that we weren't a party to. That is absolutely ridiculous.

The Speaker: The hon. leader. [interjections] Actually, here's how it works. When the Speaker designates someone and that person rises, the television cameras go directly to him, his microphone is live, and nobody hears anything else.

Proceed, please.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier has just given all the more reason to have a public inquiry. Will the Premier stop playing word games with the public and agree to a public inquiry that can define its own terms of reference and that can report directly to the Legislature. That's what we're asking, Mr. Premier. Will you do that, sir?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said countless times, all of these matters will go to the Health Quality Council. This is a group of doctors and professionals in the field of medicine. They have tremendous respect in this province, have brought forward recommendations in many other areas that we've asked them to as the people of Alberta, and they'll continue to do that. This is the best opportunity to once and for all deal with some of the wait time issues and cancer surgery wait times and, most importantly, get to the bottom of these allegations that have been raised in the House.

The Speaker: A number of quotations were made during the exchange of these two first questions. I'd ask that the documentation be tabled this afternoon at the appropriate time.

Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Settlement Agreements with Physicians

Mr. Hehr: Dr. Ciaran McNamee was let go from his employment as a surgeon and accordingly filed a lawsuit against this government. Dr. McNamee believed that he was let go because he was advocating for his patients and that this was making the government uncomfortable. As a result of calls for a public inquiry, the need for it backed up by Dr. McNamee, members of this government have given their interpretation of what a statement of claim is, what a statement of defence is, and so on. It's been a virtual law school class in here, Mr. Speaker. Continuing on that theme, I'd ask the Justice minister to tell this honourable House what a settlement is.

Speaker's Ruling Legal Opinions

The Speaker: Look, you boys are both learned members of the Law Society of Alberta, and you lawyers like to do this sort of stuff. One of the things that is not part of question period is legal interpretation. If the hon. member who is a trained lawyer is asking another hon. member who is a trained lawyer for an interpretation, perhaps the two of you might just get together, have coffee, go for a walk in the park this afternoon, and we'll move forward.

Ms Blakeman: Point of order.

The Speaker: I will invite the hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General to respond if he wishes.

Settlement Agreements with Physicians (continued)

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could give just a general comment. In my experience people who make settlements are usually both unhappy. The person who received any kind of compensation feels they should have received far more because they were right. The person who had to give any compensation is very unhappy because they should have never had to pay anything because they were right.

The Speaker: That really clarifies government policy. You want to proceed with your second question?

Mr. Hehr: It's helping me a lot, Mr. Speaker. My question is again for the Justice minister. As a result of Dr. McNamee filing a statement of claim, a settlement was reached with him whereby money was given to him to settle the lawsuit. Is that what happened?

Mr. Olson: I don't know.

Mr. Hehr: My final question is for the Justice minister. It's our understanding that a settlement was reached with monetary value. Is it standard practice of this government to settle claims where there's no validity to them at all?

Mr. Olson: As far as I know, the government of Alberta was not party to any such settlement.

Agreement in Principle with Physicians

Mr. Anderson: Yesterday, when asked if the government's relationship with Alberta doctors had broken down, the minister of health said that we now have an agreement in principle between the government, Alberta Health Services, and the [Alberta Medical Association that] is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work.

Mr. Minister, do you stand by that statement? Is the relationship between your government and our doctors a positive one?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure if he quoted exactly everything that was there. I don't have Hansard just in front of me, but I believe what I said is that we have a working relationship and we're working toward improving it, or words to that effect. The fact is that we do have a relationship with the AMA. They have a relationship with us, but they're in the midst of negotiations right now. Neither I nor the president of the AMA, to the best of my knowledge, is at the negotiating table. There are issues there that are very serious. As we know with negotiations, they take them seriously.

Mr. Anderson: A good relationship, Mr. Speaker.

Minister, why, then, in a letter released 48 hours ago does the president of the AMA say that during the negotiations for this new agreement that you're talking about, "for the first time ever – Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and [threaten] physicians," and that doing so diminished the ongoing relationship with the medical profession . . .

Mr. Anderson: Minister, please explain the misinformation you gave . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I want to call a point of order on that because I gave no wrong information yesterday whatsoever. What I'm going to be interested in is to see which parts he quoted and which parts he left out. That will be of interest, hon. member.

What I did say was that we do have an agreement in principle and that the rep forum recommended that or sent it out or whatever they did with it. They got it out to their members, and they're waiting for ratification for it. My position on this is that I support those programs. I support those benefits for doctors . . .

The Speaker: Okay. Let's get on with the question. There are no preambles. [interjections]

Mr. Anderson: I know. It is embarrassing. It is embarrassing for the government. I agree.

Will you now call for a full independent public inquiry, with full judicial powers to get to the bottom of what has become a complete breakdown in the relationship of trust between Alberta's health care professionals and this government? A total breakdown of trust, Minister, between the doctors and this government.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there's no breakdown of trust. What there is is an agreement in principle.

I'll tell you that what I find shameful is for this member to stand here and pretend to be a defender of health care when their chief strategist is out of the country trying to somehow take doctors from here to support a private hospital elsewhere. Explain that one to the public of Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. You're recognized. You're on TV. The mike is on.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You'll find it a little harder to use that dodge on this party, Mr. Minister.

The minister keeps referring to agreements with the Alberta Medical Association and Alberta Health Services as an example of the wonderful working relationship that this government has with doctors. But to quote from the same letter from Dr. White, the president of the AMA:

[The] Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and intimidate physicians. And it repudiated the philosophy of collaboration and of shared responsibility and leadership that epitomize the current . . . master agreement.

So, Mr. Minister, how can you continue to pretend that you have a proper relationship with the . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister. The hon. minister has the floor.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, what I'm surprised at is that that member doesn't understand how union-type negotiations can sometimes go. They can go a number of different routes. I'm not going to inflame the situation any further. I'm sure the AMA has its reasons for putting things out the way that they did. Unfortunately, we're not in a position where we can negotiate through the media.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the doctors are saying that you're intimidating them, the head of the Alberta Medical Association, and that the United Nurses of Alberta have added their voices to the call for a full and independent public inquiry and given that the president says that intimidation is not new to nurses and that pressure to keep silent about less than desirable patient care conditions is common, how can you say that you have the confidence of anyone in the health care system?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, what I can tell you is that Albertans by and large do have huge confidence. But I'll tell you where confidence breaks down. It breaks down when unsubstantiated allegations like this start to create fear, fear for patients who are out there with their loved ones waiting for some surgery. They're on a wait-list here, perhaps just like they might be in some other province. [interjections] If they would just shut up for a little while and listen, that would be wonderful. [interjections] Well, Mr. Speaker, there are just so many interruptions.

The Speaker: Okay. Please sit down. I want to make it clear again. The way this thing works is that if I give you permission to talk, the light goes on. The mike is on. Nobody hears anything else. You speak to me. I like to listen. I'm actually a pretty good listener.

Continue, please, Minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I was saying, the point here is that we have an independent review, which this hon. member who asked the question asked for just a week or two ago.

The Speaker: Unfortunately, we've now run out of the time allocated.

The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the current Alberta Health Services code of conduct explicitly prohibits health professionals, including nurses and others, from speaking out publicly against what the government is doing if it affects their patients' health and that it says specifically that they can be terminated for doing so, why won't the health minister admit that his government is responsible for creating a culture of fear and intimidation in the health care system that has affected patient care?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Simply because we're not. I don't discount that there might be a few people who feel differently; however, it's very clear here in the recently released Alberta Health Services medical staff bylaws, which this member should have a copy of, on page 38, where it says that "individual members of the Medical Staff have the right and the responsibility to advocate on behalf of their Patients." And I applaud them for doing so.

Speaker's Ruling Tabling Cited Documents

The Speaker: Okay. Before we move to the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, to the Leader of the Official Opposition, the Premier, the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, and maybe the Minister of Health and Wellness: everybody quoted from documents. You've got about 35 to 40 minutes to have it all ready for tabling at the appropriate time.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Quality Council of Alberta, created by the government 20 years ago, a completely independent, self-supporting entity with a mission to promote the use of quality methods in both the private and public sectors, says that it is extremely concerned with the decision to charter the Health Quality Council to investigate recent allegations concerning the health care system. The QCA has reviewed the HQCA's research on two previous occasions and described the 2010 satisfaction survey and the 2009 ER patient experience report as junk science. I will table those documents. To the Premier: will he now do the right thing and call the full public inquiry that my colleagues in the opposition have been . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I have said countless times in the House and I continue to say, this matter is all going to the Health Quality Council. They will do a good job of evaluating all of the evidence and all of the allegations that are going to come forward once the terms of reference are set and the membership of that council is made public.

Mr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, given the QCA's charge that the Health Quality Council pretended "that a 38% response rate on a discretionary sample qualifies as a random sample. It doesn't" and that the 2010 report is "guilty of flagrant overreaching," can the Premier perhaps explain to a skeptical public why they should trust the results of a Health Quality Council review?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Health Quality Council has the respect of Albertans. They've done very good work in the past, and they'll continue to do that. This matter is going forward to the Health Quality Council, and the sooner we can get it to the council, we'll resolve a lot of these issues and just settle down many of the allegations, all of which have been totally unsupported by any evidence.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When the QCA says that it does not believe that these past efforts of the Health Quality Council have demonstrated the level of quality that would warrant entrusting it with this new and important investigation, will the Premier enlighten us as to how he expects this review of theirs to clear the air?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, in the direction that I gave the minister of health, I wanted him to ask the Health Quality Council to look at waiting times in emergency, look at waiting times in cancer treatment, and look at how best to ensure that those waiting times are reduced given the five-year funding commitment that's going forward, given the fact that we're training 2,000 more nurses by 2012, all of those huge increases in not only dollars going to health but also in staffing. On these other allegations that have been raised in the House, we're waiting for further proof.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Water Quality Monitoring in the Oil Sands

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Last September Drs. Kelly and Schindler released a report that measured snow-pack depositions in the oil sands region and made conclusions that caught the attention of many individuals, organizations, and especially this government. All of my questions are to the Minister of Environment. How do the conclusions of Kelly and Schindler differ from the monitoring that has been performed by the government and other organizations?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, the most obvious difference is that the conclusions with respect to human versus naturally occurring contaminants were different. The report itemizes a number of reasons for that, one of which is that there were differences in sampling methods. There were differences in reference sites. One thing I would like to point out to the member, though, is that the report also points out that neither of the reports actually dealt with the actual concentrations or their effects on organisms.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Since these conclusions were so sweeping and significant, the Premier asked for an independent committee to be formed to review the data of this report along with that of the government's. Did this independent committee affirm the potentially significant conclusions made by Kelly and Schindler's work?

2:10

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the panel concluded that each of the studies presents some useful information; however, each also suffers from some limitations. It applies to both the government studies as well as the academic studies. For example, the panel found that Kelly and Schindler made assumptions that may be too simplistic and may not have enough data to determine the true impact of the effects of development in the region.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Suggestions have been made in conventional and social media, fuelled by opposition criticism, that the multidecade monitoring that government has conducted is invalid. Is this truly what the independent committee suggested in their report?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the report was to examine why there were different conclusions, not to come to some kind of a conclusion over who was right and who was wrong. As a matter of fact, yesterday I met with the committee, and they affirmed that, in fact, the historical data that has been developed by Alberta Environment and RAMP and others is based on solid science, but they pointed out that there needs to be an opportunity for that research to adapt and to be a much more co-ordinated system to answer the questions that are being asked.

Mr. MacDonald: During question period yesterday the minister of health suspected that there were severance agreements and payouts to some doctors. This was in regard to my questions about some of the doctors who stood up about the flawed health care system as promoted by this government. Now, to the minister of health: where in your annual reports can taxpayers find these severance agreements and payouts? Is it in book 1 or book 2?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I had no part in any severance agreements or settlements or whatever else he's driving at, but if he has something that qualifies for a motion for a return or something that qualifies as a written question and he wishes to submit that for that level of detail, we can try our best to find it or see if someone else can.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, taxpayers certainly deserve an answer from this government. Again to the minister of health. You, sir, are responsible. You're the one that signs off on everything. Why does this government continue to conceal the details around these severance agreements and payouts? What are you hiding from taxpayers?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there are innuendos in that question which really don't even deserve an answer of any dignity whatsoever. The fact is that the Auditor General looks at all of these books. He indeed verifies them. The money is all accounted for. I would ask the hon. member to please clean up his questions a little bit because you're heading into a very deep trough there, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask the minister of health to please read carefully the financial statements about who audits what and when in your own annual report.

Again to the minister: who ordered these severance agreements and payouts to silence doctors who stood up and spoke out? Was it the Premier's office?

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Speaker: The Government House Leader has a point of order.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what he's driving at. Sometimes he's 10 years ago. Sometimes he's 15 years ago. A few days ago you told him that he was going back to 1934. You know, if you've got a specific question about a specific time, about a specific case, then ask the proper channel, the proper authority. Okay? Nobody is hiding anything from anyone here. But information with that level of detail is not something that you carry around in your hip pocket.

The Speaker: That's the third point of order.

The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Photo Identification

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've had a constituent express his concern over how the government issues photo identification. Before government-issued photo identification expires, either a driver's licence or an identification card, the individual must turn their identification in, at which time they're provided with a temporary ID without a photo while they wait for their new ID to be mailed to them. My question is to the Minister of Service Alberta. For Albertans who rely on photo identification for their livelihood or just the day-to-day activities of their lifestyle, this can cause a huge inconvenience or even impact their quality of life. How can the minister justify . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta has one of the most secure drivers' licences in North America, and we take identity theft and personal information very seriously. When an individual is getting a new driver's licence, they do surrender their old licence, and the temporary one is issued. It does not have a photo on it, and this is a further protection of their identity.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My only and final supplemental is to the same minister. In a time of heightened security and more stringent measures undertaken to prevent identification theft and financial fraud, does the minister not think that it is, actually, a basic necessity for citizens of our province to always be in possession of government-issued photo identification?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the licences it's about a three- to five-day turnaround when the new licence is mailed out. In a rare case when an Albertan requires photo ID during an interim period, we can provide a certified image from the motor vehicle database to use in combination with their ID. As well, it's always useful to have a passport. We have received very few complaints from the public about this process.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the past two years Alberta's minimum wage of $8.80 an hour, the second-lowest in the country, has been deliberately frozen by Canada's wealthiest provincial government. Over 60 per cent of minimum wage earners are women while the remainder consists to a significant degree of seniors on fixed incomes and students helping support their families or saving for postsecondary. To the minister of employment: despite the Committee on the Economy's unanimous recommendation last October to raise the wage a measly 25 cents, why have you failed to act?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, to correct the member, the minimum wage is not paid by this wealthy provincial government. Wages are paid by employers and businesses and those who create jobs in Alberta. I don't believe there is any position within the government of Alberta that's anywhere near the minimum wage.

However, Mr. Speaker, there was an all-party committee that met and discussed what the minimum wage in Alberta should look like. They just very recently, a few days ago, reported it to my office. I'm reviewing the recommendations, and a decision will be made in due course.

Mr. Chase: Very recently. October, November, December, January, February, March: half a year, Mr. Speaker.

Given that according to a Stats Canada figure 78,000 Alberta children are living below the poverty line within primarily single-mother-supported families, how can the minister continue to fail vulnerable families?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, the report that was provided to me by the all-party committee gives some very good recommendations, and I want to thank all members of the committee. We will be making a decision on the minimum wage in due course. Let's not forget that minimum wage is earned by a very small portion of Albertans, and those who truly are vulnerable in our province have a whole array of social assistance types of benefits offered to them by this very ministry.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. How long is this minister willing to sit on his assumption that market recovery is just around the corner?

The Speaker: The hon. minister. Just before you do, I'm sure I'm going to get 25 more phone calls today telling me I should really, really discipline whoever speaks with such foul language in this Assembly.

The hon. minister. [interjections] The hon. minister. Fine.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker . . .

The Speaker: Sorry. I called on you three times, so now we're going on to the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Slave Lake Community Building Assessment

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The town of Slave Lake in partnership with this government built a beautiful, one-stop shopping, government centre, and library. People love it, and it provides a great service. However, the town of Slave Lake has grave concerns with the property assessment placed on this facility creating a huge financial problem. My questions are to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Why did Municipal Affairs assessors reduce the assessment on this building to less than half the actual cost?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, Crown-owned properties are exempt from paying property taxes, but the province does pay a grant equivalent to those property taxes. When an application for a new property is received, a review is undertaken by professional auditors from our assessment audit unit. The assessments are based on market value. Current market information for the town of Slave Lake does not support the value put forward by the town.

Ms Calahasen: To the same minister: of all the facilities that we have a partnership in, why was this specific property selected to be reviewed?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, all new grants in place of tax applications are reviewed by the ministry to ensure the reported assessment is reasonable and equitable within the municipality that the property is actually in. The town was advised of the assessment prepared by my department, and they were asked to provide any market data that they may have to support a higher assessment. At this point none of that information has been received.

Ms Calahasen: Well, thank you. I'm sure they're listening to that.

Given that the town has no means to appeal and is requesting a review by an assessor, at least an independent body which will ensure fairness and transparency and be binding on both parties, will you agree to do that, Mr. Minister?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of adjustments made each year, and the adjustments may be increased or decreased. All changes and comments are reviewed with the municipality before they're made. Although there's no formal appeal mechanism, I'm prepared to review and consider any information the town may wish to provide.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Land Stewardship Legislation

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've understood that the advocates of central planning always – always – have envisioned themselves as a central planner, but last night I learned this truism had a name, Kip's law. I spent last evening in Clyde, Alberta, along with 400 engaged citizens who learned of this and many other things about the case for repealing Bill 36, from Keith Wilson. Yesterday was a bad day for Bill 36. In the afternoon the government's own former Justice minister jumped on the bandwagon of repealing this central planner's dream, admitting that it was big mistake.

The Speaker: Okay. We've now reached the time to go. Somebody's got to respond if they want to. A thirty-five second time limit, hon. member. You know that. Everybody else knows it.

Second question.

Mr. Hinman: Given that this government . . .

The Speaker: That's the second question.

Mr. Hinman: The leadership candidate from Calgary-Elbow, your Attorney General at the time, wants to repeal Bill 36 because of, as she puts it, its inadequate compensation provision, its failure to protect people's property investment, and its superseding of all other provincial regulations. How long will it be before you realize what everybody else in Alberta realizes? You need to repeal Bill 36. [interjections]

The Speaker: Okay, okay. [interjections] Settle down.

We're now going to the third question. Would you kindly identify who the question is to?

Mr. Hinman: To the Minister of SRD: given this government's horrendous culture of intimidation that permeates through caucus and into many of their departments and given that the candidate for Calgary-Elbow wouldn't be taking this position if there wasn't support for it in the PC caucus, how many more government MLAs will have to stand up against this horrendous culture of intimidation before you follow the Wildrose lead and just repeal Bill 36? Why don't you stop the bleeding?

Mr. Knight: I'm going to relay to you, Mr. Speaker, to the members of this House, and to all Albertans a little lesson about regional planning, which is exactly what we're doing here. There's a regional planning process in place in the province of Alberta. We've gone out and consulted with thousands of Albertans relative to plans in the region of lower Athabasca and now in South Saskatchewan. We continue to do that good work on behalf of Albertans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Residential Building Code

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday the Minister of Municipal Affairs suggested that building inspectors in Fort McMurray were responsible for identifying major structural problems at the Penhorwood apartments and recommending that tenants be evacuated. The building inspection, in this circumstance, failed to catch the problems, resulting in the condo board having to hire its own structural engineer. Is the minister now willing to acknowledge that this is the fact?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We certainly recognize that this is a difficult time for residents who've been affected by the evacuation order. The regional municipality of Wood Buffalo administers the Safety Codes Act in its jurisdiction and, as such, has the authority to address this particular case.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Given that we now know there is no corrective legislation coming this session, can the minister tell Albertans in straightforward language if he believes that we have a problem with construction standards in this province?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, there's no doubt that there are some issues around the province. Is it an issue that is major? For those individuals that are affected, it certainly is. When we look at the thousands and thousands of buildings being built, I would say that the majority are built according to the codes. There's no doubt there are a few buildings that need additional attention. But in this case we continue to work with the regional municipality. The matter, I understand, is under litigation.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. I believe the minister was trying to answer my third question. Will the minister exercise the authority granted to him by the Safety Codes Act and help straighten out the mess facing tenants of the Penhorwood condos in Fort McMurray and other Albertans who have been victims of shoddy construction practices and poor inspection?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, our government continues to ensure that Alberta's Safety Codes Act is amongst the strongest in the province. To go back to Fort McMurray, it's very inappropriate to comment specifically on that case as it's under litigation.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Affordable Housing

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Access to affordable or subsidized housing is an important issue in my constituency of Edmonton-Mill Woods. My constituents are saying that they lack access to affordable housing units, especially the more than 14 per cent of single parents in my area. The minister is taking every opportunity to tell great stories about his ministry's progress on this issue, but my constituents say that they just don't see it. My first question is to you, Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs. What is being done specifically in Edmonton-Mill Woods for access to subsidized . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister. You're away.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. You're quite right. We are awake on the job here today.

The hon. member has made an important point about access to affordable housing throughout Alberta. It's important to have confidentiality but also access to the four corners of this province. We are building 11,000 affordable housing units by 2012. We can't build them on every block. In the event that we don't have affordable housing in a particular area, we do have a rent supplement program, which people qualify for on an annual basis, and people in his constituency also can qualify.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. Your ministry has set a goal of establishing 11,000 affordable housing units in the province to serve all of Alberta by 2012. How close are we to achieving this impossible dream?

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, it's anything but impossible, and it's anything but a dream. This year we're getting just over 10,000 affordable housing units built in this province. Next year we will have another open and competitive tendering process in which the private sector can partner with us. We've saved over $1 billion over the last four years through private-sector partnerships as opposed to government-subsidized housing.

Mr. Benito: My second supplemental is to the same minister. I need your policy confirmation, Mr. Minister. Is helping low-income families, seniors, and mentally challenged individuals your ministry's priority?

Mr. Denis: Well, Mr. Speaker, even though we have achieved a 36 per cent budgetary reduction since I took over, there is $100 million still available in this year's budget for capital and for construction. I'm sure this member will agree with me that that deserves an award of excellence.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Highway 63

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. After another tragic fatality on highway 63 we have to ask ourselves why this road has not been twinned yet. This government has been at it since 2007 and over eight years later will still have not completed this essential project. To the Minister of Transportation: what will it take, sir, to devote the appropriate amount of resources to this project and finally finish?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member was first talking about a tragic accident that happened there a couple of days ago. I have to say that that is very, very tragic news, and our prayers and thoughts are with the victim's family.

Mr. Speaker, we're moving as fast as we can right now on twinning that highway with what our budget allows. We're spending $190 million this year on that highway, and we're going to move ahead as fast as we can.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't think we are moving fast enough on that highway. Given the latest tragedy why has the minister chosen the most delayed method of completing this project? How many more deaths have to happen before we speed things up?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I've said before, on any highway in Alberta one death is too many. I do have to say that we're going to move along as fast as we can. We're spending that $190 million there. I don't know what the hon. member thinks. Money doesn't grow on trees, and we can only move as fast as our budgets allow.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think money has been growing on trees here in this province, and this government has been mismanaging our money.

To the minister again: will the minister commit to completing the twinning of highway 63 before 2015?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, I'm going to commit that we're going to move along as fast as we possibly can on that highway, and that's as far as I can go.

2:30 Glenbow Ranch Provincial Park

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, all of my questions are for the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. In August 2006 it was announced that a beautiful area on the Bow River west of Calgary would be purchased and developed as a provincial park, and it was anticipated that public access would be allowed into the area within a year or so. The people of southern Alberta are still waiting patiently to use this park. Minister, spring is just around the corner. When are Albertans going to be able to access this new park?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm not at all surprised that the hon. member is excited about this park, the Glenbow Ranch provincial park. I've been hearing about it for the last two years. The number one question I get asked is: when will this beautiful park open? I'm happy to say that we are planning on opening it this summer, hon. member. We just need to make sure that it's safe, that it's accessible but that we also are protecting the important environment there and that we don't love this park to death. We've been working really hard over the last two years, but sometimes . . .

Dr. Brown: Will the minister assure Albertans that unlike the natural disaster of Fish Creek provincial park, there's going to be a proactive plan to preserve the grasslands in the new Glenbow provincial park?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker, for the 3 million visitors a year who go down into Fish Creek, I don't think they think it's a natural disaster. I think they think it's a beautiful park. Since 1975 that park, actually, had been farmed, so it just had a few areas where fescue was left. This park, on the other hand, has some 3,000 acres of this very beautiful fescue grass. We've been working with the Foothills Fescue Research Institute and the park foundation to ensure that it's preserved. You'll see cattle grazing in this park.

Dr. Brown: Given the expanding environmental footprint on southern Alberta's natural areas, can the minister advise the House what plans she has for expansion of areas in our grasslands region?

Mrs. Ady: Well, Mr. Speaker. I think of the OH Ranch, which is a working ranch that we brought into the parks system since I've been parks minister.

As far as future opportunities, Mr. Speaker, that's part of the land-use framework. We are looking at new recreation opportunities and park opportunities, so we'll have to follow along with that process before we know where those new opportunities would be. But I would go back to the OH Ranch as a really great example also of a beautiful preservation of grasslands.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Water Allocation

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. In 2006 Alberta Environment stated that no new water licences would be awarded in the south. But transfers of water for money? Those are just fine. Our watersheds cannot afford these delays in action while a mad scramble is going on to continue development and to buy water allocation for current and future use before the rules of the land-use plans get finalized if they ever do get finalized. To the Minister of Environment: does the minister not recognize that transfers will ultimately lead to higher levels of use?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, what this member fails to acknowledge is that there is only a limited supply of water, and there are ever-increasing demands for water. The good news is that at the same time technology is changing so that historic users of water can become more effective and more efficient with the use of that water. That's how we continue to have development in the area. That's why the Water Act, not in 2006 but long before that . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Well, given that the allocation of water through existing licences is critical in Alberta, especially in the South Saskatchewan River basin, and will get worse as development pressure continues and folks race to get in ahead of the land-use plans, what specific action is the minister going to take over the next six months to address issues of overallocation in this river basin?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member is suggesting somehow that there is widespread abuse of the licences. The fact is that in case of a drought situation, where there is pressure that's on the system itself, we do have provisions to deal with it, and we have dealt with it in the past. So in direct answer to her question, over the next six months . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member has the floor now.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thanks, Mr. Speaker. Maybe you could share your listening ability with the minister.

I'll try for the third question here. This government and this minister dismissed, trivialized, and denigrated multiple calls for better monitoring in this province until outside pressure forced their hand. Will it again delay action on protecting our water as well?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, there is no one who is more committed to protecting our water than this minister, and I think that my track record is evidence of that.

That being said, Mr. Speaker, we have a very good system for water allocation in this province. However, we have freely acknowledged that we have to make some changes to that system on a go-forward basis, and we will do so.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

School Year Modification

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In Alberta the school year contains two semesters, running from September to January and February to June. It seems inconsistent for examinations to be held in January, just a few weeks after a lengthy Christmas break. To the Minister of Education: is there any discussion with regard to changing the school year to align the mid-term examinations with the Christmas break?

Mr. Hancock: Yes, Mr. Speaker, there's been quite a lot of conversation over the last three years under our Inspiring Education program talking about any time, anyplace, any pace learning. With that comes the question of how you do assessment in accordance with that. There has also been specific discussion, brought up by a number of people, around the question of the appropriate alignment of the school year, of semesters, and specifically about the issue around whether semesters could end before Christmas.

In actual fact, the school year and the school day are in the purview of school boards, and they can do that. I can tell you that there are pilot projects happening across the province now where school boards have made . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Given that June and July are probably our best summer months, if we ever get summer, would it not make more sense to have the school year start in August and go to the end of May rather than the present system?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said, I'm not sure there is actually consensus about when the best months of summer are in Alberta, but the fact of the matter is that we have students going to school virtually every month of the year now. Modern students, many of them in high school particularly, are quite keen. You'll find, particularly in the urban areas – but I think it's also true in rural areas as well – summer programs where students are going to school. We really do need to look at the whole question of alignment because what's most important in the school system is making sure that the students are engaged . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think my final question has been partly answered. It was with regard to school authorities having the discretion to set their own school year, but are there some that actually modify the school year other than having holidays in July and August?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, as I said, the school boards do have the purview to set their own school years. We do have summer school happening a lot. What we have in this province, of course, the one issue that is difficult with that, is the alignment with the exam schedules, which is where the hon. member started. We have exams available in August, in November, in January, in April, and in June, but if we're going to go to an any time, anyplace, any pace learning process, we will have to try and develop flexibility in exam schedules. The problem, of course, is how you do that with security, how you do that with technology, how you do that in a way that is financially successful.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes Oral Question Period for today. Eighteen members were given an opportunity to raise questions. There were 104 responses and questions in all.

Speaker's Ruling Decorum

The Speaker: I have received an inordinate number of notes here from members in the Assembly today, from all quarters of the Assembly, I might add. "Mr. Speaker, would you shut them up?" "It was my turn to raise a question, and there's nothing but a bunch of thunderous applause" or something else. "I can't hear myself think." I got it from all quarters. I want to make that very, very clear. This is not a singular thing. I do know that the lights lit up in my office as well today, and they're not kind compliments that come when phone calls come from the public.

This is the second time, in fact, this week that we've had an inordinate number of calls from people about language and attitude and heckling and other stuff. Some members think it's cute. Okay. Some places it happens. We've had a history of great decorum in the province of Alberta. I've been very proud of it in the past.

We'll continue with the Routine in 15 seconds.

Hon. members, might we revert briefly to Introduction of Guests?

[Unanimous consent granted]

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm really pleased today to rise to introduce 32 hard-working young students from St. Mary's school of Taber. These students have travelled about six or so hours on the bus to get here today. I'm really happy they could come here although I want to tell them that the decorum isn't always like this in the Leg. They are accompanied by some adults and teachers. They're accompanied by their principal, Mr. Ken Sampson; Mr. Patrick Pyne, a teacher; Mrs. Debra Brandics, an EA; Mrs. Jamie Rolfe; Mrs. Johan Muller; Mrs. Carla Gouw; and Mrs. Shawna Phillips. I would ask them all to rise and please receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview.

State of the Economy

Mr. Vandermeer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to speak on an issue which all Albertans and indeed all members of the Assembly can take pride in, and that is the growing strength of our economy. The recession which began in 2008 affected many Albertans, many of my constituents. Some were affected in one of the most profound ways possible, the loss of a job. At the height of the recession there were 80,000 fewer Albertans working. Today we have recovered to the point where 2.06 million Albertans are at work. We're not quite back to where we want to be, but we are definitely on our way.

Mr. Speaker, a year ago the unemployment rate in our province was 6.8 per cent. Today it stands at 5.7 per cent, tied for the second-lowest rate of unemployment in the country and far below the national average of 7.8 per cent. Our province and its employers created 13,700 jobs in the last month alone. This accounts for 90 per cent of the jobs created in this country. This shows the strength of the economy, the confidence that Albertans have in their province, and the confidence of foreign investors in the future of Alberta. As our Premier has said on a number of occasions, Alberta will lead Canada out of the recession, and these numbers are certainly proving that.

The indicators on a number of economic fronts are promising, and this is good news not only for Alberta businesses and Alberta employees but indeed all Canadians as the economic benefits of a strong and vibrant Alberta economy are felt across the nation.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Agreement in Principle with Physicians

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm certain all members of this Assembly want the best health care system possible in helping fellow Albertans and our constituents. Presently there is a dark cloud, we can all agree, looming over the very system we have here in Alberta. Yesterday in this House I was encouraged when the minister of health and Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek proclaimed – and I quote from the Hansard – that the agreement in principle between the AMA, Alberta Medical Association, the government, and the health superboard “is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work.” Again, these are the words from the Member for Edmonton-Mill Creek in the Hansard.

Well, Mr. Speaker, I have a letter now from the president of the Alberta Medical Association dated March 14, just two days ago, that says the direct opposite, and I will table the letter at the appropriate time. The president of the AMA writes: “With Negotiations 2011 – for the first time ever – Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and intimidate physicians.” And I repeat: intimidate. He also says, “In doing so, Government diminished the value traditionally attached to a constructive . . . relationship with the medical profession.”

Mr. Speaker, that does not sound like a relationship that is beginning to work. In fact, quite the direct opposite. I'm disappointed. The question is: who should Albertans believe, the minister of health or Alberta doctors? I know who I'll believe, and I think I know who Albertans will believe.

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: First of all, we have a little homework to do, please. Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, yesterday you were to return today with some documents with respect to a TV interview. Do you have them, sir, for tabling?

Mr. Anderson: No, I do not, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Will you have them by tomorrow?

Mr. Anderson: You need me to get a sworn affidavit that that's what was said?

The Speaker: Well, that's what I asked you to do.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah. Okay.

The Speaker: You'll have them by tomorrow, please.

Mr. Anderson: I will.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Okay. For today, then, is anybody tabling the documentation on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition?

Ms Blakeman: I've called again for it, Mr. Speaker, and I'm assuming it's on its way.

The Speaker: Is anyone tabling the documentation on behalf of the Premier? The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'm happy to table on behalf of the Premier a copy of a document on the letterhead of Alberta Health Services entitled Information. It's a letter to physicians, and it's signed by Dr. Chris Eagle, acting CEO and president; Dr. David Megran, executive vice-president, or EVP, and acting executive lead for quality and service improvement; and Dr. Francois Belanger, acting EVP and chief medical officer. The context of the document is that doctors do have a duty and an obligation to speak up if they have concerns.

The Speaker: Okay. That follows through from today's question period.

The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness following through from today's question period, please.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to table with you and for all members here page 38, which I quoted from, from the Alberta Health Services medical staff bylaws, specifically section 4(2)(3), patient advocacy, which states clearly in a single sentence: "Individual members of the Medical Staff have the right and the responsibility to advocate on behalf of their Patients." There it is, and I hope the opposition members will review it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere following through from today's question period, please.

Mr. Anderson: Yes. Mr. Speaker, first, I'll table the letter dated March 14, 2011, from the president of the AMA, detailing what was said in question period today; namely, that "for the first time ever," the doctor said, "Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and intimidate physicians."

Then an additional tabling, five copies of the minister's statement in question period yesterday. He said earlier that I had misquoted him. In fact, I took it directly from the Hansard, when he said that the relationship is beginning to work. I quoted directly from the Hansard, so he can take a look if he would like.

The Speaker: Okay. So, Airdrie-Chestermere, we're clear other than the one that you have to return tomorrow with?

Mr. Anderson: Yeah.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, do you have a tabling on behalf of your colleague, which was referred to in the question period today?

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, my colleague quoted from the document that was just tabled by the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

The Speaker: But we will never know that for sure unless the document is tabled.

Ms Notley: Pardon me?

The Speaker: We will never know that for sure unless the document is tabled. Your hon. member quoted from it. We assume it's the same document.

Ms Notley: So you're suggesting that . . .

The Speaker: Well, no. We'll accept your word that that is the same document.

Ms Notley: Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie as a follow-up from today.

Mr. Taylor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two documents to table here. The first is five copies of an e-mail from Robert Gerst, the chair of the Quality Council of Alberta.

Next is five copies of an accompanying document from the Quality Council of Alberta entitled Junk Science from the Health Quality Council of Alberta.

Thank you.

2:50

The Speaker: Okay. As of today we're only following through with one further documentation, and that comes from the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Now, for today's tablings the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I will also mention that one of the documents that the Official Opposition leader quoted from has indeed already been tabled. I understood that we were encouraged to not double the tablings.

The Speaker: Oh, no. Absolutely not. But if it's been tabled, somebody should mention that. I would not know that.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. Again, one of the documents from yesterday was a newspaper article, which I again understood it was not encouraged for members to be tabling newspaper documents.

The Speaker: Nor quoting from them. But if they quote from them, they should table them.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you for the correction. That's very useful.

I have three tablings of my own. The first is from constituent Marymae Olds, a handwritten note with very nice script. It makes very clear to me that as a senior citizen of Alberta she wants a public investigation by a judge to deal with the Alberta health crisis of cancer patients. Very nice handwriting and very clear on what she wants to see.

The next two tablings – one from constituent Naomi Fridhandler and the second an e-mail from Amelia Ethier – are both from students. Ms Fridhandler is a fourth-year medical student at the U of A, transitioning into obstetrics and gynecology. Ms Ethier is a second-year medical student. Both are concerned about possible loss of funding for the Alberta Medical Association's physician and family support program.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to table an appropriate number of copies of a letter from a constituent of mine named J. Rowan Scott, which is a very articulate advocacy for support for the physician and family support program. This is one of quite a number of contacts I've had on this issue.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Ms Pastoor: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling the required five copies of a statement that I had made yesterday when I was quoting Jan Reimer, in which she had said that she has long been unhappy about the lack of consequences for abusers who breach emergency protection orders and, also, that she was hoping it would encourage the police to lay criminal charges when people do breach protection orders.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. The first is a letter that I received from the office of the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. It is regarding capital cost allowances and how Imperial Oil calculates their costs for construction done in South Korea and how it affects the royalties schedule here.

The second tabling I have is a letter that I wrote on December 13, 2010, to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. I'm asking for more details on the external consulting costs. The ministry indicates there is $5.5 million in consulting costs, but our research from the blue books indicates that, certainly, there is significantly more. In fact, there is $6 million more than what has been reported.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling e-mails from the following individuals concerned about the fate of the Castle-Crown: Mary Ann McLean, Leanne Dalderis, Peter Lebitka, Katie Pearson, Andy Kitchen, Jacqueline Pollard, Ann McIvor, Rebecca and Martin Thouin, Michael Teetzel, Nicole Koshure, Rod Russell, David Boyd, James Ramsay, Ruth Anne MacEachern, Terri Robins, Xavier Smith, Blair Petrie, Jim Dutton, Tom Gray, Brian Cutts, Courtenay Kelliher, Marjorie Sandercock, Rosalinde Schulze, Frances Backhouse, and Sharon Lawrence.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, I have on my list of those members wanting to table today the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood. Do you have something for him?

Ms Notley: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have three tablings. The first tabling is a copy of the revised Alberta Health Services code of conduct, which, while not quoted by the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood in his questions, was referenced. Within that document we see a section stating that employees are expected to not engage in public discussions or comments about confidential information relating to AHS business, that should they breach the code, they would be subject to discipline up to and including termination of their employment.

The second tabling is the appropriate number of copies of a letter received by the office of the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood from Jim Eigner of Edmonton, in which he expresses his opposition to any provincial money being used to support the construction of a new arena in Edmonton.

The third tabling is the appropriate number of copies of a document produced by the Alberta Federation of Labour entitled Women's Equality in Alberta a Long Way Off. It cites statistics that show that on average women make 72 cents for every dollar a man does and that university-educated women earn 67 per cent of what men with an equivalent education earn, and it notes that Alberta is the only jurisdiction in Canada that doesn't have a ministry dedicated to supporting the voices of women.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I'll thank you for that. The explanation was very, very important and significant but just a little long, perhaps.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four tablings. I wish to table the appropriate number of copies of the Alberta Liberal policy 2010 requiring MLAs to sit as independents after floor crossing until the next election.

Secondly, I wish to table the appropriate number of copies of two Wikipedia pages, the first containing the election results of an independent Liberal candidate for Lethbridge District in the 1909 election. This was Archie McLean, by the way.

Thirdly, a biography of the same politician, Archie McLean, known as one of the Big Four who helped found the Calgary Stampede in 1912.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would like to table the appropriate number of copies of a signed letter from a widow, Ms Stephanie Grivicic, dated March 2, 2011, regarding the unfortunate and premature death of her husband, Mike, to cancer as a result of delays in care. She's applauding the article in the Calgary Herald for speaking up about public cancer cover-ups.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Others? The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am tabling the requisite number of copies of a letter to the ministers of Municipal Affairs and Employment and Immigration pertaining to my constituents, pertaining to a disaster relief request for the residents of the Penhorwood Street complex. It was truly a disaster for seven condominium complexes, where over 300 residents had to leave because of safety concerns. They are now homeless, and I'm asking for help from the government from the appropriate ministers.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of Dr. Sherman, hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, an e-mail message dated March 12, 2011, from Abilio Nunes to J. Sinnema, regarding fear and intimidation in the Capital region, including the Caritas Health Group and Covenant Health; and a newsletter dated December 2006 entitled The President's Letter, prepared by Dr. Mark Joffe, president, Capital Region Medical Staff Association.

The Speaker: Hon. members, during the question period today three purported points of order arrived, the first from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. There was an exchange going on, and I asked you to take your place. I assume you wanted to raise a point of order.

Ms Blakeman: Yes, I did. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Please proceed.

Point of Order

Explanation of Speaker's Ruling

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker, this is under the citation of 13(2), the Speaker explaining reasons for decisions. When I look at yesterday's Hansard on page 358, so from March 15, 2011, I notice that the three questions from the Member for Calgary-Hays, who is a member of the government caucus, were as follows. "Can the minister explain . . . how any allegations of criminal misconduct should be dealt with and who they should be reported to?" Could the Minister of Justice "explain to the House what a public inquiry can and cannot do?" Finally, a question about: "Can the minister explain to the House what is contained in a statement of claim and what its purpose is?"

Today we had the Member for Calgary-Buffalo, who is a member of the Official Opposition and a lawyer – I do not believe the Member for Calgary-Hays is a lawyer – ask the Minister of Justice what a settlement is. I'm looking for clarification from the Speaker as to what in the Member for Calgary-Buffer's statement caused the Speaker to rise and intervene in the proceedings. To my mind, the only difference I can see in the questions is that perhaps it was because the Member for Calgary-Buffer is a lawyer and for some reason shouldn't be asking a question or because he's a member of the opposition. I don't know. Aside from that, we have four questions that are all asking the Justice minister on exact process. So if the Speaker would be so kind.

The Speaker: Hon. member, well most surely and certainly it was not the latter of the two assumptions the hon. member had for herself.

I've made at least two interjections, perhaps three times, with respect to the question period. Yesterday's question period was one in which I think I could literally have ruled out every opposition member's question because it violated everything that we're supposed to be doing. Secondly, virtually every question contained preambles in the second and the third questions, a clear violation in terms of the paper that I have received with signatures from members in this Assembly telling me there would be no violations, none whatsoever.

Today when I interjected, I interjected basically and essentially with respect to Beauchesne 408 and Beauchesne 410, which basically say that legal opinions were not required. Most certainly – most certainly – if a member is a member of the bar, the chair would take that into consideration. If, in fact, the thing is, "I'd ask the Justice minister to tell the hon. House what a settlement is," I could perhaps understand, recognizing as well that I did give more leeway than I should have, and I will not in the future. I will not in the future deal with legal interpretations of questions, and if the point is raised here, it should not come from a government member who is not a lawyer. That definitely will be the rule henceforth.

I will start intervening on the preambles, so there will be no preambles in the second or the third. I will be very firm about the rules that we have with respect to this. In fact, I'm even going to do some reiterating. I've done this now twice. Or is it three times? I want members to read pages 403 in Beauchesne to at least 420. At least. In addition to that, the Canadian House of Commons book on procedure has multiple pages in there with respect to what the questions are and what the subject matters aren't.

By way of clarification I really appreciate the question being raised today because I think it's really important. I've said it now twice or three times. Inflammatory questions with language in them, questions that answer their own question, et cetera, et cetera, are all out of order – are all out of order – according to our rules. Hon. members, I'd be delighted, starting tomorrow, and I'll start intervening with the first one because that's where the first one is going to come. There will be no question period because all it will be – the Speaker's intervention period is what it is. I've said this before. Ask but hope you never receive is one of those truisms about history as well.

Let's go back to the rules. Let's all remember what they are. This is just a brief précis one more time, page 502 of the House of Commons Procedure and Practice, Second Edition, 2009.

In summary, when recognized in Question Period, a Member should:

- ask a question;
- be brief;
- seek information; and
- ask a question that is within the administrative responsibility of the government or of the individual Minister addressed.

Those pretty much sum up the four.

Furthermore, a question should not:

- be a statement . . .

Your opinion matters not.

- . . . representation,

What are you asking for?

- . . . argument, or an expression of opinion;

- be hypothetical;

We have no nuclear plants in Alberta, yet we have questions on nuclear policy. I'll tell you again. When I was Minister of Environment in 1986, I got up one Friday morning, and Chernobyl came across the world. That day I received over 500 phone calls in my office as Minister of Environment. Virtually every phone call said: shut down Alberta's nuclear plants. Not one asked if we had a nuclear plant in Alberta.

Should not:

- [ask] an opinion, either legal or otherwise;
  - seek information which is secretive in its nature, such as Cabinet proceedings or advice given to the Crown by law officers;
  - reflect on the character or conduct of Chair Occupants, members of the House and of the Senate or members of the judiciary;
  - reflect on the Governor General;
- i.e. the Lieutenant Governor in Alberta.

- refer to proceedings in the Senate.

Well, we don't have one here.

- refer to public statements by Ministers on matters not directly related to their departmental duties.

So if a former minister stands up and makes a comment, it says in here that it should not

- refer to public statements by Ministers on matters not directly related to their departmental duties.

If the hon. Member for Calgary-Elbow has an opinion on something, that really has nothing to do with the question period.

- address a Minister's former portfolio or any other presumed functions, such as party or regional political responsibilities;
- be on a matter that is sub judice;
- deal with the subject matter of a question of privilege previously raised, on which the Speaker reserved his decision.

Once again, a question should not - create disorder.

That's got two words, that one: should not "create disorder."

- make a charge by way of a preamble to a question;
- be a question from a constituent;

How often do members stand up and say, "My constituents have asked me to raise this question"? Well, it violates the rules.

- seek information from a Minister of a purely personal nature;
- request a detailed response which could be dealt with more appropriately as a written question placed on the Order Paper; or
- concern internal party matters, or party or election expenses.

Finally, all questions and answers must be directed through the Chair.

Now, these are honoured, well established. Okay. I guess that's the fourth time we've gone through them in – what? – 10 days? Oh, today is day 14. I'll keep doing this. If you ask, you'll get.

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes?

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I'm just trying to get the specifics of the question that I asked regarding the Member for Calgary-Buffer. So three questions asked the previous day.

The Speaker: No, no, no. Please don't go that way with me. Please don't.

Ms Blakeman: One question asked today. Why?

The Speaker: Please sit down. The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo was allowed to ask his questions today. He raised his questions. I gave the Minister of Justice and Attorney General a chance to respond. I also stated a little earlier that the Member for Calgary-Buffalo is a learned member of the bar. The Member for Athabasca-Redwater is not.* I said that I also gave more leeway yesterday than I should have with respect to that question because I had done it earlier for everybody else, for everybody else. I could have ruled everyone out. If you want that adjudicated, I'll start it tomorrow. Member, I'm looking forward to the questions.

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: On 13(2) as well?

Mr. Allred: No, clarification of what you just presented. I thank you for a very comprehensive clarification, Mr. Speaker, but I would request, if you wouldn't mind, your circulating those two pages you asked us to read and possibly those other pages which clarified what we should ask in question period. It would be very educational.

The Speaker: Well, the ones I just read have been circulated because they are now in Hansard. On the previous occasions when I've spoken, they're also in Hansard. In terms of the other books, they're located right over there in the library, in Beauchesne. They're available. All members and all caucuses have them. I've circulated multiple copies to the leaders you have in each of the caucuses. I assume the caucus leaders spend some time with their caucus members on an education process. In addition to that, when all new members became members, we had a session in this Chamber within two weeks after the day you were elected, in which we went over a lot of this. So, you know, okay? But I'm happy to re-educate again.

Okay. The second one was the Minister of Health and Wellness.

Point of Order Imputing Motives

Mr. Zwodzesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise under section 23(i) out of our own standing orders, which says:

A Member will be called to order by the Speaker if, in the Speaker's opinion, that Member

(i) imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member.

I believe that occurred today when the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere somehow tried to infer or misportray something that I had said in Hansard yesterday. I'm sorry that I don't have the benefit of the Blues from today yet to be exact in what he attributed to me or not, but the tone with which he raised it and what sounded like an inappropriate or a shorted quote avowed to me, I thought, was something that needed me to rise and question that member.

I think that he inferred that somehow I suggested that the relationship between the Alberta Medical Association and the government or perhaps with AHS – I'm not sure; we'll have to check Hansard – was somehow misportrayed. I think he suggested that the spirit in which this was raised was other than what was intended, and I rise to set the record straight.

I believe he was referring to a question that was put to me yesterday in this House by the hon. Member for St. Albert wherein that member said on page 356 of Hansard yesterday:

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Has our relationship with physicians broken down in some fundamental way?

Mr. Speaker, I responded, and here is the full quote according to Hansard.

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe so. I think the point that the Premier mentioned a little earlier, that we now have an agreement in principle between the government, Alberta Health Services, and the AMA, is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work. I just want to say thank you to the Alberta Medical Association and all of its members for recognizing our economic situation, the worst since 1930.

Then you, Mr. Speaker, recognized the Member for St. Albert again, and the Member for St. Albert said:

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question, again to the same minister. The fact remains that some physicians are saying that our relationship with physicians does not work, and they feel that our government has dismissed their concerns. Have we?

I responded:

Well, absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. If we had, we wouldn't have an agreement in principle, obviously. I think what has happened here is that doctors more and more are finding Alberta to be a very attractive place to come and practise, and that's why we have had the highest growth rate in attracting doctors of any province over the past 10 years right here in Alberta.

That is the entire section from there.

Now, the fact that the member chose to perhaps use part of that but raised some innuendoes ahead of it or perhaps after it suggests to me that he was avowing false motives in my direction.

That's just one example, Mr. Speaker. This same member is starting to develop a pattern, and everybody in this House knows it. Let me just draw to your attention, to make my point, page 332 of Hansard from March 14, wherein, Mr. Speaker, you ended a statement by saying:

Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you have a point of order.

The Member for Airdrie-Chestermere rose and said:

Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief.

The Speaker then said:

Oh, take your time.

Then the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere said:

Yeah, exactly. Shovel it under the rug, right?

We all heard him say that.

But then later, you spoke to me, Mr. Speaker.

I don't know what point you're rising on, but go ahead.

I said:

I'm not sure. I think at the very least we need some clarity because at the beginning of his point of order he, meaning the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, made some innuendoes about the Speaker shoving something under the rug, and I think he should be held to account for that. I know we don't do points of order on points of order, but since there wasn't a point of order at the end – he's withdrawn it – I'm raising a point of order.

Then the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere stood up and said:

It's a very shameful comment. I didn't say anything to you about that, and he should withdraw that remark. He's being untruthful.

Well, who's being untruthful, hon. member? It's right there in Hansard, and I would encourage everyone here to take a look at the doublespeak of this member because it's becoming a pattern, which is my point.

Now, we've been in this Assembly for some time, and we understand what it takes to be a politician in today's age. We also understand what it means to develop a thick skin and so on. But when people start underquoting, short quoting, misquoting, or using innuendoes to make a point, that is politics at its worst.

A simple apology would be in order. A withdrawal would be in order. In any event, I'll leave it to you, Mr. Speaker, to find what you feel is necessary to preserve the decorum that otherwise has come to characterize this House and what Albertans expect from here.

My last point is that it's not only today that he's done this but, again, a day or two ago, and it's now starting to rub off on his colleague from Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo because again today he was quoting something or avowing a quote to me about something I said. I think the quote included the words "health superboard" or something to that effect. I'll have to check and see where that quote exactly exists because I've looked through Hansard from the last few days, and I don't ever recall using that particular phrase.

Similarly, a little while ago with respect to the Health Quality Council and me calling it in or not calling it in, he kept harping on the point "no," that I had said no – that I had said no – but he's not using the full quote. If you read Hansard, it says, "No, not at this time."

These are silly little things that they're playing with over on the Wildrose Alliance side, and I just think it's time for it to stop. I would ask you to review that and at the appropriate time make the appropriate decision that you feel is necessary, Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances.

Thank you.

Mr. Anderson: Well, 23(i), "imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member," I think is what the beginning of that rambling statement was. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to reiterate what I told you both in the Legislature and privately afterwards. When I said "shovel it under the rug," I was specifically referring to the health minister for shovelling this controversy under the rug. I was clearly not impugning you as you, obviously, as Speaker have nothing to do with this health care controversy. So for him to claim that I was saying that is not just a stretch; it's a leap around the world. Anyway, this minister plays fast and loose with the truth. He's the biggest dancer in this Assembly, but, you know, I will leave Albertans to make the judgment on that.

With regard to the point of order the member has a problem with the statement. I don't have the Blues either, but I do have this, the question that I read from. First I say:

Well, Minister, why, then, in a letter released [less than] 48 hours ago does the president of the AMA say that during the negotiations for this new agreement . . .

and I quote from the document that was tabled earlier,

"for the first time ever – Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and [threaten] physicians," and that doing so diminished the ongoing relationship with the medical profession.

So that's the president of the AMA referring to the negotiations that the minister of health and Alberta Health Services had entered into with the AMA, this tripartite agreement that they have just signed.

Now, in the Hansard the previous day the Member for St. Albert said, "Mr. Speaker. My second question is to the same minister. Has our relationship with physicians broken down in some fundamental way?" That was the question. The health minister replies:

Mr. Speaker, I don't believe so. I think the point that the Premier mentioned a little earlier, that we now have an agreement in principle referring to the tripartite agreement, between the government, Alberta Health Services, and the AMA, is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work. I just want to say thank you to the Alberta Medical Association and all of its members for recognizing our economic situation, the worst since 1930.

Okay. In this he clearly says, Mr. Speaker, that he feels that there's a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship beginning to work.

The same day that he gives this, I received a letter in the mail from a couple of doctors, actually, as did other members of our caucus, who had this letter from the president of the AMA. This is the same day that the minister said that – I'll use the exact wording – "is a very positive sign that we are moving forward and that there is a relationship that is beginning to work." The very same day the president of the AMA, who he refers to – now, he doesn't refer to the president of the AMA; he refers to the AMA and this agreement that they just entered into. The president of the AMA says:

With Negotiations 2011 – for the first time ever – Government threatened the loss of programs and services to try and intimidate physicians. And it repudiated the philosophy of collaboration and of shared responsibility and leadership that epitomize the current, eight-year, trilateral master agreement.

In doing so, Government diminished the value traditionally attached to a constructive and ongoing relationship with the medical profession, which has implications for the future. It brings into question the legitimacy and sincerity of statements such as, "The Alberta government is committed to working with its partners."

So that's what the president of the AMA says, obviously, Mr. Speaker, a total contradiction of the assessment given in this House by the minister of health, 180 degrees different.

So after quoting these statements, I asked the question: Minister, please explain the misinformation you gave to this House yesterday about the state of your government's relationship with our doctors. He said that it was about to get better or that it was improving, that it was about to improve. What's the exact quote? "A relationship that is beginning to work" is the exact quote. The president of the AMA says the exact opposite.

Now, if that isn't misinformation about the state of the relationship between doctors in this province and the minister of health, then I don't know what is. That is clearly a judgment call. We'll let Albertans decide. But, you know, for this minister to suggest otherwise is just completely out of touch with reality. Anyone who reads the two documents would come to that same conclusion if they had any rationality in them.

So that speaks to his first comments as well as to the comment suggesting that I had said to you that you wanted to sweep something under the rug, Mr. Speaker, which is just an absolute falsehood by the member opposite.

Now, with regard to his other comments that he brought forward . . . [interjections]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere has the floor. There were no interruptions when I allowed others to speak.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that.

With regard to the other allegations that the member brought against me about, you know, my habitually not using parliamentary language in this House and so forth, I think it's a real slight against you, Mr. Speaker. You've been very clear . . .

The Speaker: Hold on a second. Don't bring me into this. Bring me into this and you'll not like the answer.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Fine. All right. Fair enough. Fair enough.

All I know is that I trust you and the points of order as you interpret them, Mr. Speaker, to make good decisions. I don't think I need this minister telling this House or telling anybody else about whether I use unparliamentary language or not. That's not his job, thank goodness. It's your job.

With that, those are my remarks. There is no point of order, in my opinion. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Sir, you've already spoken on this matter.

Mr. Zwozdesky: I'd like to speak again if you wouldn't mind.

The Speaker: But on what basis would that be? Please sit down. Points of order are not to be used to extend debate. They're to bring a grievance or something like it to the Assembly. I recognized you to do that. I recognized one speaker on the other side. We'll be here all afternoon on this. As I understand it, there's other business. Now, there are five House leaders on the government side. If somebody else wants to participate, I'll recognize them.

Anybody else? Okay. The Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm looking here at the transcripts, and the minister of health says:

Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure if he quoted exactly everything that was there. I don't have Hansard just in front of me, but I believe what I said is that we have a working relationship, and we're working [to improve it], or words to that effect. However, in his response the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere attributes comments that were made by the AMA representative to the minister as if the minister had said it. So what we're dealing with here . . .

The Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. Deputy Government House Leader. As I indicated earlier, points of order are not to be used to continue debate. We're having a debate now. He said this. I said that. You said that. We said that. He said this. Maybe we said that. Oh, just a second; maybe we didn't.

Certainly, there was language here that diminishes the importance and the role of a Member of the Legislative Assembly in the province of Alberta. Very clearly, the Minister of Health and Wellness quoted from Hansard from March 15. It's very clear what it says to me. Then the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere today basically says: Minister, please explain the misinformation you gave to this House. The hon. minister interjects. We've had now a chance for exchanges back and forth. There was, quite frankly, a lot of tension in this House today. Actually, maybe even hostility, which is odd. It should be odd.

We've now spent 20 minutes getting an explanation back and forth. I don't think we're going to get any further ahead on this other than for me to say that the language is, I think, beneath the level that should be used, beneath the dignity that should be expected from honourable men or women, and I think we can do a lot better. The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness certainly was given ample opportunity to explain his position, his concern. We all heard it. We all understand it. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere responded. Okay.

A little earlier this afternoon you said that you wanted no questions in question period that violated anything. The same thing should apply to the language as well. You've all got 17 pages of this. So tomorrow it will be Mr. Speaker's intervention period. I doubt that we're going to get one question through. I doubt we're going to get more than a few answers. You asked for it. You want it.

The hon. Minister of Finance and Enterprise on behalf of the hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order Improper Inferences

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would quote section 409(3) in Beauchesne: "The question ought to seek information and, therefore, cannot be based upon a hypothesis, cannot seek an opinion, either legal or otherwise, and must not suggest its own answer, be argumentative or make representations." Section 409(6): "A question must be within the administrative competence of the Government. The Minister to whom the question is directed is responsible to the House for his or her present Ministry and not for any other decisions." I can quote more, but I don't think I need to. Also, House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 503, "make a charge by way of a preamble to a question."

Mr. Speaker, very clearly the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar in his question to the minister of health asked the question or words: who signed the cheques to silence the doctors? Was it the Premier? Was it the minister of finance? That's abhorrent for a couple of reasons. To suggest that anyone in government signs the cheques to the doctors, which the hon. member knows is incorrect, and then to suggest that the Premier or the finance minister would sign a cheque to silence anybody, would indicate, you would expect, that they would commit a criminal act of bribery for silence. The hon. member may have got excited in his questions, may not like the answers he's getting, but the simple fact is that to accuse several ministers of that kind of an act is not only dishonest, but it's wrong, and the hon. member ought to withdraw that statement.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I think this hon. minister of finance should withdraw that statement because that's certainly not what I said in this House. In response to the point of order, Mr. Speaker, I would like to also point out Beauchesne 410(5), which certainly indicates: "The primary purpose of the Question Period is the seeking of information and calling the Government to account." That's exactly what I was doing. Section 410(6): "The greatest possible freedom should be given to Members consistent with the . . . rules and practices." Brevity. Certainly, that was a very brief question. There was no preamble to that whatsoever.

I'm surprised that the minister of finance would indicate that I talked about cheques. I certainly did not. I certainly did not. I'm asking for that to be retracted from the official record. Clearly, this is what I said, Mr. Speaker: "Who ordered these severance agreements and payouts to silence doctors who stood up and spoke out" to be hidden from taxpayers? The Premier's office, the minister of health, or the minister of finance? The reason why I thought about asking the minister of finance is because, of course, the minister of finance was anxious earlier this week to participate in questions that I was directing to the health minister.

Now, the health minister said this yesterday. Please, sir, listen. This is on page 356 of Alberta Hansard, March 15. The hon. minister of health:

Mr. Speaker, if there were any kinds of severance agreements and payouts related to that – and I suspect there were – then they will be accounted for in the category for that.

That is what was said by the minister of health yesterday, so naturally I followed through today in question period asking for more details.

Now, also yesterday the Minister of Health and Wellness said this on page 356 of the Hansard:

But the fact is that the agreements were made. They are sealed in accordance with the nondisclosure agreements that were signed by the parties in question.

So there's evidence that these deals were sealed by your own caucus colleague, your own cabinet colleague, no one else. Naturally, taxpayers want to know about the details of these payments, these severance agreements.

Now, I would remind all cabinet ministers, Mr. Speaker, of the accountability statements that each and every one of them makes in the front of their annual reports, that the minister's annual report was prepared in accordance with the Government Accountability Act and the government's accounting policies. So it's only fair. It's only natural. I'm not getting any information from this government on their severance payments, and when I do look in the annual reports, whatever, book 1 or book 2, what do I see? Well, it's very interesting. In 2008-09 I see $22.5 million listed in severance on page 105 of East Central's transition and restructuring expenses. If that's where these payments were made, tell us.

Perhaps we should have a look at Capital health. Now, Capital health has been brought up here in the past. For Capital health, if we look at the financial statements, the chief executive officer, for one person, had a severance in 2008-09 of $1.5 million. I don't think those are the settlements we're talking about, but if it is, then the hon. minister should tell us.

I could go on and on, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: No, you can't. As I pointed out several times this afternoon, a point of order should not be used to continue debate.

Okay. We've gotten real good clarification in there. Again, here is exactly what was said so that there is no misunderstanding.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would ask the minister of health to please read carefully the financial statements about who audits what and when in your own annual report. Again to the minister: who ordered these severance agreements and payouts to silence doctors who stood up and spoke out? Was it the Premier's office?

And it continues, but that was the fruit of that.

Well, that definitely might get some people's hair up with respect to the tone of the question and everything else. I'm not sure that it violates too many of the rules that we have with respect to the question period. Some may argue that it creates provocation because you don't like the type of question, but it's not really so.

There's another great little chapter in the Canadian House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 497.

The Speaker has implicit discretion and authority to rule out of order any question posed during Question Period if satisfied that it is in contravention of House rules of order, decorum and procedure.

So if I rule a question out of order in the future and someone rises under 13(2), my response will be that it is a contravention of House rules of order, decorum, and procedure.

In ruling a question out of order, the Chair may suggest that it be rephrased in order to make it acceptable to the House. Or, the Speaker may recognize another Member to pose the next question. In cases where such a question has been posed, if a Minister wishes to reply, the Speaker, in order to be equitable, has allowed the Minister to do so.

The Speaker may also direct that certain questions posed during Question Period be instead placed on the Order Paper. These are questions which, in the opinion of the Chair, are not urgent or are of such a technical or detailed nature as to require a written response.

Okay. We had a continuation.

One other thing, page 632 under Points of Order:

Although Members frequently rise claiming a point of order, genuine points of order rarely occur. Indeed, points of order are often used by Members in attempts to gain the floor to participate in debate; in such cases, the Speaker will not allow the Member intervening to continue.

Just a correction in response to the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre. There were two similar-sounding names. The questions raised yesterday were not by the Member for Athabasca-Redwater; they were from the Member for Calgary-Hays. So I want to correct that.*

Secondly, to the hon. Member for St. Albert. By the end of the day the pages will place on your desk those sections from Beauchesne that I referred to for required reading, sections 403 to 420. Starting tomorrow, I can assume that every member of this Assembly will be rising virtually on every question to raise a point of order because you'll all have the stuff right in front of you.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the committee to order.

Bill 13

Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments or questions or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. minister of finance and President of the Treasury Board.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. In response to some of the questions from opposition yesterday I think it's important to get them on the record. The greatest concern seemed to be about some money that was spent in 2008-2009. Its relevance to the spending proposed now I'm not sure of, but if that's what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar considered relevant, then it's just our public duty to respond.

The $200 million was one-time funding that was a grant to the health authorities and was reported in the third-quarter fiscal update released on February 26, 2009. The $200 million was reallocated from a number of Health and Wellness programs that had significant lapses that year, including health facilities infrastructure. It was a one-time support to help the regional health authorities address the significant deficits they were forecasting for 2008-09. It was not earmarked for specific programs, and it supported a variety of services.

The hon. member also questioned the need for more funding for the offices of the Legislature, particularly the office of the Chief Electoral Officer, which would clearly be to include material, supplies, and other such preparations for a full province-wide enumeration.

In another display of stunning irrelevance, he also questioned the appointment of the returning officers. They were listed in the Gazette by the Chief Electoral Officer on March 15.

Those appear to be all of the questions, relevant or not, Mr. Chairman.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. It's very kind of the President of the Treasury Board to stay. Since he's here, I have some extemporizing I can go on about, which he doesn't need to concentrate on, but I do have a couple of questions, while I do have his attention, that I've always been curious about.

3:40

The actual figures that appear in the Appropriation Act: I can't figure out where they come from. Is this a percentage of the budget? In past interim supply appropriation requests we've been told, for example, that this is 40 per cent of the budget even though it's covering time from the beginning of April to the end of June, which is not 40 per cent of the year. Evidently, there is some front-end loading on some of the summer programs, and that's why that much money was needed. I guess my question is: is the interim supply request essentially a percentage that is asked for?

Secondly, how are the amounts determined that have to do with the capital expense in each of the departments that are listed? Again, is that a percentage of anticipated capital investment over the year, or is it something specific? I guess I'm sort of wondering how much time the government puts into interim supply.

Those are a couple of questions that I'd like the President of the Treasury Board and Minister of Finance and Enterprise to answer.

Two other things I want to raise while I have his attention. I'm finding that the current budget process is not very . . . [interjection] No, it's not. It's a terrible process. It's not giving good information. The minister and I have spoken about this before. Currently the information that's available in the budget books is minimal. Budgets that used to be expanded out quite a bit so that you could actually tell what programs are being funded under a given category are now so rolled up that you get a budget vote. I spend a lot of time in departmental budget debates asking what programs are funded and for how much, which is not an incredibly good use of time, but I have no other way to get the information.

Now, if I go back and I look at the previous year's annual report for a given ministry, I can sometimes sort of figure out what's being funded under a given vote line. If he's looking for an example, look under the Culture and Community Spirit budget under AFA, Alberta Foundation for the Arts, and he'll get a sense of what I mean. Or even if you look under a budget line. This got moved, but major exhibitions and fairs used to be a vote line under community development and now it's under Agriculture, I think, or maybe Municipal Affairs.

Anyway, you know, we get this very short description, and there are millions, sometimes billions of dollars. AHS, Alberta Health Services, appears as one line in the health department budget, and it's billions of dollars. We don't know what's in it, and there's no way to find out. You can go back and look at the previous year's – it's actually at that point almost two years ago that the annual report applies to – and try and figure out if the programs that are talked about in there are turning up under a given line.

I just don't understand why we have to spend so much time – and it's not just members of the opposition; it's members of the government caucus – trying to figure out what the heck is there. I just don't find it a good use of time. It's not talking about why the government made certain choices or why they've identified these as priorities or what they'd like to do differently or what they think they're doing particularly well. It's almost strictly an accounting gesture.

The entire budget process. We have, basically, three responders to the budget speech. The budget speech itself is delivered. You have two members of the government caucus move and second it, and then you have a response from the Leader of the Official Opposition, and I'm pretty sure that's it. Then we go into the actual estimates debates for each ministry. So, really, our opportunity to talk about the overall direction and choices of the government is by doing it through the appropriation budgets, as I'm doing right now, for interim or for the Appropriation Act for the actual budget itself, which comes at the end of all of the supply votes.

It does occur to me that I don't get a real opportunity to talk back and forth with the government about why they've made the choices they have. I'm looking again for the plan, and what I'm getting is: boom, bust, pray; boom, bust, pray. I don't have any other way to get a sense of this. You know, we get a boom, many things happen, then we get a bust, many things go wrong, and then we all pray. The government leads us in prayer in the hope that we get another boom, and then we go into another boom cycle.

Already people are talking about: employment figures are up; housing starts are up. They're talking about another boom starting to happen in Fort McMurray. Activity is going up in the support services around Edmonton. People in Calgary are looking happier every day. I'm thinking: yeah, here we go one more time. All of the world-wide indexes and the Canadian indexes are saying: okay; our recession was officially over I think it was the third quarter of 2009 or something. Truly, in Alberta, because we are so blessed here, I think it could be argued in many ways that we hardly had a recession. We sort of had a hiccup.

I thank the chair for allowing me leeway to broaden the discussion during this appropriation debate in Committee of the Whole, but I am looking for those plans. I would like to know whether there is a plan, after the prayer, that is being considered by this minister. Is there a plan that we're going to come out of this and devote a certain amount of resource revenue to endowment and savings plans that would in fact fund postsecondary education 15 years down the line? What is the plan around revenue from the government in the future?

I talked about a white paper and developing a white paper and leading a couple of years' worth of discussion with the public about how we feel it's appropriate. Should we be dumping income tax completely and going to a consumption tax system? Should we be freeing up that educational property tax to the municipalities, leaving it to them? Fine, but then how are we going to fund education? Those kinds of discussions never seem to happen, and I wish I could spend less time prying for details and more time looking at those larger discussions.

I'm quite concerned that we take nonrenewable resource revenue and apply it directly to today's budget. It came out of the ground yesterday, and essentially we're spending it through the government coffers today. This resource belongs to all of us, including future generations. Well, really, can I say that we've had the benefit of this for two generations, to be on the positive side of that? My father comes from Black Diamond, a mile away from Turner Valley, the original site of the gas in Alberta. He's now in his 80s. That stuff was happening when he was a boy. He was on the derrick that left Leduc, and the next crew in was the crew that was there when Leduc No. 1 went. In his lifetime he's seen, really, the beginning of that natural resource revenue come in and subsidize the government. When he dies, which I hope is not soon, will his grandchildren or his grandchildren's grandchildren still be able to benefit from that?

I can see the government going forward with a deliberate strategy to say: building assets is always a good place to spend your resource revenue because you have an asset. Building bridges and roads and opera houses and – I better not say sports arenas – recreducational facilities, curling rinks in rural Alberta: those things are assets. They're tangible. They're worth something. I think that is a reasonable place to spend that money, never to spend it on operational money because operational money, as the minister well knows, is gone. It paid for a service, and it's gone, and that service is not here now. It's been consumed; it's over.

I'll just close by gently – no, not gently – kind of whacking the government a bit about why you cannot get your timing better. This is my 15th budget. This is my 14th interim supply request. So there was only one year in the 14 years I've been elected and have served where the government has been successful in bringing in a budget and passing it before the 1st of April. The government is in complete control of when we are called in, when budgets are due, when all of this is produced. I mean, you can say that it's the opposition's fault if you wish, but really you've got all the cards. You choose the game. You choose when it's played. So why are we so unable to do that?

I realize now that some of your revenue is intricately tied to the federal government, and you're waiting for federal government amounts on certain programs. But, sorry; that's not enough to be an excuse for why 14 years out of 15 we're looking at interim supply in a province where, you know, you've been in control for 40 years. Really, your track record is bad when you look at it that way. You should be able to do better, and I don't understand why you choose not to because you have all the cards to be able to choose to do it.

I've given you a whole bunch of stuff to talk about. I'll sit down and let the minister respond to me. Thank you very much for the opportunity.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thanks to the hon. member. I'll try and cover it. If I miss some, she can send me a note, and we'll do it. By and large, most departments would be a percentage of their operating. If it's for a quarter, it would be that way. If it's for a month, obviously it would be reduced like this one. But some of the departments have front-end costs, just exactly what you've suggested, and some of them have agencies that also have front-end costs that they need to move. There is no hard-and-fast rule that says: that's what it is. It really is just working from experience and working backwards, to a certain degree, and saying: we know that that particular department will need that many dollars before this particular time. It's different for several of the departments; for most of the departments it's not.

On the right department for reporting, we've moved up, as you'll know, the business plan reporting, consolidated and complete disclosure, to June. We used to not get the final numbers for a year out until September or October, so you're half a year behind. We've asked and expect all of our departments to be able to have final year-end in June of this year, which will allow you to see the reconciliation between what we said and what's there. I know it's kind of closing the gate when the horse is gone, looking backwards, but that does give you an indication of where exactly we hit our target and where we may have missed, and then that may explain changes in the coming year's budget if you actually have that document close enough to budgeting.

We've tried to make our budget document more readable. We're here all the time, and it is still a difficult document if you don't understand or if you're looking for more detail than a budget would contain. I will make the very sincere offer to sit down – and I know we have shared with the opposition – about the new format we've taken. I don't have any problems, hon. member, if there is a better way to display the numbers, even to go to more columns as opposed to just out-years. What was last year? Comparable? What do we need to do? I'm absolutely open to suggestions from you about how the document becomes not only more readable but, in a kind of capsule, more understandable for Albertans. We do get paid all year long to look on an ongoing basis at it, and we have relooked at our Measuring Up documents, too. I think you know that I just don't believe you set a target that you can get just because it's an easy target.

That document has been shared with other provinces. In my opinion – and I think you would agree – there's more to a budget than simply aligning money with the issue. If you don't have that other document that says, "Yeah, yeah, you spent your money," did you actually get anything done? So the two documents need to be worked together.

On the detail level that we go into, I know you've seen our blue book. You know, that is probably six inches or eight inches thick at the end of the year. I know that can be transferred into computer language that might make it far easier for people to look into a category where they want to look without thumbing through it.

Somewhere between the blue book and this book we can come to an understanding about what it is. I know you're not suggesting anything different, but there are legal and accounting principles that we must adhere to to do it, and if we can achieve those and if there's a more clear way to get it across, then I'm all ears. I mean, I've had to deal with accountants for close now to 35 years in my business life and this thing, and it's not quite as simple as we'd like it.

Obviously, I agree. I think the ideal time is to have the budget completed before year-end, no question, but, you know, when so much of our budget is based on outside activity – what's the dollar going to do? what's oil going to do? – you really do hate to go in and make decisions that are unrealistic. When you see oil activity coming back so strong in Alberta and you see what the dollar is doing, in many ways you want to get as close to the date that says: well, we can't wait any longer. But we need to be fair to Albertans, to not lowball, highball, or manipulate the numbers for price and volumes of oil or bitumen and to keep an eye on natural gas.

I know that with some of the extreme weather that was happening in the States, maybe in a selfish way from a Treasury point of view we had anticipated a little greater movement in natural gas. We used to see real volatility. When the cold blast hit the east coast, it would go up two bucks. You think: "Well, we know they've got the shale gas. We know it's not all in production. We know it's maybe not quite as easy to produce as it might be in areas that aren't populated." So you watch these events.

We start our budgeting from the expenditure side in June, basically. To the process, we meet with dozens and dozens of groups: nonprofits, chambers, unions. We have a list. I think it's over a hundred representatives from different groups through the spectrum of nonprofits right up to the Canadian federation of businesses. Anyway, it's as thorough a consultation process as it could be.

I hope I've answered your questions. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Laurie, go ahead.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. Sorry. The one piece that the minister didn't get to was the longer range shape of things and what might be considered, since we're talking about interim, looking into the future. What are some of those larger pieces that the government is looking at? Would they consider something like producing a white paper on government revenue, or are they committed to the revenue stream that they have currently?

I mean, there's a lot of talk out there right now about different ways of raising money to operate government that are fairer. It seems to me we've just added on and added on and added on to a system, and it's very convoluted and filled with, in some cases, dumb rules and overlapping programs. Maybe it's time to stop and take a step back and clean it up and start over.

If he can give me a little bit of time talking about what he thinks he sees for the future shape of revenue gathering and whether he is content with continuing to use nonrenewable resource revenue to supplement today's budget – if we took that out of the budget, we'd be running one-third of a deficit, which is a big chunk of change – I'll let him talk about that.

Mr. Snelgrove: You have to come to Treasury Board estimates.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, do you wish to respond?

Mr. Snelgrove: No. Mr. Chairman, I'd just invite her to the Treasury Board estimates, that will be coming soon.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I listened with a lot of interest to that last back and forth. A lot of good information there. I know that one of the things I respect about the Member for Edmonton-Centre is that she always wants to know what the details are of these vast amounts of money that we approve in these interim supply acts, these appropriations acts. I don't think that's too much for her to ask. Frankly, I think that it's just basic, you know, transparency and accountability.

There's a lot of money, a lot of huge dollar amounts, in this act: Municipal Affairs, $100 million; Seniors and Community Supports, $400 million. I don't even want to see what Health is. What's Health here? Health, $2.2 billion. Just huge, huge amounts of money.

I think that we could cut down on a lot of the waste in government. Governments are wasteful. Most governments, if not all governments, are wasteful. One of the ways we can cut back on waste is to ensure that we have very transparent and detailed documents of what money is being spent on. When, for example, we have, you know, monies going to movies about the oil sands that paint the oil sands in a bad light that cost the government $50,000, well, those type of things could be eliminated very quickly if there were very detailed numbers in advance of approving that kind of money. I would really like to see more effort in that regard.

Now, I do want to say, though, that there's no doubt that the books – I've compared many of the government of Alberta's fiscal updates and their fiscal plan and their budget plan that they release at budget. It is better than a lot of provinces, more detailed, and that's good. That's a good start, but it isn't detailed enough.

If we want to get rid of some of the waste and have a real discussion about how to balance the budget without affecting core programs, doing so in a way that we can still build priority infrastructure and so forth, it would be a lot easier to have that debate. The debate would be a lot more thorough and effective if we had a very clear breakdown of all the different expenses, all the different programs, all the different subsets of programs that go on in government, a detailed breakdown of which roads are being paved. Which roads are we planning to pave with this money? Which roads are we planning to widen?

I was talking with a constituent after the budget was introduced by the Treasury Board President. He lives out in an area where they're expanding the road in rural Alberta. It's a huge project. It's expanding highway 9 over to Drumheller, and that goes right through my constituency on its way to Drumheller. He said: "Why on Earth? We had a pretty good road there. Clearly, it needs some upgrading, but why would we do that this year, when we have such a huge deficit number?" And I said, "Well, you know, there's a line item, billions of dollars on road infrastructure, and that's kind of all we hear until it's actually paved. Once you start repaving something, it's kind of hard to stop, obviously, because they've torn up the whole road." And he said, "Well, why are we doing this when we have a $7 billion cash shortfall and a $3.7 billion deficit?" I forget what the actual number is off the top of my head, $3.7 billion – that's right – and a $6.2 billion cash shortfall. And there is no good reason.

You know, when all of a sudden the economy tanks and we have this boom-bust cycle, if we had in these types of acts, Bill 13 for example, a detailed list of what was included to Transportation – what's included in this $160 million of expense, you know, $151 million of which is capital investment? Which roads are we talking about here? Which ones? Can they wait? Can we forgo that project? Can we do without twinning that bridge for another year? In some places you can't. In some places it's got to be done right away. In some places you can delay.

I'll give you an example out of my own constituency. In Airdrie eventually we're going to need another overpass on the south side. We're at 43,000 people now. We're going to be at 75,000 within the next 10 to 15 years. We're going to need an overpass there, but we can do without it right now. We don't need it today. We can certainly spread it out and do it, you know, three, four, five, six years from now as we get close to that time when traffic congestion just is about to start to get really tough.

I know we want to plan ahead, and we want to do that. I get that. But when you have a $6.2 billion cash shortfall and a $3.7 billion deficit, you have to delay those things even if it means a little bit of annoyance. That's just the way it goes. You've got to deal with that traffic light for another year instead of having an overpass.

That's just the way it goes sometimes, whereas in Airdrie – same issue – our need for schools this year, for the last several years, is literally a crisis. They've actually partitioned my little boy's library at Nose Creek elementary in Airdrie and turned it into two classrooms. There's an hour, essentially, where the kids can go in and get a book. They can't stay there because there are classes going on, but they can get a book and go out. It's that serious. I mean, it is nuts. My little guy is in a class of over 30, but there are some classrooms of over 40 kids. It's just unbelievable. We've put on all the portables that the facility can hold. There's no room for portables anymore on the core. The core can only support so many portables, and we can't even put any more portables on our schools.

We have this need, and we need that money now, and we're willing in our community, in Chestermere and Airdrie, to forgo any other planned projects, road paving, anything. We're ready to forgo that for another year or two years if it would mean getting those schools built.

That's what I mean by prioritizing, but it's so hard – so hard – to prioritize when you don't know what the $151 million under Transportation for capital investment is being spent on. So, you know, we have a debate about all these different programs and all these big numbers, but we don't really have anything to debate at all. I mean, how do I know it can be deferred under Employment and Immigration? Maybe there's a program that we could do without this year to help decrease the amount that we're being asked for. Maybe there's something in Culture and Community Spirit. Maybe we're spending too much money on those anti oil sands videos. We can cut those out.

You know, there are all kinds of different areas where if we could see the line by line item in the document here, we'd be able to say: "You know what? We can do without that. Look. We can save $5 million out of that program, or we can save $10 million. We don't need to twin that road or whatever." So that's the biggest frustration I have, and I really would like a response from somebody over there, from the minister, hopefully, on what exactly these amounts are for.

Particularly under Transportation, I'd like to know how much of the expense here under capital investment – I'd like to know which pieces of highway this is slated to pave, what projects this is supposed to deal with. Same with Education. I would like to know how much of that $300,000 capital investment – what exactly is that for? That would be helpful to know as we go forward.

Anyway, I said I would keep it to only 10 minutes today, so I will, but, you know, I'm trying to have a debate here. I hope somebody from the opposite side can explain to me if there's any way that in the future we could have more detail on this appropriation bill and what specific projects are under this that we're paying for when we pass this huge amount of money, a total of $4.9 billion, that we're approving today. And it's this thick. That's what we have approving $4.9 billion. That thick. That's a very thin piece of paper. Not very helpful.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Chair. I find the discussion that's gone on interesting, and it's somewhat encouraging in some areas to hear the minister of finance say that he'd be open to some different ideas and some formats, more years being shown in the columns and those types of things, which is encouraging for myself to think of. Sitting on other boards and going through budgets, I just find it very frustrating to have a $4.9 billion budget that we're supposed to vote on and say: yes, we'll go for that. It's six pages with, you know, just a few numbers on those pages, totalling $4.9 billion. So I, too, want to put my request to the finance minister that we need to change this process.

It was also encouraging to me because I've asked many times: "Why do we have to spend this time on interim supply? Why don't we just have a budget come out on time?" It was encouraging to know that, actually, 1 year in 15 they did that, so the precedent is there that we could do it. I would encourage the government for next year: let's do it. Let's get in the House. Let's have the budget and vote on it so that we don't have to go through interim supply.

It's interesting also, though, that it was mentioned, again, by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre: where do these numbers come from? You know, where's the $160 million in expenses for Transportation going? Where's the $150 million in capital investment actually going? In question period we never have enough time to actually ask those questions, so I'd like to ask it again, and it's been brought up now by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Again, it's been a long-time problem for me. Where is the list? How can we do it? There's nothing that I would like more than to help the government as opposition members, to say "yes, this cut could be made," and they'd know that we're not going to sit there and argue and debate and squeal about it. "Oh, you can't cut there. You can't cut there." We don't know where we can cut because there is no list. I mean, it's so frustrating to have a line item or a number, and you're supposed to vote for it. This is Education.

Okay. They say: oh, you can't vote against that because we're going to lose teachers. Well, is that the only place where money goes? "Oh, you can't vote against that for Justice. It's going to go to defend those who need the help."

There is nothing in this. I will also argue that in our full budget there's nothing other than line items and numbers. What we need is a plan. What we need is a list that says, you know: "Here are our top 15 infrastructure projects. This is the one that's carrying over, and this is what we need in this interim supply for the first 30 days." Whereabouts is this $1.5 billion in capital that we have here going for expenses in Transportation? Are there not areas where we can cut? We in the opposition have said: yes, there are, but we need a list.

We truly believe that if the government was to give us a list on these things, we could sit down and prioritize and agree on what we could do to reduce our deficit. We don't need to spend $4.9 billion in such a short order of time and not have a really good debate on what the priority is. Is it to bring in the arts and to have a couple of films that are filmed here in Alberta? Is it to study the caribou so that we can't proceed with highway 63 and we've got to have two more years? What is the list? What is the line item value?

I also found it very interesting that the minister of finance said: well, we'd like to hold off to the very last minute if possible so that we can be as accurate as possible. That's great, and it's wonderful, but the fact is that we have that dilemma every year. So why hold off? I know that Albertans would not be upset if, in fact, we made the budget in February and the price of oil was to go up in the spring. We'd say: oh, we have a surplus. I just don't think there are going to be too many Albertans that are going to be pointing their fingers at this government and saying: what poor planning. No. We had the plan. Things changed.

The hon. minister of finance says: well, you know, when that cold snap hits in the eastern U.S., we used to see a jump of $2. That isn't what the budget and the planning are. What was dismaying to me, though, was that it sounded to me like the government was actually planning on the budget and on this interim supply: we want to wait to the last minute so we can spend absolutely every last dollar that we think is going to be coming in. It's just not the proper way, when we're running a huge deficit, to be looking at that. What we should be looking at is: what are our priorities? What's actually in this interim supply of $4.9 billion that we really need to press ahead with? For example, some of these overcrowded schools, whether it's Fort McMurray, Beaumont, Airdrie: we know that. I am very confident that Albertans would say: that should be higher up on the priority list.

Highway 63 and highway 3 to Medicine Hat are areas where the government department has said: "These are areas that need to be upgraded. We should be going there." Is that where this $1.5 billion is going? I don't think so. For the last two years there hasn't been a ton of pavement going on highway 63. So what are the priorities? Is it a back road going between two cities that already have an adequate road, or is it a main corridor that we need to upgrade and see that it's working there?

I just want to go over the format for a minute. Again, the hon. minister of finance talked about: do we need more years in the columns? Yes, we do. Do we need more details? Absolutely. He talked about the blue book and the necessity of it being six inches thick. It's nice that we have it electronically now, but I must say that it's much easier for me to sit down and flip through the blue book. Looking through there – I don't know – it just pops out more to me.

Mr. Hinman: Yes, it does. I just don't try to hide it. I'm not going to do anything fancy. [interjection] Sorry, Mr. Chair. Sometimes it is entertaining to get sidetracked on the little humorous things that we do here in the House.

To get back to the problem of this interim supply, number one, we shouldn't be doing this. We should be actually going over the budget. We need more detail. It is just so critical. If, in fact, we want to balance the budget, if we want to do a better job, it means we have to have better information. We need to have more detail. It's very difficult to make a decision, to vote on something and say: "Oh, yes, the Treasury Board needs $62 million. Municipal Affairs needs $1.04 billion." What for? How can you vote against or for something when there are no details in it and it's just supposed to be carte blanche? "Here it is. We need $4.9 billion. Let's rush this through so that we can go on with running our government."

All of these things are alarming to me. It's concerning to me more so than ever. When I was first in this House, gratefully we were running a balanced budget or a surplus. The last two years that's not been the case. We need to do our due diligence. We need the information, and it needs to be public so that we can go back and say to those we represent, to those we are collecting tax dollars from and spending on: "This is where it is. You know, if you're not happy with this project – it's not going to the southwest ring road or the southeast ring road. We don't want to spend it at this point. Let's save it, then, until we can do that."

The bottom line, Mr. Chair, is that we need better information. We need more time to go over that in committee, where we can ask the details, make an informed decision, and not just simply a yea or a nay for a one-line item and say: well, that's good enough.

I appreciate the time to speak on this. I hope that going into next year we will not see an interim supply, that we will not need the Appropriation Act because we'll have it done. That will be exciting to me. We can just get right into the budget. I hope we change that whole format, how we're doing that, so that it's more functional, that we can actually look at and make some good, sound decisions on how we're going to prioritize and spend the tax dollars here in Alberta for the betterment of our whole province and not just for some different areas.

I appreciate that time, and I'll look forward to any more discussion on Bill 13.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

Are you ready for the question on Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 13 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That's carried.

Bill 2 Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It is a privilege here to speak in favour of Bill 2. I know the sponsor of this bill, the MLA for Calgary-Nose Hill. I'd like to thank him for bringing this bill forward at this time. I think it's a measure that goes a long way toward increasing the protection for individuals and families affected by family violence by holding accountable those who violate protection orders and makes Alberta's penalties for these violations stronger than they were. Again, I'd like to commend him for bringing this bill at this time.

Alberta has higher than average rates of family violence. There's no doubt that we need to do everything possible not only to crack down on family violence but at the same time to support families in that we have mechanisms in place so that people are hopefully living caring, sharing, productive lives. If the government could do that through this bill by having a little bit more authority with the penalties that are out there, that is excellent.

The nice thing, too, about this act is that it amalgamates a couple of processes here. The legislation will make it clear what the penalties should be when an emergency protection order is breached by a respondent or an abusive family member. Prior to this, a breach of an emergency protection order was dealt with under civil contempt proceedings or under section 127 of the Criminal Code. This stated it was an offence to breach an order of the court. These two avenues do not specifically address family violence, and there was a wide variance in what penalties were used for breaches of emergency protection orders. This bill will clarify that and allow for a more streamlined process or allow for these types of things to less easily fall through the cracks.

The bill also clarifies that evidence which a Court of Queen's Bench judge must consider when reviewing an emergency protection order that was granted at Provincial Court. These are two different levels of court that maybe in some cases weren't seeing the same evidence, or the judges weren't seeing what the standards were from other levels of court. This makes the process a lot better and a lot easier for practitioners who are out there trying to enforce emergency protection orders.

Like I said at the beginning, the emergency protection order is a tool that can be used immediately to address the safety of victims of family violence. It can provide that the abuser have no contact or communication with the victim, that the victim can stay at a residence while the abuser is not able to, and other conditions that can provide for immediate safety of the victim and the family members. You see, it's very important for people who are suffering from family abuse to be able to go to our court system and have an emergency protection order put into place quickly.

Without that mechanism or having that ability, people are going to be out there suffering the vagaries of an abuser. If they can't get to our court system and use it effectively, well, then, we haven't done our job. This, hopefully, will enable fewer people to become abused, and we're hopefully going to be able to separate the abuser from the victim and then get them into some support systems to rebuild their lives. That's the other arm of this picture that we've got to work on, too.

Nevertheless, this is a good bill. Like I mentioned earlier, we have a large volume of domestic violence cases here in Alberta. It's something we should be continually striving to lower. In fact, the latest information from Statistics Canada showed that Alberta was the third highest in proportion of spousal violence, right behind Nunavut and Quebec. It's not really a pleasant picture. Nevertheless, this should hopefully bring in some rules that maybe provide a little more safety for individuals.

Looking at the bill as a whole, this is a good measure to try and provide victims of violence with an ability to get to court, an ability to separate themselves from an abusive relationship, an ability to find, hopefully, for themselves and their children protection. That's what our court system is there for, to protect people from unwanted and hurtful situations.

Again, I'd just like to commend the hon. member for bringing this forward. It moves our legislation in a more streamlined fashion as well as in a fashion which will go quite a way to protecting more individuals.

I'd like to thank you for the opportunity to speak to this, and we'll hear some other members speak on this.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'm going to speak in favour of Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. It's an important bill, I think, that adds stiff penalties for those who ignore protective orders issued by the courts. I think that we can all agree in this House that actions certainly speak louder than words, especially with people who have broken the law. When a court issues an order, it must be respected, with no ifs, ands, or buts about it, because it's the law.

I'd like to commend the hon. member – as I always say in this House, one of my favourite members of the Legislature – the good doctor from Calgary-Nose Hill, for bringing this forward. It's a very good act, and I really liked the way that this member went about it, too, Mr. Chair. It deserves recognition that he always goes out of his way to do a briefing with members of the opposition or to answer any questions that we may have about the bill. At least, that's been my experience. I find that it's just very refreshing. I actually feel that this member takes very seriously bringing a bill to the Legislature. He only brings bills forward that he believes in and that he thinks are appropriate, not just ones that are stuck on his desk by some minister. I really do appreciate that very much. He's a good example of a parliamentarian.

Back to Bill 2. As I said earlier, when a court issues an order, Mr. Chair, it needs to be respected, no ifs, ands, or buts about it. The situation as it stands with regard to this is certainly not good enough with regard to the penalties for those who ignore protective orders issued by the courts. If a fearful wife and mother, a fearful woman, a fearful anybody receives the protection order from the court, there are almost no meaningful consequences for ignoring the order. This is unconscionable at the present time. A violator can be found in contempt of court, but there are no specified penalties for that contempt of court. It's a civil offence.

Someone that intimidates children – it has been well documented – receives nothing more than, really, a slap on the wrist. This clearly is not good enough. It's obvious that if you want to protect children in general, you take family violence seriously, and you do something about it. Based on police-reported data, when a child is physically or sexually assaulted, it's by someone they know 85 per cent of the time. I just shake my head when I hear statistics like this, when I learn of statistics like this. This is based on police data and investigated cases.

Based on our most recent data, from 2007, 53,000 children and youth were victims of assault. Has it gone up in 2010? It probably has. Thirty per cent of those perpetrators were family members in this province. The message is clear. The family home must be a safe place, a refuge from harm. Usually in the vast majority of circumstances parents are caring. They're loving. They would do anything to protect their children. Their rights to be parents and their ability to be parents are not in any way being questioned by this bill, but there is that percentage – whether it's 1 or 2 per cent, it's far too large – where the abuse happens.

Tragically, sometimes it's sexual abuse, which is just beyond anybody's comprehension in this House. Oftentimes it's verbal abuse and physical, violent abuse. It does happen, and many of us, I think, have seen what happens. I don't think many of us have seen it actually happening in front of our eyes although I'm sure some of us have. But all of us have seen and known victims of the abuse, and it is just heart wrenching to see.

If someone is brave enough to say, "Enough; that's gone too far," to step forward and get a protective order, it must have force and real consequences for disobeying it. I generally like the penalties included in this bill. I like mandatory minimum sentences. Surprise, surprise. Albertans need assurance that broken laws have real punishments, real consequences. Wrist slaps don't count. They're not good enough.

A first offence will allow a judge to levy a fine of $5,000 or up to 90 days in jail. On this I would like to see a mandatory minimum. All I see is a maximum. On the second offence there's a minimum jail sentence of 14 days, for a third offence 30 days. Although these penalties are a step in the right direction, I think they still could be stronger. I do think that we're moving in the right direction here, but these are very serious. I think that when these protective orders are violated, the consequences should be very serious in virtually all cases, with very little discretion given.

Although these penalties are a step in the right direction, I think they could be stronger. Someone that repeatedly ignores court orders, for example, should be treated harshly, especially when it comes to family violence. I really do like the upper-end punishments in this bill. A second offence could land you in prison for 18 months. Very good. A third would see someone behind bars for 24 months. This is very good. We all know that violence, if left unchecked, will escalate. A threat will lead to an assault, and an assault can lead to a death or a child being exploited and harmed and victimized for all time that they're on this Earth.

Forty-one per cent of child and youth homicides were committed by a family member. It's usually the people children trust most. It's usually parents. It's usually, unfortunately, the father or the male figure in the house when it does happen. Again, I want to repeat that the vast majority of fathers out there would step in front of a train for their kids if it meant taking care of them and keeping them from harm. But for some reason there's an insidious population out there that feels that they have the right to abuse the people that are closest to them.

Another 27 per cent of these acts were committed by someone the minor knew, and that's a big warning for all parents out there to make sure that they are aware of who their children are associating with. Whose house are they going to? Who are their friends? Who are the parents of their friends? We need to be careful with that because it's incredible how sneaky and conniving some of these individuals are. That's not to say that we need to be suspicious of everyone. We just have to do our due diligence and make sure our children are hanging around good people.

I think this government could be doing more on the family violence file, though. There is more that they could do. For example – and this is a big one for us in the Wildrose – the government has dragged its feet on proclaiming the Mandatory Reporting of Child Pornography Act, that the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek proposed. It was passed last year. We have begged this government over and over and over again to put a date for implementing the bill into effect and to announce it, to make it not only law but completely in force. There has not been any action on it, and that is unacceptable. The Mandatory Reporting of Child Pornography Act: there's just no acceptable reason why we haven't proclaimed that bill. Surely, the members opposite and the members running for leader of the PC Party and so forth will find it in their hearts to proclaim this bill and make it mandatory to report some of the most disgusting abuse that happens in our society.

There is also a motion before the House, Motion 503, that urges the government to create a task force to reduce the exploitation of children. The motion isn't a government motion; it's a private member's motion. I think it's great that that member is putting the motion forward, but this isn't being put forward by the Minister of Children and Youth Services. It would be good if that minister would look into the creation of that task force, and I urge her, as someone who I know obviously cares very much about the protection of children, to do that.

I like the progress that this bill will make, but it's obvious to me and to Albertans that the safety of families needs to be a higher priority of this government. It's not that they're not doing anything on it, but they're not doing enough. I assure Albertans that to ensure the protection of children and youths in any place that they are is an absolute priority for the Wildrose caucus and will be a priority of our government if we are elected thus in the next election.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate the opportunity to get on the record in Committee of the Whole on Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. To my reading of it this is the "we really mean it" amendment bill.

As a bit of an historical vignette, this piece of legislation has a really interesting pedigree to it. The original version of the bill was introduced by Alice Hanson, who was then the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Beverly and sat in the Official Opposition at the time, which was a Liberal caucus then as well. It is one of the very few bills ever brought forward in this Assembly by a member of the opposition that passed second reading.

There was a great deal of emotional investment in the act. There were some really amazing speeches from various members of the Assembly, and it's worthwhile to go back and have a look at that. It's very revealing how many people had family members who had been victims of spousal abuse or family violence, may themselves have been in that situation. Very, very interesting. This would have been about 1995, '96 maybe, and the bill passed second reading.

The member, Alice Hanson, who's now passed away but was then the Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Beverly, did a number of consultations over the summer, brought the bill back in the fall in Committee of the Whole to do some amendments. Through the use of a procedural parliamentary process – it was perfectly legitimate; at the time I remember thinking it was a dirty trick – in Committee of the Whole there was a motion to have the chairperson leave the chair. The chairperson left the chair, and therefore they had to rise and go back into the regular proceeding of the House. The bill literally disappeared into ether because it had not been passed. Nothing had been done with it. It hadn't been reported. It was nowhere. It literally disappeared. The motion was brought forward by the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Then when I was first elected, in '97, I reintroduced a version of the bill. It didn't get up because I think my number pull was so far back. Then in '98 or '99 the Member for Calgary-Fish Creek brought it forward again under her name, and the bill passed.

It has come back to us, I think, once for sure for amendment. We strengthened a number of the things that had been identified as problematic, particularly around giving more weight to kind of not abusing the victim further. In situations, for example, where the police intervene, they're taught, they're trained to move the easiest person. So when you've got a combative father and husband and a victimized wife or spouse, they tend to get the wife to leave. Well, now you've uprooted the wife and the kids, and they're gone. They don't have their toothbrushes, their teddy bears, their pajamas, nothing, and they go and stay at a friend's for the night or go to a shelter. What the legislation was trying to do was give the police more teeth and more options to legally say: "Nope. Sorry, buddy. It's you. The law says that you're the one that should be out of here." And it worked with a number of other processes.

I'm very pleased to support this bill. I'm very pleased to see that the main thrust of the bill is to establish that offence and penalty provision inside of the legislation for breaches of emergency protection orders. Someday I'll give you a little historical vignette on the whole history of emergency protection orders and all the different grassroots movements that brought that one into play and eventually got it sort of legitimized and legalized through legislation. Others have talked about exactly what the act does, so I won't go into that.

I think that the points that I want to bring up specifically here are my overall concerns about our failure as a society and as a generation to have been successful in minimizing the severity and the number of family violence incidents. I honestly don't understand why. I've been working on this issue for almost 40 years, and I'm baffled. We should have been on top of this one. We've poured money into education. We've poured money into and made it a requirement that people that are in front-line service delivery – dentists, dental hygienists, doctors in emergency, nurses, EMTs – anybody that saw something they thought might be spousal violence, was to report it and, you know, move generally a woman but sometimes a man into assistance. We have shelters. We have support programs. And guess what? We turn more women away from shelters than we are able to serve, and we have a fair number of shelter beds in this province now. Granted, you know, our population has increased as well, but we've been utterly unable to get a handle on this.

My concern is that when you escalate to a level of severe violence, you are still in this case where we're talking about an emergency protection order. You still – put this image in your head – have a woman standing on the street with a piece of paper going: "Please don't hurt me, shoot me, knife me, club me. I have an emergency protection order. You can't do that." Not very effective, is it? That's the bottom line. You do have a legal piece of paper, but it really only works if the person that is coming to attack you believes that they should cease doing something because of that legal piece of paper.

What we have now is a legal piece of paper that contains clauses in it that have very, very specific punishments involved, you know, financial punishment with fines that are now going to range between $5,000 and imprisonment, starting with the first offence, of not more than 90 days; then a second offence, 14 days to 18 months; and the third offence, not less than 30 days, not more than 24 months. So, you know, serious stuff. But still, a piece of paper when you're standing on the street and somebody is coming at you with a knife or a shotgun or a club, a tire iron . . .

An Hon. Member: A golf club.

Ms Blakeman: A golf club. Just about anything you want to imagine that could be used as a weapon or even just somebody's fists.

This is the real problem, that we still have those situations. And if anybody is reading this or listening to this online and you're in that kind of difficulty, if you're in that kind of fear, please contact the police. Ask for very specific help to get a personal safety plan put in place.

Now, I will acknowledge here – and you guys hear me talk a lot about the differences between rural and urban and how we're not paying enough attention to urban issues – that in this instance there's a real difference between the resources that are available to urban people that are victims of family violence and rural victims. In the urban areas there are more resources. There are police officers that work in special units that know exactly how to work with someone to develop a personal safety plan so that they do not become a crime statistic as a fatality from spousal abuse. They work with prosecutors in the Justice department. It's a whole team that will come out and work with women. If anybody is listening to that that needs that kind of help, get it. It's there for you. We fund it. That's why it's there.

If you're trying to avoid somebody or not be noticed or hide, it's a little easier to do in a city. There are more people around. It's easier to not get noticed, right? If you're in a rural area, it's easier to get noticed. People instantly start going: "Who are the new people in town? Who moved into that house next to the Johnsons?" You get noticed a lot more when you're in a rural area. You could be much more isolated. It's more difficult for you to get help. You could be dealing with police forces or law enforcement that don't have that kind of specialty training, so it is more difficult to get that kind of direct help. Frankly, there are more guns because it's much more a part of a rural or farm life where you would have guns on the premises for controlling . . .

An Hon. Member: Gophers.

Ms Blakeman: Well, no. I'm just thinking about predators and varmints and things, coyotes and stuff. [interjections] I'm getting help from my farming friends here.

There is a difference there about what's available, and it's simply about numbers. It's about an ability to deliver that service efficiently and effectively in rural areas. So there is a difference there. Definitely, the women that are in urban locations have access to better resources there.

The bottom line is that we still have too many families out there that are dysfunctional to the point where somebody is beating the tar out of somebody else or, worse, they're killing them. That costs all of us. We all pay for the ambulance, for the emergency services, for the court processes, for the rehabilitation processes, for the lost productivity, and, frankly, for the screwed-up kids that are going to be coming out of that family. It costs every one of us real money, bucks on the barrelhead here. This is not a victimless crime. This is not a cheap crime. It's expensive.

I can't tell you what it is we need to do to solve this. I wish I could, but I can't. I don't know why we have utterly failed to raise the next generation to not beat on the people that are closest to them. I don't know how we failed to do that, but we did because the statistics are even worse.

One of the things that this government stopped doing – and I understand why they stopped doing it. It was embarrassing. Okay. Fair enough. But you know what? Woman up here. There are all kinds of analogies and rude things I could say about – find some courage. For heaven's sake, get over it. I don't care if you're embarrassed about publishing annually the statistics of the numbers in the shelters. I can't even remember how long ago it was that the government stopped publishing the numbers of women who are turned away from the shelters.

We know now – you can dig it out from places if you're determined enough, but that shouldn't be how it works – that we turn away more people that come to shelters than we're able to find space for. I know that's embarrassing for the government. Tough, because the rest of us need to know that. We need to know what those numbers are and how many of those people are out there and looking for assistance because it reflects on us. It gives us all an out. It lets all of us off the hook because: hey, they're all looked after, right? No, they're not. I think we're somewhere in the tens of thousands range of women that are turned away from shelter spaces in Alberta at this point. I don't mean 30,000. I mean 13,000, if I remember the last statistic that I heard, but I'm out of date by a couple of years there. I think we all need to know that information to understand how large the issue is in our province and in our cities and in our communities.

The other thing that happens there is – and I just have to speak out on behalf of women who don't have children – that the women who get accepted into the shelters first and get space looked after are women with children, and you can understand why that happens. It makes perfect sense. They've got little kids. You can't leave a kid out on the street. You can't say: "Well, go couch surfing at a friend's place. Go and sleep at a friend's place for a couple of nights." You can't do that if you've got a couple of kids with you. So women with children get admitted to these shelters, and they will be taken care of. Women that turn up at a shelter without children: those are the statistics of women that got turned away.

So we have to discriminate. There is discrimination there, and the discrimination is against battered women who don't have children. It's not that we want to do that, but that's the way it works. That's tough. I mean, the idea, the thought behind that is that, well, they can find some other kind of help. They could find a friend to stay with for a couple of days and then move on to another friend and work something else out.

To me it's still a reflection of how we make excuses and how we deal with what is a really insidious and pervasive crime against our society. I'm offended when a woman is beaten because she's a partner to someone that thinks that it's okay to beat on her. That's an offence to me, it's an offence to every person sitting in here, and we need to think of it that way.

This bill is a good step in the right direction to show we really mean it and here's the punishment if you don't obey those protection orders, but we still have a heck of a long way to go on this whole issue. We've actually gone backwards, and it may be that we've managed – you know, way back when, when I first started working on this, I remember doing a project when I was at the Advisory Council on Women's Issues. I tried to figure out how much money a battered spouse – and that can be a man, by the way. Don't think that doesn't happen. It exists in gay and lesbian relationships as well. Nobody gets off the hook on this one. Nobody gets to be proud and say, "Not in my community," because that's simply not true.

I shouldn't get so far off on tangents. I forget. The train leaves the station, and I forget where I was. So no one gets off the hook. The number of people: oh, I don't know. It's totally gone.

Thank you very much for allowing me to speak in favour of this bill. I do think that it's a symptom of a much larger problem that we have.

Oh, the statistics. That's what I forgot. I'm sorry. I sat down, and people laughed at me. They hooted with laughter when I phoned and said, "Well, how much does it cost to send a police car out on a call?" and phoned emergency rooms and the AMA and all of these other places going, “Well, how much does it cost, you know, to pay an ER doctor for a year, and how many visits do we know of that are women going into emergency?” I was trying to figure out how much this could possibly be costing us.

I came out with this figure, and everyone went: “Oh, that’s preposterous. That’s outrageous.” I now know that I was way under. But we weren’t keeping statistics like that then. We didn’t pay any attention to that kind of thing. At the time we started to say that we think 1 woman in 10 is a victim of spousal abuse, and the reaction was total outrage and negation. “Absolutely not. Where did you pluck that number from? Out of thin air? There’s no possible way that 10 per cent of the women in our population have experienced some kind of spousal abuse.”

Well, as years went on, we were able to gather the statistics. We knew we needed to speak the language of the people that held the money and held the power, and that was all about statistics. It was all about showing how many people were affected, how many times the police were called, how many times there was an admission into the ER. It was all the stuff that I was trying to do at that time 30 years ago. By building those statistics, we were able to start to figure that out. What we found out was that it wasn’t 1 in 10. It wasn’t even 1 in 5. It’s much closer to 1 in 3. That’s how much it pervades our society.

Now, it depends on how you’re going to give a definition of abuse or violence, you know, but generally what we do know is that men have much more ability to inflict much more serious harm on women than the other way around. So even where you have statistics that show that battering goes both ways – and we certainly have those statistics – the damage that is done is far more serious and long lasting and lethal to women than to men. That’s not an excuse. That doesn’t say that it’s okay to beat your spouse because it’s a man. That doesn’t make that acceptable in any way, shape, or form, but it does tell you how serious this is and how much it covers our whole society.

I’ve been really interested while I’ve been speaking to see how much other chit-chat has gone on and other conversations and other attention being directed away from what I’m saying and toward other things.

Thank you so much, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members? The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thanks, Mr. Chair. It’s a pleasure to rise and speak on Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. This is an important bill. Many, many individuals in Alberta have looked forward to an increased protection against family violence. It truly is shameful in this day and age that family violence is still such a pressing need here in the province. That’s why I’m pleased to support the government on this bill. Hopefully, they will take a few more steps forward in ensuring that those who commit family violence are treated properly and that those who have the offence committed against them are protected properly.

Family violence is still a serious issue in Canada. I found a shocking statistic from the Minister of Justice in Ottawa, that nearly 2.5 million Canadians over the age of 15 have been stalked in the last five years. That truly is just an unbelievable number to me. Millions of Canadians are being harassed and tormented by people they are close to. Spousal violence itself is almost 15 per cent of all police-reported crime. It’s a known fact that family violence is vastly unreported. They estimate that 30 per cent of spousal abuse victims report their crimes to police. It’s not a confidence in the system to realize that such a low percentage are willing to come forward. They truly feel that the system will fail them; therefore, they won’t come forward.

To quote Edmund Burke, as I often do: all good people have to do is nothing in order for evil to flourish. To me this statement is true here. Too often evil people do something and good people do nothing to protect those who have been victimized. It’s also the situation as it stands with protective orders. When children are harassed and spouses are under threat, victims get a court-approved protection order. There are no specified penalties for violating protective orders. Most often offenders are dealt with in a civil court, where they are found in contempt of court. Contempt of court is handled by the court itself with no set penalties. There’s also the option of charging an offender with criminal charges, with breach of conduct.

With over 1,000 charges filed every year, 70 per cent of these charges are dropped. This is an alarming number to me. Are there that many charges that are inappropriate that have been filed? I don’t think so. To think that with 70 per cent of those charges we are not able to follow through with prosecution is a real concern. Abusive spouses and parents have received the message loud and clear: protective orders don’t mean much. Abusers are fearless. It’s time that we change that. We need to have those who are known abusers held accountable.

Changes to the Protection Against Family Violence Act are a good step in the right direction. Minimum sentences are going to be put in place. A second offence will lead to 14 days in prison, no questions asked. A third offence will see an offender spend 30 days in prison.

We’re falling short, though, on the first offence. One of the problems, I believe, and why we see that 70 per cent of the charges are dropped is because these people are getting off. The repeat offender is the problem. Someone has gotten away. They understand the system, they have that fear and intimidation, and they bully on. The victim, once again, doesn’t see any action happening. It reduces the rates of phoning in. The calls, the cries for help aren’t put in there because the abuse has escalated. The intimidation goes on there. I truly hope that this bill will take a step forward in helping that.

I think it’s appropriate that there are maximum sentences as well. A first offence can lead to 90 days in prison, a second leads to 18 months, and a third means 24 months in prison. These are serious penalties, and I’m glad they’re being proposed.

The part that concerns me the most, though, is the big picture. This is a small piece of a bigger puzzle. Protecting children, especially the vulnerable children, is important. My caucus colleague brought forward the Mandatory Reporting of Child Pornography Act. That was passed, yet it’s never been proclaimed. That’s a real concern for us in the Wildrose. Why do we pass acts like this, that have actually passed in this House yet are not proclaimed? What is the message that we’re actually sending to Albertans about this?

I really have a serious question. How many children would be saved if, in fact, that act was passed, if there was mandatory reporting of child pornography? This is a problem. Again, when we catch somebody and they can get off, where do we go? Only downhill. What we want to do is to raise the bar. We want to protect the children. We want to protect the abused spouses and go forward.

This act, again, is an important act. It’s taking one or two steps forward, which to me is very important. I’m sure that because this is government sponsored, there’ll be a much higher chance that this will in fact be proclaimed, yet it still astounds me how many bills have been passed that have not been proclaimed. Mr. Chair, there are so many things that we need to do.

I like it when a government gets tough on crime. The question is: who are we being tough on? It's shameful, though, when we don't have the proper tools to enforce the laws we already have. Crown prosecutors and judges are extremely short-staffed and overworked, and this has created a backlog in our justice system. As far as I'm concerned, justice delayed is justice denied.

Mr. Chair, I personally know of cases where parents – and this is the most appalling to me – use their children to victimize the other spouse. Again, it's because of the backlog and the lack of social workers and those proper assessment tools that we have way too much abuse going on with children. There's nothing more appalling than parents that are actually using those children to try and hurt the other spouse.

I appreciate the sentiment of this bill. I appreciate the content of this bill. The question is: is it enough?

I just want to read a few other things. How often does a vindictive spouse use and punish the other one unjustly? How often do they use the children to do that? Again, we don't step in and have enough protection in the courts, and the judges are often left in the position where they don't have the time to hear the full case. They have to err on the side of safety rather than on the side of justice to find out: are these allegations just or are they not? Again, it's a two-edged sword, where the children are hurt, are abused, where the spouse is abused, or where the innocent is being accused falsely and can't get a fair day in court because of the backlog and the months that it can take before the air can be cleared or we can come to the truth on these things.

The failing to comply with a protection order is definitely a weakness that we need to address.

The bottom line is that we have some important initiatives. We need to increase shelters for both women and men but definitely for women and children. Too often they look at that, and literally in their minds they do not see a way out of the trap. "What can we possibly do to get out of here?" They say, "You know, we just need to carry on" because they haven't seen the successes of other abuse victims getting out.

Providing safe visitation sites in the province is huge, where children can actually have a safe environment to be visited in when we don't know the situation and how it's going. There are so many areas that we need to do a better job in. The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek's Mandatory Reporting of Child Pornography Act: we need to have this bill passed and proclaimed. It will do us a great favour because we are truly judged as a society on how well we protect those who can't protect themselves.

Again, you know, I don't question any member in this House that we want to be able to say that we have the most just society of anywhere in the world. The only way we can have a just society is when we stop those injustices that occur to our victims. The repetitiveness of crime is known. We know that it goes on there. It's critical that we get these people, that we record them, and that there is mandatory sentencing as it escalates so that there is an actual price paid when these awful acts of violence occur.

With that, I'd just like to say that I support this bill and look forward to it being passed and proclaimed. My heart goes out to all those victims that have suffered in the past because of the inadequate tools that we've had in order to protect those victims.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. I'd like to speak to Bill 2, Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011. I just want to indicate that we are supportive of this approach. I just want to focus on a couple of things; first of all, the purpose of the bill, which is to set out clearer consequences for those who breach protection orders by adding an offence provision for breaches of protection orders. This bill, we understand, aims to decrease violations of protection orders, thereby decreasing family violence, which is highest in Alberta. Across Canada it's highest here.

You know, right now a breach of a protection order can only be pursued in a couple of ways, whether there's a prosecution under a civil contempt or, alternatively, under Criminal Code section 127, which is a general provision for breach of any type of court order and which carries a maximum sentence of two years' imprisonment. Currently under this act perpetrators and victims have little certainty that there will be consequences or even outcomes when the law is breached, and they do not know under what law the perpetrator would be prosecuted. There's also no way to collect data on the type of breach; that is, a civil contempt or a general section 127.

Now, I think that the proposed amendment purports to set out clearly the consequences for breaches of protection orders and to increase the punishment for second and subsequent offences. I just want to indicate that those provisions, I think, will improve the situation. For a first offence a guilty person is liable to a $5,000 fine or no more than 90 days in jail, for a second offence to a term of no less than 14 days and no more than 18 months, and for a third or subsequent offence to imprisonment for a term of not less than 30 days and not more than 24 months.

Mr. Chairman, I want to say that in general we are supportive of the provisions of this bill and supportive of the intention of the government to provide greater assurance that protection orders are obeyed. I think that it will have the intended effect of increasing the protection available to women and children from people who want to harm them.

I want to ask a few questions about this because I think we need to ask the government why there isn't more support in this province given to women seeking shelters and to provide social assistance and other things for them. In 2007, Mr. Chairman, 12,000 women and children were housed by Alberta women's shelters while 14,000 were turned away. Clearly, the 1,569 shelter beds have not been sufficient to meet the needs of women and children in crisis. This government funds less than half of the shelter beds that are in operation.

I think there are some other questions. I hope that someone on the other side, the minister or the proponent of the bill, could answer in what way this legislation is preferable to section 127 of the Criminal Code. What are the advantages of bringing it in under the Protection Against Family Violence Act? For example, when a woman leaves the province, how will the protection order information be available in other provinces, and will they be able to ensure that a perpetrator has a protection order or that it's ensured? I'd like to know how the police forces in Alberta will be properly resourced to deal with breaches that they'll need to investigate and address. I'd like to know from the hon. Solicitor General, perhaps, if additional resources are going to be provided to our police in order that they can effectively enforce the provisions of this act.

Mr. Chairman, I have to say that violence against women and children is a very, very serious problem in this province, and the responses have been inadequate. One of the things that I think we really do need to address is how we provide the supports for women to look after their children when they're faced with a spouse or a former partner who's inclined to abuse them or to use violence, how we protect them. That's more than just toughening the sentences, although this is part of it. It's also making sure that they have the financial resources they need. It's ensuring that they have access to social services, that they have good, safe housing, and that there are sufficient shelters available to them when they need them.

In these areas the government has fallen short by a long shot, and I think that anyone that talks to people who work in shelters for women will tell you that they struggle very hard, and it breaks their heart when they have to turn women away who desperately need the shelter beds because there are far less in this province than actually needed. So I would urge the government, in addition to passing this act, to get serious about providing adequate resources to the women and their children who are in threatened circumstances, and that includes housing. That includes financial support as well as it includes stronger protection from individual perpetrators of violence and abuse.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I will take my seat and indicate that we do think this act is part of the solution, and we will be supporting it. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise and speak to Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act. As other colleagues from my caucus have indicated, we'll be supporting this. Several members have spoken before me, and I don't really care to repeat their comments, most of which I thought were quite valid. There's no question that we are addressing a serious issue with this bill, that it's a step in the right direction, that there are widespread problems with family violence, and that this is only one part of a broader approach to addressing family violence. Every member of this Assembly will condemn family violence.

I thought I would take a chance here, Mr. Chairman, to just get a little bit of evidence on the record. I'm going to quote primarily from a report that comes from the Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics, which is under Statistics Canada. The report is titled Family Violence in Canada: A Statistical Profile, 2008. It's a fairly extensive document about family violence, and it draws heavily on police databases. It compares incidents and rates across Canada and among age groups and across genders and so on. Just to reinforce with members of this Assembly and with anybody who may be reading Hansard, I thought I would take a moment to get some of the information from this report into the Assembly's record, so I will quote here, starting from page 6, which is part of the highlights of the report. I'm only going to select a few.

The first one I'm going to quote I want to discuss briefly. It says:

Females continue to be the most likely victims of police-reported spousal violence, accounting for 83% of victims compared to 17% males. This holds true for every province and territory across Canada.

Clearly, we all perceive family violence as visited more frequently and more seriously on women. That's the stereotype, and that's the stereotype backed up by the evidence. I don't want to lose track of the fact, though, Mr. Chairman, that boys and men can also be victims of family violence, and my suspicion is that the balance may not be quite as distorted as the statistics indicate. I think there is at least a plausible possibility that men are more reluctant to come forward as victims of family violence, so I think that we need to be careful in our own minds to not fall into the stereotypes.

I remember in the 1980s, when family violence and violence against women were first really becoming part of the public agenda, there was an education campaign funded by the government of Alberta. They had big posters up in the bus stations and other places, and they actually defined family violence as – this was striking to me – violence by men against women. I'll be honest; I took some offence to that because it isn't quite that one sided, so I want to drive that home. Without diminishing the terrible number of women who are victims of family violence, I do want to make sure that we don't just assume that it's always women.

Here's another quote from page 6 of that same study.

Male victims of spousal abuse were nearly twice as likely as female victims to report incidents of major assault (23% of male victims vs. 13% of female victims). One possible explanation may be that while male spousal abusers are more likely to use physical force, female abusers tend to rely on weapons.

It goes on in the detailed notes of this report to speculate that because of differences in average strength between men and women, women may rely more heavily on weapons, which seems reasonable to me. Those situations can be complicated. They may well be women defending themselves, but I think we need to remember that that's not always the case.

The study then goes on, and I'll quote again.

Charges were laid by police in three-quarters . . . of all police-reported incidents of spousal violence in 2006. Incidents involving female victims were more likely to result in a charge being laid than those involving male victims.

I think it's worth exploring this a little bit. I'm going back to my comments about stereotypes. Are police more inclined to brush off a complaint brought forward by a male than by a female? I don't know, but that's a potential explanation here.

I'm skipping over various other highlights, but I think it's important to draw on the data, Mr. Chairman, because we want evidence-based law as much as possible.

I want to talk a little bit about family violence against children. It says in this report:

About 4 in 10 child and youth victims of family violence sustained a physical injury in 2006, compared to 5 in 10 when the perpetrator was a non-family member. The majority of injuries sustained were considered to be minor injuries requiring no professional medical treatment or only some first aid.

Then it goes on in the next line to say:

Boys were more likely than girls to sustain physical injuries resulting from family violence.

I think we need to keep that full picture in mind, Mr. Chairman, about children, boys and girls, too often being victims of family violence.

This study also looked at older members of family and how often older adults were victims of violence. Again, I'm just continuing to stretch out the stereotype here. This is interesting to think about. I quote here from page 7 of this study.

Police-reported data consistently show that seniors (aged 65 years of age and over) are the least likely age group to be victimized. In 2006, the rate of violent crime committed against seniors was 16 times lower . . . than the rate committed against 15 to 24 year olds, the age group at highest risk.

Then it goes on to say, specific to family violence and seniors:

Senior victims were more likely to report being victimized by someone they knew . . . than by a stranger.

I think that's generally true. They were most likely to report being victimized by an adult child or current or former spouse.

Mr. Chairman, there's a lot of useful information in this document. There is, perhaps, occasionally some cause for hope in these grim statistics. I will quote from the bottom of page 7:

Over the past decade (1997 to 2006), the rate of firearm-related spousal homicides decreased by nearly 50%.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I'm a supporter of the gun registry, and I suspect that this is one effect of tightening controls on firearms. When we see a 50 per cent decline in the rate of firearm-related spousal homicides over 10 years, it's reasonable to think that some of that has to do with guns being locked up, with guns having to be registered, perhaps with unregistered guns being turned in under amnesties, and so on. I think there's no question that that's a healthy trend.

Mr. Hinman: That's a bit of a leap.

Dr. Taft: The Member for Calgary-Glenmore, who I guess opposes the gun registry, thinks I'm making a leap there, so I'd be interested to know what his explanation would be. It seems a plausible coincidence there.

Mr. Hinman: It could be stricter gun laws.

Dr. Taft: Well, stricter gun laws would be a good idea; I don't doubt that.

There was one other statistic in here that I wanted to quote that was also encouraging, Mr. Chairman, but I am afraid that in all the pages and numbers I've lost it. Oh; here we go. Not quite the bottom of page 7:

Overall, rates of spousal homicides for both male and female victims have been declining over the last 30 years (1977 to 2006). The rate of spousal homicide against females has been between 3 and 5 times higher than the rate for males.

The second sentence wasn't quite so encouraging, but the first one indicates that over the last 30 years rates have been declining. [interjection] In fairness, the Member for Calgary-Glenmore is pointing out that the beginning of that period was before the gun registry.

5:30

I just wanted to take the time of the Assembly to get the evidence that would support this bill on the record, to quote from a much more extensive study, and to just keep reinforcing two or three points. One, spousal violence is a serious problem. Two, there is some cause for hope. Three, let's not fall into any stereotypes, Mr. Chairman, that it's men who are always the perpetrators and women and children who are always the victims. It goes all ways. It can be children against older parents. It can be women against men. It can be mothers against children and fathers against children. Whatever the case, there are too many victims, too many crimes, and if this bill does a little bit to lower that number, then it's well worth supporting.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much. I just wanted to say a few words. Very good to hear the words of the opposition on this, the awareness that family violence is family violence and comes in different forms.

One of the things that you might have also added on this whole issue is that if you look at family violence as just something that men do to women, then there is no solution. If you just say that this is because men are bad and it all has to do with men against women, you know, if the wife who has been abused is given that as a solution, then you're essentially saying there is no solution aside from changing one's sexual orientation. So in terms of coming forward with good solutions, if one looks at this in a gender-neutral way – okay? – then solutions do come out of it.

This is something that I have been working on internally, within the government, for many years to ensure that all of the publications that come out, including our legislation, of course, are gender neutral. I just wanted to thank the opposition for bringing this forward.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to speak on Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011, in Committee of the Whole. I'd again like to acknowledge the Minister of Children and Youth Services and her department for their ongoing work to reduce the incidence of family violence in the province. I do appreciate the positive comments made by 11 other members of the Assembly, including members of the Official Opposition and the third party and the fourth party.

Mr. Chairman, Bill 2 is for the first time adding offence and penalty provisions for breaching protection orders. Just in response to a couple of the comments that were made regarding section 127 of the Criminal Code, I would like to say that the statistics that refer to 70 per cent of the prosecutions not having any conviction or penalty: we don't know how many of those prosecutions were protection orders. They could be anything from a failure to produce evidence in a court or failure to appear in a court proceeding. We just don't know. That's one of the side benefits of having the penalty provisions right in this legislation. We are going to be able to track those statistics henceforth with the amendments because we'll know how many are prosecuted under this legislation and how many are convicted. So there will be statistical information that will be forthcoming, and we'll know, you know, how the courts are treating these particular offences.

A remark was made by the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere regarding the fact that we don't have any mandatory jail time for the first offence. There are reasons for that, including the fact that sometimes a breach of a protection order is not necessarily an assault, not necessarily a failure to keep weapons away, or anything like that. It could be something as simple as a telephone call in breach of a protection order. So once that first offence is, well, a breach and there is a conviction, I can assure you that the attention of that person is going to be directed to making sure that that kind of a misdemeanor doesn't repeat itself because there is mandatory jail time required for a second offence.

Some remarks have been made by several of the members regarding the fact that this is certainly not the solution, that there is an ongoing problem. I think that the department and the minister acknowledge that fact. In addition to the strengthening of the legislation that's happening in this bill, there are a number of other measures that are ongoing, including addressing the need for more emergency shelter spaces for women, the fact that we have specific domestic violence courts and police teams, safe visitation sites that are now available in the province, victim support outreach projects, and the family violence information line, incidentally, and I'd like to mention that on the record: 310.1818. That's the number where help is available any time in 170 languages throughout the province of Alberta.

Just in concluding, Mr. Chairman, it's certainly our sincere hope and expectation, in fact, that Bill 2 is going to strengthen this important piece of legislation, that it will help to protect Albertans who are affected by family violence. I would thank the members for their support, and I would urge all hon. members to support the measures and to speed this bill through the House.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak?

Are you ready for the question on Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011?

Hon. Members: Question.

[The clauses of Bill 2 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

Bill 3 Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I spoke at some length on this in second reading. We've not heard of any concerns with this. It seems like a fairly straightforward piece of legislation just to update some terminology, not that that's insignificant. The change in terminology reflects the advances in engineering, in geophysics, in geoscience. We see nothing in here that is a concern, so I will take my seat, having stated that we will be supporting this legislation.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to respond briefly to a few questions raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona in second reading. The hon. member raised some questions that in her understanding there was some question regarding TILMA, the trade, investment, and labour mobility agreement, and the licensing of professionals from other provinces when they come to Alberta. It was her contention that APEGGA, the regulatory organization for engineers, geologists, and geophysicists in Alberta, was in some way concerned about the quality of potential transfers of professionals into this province. She was also concerned that in some way the private sector was playing a bigger part in the licensing of professionals across the country, taking the control away from the public sector.

Mr. Chairman, I can put the hon. member's fears to rest right now. The role of Bill 3 is simply to align the wording of professional legislation in Alberta to be in harmony with other provinces which have already consolidated their geological and geophysical professional licensed categories into one. Bill 3 is really all about smoothing the way for labour mobility, not impeding it in any way.

The proposed amendments to the existing Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Act that are included in Bill 3 were requested by the members of APEGGA after its members voted in favour of them in 2009. Professional geologists and geophysicists in Alberta have themselves asked for these proposed amendments, which include a consolidation of their classes of licensure into a new single class to be known as a professional geoscientist. These proposed changes, Mr. Chairman, are in keeping with what many other jurisdictions have already done and will harmonize our professional geoscience legislation with theirs. By passing these proposed amendments, we will be living up to our labour mobility obligations, which are to foster the movement of workers across the country.

Secondly, Mr. Chairman, there's no cause for alarm or concern that APEGGA is losing control over the quality of professional geoscientists who come to Alberta. Quality control over the professions of engineering and geoscience is, of course, the primary concern of APEGGA as the professional regulatory organization for engineers, geologists, and geophysicists in Alberta. Its role, first and foremost, is to ensure that its professional members serve the public interests by meeting APEGGA's practice standards.

Mr. Chairman, APEGGA works closely with the academic community and with its counterparts across the country with respect to education and experience requirements for professional certification. These organizations have established high standards for anyone seeking a professional licence to practise. The reason for these high standards is simple. They are needed to ensure safety and the protection of the public.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I would invite, if there are no other hon. members who wish to participate, that we would call the question. I thank all members for their support.

The Deputy Chair: Are you ready for the question on Bill 3, the Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011?

[The clauses of Bill 3 agreed to]

[Title and preamble agreed to]

The Deputy Chair: Shall the bill be reported? Are you agreed?

Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chair: Opposed? That is carried.

The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I move that the committee now rise and report.

[Motion carried]

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports the following bills: Bill 13, Bill 2, and Bill 3.

The Acting Speaker: All those members who concur with the report, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed, please say no. So ordered.

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 4 Securities Amendment Act, 2011

[Debate adjourned March 15: Mr. MacDonald speaking]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It seems to me that we get securities amendment acts before this Assembly fairly frequently, annually almost, which reflects, I suppose, in part an industry that's changing very, very rapidly through forces such as globalization and advances in technology and, of course, as a result of the sometimes criminal and often immoral activities that led to the financial collapse of so much of the world's banking and finance system in the last few years.

Luckily, in Canada we were spared most of that direct pain anyway. I think it's a really good example of how important good public policy is. The Canadian financial system has stood strong when those of virtually every other developed country and many developing countries collapsed. I think that we as legislators should always remember that whether we are enthusiastic about it or not, what we do in here can be very important.

Bill 4 wades into an issue of some national debate, and that's the role of provincial versus national regulators in the securities industry. This is not an easy issue, and I won't profess to have any great expertise in it. When I was Leader of the Opposition, I spent some time with various people trying to understand it, and as a caucus we came out supporting provincial regulation. That being said, I will acknowledge there's a case to be made for a national regulator as well. This is going to be a tough one, and it's going to get solved in the courts because I believe the government of Alberta, among a few other provincial governments, is challenging the federal government's initiative to bring in a national securities regulator.

I think it's worth pausing for a moment and just reflecting on federal-provincial relations not only in this field but in this Assembly. The case that the Alberta government is taking forward concerning securities regulators is that it's none of the federal government's business, that it's not federal jurisdiction to wade in and govern provincial securities. But it's interesting that this same government with wholesale support yesterday brought forward and passed with enthusiasm a motion that actually wades with great enthusiasm into federal parliamentary activity. In fact, it's quite explicit with Motion 11 that this Assembly is eager and enthusiastic to meddle in the affairs of the federal Parliament, urging the federal Parliament to take particular activities.

Yet when it comes to securities amendments and securities regulation, which is addressed in Bill 4, oh, heaven forbid; we don't dare tolerate the federal government meddling in our business. I think it's somewhat of a double standard, Mr. Speaker, if I may say so.

Ms Blakeman: Not somewhat; it is.

Dr. Taft: Well, I am being urged on. It's not just somewhat of a double standard; it is a double standard. Either we welcome levels of government meddling in each other's business, or we don't. We can't just choose: it's good to meddle when it's an issue we agree with, and it's bad to meddle when it's an issue we don't agree with. I think that comes to the point here.

An Hon. Member: What's your point?

Dr. Taft: Well, if we are masters of our own house, then we need to recognize there will be masters of other houses.

Anyway, this particular piece of legislation, Bill 4, is designed to smooth over and improve the operation of the passport system, which is the response that the various provincial regulators have come up with to counter the move towards a single national regulator. It does generally seem to work pretty well. I will admit that there are major players, particularly in downtown Calgary, who would love to have a single national regulator, and I'm sure that many members of this Assembly have heard from them. I'm sure the minister of finance and the Premier have as well.

But we are going to stick to our guns here, Mr. Speaker, and support provincial regulators. This piece of legislation is intended to facilitate the operation of securities regulators not just in Alberta but, frankly, across the country by standardizing some issues. As long as we are going to have provincial regulators, we want that system to work as smoothly as possible. We want the provinces to be co-ordinated, and we want investors in one province to be very confident that securities issues being managed by another province are being managed effectively.

If you're an investor in Saskatchewan buying securities traded in Alberta or an investor in Alberta buying securities traded in Quebec, you want to be confident in how that securities management is going. Likewise, if you're trying to raise capital as a business in Alberta and you're trying to attract investors from across the country, you don't want to have to go through 10 different approval processes, with 10 different sets of regulation; you want co-ordination. I believe this piece of legislation is going to help that.

I will listen with interest as the debate on this legislation advances. I may change my mind because of the power and the information and the general usefulness of debate in this Assembly, or I may find that that just reinforces my position. But right now, Mr. Speaker, my position is towards supporting Bill 4.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, Standing Order 29(2)(a) is available if anyone wishes to comment or question. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Sure. Well, I just wanted to ask the hon. member – I just couldn't quite understand. You're saying that you support this, which, obviously, strengthens the passport system which deals with trading securities. So we're dealing with a quasi-federal area that's in our interest. It's quasi-federal, right? They regulate, for example, certain things in the securities system. We regulate most of it. But I guess I'm just trying to figure out why you feel it's not a good idea for us to urge the government of Canada to pass a bill that would see us have the ability for our grain farmers and barley farmers to have the ability to sell the grain to whom they want? If you could just clarify that for me. How is that related?

Dr. Taft: Try to bring it back to Bill 4, Mr. Speaker? Is that the challenge you're laying before me?

The Acting Speaker: Please. Please.

Dr. Taft: Well, my point is that, actually, despite the comments from the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, securities regulation has long been provincial jurisdiction, that we are trying to assert provincial jurisdiction there, and we are arguing that the federal government should stay out of our business. If we are arguing that the federal government should stay out of our business, then I would suspect that the argument is that we should stay out of their business as well. The Wheat Board, which was set up 70 years ago, which covers half the country, is a federal issue.

More to the point, Motion 11 doesn't just generally support the idea of disbanding the Wheat Board; it actually goes to the specific matter of wading into the business of Parliament. I think that we as an Assembly would probably take offence if Parliament in Ottawa specifically came in and urged this Assembly to do X, Y, and Z. We'd say: "Hey. Buzz off. That's not your business." And I think they would have every right to say the same to us.

So I don't know if that helped the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. I suspect I did not change his mind, Mr. Speaker, but I will keep trying at every opportunity.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) is still available. Now, we're talking on Bill 4.

Mr. Groeneveld: Well, I can't respond to what he just talked about? I don't like the federal government in my business, so is it just Parliament, or can they still rule on my private business because I have to deliver grain to the Wheat Board?

The Acting Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, do you wish to respond?

Dr. Taft: Well, I'm going to just take a little different approach here, Mr. Speaker. I had breakfast about a month ago, as I was telling this member, in the old hotel in Nanton. They serve a darn good breakfast there. I happened to run into, I think, the cousin of this member.

Now, let's imagine that the people who operate that business want to expand their business and raise some capital, and they want to issue shares. They're going to want, as they do this, to have a smoothly functioning securities system. In the case of Nanton they'll probably go to Calgary, and they'll hire a broker there and some lawyers and so on and try to issue securities. You know, if they did that, I might even invest. I don't know. I'd look at it carefully. The point I'm trying to make here, in trying to keep in the spirit of the Speaker, which is to stay focused on Bill 4, the Securities Amendment Act, is that this piece of legislation would make it easier for the Nanton hotel to raise capital should they ever want to do so.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Any other members who wish to speak? The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: I would like to speak to Bill 4, Securities

Amendment Act, 2011. I'd like to say that I support this act. I support the former minister of finance's very clear and concise arguments for why we need to keep securities regulation provincial in nature and protect our jurisdiction over it.

You know, I find that the Canadian government just seems to continue to try to find excuses to get involved in areas of provincial jurisdiction that I just don't think is their business. For example, education. Education is clearly a provincial jurisdiction, yet they have all kinds of programs, student loans programs, all of these different programs that are run federally for the provinces. Why not just transfer the tax points to the provinces and let us administer all of the student loans, for example, and all of the different funding for these types of things? So that's an example.

Another example is health care. Why does the federal government have any right whatsoever to regulate . . . [interjection] Well, the British North America Act doesn't give them the right to do that. They've assumed that power, and they've just kind of filled the space that I don't think they should have the right to fill. I think that areas of health are a provincial jurisdiction. That will allow provinces to experiment with different forms of health care delivery and so forth and make sure that we can have best practices instead of being tied to the whims of a federal Parliament that has no business dealing with health care legislation. That's not their purview. It's not what they should be dealing with.

There are all sorts of different areas where the government of Canada has encroached upon the provincial jurisdiction of the provinces: health care, education, and many others. I would say, too, that, you know – well, I guess that's a separate example that I talked about yesterday with regard to the Canadian Wheat Board, but I just find it amazing that we can't sell our wheat and barley in western Canada.

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, I hesitate to interrupt, but the time is now 6 o'clock, and the Assembly stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

The policy field committee will reconvene here tonight at 6:30 for consideration of the main estimates of Children and Youth Services. This meeting will be video streamed.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, March 17, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon. Welcome.

Let us pray. Give to each member of this Legislature a strong and abiding sense of the great responsibilities laid upon us. Give us a deep and thorough understanding of the needs of the people we serve. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly 25 grade 6 students from Neerlandia public Christian school within your constituency. They're accompanied this afternoon by their teacher, Mr. Jim Bosma; assistant Brenda Gelderman; parent helpers Raine Kooger, Rudy Sybesma, Denise Stoik, Albert Slomp, and Arjan Koekkoek. They are seated in the public gallery this afternoon, and I'd like to ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I've got another group I'd like to introduce to you and through you, some students from my constituency. They're from Thorhild central school. It was a pleasure to meet them this afternoon and have a picture taken on the steps. We've got 19 grade 6 students with us from the Thorhild central school and their teacher, Mike Popowicz, teacher's assistant Sharon Lakusta, and parent Monique Hoffman. Monique's husband, Nick, was in earlier in the week. It was a pleasure to have him in here as well. They're seated in the public gallery as well, and I'd like to ask them to rise and please receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me today to introduce to you and through you to the Assembly 17 amazing students from Morrin elementary school, towards the south end of my constituency. These are quite possibly some of the brightest and best-looking students in the province of Alberta. I had a chance to have my picture taken with them on the steps today, and it was wonderful. They are accompanied today by their teacher, Mr. Saltys, and also by 13 parents and aides, that I will not use the whole afternoon introducing. I invite all of my colleagues to join me in welcoming these wonderful students and their parents and teachers and aides.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a good friend and constituent from Lethbridge. He's a businessman and a community volunteer. I'd like to just thank Mr. Mark Switzer for coming up to visit. I would ask that he receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the great pleasure of hosting an individual I've known for many, many years. I call her an old friend, but actually she's a friend of old. She's been involved for years in seeking equality for aboriginal people. She's president of the youth justice committee and has worked 23 years at the Solicitor General Staff College teaching aboriginal awareness to all Justice employees. Of course, we had a really great lunch. She's standing already. Her name is Lenda Fisher. I'd ask this Assembly to please give her a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. As you know, I represent the fabulous constituency of Edmonton-Centre. In Edmonton-Centre there is a wonderful postsecondary institution called Grant MacEwan University, and inside of that is Minerva Senior Studies. We have joining us today in the public gallery 11 seniors who are members of that wonderful institution. They are always a vigorous group, and I so enjoy our spring teas. With them today is their group leader, Ms Jo Whitford. I would ask the members of the Minerva Senior Studies to please rise and accept the warm welcome the Assembly. There they are.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Speaker.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to all members of this House Mimi Hui, executive director of the University of Alberta language learning program, and Tammy Ma, the program assistant, along with 20 government officials and civil servants from Vietnam. The Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations and myself met with this group early this afternoon. Their group leader is Mr. Hào, deputy director of the Department of Information and Communication. Other guests include the director of the Red Cross, the director of the Agriculture Promotion Centre, the dean of the School of Politics, and public officials from various government departments and regions of Vietnam. They are here on a government of Vietnam program to learn about Canadian culture and language. Now I would like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome from our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm honoured to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members a special guest who joins us in the public gallery. Lori Sigurdson is the professional affairs co-ordinator for the Alberta College of Social Workers and is here today to be recognized in honour of National Social Work Month. Social workers find it extremely challenging to support families facing issues of poverty beyond their control. While many other provinces have implemented comprehensive poverty reduction strategies, Alberta remains without. I will rise again to make a statement on the college's joint initiative for a poverty reduction strategy for Alberta, but in the meantime would the members of this House please give Lori a cordial greeting.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce a young man. His name is Andrew Lineker. At the age of 13 he worked on Laurence Decore's campaign, and after that he worked on Grant Mitchell's campaign. Most recently he ran in the mayoral election, and I believe he finished fourth in Edmonton. When we bring these young people to the Legislature, they indeed one day will run for public service and, hopefully, one day will replace us all. I'd like to thank Andrew for his commitment to public service and serving Alberta and serving Edmonton. I'd like him to rise to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I have a guest today from out of province, actually. He's from Victoria, B.C., and I'd like to introduce him to you and to all members of the Assembly. His name is Ryan Pineo. He's a legislative assistant to the government caucus in British Columbia, and he is spending some time here in Edmonton, watching how the Legislature of Alberta works in comparison to B.C.'s. I see he is standing in the public gallery. I'd ask everyone here to please give him a warm welcome.

Thank you.

Statement by the Speaker

Election Anniversaries

The Speaker: Hon. members, this weekend March 20 will mark the 22nd anniversary of the first election of two members of this Assembly. Congratulations to the hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake, and congratulations to the hon. Member for Rocky Mountain House.

St. Patrick's Day

Mr. McFarland: Mr. Speaker, this morning was the 26th annual St. Patrick's Day parade in my hometown of Carmangay, which has gained notoriety as being perhaps the shortest parade in the world. Residents and visitors at the post office gather for a one-block trek to the Grange Hotel for complimentary beer and/or Irish coffee.

Today is a celebration for those of us of Irish descent and those who want to be for the day. My siblings and I are especially proud to be the fifth-generation descendants of great-great-grandparents who came to York, Ontario, from county Tyrone in Northern Ireland in 1850, before this was even a country. In 1898 my great-grandparents arrived in southern Alberta prior to us establishing ourselves as a province in 1905. Our family is very proud of the history that we have, and I want to salute my brother Todd for the passionate work he's done in putting together the family history that we can study in our homes.

You know, the history of all these people that came not just from Ireland but from all the other countries exemplifies the work and tenacity that they had in creating our province. They truly are the pioneers, those that came in those early years, not today's seniors; I'm sorry.

I salute all my forebears for their tenacity, their pride, and their love, especially our Aunt Barb, the last of our family's fourth generation, who passed away this past year. The memento on your desk is a symbol of what she would have shared with you had you had the opportunity to visit her in her home in St. Albert. I guarantee it would have been a larger, fuller version. Her words would be: may the best day of your past be the worst day of your future.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Child Poverty

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Social workers are among the most altruistic and caring citizens in Alberta. Each one makes a deliberate choice to dedicate their life to helping the less fortunate. Today the Alberta College of Social Workers is calling on this government to take real steps to reduce one of the most important problems of our time, child poverty.

According to the latest data approximately 53,000 children live in poverty, half of them living in single-parent Alberta families. Keep in mind that this data doesn't take the recession into account, so the current numbers must be even higher. I've heard it's closer to 80,000 these days.

There are a number of positive steps a truly progressive government could take to alleviate child poverty. For example, they could support the Alberta Liberal plan to provide hot lunch at school for at-risk kids. Hungry children have a hard time focusing on their schoolwork. This step would help address that problem by giving poor kids some of the help they need to succeed at school and, therefore, stand a better chance of escaping the cycle of poverty.

This government should also look at the minimum wage. Our current minimum wage of $8.80 an hour is the second lowest in the nation, and it has been deliberately frozen by Canada's wealthiest provincial government. Over 60 per cent of minimum wage earners are women, many of them supporting children in poverty, yet this government won't even raise Alberta's minimum wage a measly 25 cents as recommended by the Committee on the Economy. Another 25 cents an hour doesn't sound like much to anyone sitting in this Assembly, but to the working poor it can mean the difference between feeding their family or being forced to skip a few meals.

The list of proactive steps that could be taken goes on. Alberta needs far more affordable housing. Alberta's high school completion rate and the rate of students moving on to postsecondary education must both be drastically improved.

Mr. Speaker, all three territories and 6 out of 10 provinces have action plans to reduce poverty. Alberta is lagging behind, and as a result Albertans are falling behind as well. Let's follow the advice of the College of Social Workers and join our fellow Canadians in ending the cycle of poverty.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Monterey Park Telecommunications Tower

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Constituents in my area have raised concerns over plans to build a telecommunications tower in Monterey Park. The structure itself will consist of a 25-metre-long stealth monopole tower. It appears the proposal may sit just metres from the homes of several of my constituents living on Del Monica Place. Specifically, this tower could be just metres from the homes of the Duong and Yanke families. This is the second time these families have had to deal with a provider trying to put up a cellphone tower directly over their shared fence.

I'm told that this site may be one of 300 to 400 which may be built in the city of Calgary. This has the potential to cause many families undue distress and force them to mobilize their communities.

Mr. Speaker, because telecommunications companies are federally incorporated entities, it appears federal legislation or regulations set out the rules that essentially must be followed. Therefore, I think that it's due time that the CRTC and the federal government provide guidelines, number one, that put in place mechanisms that deal with applications that are submitted to address the same location so that families don't have to through the same process twice.

Number two, I have been informed that the CRTC has no regulations to determine the physical distance between a wireless tower and a residence. This, too, Mr. Speaker, I think is a void on the part of the CRTC.

As proposed, I do not support the construction of this tower, and I simply take the side of my constituents, who deserve a voice around the federal table.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill.

State of the Health Care System

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Day after day we hear from some quarters of the House that Alberta's health care system is somehow in crisis. What is seldom heard is that Alberta has a first-class health care system. My constituents tell me that they have health care when they need it. Let me share some examples of excellence in our system and how it continues to get better.

From 2004 to 2008 Alberta had the highest percentage increase of physicians in all Canadian provinces, a 22.5 per cent increase. Despite an aging demographic our stroke strategy has led to a 23 per cent decline in the numbers of stroke patients presenting in emergency departments and admitted to hospital. Emergency patients who come in to our emergency departments and have been seen, assessed, and are waiting for a bed dropped by 68 per cent in Calgary and 42 per cent in the Edmonton area since September alone.

In our five-year health action plan we have the most progressive approach to renewing and strengthening the publicly funded health care system ever put in place by any provincial government in Canada. Alberta is a Canadian leader in the advancement of medical research and technology, and we're on track to have the best performing publicly funded health care system in Canada.

I want to thank the 117,000 health care workers, 7,400 physicians, hospital staff, nurses, therapists, orderlies, and those who clean the hospital rooms, all of whom perform countless thousands of tasks every day, not to mention the 15,000 volunteers who assist in our health facilities. They don't get the recognition they should have for making Alberta's universal, publicly funded health care system among the very best in the world.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Rutherford.

National Cord Blood Bank

Mr. Horne: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to speak about a new national program that will help thousands of Canadians and Albertans who require medical treatments that can involve the use of stem cells. On Monday, March 14, Canadian Blood Services and the Provincial and Territorial Blood Liaison Committee announced the national cord blood banking program. This national program will manage the collection and distribution of donated umbilical cord blood across Canada.

While Canada does have three cord blood banks, including the public Cord Blood Bank here in Alberta, there is no system in place, Mr. Speaker, that links them together. This program will make sure that any patient in Canada will have access to cord blood therapy no matter where they live.

Umbilical cord blood is an important source for stem cells, which are used in transplant procedures, gene therapy, and to combat diseases such as leukemia and sickle cell disease. Cord blood stem cells are often a better option over bone marrow stem cells because they are less likely to be rejected by the patient.

Currently more than 800 patients need a blood stem cell transplant to help combat disease. Canada has access to more than 15 million potential stem cell donors and more than 460,000 cord blood units world-wide, but the needs of Canadian patients and Alberta patients are not all being met. That's why this national program is so important.

In 1996 Dr. John Akabutu founded the Alberta Cord Blood Bank, which is the only public cord blood bank in Alberta. It is located in Edmonton, Mr. Speaker. It shows that we are a pioneer and a strong leader in this area.

With the launch of this national program we have a unique opportunity to share our experience and our expertise in cord blood therapy to provide a valuable resource to the rest of the country.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Minimum Wage

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Employment and Immigration had been dragging his feet on the minimum wage. He has had a report from the Standing Committee on the Economy since last October and taken no action. The report of the committee, that has been under study by the minister for five months, has seven simple recommendations and is only two pages in length.

With plans for an increase in B.C. Alberta is again about to become the province with the lowest minimum wage in the nation. This is absolutely disgraceful. But this government is guilty of more than just foot-dragging on this issue. There was a process in place to make regular adjustments to minimum wage to keep up with the cost of living. They've cancelled that, Mr. Speaker, so low-wage workers are falling further and further behind. This is in the face of increases, particularly in the area of food.

The proposed increase in minimum wage, which the minister feels so little urgency about, would mean $2 more a day for a full-time worker. This government won't take action on that, but they can find $1.4 billion in drilling incentives for big oil companies.

Trying to have a decent life on a low income creates tremendous stress. It affects health. It affects safety. It affects the success of children. It creates huge and unnecessary additional social costs of all sorts. A society that leaves some of its people behind will pay a larger price for that along the way and for a very long time.

Most provinces in this country not only have significantly higher minimum wage levels; they have moved on to focus on eliminating poverty with comprehensive plans that include attention to the idea of a living wage. Mr. Speaker, the committee's report recommends that Alberta get to work on this as well.

Failure to act immediately on a minimum wage increase and to start working on poverty reduction is to abandon Albertans to a life of unnecessary struggle. It's time this minister acted and made a clear commitment to a livable minimum wage.

Thank you.

Statement by the Speaker

Oral Question Period Rules

The Speaker: Hon. members, before the Clerk calls question period, just a few comments of guidance with respect to the upcoming Oral Question Period. Yesterday afternoon we had a rather lengthy discussion in this House about decorum, about manners, about the rules associated with question period. I had tabled on all members' desks some documents out of Beauchesne dealing with, I believe, sections 403 to 420. In addition to that, certain guides were read into the Hansard, and emphasis was placed on such things as preambles – preambles on the first question, not on the two following ones – brevity, clarity, and no provocation. Those were the wishes. The chair indicated as well that he would be intervening. The chair does not want to intervene but will if required.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Patient Advocacy by Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Medical Association supports the opposition call for a public inquiry into allegations of government intimidation of physicians who raise concerns over health care delivery. In a letter AMA president Patrick White wrote:

There are concerns that, when speaking out, physicians may not feel they will be heard or may fear negative consequences . . . One proposal being put forward is that government should call a full public inquiry regarding the issue of intimidation . . . The AMA will support and cooperate with such an approach if [it] occurs.

To the Premier: with the AMA now supporting the opposition, will the Premier call an independent, judge-led public inquiry and restore . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member forgot to read the rest of the letter, where it says:

While I am not an expert in the various approaches that may be taken, an open and full review is needed to clear the air and move forward. The AMA will support and cooperate with such an approach if this occurs.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, will the Premier finally concede that only a public inquiry will allow doctors to come forward without threats of intimidation, and only an inquiry can subpoena witnesses, including your own ministers?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the AMA supports a review to clear the air, and just hot off the press: the Health Quality Council issued their terms of reference. They went to the media, they went to all Albertans, and we've just received them. One of the terms of reference, of course, is to hear physicians advocate on behalf of their patients to the Health Quality Council.

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, the refusal of the Premier to call a public inquiry clearly shows he's afraid of what they might find. What is it you're afraid of, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, the Health Quality Council just informed all Albertans of the terms of reference. They are very clear, and one of the terms, of course, is to review "the role and ability of physicians to advocate for patients" and whether it is compromised. That, to me, is very clear.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, where there's smoke, there's fire. There's an alarming trend of doctors coming forward and being called mentally unstable by this government for speaking out for their patients. The list continues to grow: Dr. McNamee, Dr. Maybaum, Dr. Fanning, the hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark, and recently Dr. Nunes. Incredibly, in the case of Dr. Nunes he fought back for five years, and a court finally ruled the allegations of mental instability were unsupported. His privileges were reinstated. How many doctors and health care professionals, Premier, like Dr. McNamee and Dr. Nunes will have to come forward, risking their reputations before . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, this government, to my knowledge, has not, against the names that have been listed there, issued any opinion on the mental state of any of the physicians. The competency of physicians, the licence to practice is done through the College of Physicians and Surgeons and is not the responsibility of the minister nor of the Premier.

Dr. Swann: To the Premier: is what happened to Dr. Nunes' reputation what this Premier had in mind when he advised all health professionals with concerns of wrongdoing to directly report to Alberta Health Services? Is that what you had in mind?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the doctor that the member is referring to: I have no knowledge of his concerns raised to Alberta Health Services, and the other is that, again, it's not my responsibility or the minister of health's to deal with situations that may come up, differences of opinion between physicians, their employer, which is Alberta Health Services, their college, or the AMA.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the list of damning allegations grows daily. Will the Premier finally answer the question: will you call a public inquiry and put this issue to bed?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, I've answered this question many times. I've asked the minister to have the Health Quality Council conduct a full review. We've now just recently received all of the terms of reference that the Health Quality Council will be operating under. They are extremely broad and give the Health Quality Council a lot of latitude to hear all of the evidence that is necessary to conduct a good review.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Settlement Agreement with Dr. Ciaran McNamee

Mr. MacDonald: The Government Organization Act clearly outlines the authority and the responsibility for each and every ministry. The Premier is the final authority as the President of Executive Council. My first question is to the Premier. Given that this government reported in 2009 in its books a $1.6 million severance payment to the former chief executive officer of the Calgary health region, Jack Davis, why was this settlement deal made public while the settlement deal with Dr. Ciaran McNamee is hidden somewhere in this government's books?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Calgary regional health board was appointed by government, the CEO, and it's the same legislation that applies to other CEOs that work for boards that are under the auspices of the government, including, I believe, even superintendents of various organizations that report to government. Those salaries are made public according to our legislation.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that this government reported in 2009 in its books the $1.5 million severance payment made to the CEO of the Capital health authority, Sheila Weatherill, why again is the settlement deal with Dr. Ciaran McNamee hidden somewhere in this government's books?

Mr. Stelmach: The same answer I gave to the first question although a different doctor. Again, we have a responsibility according to the legislation that we have passed in this Legislature. Those that are CEOs of those operations that report directly to government: those salaries are then made public and also any of the contractual obligations that we might have entered into.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, again to the Premier. Given that his government promised that they would be open and transparent, another example, this time in 2009. Dr. Jean-Michel Turc, CEO of the Alberta Cancer Board, received a severance payment of $1.8 million. Why is this settlement deal public while the deal with Dr. Ciaran McNamee is hidden somewhere in the books of this government? Explain that, please.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, the doctor he was referring to was reporting to the CEO of the cancer board, which reported directly to the minister of health. Once again, we are following the legislation that was passed in the House.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier this week the Premier accused opposition parties of playing political football by asking for a public inquiry into the government's intimidation of physicians and public health care professionals. Today the AMA president released a letter saying, "AMA supports a public inquiry." To the Premier: is the president of the AMA playing political football by supporting a public inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again a shorter quote according to this member than the previous member. Let me again read it into the record, and I have the copies here to table at the conclusion. It says:

One proposal being put forward is that government should call a full public inquiry regarding the issue of intimidation. While I am not an expert in the various approaches that may be taken, an open and full review is needed to clear the air and move forward. The AMA will support and cooperate with such an approach if this occurs.

Funny how they always miss the last three words.

Mr. Hinman: The AMA supports a public inquiry. To the Premier: given that the AMA president in today's St. Patrick's Day letter says that a public inquiry is needed to clear the air and move forward regarding the issue of physician intimidation, will you now call a full, independent public inquiry with the full power to subpoena witnesses and compel evidence?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again it's very clear. In the terms of reference that were released just a few minutes ago by the Health Quality Council, they're telling all Albertans that they are going to ensure the role and ability of physicians to advocate for their patients, whether that was compromised. They'll be able to hear all the evidence and anybody that wants to come forward and appear before the council.

Mr. Hinman: The pressure will keep building.

Again to the Premier: given that in order to run a health care system you actually need doctors willing to perform surgeries and treat patients here in Alberta and given that those doctors are today calling for a public inquiry to clear the air and move forward, will you support our doctors or continue to protect your political hide at the expense of Alberta's health?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, comments coming from a party that just sent 30 physicians to Vietnam.

Mr. Anderson: Point of order.

The Speaker: Point of order. Okay.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Bruce Power

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This Minister of Energy has steadfastly refused to answer questions about nuclear power in Alberta and the government's covert support for Bruce Power and its plans to build a nuclear reactor in Alberta. Given the emerging catastrophe in Japan, Albertans deserve clear answers about this government's involvement with Bruce Power and its plans to build a nuclear reactor in our province. Will the minister come clean with Albertans and tell them exactly what's going on behind closed doors between this government and Bruce Power?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I hate to disappoint the hon. member, but I've seen no application from Bruce Power to construct a nuclear plant in Alberta.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that former PC campaign manager Randy Dawson was a paid lobbyist for Bruce Power and given that this government has been involved in dozens of meetings behind closed doors with Bruce Power and its paid lobbyist, will the minister commit to putting on the record every single piece of correspondence, meeting, and topic discussed between this government, its agencies, and nuclear industry lobbyists? Yes or no.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I've never met with Bruce Power. I do not know anyone that works for Bruce Power. If the member is asking for this government to put on record such documents, I would suggest there's an appropriate place on the Order Paper to ask for that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that Bruce Power donated $17,000 to the PC Party between 2008 and '09 alone, $990 of which was to the constituency association of the MLA for Dunvegan-Central Peace, and given that Trans-Canada Pipelines, one of the companies that owns Bruce Power, donated $119,000 to the PCs between 2004 and 2009, will the minister admit that this Tory government is working hand in glove with Bruce Power to bring incredibly dangerous nuclear power plants to Alberta and is deliberately hiding that fact from the people of this province?

Mr. Liepert: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, followed by the hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week, just hours before the McNamee allegations surfaced, the Premier inexplicably reversed course to support a Health Quality Council review. Yesterday the damning allegations from Dr. Nunes surfaced, and within an hour there's an open letter to physicians from Alberta Health Services extolling the virtues of doctors bringing concerns forward in an open Alberta Health Services environment. Now with the AMA statement the Health Quality Council of Alberta released its concerns and its terms of reference. To the minister: was the minister's office aware that the McNamee lawsuit would be released by the media before you made your decision and the government made its decision to support the health quality review?

Mr. Zwozdesky: No, Mr. Speaker, I was not personally aware. However, what I think is important to note is that a lot of what this hon. member is talking about falls into that category: that was then; this is now. I'll tell you what we have now. We have a three-way letter signed by the Health Services, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Alberta Medical Association that clearly states what patient advocacy is all about. We also have Alberta Health Services medical staff bylaws, which clearly say that it's their duty and their responsibility. Today we have the Health Quality Council terms of reference that's going to be looking into this further.

The Speaker: The hon. leader, please.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Was the minister of health aware that Dr. Chris Eagle would distribute the open letter to physicians as a response to Dr. Nunes' allegations outlining a culture of fear and intimidation?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, what I am aware of is that three very respected doctors, specifically Dr. Chris Eagle, Dr. David Megran, and Dr. Francois Belanger, issued a letter I believe it was yesterday. It was an open letter to physicians, that went out to about 90,000 people in the system, telling them essentially what I just said in the last series of answers, and that was that there is a duty here for . . .

Dr. Swann: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think most people know that sunshine is the best disinfectant. I'm sure this minister knows that. Will you push forward for a public inquiry and clear the air on intimidation and threats and potential financial misconduct?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, clearly, he's not yet aware – perhaps I should make him aware – of the fact that the Health Quality Council just probably an hour or so ago released their terms of reference. That looks to me like the first step in a process for an independent review that's going to look into quality of care and safety of patients and the role and process of physician advocacy, and very soon they will appoint a blue-ribbon panel to effectuate this.

The Speaker: There may be some tablings required here. Be ready to do them later.

The hon. Member for Cypress-Medicine Hat, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Spring Flooding in Southern Alberta

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our agriculture industry through no fault of its own is once again experiencing some challenges with excess moisture in southern Alberta. Producers and residents are already seeing some localized flooding as a result of the snowmelt. In fact, there's one area so far that is under flood alert. I'm also receiving calls from other areas of my large constituency. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Are the pumps you mentioned last week still available?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, they are, and there are, in fact, some more pumps being moved into position in southern Alberta. These pumps are available for producers at no cost, as they were last year. We also have them available for the Alberta Emergency Management Agency and Alberta Environment, and they are spread among the communities now to try and respond quickly.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following up on that, to the same minister: given that you mentioned that these pumps have been strategically placed and they could easily divert a large amount of water, what's the process for accessing these pumps?

Mr. Hayden: Well, application requests for the pumps actually go through ARD's water-pumping program. We've already alerted our drivers and our delivery people to be able to respond on a moment's notice because we know that the situation is very serious. It's important to note that a number of risk management and crop insurance programs are also available through FSC to help address some of these flooding problems.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mitzel: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next supplemental is to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Will the mitigation efforts that you mentioned last week such as the Candam material and others be made available right now for our residents who require them?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we've assisted the municipalities in their role by providing flood mitigation equipment. Eighty-three thousand sandbags are on location now. There's an additional 80,000 bags that were ordered today through Service Alberta, and 30 metres of Candam is on location. I've confirmed this morning with municipalities that this government will be providing $1 million in grant funding to support those and other short-term mitigation efforts. Municipalities are responsible for determining the best way to use and allocate those resources based on their local priorities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Red Deer-South.

Heartland Electricity Transmission Line

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government's heartland 500-kilovolt transmission project will have significant impacts on the people living in the county of Strathcona and the city of Edmonton. This high-voltage power line is scheduled to be built in close proximity to homes, schools, daycares, hospitals, and environmentally sensitive areas. To the Minister of Energy: does the minister deny that there are health impacts to residents in close proximity to the above-ground high-voltage power lines that are going to be built?

2:10

The Speaker: Hon. minister, if it's an opinion, it doesn't count. Government policy.

Mr. Liepert: Well, I think it's important, Mr. Speaker, to put some facts on the record because this member has just made some allegations or comments that I think need to be refuted.

First of all, there is a hearing by the Alberta Utilities Commission that will commence next month. All of the facts will be laid before the commission, including anyone who wants to lay supposed health facts before the commission. All I can say is that Health Canada monitors these situations. There are no known risks according to Health Canada with electric currents in any form.

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, I thank the minister for that answer. I guess the follow-up is: are these citizens wrong to insist that these high-voltage power lines that will be going up in their neighbourhood should be buried underground?

Mr. Liepert: Again, Mr. Speaker, I'm not saying anybody is right or wrong. All I'm saying is that we are doing what we should be doing: having a full, open, independent hearing on these power lines. In addition to that, we are using statistical data that Health Canada has on its website, if the member would like to take a look. We're trusting those who are experts.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I thank you. So just confirming here, this government is open to other options besides running these high-powered lines above ground in Strathcona. Is that what I'm hearing?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think this member was in the Legislature when we approved Bill 50 with four critical transmission lines; one of them is the heartland transmission line. Within that, however, the process is that the Alberta Utilities Commission will determine such things as siting, cost allocation, and that's what will be the subject of the hearing next month.

Postsecondary Education for Rural Students

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, while Alberta has a number of excellent rural colleges, there are other communities who would like an institution of their own. It is believed that this would make post-secondary education accessible to more Albertans and reduce expenses for students who need to commute or relocate. My questions today are for the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. The ministry's goal is to increase options and opportunities for Alberta students. Are we not considering more rural colleges?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're always looking for opportunities to deliver new programming and new courses across the province. In fact, as we speak, Northern Lakes College is looking at a new facility in Gift Lake to help create opportunities for students in the northern part of our province. We also look at online opportunities like eCampus Alberta, which will have close to 20,000 courses delivered this year and is providing opportunities to many, many students across the province right at home.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, my first supplemental is to the same minister. Some programs aren't feasible to deliver online or require specialized facilities. What supports are available for students who do have to relocate?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We appreciate that many students must travel to access the courses and the programs that they need, so we have a full range of programming and supports for students. We have loans available as well as housing opportunities. We try to make it as easy as possible for students to access those programs. In fact, now a master's degree can be delivered online in Camrose from the University of Alberta, so students can stay in a rural setting while taking a course that's only available in Edmonton.

Mr. Dallas: Mr. Speaker, my final question to the same minister: what are you doing to expand the programs that are currently available at rural colleges?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a very important area across the province. Many of our communities want to keep their young people at home as much as possible. I know that right now there are discussions in Red Deer and Medicine Hat about increasing degree opportunities for young people in those communities to be able to stay at home and take an extra degree there. So we're working with them. In fact, this year in our budget there's funding available to allow those schools to work with universities to provide those degree opportunities.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Arts Funding

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My questions are to the minister of culture. The minister backed off on a decision to cancel the funding of artists associated with schools. He backed off on a decision to discriminate against arts groups and artists associated with municipalities. What was the reasoning behind pushing forward with the cancellation of funding to artists and arts groups associated with universities?

Mr. Blackett: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, I didn't back off the funding to schools or to postsecondary. That was somebody in our department who had had that conversation with someone, that was not supported by myself. We're not backing off any cuts because we aren't making any cuts.

Ms Blakeman: Given that the minister is on record as saying, "We all have to take our medicine; we all have to tighten our belts; everybody has to share the burden," why have the artists associated with universities been chosen for special discriminatory action? You have cut their programs.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, yes, I said that we all have to share in our burden. That was in Budget 2010-11. My department had a 16 per cent cut across the board, and we had to share the pain right across the board, from heritage to the arts to the not-for-profit sector to the Human Rights Commission. This year in the budget, which we will discuss, there is none of that, but we can discuss that at estimates.

Ms Blakeman: Well, the minister has said that artists are very well taken care of, and I'm curious how the minister believes that artists associated with universities are very well taken care of when the funding for their programs was cut and not restored.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, for lots of artists, lots of arts organizations, when you have a 16 per cent cut to your budget – guess what? – everybody has to take a little less. As I said, our budget has not yet been discussed for this year, so any assumption on that will have to be discussed at the estimates.

The Speaker: Members may wish to note that the estimates for the Department of Culture and Community Spirit will be reviewed in this Assembly on the afternoon of March 23.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Heartland Electricity Transmission Line (continued)

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. One of the 500-kV power lines is proposed to be constructed within or very near to the homes in my constituency of Edmonton-Ellerslie. My constituents are very concerned about the need for these lines as well as the negative health, safety, property value, and environmental impacts. My questions are to the Minister of Energy. Given that some of the upgrader projects in the heartland area are on hold or have been cancelled . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, there has been some confusion or some misunderstanding that somehow the heartland transmission line was only part of the four critical transmission lines to serve the Industrial Heartland and the development there. What is really important, that needs to be on the record, is that the greatest growth area in the province in the next 20 years, in fact I'd say in the country, is the entire northeast part of Alberta.

Also, part of that is cogeneration, wherein . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's been brought to my attention that to bury the heartland transmission lines, the cost is 8.9 per cent more than the overhead lines. Once again a question to the Minister of Energy: if this is the case, with safety concerns in mind, wouldn't this be a better option?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, I think I want to finish the first answer because the answer to the supplementary is that that will be a decision made by the Alberta Utilities Commission as part of the hearings that commence next month. But we need to ensure that the fastest growing area of power generation in Alberta is going to be cogeneration from the oil sands, that needs to get into the grid.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: what cost-related measures are in place to ensure that the building of transmission lines remains reasonable in terms of construction costs and in terms of burying the line?

Mr. Liepert: Well, again, Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned previously, the whole allocation of costs is part of the Utilities Commission hearing that will take place. One of the things that I'm sure will be part of the proposal is that one option is burying the lines. Of course, that's a decision the Utilities Commission will make, and they will provide some options as part of their recommendation, I'm sure.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you stand still when the chair speaks, please. It's one of the decorum things. I know it's tough. And you're walking now between the chair and the hon. member, which is a no-no. Walk behind, please. Thank you very much.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge East.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have reviewed the Health Quality Council terms of reference. Given that the Health Quality Council investigation still only has limited access to information, can't compel witnesses, and cannot promise to protect those who might otherwise volunteer to be interviewed, my question is to the minister of health. Will he admit that the Health Quality Council is simply not equipped to crack the culture of fear and agree, instead, to an inquiry process that is?

The Speaker: The hon. minister of health.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the letter that I wrote on March 12 to the Health Quality Council on page 2 does say, "This independent Review shall be provincial in scope and is to be conducted utilizing Section 9 of the Alberta Evidence Act in order to maintain evidentiary privilege over the provision of documents and evidence of participants." Then I also said, "The Council shall also take whatever steps it deems necessary to maintain confidentiality of the people who participate within this process."

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, that does not address the issue of immunity.

Given that the AMA voice has joined the chorus calling for a public inquiry into intimidation in the health care system, an issue that cannot and will not be addressed through your kangaroo court, why won't the minister of health listen to the health professionals that he's been ignoring and agree to a judicial inquiry?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago and over the last several days, in fact, they were asking for the Health Quality Council to come in and do a review. We've now ordered that to be done. It will be independent. They took the first step today. They released a very reasonable, a very sensible set of terms of reference. They've also indicated that they will be appointing "a panel of experts . . . to assist and advise the [HQCA Council] in this review." Let's give them a chance to do that.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, the minister denies the health system's culture of intimidation, but given that the current code of conduct orders employees to refrain from publicly discussing confidential information about AHS business and to balance what they say against its impact on the reputation of AHS, how can the minister deny that these directions force health staff every day to ask whether they should be more worried about patients, the reputation of Alberta Health Services, or their jobs?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that's what's occurring, but I would like to quote from the open letter that was sent to all physicians yesterday by Alberta Health Services. It says on page 2, "The AHS Code of Conduct does not restrict a physician or other practitioner to speak out, quite the opposite. In essence, we are required to bring our concerns forward," and it goes on.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Unfortunately, here we go again as residents of the Medicine Hat area brace for new flooding. No. I'm sorry. They're bracing for excessive moisture. The response to last year's excessive moisture was poorly prepared and, in fact, finally contracted out to a private firm to handle. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: what tangible changes have been made to ensure that Albertans will see a more timely and better co-ordinated response this year?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the person asking the question is making assumptions that we're going to be facing exactly the same experiences as we did last year. Last year's certainly was a very sudden storm, and the communities were taken unprepared. This year we are monitoring the situation a lot closer. As I identified to the previous member, we are providing $1 million in funding for temporary flood mitigation efforts in both of the communities out there.

The Speaker: Thank you very much.
The hon. member, please.

Ms Pastoor: Can the minister confirm if the province is still dealing with any outstanding flood claims from last year?

Mr. Goudreau: I think I answered that earlier this week, Mr. Speaker. We are basically about 98 per cent done on the residential claims. There are still a number of claims that are outstanding. As we receive additional information, we process individual applications, and we'll continue to work with individual applicants that were affected last year as time moves along.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Given that Municipal Affairs required an additional $191 million in unbudgeted funds to help pay for last year's flooding, excessive moisture, should the province not be setting aside more than the $200,000 it currently budgets for disaster recovery?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, disaster recovery programs are very, very unpredictable, and we don't know when we're going to need them. We've got a process in place to access dollars, and we've been using that particular process. This past year we've declared just about a dozen DRPs, or disaster recovery programs, throughout the province, and we've been able to access those funds as we've needed them.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Grain Transportation

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Many grain and oilseed farmers in southern Alberta are telling me they are unable to sell or ship their produce due to full elevators and a backed-up shipping system. To the minister of agriculture: what is the reason for the backlog and delay in shipping?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think it's important to point out that the problem is primarily in the Canadian Pacific area of the province. I have heard from people myself, and of course it's delays in delivery. CP tells us there are a number of reasons: shortages of rail cars, delays due to extreme weather, avalanches, strained capacity. But I also understand that the Canadian Wheat Board and grain companies such as Viterra are trying to work directly with CP now to speed the system up.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Back to the same minister: what is your ministry's role in trying to address this issue?

Mr. Hayden: Well, Mr. Speaker, we've worked in a number of areas, and we know that this is a very important issue. We are continuing to encourage our federal counterparts to take action on the issue, and we are asking them to include in that a federal rail freight service review. This just highlights the need for marketing choice for producers. If they had other options, they could ship some through the United States but also find their own customers and make some shipping options available.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Berger: Thank you. Back again to the same minister: is there any action that our producers can take to help alleviate the situation in the shipping with CP?

Mr. Hayden: Well, really, Mr. Speaker, the only option available to the producers themselves – and we encourage them to do this – is to pressure CP directly through their MPs to get these issues resolved. We also encourage grain shippers to file a level of service complaint to the Canadian Transportation Agency. We believe that will get them some results.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Penhorwood Apartment Evacuations

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In my constituency over 350 residents in Fort McMurray who own or rent condos in a seven-building complex are now homeless. The impact is almost like there was an earthquake. They clearly feel there is a state of emergency. Does the Minister of Municipal Affairs, responsible for emergency management in Alberta, feel that this is a state of emergency, and is he taking the appropriate action?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member, having been a past Minister of Municipal Affairs, should know better. He is aware of the processes of declaring disaster recovery programs. He was, I believe, minister when those particular buildings were built and was in charge of the Safety Codes Act at that particular time. There is a process in place, and, you know, often a disaster may not be declared if there is . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Given that the minister just said no and he's not willing to help the residents, to the minister again: will you declare a state of emergency in helping these almost 400 citizens that are homeless right now?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we are in touch with the individual municipalities. The municipality is aware of the various services that are available to those individuals that were displaced from the properties. If it's a matter of health, they can work with the ministry of health. If it's a matter of, you know, financial needs and meeting those financial needs, then there are other avenues through the Minister of Employment and Immigration and their particular offices. So there are a number of options that are available to those particular individuals.

Mr. Boutilier: Given, Mr. Speaker, that this minister said that he's out of touch with what is going on, in my interpretation of what he just said, will he help these 400 citizens that are helpless as opposed to giving us this bureaucratic protocol rather than . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister. [interjection] Okay. Okay. Okay. We all know the rule we all agreed to. The hon. member was here yesterday.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we're going to do everything we can to help the individual people. There's no doubt, as I indicated before, that we have services that will deal with individuals in situations like this one and in other situations. As I indicated, if residents need emergency support, they can certainly visit one of our Alberta Works offices, and those could help in terms of covering things like utility arrears or damage deposits or rental arrears.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

School Bus Strobe Lights

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've heard from parents of schoolchildren in my constituency who feel that bus drivers are sometimes unsure of exactly when to use their strobe lights. My first question is to the Minister of Transportation. Would he revisit the use of highway and rules of road regulations and make any updates to ensure that strobe lights are being used as intended?

Mr. Ouellette: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm very, very proud to say that this government has taken significant steps to improve school bus safety, and we're told we're leading the country with our comprehensive approach. All 10 recommendations from the school bus safety report have been fully implemented, including mandatory strobe lights. We want to make sure that our regulations are clear, so we will work with school boards and the school bus industry to clarify what's necessary.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: given that weather conditions change quickly in Alberta, would it not be appropriate to have our bus drivers keep the strobe lights on all the time when travelling on the highway?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of strobe lights is to alert drivers that a school bus is ahead. The regulation requires that school bus drivers use strobe lights in situations of low visibility, when it's foggy or it's snowing or it's raining heavily, or at any time that increased visibility is needed. This is all about keeping our children safe, so if there is some clarification needed on the issue, we'll do that.

Mrs. Leskiw: My second supplementary is to the same minister. Given that other jurisdictions mandate that strobe lights stay on whenever a school bus is in a rural area, would this minister commit to the same policy here in Alberta?

Mr. Ouellette: Mr. Speaker, the school bus industry contributed greatly to the school bus safety report, but there was not a recommendation that came forward in that way. The recommendation implemented was to have mandatory strobe lights on busses to increase safety in poor visibility. We don't want the strobe lights to become routine. Our goal is to have them used to bring greater attention in specific situations, and that's very, very important.

Municipal Zoning Exemption for Universities

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, section 121 of the Post-secondary Learning Act exempts universities from municipal zoning controls of any form, whether they concern land use, traffic, parking, density, design, community impact, or anything else. To the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology: what's the reason that some universities are granted this pretty remarkable privilege?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our three residential universities in the province of Alberta do fall under a specific act which gives them broad, sweeping powers over traffic and planning on their sites, but we also know that they must work with the municipality and the neighbours to ensure that they don't encroach and that their facilities and sites work well within the municipality that they're in.

Dr. Taft: My question is to the same minister. Given that a small-business owner wanting to remove an interior wall or a homeowner wanting to build a deck or a developer wanting to put up a condominium all must comply with municipal zoning, is it fair that some universities are completely exempt from zoning?

The Speaker: The hon. minister. That's an opinion.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. All I can speak to is the legislation that does exist, that these universities were created under, which does give them powers over how they develop, how their buildings are developed, and how their transportation is done. It still all falls under building codes and other codes within the province.

Dr. Taft: Well, again to the same minister. Given that Mount Royal and MacEwan universities don't yet appear to have the privilege of a complete exemption from municipal zoning, will that privilege be extended to them or not, and if not, why not?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Both of our new baccalaureate universities were developed under other legislation, and they do fall under all municipal bylaws for planning and that. We did give them some new powers last year over issuing fines and collecting fines for traffic violations on their campuses, but on other issues they do fall under the Municipal Government Act in planning for the community.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Telecommunications Tower Siting

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the Member for Calgary-Montrose passionately expressed earlier today, siting of cellphone towers is a frustrating issue for many families, homeowners, and communities. Last April I asked the Minister of Municipal Affairs a question on this, and he indicated he would look into it. My question is to the minister. Has he been able to work with communities, municipalities, and the federal government to bring clarity to this issue?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, all three, and since it was brought up last year, I have specifically written to the federal minister responsible for Industry Canada in regard to this particular issue. I've raised consultation concerns pertaining to the cellphone towers. I'm still waiting for his reply to my letters.*

The Speaker: Thank you.
The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My supplemental is: does the minister see that there is there a role for him or his department to assist communities and municipalities in dealing with these challenges with telecommunications companies, the CRTC, and the federal government?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, telecommunications companies must apply to Industry Canada for a licence to operate an installation at each specific location. As part of this licensing process Industry Canada requires that the companies contact the city, in this case the city of Calgary, for input. The city is to review these referrals, then indicate whether or not the proposed installations can be supported. We've written to the large centres about their role in this particular issue, and they've indicated they have procedures in place now . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: I'm good.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Castle Special Management Area

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Ghost-Waiparous, Indian Graves, McLean Creek, and currently the Castle either wilfully through this government's failure to legislate and enforce the land-use framework or through its blind-eye neglect have been turned into resource extraction battlegrounds, worsened by the toleration of massive cumulative illegal off-roader wilderness destruction. To the Minister of SRD: are you aware that almost half of the trails in the Castle-Crown land-use area have been illegally carved by outlaw off-roaders?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, the only answer I can give to that is that I'm not personally aware of any outlaws in the Castle area.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's unfortunate that the minister is unaware . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, the preamble rule, please.

Mr. Chase: Yes, sir. Why other than during the singular May long weekend public relations show of co-ordinated ministerial enforcement are areas, including the Castle-Crown, abandoned to block clear-cutters and off-trail outlaws due to departmental understaffing?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member opposite has evidence of outlaws in the Castle, he should report that to the police.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be tabling the documents supporting the complaint.

The Speaker: Yes. We're going to move on, though.

Mr. Chase: To the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation: will you finally put an end to your government's sanctioned multi-use madness in the Castle-Crown and the decades-long discussion of destruction by creating the Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kòp provincial wilderness park?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, what we are doing with respect to Tourism, Parks and Recreation and Sustainable Resource Development working together is that we're developing a trail system for the province of Alberta. We hope that we'll have a DAO in place that would assist in, number one, the development; number two, the operation; number three, the policing; and number four, the financing of these trails so that all Albertans can enjoy the great outdoors in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm hearing concerns about our electricity system. In particular, my constituents are uneasy with the high electricity prices they've had to pay in the past as well as the potential for higher prices in the future. My first question is to the Minister of Energy. How can you ensure that the electrical system is operating as efficiently as possible to give Albertans lower prices for power and have it available when and where they need it?

2:40

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that Alberta electricity prices are at about the same rate today that they were in 2002. We have some of the most competitive rates, and that's primarily because our generation market is deregulated. Unlike some other provinces that have Crown corporations or try to meddle in the marketplace, our generation is deregulated.

As far as whether consumers are receiving a fair price, Mr. Speaker, that's really part of the purview of the utility . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Benito: My first supplemental is to the same minister. Since 2008, when the provincial energy strategy was released, what specifically has Alberta Energy done with respect to providing reasonable electricity prices?

Mr. Liepert: I think it needs to be stated, Mr. Speaker, that the Department of Energy has really nothing to do with setting prices. We have a deregulated retail market as well as a generation market. When the government moved to deregulation a number of years ago, at that time I think there were about three companies – ATCO, EPCOR, and Enmax – which were retailing electricity.

Both ATCO and EPCOR have vacated that market, but we now have some half a dozen different retailers who are offering a number of options to retailers throughout the province.

Mr. Benito: My second supplemental to the same minister: what is your ministry doing to ensure that competitiveness remains in Alberta's retail electricity market?

Mr. Liepert: Well, as I said earlier, we took the initiative – I don't know; I think it's 10, 12 years ago – to ensure that we have a competitive retail market, Mr. Speaker. What we're going to do is continue to ensure that that market works appropriately.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes the Oral Question Period for today. Thank you very much for your co-operation. Today 20 members were recognized. There were 118 questions and responses.

In a few seconds from now we will continue with the daily Routine, which still has one additional member participating in Members' Statements.

Members' Statements (continued)

The Speaker: The hon. Member for West Yellowhead.

Online Parenting Resource

Mr. Campbell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and share information on a government of Alberta website for caregivers with children aged zero to six. Research has shown that children's early experiences set the foundation for success in school and life, and parents and caregivers play the most important, significant role in a child's early years.

It is essential that parents, families, and care providers have easy access to available services, information, and support networks to ensure that young children have the resources and supports to realize their potential. There's a lot of information out there, especially on the Internet. The challenge is in sifting through all that information and determining what is both useful and reliable. To help make the process less time consuming, the government of Alberta has developed the Raising Children website: www.raisingchildren.alberta.ca.

The Raising Children website brings together all government information on services and programs targeted at families and caregivers. Other credible sources are also included, including Alberta Health Services and Health Link. Using the Raising Children website will help parents and caregivers make informed decisions. It will also put them in faster contact with the appropriate sources at the most opportune time. On this website you'll find a wide range of information, including health information for coping with crying, immunizations, saving for your children's education, information on government grants to support your savings, information for parents, and multiple supports for foster and kin parents and programs available for those raising aboriginal children.

The information is easy to find as it is divided into different categories by age, topic, and a section called Parents Like Me. I encourage all parents and caregivers to visit the site and to share the link with others.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that on Monday, March 21, 2011, written questions 1, 2, and 11 will be accepted; written questions 6, 7, 10, and 12 will be dealt with. Also on March 21, 2011, motions for returns 1, 4, and 10 will be accepted and 3, 5, and 9 will be dealt with.

Tabling Returns and Reports

Mr. Anderson: Yesterday at your request I dutifully obtained five notarized copies of the transcript of the interview with Dr. Lloyd Maybaum that was done by CTV news at 6 on Monday, March 14, 2011. The doctor said:

There's a plain fear . . . you'll lose your position, you might lose operating room hours. There's any number of different ways that people are fearful and have experience the backlash that can occur when you speak out.

. . . [There's] a real clear and present problem in the health care system and anyone who suggests that this is preposterous, you know, quite frankly is insulting to health care workers. This is the kind of culture we have worked in for many, many years.

I'll table those copies.

The Speaker: Thank you.

I've got the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition for a tabling. Hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, do you have one for yourself as well?

Ms Pastoor: I do as well. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Actually, bear with me. I think I've got about seven here.

On behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition from yesterday I'm tabling the requested copies in which he quoted Dr. Nunes, who asked for a public inquiry and agreed that, indeed, there existed intimidation and fear when one spoke out.

This is from a quote on March 16, again from the Leader of the Official Opposition from yesterday. It was Dr. Parks who had said: the public is right to fully demand we get to the bottom of this; anything less wouldn't be acceptable. That's from Wednesday, which was yesterday.

Also, from today a quote from the president of the Alberta Medical Association's letter.

My own is the cheque that I send out every month to a food bank, of course, with my mantra to ensure that AISH is indexed as are MLAs' salaries.

I have some letters to table from Drs. Grant and Christine Kennedy, who are both emergency doctors, saying that they're very concerned about the probable cuts to continuing medical education reimbursement, physician and family support, and the physician retention programs.

Also, another letter from a Dr. Francis, another emergency doc, who said that he is also concerned with the probable cuts to the physician and family support programs.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, do you have tablings, too?

Ms Blakeman: Yes, sir. Four.

The Speaker: Okay.

Ms Blakeman: The first is an e-mail correspondence from Darlene Natalia Konduc, who was a nephrology nurse-clinician at the University of Alberta at the time that Dr. Anne Fanning was there and was shuffled out by the government and is speaking up for the need to support doctors.

These next two are both regarding concerns about funding cuts. They are practising family physicians in Calgary. Olga de Sanctis is concerned about the funding cuts upcoming in Health and Wellness and their impact on the delivery of care. Another, an e-mail from Dr. Karen Zwiers, who is a clinical lecturer in Calgary and has been in practice for 11 years, concerning cuts to primary care and the primary care networks and competitive fee increases for physicians.

Finally, from a constituent of Edmonton-Centre, Dennis LeFebvre. He is a resident in the emergency medicine program at the University of Alberta and is concerned about any possible cuts there to the physician and family support program.

Thank you.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Earlier today the hon. the Premier referred to a letter from the president of the Alberta Medical Association. If I was listening correctly, it may well have been tabled, but if not, in any event, I'll table it again. If it's a duplicate, the Clerk can sort that out. It's the letter dated March 17, 2011, in which it very clearly states, "The AMA will support and cooperate with such an approach [i.e., a public inquiry] if this occurs," which is quite different from the way it was quoted by the Leader of the Opposition and the member of the Wildrose in their questions earlier today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have three sets of tablings. The first comes from Global Forest Watch, backing up my concerns about how badly cut up the Castle is by both clear-cutting and roads. The contact information is www.globalforestwatch.ca.

My second tabling is a letter from Beverly Kaltenbruner. She has a very telling comment here. "While hiking I have documented with my camera and my heart the massive destruction of watershed, forest, & habitat due to 'environmentally conscious, sustained growth' logging methods/operations."

The concerns of Beverly are reflected by the following 25 individuals, who have also sent me correspondence, Mr. Speaker: Matt Holland, Geoffrey Scatchard, Patrick Thompson, Margaret Johnson, Michael Marcoux, Wendy Menghi, Jeanne Keegan-Henry, Helen Hertel, Peter Stockdale, Ken Farquharson, J. Hobart, Joanne Wallace, Silvaine Zimmermann, Romilly Cavanaugh, Barry Cogswell, Randall White, Elizabeth Zaikow, Andrea Lee, Robert Blair, Susanna Jani, Mary Stewart, Ursula Lowrey, Heather Schamehorn, Margaret McKea, and Tanya Ulyatt.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. I would like to table, please, a copy of a letter that I received on December 2, 2010. This letter was from the Employment and Immigration minister. He was trying to explain, unsuccessfully, why there are two sets of numbers regarding claim durations. The first set of numbers is in the WCB 2008 annual report, and the second set is in the 2008 Occupational Injuries and Diseases report from his own department.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd also like to table the appropriate number of reports from the president's letter dated the 17th of March, St. Patrick's Day, and be very specific that right at the start of this letter the AMA supports a public inquiry. They say that the fact that these perceptions are out there is still a source of major concern. How do we . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, the document has already been tabled.

The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. This is a letter from a regional council, from an exchange this afternoon with the Minister of Municipal Affairs, that I received this morning. The letter is requesting support from the province that the city at this point has not received – and I table this from the regional council of Wood Buffalo – in helping the 400 residents that are now homeless.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Clerk: I wish to advise the House that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mrs. Klimchuk, Minister of Service Alberta, in response to a question raised by Mr. MacDonald, hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, during Oral Question Period on February 28, 2011, regarding fees for vehicle registrations and licence plates; in response to questions raised by Mrs. Forsyth, hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, during Oral Question Period on March 2, 2011, regarding the legal name change process.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The Official Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. At this point under Standing Order 7(6) I would ask the Government House Leader to share with us the projected government business for the week commencing Monday, the 21st of March.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For next week, as the House is aware, March 21 is private members' business.

March 22 in the afternoon Committee of Supply on Environment.

Wednesday, March 23, in the afternoon Committee of Supply on Culture and Community Spirit as per the schedule that's published on the Order Paper.

On Thursday, March 24, in the afternoon for second reading Bill 1, Asia Advisory Council Act; Bill 5, Notice to the Attorney General Act; Bill 7, Corrections Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 8, Missing Persons Act; Bill 10, Alberta Land Stewardship Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 11, Livestock Industry Diversification Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 12, Alberta Investment Management Corporation Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 14, Wills and Succession Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 15, Victims of Crime Amendment Act, 2011. Under Committee of the Whole Bill 4, Securities Amendment Act, 2011; and Bill 6, Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011. Of course, we won't be able to accomplish all of that in an hour and a half, so we will as usual discuss with the opposition which ones we'll actually bring forward and in what order.

The Speaker: Okay. The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on a point of order.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Mr. Anderson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I rise on a point of order from Standing Order 23(b)(i),(c),(e), and (j). I believe they all apply. The basis of the comment that I'm referring to was – I don't have the Blues in front of me; they're not available yet. Basically, the Premier, referring to the Wildrose caucus, says: this coming from a party that sent 30 doctors over to Vietnam. Clearly that is hogwash. It's misleading the House in every possible way. It's just a completely untrue statement, the insinuation also being that a former member of this House – he's been called all sorts of things in here.

It's amazing. They talk about using the privilege of this House to impugn people outside of the House and how inappropriate that is. They keep accusing people on this side of the House of doing that, and then they go and do the exact same thing with a former colleague. It's really quite shameful.

The other thing, too, is that former colleague, in fact, is not a . . .

The Speaker: I'm not aware that that was part of what was stated today. Let's deal with the point of order, though, okay?

Mr. Anderson: Well, Mr. Speaker. I'll try to explain. I'm just trying to make a complete argument. That's all I'm trying to do. I'm sorry if I'm not being clear. The point being that he's referring to the party . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, please sit down. You were here yesterday. You heard us have the discussion that points of order are not to be used for the purpose of continuation of debate. What was stated today – and I have the Blues in front of me. This is the Premier. He looked at me, and he said, "Mr. Speaker, comments coming from a party that just sent 30 physicians to Vietnam." At that point I recognized a point of order from the hon. Member from Airdrie-Chestermere. Let's focus on that item. Please go forward.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. On that point, sir, I will go and say this. If the member continues with that same logic, the fact that this person has joined our party, who is not a chief adviser, who is not on staff, not being paid – if they continue to say that that person represents this party and continues to represent this party and their policy, then I'm assuming that they, too, would assume that the fact that Ken Hughes, who is leading up Alberta Health Services, was advocating for a private luxury hospital in Mexico would mean that the government supported private health care as well.

Now, of course that's an asinine statement to make because this government does not support private health care. We know that. I know that. I don't think the NDP knows that, but I know that.

So if I'd said in the House, "because Ken Hughes supports a for-profit hospital and the government hired him to be the head of AHS, this government supports private health care," so, too, is it just as asinine to say that because somebody joins our party who happens to be involved overseas in Vietnam at a private hospital and who happens to be a member of our party, therefore this party promotes private health or, even worse, shipped 30 doctors over there.

It's completely untrue. It's misleading, it's false, and it's pathetic. They need to withdraw the comment.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader on this point.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's very interesting that within the space of two weeks they embrace as a chief policy adviser somebody who is introducing their leader and is speaking for their party, embrace it and make a big public display of it, and then two weeks later they want to disavow the connection. He's no longer the health adviser, I guess, no longer the person who speaks for them with respect to health policy and gives them advice. It's absolutely amazing how this party is positional – I think that's the best I could say – with respect to their philosophy and their sense of direction.

In any event, I think it's clear that the Wildrose Party couldn't ship anything anywhere; therefore, I do think that it probably was a little bit over the top to say that the party just shipped 30 physicians to Vietnam. So on behalf of the Premier – and I do have his permission – I would withdraw that remark and apologize for suggesting that they shipped 30 physicians to Vietnam when, clearly, it is their chief health policy person who's involved with the private hospital there and there's no indication that their party is involved directly or indirectly in that hospital.

The Speaker: Well, we've heard an apology; we've heard a withdrawal; we've heard a clarification. It's now time for Orders of the Day.

Orders of the Day Government Bills and Orders Third Reading

Bill 13 Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. President of the Treasury Board, Minister of Finance and Enterprise.

Mr. Snelgrove: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my privilege to rise today and move third reading of Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the debate.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Certainly, Mr. Speaker, any time one gets a chance to examine in detail the budgeting habits of this government, I think one has to take the opportunity. I had a meeting earlier today, and I was trying to explain to citizens how we were for the fourth year in a row in a budget deficit and how the sustainability fund was being reduced to almost nothing and that if we're not careful when the election is called, all the money that's left in the stability fund, slightly over $5 billion, will be committed to grip-and-grin photo opportunities as this government tries to buy its way with taxpayers' money into another four-year term. Now, certainly, I was taken aback, and I'm sure if the provincial finance minister was with me, he would have been taken aback and he probably would have been embarrassed. This group could not believe that it was four years in a row that this government somehow managed to have a deficit budget.

The first couple of years they were small. They've gotten bigger, and who knows how the end of this year will look. Mr. Speaker, I'm talking about 2011-12. One of the first things I do in the morning now is look at the exchange rate. The exchange rate is moderated when you compare us to the Americans and their dollar, but certainly if that exchange rate was to remain constant for the entire fiscal year, we'd be looking at a loss of at least $600 million from the minister's projections. So when this government stands up and requests an appropriation amount to get started in the fiscal year – it's really no different than an allowance – questions have to be asked. What are the plans? What are we going to do to control costs?

In committee we noted the $2.2 billion that is requested for health care. We have seen over the years – and people are really starting to take notice of it now – the great cost of the continual changes that have been made by this government without any plan, without any cost-benefit analysis to see what, if anything, would work. Nothing was done in that respect. But we've seen the quality of care go down, we have seen growing wait-lists, we have seen diverse services around the province, and we've seen rapid cost inflation.

Ultimately for who knows what reasons the government decided in March of 2008, three years ago almost precisely, to create one big superboard. We disbanded the nine RHAs, the Cancer Board, the Mental Health Board, and we got this one superboard with an unelected board of directors. Some of them got so dissatisfied with this government – I don't know if it was over budget issues or what it was over.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

Mr. MacDonald: They got so dissatisfied with this government that they resigned.

The Speaker: Hon. member, please. The hon. Government House Leader has a point of order.

Point of Order Relevance

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, I've been listening intently. I know that the bill that's under debate is interim supply, which is about the provision of money for the first few months of the year for government operations while we continue deliberation of the details of the budget. The hon. member is talking about government creating one board for health. He hasn't touched, so far as I can tell, for the last five minutes of his talk on anything to do with interim supply, so I'm wondering if there's anything relevant in what he has to say at all.

The Speaker: On the point of order.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. There certainly isn't a point of order. The minister clearly was not paying attention, and I would appreciate it if he would pay attention. I haven't even been speaking for five minutes, to start with.*

In this bill here, Bill 13, Mr. Speaker, this government is requesting $2.2 billion for health. I'm astonished that he would even suggest that there's a point of order here. If we cannot ask questions on which direction this government is going with their spending of that allocation and examine their past habits and what they have done to public health care, I'm just astonished. Quite frankly I'm disappointed in this hon. member that he would even suggest that there's a point of order here.

The Speaker: Well, now I'm totally confused. The hon. Government House Leader gets up on a point of order, and then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar gets up and says: yes, there is a point of order.

Mr. MacDonald: I didn't say that there was a point of order.

The Speaker: Yes, you did. You absolutely said that right at the start, but I understood that that was not what you meant. It's what you said, though.

Let's continue with the debate, okay? There is 20 minutes allocated to the second speaker on third reading. We'll continue, and we'll focus on the appropriation bill, which is Bill 13.

Edmonton-Gold Bar, please proceed.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay. I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: You both agreed there was a point of order, so I'm not saying anything more.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I would have to say that I appreciate your guidance on that point of order, but if my mother was alive, she would say to you: you have a vivid imagination.

The Speaker: Your mother would be an astute person.

Mr. MacDonald: She was a teacher by profession.

The Speaker: Your mother must have been brilliant. I hope it was genetic. [interjections] Proceed, hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: I didn't hear that.

Debate Continued

Mr. MacDonald: Now, when we vote on this $2.2 billion allocation that's requested in Bill 13, we have to examine this government's previous spending habits with health care. We have seen total spending in billions of dollars – and we even go back only nine years. I know, Mr. Speaker, that immediate past history is not an interest of this government, but in 2003 we had spending in health care of a little less than $7 billion. It has certainly gone up and beyond that in 2011. In 2012 this $2.2 billion request will be supplemented by an additional 13 and a half billion dollars, if not more.

Citizens all over the province, whether the government wants to admit it or not, are looking at these health care expenditures, whether they're in this bill or in previous years, and they're asking themselves questions. Where did the money go? Where did it go? Are we getting better value? Are we getting more service? Are the emergency room wait times going down? Are we waiting a lot less for access to orthopedic surgery or to other types of surgery? The answer, clearly, is: no, we're not. So we're spending more, and we seem to be getting less.

Now, an example of this would be facility-based emergency and outpatient services. There has been a $350 million increase over five years, and the emergency room situation seems to be getting worse. I know there was a photograph in the Edmonton Journal today of the minister of health, and he was pointing at a chart. What exactly it had to do with that article, I don't know, but it was in there. It was there. What I would like to see and what the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview would like to see with at least a portion of this $2.2 billion that's requested here for health is a look at hiring more emergency staff, expanding primary care networks, and expanding community health networks. If we were to do that, perhaps at some time in the future we could start reducing some of these budgets, particularly for emergency room care because we wouldn't need as much emergency room care, and we would increase service and decrease wait times. I know the Alberta Liberal Party has had some good ideas that have been adopted by this government in the past, and you would be welcome to have a look at this suggestion as well.

Another example before we pass this bill, Mr. Speaker, is the IT expenses, or the information technology expenses, of Alberta Health Services. Obviously, they're going to get a portion of this $2.2 billion. Now, if you look at 2007, they got slightly less than $190 million. The next year they were up around $230 million. The next year after that they were up to $270 million. In 2010 it was almost $300 million, and then the next year it snuck up to $335 million or even more. That's an 80 per cent increase in five years in IT costs. Yet with this bill the government is looking for just an unlimited credit card allowance, if I could use that, with health care. We've got to get some of these costs under control.

The Globe and Mail had a very interesting article, I believe on January 26 of this year, regarding IT costs and health care systems across the country. We know it's happened in Ontario. We know it's happened in some other provinces. We've got to ensure that we're getting value for the money that we're spending, and with this government, unfortunately, we can't guarantee that. Maybe the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore has more to say on this. I don't know. When you see these 80 per cent increases in IT costs over five years, it doesn't include all the health information systems within the ministry, and that was another $75 million last year.

The government members may not want to hear what I have to say, but here's what the office of the Auditor General of Alberta had to say:

- Improve the oversight of electronic health records systems by:
  - maintaining an integrated delivery plan that aligns with the strategic plan
  - improving systems to regularly report costs, timelines, progress and outcomes

If the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, the Government House Leader and Minister of Education, doesn't want to hear my take on this, I would encourage him to follow up with the Auditor General.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at this budget again, the $2.2 billion for health care, we know a portion of that is going to Alberta Health Services. It was interesting to note that Alberta Health Services put their third-quarter financial statements up on the Internet over this past weekend. It's very interesting to see that they do have a surplus, and they're going to be able to pay off their deficit from last year, and they're going to have, I think, roughly $300 million left. They're going to spend $200 million of it on equipment somewhere. I don't know where, but that's essentially what's going on there.

We were told, Mr. Speaker, by this government, when they created the superboard, that they would get management staff under control and there would be a lot fewer managers. We were going to have a lot less administration. We certainly know that with administrative expenses that hasn't happened. But if we look at the management staff – and I'm going to take the risk of going back quickly three years – we will see that there were roughly 3,480 total management staff in the nine regions and the health board and the Cancer Board. So these were total management staff reporting to the board and, ultimately, the minister. The next year that jumped to close to 3,700, and this was at a time when we were told: "Hold on. Be patient. All this will work out, and we will have a lot less management." It didn't happen. But in the year 2009-10, before we had this budget, it did go down slightly to 3,540.

Now, did the costs go down? Naturally, a curious Progressive Conservative would wonder: what is the total cost of all these managers? If we're going to give a billion dollars or $1.4 billion to Alberta Health Services to keep them going from April 1 until the budget is passed, what kind of money are they spending over there on management staff? Well, it's significant. It was even significant in 2007-08. It was $407 million or $408 million. It jacked up to 470 some-odd million dollars in 2008-09, and it has sort of maintained that level. Even though there are a few less managers, it would be, I think, around $472 million to be exact.

I wasn't impressed with the pledge, or the promise, that was made that there would be fewer administrative costs and that there would certainly be fewer managers if we went with the superboard. That hasn't happened. So we need to consider the information, and we also need to remember the information when we're providing organizations like Alberta Health Services money from the general revenue fund, and this is exactly what's happening with Bill 13.

Also, while I have the time, I would like to speak a little bit about Justice. In Justice here the request is for $68.7 million. I'm wondering if, in the course of debate, someone in the Department of Justice could go back, because I just don't have the time, Mr. Speaker. I don't know who is doing it, the Public Affairs Bureau or the Premier's office – I don't know – but all the researchers that we hired in our caucus have been hired away by this government just like that. We train them, get them up to speed, and they're hired away. It's sort of a curious pattern that at the fourth year of every term there is an exodus of Alberta Liberal caucus researchers to the government. The hiring freeze that they suggest to the public is on, doesn't apply to our researchers. So I'm going to have to get the Justice department to research this item for me before I would vote for this bill.

The legal services that Justice provides to each and every department of this government: I would like to know what that budget was. Let's go back eight years, to 2002. What would it be for legal aid? Let's compare what this government is spending over an eight-year period on themselves and their own departments and what they're willing to spend on individuals who simply cannot afford to hire a lawyer, but they need good, sound legal advice and good, sound legal direction. I certainly would like a response from the folks over in Justice on this. How much do you spend on yourselves over an eight-year period, and how much are you willing to spend on others to help them out?

With those remarks, Mr. Speaker, I would certainly thank the honourable House, particularly the hon. Member for Edmonton-Whitemud, for allowing me this opportunity to get some questions on the record regarding this government's spending habits.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour to get up in third reading of Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011, and to continue, I guess, with the questions and the concerns that we have because of the major deficit, the cash to expenses, that this government is running. I feel that with all the discussions that go on in the Treasury Board and behind closed doors and with the numbers that they hopefully have and we request to see, we are unable to see in this very short Appropriation Act, with a huge amount that the Treasury Board is requesting, the billions of dollars – it's just a major concern, with the $3.7 billion deficit that we're running, that we're not going over the specifics of these requests in detail.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

We start off, you know, under the government with Aboriginal Affairs, Advanced Education and Technology, Agriculture and Rural Development, Children and Youth Services, Culture and Community Spirit, Education, Employment and Immigration, Energy, Environment, Executive Council, Finance and Enterprise, Health and Wellness, Housing and Urban Affairs, Infrastructure, International and Intergovernmental Relations, Justice, Municipal Affairs, Seniors and Community Supports, Service Alberta, Solicitor General and Public Security, Sustainable Resource Development, Tourism, Parks and Recreation, Transportation, Treasury Board all needing supplemental interim supply.

The paramount question that first comes forward is: why? I would ask why because this government isn't being efficient in its timelines with bringing forward the budget in a timely manner. They delayed coming back to this House, and you have to ask: why would they delay coming back to this House? It was one of the Premier's first promises when he got in. I remember that. I thought: "Man, that's going to be great. We're going to get in there. There's going to be a budget the second week in February. We can debate it and pass it before year-end on March 31."

It was interesting for me the other day to learn from the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre that, in fact, in the last 15 years there was one time that we didn't have to have interim supply. So the question has to be asked: why can we not do that every year? I think that the government is fully to blame for why we cannot do that. They fail to act in an efficient and appropriate manner, and they seem to think: well, we can just push $2.2 billion through quickly; it won't take too much time. And, again, no details.

It's always interesting to me that with opposition parties they say: oh, we oppose everything. I very much disagree with that. We oppose those things which we feel are not in the best interests of Albertans, and I'm very much opposed to the exorbitant amount of money that this government continues to spend without properly informing the opposition, the citizens of Alberta what those priorities are or where they're going to spend that money. Any budgetary process that one goes through, the first thing you look at is how much money you have. Then you look at: what are our needs, what are our priorities, and how do we match those?

I don't know too many people personally that don't have to worry about budgeting. As the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar said, this government just seems to have a gold-plated credit card with no limits. It sounds like some of those fancy, rich children that go around the world spending lots of money with no limits, and every now and then daddy calls up and says: "Whoa, whoa, whoa. This is getting a little bit out of control here. What are you spending your money on?"

Two or three weeks ago the National Post was interesting to me. I read an article about a Saudi prince that needed to be reined in because he was spending $15 billion annually. He was called in, and they said: you're going to have a budget of just $300 million per month. What a budget. But it aligns with this government in doing that.

The point is, though, Mr. Speaker, that we as opposition would be more than happy to sit down and go through and items where we would say: "Yes. We agree. This should be taken out of there. We'll wait a couple of years on this one. This one shouldn't be this high on the priorities. We shouldn't be starting these projects." When we're not given that opportunity, it's very hard to say: "Well, yes. We want to support and vote for this budget." Why and how could we do that? It doesn't make any sense to just willy-nilly go along and vote for this interim supply while saying: well, this is just what we need. No.

It's very disappointing to me as a sitting MLA, going door-knocking and talking to individuals, and they ask: well, where are we spending all this money? And I say: I wish that I had access to the books so that we could really see where they're spending the money. We can see this after it comes in. The south hospital is going to cost, I think, $1.3 billion, way over budget. The renovations of the federal building: some say it's $135 million to $270 million. But we've already started that, and there's nothing we can do. That's the problem. That's the reason why you budget.

Why we debate these things is: before we start, let's look and analyze and prioritize. This government fails to do it, fails to allow us to do it. Those decisions, those lists are behind closed doors. We have no access despite the number of times that we've asked. "Please show us your 20-year infrastructure plan. Please show us your five-year one. Let's see your priorities. What are they? How many miles of highway do you plan on doing and where?" It's critical.

I continue to drive and put a lot of miles on my vehicle every year to get around this wonderful province and listen to the concerns in rural Alberta and urban and north and south. Generally the majority of our roads are in decent shape, but boy we have some that are really problematic. Highway 63 is one of those, yet we haven't seen any movement going forward on that. There has been no pavement actually laid in two years. Again, that's not adequate. We need to change that.

So there are many, many concerns, Mr. Speaker, in this interim supply. I have to say, you know: without information, how can you blindly vote for something like this? It's inadequate to present. Any board of directors of any company would find this unacceptable when the numbers were presented. I very much feel that same way, that these numbers should be presented in full and open view that the public can see.

The minister of finance says: oh, you just want to politicize the list. I think it would do just the opposite. If the list was actually opened and could be discussed and the reasons were there, there would be much less political maneuvering that would go on if, in fact, the list was there. A person could look and say: well, why are we doing this overpass in this area? When you look at the count, you look at the problems, you look at the deaths, these are the areas where we need it. But when the government waits, makes the announcement that this is what we're doing, well – okay – what were the other ones on the list? We don't know. How do we prioritize when we don't know? They won't given us the information.

3:30

Things need to change, Mr. Speaker. I have to say that it's not possible to vote in support of this without more information. I hope, as the minister of finance said I believe yesterday in Committee of the Whole, that they're prepared to look at the format and what they're going to present for next year. I do hope that we can sit down and come up with a much better system so that next year we can actually be discussing the items rather than a few lines and a few numbers, that we can actually be discussing the plans and the priorities for the people of Alberta and where we can spend our tax dollars most effectively to increase our quality of life and enjoyment here in the province.

With that, I'll sit down and let someone else speak on this. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Seeing none, any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview on the bill.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, I won't speak for too long here, but I just need to reinforce a message to the government that I've made at other times in the past when we've debated interim supply. This legislation, if we had a better budgetary process, would be unnecessary. The fact of the matter is that we should be debating and voting on the budget long before the beginning of the fiscal year so that everything can be in place.

It wouldn't of course just mean that we wouldn't have to spend time in this Assembly on interim supply bills, but it would make a real difference for all kinds of people out in Alberta who depend on public funding. I'm thinking, for example, of various nonprofit groups that provide important social services, the organizations who run shelters or who run all kinds of other facilities or lots of other organizations who are actually left hanging financially.

Mr. Oberle: Vote for the bill, then. We have interim supply. That's the point of it.

Dr. Taft: I'm getting encouraged by the Member for Peace River, the Solicitor General. He likes what I'm saying, I think.

My point was that until we have a proper budgeting system in place as a government, these interim supply bills get debated. Until the budget itself is passed, all kinds of people out in the community are left wondering what financial support they will be getting. I've gone around. I've talked with all kinds of people from north to south, east to west in this province who plead with me to urge the government to come up with a better budgeting system. They have staff. They've got bills. They've got contracts for rent and so on. They're left until very, very late in the process before they know whether they will get provincial funding or not. That's simply unfair, and it's, frankly, very inefficient.

There is a solution that would mean that next year and other years we wouldn't need to go through this kind of debate, and that would be to have the budget brought in earlier, have the debate occur earlier, have the vote earlier. It's just simple good management, Mr. Speaker, and it's a mystery to me why we don't see that done by this government. It used to be done. It's absolutely doable. There would be all kinds of benefits to it. I would urge this government to next year get on top of their budgeting process six or eight weeks sooner in the calendar year and have everything dealt with so we don't need these kinds of interim supply bills.

Those are my comments. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

The hon. member for – the hon. leader of the ND opposition.

Mr. Mason: Thank you. That will do just nicely, too, Mr. Speaker. I appreciate that.

I'm happy to rise and speak to Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011. I just want to echo some of the comments of the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, that this bill should be unnecessary and that I don't think it's good financial management of the province. In fact, Mr. Speaker, had this Assembly been called when it was originally planned to be and had the budget been brought forward immediately after that happened, we would have passed the budget now in its entirety, and we wouldn't have required it.

But what happened was that the government decided that they had to go out on a cabinet tour. They were really kind of worried about what people were thinking, and they wanted to get their message out, so they postponed the Legislative Assembly session. They went out and talked to people all over the province, and suddenly they found out that people didn't like them very much. They cut that off, came back, the Premier resigned, and they decided: you know, we'd better go to plan B.

You know, this is pretty typical of how the government operates. Instead of having a systematic financial and legislative framework that they work within, they're always changing things around because, well, they're always screwing up, Mr. Speaker. People get mad, and they decide that they better get out there and talk to people, and then they find out that, well, it's kind of past time to get your message out. It's a little bit too late. So they dropped the cabinet tour, they rushed back to the Assembly, the Premier quit, and they figured: "Well, let's start over again. It's worked for us in the past when we get into a lot of trouble. We bring in a new leader, and everybody will like them, and they'll forget what's been going on." Well, I think that worked when Premier Klein came in, but I don't think it's going to work again.

I think that it is, frankly, unnecessary for us to be discussing an interim supply bill. Had the government stuck to its responsibilities as a government instead of trying to play politics – you know, who knows what other rabbits they're going to try and pull out of the hat in order to avoid what's coming to them in the next election? Hopefully, we're going to see a government that is prepared to put the management of the public finances and the legislative process ahead of their own short-term political needs. I'm prepared to commit, Mr. Speaker, that a New Democratic Party government will do just that.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Seeing none, the chair shall now recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere on the bill.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you. On the bill, Bill 13. I talked a little bit about Bill 13, the Appropriation (Interim Supply) Act, 2011, yesterday in committee, and I would echo a lot of the same sentiments of the other opposition colleagues in this Legislature, that I don't see why we should even be here debating this bill.

Mr. Hancock: You don't need to.

Mr. Anderson: That's right. There is no need to. You're right. We don't need to, as the House leader from the government says. As opposition we could all just turn our heads, close our eyes, plug our ears, and say: "Nothing bad is happening. Nothing bad is happening. Just business as usual. Business as usual." But we don't do that because our duty as an opposition is to make sure that when the government does dumb things, we point them out to the public so that voters can have the opportunity to remove them from their position in the next election should they continue to do those dumb things. Clearly, we are on the road to such a time, if every piece of evidence is not ignored, anyway.

I look at some of these figures and, again, the amount, the sheer magnitude of what we're approving here, being almost $5 billion on a little piece of paper this big, a few pieces of paper, actually. Sorry. There are more than one. There are two pieces of paper stapled together, and in these two pieces of paper we will approve $5 billion. I have no idea and neither does anyone in this House know other than maybe some pencil-pusher in the back of some government department what this $5 billion is paying for. We know that some of it's going to education, $643 million – that's good – and $300,000 of that is going to capital investment. That's not too promising.

But we don't know what that money is being spent on. We're assuming there are some salaries in there, we're assuming there are a few other things in there, but what's it being spent on? We don't know because they don't say. Frankly, we could be hiring a circus to come in and march around. We could have the circus and the clowns march around all the different schools to teach them about the circus.

Mr. Mason: How the government runs things.

Mr. Anderson: About how government runs things; that's right.

The point is that we don't know because we don't have a clue what that $643 million is. Could you imagine running a budget this way in any kind of corporation or school board or union? Could you imagine running anything this way, coming to a board of directors and saying: "Here's our budget. It's $4 billion. It's two pages thick"? I mean, it would be laughable. It is laughable. Yet this is how we approve budgets or interim supply appropriation in the province of Alberta. This is how we do this in the province of Alberta.

It is no fluke that we are running a $6.2 billion cash shortfall and vapourizing our savings for future generations. It's because of silliness like this, where you can ram through $4 billion, $5 billion dollars' worth of money and not have any idea what we're spending it on and just say: the bureaucracy will handle that. I don't understand why we do it so differently. It's not like we're in a minority government situation here. That, of course, may change or could.

In a minority I could understand, you know, if some things happened and it's difficult to keep the calendar steady and every year have the same dates for passing budgets and getting things done, but in a majority government for 40 years you would think that after all those years the government could somehow put a calendar together and have the competence and the wherewithal and the financial management capabilities to put together a calendar where we wouldn't have to approve $5 billion essentially without even knowing what we're approving it for because we didn't get back here in time to introduce and pass the budget. It really does not make a whole lot of sense.

Any CEO or CFO who took a budget like this to a board of directors would be thrown out on his derrière and told not to come back except to maybe clean out his office or her office. I think that is pretty much exactly what may occur here for a lot of folks if we continue to pass $5 billion and multibillion dollars in projects and transmission lines, carbon capture and storage to good corporate buddies and so forth, BRIK programs, and all these different things where we just kind of on a whim say: "Here you go. There you go. Have at 'er. Here's $500 million. Here's $2 billion. Here's $300 million. Off we go." Yet that's exactly how we manage the affairs of this province at this time.

Actually, I'll give you a little insight. I don't and I won't and I still will not ever say what an individual member in the caucus over there said in any given caucus meeting, but I will say what was discussed in caucus. I remember in caucus what was discussed about carbon capture and storage, for example. It was actually kind of funny. I remember it was at a Stampede caucus, and we were all sitting around the table, and all of a sudden we were presented with a new program. "This is what we're going to do. We're going to spend $2 billion on a carbon capture and storage fund, rolling it out over several years. We're going to spend $2 billion on what we will title a Green TRIP program, which will be grants to municipalities and private corporations that have innovative ideas for mass transportation. The person that will decide what an innovative idea is is the Minister of Transportation," which warms my heart and gives me a huge amount of confidence in that program. That was it.

Then the folks went down and did their press conference, and it was, "Those in favour?" – you know, pound the desk – "Those opposed? Carried," that sort of thing. That's how $4 billion of your public money was approved by this government. That's how it went down. It was that quick. Literally, we're talking about a 20-minute conversation here for $4 billion. That's what we're talking about. This is not a word of a lie, and everyone sitting in this Chamber on that side knows that.

Of course, after the fact, it became a bit of a debate amongst the caucus members about whether that was appropriate or not, but the point is that there wasn't really time for debate. It just happened: $4 billion out the door, approved, signed, sealed, delivered, done. That is what a government whose spending is completely out of control, who has lost all sense of reality with regard to respect for the public purse and for taxpayers' cash, looks like on the inside. There are many other examples where that has occurred, but that was the most expensive example that I can recall: 20 minutes, $4 billion, essentially no real discussion, just a bunch of hands pounding on the desks.

That is one of the problems. If you look into the bill and we see some of the amounts here, let's look at Transportation. Transportation: $151 million in capital investment. That's great; we need transportation. We need roads and infrastructure. But what is that $151 million being spent on? Is it going to be spent on widening highway 9 to Drumheller? One constituent asked me: "Why are we undertaking this project when we have a $6.2 billion cash shortfall? Why are we doing that right now? Could that not have waited a couple of years until we were back in surplus? Would the entire economy shut down if we do not widen that road in the next two years?" I don't think it would.

It's not saying that we don't need roads. We like roads. We need roads to put trucks on and transport goods and people to see their families and all those things. We absolutely do need those things. It's so funny over here. You know, everyone talks about: oh, the Liberals and the Wildrose and the New Dems are so different. Indeed, we do have definite policy differences, but for one thing – at least with the Liberals, when I was reading their budget proposal, that was similar to ours – we both understood the need for living within our means and stretching the capital budget over a longer period of time. They proposed five years; we proposed four years. I don't think their five-year idea was that bad. They were saying: look, we need to balance the budget. Good. We say four years. [interjections] Yeah, well, I'll have to think about it a little more.

The point is that when you have a party which is considered – you know, who cares? We're not going to be ideological today. When you have two parties that everyone says are so different from each other saying essentially the exact same thing on fiscal responsibility with regard to the capital budget, you would think that – I don't know – maybe the government would say: "Oh, you know what? Maybe they have a point there. Maybe we can balance our budget, and we can have everything we need and want, but we just can't have it all this year."

The Education minister has a hard time with this. Whenever we're in estimates, I'm always saying: "We can have it all, Minister. We can have it all. We just can't have it all this year. We've got to therefore decide which projects we can delay an extra year or two and which ones we can't, and there is where we need the list of projects." Then when we get the list of projects, we can sit down and have a debate over which projects, based on objective criteria, are most urgent and which are less urgent. The less urgent ones: perhaps the federal building, equipped with interactive water features, an agrizone, an ecozone, and skating rink, would have fallen on the last part of the priority list, kind of down the list a little bit, and wouldn't get built.

Then the stuff at the front of the line would include – no doubt about it – schools for Fort McMurray and Beaumont – clearly, Beaumont is in need – for Airdrie and Chestermere. Critically needed schools. They're partitioning classrooms. They're putting two classrooms into a library and shutting the library down in some schools. I've got classes in my constituency of 40 kids in elementary school. There's a priority. Highway 63 to Fort McMurray: a huge priority. We've got to get that finished.

Do we need to be building thousands of new acute-care beds right now? Do we need to be building expensive new hospital infrastructure, that we can't afford to staff, when we could be spending a fraction of that amount on long-term care and assisted living to free up bed blockers in acute care, who are the first ones to tell you they want to get out of there and get into more appropriate housing? That would make some sense. Maybe we could put off some of those new acute-care beds and focus on less expensive long-term beds and actually accomplish the exact same thing we're trying to do, which is increase acute-care capacity without spending all these additional billions of dollars.

Instead, we have a south-side hospital, for example, that is going up. We don't even have the money budgeted to staff it. We don't have a cent budgeted to staff the thing when it opens up, so what are we going to do then? Even if we had the money budgeted, I wonder if we even have the staff necessary in the province to staff that size of a hospital. I mean, everyone likes hospitals, but what good are they if you can't afford to staff them and if you can't find the staff to train because you don't have enough trained staff?

It just is beyond belief, Mr. Speaker, that we can't find a way to prioritize, slow the capital build a little bit, and make sure that we can staff all the facilities that we're planning on opening, that we can staff them appropriately, rather than just build them all. You know, they just kind of sit there empty, or at least a huge percentage of them do, or half empty or a quarter empty or three-quarters empty and so forth. So not a very good bill.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or question.

Seeing none, any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, the chair shall now put the question.

[Motion carried; Bill 13 read a third time]

Bill 2

Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: Any hon. member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on Bill 2.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. We're certainly getting the constituency name back as spring progresses. The name "snow bar" is snowbank.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, excuse me.

Has the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill moved the bill? I thought you moved it last time, but if you haven't moved it, then please stand up and move it.

Dr. Brown: My apologies, Mr. Speaker. I am very pleased to rise and move Bill 2, the Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011, for third reading.

I do appreciate the discussions we had regarding these matters. If there are other members that wish to speak to that at this time, I'm interested in hearing what they have to say.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, please continue.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, as spring progresses, we are getting back to our original constituency name of Edmonton-Gold Bar. It had been changed for obvious reasons this winter to Edmonton-Snowbank. I believe it was the Member for Calgary-Varsity that provided that name to our constituents.

Mr. Hancock: There's been no lack of snow coming from the member.

Mr. MacDonald: Oh, there's a little bit there. The hon. member is also in the same snowstorm as I.

Mr. Mason: You're drifting.

Mr. MacDonald: I may be, but I can still see.

Now, Bill 2, Protection Against Family Violence Amendment Act, 2011, is a very important piece of legislation. We had commented on this earlier. Again, to the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill, an expression of gratitude for your efforts on this. I certainly hope that this legislation works to reduce family violence by holding accountable those who violate protection orders. This legislative initiative has been called for by many people.

The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East spoke earlier about the efforts of Jan Reimer, the former mayor of the city of Edmonton, and her work now with the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters. Certainly, Ms Reimer has indicated a number of times that the Council of Women's Shelters has expressed concern about the lack of consequences for those who abuse or breach emergency protection orders. She's hopeful – and so am I – that this legislation will encourage police all over the province to lay criminal charges when people breach protection orders.

Every now and then I think each and every member of this Assembly meets with a constituent who is a victim of family violence and needs a peaceful, secure place to rest with their children while these rather difficult issues are at least stopped and there is a resolution to some of the disputes. Ms Reimer and other individuals from the Alberta Council of Women's Shelters see almost daily, unfortunately, first-hand some examples of what this bill is attempting to do, and that is to go after those who are responsible and let them know once and for all that their actions are no longer going to be tolerated.

With those remarks, I would like to be mindful that this certainly is a step in the right direction. The member is making an effort to get tougher on domestic violence. There are different measures that have been discussed in the throne speech. There are different legislative initiatives that are going to proceed through this House in this session. When you look at family violence and how Alberta families are affected by this – I'm not going to get into the comparisons between each and every province or territory, but we have a lot of work to do in this province, and this bill reflects an intention to start. I hope it works.

Thank you.

4:00

The Deputy Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak on the bill?

Would you like to close the debate, then, hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill?

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to make a couple of very brief remarks. I want to reiterate my appreciation for the support of 12 different colleagues who spoke to this bill in second reading and in Committee of the Whole and here again in third reading. I want to just briefly address some of the questions that were raised by members of the Assembly during Committee of the Whole.

The Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood had asked me about the offences and why the offence and penalty provisions would be better in the act rather than addressing the breaches of protection orders through the Criminal Code. I did address that in part. I mentioned the enhanced tracking that would be available and the fact that all sorts of a grab basket of various offences are brought within the ambit of section 127. A lot of them would be failure to appear in court, failure to produce evidence, all sorts of things which may not be related to family protection orders.

Another direct benefit of having this matter directly in the act rather than having it under a civil process for contempt of court or under the Criminal Code is that by having the enforcement directly under the legislation, it will ensure that the Crown prosecutors are directly involved in all those cases, with better access to information. There will be more consistent application of the penalties, and in many cases the penalties that are provided for under the act will be more severe.

Some members also raised questions about the amount and the appropriateness of the penalties in the bill, that that could be stronger. I would advise the House that the extent and the amount of the penalties proposed were determined in discussions with Justice and Attorney General and a review of other domestic violence legislation right across the country. These measures will be amongst the strongest in the country, and they will send a clear message that a breach of protection order is a serious matter with significant consequences.

There were also some questions about enforcement interprovincially if an abused person were to leave Alberta and the resources for police. Protection orders are entered into the Canadian police information centre's computerized information system, and that does provide all Canadian law enforcement agencies with information on crimes and offenders. I've been advised that the government is working closely with police on how those changes would be implemented, and they also provided input on the penalties and offence provisions in the development phase.

Mr. Speaker, a few members had questions about the support being provided to address family violence. I've already addressed a number of those other issues and measures which are directed towards reducing family violence, including the emergency shelters that I mentioned. I just would like to point out that the funding for emergency shelters for women has increased by 73 per cent. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre had raised some concerns about that. It's raised by 73 per cent since 2004-05, from $15 million to more than $26 million a year right now. As I discussed during Committee of the Whole, there are other programs in the communities which are doing very good work: domestic violence courts and police teams, safe visitation sites, victims outreach projects, and the family violence info line, which I already mentioned.

That concludes my remarks, Mr. Speaker. Thank you to all the members who have indicated their support for the bill. I ask the Assembly to concur in passing this matter on third reading.

[Motion carried; Bill 2 read a third time]

Bill 3

Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to rise and move third reading of Bill 3, the Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Amendment Act, 2011.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar on the bill.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. This is a terrific bill, and I stand to support this bill. We certainly had an opportunity to speak to this at second reading. I'll just be quite brief, Mr. Speaker. The bill would alter the existing terminology in the Engineering, Geological and Geophysical Professions Act by using the umbrella term "geoscience," which is a commonly accepted term across Canada for various sciences of a geological nature.

Now, certainly, this bill is adding a lot to various statutes and is presented by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon. I understand you're losing Devon in the next election. I'm sad to hear that.

Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the hon. member's efforts. We talked about the importance of these professions, certainly in light of what's going on in Japan, for instance, whether it's the earthquake, the tsunami, or now the engineers who would be trying to control the heat in those reactors. These are very, very important professions. We have to ensure that they are respected and that those who enter the profession and who receive accreditation are protected and that the disciplines that they practise in are protected.

I have to point out that regardless of where you are in the world, there has to be a set of standards, particularly for individuals practising that profession. I'm suspicious of the enforcement of a lot of those standards, hon. member. We have a tendency to shift a lot of engineering work offshore. There are blueprints that are transferred electronically from one jurisdiction to the next and are worked on by qualified engineers, supposedly.

With this legislation I would just, in conclusion, be reminding people in this Assembly that we have to make sure that when we ship this stuff around – and by stuff I mean complete engineering packages – that those that then work on them in a foreign jurisdiction have the same qualifications as the individuals who would practise the engineering professions in this province so that we can ensure that we're just not undermining their professions.

Certainly, the individuals here are well qualified, the training programs at our universities are exceptional, and there is no reason in the world why we should not make a commitment here to enforce those standards.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak on the bill? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

4:10

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I appreciated very much the comments from the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. They raise for me just a question I'd like to put to the Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon, who's bringing the bill forward, whether he can address it now or in his closing remarks or not. In third reading we talk about the impact of the bill. As we change the terminology around our engineering professions and geology and geophysics professions to geoscience, it does raise the question: what's happening in other jurisdictions?

Here in Alberta we train geologists and geophysicists who go from here to other parts of the world, and we train people who come from other parts of the world to here. If somebody is designated as a geoscientist in Alberta in the future, what, if any, effect does that have if they then proceed to work in Texas or Africa or the Middle East or wherever? Is there any kind of interjurisdictional and international recognition of the term "geoscientist." There may well be, and I suppose I should perhaps know that myself, but I can see that it could cause some confusion.

We know from other professions – physicians, teachers, or others – that if they're coming here from other countries, it can get pretty complicated figuring out if a physician is a physician is a physician, depending on where they're from. I'm just wondering if the term "geoscientist" is gaining global recognition. Are we the first to incorporate that or one of the first? Does anybody anticipate any confusion as this global community of experts moves around from one province to another, one country to another?

Aside from that, Mr. Speaker, I have said earlier all I have to say on this bill, and I think we should move on. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Mr. Allred: Mr. Speaker, if I could just make a comment, and I made it in my remarks in second reading. With regard to the term "geoscientist" my understanding is that the term in all other provinces of Canada is "geoscientist." I don't know about the rest of the globe, but certainly a lot of Canadian petroleum engineers, geologists, and geophysicists, now geoscientists, do an awful lot of work in the Middle East. There are an awful lot of our personnel there, as has been obvious in the latest strife in Libya, where we have quite a number of Canadian trained people in that field. That's also similar in Saudi Arabia and other countries. That's some clarification.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak on the bill now?

Seeing none, on the bill, the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Yes. Just one other comment. I should have stood up when the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar had some concerns with a lot of the work being done offshore. He's certainly correct. There's a lot of the work that is done offshore, but the purpose of professional legislation is that there is a person that must be registered with the Alberta association that takes ultimate responsibility for the work even if some of the work might be done offshore. There is always someone that is registered with the provincial association that takes responsibility for that work. I think that's really the guarantee.

I'd just make another comment. Our professional legislation in Canada is quite unique compared to professional legislation in any other country. We have totally self-regulating professions, and they are involved in the entire process, from the initial registration of the member through to maintaining competency and discipline if necessary. That's not a system that is common in most other countries. I think that if you can reflect on the number of concerns that are expressed with engineers, they're very, very low in Alberta and Canada, and I think that's a tribute to the system that we have in this province and this country.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) anyone?

Seeing none, any other member wishing to speak on the bill?

Seeing none, I'll now call on the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon to close debate.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very pleased to close debate on Bill 3. I would just offer a brief comment to the Member for Edmonton-Riverview that comments made by the Member for St. Albert were the exact comments that I would make, that these changes are consistent right across Canada.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 3 read a third time]

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 4 Securities Amendment Act, 2011

[Debate adjourned March 16: Mr. Anderson speaking]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere to continue the debate.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you. How much time do I have? Do you know, Mr. Speaker?

The Deputy Speaker: You have 12 minutes.

Mr. Anderson: Twelve minutes? Okay. I just want to rise and again express support – I forget where I left off last time – for Bill 4, the Securities Amendment Act, 2011. The reason the Wildrose supports this is because it seeks to improve the passport system, which we think and we believe is a good system. It's a system that has worked very well for our securities regulation. It's been great to have the ability to have a flexible provincial security regulator, that is flexible to our local needs and local economy, specifically trying to raise capital for energy investment, which is a big one. We think that it's very important that we maintain control over that jurisdiction.

I would say, too, as other members have said, that securities regulation, obviously, has always been a provincial jurisdiction. What I'm worried about is that once the federal government inserts itself into an area of provincial jurisdiction, as it often does, it's very difficult to get them out of it. So what is right now a provincial jurisdiction all of a sudden could quickly become a shared jurisdiction. Even though the constitution doesn't say that, that's essentially what might happen.

Again, we've seen this in health care. We've seen this in education. We've seen this a lot in agriculture. We've seen it in a lot of different areas where the federal government feels that they need to come in and, certainly, assist certain areas that are clearly provincial matters instead of what they should be doing, which is transferring tax points to the provinces from the federal government so that they can better raise money for education and health care and all these different things and not have another level of national bureaucracy, even farther removed from the people, to affect issues such as health care, education, the environment, and so forth. There are a lot of them.

We completely support any move by this government to encourage and promote and strengthen the current passport system and to maintain exclusive jurisdiction over securities regulation. There are many reasons for that, and I hope that people understand why it is so important to maintain this jurisdiction. One of the big reasons is that, you know, once you give up something – say we did have a national securities regulator; it probably would be based out of, most likely, Toronto. There might be suboffices across the country, but I would assume that the heart of it would be on Bay Street. Once you cede that territory, what would happen inevitably because of their larger population and larger market share and so forth that they would have in securities in the country is that they would start setting the rules, and we wouldn't have much of a say in it.

That could quickly evolve if you get somebody in there who doesn't understand the needs of the various regions and all of a sudden they decide that they're going to start throwing their weight around and making it more difficult to raise capital. Or perhaps they don't regulate it enough and just kind of get lazy and have an anything-goes attitude. It's hard as a province – although we're growing and although our importance is certainly improving in regard to our economy within Canada, we're still not by any stretch the big kids on the block yet. We're getting there, but we're still the fourth-largest province, and Quebec and Ontario and B.C. are bigger. So if they start throwing their weight around in a way that we don't agree with and in a way that we don't want to go along with, it's going to be very hard as part of a national securities regulator to have any real say, and that is not acceptable.

I talked previously about the system being more responsive to regional interests and flexible enough to accommodate the unique needs of our local markets. The good thing about the passport system, though, is that there are a lot of areas in securities regulation where all the provinces, certainly all the major provinces, agree completely on what and how something should be regulated. So we've come together and made this passport system, which provides a single point of access to markets across Canada through a harmonized regulation with the other provinces and their securities regulators.

We feel that this is great. We do not agree with the premise of the federal government – and we're glad to see this provincial government doesn't agree with the premise of the federal government – that a national securities regulator is needed to decrease the costs of raising capital, of doing public offerings and so forth. We don't feel that's the case at all. We feel that the passport system, obviously, can always continue to be improved and updated and more and more streamlined, but it has been very effective. I think, you know, that one of the big misnomers out there, that I heard the current federal Finance minister talk about, was how with the recession and the world economy and everything, the tumult that was going around, we need this new national securities regulator to make things better and to help make it easier and simpler to raise capital in the capital markets here in Canada.

Well, if you look at the meltdown that occurred with regard to the economy with these derivatives and such bogus paper assets that were out there, although Canada was definitely affected, it was affected less than most. We were able to frankly weather the recession better than any other G-8 country and, I would say, probably most industrialized nations if not all industrialized nations. You know, it's the old adage: don't fix what isn't broken. If it ain't broke, don't fix it. This is a classic example. Could it be improved? Could we improve our enforcement? Yeah. Could we improve our policing with regard to fraud and so forth? Yeah, absolutely, we could. But that doesn't mean you rip up the whole system and start from scratch with a huge national regulator down in Ottawa.

In the rankings we see that Canada's regulatory system is consistently ranked as one of the best systems in the world, meaning that the provinces have done their job well in the field of jurisdic tion. Some organizations, think tanks, and publications have ranked Canada very highly. These are very prestigious and well-respected organizations; for example, the OECD, the World Bank Group, Euromoney, and the Milken Institute. These are obviously very influential and well-respected economic organizations and think tanks, and they have clearly said that the way we do raise money in our securities regulation set-up that we have here in Canada is very effective, amongst the most effective in the world. We in the Wildrose concur. There's no reason to fix what's not broken.

You know, it's kind of like the royalty framework, hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, isn't it? If it ain't broke, don't fix it. This government did that and cratered the natural gas industry. It's never been the same since. But they have since backtracked to essentially where they were before. They still raised it a bit, but they came back a little bit, and sure enough the money is flowing back. Let's not do the same thing to our securities regulatory framework that this government did in cratering our natural gas producing industry.

I think, in conclusion, that Canada clearly fared better than most countries in the world during this last financial crisis. There was nothing in our securities regulatory framework that in any way harmed us or inhibited us from getting through this last recession. As we go forward, there are no substantive barriers to raising capital in our Canadian capital markets by leaving the current passport system in place. I hope that all members of this House, regardless of what party they belong to, the PCs or the NDP or the Wildrose or the Liberals or the Alberta Party – there's no reason why we should change what is not broken.

I hope that the current finance minister and President of the Treasury Board and the Premier and the new Premier, whoever that is in six months when we decide that we want to have a Premier again, you know, that it is not a lame duck – I hope that those individuals will continue to uphold our provincial jurisdiction on this issue and so forth.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comments or questions. The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore under Standing Order 29(2)(a).

Mr. Hinman: No. On the bill.

The Deputy Speaker: We have only one minute.

Mr. Hinman: Never enough time when it comes to talking about finances.

It's exciting to be able to talk on Bill 4. It's critical that we continue to protect our jurisdiction when it comes to securities. Bill 4, I feel, is taking a good step forward in protecting our Securities Act.

It's interesting, you know, that in a world of financial disasters right now – and you can look around; it's one country after another – and with the printing of money that's going on, I don't think there's ever been a more important time for us to have a provincial . . .

The Deputy Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt, hon. member, but pursuant to Standing Order 4(2) it's now 4:30 and the chair declares that the House stands adjourned until 1:30 p.m. next Monday.

[The Assembly adjourned at 4:30 p.m. to Monday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Monday, March 21, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. At the beginning of this week we ask for renewed strength in the awareness of our duty and privilege as members of the Legislature. We ask for the protection of this Assembly and also the province we are elected to serve.

I'm now going to invite Mr. Paul Lorieau to lead us in the singing of our national anthem, and I would invite all present to participate in the language of one's choice.

Hon. Members:

O Canada, our home and native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free!
From far and wide, O Canada,
We stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature 24 visitors from Mundare school. We have accompanying the students today teachers Mrs. Tanyss Rogers and Mrs. Bernice Komarnisky and parent helpers Mrs. Lisa Rozumniak and Mrs. Josephine Galandy. They are seated in the visitors' gallery. I would ask everyone to give them the traditional warm welcome of our Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to the members of the Assembly 30 grade 6 students from York academic elementary school. York academic is the northeast district site for the gifted and talented program. The challenge program provides a rich and challenging environment for the students throughout grades 1 to 6. The students are accompanied by their teacher, Ms Dora Strasdin, and parent helpers Brenda Berg, Mrs. Galina Brindza, and Mrs. Mary Palamaruk. They are seated behind me, and I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I've two introductions this afternoon. First, it's my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you a very special group of 26 students from Guthrie elementary school in Lancaster Park, which is at Edmonton Garrison and part of Sturgeon school division. These students are accompanied by their teachers, Colleen Tremblay and Becky Williams, and parents Rhonda Draeger and Mrs. Jackie Mewett. Of special note, all these children have parents serving in Canada's military, so we'd like them to take back our best wishes to their parents as well. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I'm also pleased to introduce to you and through you some elected officials and some important staff that we have with us from Smoky Lake county. I have the distinct pleasure of working with this group, and that has certainly been a privilege for the last three years. They're seated in the members' gallery. I'd ask them to rise one by one as I call their names: Reeve Dareld Cholak, Deputy Reeve Randy Orichowski, Councillor Ron Bobocel, Councillor Lori Danyluk, Councillor Rick Cherniwchan, CAO Cory Ollikka, Assistant CAO Lydia Cielin, and Public Works Foreman Doug Ponich. I'm really pleased that they're here today. They're here as part of AAMD and C meetings. I'd ask the Assembly to please give them the traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Justice and Attorney General.

Mr. Olson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour today to introduce to you Lilly Lewis, who celebrated 90 years as an Alberta citizen just recently. She has got members of her family here with her. She and her husband were veterans of World War II, served in the Canadian Forces. She also served a number of cabinet ministers here in this building. As a new minister I was thinking that maybe she could help me out, but she's enjoying her retirement, I think, and isn't available. After retiring she also did work in missions around the world. She's here today, as I mentioned, with her children, and they're in the members' gallery. If they could please rise and receive the welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner.

Mr. Jacobs: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly some of my friends and council members from the MD of Taber who are visiting us today and are here in Edmonton for the AAMD and C convention. I would like them to rise as I call their names: Reeve Brian Brewin, Deputy Reeve Ben Elfring, Councillor Don Johnson if here, Councillor Duff Dunsmore, Councillor Dwight Tolton, and their administrator, Derrick Krizsan. I thank them for coming and invite my colleagues to give them the warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce through you and to you Fatima Remtulla, a dear friend and a supporter who has been spending the day shadowing me and the rest of caucus. I'd like ask Fatima to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Legislature.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my honour to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly somebody very important to me through a very interesting and challenging time in my life. I'd like to ask my partner, Sharon MacLean, to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

Mr. McFarland: Mr. Speaker, although my colleague introduced all the fellows from the MD of Taber, he did miss one, and he's the newest one. I'd like the Assembly to recognize Bob Wallace from the Hays district, who is a newly elected MD of Taber councillor.

Ministerial Statements

International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, it's an honour to rise. March 21 is the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. This significant day is observed around the world to focus attention on the harmful effects of racism and the need to promote racial harmony. March 21 was declared in honour of those who lost their lives in the Sharpeville, South Africa, massacre, where during a peaceful protest 69 anti-apartheid protestors died and 180 were wounded.

Proclaiming the day in 1966, the United Nations General Assembly called on the international community to redouble its efforts to eliminate all forms of racial discrimination. Canada was one of the first countries to support the United Nations declaration.

Although the majority of Albertans believe their human rights are protected, racism and discrimination continue to exist in Alberta. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday I happened to be in downtown Calgary with some of my colleagues, and we were walking to an event. We noticed that there were police surrounding the area that we were walking through. There were riot police. There were sharpshooters. There were all kinds of people. It was a little disconcerting because we didn't know what was going on. Then it came to our attention it was a white supremacist march. We went into our function and came out, and we were told we might have to stay because these two groups, the people supporting our fight against racism versus the white supremacists, were going to meet and there could be a clash. I never really gave it much thought.

As I walked out of there with the Member for Calgary-Montrose and the Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs, we started talking about it. The Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs suggested how disgusting it was that in 2011 we still have to deal with that issue. I looked at the Member for Calgary-Montrose, and I said: I guess we're the ones they're poking their fingers at. It just brought back all these different memories. At that moment I wasn't an MLA. I wasn't a cabinet minister. I was just an individual. I went back to my car, and I thought about that. You know, it brings back all those memories of racism that you endure as a child, but I remembered one thing quickly, and that is that we live in Alberta, and it's 2011, and we have to snap out of that.

We have the Alberta Human Rights Commission, which offers education programs and resources to help Albertans resolve human rights complaints. Eighteen per cent of those complaints, Mr. Speaker, that go to the Human Rights Commission are based on discrimination for race, colour, or creed.

We also, though, are proud to say that there are 10 municipalities in Alberta that have joined the Coalition of Municipalities against Racism and Discrimination: Wood Buffalo, Calgary, Grande Prairie, Edmonton, Drayton Valley, which was brought forward by the current Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, Brooks, Lethbridge, St. Albert, Innisfail, and most recently the city of Wetaskiwin in September 2010. Each has made a commitment to follow key principles in order to combat racism and discrimination and help build welcoming and inclusive communities and workplaces.

Mr. Speaker, as hurtful as it was for me, it's no different for those victims of the Holocaust or their descendants or those of the Holodomor and their descendants. To think that people don't understand that what they say isn't only something that's offensive — those hurt people, and we in Alberta have to be vigilant to make sure that people in our communities feel welcome and safe and are able to raise their families in an environment like that.

Mr. Speaker, safe communities are strong communities, and strong communities are safe communities. Albertans expect us to bring that forward and continue in our fight to do that, and they deserve no less.

The Speaker: On behalf of the Official Opposition the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. People of good character have been advocating the virtues of mutual respect and tolerance just as long as racists have been spreading hatred. I believe the forces of tolerance and acceptance have made great progress, but racial discrimination continues. Many citizens of our First Nations people remain systematically marginalized, with higher rates of homelessness, poverty, and incarceration. Immigrants are often the targets of misdirected blame when unemployment rises. Cultural practices and religious beliefs are often misunderstood or misinterpreted. Some people are still upset about decisions that recognize the right of Sikhs to wear turbans while performing as RCMP officers and allowing girls to play sports while wearing a hijab.

I just spoke with Changing Together, my favourite organization helping immigrant women, and their executive director noted that immigrant women face special challenges and underemployment because their credentials aren't recognized here. There's no easy path to upgrading those credentials, with few courses to get these women up to speed and even fewer with any form of subsidy. This sort of discrimination may or may not be conscious or deliberate, but it does have a real impact on the ability of immigrant women to integrate as well as hampering their ability to participate fully in the life of the province.

This year's cuts to funding for English as a second language programs will increase the challenges for all immigrants, a short-sighted decision given education's power to discourage racial discrimination. Fortunately, there are teachers and educational opportunities everywhere.

Many years ago I attended an antiracism symposium, and one of the speakers gave me the best bit of advice that I've ever heard on how to fight racial discrimination on a daily basis. Her advice was this: simply look people in the eye, smile, and say hello. That simple act recognizes the inherent worth of any person you acknowledge, and we don't do it as often as we should or could.

Thank you very much, Mr. Minister, for your remarks. As the minister said, fighting racism is a year-round effort, and we all have a role to play.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. members, on an occasion such as this I know that additional members would want to participate. In order to do so, we need unanimous consent of the Assembly to proceed. I'll ask one question. Is anyone in the Assembly opposed to allowing additional members to participate? If so, please say no.

[Unanimous consent granted]

The Speaker: I'll recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, then the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, then the hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, and additional members should send me a note.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my honour to speak on behalf of the Wildrose caucus in support of International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination. I believe and I know that in the minds of our children racism does not exist. This is an important lesson that we can learn from our children. Through the eyes of a child the purest and kindest message for humanity is so evident for in the final analysis we have much in common with all creeds and races. We all breathe the same air, drink the same water, and we all inhabit this small planet together and cherish our children's future, a future that should be free from racial discrimination and abuses. As Martin Luther King said: judge me by the content of my character, not the colour of my skin.

Today in our global economy we have good reason to be hopeful of a better future as we turn to the rising generation. Our youth today are truly more global citizens. They are by far freer of the discrimination that we have witnessed in years gone by. Seeing a child in kindergarten playing with her fellow classmates free of any judgment or discrimination is the world we all seek for everyone.

I recently had the privilege and honour to speak with all grade 7 social studies classes at John Ware junior high school. In 1967 I listened to Lieutenant Governor Grant MacEwan talk about his book, John Ware's Cow Country, in my grandmother's house. John Ware became a childhood hero of mine. He inspired me to buy a bullwhip and practice for hours so I could handle this important cowboy tool as well as he did. He was a master with cattle, and I wanted to be just like John. It didn't matter to me the colour of his skin. It only mattered to me that he was a great man and had lived here in Alberta.

Alberta is today what it has always been, a land of opportunity where people of all races and creeds come to pursue a better life. While there are still unfortunate cases of racial discrimination in our province, never has civil society been so squarely intolerant of racism. I am confident that we will continue to be a beacon for the world when it comes to ending racial discrimination by the example we continue to set.

On Friday I had the privilege of attending the immigrants of distinction awards in Calgary, a great mosaic of Calgarians from around the world. I am hopeful that in the coming years virtually all the children in Alberta will be able to maintain their virtue as we have eliminated racism.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On this day as we renew our commitments to work to end racism, we are aware that this hateful perspective still has life in our province. Within the past few weeks people have been arrested in Edmonton, charged with racist attacks. We've seen a white power rally and the home invasion of a prominent antiracist spokesperson in Calgary.

The minister has noted that a significant percentage of the human rights complaints received last year by the Human Rights Commission related to such matters. The commission knows from its own polling that this is a larger issue than the numbers of actual complaints and that much of what is happening is in informal situations that do not lead to formal complaints but do add to the stress and fear for many people in our communities.

We are still a long way from abolishing racism. The adverse effect of systemic discrimination in particular requires effective strategies. We see the evidence in the overrepresentation of indigenous people in prisons and children in government care. We see it in overrepresentation of racialized populations in low-income groups. We move in the wrong direction when we cut support services for immigrants as we are doing in this budget.

One of the best tools for creating equality is education, but we need effective programs, not just superficial marketing gimmicks, and we need education in workplaces, not just classrooms.

This government must make legislative and administrative changes to eradicate racism and ensure human rights for all. We should not see the Human Rights Commission's authority decreased or limited, as has been advocated sometimes by some members of this House in the past. Instead, what we must do is work more closely with groups such as the Centre for Race and Culture, the John Humphrey centre for human rights, and the Sheldon Chumir Centre for Ethics in Leadership, all of which are doing exemplary work to eliminate racial discrimination in our province.

Finally, as members of this House we need to renew our commitment to work against racism, both overt and systemic. Until we recognize and combat both types of racism, we will eliminate neither.

Thank you.

1:50

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today is a significant day as we rise in this House to commemorate the police brutality experienced by peaceful antiapartheid demonstrators in Sharpeville, South Africa, 51 years ago. It is imperative to remember not only this event but the Holocaust, the Holodomor, and so many other stains upon our shared humanity because public displays of racism and racial discrimination still occur in our province. Just this weekend a white supremacy demonstration took place in Calgary. Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, the group was outnumbered at least 10 to 1 by antiracism demonstrators, Albertans standing in solidarity to say: this is not what we are about.

However, Mr. Speaker, let me repeat some of the minister's own words. "The strength of our province lies in the diversity of its people." While ours is a much more diverse population today than it was 25 years ago when I arrived here, it is a strength that still too often is underrecognized, sometimes ignored altogether.

Too many of our visible minority immigrants are lagging behind native-born Canadians in terms of access to opportunity. Sure, language is a barrier for many, but it is a barrier that we don't do nearly enough to remove, and it's not the only one. Professionals arriving from other countries, fully trained in their respective fields, are still facing barriers to practising in their chosen fields here in Alberta. Further, there is research that indicates that the children of immigrants do not have the same opportunities as children of native-born Albertans, and Alberta's First Nations continue to suffer from institutional racist barriers which impede their hope for future success.

Mr. Speaker, we are all Albertans, some of us by the accident of birth, some of us by deliberate choice. A lost opportunity for one is a lost opportunity for us all.

Thank you.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: Before we begin the Oral Question Period, I'd just like to congratulate and thank all members for the wonderful decorum experienced in this Assembly on Thursday last. Along with that congratulations, of course, comes a hope on my part as well that needs no further declaration.

First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. From 1999 to 2008 Capital health authority was headed by a leadership team that included Sheila Weatherill, CEO; Neil Wilkinson, chairman; and Noela Inions, legal counsel. This was a period when many physicians and others felt intimidated and signed nondisclosure agreements. Today these three people are, respectively, a board member of AHS, the provincial Ethics Commissioner, and the AHS ethics and compliance officer. To the Premier: how is the culture in the health care system now different from the culture then, given that the same people who led it then maintain leadership positions now?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta Health Services Board is the board responsible for delivery of health services across the province. They have negotiated with government a five-year funding agreement. They've anticipated, of course, increases in population and demand for increased services. That is the first agreement of its kind that has been entered into in this country of Canada and shows that they have the best interests of Albertans in their mind.

Dr. Swann: Well, nice dodge, Mr. Premier.

Given the United Nurses of Alberta stated that the Alberta Health Services ethics and compliance officer dismissed their complaint in 2009 without interviewing complainants in one specific case, what confidence can Alberta Health Services employees have that their concerns are taken seriously? The same people are still calling the shots.

Mr. Stelmach: Not true. But for anyone that comes forward that wants to bring to the Health Quality Council any issues, personal experiences, the terms of reference that were issued last week by the Health Quality Council are very broad. They're very robust. And as we heard over the weekend, Dr. John Cowell will listen to anyone that comes forward to present evidence to the council.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Health Quality Council of Alberta review may take nine months to complete, and this Premier promised the same review by letter during the 2008 election, will the Premier just admit he's trying to sweep all this under the rug?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I believe Dr. John Cowell said that they were looking at an interim report in about three months, one at about the six-month interval, and then the final report within nine months. I think that speaks to trying to anticipate how many people will come forward. There are a lot of, I'm sure, files to look at. If a lot of people come forward, it will take more time, and if fewer people come forward, they may be able to deliver their report, but at least he said six months leading up to nine months.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is said that once is a chance, two a coincidence, and a third time is a pattern. Well, just hours before the McNamee allegations surfaced, the Premier reversed course to support a Health Quality Council review. Then last Thursday, as opposition parties continued our call for a public inquiry, the Health Quality Council conveniently released its terms of reference that include an expanded mandate to investigate doctors advocating for patient safety. The coincidences keep piling up. Was the Premier or anyone in his office personally aware that the McNamee lawsuit would be released by the media before a decision was made to call the Health Quality Council review?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again the opinion of the hon. member is wrong. I always said that the door will be open in terms of having an authority listen to any of the issues that may come forward, whether it be from doctors or other health care providers, and we followed up on that. I was very clear in the opinion that I expressed two weeks ago.

Dr. Swann: Well, did the Premier or the minister of health or their offices have any dialogue with or provide direction to the Health Quality Council of Alberta regarding expanding their terms of reference to include, quote, physician advocacy in patient safety ahead of the Health Quality Council releasing its terms of reference?

Mr. Stelmach: Not from me.

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, not from me either.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, my final question. Did the Premier or his office have any dialogue with the Alberta Medical Association following the Alberta Medical Association distributing a letter to its members supporting the call for a public inquiry but before the AMA softened its position later that day?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, this is a very broad question because the issue here is that the government of Alberta, through our negotiator, was involved in long and protracted negotiations with the Alberta Medical Association. As a result of those discussions and negotiations we do have an agreement in principle that will take probably till the end of June to ratify. As I acknowledged last week in my statements, the Alberta Medical Association has shown great leadership. It is a contract that's looking at zero, zero, plus COLA in the third year. That's pretty hard negotiation . . .

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Patient Advocacy by Physicians

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government's "that was then; this is now" approach, dismissing the culture of intimidation that exists, is insulting to health professionals and to Albertans. While this Premier and minister continue to say that there isn't a culture of fear and intimidation in the health care system, respected health professionals like Drs. McNamee, Maybaum, Parks, Nunes, and Houston say otherwise. This weekend the Calgary Herald lent its voice to the chorus calling for a public inquiry. To the Premier: when Dr. Maybaum says that, I quote, colleagues are all fearful, and this problem is real, and anyone that suggests it isn't is completely out of touch with health care workers . . .

Mr. Stelmach: Well, one thing that this paper he refers to did not mention is that in the letter to the doctors it said: this is not a matter of forcing you to be quiet, but it is a matter of teamwork and leadership. Funny how they always miss out that part of the letter.

Dr. Swann: And funny, Mr. Speaker, how he never answers the question.

Was Dr. Maybaum lying when he said that there was a culture of fear and intimidation among many professionals, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, he's asking me to give an opinion. The doctor is free to appear before the Health Quality Council and deliver the evidence that he may have in his presence. That's why the hearing is there.

Dr. Swann: Why does the Premier continue to ignore the growing chorus of respected voices calling for an independent public inquiry into the health care crisis? Will you finally do the right thing and call a public inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we've done the right thing, and that is asked the Health Quality Council to review the matter. They have drafted their own terms of reference, which are very robust. They're very rigorous. Anybody, according to Dr. Cowell, can bring forward any evidence that they so wish.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Premier continues to claim that the review undertaken by the Health Quality Council into, among other things, the ability of doctors to advocate for their patients is free from government intimidation, is entirely independent, and is at arm's length from the government. My questions are to the Premier. Who funds the Alberta Health Quality Council?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Alberta taxpayer.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Premier, it's Alberta Health Services that funds it. Mr. Premier, are you honestly saying that having the Health Quality Council investigate Alberta Health Services is truly an independent, arm's-length review when the council is entirely funded by the very people they are being asked to investigate? How can you say that, Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the last time I looked at our budget, Alberta Health Services – all physicians, all doctors, anybody working in public health care – is supported by the provincial taxpayer. Also, all people working in Justice, all judges, are all paid for by the Alberta taxpayer.

Mrs. Forsyth: Mr. Premier, taxpayers want to know the answers. Given that section 16(1) of the Health Quality Council regulation states, "The Council is accountable to the Minister for the manner in which it . . . exercises its powers," how can you, Mr. Premier, look into the faces of Albertans and tell them that the review is independent when the council reports directly to the very minister that it may be investigating?

Mr. Stelmach: One thing that they fail to mention: in the public inquiry it'll be the minister that would be drafting the terms of reference. You know, it's always those little bits of information that don't come forward in this Assembly.

I have great confidence in the Health Quality Council to do a thorough review. They wrote the terms of reference – they're very rigorous; they're very robust – and I'm looking forward to the interim report.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, the Premier continues to contend that the Health Quality Council review is going to be a sufficient inquiry into the allegations of doctor intimidation that we've seen with growing force around the province. My question is to the Premier. If, in fact, there is someone who has in their possession information that could verify a statement made by one of the people who might be interviewed by the Health Quality Council and they refuse to come forward, how will the Health Quality Council be able to compel testimony from an individual who is refusing to co-operate?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that's the issue here, that if somebody is so compelled, and especially all these doctors that have been named in this Assembly, that if they have all the evidence that they talked about, you would think they would be the first in line to sit before the Health Quality Council in strict confidence and deliver the evidence. If there is evidence of any criminal malfeasance, they should have been at the police months ago.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, if one doctor alleges that he or she was intimidated by an official, say, of Capital region health and they deny it and there's another individual that could corroborate the story, how are you going to make that person come forward so that you'd actually get to the bottom of conflicting stories, which often emerge in situations like this? How will you find the truth by what you're doing?

The Speaker: Hon. minister, if this has to do with government policy, proceed.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think it's pretty clear that the Health Quality Council has set its own terms of reference independently. They have presumably looked into whom they want to sit on that health advisory panel independent of government. They will be probably choosing the people that they want to not only advise but also to conduct the review independently, and I think that process is something that this member himself supported as early as two weeks ago. [interjections]

Speaker's Ruling
Decorum

The Speaker: Okay. Okay. Settle down. Calgary-Fish Creek, you're out of order. You're misbehaving. It may be the feng shui of some of your colleagues that's coming onto you, but you can do better, as can they.

Now, hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood, you have your third question, please.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that nothing that's been said here in answer to the questions today would indicate that the Health Quality Council is going to be able to get to the bottom of conflicting stories or compel anyone to testify in order to clear up these matters, how can the minister and how can the Premier continue to maintain that the Health Quality Council has a ghost of a chance of actually finding out what happened?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, they have an excellent chance of getting to the bottom of some of these unsubstantiated allegations and perhaps even some of those issues that others have mentioned where certain doctors have come forward. The fact is that in their own news release they said that this is unprecedented, for them as a council to be able to set their own particular terms of reference. That is very, very independent of the other process that he's alluding to.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview will take the sixth question today.

Congenital Syphilis Outbreak

Dr. Taft: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. Intimidation of the health professions can have deadly consequences. People die when good decisions are stifled. Dr. Stan Houston, an expert on infectious diseases, was stifled by this government when he spoke for better care during a syphilis crisis that led to several babies dying. To the minister of health. Alberta's fight against syphilis lost ground when Alberta Health did not renew the contracts of four public health doctors, who were then required to sign nondisclosure agreements. Why did this government muzzle those important voices?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the important voice right now is this Assembly, and this Assembly, I hope, will support our budget because in that budget you will see that there is a specific strategy aimed at blood-borne pathogens. That includes STIs, sexually transmitted infections. There's going to be a very, very robust plan that will address syphilis, and it requires the awareness campaign in doctors' offices, in some of the hotels, pubs, bars, and other locations. I certainly hope this member asking the question will support it.

Dr. Taft: That was offensive. That was offensive to the babies who have died and the families who have watched them die.

Given that day-to-day issues on treating and preventing syphilis such as how to treat a pregnant woman with syphilis were not being properly addressed because the government, this government, stifled its own experts, will the minister admit that the culture of fear and intimidation this government has imposed on health professionals cost human health and even human lives?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if that was the case or not. If it was, I sincerely hope it wasn't, but I can't correct the past. All I can tell you is what I'm doing to influence the future, and the future is a very aggressive plan to combat syphilis in this province. We have a syphilis problem. We're aware of that, and we're doing something about it.

Dr. Taft: Well, this minister is boasting about what they're going to do about the syphilis outbreak, so will he tomorrow table in this Assembly Alberta Health's plan, a so-called robust plan, for addressing the syphilis outbreak? The outbreak is unprecedented on this continent.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm surprised that he didn't read the five-year health action plan, where on page 27 section 4.18, section 4.19, and section 4.20 talk about our exact strategy, which he's asking about. Perhaps he would like to visit that. We are serious about this problem. I'm thankful that he's raised it. I don't like the tone in which he's raised it; nonetheless, he should know that it is moving forward.

The Speaker: We have a point of order arising out of that.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Water Management

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government creates panel after panel to improve water management and conservation and then ignores recommendation after recommendation. The Water Council's recommendations, the wetlands policy, and the South Saskatchewan regional plan are all stalled. Even members of the Alberta Water Council say that this government is failing to implement water for life and their recommendations. Fresh water is our most valuable resource. To the Minister of Environment: given all of this, who is the minister listening to?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, we listen to all stakeholders in a number of different areas. On these particular policies all of the policies that this member has referred to are at various stages in our internal approval process. That's prudent. That's the appropriate way for us to deal with it. As I've said many times before in this House, they will be moving forward into the public domain at the appropriate time.

2:10

Ms Blakeman: Well, that's why there needs to be more transparency, because these internal processes . . .

The Speaker: Is that a preamble, hon. member?

Ms Blakeman: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. Certainly not, since you gave us instructions not to do that.

Why has this minister hedged and reneged on a permanent no-net-loss wetlands policy when wetlands are a significant aspect of greenhouse gas reduction?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the member is wrong. We have a wetlands policy that is in place in this province, and it applies only to the white zone. It only applies to private land. We've been working very diligently to be able to expand that policy so that it will include Crown land as well. For this member to suggest that that policy is in place is incorrect. We are in the process of developing that policy. The member is referring to . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Once again to the same minister: why would the minister even consider allowing a system that gives water to the highest bidder rather than distribution based on need, on who's rich, not on who's thirsty? Times have changed; so must the system.

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, apparently we've now left wetlands, and we're into something else entirely again. The fact of the matter is that we have had a policy in place for some time, since the introduction of the Water Act, that allows for water licences to transfer from one holder to another. It's the only way, frankly, that we're going to be able to have development, to incent conservation, and to allow for more water users to use the same amount of water that's available.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Hunt Farms for Cervids

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the weekend in Whitecourt-St. Anne I met with many residents that were concerned about the possibility that hunt farms for domestic cervids are going to be allowed in Alberta. My question is to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development. Is there a government plan or something within your ministry that's giving my constituents this idea?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Absolutely not. In 2002 a cross-ministry initiative that went out for direct input from the public and also from stakeholders in different areas looked at this, and the decision was made at that time that this government would not allow cervids, deer and elk, to be hunted on farms.

Mr. VanderBurg: Again to the same minister. At the same meeting some concerns were also raised about the health of farmed cervids. Can the minister tell us what steps are being taken to ensure that farmed cervids are healthy and will be?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2002 the decision was made that there wouldn't be hunt farms for cervids, and of course that remains today and is our position forward.

With respect to the health from 2003 right up to today these animals have been tested, 3,000 to 5,000 a year. They are completely disease free, and we stay right on top of it.

Mr. VanderBurg: My last question to the same minister: again, are you saying that there are no plans, nothing in your ministry plan, for hunt farms for cervids?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hayden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's what I'm saying. There will absolutely not be hunt farms for cervids. Period.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Integration Services for Immigrants

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Today marks the International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, but in Alberta we seem to be sending mixed messages. Last Friday evening in Calgary we honoured strength in diversity at the immigrants of distinction awards while on Saturday a small but vocal group of people celebrating racism again marched through our streets. To the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit: other than slogans and special festival days what is your ministry doing throughout the year to promote and preserve and protect Alberta's diverse cultural heritage?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, we do a multitude of things. As we debated the human rights bill here a couple of years ago, I said that we needed to have administrative changes so that we can improve the efficiency and equity of the Human Rights Commission. What we did was we brought a federal judge to oversee the commission, and we were able to through a national search attract a director of national significance in Philippe Rabot. What we've done is we've separated the commission from the department physically. We've added new resources to both the director and the chief commissioner. In addition to that, we have provided . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. To the Minister of Education: given that immigrant students represent the highest statistical dropouts or failures to achieve high school in three years, followed closely by First Nations individuals, what is the minister's rationale for undermining language acquisition skills through further cuts to ESL second-language support programs?

Mr. Hancock: Well, first of all, Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the hon. member means by "further cuts." I'm not aware of any earlier cuts.

What has been proposed in this year's budget – and we'll have opportunity to discuss that during estimates – is that the enhanced ESL grant will be eliminated. Members should be aware that there is an ESL grant of about $1,155 per student for language education. The enhanced grant was put in place a few years ago in order to assist school boards to prepare and improve their techniques for teaching English as a second language to immigrant students to . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member now, please.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. This next question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Mr. Minister, given that many in your government caucus have personally experienced the challenges faced by new immigrants, especially around functional English language literacy, can you justify your ministry's cuts to English as a second language training programs?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, there's a topic I can speak to with a reasonable amount of expertise, having arrived in this country not speaking one word of English. I have to tell you that not only my personal but this government's commitment is not only to provide integration services to our immigrants but to actually attract immigrants that will be stimulating our economy for many years to come. However, that member would be interested to find out that immigrants learn in many different ways, and we're exploring ways that are actually very accessible to our immigrants.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Mine Financial Security Program

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government just announced a number of initiatives it is working on to ensure the progressive reclamation of disturbed lands, including the restructuring of Alberta's mine financial security program. My questions are all to the Minister of Environment. While this program collects significantly more financial security in the long term, aren't you putting Albertans at risk by collecting less security over the short term?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I must make it abundantly clear: absolutely not. Albertans will not be required to pay for cleanup. What the new program recognizes is the value of the resource as an asset. The program is designed to ensure that at no time during the process should that asset-to-liability ratio go below 3 to 1, or with 15 years left in the mine, then we begin to ramp up and collect full value for . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. With some critics claiming that even with the changes you've made, there still won't be enough security in the long run, how are reclamation costs determined to ensure that appropriate securities are taken care of?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, some of the criticism that we've heard is making an assumption that no reclamation takes place during the life of the mine, and as anyone that has been involved in mining knows, that's simply not the case. The other point that I think needs to be made is that the cost of security will be dependent upon the actual circumstances in the mine. The cost of reclamation from one mine to another can be significantly different depending upon the nature of the operation. So it's hard to make a gross assumption about costs in the early stages.

Mrs. Leskiw: To the same minister: given that only a small parcel of land in the oil sands region has received a reclamation certificate, is the industry not reclaiming the lands it should?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the answer is that there is a tremendous amount of work that's currently under way on the reclamation side. The fact, however, is that reclamation certificates come at the end of the process, not at the beginning of the process. We feel that it's important that we introduce an opportunity for the public to have more information than that. We will be introducing this summer a web-based map that will allow people to have direct access, see for themselves what reclamation . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Education Funding

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, this government's recent Education budget reads something like an insurance policy. What the large print giveth, the small print taketh away. At first blush what looks to be a slight increase to the Education budget is just smoke and mirrors. The real picture is significant cuts to grants provided to school boards, that will end up affecting children's future. To the Minister of Education: the minister of health likes to talk about how great this government is for providing long-term sustainable funding, so why does this government not do the same for education?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, a number of things in that preamble would be incorrect. First of all, a 4.7 per cent increase to the Education budget is not unsubstantial, and it's not a cut.

This is not going to be an easy budget for education. I've maintained that from day one. It's very difficult. There are programs such as the AISI project that are very important to education going forward that we're working very hard to make sure get maintained, but we are living in a difficult fiscal time, and we do need to be part of that process and that strategy.

Mr. Hehr: Given that the Calgary board of education, after adding up all these cuts, is facing a $61.7 million shortfall, teachers will have to be let go, which will no doubt lead to children facing larger class sizes. Accordingly, does the minister admit that this will be the result of these cutbacks?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, there are not cutbacks. In fact, there's a 4.7 per cent increase. However, we have had to eliminate some grants because the increase in the budget was short of what was needed to maintain all of the things that we're doing now. We did have to eliminate some grants that we looked at and said: these grants have either fulfilled their intention or are no longer relevant. Yes, it's going to be difficult for school boards, and it may well result in school boards doing some things differently and perhaps even fewer teachers.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Hehr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a fairly simple question. Given that in 2002 this government accepted the Learning Commission's recommendations on class sizes and this government appears now to be moving backwards on this, not forward, has the ministry simply given up on lowering class sizes in Alberta?

Mr. Hancock: What the ministry has done, Mr. Speaker, is recognized that in times when there is fiscal restraint and fiscal concern, we need to focus the resources in the areas where they make the most difference. So we've focused the class size resources on K to 3, where the evidence does show that it could make a difference in students' learning, and in high school classes, where small class sizes are important for safety reasons. We've focused there. We still have the expectation that school boards will meet the class size guidelines in the other areas, but we've focused our resources in the places where the data show it makes a difference.

The Speaker: So that no member of the Assembly misses it, in the afternoon of April 19 the estimates for the Department of Education will be dealt with in the Assembly.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays, followed by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Funding for Nonprofit Organizations

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The community facility enhancement program and the community initiatives program continue to provide much-needed funding for many nonprofit and voluntary agencies. This past weekend the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit was in Calgary, where he made announcements totalling $2.1 million in funding to four nonprofits in that city. My questions are all for the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. Given the number of applications for funding from across the province how does the minister justify such a large amount of funding provided to four projects in a single municipality in a single year?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, the four agencies or organizations in question all deal with the vulnerable, and we wanted to encourage and reward collaboration. The Calgary Urban Project Society deals with the homeless. The Calgary Immigrant Educational Society: that was for a new building so that they can expand their ESL and computer training programs. The Cerebral Palsy Association in Alberta: that was to pay off part of their debt so that they could offer more services in their collaborative efforts. The Community Kitchen Program was a project of 22 different organizations.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, given the number of nonprofit and voluntary agencies vying for limited grants, many of them so that they can provide services to some of Alberta's most vulnerable citizens, can the minister provide some rationale for giving $75,000 to the Airdrie Regional Air Show?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Blackett: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The Airdrie air show was very successful in 2009. I was approached by Mayor Peter Brown, who said it was very important to the community. At that event we had 40 representatives of sponsors, the volunteers, the board of directors, and other members at large. It's one that provides economic and tourism benefits to the area and is supported by the whole community.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With these government funding programs highly oversubscribed, what is the minister doing to encourage greater private-sector support of community-based nonprofit and volunteer organizations?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, we join with the different umbrella organizations around the province. We've been working through our dialogue sessions to establish a way to communicate the benefits of the not-for-profit community, the 22,000 that do such great work and are the underpinnings of our social safety net, and we are now actively engaged with representatives from the different business communities around the province in seeing how we can collaboratively work together to provide better services.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, as reported in the Calgary Herald on Friday, quote, there are people high up in the government who want your head on a platter, unquote. That was the alleged threat by senior health officials in Calgary to Dr. Lloyd Maybaum, president of the Calgary physicians association. There is also a letter threatening the job of Dr. Maybaum for speaking out after the delay of a treatment centre for mentally ill children. To the health minister: do you know who the people are or were high up in government who, allegedly, wanted Dr. Maybaum's head on a platter?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm so glad the member said "allegedly" because I don't know if that was the case.

What I do know is that the issue that gave rise to this particular doctor writing was mental health capacity in Calgary. It's true that initially there were plans for the south Calgary health campus to build a self-standing pavilion for mental health; unfortunately, that wasn't able to be done. But what is being done is that 33 additional beds are being provided there. Thirteen of them are brand new additional capacity, and that should help.

Mr. Anderson: I didn't think he would know, Mr. Speaker, so two questions. First, do you feel it is important for Albertans to know which person high up in the government made and directed these threats? If so, does the Health Quality Council have the power to subpoena those identified by Dr. Maybaum to find the answers? Or are you counting on the goodwill of those who said these things to just kind of come forward and admit to these threats on their own?

The Speaker: That's three questions in one.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the Health Quality Council, in setting its own independent terms of reference, added a section called patient advocacy, and that is an open invitation for anyone to come forward, even those issues that go back many, many years, which, I suspect, is where this one comes from. I would welcome those people to come forward to the Health Quality Council, where these issues can be aired and addressed.

Mr. Anderson: I'm sure he'll welcome them, Mr. Speaker, but he can't compel them. That's the point. Given that this minister knows full well that only a public judicial inquiry has the power to subpoena witnesses and compel evidence, will he now call a full, judicially empowered public inquiry, that can use its subpoena powers in order to verify these threats, identify those involved if they occurred, and restore confidence to the public that their health care system isn't being run by a gang of goons and bullies?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I don't know why this member is going against his own leader, who on March 11 said words to this effect: I do believe that the work of the Health Quality Council should proceed. That's what we're championing, that that work should proceed. They will invite whomever they wish. They will appoint whomever they wish to do the inviting, and I'll bet they get a very high turnout of participants.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Grande Prairie-Wapiti.

Residential Building Code

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week the Minister of Municipal Affairs suggested that the municipality of Wood Buffalo was responsible for responding to the Penhorwood condo issue. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: instead of putting all the blame for the situation on the municipality, will the minister admit that his own failure to introduce corrective legislation in a timely manner was a contributing factor?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the issues in Fort McMurray are centred on the approval process and the quality of work there. We're certainly not aware of any issues regarding the content of the building code, but if it shows in the future that the building codes are somewhat at fault, then we would review that as part of our ongoing reviews of building codes. If there is a need to change the building codes, then we're prepared to look at that.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think we have been doing the reviews for too long.

If the minister could speak to the condo residents, who got just 15 minutes to collect their belongings, would he still hold the same rosy view of Alberta construction standards that he has been putting out in this Assembly?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we will continue and we are continuing to take steps to improve residential construction. We are working on a very solid long-term approach that includes things like enforcement and education, some consumer protection and recourse to deal with concerns about buildings.

Mr. Kang: To the minister again. Since the minister keeps dodging questions about assisting Albertans affected by shoddy construction practices, will he at least acknowledge that the Safety Codes Act gives him broad powers to act in these cases and that he could do something now if he wanted to?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, you know, just as an example, we're leading the country and we have led the country in making building code changes. One particular example: we led the country in terms of the high-intensity residential fires. We tend to be ahead when it comes to that.

When it comes to municipal inspections, you know, there certainly is a need to look at that aspect. Municipalities are responsible and mandated to do the inspections because they've got better reach and they can do more inspections if required.

Career and Employment Services for Youth

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, the Youth Connections program was cancelled for the province. Since then many people, organizations, and private-sector representatives have asked about what will happen when the program ends in the Grande Prairie region at the end of June 2011. My questions are to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. What arrangements are being made to ensure that the 8,000-plus youth per year who are currently being served in the local Youth Connections office will continue receiving comparable services?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. These young people will continue to receive comparable services. This ministry has 59 offices scattered throughout this entire province. We will be providing them with comparable services except that instead of out of stand-alone Youth Connections offices or locations for Youth Connections, we will be doing this out of our offices.

Also, Mr. Speaker, our young people now acquire a lot of information via social media and webcasts and podcasts, and we will be reaching out to them that way as well.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Drysdale: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. Questions have been asked by members of the Grande Prairie region about the timing of the cancellation of the Youth Connections program. Were local Youth Connections offices consulted as to the depth and breadth of services they provided and as to best practices when working with this client group?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the timing is not coincidental. This government has made a commitment to have its operating budget balanced, which means that many ministries had to take somewhat of a haircut.

The fact is that the unemployment rate is dropping. Alberta is in second place. Even though young individuals still experience higher than average unemployment rates, job opportunities are becoming more available. We will continue serving them and matching them with employers through our existing offices throughout the province.

Mr. Drysdale: Mr. Speaker, given the limited capacity of the remaining services available to youth in the region, is there a potential to look at other career and employment options for youth, especially those identified as youth at risk as they might pertain to the Grande Prairie region?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, we routinely review our programs, and we see what is the best way in which to deliver a program not only to a young person but to any Albertan. If we identify groups of young people that are not reaching out to our regular 59 offices or if we find that they require a different, a more innovative way of receiving services, we definitely will be open to it. At the end of the day our federal funding has diminished, our provincial funding has been curtailed, and this is the result.

Bonuses for AIMCo Employees

Mr. MacDonald: By law the minister of finance is responsible for the Crown corporation AIMCo. The 2010 AIMCo annual report disclosed in a rather convoluted way that bonuses of $14.3 million were granted for the 2009 calendar year. My first question to the minister of finance: why is underperformance rewarded at AIMCo with multimillion-dollar bonuses totalling over $14 million?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, underperformance is not rewarded. As a matter of fact, AIMCo is working very, very well on behalf of the people of Alberta. If the hon. member wanted to check comparable bonus structures anywhere else in the investment climate in the world, he would find that the management of AIMCo are being very prudent with the amounts of and the requirements for the bonuses that are paid to their employees.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that target bonuses at AIMCo are being paid for value-added of less than one-quarter of 1 per cent, why are bonus targets set so low? They can't fail.

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, look at what they accomplished at the end of the year. Look at what they've put in the back. They're performing now at about a 7 and a half per cent rate. Leo de Bever has done a lot of good work attracting very talented people who want to come and live in Alberta, bring their expertise. He's paying them well below the scale of Toronto or the New York markets, and they're performing very well in a very modest fee structure.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: why are there no stakeholder representatives from the pension plans or from your own government now on the AIMCo Board of Directors?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, we work for these pension funds. They present to AIMCo what they want to accomplish with their funds. They may identify investments that are off base for them – they may be ethical investments or green investments – and then AIMCo goes to work to get the very best return for these pension funds. The board is staffed by some of the most talented financial advisers in the world. That's who I hope Albertans would want looking after their money.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Healthy Food Choices

Mr. Benito: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Health Check is a food information program of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Alberta. Food companies and restaurants voluntarily submit products or menu items to be evaluated by the foundation. It sounds like an excellent program, but I have some questions for the Minister of Health and Wellness. First, what assurance can you give that this new program will receive ongoing support, not one-time support, Minister, as is often the case?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, the first assurance I would give this member is that in addition to the $560,000 that I spoke about over the weekend and at the press conference on Friday, I've just augmented the funding by another $340,000 for the Heart and Stroke Foundation, who are doing a tremendous job with this program.

The second point is that this specific program is mentioned in our five-year health action plan as a long-term commitment. So we will be there today, and we will also be there tomorrow to ensure that whatever help possible gets to the Heart and Stroke Foundation and to the restaurants who are participating.

Mr. Benito: To the same minister: how will we know if this program is accomplishing its goal of making healthier food choices?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we'll see some consumer surveys that will yield some important information. We hope to see a growth in the number of restaurants who are participating with the red circle and white check mark inside it that tells you it's a Health Check food item. Thirdly, we'll know by the number of people going to restaurants and using these particular menu choices. Today we have SAGE Savouries, a food company here in Edmonton, that is participating, and we have 13 Husky restaurants across Alberta. That's already a good indication that it's working.

Mr. Benito: To the same minister: given that healthy food choices are only one part of wellness, why aren't you promoting other areas like physical activity programs, for example?

Mr. Zwodzesky: Mr. Speaker, the short fact is that we are promoting other aspects of wellness because we know that healthy food choices is an important one, but it's only one. We are promoting better knowledge and awareness of what it takes to be healthy, including the food items that are talked about. We're also doing a program called Communities ChooseWell, which has activity as one of its central points. We're also promoting and funding a program called healthy school community wellness fund, which is about active living and positive mental well-being. The Department of Education is also working hard with us on the Healthy U campaign. So we have a number of ministries that are focused on a lot more than just eating.

Municipal Zoning Exemption for Universities

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, my questions are to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. As I explained last week, this government's legislation gives a handful of Alberta universities complete exemption from all municipal zoning, including traffic and parking, density, design, and everything else. No developer, no private citizen, and no business gets this remarkable privilege. Will the minister please explain this week what he didn't explain last week, which is: what is the justification for this policy?

Mr. Weadick: Well, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question. It centres around the legislation under which those universities were created. That legislation has been in place for many, many years. In fact, the University of Alberta was created around the same time as the province. At that time certain rights and privileges were given within those universities, which is consistent with universities across Canada and in other parts of the world.

Dr. Taft: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that it's not consistent with legislation across Canada – in fact, it's not even consistent with legislation in Alberta – let's pursue this issue. Since NAIT, MacEwan University, and all other postsecondary institutions in Edmonton do just fine without this exemption, why does it still exist for the University of Alberta?

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It also exists for the other residential universities in the province of Alberta. Our colleges and technical institutes are developed under other legislation, and they fall under the Municipal Government Act in areas of planning and other things. So our colleges and technical institutes do fall within that legislation. As you know, MacEwan University and Mount Royal University were both created under that colleges legislation.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, this is going to be a long debate. I am asking the minister to justify this law. Saying that this law is justified because it's the law is not an answer. What is the justification for a complete exemption by the universities of Alberta, Calgary, and Lethbridge from all municipal zoning? Why do they get the privilege?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know this is an issue within the riding in Edmonton because of south campus and that there have been some discussions around access to programs and to projects being built. We believe that the university in Edmonton continues to work with the city and with neighbours to ensure that that facility is being developed in the best interests of both the city and the neighbours as well.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Job Preparedness in Northern Communities

Ms Calahasen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Pardon me. I almost fell over.

Alberta Employment and Immigration announced closures of three Alberta Job Corps sites in the northwest and will continue to close them all in my understanding. Alberta Job Corps has provided numerous people with the opportunity to develop employment skills, particularly in the trades, and helped them get jobs. My question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Where are unemployed Albertans going to get the supports they need so that they can . . .

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'm glad to know that the hon. member is falling over me. That's really good.

Mr. Speaker, we have made a decision to make sure that adequate services are provided. In some parts of the province we have facilities that could be better utilized by Advanced Education to allow Albertans to develop skills and certificates in areas such as welding and other professions, but we continue to be committed to providing Albertans with foundational learning as we have in the past.

Ms Calahasen: Mr. Speaker, just like all men, he wishes.

To the same minister: now that you're taking away the tools to help many people prepare for the workforce, what are you intending to do to replace that preparedness which has worked so well in the past?

Mr. Lukaszuk: And I shall continue wishing, Mr. Speaker.

I will tell you that foundational learning is very important to individuals that perhaps haven't had a chance to be fully engaged in employment, and there are many different means by which we can provide foundational learning. Even though the responsibility for Job Corps has now been transferred, the facilities have been transferred to Advanced Education, where they will be able to better utilize those facilities, in many cases very expensive, well-equipped facilities. We will provide foundational learning in more appropriate settings through more appropriate vendors.

Ms Calahasen: As much as I'd love to keep . . .

The Speaker: Aw, come on. No more preambles.

Ms Calahasen: My last question is to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. Are you co-ordinating with the Minister of Employment and Immigration to ensure that colleges like Northern Lakes can access that equipment so they can increase access to postsecondary education, especially in northern communities?

Mr. Weadick: I'd like to assure the member that we are working together to ensure that programs are available in northern communities. We know it's critically important to have training available, and these facilities are extremely fine facilities. A good example would be in the community of Slave Lake, where the facility that has been mentioned will be transferred to Campus Alberta, to Northern Lakes College. They're going to deliver carpentry and welding programs for the students there and continue the good work of Campus Alberta.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 19 members were recognized today. That was 114 questions and responses.

We have one additional business, though, arising out of the question period last Thursday. The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs would like to supplement an answer. That will allow the member who was involved with the minister to raise an additional question. The hon. minister.

Telecommunications Tower Siting

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just want to clarify a comment that I made last Thursday during question period, and that was to questions from the Member for Calgary-North Hill. I indicated to the member that I was still waiting for a response from the federal government. In fact, I had received an answer from the hon. Tony Clement, the Minister of Industry, whereby he did indicate to us that land-use authorities – and that's concerning the telecommunications towers – are encouraged to facilitate the implementation of radio communication services by establishing their own consultation process for the siting of antenna systems. I just wanted to put that on the table.*

The Speaker: Okay. Hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, if you wish, you have a question.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you very much for the information. I don't have any further questions.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: Hon. members, we have seven today. Because of the time we're going to proceed immediately.

The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Safe Digging Month

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. April has been designated in many jurisdictions across the continent as Safe Digging Month. Alberta has one of the most comprehensive and complex systems of underground infrastructure, that provides the essential electricity, natural gas, communications, water, and sewer to our homes, businesses, and industries.

Today's society depends heavily on the safe operation of all these buried facilities, which are estimated to span more than 1 and a half million kilometres within Alberta, including 400,000 kilometres of high-pressure pipeline. We are always one improperly conducted ground disturbance away from a fatality. These countless transmission and production lines can be just a few feet below the surface. Failure to call before you dig is the most frequent cause of facility damage.

The Alberta Damage Prevention Council is dedicated to minimizing damage caused to underground facilities from unauthorized contacts and is mandated to promote safe working environments for all agencies involved in development and construction. When an individual or organization is planning any ground disturbance, they must contact Alberta One-Call in advance of the construction to have all buried pipes, cables, and other facilities marked on the ground to ensure that they do not come into contact with those facilities, causing damage to the facility and/or danger to themselves. There's no cost for the service. Costs are all borne by the individual utility companies.

For something as simple as planting a tree, putting up a fence, or installing a mailbox, call 1-800-242-3447. Call at least two working days before you plan to disturb the ground. Then Alberta One-Call will notify the buried-facility operators, who will then mark their facilities. Only then can you safely dig.

It's better to be safe than sorry. Be safe. Call Alberta One-Call before you dig. Safe digging is no accident. Next week being constituency week, I challenge members to take this message back to their constituencies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark.

Kirti Kumar Sherman, 1939 to 2011

Dr. Sherman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. After a life full of joy, love, happiness, and hope, yesterday, Sunday, March 20, my father, Kirti Kumar Sherman, completed his journey at the age of 73. He is survived by his loving wife of 54 years, Santosh, his four sons, and nine grandchildren. He is predeceased by his sister Vijay and survived by his sister Krishna and numerous relatives and friends.

Born in Sakruli, a humble village in Hoshiarpur, Punjab, India, the son of Pandit Bal Mukand and Parsini Devi, my father was an accomplished state-level athlete and soccer player. He graduated with a master's degree in political science from Punjab University, where he studied with India's Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh. He was politically active and became dear friends with President Giani Zial Singh. He went on to become a schoolteacher and in 1965 emigrated to Vancouver, Canada, in search of a better life for his young family.

He worked as a mailman in Prince Rupert, a prison guard at Oakalla penitentiary, and held numerous jobs at the mill in addition to being a member of the volunteer fire department and union rep for the IWA at the Weldwood lumber mill in Squamish, B.C., until his retirement.

He comes from a family of public servants. As a 17-year-old his father arrived in Canada in 1906 and took a leadership role in B.C.'s lumber industry, India's freedom movement, and as a supporter of Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Dad's grand-uncle Munshi Ram was a passenger aboard the Komagata Maru ship in 1914, an unfortunate incident in Canadian history for which Prime Minister Harper apologized.

His finest qualities were honesty, integrity, and hard work. He will be remembered for his jovial nature and sense of humour and commitment to his family. He instilled in his children the same values that his parents instilled in him, the duty to serve. He had a deep and abiding love of life and for all the people within it. He'll be dearly missed by his family and all those who came to know him.

My family and I would like to thank Edmonton EMS, all the health care staff, including his nurses and doctors, for the excellent and compassionate care that he has received over the years and ask Albertans to make a donation to the Heart and Stroke Foundation.

Dad, we thank you for all you've done for us. We love you and bid you farewell. May God bless you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ward of the 21st Century

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Many in this Assembly have heard me talk about the amazing health research happening in Alberta, and today I'd like to tell you about an amazing place where health research is being put into action, Calgary's ward of the 21st century at the Foothills hospital.

Mr. Speaker, the W21C, as it's fondly known, is where health care providers, researchers, and innovators work together to test new products and ideas for improving care. What makes this facility special is that it's also a real, functioning medical unit where doctors and nurses help patients every day.

The ward of the 21st century gives researchers and innovators an opportunity to test how new approaches to care and new technologies can work in a real health environment. Right now the ward is home to more than 20 active projects supporting this priority, projects like specialized computer keyboards that limit the spread of infection and mats that allow caregivers to continually monitor pressure points that are a primary cause of bedsores.

This unique facility allows health care providers and patients to interact with tomorrow's tools of medicine and improve upon made-in-Alberta health innovations, and that makes it something all of us as Albertans can be proud to call our own.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

East Calgary Health Centre

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to recognize the recent opening of the east Calgary health centre in the eastern quadrant of the city. The centre opened last fall, and residents of Calgary-East are very appreciative of the new facility because of the essential services it provides to the whole community.

The highly dedicated health team at the east Calgary health centre provides standard public checkup examinations and other services such as chronic disease management, language, addiction, and mental health services, just to name a few. In all, more than 30 different clinics and programs are available at the facility. I must concede that it would be even better if there was an emergency centre attached to the facility, but having this new 75,000-square-foot site still provides many very essential services under one roof.

New health centres are made possible through the five-year funding plan put forward by the Ministry of Health and Wellness, which allows for continued access to high-quality health care services throughout the province. Mr. Speaker, the east Calgary health centre is truly a great model of community-based health care as well as a facility that works for patients, the staff, and the community. The government of Alberta has taken into account the diverse needs of all Albertans and has strategically invested in the health system to support patients and communities to stay healthy, and the opening of the east Calgary health centre is a wonderful example.

Mr. Speaker, looking forward, it would be ideal, again, if an emergency centre could be added to take the pressures off the hospitals as well as provide such essential services locally.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

State of the Health Care System

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The rhetoric in this House over the last several weeks has caused me to think very seriously about how lucky we are as Albertans. This is because what I've been hearing from Albertans does not match the health care apocalypse being espoused by the opposition here in the Assembly.

For example, I've recently spoken to a constituent who shared the following story with me: on March 10 I went to the emergency room of the Rocky View hospital in Calgary; when I arrived at the hospital, the triage nurse took my blood pressure, which at that time was 195 over 120; I was immediately taken to a bed and within moments was being monitored by several nurses and a doctor; my wait time was under five minutes, and the care I received was excellent.

Just to show me that this story was not an exception to the rule, she followed up with this story, Mr. Speaker: during the H1N1 outbreak my son, who is a type 1 diabetic, had a fever of 40 degrees Celsius, and his blood sugar was around 22; normally the level is 5.5; after calling Health Link, I was advised to take him to emergency; we waited about 10 minutes in the ER before being seen; he was stable and home in about four hours with Tamiflu.

Mr. Speaker, also, on Sunday I had the chance to visit my grandmother at the new Michener Hill Village seniors' home in Red Deer. Wow, what a great facility, and the staff there are providing great care. My grandmother, despite some health-related issues and the natural uneasiness of having to move from a familiar situation at the age of 86, is very happy with her surroundings. However, I was appalled last fall when certain hon. members of the opposition and special-interest groups attempted to exploit the uncertainties and fears of seniors making this transition to this facility, all in the name of political gain.

Mr. Speaker, there's no doubt, even with the evidence of all the good things happening in health care today, that we do have challenges. However, I can stand here today with more conviction and say that the rhetoric of the past several weeks has not contributed even one bit to improving our health care system.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Pigeon Lake Ice Golf Tournament

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This past Saturday, March 19, Jim and I had the pleasure of attending the ice golf tournament in Mulhurst Bay on picturesque Pigeon Lake in my constituency of Drayton Valley-Calmar. It was an absolutely wonderful day to get outside and have a great time with family, friends, and constituents, with over 145 registered golfers. This annual tournament is a popular event for many who live in the area, and this year was the 15th annual tournament, which made it even more special.

The unique 18-hole course was carved out of ice and snow on Pigeon Lake. The tournament was fun for all ages, with a Texas scramble. The golf tournament was supplemented by a delicious dinner, an awards presentation, and a silent auction. There were many prizes, trophies, and raffles, which were a great deal of fun for the more competitive golfers and those of all ranges of abilities who just wanted to come out and have a good time. I am not sure how, but our team managed to come in second, and I know it was not my skills but those of my fellow teammates.

For those who wished to enjoy the day in Mulhurst Bay but were not avid golfers, there were family sleigh rides on the lake, concessions on the beach, and restaurants to sit down and enjoy a bite to eat.

I would like to thank the Pigeon Lake Regional Chamber of Commerce for putting on this fantastic event and the entire community of Mulhurst for hosting it. I was proud to be a part of this event as the whole community pulled together to support this event from several local businesses and volunteers.

Everyone had a great time enjoying the warmth of spring, fun and exercise in the outdoors, and fellowship with golfers and their neighbours. Special thanks to all the golfers who participated and to City TV and the Pipestone Flyer for coming out and promoting our event.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Pythagorean Theorem

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. members for St. Albert, Edmonton-Beverly-Clareview, Edmonton-Manning, and others are likely all very familiar with Pythagoras and his theorem, which states that the sum of the squares of the sides of a right triangle are equal to the square of the hypotenuse. As a quick refresher, the hypotenuse is the triangle's longest side, the legs being the other two sides, which meet at a right angle. This theorem, as most will recall, can be written as an equation relating to the lengths of the sides  $a$ ,  $b$ , and  $c$ , and thus we have the Pythagorean theorem of  $c^2 = a^2 + b^2$ .

This theorem and its rather intimidating moniker is nothing more than the elegant and universal 6-8-10 rule, which skilled tradesmen use every day to square a wall, calculate the length of a stair stringer, or commence a boundary survey of real property. It is such a beautiful and flexible thing that you do not have to simply stick to 6-8-10. You can use any division or multiplication of this sequence. For example, 3-4-5 or 12-16-20 can also be used.

Pythagoras died in 500 BC, but his rule influences us today, about 2,500 years later. Even today we have direct evidence that the work of Pythagoras was accurate. His law has stood the test of time, and it is comforting to know that there are things that are reliable and can be spoken of with absolute precision. I find this a rare thing, Mr. Speaker.

Our work in this House is not based on such reliable laws as Pythagoras but, more likely, upon Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules & Forms, section 494, which begins, "It has been formally ruled by Speakers that statements by Members respecting themselves and particularly within their own knowledge must be accepted" and ends by saying, "No imputation of intentional falsehood is permissible. On rare occasions this may result in the House having to accept two contradictory accounts of the same incident." There we have it, Mr. Speaker, proof that freedom exists for members of this Assembly to take contradictory positions, even with themselves, whenever they find it convenient to do so.

Thank you.

3:00

The Speaker: Hon. members, our standing orders read, 7(7) . . .

Ms Blakeman: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Yes. Sit down.

. . . "At 3 p.m. the items in the ordinary daily routine will be deemed to be concluded and the Speaker shall notify the Assembly," and the Speaker is notifying the Assembly.

Now the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I had sent a note to the Speaker earlier requesting that I be acknowledged because I would like to ask for the unanimous consent of the Assembly to waive Standing Order 7(7), which is the one that has us proceed immediately at 3 o'clock and which the Speaker just read out. We have other business to conclude in Routine, and I would appreciate the support of the Assembly with unanimous consent to complete the Routine today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre has asked that the Assembly declare unanimously its desire to waive 7(7) so that we may continue the Routine. I will ask the question so that it will allow only one answer, and the question will be the following: does any member oppose the waiving of Standing Order 7(7), allowing us to go back to the Routine? If so, simply say no.

[Unanimous consent denied]

The Speaker: We did have a point of order, though, and it's always been my practice to deal with points of order, so we'll deal with that. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Point of Order Factual Accuracy

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I called the point of order on the Minister of Health and Wellness, and I will cite our standing orders plus Beauchesne. The sections of the standing orders that are relevant are 23(h), (i), and (j) and particularly 23(h), which refers to making allegations against another member. Two passages in Beauchesne: the first paragraph I want to refer to is 417, "Answers to questions should be as brief as possible, deal with the matter raised and should not provoke debate," and as well Beauchesne 97, which I think is quite powerful. It says:

The Speaker has stated: "While it is correct to say that the government is not required by our rules to answer written or oral questions, it would be bold to suggest that no circumstances could ever exist for a prima facie question of privilege to be made where there was a deliberate attempt to deny answers to an Hon. Member, if it could be shown that such action amounted to improper interference with the Hon. Member's parliamentary work."

With those in mind – and I can come back if you like, Mr. Speaker, to Beauchesne 97 because it's so powerful – I thought, first of all, I would briefly set the context and then address my concern. The context was around a series of questions concerning the intimidation of medical staff who work in my constituency. One in particular had raised concerns about being stifled and intimidated when they raised their own concerns about how the syphilis outbreak was being handled or, as it were, mishandled by this government. That provided the general context.

I think it's important to note that I'm quoting the particular expert here. His name is Dr. Stan Houston, a globally recognized specialist. He said just the other day, quote: How are our syphilis rates doing? They're not improving at all after five long years. End quote.

My question specifically concerned a report – and I don't know if I need to table this, Mr. Speaker, because it is a government of Alberta report – dated December 2010. It's titled The Syphilis Outbreak in Alberta, and it's from the office of the chief medical officer of health.

Now, the minister alleged I had not read a different report, the five-year action plan, as he calls it. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I have read it, and I am aware of two things. First of all, the five-year action plan was actually published before the report called The Syphilis Outbreak in Alberta, so it's logically not possible that the five-year action plan would have addressed a report that came out after the five-year action plan was made public. I think it's also worth noting that the five-year action plan does not ever refer to the word "syphilis," and when it addresses sexually transmitted diseases, it does so in a very cursory and brief manner, just a few short lines as opposed to this long, multipage, and very detailed report that came out after the five-year action plan.

I think it's worth noting that The Syphilis Outbreak in Alberta report makes a couple of crucial, indeed, Mr. Speaker, life-and-death statements. I will quote from page 1.

In Alberta in 2009, there have been seven confirmed cases of infants born with congenital syphilis; another six infants remain under investigation. By contrast, in 2009 there has been one case of congenital syphilis reported in one other Canadian province.

That gives you a sense of how far out of standards Alberta is with all the rest of the country. I did raise that in my question, and that's what's motivating my question.

Then this report also goes on and gives several pages of recommended actions. It says, and I quote from page 5, "Our response needs to be bold, innovative and compassionate." Then it addresses a recommendation to reduce the risk of getting the disease. It has subrecommendations: educating populations at higher risk, exploring more innovative ways to promote condom use, reducing transmission through screening and early prophylactic treatment. It addresses sex trade workers, aboriginal communities, examples of other screening and prophylactic treatment opportunities, and it addresses tracking infected individuals and partner notification, improving access to STI services province-wide, and finally . . .

The Speaker: Please. Please. I have now permitted nearly eight minutes. I'm still waiting to try and determine what the point of order is. That eight minutes to rise on a point of order is an inordinate amount of time to begin with. Points of order are not to be used to continue debate in a subject. I would like to know what the point of order is, please.

Dr. Taft: I did mention partway through, Mr. Speaker, the justification for my point of order: the allegation by the minister that I had not read and should have read the five-year action plan is simply untrue. He made a false statement against me. Beyond that, Beauchesne 97 says, "While it is correct to say that the government is not required by our rules to answer written or oral questions, it would be bold to suggest that no circumstances could ever exist for a prima facie question of privilege." I didn't raise a privilege, but I could have.

The Speaker: No, sir. Please. You misunderstand the intent of these points of order. Sorry, but, due respect, we understand what the point of order is. The point of order has to do with a member of the Assembly saying that you did not read something. Is this correct?

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, that's part of it. The other part is that he did not address the issue, and as a point under Beauchesne 97 that's an unfortunate offence of the tradition.

The Speaker: Yeah. Okay. I understand that.

Government House Leader, do you want to participate in this?

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you Mr. Speaker. I don't believe there's a point of order there. With respect to the first point – and I did pick up that that was what the hon. member was concerned about – that there was an allegation that he wasn't doing his homework or that he hadn't read the five-year action plan, the minister may well be within his right to have assumed that given the nature of the debate. But as you have said many times in this House, an hon. member is to be believed, and the hon. member did say that he has read the five-year action plan. I think that takes care of it.

On behalf of the minister I would be prepared to apologize to the hon. member for an insinuation that he didn't read it when he has clearly said that he did read it. That will leave aside any question of whether he understood it or whether or not it had any relevancy, and we can get into a discussion in another place on that particular topic at some appropriate time.

The question that's most important here, though, is the very important question that the hon. member raised about the outbreak of syphilis in Alberta and what's happening about it. The minister did say – I heard him respond to that question today as I heard him respond earlier – that there is a plan in place, a campaign to alert Albertans to the seriousness of this issue. In fact, I think that today in the Blues it will show that he indicated that the public relations campaign will be in doctors' offices but also in bars and other public places. So the issue with respect to whether this government is taking the issue of the syphilis outbreak seriously I think was very clearly answered by the hon. minister.

If the hon. member is really talking about what took place two or three or four years ago relative to the question, that may be another question that he may want to raise at another time, but clearly the gist of what I heard him ask today was: are you taking this very important issue seriously? Clearly, the answer was that we are.

The Speaker: Thank you. I'm going to repeat what I said earlier. The purpose of points of order is not to continue debate. I heard a withdrawal or an apology. That almost in all cases deals with the matter, so that matter is finished.

I also, though, want to make some clarification, and I ask the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar to return to his seat. If hon. members would look at Hansard on March 17, 2011, at page 433, I wish to point out to all members that I am guilty of mishearing something, and I want to make sure that the record and Hansard actually have it clarified.

There was an exchange on Thursday last when the Government House Leader stood up and the Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar was speaking. The hon. Government House Leader said that he was rising on a point of order. I was listening, I thought attentively, and I thought I heard the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar say: there certainly is a point of order. What the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar said was: "There certainly isn't a point of order." I heard the "is" but not the "n't." Then I got up a little later and I said: well, both members agree that there was a point of order. Then there was an exchange about the hon. member's mother, and I had some fine words to say about her.*

I just wanted to clarify in the Hansard that the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar did say, "There certainly isn't a point of order," when I thought he said: there certainly is a point of order. I want the Hansard to read that because I don't want some archaeologist 4,000 years from now to come in here and, you know, get totally confused about what happened.

That clarifies that.

Orders of the Day

Written Questions

[The Clerk read the following written questions, which had been accepted]

Jackfish Oil Sands Wellhead Failure

Q1. Ms Blakeman:

How much oil was spilled as a result of the wellhead failure at Devon Energy Corporation's Jackfish oil sands site, which sent a plume of bitumen-laced, high-temperature steam into the air for nearly 36 hours on July 10 and 11, 2010?

*See page 433, left column, paragraph 10

Previous Wild Rose Foundation Grants

- Q2. Ms Blakeman:
Which groups that previously received funding from the Wild Rose Foundation but were no longer able to receive funding after the program was cut were unable to obtain similar funding through publicly funded grant programs such as the community initiatives program?

Land Expropriations

- Q11. Ms Blakeman:
How many times and under what circumstances has the Lieutenant Governor in Council authorized expropriation of land under section 9(2)(h) of the Alberta Land Stewardship Act?

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Occupational Health and Safety Prosecutions

- Q6. Mr. Chase asked that the following question be accepted.
How many occupational health and safety cases has the Ministry of Employment and Immigration sent to the Ministry of Justice with a recommendation to prosecute for each of the years 2003 to 2010?

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe the hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration would like to read his amended proposal.

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, the member is correct in his presumption.

I move that Written Question 6 be amended by striking out “cases has the Ministry of Employment and Immigration sent to the Ministry of Justice with a recommendation to prosecute for each of the years 2003 to 2010” and substituting “investigation files has the Ministry of Employment and Immigration sent to Alberta Justice between 2003 and 2010 for its review to determine whether the evidence supports laying charges.”

Mr. Speaker, the reason I'm doing this is that it should be well known to all members of this Assembly but also to all Albertans that all a ministry from which an investigation arises can do is lay the information before the Crown prosecutors' office. It is unbiased information that is deemed to be factual by the investigators. Then having reviewed not only the evidence put before them but also the applicable law, it is the Crown prosecutors' office, in isolation from the Minister of Justice and in isolation from the minister for whom an investigation arises, that makes the ultimate determination whether charges will or will not be laid. In this case the question suggests that somehow this minister influences the Crown prosecutors' office in whether they should or should not lay charges, and that simply would be misleading in its question.

The Speaker: If I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, that in essence closes the discussion and the debate on the amendment. Does any other member wish to participate before I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity?

Then you, sir, close the debate on the amendment.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to discuss the amendment. I am aware that there is a different responsibility for the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Employment and Immigration. I'm also aware that in the past year only nine files were sent along for the ministry to potentially prosecute whereas at the same time in Saskatchewan 47 files went forward from the labour ministry to the Minister of Justice for prosecution. I understand what the Minister of Employment and Immigration is saying in terms of what his responsibilities are versus those of the Ministry of Justice. However, my concern is that it's up to the Minister of Employment and Immigration to forward files, and if the Ministry of Justice doesn't receive the files, they can't then go forth and prosecute.

However, to the minister's credit, I appreciate the fact that he will be supplying the information indicated in his amendment to my written question, and I'll look forward to receiving that information.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: We've got discussion and debate here now and a motion as amended. Additional speakers?

Should I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to once again close it all or call the question?

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Speaking to the motion as amended, while it does not distinguish between the rules of the Ministry of Employment and Immigration and the authority of the justice system, it is up to the minister to decide which cases he thinks should be sent along based on hazards, injuries, and deaths at a workplace. The information that he's willing to provide will be of some help, and therefore I am accepting the amendment because to not do so, Mr. Speaker, would mean I would have nothing.

[Written Question 6 as amended carried]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Bitumen Royalty in Kind Program

- Q7. Mr. Hehr asked that the following question be accepted.
What are the monetary values attributed to bitumen, per grade per barrel, for each company included in the Alberta bitumen royalty in kind program?

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm asking the government to provide some very important information. I find that this would be very pertinent for us in the opposition to have as at this time we are moving forward with great speed on our Alberta bitumen royalty in kind program. I for one find it a very good program that we should in fact be capitalizing on, possibly expanding. Getting the information of which companies are taking part and what the amount is of the value-added materials we are getting from this bitumen royalty in kind program could really serve my purposes as Energy critic. It would be very helpful

3:20

If you look at where we are today, we're still upgrading roughly about 67 per cent of our bitumen here in this province. In my view, we should continue ramping that up. If we just stay where we are today, even with the announcement of the North West upgrader project, if we just stay with that one project, even with what's going on up at the Suncor plant, we could be back in a situation where we're only upgrading 60 per cent of our bitumen here in this province within 10 years if we don't continue to work on striving to produce more of this bitumen, which, in my view, is very important to this province's future, maximizing every dollar we can get out of this one-time gift. If you want to take a look at oil and gas resources in that view, we should look at maximizing what they can do for the Alberta people.

That's what the Alberta bitumen in kind program could and should do. Hence, getting this information from the government would be very important for me. For instance, we can look at whether we can stimulate other companies to take part in this, whether it be a suggestion from the opposition on how to incent the marketplace or whether we are talking about, with the Minister of Energy, whether there is, in fact, right now an open place in the marketplace where possibly some government investment in an actual upgrader may actually be wise at this time and to have that discussion and debate.

If we look back to a situation like it was in 1970, when Premier Lougheed started the Alberta Energy Company, is it time for us to do that with an Alberta bitumen company? I don't know, but it's something to be discussed and something where this information would go a great ways towards enhancing the opposition's knowledge and at the same time, then, enhancing all Albertans' knowledge on this very important issue.

Those are my comments, and I'd wait to hear the government's response to this matter.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising today on behalf of the hon. Minister of Energy with a few points that I'd like to make with respect to this particular question to the Member for Calgary-Buffalo. First off, bitumen values in the market fluctuate on a daily basis, just like pretty much every other commodity on the open market. Another issue is that we're still developing administration of the bitumen royalty in kind program and that the process of how we implement this is the focus of the current consultation with the industry. Over the course of this year we will continue to develop the rules and regulations of implementing the BRIK program, and I can assure the Member for Calgary-Buffalo that Albertans will receive the best value for their particular resource.

We must also keep in mind that the information on bitumen valuation provided to us from specific companies would be considered confidential information pursuant to the Mines and Minerals Act of this province.

Mr. Speaker, we can't really answer this member's question, and I would suggest that we respectfully reject it. In the meantime, in order to get a sense of the market values for bitumen, I would respectfully advise this member to check out publicly available data with respect to the western Canada select and Lloydminster blend heavy crude prices. In fact, the Minister of Energy has offered to send him a note outlining some websites that publish that information.

The Speaker: Hold on, hon. member. If I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, that closes the debate on this matter. Is any other member wishing to participate?

Then the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to close the debate.

Mr. Hehr: Well, I thank the hon. member for the comments given on behalf of the Minister of Energy, and I can say that I'm disappointed. I think I outlined a reasonable case why the opposition should have this information and should be privy to it at all times. Yes, I guess there probably is some opportunity for me to gain knowledge on what the price of bitumen oil is, but whether I would have the knowledge of the government on who exactly we've made contracts with, who exactly we have accepted bids for, and who exactly we are doing the upgrading at, that is information that they would have.

Further, I understand that there was some reference to the Mines and Minerals Act and how this would somehow be classified information. I don't accept that. This would really be one of those cases, in my view, where the information could be provided very easily. I think that referring to some obscure passage in the Mines and Mineral Act that may apply to this information, that should be readily available to members of this House, is simply borderline ridiculous. I think this information should be provided, in particular on something that is going to affect Albertans going forward for a long period of time.

In my view, the traditional oil and gas sectors are on their decline and, in fact, on their way out of production. If you look at what we've done over the last 40 years, what you can say is that we've significantly found a way to spend every last dime of fossil fuel resources that has come into this Legislature's hands. For better or for worse, I think we've got to get a handle on how we manage that resource in the future to try and get some sort of long-term, sustainable mechanism that recognizes this is a one-time opportunity to maximize a resource for the Alberta people.

One of the ways to do that is through the bitumen royalty in kind program. I think it's an excellent program that the government has come out with. I think it can lead to development of an upgrader industry here in Alberta, that we can upgrade more bitumen, but in order for the opposition to do its job, to provide maybe some options for the government to do something, to maybe lead a public debate on it, to discuss it reasonably and rationally, we need some of this information. On that front I'm disappointed that the government didn't give the information right now, but at the end of developing these rules and regulations, I will again, if I am so honoured to be in this Legislature at that time, put another request on the Order Paper, and maybe the information will be forthcoming at that time.

[Written Question 7 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Requests for Exclusion from a Course of Study

Q9. Mr. Hehr asked that the following question be accepted. How many times have parents requested that a student be excluded from instruction, course of study, educational programs, or the use of instructional materials under section 11.1 of the Alberta Human Rights Act since the section came into force on September 1, 2010?

Mr. Hehr: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In the course of my time here in this honourable House there have been few debates that have really, I guess, assumed the public's attention or even this honourable House's attention like Bill 44 did and the changes that were made to the Alberta human rights act, which essentially recognized gay and lesbian rights as being protected under our human rights code and enshrined them and listed them. That's something we had not done since the Vriend decision – I believe it was 1997 – that actually mandated us to do so by the Supreme Court of Canada. For some reason unbeknownst to me this government didn't move very quickly on that. We did in Bill 44 enshrine that piece of the legislation.

At the same time we brought in, in a little bit of a backhanded way, some restrictions on what, in fact, is going to be taught in our classrooms. I believe the wording of this section was: any time that sexual orientation was discussed in the classroom. This in our view was one of those terms that it was unfortunate to use when terms like human sexuality would have covered it off just fine. Nevertheless, given that it was Alberta, given that in our view there was a divided caucus and there were some members in caucus who believed that there may have been a difference in what sexual orientation is, we believe that was part of the reason that that came up.

Also, we on this side of the House believe that this bill interferes with learning opportunities as they arise in the classroom. For instance, when the topic of human sexuality comes up as a one-off, this will stifle the ability of a classroom teacher to sort of deal with the matter and to hear a reasoned and measured approach to how these things should be dealt with.

One of the arguments we put forward at that time was that there were going to be, possibly, large numbers of parents writing in requesting they be excluded from instruction, course of study, or educational programs because of the changes to the human rights act, which in our view would not be very conducive to a learning opportunity. In fact, in a day and age like we are discussing today, when Alberta should be moving forward with the protection of human rights or recognition that all citizens regardless of race, religion, or sexual orientation should be respected and that there should be no difference that occurs, whether in our human rights legislation or in the way we deal with that in our classrooms, that should be an affront to any people in this province, and this government should lead the charge on it.

That's why we're asking for this information, because at the time we believed that many requests would be forthcoming. The government assured us that very few requests would be forthcoming. This is the time for us to see what, in fact, has happened. Hence, we request this information, and I look forward to a response.

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader and Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. At this time I would indicate on behalf of government that we are rejecting this request. There are a number of reasons for that. First of all, I would postulate that there haven't been any. I can't guarantee that, but I would suggest that anecdotally that would be the case. But the actual answer to this question is that there is no way of knowing. We don't collect that kind of information. We don't ask school boards to collect that kind of information.

In any event, it would be difficult to know whether or not a request was done under the human rights act or not given that the provision in the human rights act was put in which allowed people to have access to the Human Rights Commission with respect to any concerns about not having been informed and being allowed to exempt their student from teaching under the issue of religious instruction or religion or human sexuality. I believe that is the way it's referenced in the act: human sexuality.

The fact of the matter is that in each of those cases those were practices which were already under way in the Alberta education system. Under section 50 of the School Act parents have the right to have their children opted out of religious instruction. Under the policies with respect to discussion of potentially controversial topics parents have always had the right to be informed of any instruction with respect to human sexuality and to opt their child out of that. So to be able to say that there has been a request under the human rights act when there was always the opportunity to request under those acts and they haven't been labelled would be a very, very difficult issue.

In fact, I can say to the hon. member that the net effect, if there has been one, of the amendments of the human rights act under Bill 44 in this particular area is that we have requested that school boards put in place a more formalization of the process that had been engaged in on a more informal basis; in other words, that there be a standardized way of advising students or parents with respect to times when there was religious instruction or instruction with respect to human sexuality and of their right to opt out and that each board put in place a process relative to any appeal or concern that was raised by a parent relative to a failure to do so.

While there have been some discussions with school boards relative to how to ensure that they were following appropriate processes in the event that there was ever a concern relayed to the Human Rights Commission, we do not and we have not requested that school boards keep track of particular requests. We never have asked for that. Quite frankly, it's contrary to the process that we've undertaken. We in a time of fiscal restraint, as we should at any time, have gone through value reviews and gone through processes whereby we're asking school boards to not do things that don't add value. We're cutting out a number of areas that we're asking school boards to report to us on with respect to various things if we don't think that they add value. So it would not be our intention to ask school boards to report on this.

This is simply a functional matter which continues a practice that has long been a practice in this province, that parents can opt their children out of religious instruction and instruction with respect to human sexuality. That will continue to be the practice, but it's not something that is of such significance or importance with respect to the process that we would ask school boards to keep statistics on it or report them to us.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity on this particular written question.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Beyond a doubt, Mr. Speaker, as a teacher for 34 years who taught, amongst other subjects, human sexuality, it was a clear-cut circumstance. Parents were sent home information that human sexuality would be taught on such-and-such a date in the classroom. We usually had a parent meeting beforehand so that they could get a sense of what it was within the human sexuality program that would be referenced.

However, when it comes to the areas of religion and sexual orientation, it's a different ball game altogether. It appears to me from the hon. Minister of Education's response that if you don't ask, you're not going to hear the answer. Bill 44 threw what I believe was a significant wrench into the workings of day-to-day teachers.

With regard to religion, Mr. Speaker, part of my grade 7 social studies curriculum was world religions, and I would talk about the potential number of people who practised a particular religion in a geographic location throughout the world. Obviously, I wasn't promoting a particular religion, but my ability or the ability of a grade 7 teacher currently teaching to handle topics on religion could potentially be compromised by a parent objecting to that child being made aware that there are religions beyond the religion that their particular family practised. Is the teacher supposed to stop his discussion? Where does he put the child who isn't interested in the fact that there are other religions in the world? Are they supposed to be sent to the library? Does that then become the librarian's responsibility? Or does the child stay home for that day? This is part of the confusion. If you think religion and the teaching of religion causes potential confusion, imagine what happens with sexual orientation.

Bill 44 in one sense, as the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo recognized, brought in the front door the recognition of the Vriend case of sexual orientation equality for transgendered, lesbian, gay, and bisexual individuals. But then, on the other hand, it said that it's potentially objectionable for any references to sexual orientation to be taught in the school system. In other words, it was institutionalizing prejudice against people whose orientations were potentially different from that of other individuals in the class.

Mr. Speaker, quite often it can occur as early as elementary school, but by the time junior high hits and by the time high school comes around, a person becomes extremely aware of their sexual orientation and their attraction either to the same sex or the opposite sex or, as in the case of bisexuals, to both. This Bill 44 basically marginalized further those individuals that it was set up to recognize.

Calling for this information was an attempt to track what was happening at the classroom level. Obviously, Mr. Speaker, the government lobbed this grenade into the classroom but wasn't interested in finding out what effects of this grenade occurred. If you don't look and you don't ask, you're obviously not going to see and you're not going to hear. While I find the answer of the hon. Minister of Education unacceptable, I hope that teachers are bringing forward their concerns to their various boards of education. I am grateful that to date no cases have been brought before the quasi-judicial Human Rights Commission for decision because how they would arrive at a decision based on Bill 44 creates an impossible circumstance.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for allowing me the opportunity to respond to Written Question 9 by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

The Speaker: Are there others who would like to participate before I call on the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo?

The hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo to conclude the debate.

Mr. Hehr: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker, for an opportunity to close the debate on Written Question 9. I, too, would join in echoing the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity's sentiments. It's almost beyond belief that the government hasn't tracked what has happened as a result of Bill 44. As I brought up earlier, we spent hours debating that bill both on our side and the government side. I thank the government members for participating in that debate.

I remember that one of the things that was most contentious was, rightly or wrongly, our contention that including the reference to sexual orientation in the new human rights act unnecessarily, we say, to really highlight some things that were going on that had no business being referenced in human rights legislation – one of the things that was referenced was the fact that we thought this was going to disturb classrooms and the ability to teach human sexuality unnecessarily. The government in response got up and said that we were crazy, that we were on a rant, that we had misjudged this piece of legislation, and that we had no reason to fear that education may be being compromised in Alberta.

When you don't even bother to track something, that's when I get worried. We look at this bill, and really the answer by the hon. Minister of Education was very disappointing to me. The government didn't even bother to track the information from what was passed in Bill 44, a bill that I look on at the end of the day as offensive to our gay, lesbian, and bisexual communities, one that was brought in as a backhanded slap to that community. It was done for those reasons, and I stand by that statement.

I also believe that it made things difficult for our teachers in this province unnecessarily. The information could have been brought very easily to disprove what I've just said by the hon. Minister of Education tracking this information. He could have got up today and said: "Well, hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, you were off your nut. You were crazier than a sack of hammers back then when you were arguing that this would interfere with Bill 44 because we tracked these results, and we found that there was going to be no interference with the classrooms." That information could have been presented here.

Nevertheless, now that we've brought it up, I'll ask the government to maybe look into this and to see whether Bill 44 has unduly caused any duress in our classrooms and, in particular, for members of our community who are possibly suffering as a result of Bill 44 unnecessarily including the words "sexual orientation" in there when it had no business being included in human rights legislation.

I thank you for the opportunity to close debate. I look forward to the government trying to track this information and, hopefully, when they arrive at a new leader, possibly looking back at Bill 44 and redoing that piece of important legislation.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

[Written Question 9 lost]

Alberta Creative Hub

Q10. Mr. Chase asked on behalf of Ms Blakeman that the following question be accepted.

What is the current position with respect to funding and staffing of the Alberta Creative Hub corporation, the non-profit organization incorporated to develop and oversee the Alberta creative hub project, and what is the construction schedule for the project?

Mr. Chase: I look forward to the government's response.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm rising on behalf of the hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. On behalf of the minister as aforesaid I'd like to reject written question 10.

The Alberta Creative Hub is a project under the auspices of the Alberta Creative Hub corporation. It's a part 9 nonprofit corporation pursuant to the Companies Act, which was formed to build and operate Alberta's film, television, and interactive media facilities being planned for in Calgary. The corporation was formed in December of 2009 by Calgary Economic Development, and questions relating to the funding and staffing of the corporation as well as to the construction scheduled for the project should be directed to the corporation itself.

I would urge members to reject this motion.

The Speaker: If I recognize the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, this closes the debate. Proceed, please.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The government does a considerable amount of appointing of positions to associations, boards, and commissions. The government provides subsidies to a number of organizations and is involved in the governance of the organization. The government is suggesting that my hon. colleague should go directly to the Alberta Creative Hub corporation to find that information, and I gather that because the government isn't willing to proceed further, a FOIP request will probably be provided to the organization.

I'm sure the hon. minister of housing, probably more likely the minister of community supports, will receive a rewritten question talking about how much funding and what role in governance the Alberta government has for the Alberta Creative Hub corporation, but that is an argument for another day.

Obviously, we're disappointed, Mr. Speaker, but I know we need to move on.

[Written Question 10 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

3:50 New Home Warranty Program

Q12. Mr. Chase asked on behalf of Ms Pastoor that the following question be accepted.

What was the budget surplus, number of claims filed with, and number of claims approved by the Alberta new home warranty program for the 2009-2010 fiscal year?

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This question was asked in the name of transparency and accountability. Sometimes a statement is worth less than the paper upon which it is printed. We have raised numerous issues in this province about houses and condos that are falling down because of a lack of government regulation and legislation, and what the Alberta New Home Warranty Program for the 2009-2010 fiscal year is suggesting is: don't worry; this is an insurance policy that will cover any defective construction, any problems that were not picked up in inspections.

Now, when people buy a home, they're assuming that the builder has followed all the regulations set out by the government, but if the regulations, Mr. Speaker, are insufficient, how can an approval take place?

The government has denied the information requested, which is extremely specific. It's for one year, 2009-2010. It's asking for the budget surplus, the number of claims filed, and the number of claims approved by the Alberta New Home Warranty Program. In other words, what we're looking for from the government is governance over this program, protection for individuals purchasing homes, whether condos, apartments, or houses.

I am looking forward to hearing the government's response because it seems like a rather straightforward request having to do with the quality of construction and the value of what, basically, appears to be either an insurance or, at the very least, an assurance program.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Service Alberta.

Mrs. Klimchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In response to the written question, as the Alberta New Home Warranty Program is operated by member home builders as one of the five that are operated across Alberta, this is an independent organization, and we do not collect this kind of information through the government. I'd respectfully suggest that the member contact the Alberta New Home Warranty Program and request this information directly from them.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo, did you want to participate?

Mr. Hehr: Well, yes, please.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Hehr: I thank the hon. member for her answer, but frankly I find it somewhat misguided for her department not to be collecting this information. Simply put, this is information that the government could use, that could actually look into building practices, whether people are satisfied with what is going out, and actually look to creating some rules and regulations that actually protect individuals out there. Really, if you're not collecting this information, what information do you find relevant under your auspices or are you supposed to be in charge of? I find it a complete derogation of responsibility to not even bother to collect this information, but I'll leave that for another day. We'll put it on the record, and maybe they'll start collecting this information next year.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to close the debate.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. In closing the debate, Mr. Speaker, my concerns remain. This is the equivalent of: if a tree falls in the forest and there's no one to hear it, did it actually fall?

As was the case with the lack of collection of information with the Bill 44 question that was raised earlier, it appears that the government, as my hon. colleague from Calgary-Buffalo pointed out, doesn't seem to care about the collection of the information regarding the quality of home warranty programs in this province. That should come as a shock to Albertans, especially those that are contemplating or have recently purchased a home, that the government doesn't consider this part of their governance to track the quality of construction and the value, to what extent there is value, to the Alberta New Home Warranty Program. Builders are offering this as a program, an insurance program. What is it worth?

Well, unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, as you noted in calling me to close the argument, we're not going to know the answer from the government. We'll request, as the government has suggested, this information from the Alberta New Home Warranty Program individuals. But governance, building code, fraudulent practices: that all falls under the auspices of the government, and I suggest that they're not doing their due diligence in being able to, first, be interested in compiling this information and then in providing it to us.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Motions for Returns

[The Clerk read the following motions for returns, which had been accepted]

Calgary Airport Trail Tunnel

M1. Mr. Kang:

A return showing a copy of all reports, studies, financial forecasts, and any other materials prepared for Alberta Transportation regarding the construction of the proposed Calgary Airport Trail tunnel.

Government Air Transportation

M2. Mr. Kang:

A return showing a copy of all detailed information, including flight records, final destinations, duration of stay, unscheduled stops, and a list of occupants on each flight, however recorded, stored, or archived, by electronic means or otherwise, that relates to the operation and usage of any provincially leased or owned aircraft from January 1, 2009, to December 15, 2010.

Alberta Creative Hub

M4. Ms Blakeman:

A return showing copies of documents relating to the participation of the Ministry of Culture and Community Spirit in the development of the Alberta creative hub, including documents created by or submitted to the ministry to assist in the ministry's decision to provide funding for the project.

Adult Inmate Population

M10. Mr. MacDonald:

A return showing copies of documents supporting the statement in the 2009-2010 annual report of the Ministry of Solicitor General and Public Security that Alberta's adult inmate population is expected to grow by 23 per cent between 2010 and 2015.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Nuclear Power

M3. Mr. Chase moved on behalf of Mr. Hehr that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of all correspondence between Bruce Power and the government regarding proposals for nuclear power in Alberta for the time period between January 1, 2006, and February 20, 2011.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The reason for bringing forth this motion is that Bruce Power has been lobbying the government over the years that we have requested information for with regard to the potential of building a nuclear facility in northern Alberta in the Grande Prairie area. Obviously, given the disastrous events that have recently occurred in Japan, Albertans are justifiably nervous about the potential benefits versus drawbacks of nuclear power, including the disposal of nuclear waste.

I am aware that the current hon. Minister of Energy has indicated that he hasn't directly participated – at least, our current Minister of Energy has not had direct discussions with Bruce Power, but our question goes back to January 1 of 2006. I may stand to be corrected by an hon. member of the government opposite, but to suggest that Bruce Power isn't on the lobbyist registry or has not had any contact with the government I would find surprising.

If, in fact, there has been contact, whether it's government initiated – and you've heard my expression: if the government comes courting, there's no reporting. I cannot believe that there has not been some type of contact. What we're asking for is the nature of that contact.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I recognize well that there are many good researchers over in the Official Opposition caucus office. One of the said researchers thinks that they're a big expert when it comes to FOIP, but what we have here by this opposition is nothing more than an attempt to use the rules of this Assembly to bypass the established FOIP process. In the fall of last year there was a similar request from this said opposition.

Mr. Speaker, this process exists for many reasons, which I will not belabour this House with today. Just a couple of them: one of them is to ensure that proprietary information is protected while also ensuring that the public has open access to government information. In this case this member is requesting all public correspondence received in government related to a specific industry regarding nuclear power.

Mr. Speaker, this is a fishing expedition. I think that the FOIP process is an appropriate filter to apply to this request as it safeguards all parties. On that basis I'm recommending that we reject this particular motion. The FOIP process is designed to create a balance between the rights of an individual to privacy but also the flip side of that coin. We don't want to just engage in a fishing expedition over these particular items.

In my previous life as a trial lawyer quite often the judge would say: "This is a fishing expedition. We need some more evidence, and we need some more proof before we give you this particular order." This, in particular, Mr. Speaker, is no different and simply is going too far. I'd request every member in this Assembly to please reject this motion.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity to close.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The hon. minister of housing misinterpreted what we're asking for. It says: "copies of all correspondence between Bruce Power and the government." You're referring to correspondence between the public and, potentially, Bruce Power or the public and the government. Also, you were alleging that this was an end run to somehow avoid the $35 fee or whatever it's become for a FOIP request. That belittles the whole notion of concerns that Albertans have with regard to progress in establishing the potential for nuclear power in this province.

For the government to suggest that this is just an opposition end run puts all of the concerns of Albertans, especially those located in the northern location close to a fault line, where the initial nuclear power station was suggested to be built – it suggests that somehow we're Chicken Littles for bringing up a concern that has become a very dramatic concern given what's happened in the Fukushima precinct in Japan.

Now, it's kind of like the children's game Go Fish. That's basically what the minister of housing has said to us as opposition, that this is information privy only to the government. In the name of transparency and accountability and the concerns that Albertans have over the potential development of nuclear power, it's a rather sad response.

I'm sorry that we haven't received the very limited information that we requested from January 1, 2006, to February 20, 2011, a span of approximately five years.

[Motion for a Return 3 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Foundation for the Arts Grant Programming

M5. Mr. Chase moved on behalf of Ms Blakeman that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing a copy of any assessments of the new Alberta Foundation for the Arts structure for grant programming that was introduced in April 2010 following the foundation's program evaluation.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is a pretty straightforward request. We've had the Alberta Foundation for the Arts grant programming taking over from previous programming that the Alberta government has provided. There's been an overall reduction in grants, and that has been previously brought up in question period. Considering that we're almost into April 2011 and that it's taxpayer money that is involved here as well as lottery funds, an accounting of that money and the value of the assessment program of Alberta Foundation for the Arts to me seems like a very reasonable request. It's very time specific. It's basically: how has the program been evaluated over the last year? I don't understand it. It doesn't fall under the proprietary information that has been used as an excuse before. This is an extension of the ministry of culture.

I wait to hear, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I guess both the hon. member opposite and I are becoming a bit of an expert on a couple of these other ministries today.

All witticisms aside, I do have to recommend rejection of this motion. The member has asked for a copy of any and all assessments of the new grant program structure for the Alberta Foundation for the Arts. The program changes resulting from the Alberta Foundation for the Arts program evaluation have not in fact been fully implemented. I'm not sure if he was aware of that or not. Those program changes that have been implemented have been in place for less than one year.

With respect to all members of this Assembly, Mr. Speaker, my submission is that that is simply not enough time to warrant the conduct of a formal assessment. I'm not saying that this would be rejected at a later date, but at this time I would have to urge all members to reject this motion because, at the very least, it is premature.

The Speaker: The hon. member to conclude the debate.

Mr. Chase: Yes. Thank you. To close, Mr. Speaker, we're talking about significant sums of money, in the millions of dollars. We're talking about an organization that has existed for almost a year. Transparency and accountability are key to myself, to Alberta taxpayers, and to members of this House.

Mr. Speaker, I take my membership in Public Accounts very seriously. This is an accounting question. I also have a responsibility as vice-chair of the policy field Standing Committee on the Economy. As a teacher I was required to provide updates to parents formally four times a year. For the government to say, "Well, we've only had a year to evaluate, and we were not able to do it," again, I find that answer unsatisfactory, and I think other Albertans would as well.

[Motion for a Return 5 lost]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

4:10      Electronic Monitoring of Offenders

M9. Mr. Chase moved on behalf of Mr. MacDonald that an order of the Assembly do issue for a return showing copies of documents providing analysis of the cost-effectiveness of electronic monitoring of offenders in Alberta as discussed in the 2009-2010 annual report of the Ministry of Solicitor General and Public Security.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I do want to note that today is kind of a 50-50 game when it comes to accepted written questions and motions for returns from the government. I am pleased that basically 6 out of 12 have been provided, and I thank the government for that. I'd just like to increase their batting average.

Mr. Speaker, I was at the University of Calgary when the former Minister of Justice who is now seeking the position as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party in Alberta and, in so doing, seeking the premiership was at the University of Calgary when this particular program was revealed. I also was at the University of Calgary because it's in the constituency that I represent. Anything that would prevent harm from occurring to individuals, male or female, regardless of age is obviously, we would hope, of value. Now, the number of times restraining orders have been put out to no effect indicates the need, the potential need at least, for electronic monitoring.

Again, this information was introduced over a year ago, and hopefully some analysis of the cost-effectiveness of this program is forthcoming because, obviously, if we're not getting dollar value, then why would we be continuing the program? Mr. Speaker, my assumption is that this program was brought in because other methods of tracking individuals had failed. I would think this would be one the government would not only want to answer but would want to boast about, the effectiveness of the electronic monitoring of offenders program.

Mr. Speaker, I'm not a lawyer. I was a teacher. But the right of an individual to be out of a jail circumstance or a remand centre, to have certain rights providing they don't interfere with other people's rights, is extremely important. Monitoring would allow an individual to a large extent to go about their day-to-day business without providing a threat to the individual whose circumstance led to their having to be monitored in the first place.

Mr. Speaker, I won't prolong. I'll listen to the answer. Hopefully, this gives the hon. minister an opportunity to provide details to this House and onto the record as to the effectiveness of this program.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to the government's response.

The Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security.

Mr. Oberle: Thank you so much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise and join the debate and, by doing so, move a motion to amend Motion for a Return 9.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to move that Motion for a Return 9 be amended by striking out the words "providing analysis of the cost-effectiveness" and substituting the words "pertaining to the effectiveness." The amended order would thus read: "copies of documents pertaining to the effectiveness of electronic monitoring of offenders in Alberta as discussed in the 2009-2010 annual report of the Ministry of Solicitor General and Public Security." Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity used those very words in his closing sentence, which was a great segue to the motion for amendment.

Now, if the members are truly seeking cost effectiveness, I can give it to them right now. It costs, Mr. Speaker, about $12 a day to electronically monitor an offender. Obviously, the program is cost effective. The question is not whether it's cost effective; it's whether it's effective. So by changing the wording of the motion, I will actually be able to provide the member with more information about the actual effectiveness of electronic monitoring. I think that's what he's seeking, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, then.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. I want to thank the hon. Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security because we're after the same end, and that's protecting people. You've also provided the information of the low cost of this particular device, so I would suggest that it's cost effective. I would look now to the results that you've indicated you will provide, and I thank you for providing them.

[Motion on amendment carried]

The Speaker: Any further speakers, or should I call the question?

Hon. Members: Question.

[Motion for a Return 9 as amended carried]

Public Bills and Orders Other than Government Bills and Orders Committee of the Whole

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: The chair would like to call the Committee of the Whole to order.

Bill 201 Health Insurance Premiums (Health Card Donor Declaration) Amendment Act, 2011

The Chair: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to be offered with respect to this bill? The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. In speaking to Bill 201, Health Insurance Premiums (Health Card Donor Declaration) Amendment Act, 2011, I'd like to begin, Mr. Chair, by recognizing the calmness and the decorum that is present in the House this afternoon. I'm not only very pleased to be on duty with my hon. colleagues from Calgary-Buffalo and from Calgary-McCall, but I'm extremely pleased with the explanations and the co-operation provided by the government. In some cases information was withheld, but in other cases very direct attempts were made to provide information important to Albertans.

Now, Mr. Chairman, when we first were presented with Bill 201, I indicated my support for increasing individual organ donations. I talked about a number of circumstances where organs could be harvested without causing a problem to the individual. We had members talking about bone marrow transplants and blood donations. Some members I think mentioned that they were up to a hundred in terms of their donations. I haven't reached that lofty goal yet, but I'm a regular contributor. Primarily, the bill had to do with that in the event a person was deceased, their organs could be harvested within a time period that would allow them to be used by other individuals, obviously suffering.

Mr. Chair, one of the areas that I pointed out that to me would best accomplish this intent without any punitive actions being taken was the establishment of an electronic chip-implanted health card, where an individual could provide the information to the government that they were willing upon their untimely death to have whatever needed to be harvested, whether it was ligaments, whether it was organs, whether it was skin tissue. To me, as well as improving the donation of organs, this would also provide a type of portable, substantiated health record which would not be easy to copy and would provide security in health records as well as indicating an individual's desire upon their demise to continue to contribute to society by having their organs continue to operate within an individual.

I have a concern that our health cards are not secure. When I was first elected, back in 2005, the concern was that there were three times as many health cards in circulation as there were Albertans for whom they were supposed to provide access to health and information. I support the notion of improving the donor card. I've described a method that I believe would achieve that improvement, and that's an electronic chip, nonreproducible health card, that would secure information as well as provide it. The first responders would clearly be able to identify this particular card because it would be of at least the same quality and substance as our current driver's licence, it would, hopefully, with the electronic chip be less liable to fraud or counterfeiting, and it would achieve the point of Bill 201, which is to increase donations.

Mr. Chair, I am supportive of Bill 201 minus the punishment part, where people could still get health cards but not with the same assistance and timeliness as is currently available. To me we could achieve that two-birds-with-one-stone qualification by making all health cards electronically viable through a secure card that we would carry on our persons and assist with donation.

Thank you, Mr. Chair, for this opportunity to support Bill 201.

The Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to rise today in Committee of the Whole to debate Bill 201, the Health Insurance Premiums (Health Card Donor Declaration) Amendment Act, 2011. The intent of this bill is to increase organ donation in Alberta, and I believe that various sections of this bill achieve that aim. However, I have heard concerns from both my colleagues and members of the medical community about section 22.1(2), so I would like to begin by moving an amendment.

The Chair: The hon. member is introducing an amendment, so we'll pause to give time to the pages to distribute the amendment.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, please continue on the amendment.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am introducing this amendment in response to some of the concerns I've heard raised during second reading. This amendment reads that Bill 201, Health Insurance Premiums (Health Card Donor Declaration) Amendment Act, 2011, be amended as follows:

- A Section 3 is amended in the proposed section 21(h) by striking out "and the requirements for issuing certificates of registration".
- B Section 4 is amended in the proposed section 22.1 by striking out subsection (2).

In essence, this amendment removes a section of the bill that could potentially deny a health card to individuals if they refuse to make a clear choice regarding organ donations. It's not my intention nor is it within the spirit of my bill to deny health care service to anyone. In fact, I proposed Bill 201 to improve our health care system. I believe that this amendment will remove any concern people may have about these issues.

I would also like to take some time and attempt to answer some questions my colleagues may have about this amendment. First, there may be a concern that the amendment might remove the teeth from the bill or make it unenforceable. While I understand this concern, I would stress that this bill is about encouraging Albertans to make an explicit decision regarding their personal organ donor status. It is about creating discussion and encouraging people to talk with their families about their wishes.

Mr. Chairman, there is a great opportunity to increase the number of donated organs in Alberta. Without section 22.1(2) it is indeed possible that we might miss out on a few people who choose not to answer the question regarding their organ donor status, and we may not get a hundred per cent compliance. But even if we were to get 90, 70, or 50 per cent, this could equal a great number of donated organs, and it could equal a great number of lives saved.

The second concern I would like to address centres more on what this amendment does not do. During second reading there was a suggestion brought forward by several members that an organ donation choice be made on a driver's licence rather than a health card. Mr. Chairman, I agree with this proposal, and I think that would be a valuable next step to help push this issue further. However, I feel that this change would be too great for the scope of this bill; it may in fact change the intent agreed upon in second reading. Therefore, this amendment I am proposing today does not address this issue, not because I don't agree with it but because I think it falls outside of what this bill can do. My hope would be that another piece of legislation, either private member's or government, would be introduced to push the driver's licence idea forward.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that even without this suggested change the amendment that I am proposing today is valuable. I believe that it addresses the concerns that were brought forward in second reading, and I believe it ensures that the original intent of this bill remains intact.

With that, I will conclude my comments and urge all members of the House to support this amendment and to support Bill 201. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: On the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Yes, speaking to the amendment. The hon. mover of the amendment in part A took out “and the requirements for issuing certificates of registration” in section 3. I’m somewhat confused. The Alberta health card currently is a recognized certificate by the government, in general, that can be used as a piece of identity, the equivalent to a driver’s licence, when asked to produce two examples of who you are. So I’m not quite sure, taking this out, how it relates to that.

The striking out of subsection (2) does not deal with the concern, the punitive aspects. The hon. member was talking about whether you decide: I’m not donating or I am donating or I’m undecided about donating. I’m assuming that part of this amendment was to bring it down to potentially two choices from three. The part of the bill that I think still – if you want to have it closer to perfection, it’s removing the punitive aspects. I don’t believe that this amendment does that.

I’m hoping that there may be someone with greater legal understanding and background that can argue the case. I do see the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill. He can potentially straighten me out on my certificate of registration misunderstanding if at all possible.

Thank you.

The Chair: Any other hon. members wish to speak on the amendment? The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Chair. It’s a pleasure to rise today in Committee of the Whole to discuss Bill 201, the Health Insurance Premiums (Health Card Donor Declaration) Amendment Act, 2011, as amended. By explicitly asking Albertans to choose yes, no, or undecided regarding their organ donor status, Bill 201 intends to increase awareness and the overall number of donors in Alberta.

Once an Albertan turns 18 or if someone needs their health card reissued, they’d be asked to fill out the necessary questionnaire. Current health care card holders would not be required to update their organ donor status. Bill 201 does not apply to those under the age of 18 or to those unable to provide appropriate consent.

Mr. Chairman, while I believe the wording of this bill for the most part reflects its intent, certain sections do not support the member’s ultimate goal. That’s why I’d like to focus my comments on the amendment that the hon. member has brought forward and how I feel this amendment ensures that the integrity of the bill is retained. This amendment will alter the initial Bill 201 by changing the proposed section 21(h) by striking out “and the requirements for issuing certificates of registration.” Further, it will amend the proposed section 22.1 under section 4 by striking out subsection (2), “A certificate of registration shall not be issued to a person 18 years or older unless that person completes the declaration form referred to in subsection (1).” I believe that these are all important changes to ensure that the overall intent of Bill 201 is maintained.

Although Bill 201 requires Albertans to choose yes, no, or undecided when obtaining their Alberta health care card, some individuals may not wish to select one of the three choices. As the declaration form would be improperly filled out, under the current provisions of Bill 201 a certificate of registration may not have been issued. Although this would not impact the care that an Albertan would receive, withholding a certificate of registration such as a health care card is not the intent of this bill. The intent is to present Albertans with the question of whether or not they would like to become organ donors and encourage them to explicitly make a choice.

Therefore, it’s appropriate to bring forward a provision that ensures that health care cards are still issued even if an individual chooses not to make a decision regarding their donor status. This would ensure that the bill still makes it so that the question is posed to every Albertan; however, there would be no penalty for not choosing. This would continue to encourage Albertans to make a decision and, hopefully, raise donation rates within the province.

Mr. Chairman, ultimately organ donors save lives. Unfortunately, there are more Albertans that are in need of donated organs than there are donors. Donation rates in other countries often far exceed those in Canada. There are nearly twice as many organ donors per million in the United States and triple as many in Spain. In fact, Canada has far lower numbers of consent rates than most North American and European countries.

I know that many of my constituents feel that organ donation is a very personal matter. An individual’s beliefs and personal experiences play an important role when deciding their donor status. Mr. Chairman, options are important, especially when dealing with topics such as organ donation. That’s why Bill 201 allows an individual to choose between yes, no, or undecided. Albertans are not being forced to become organ donors; rather, they’re being asked to think about what may be the best option for them and their family.

At present there are quite a few Albertans who have not filled out the back of their current Alberta health care cards. I’d encourage everybody here to do that now. If an unforeseen accident was to occur and a spouse or family member had to decide the donor status of their loved one, they may be unsure how to decide. Many of these types of complications and barriers are removed by Bill 201 as Albertans could clearly select their donor preference.

Organ donation can sometimes be a difficult subject. It’s based upon unfortunate events in life. However, it’s an important topic and perhaps should be discussed more frequently. Bill 201 aims to clarify an individual’s position on organ donation. Such clarification would prevent the wrong decision being made by a spouse or family member. This is only one example of many.

Mr. Chairman, there are many Albertans for whom organ donation is a matter of life or death, and I can only imagine the severe stress and anxiety for those waiting for a donation. Accidents happen, complications occur, and any one of us could require an organ donation. The same can be said for our loved ones. As a result, organ donation affects the lives of all Albertans. It’s not a topic reserved for a small segment of the population. One or more organ donors can save many more lives.

By allowing Albertans to select their donor status prior to receiving their Alberta health care card, Bill 201 hopes to create increased awareness of organ donation. As Bill 201 provides options for Albertans on donor status and seeks to improve the health of those in need of new organs, withholding a certificate of registration for not selecting yes, no, or undecided is against the spirit of this legislation.

That’s why, Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment that the member has brought forward. Bill 201 as amended would ensure that Albertans would receive their certificate of registration even if they forego selecting yes, no, or undecided as their donor status. The intent of the bill remains intact. With the amendments Albertans would still be asked to think about their organ donor status and decide what they feel is best.

As for those Albertans who feel strongly about their donor status, Bill 201 will provide a clear way to express their decision. Therefore, the amendments to this legislation are important, Mr.

Chairman. Through increased awareness, dialogue, and clarity Bill 201 could make Alberta a national leader in organ donation. Clearly, the amendments do not detract from Bill 201's initial goals.

4:40

I'd like to thank the Member for Edmonton-Manning for his efforts in promoting positive change with regard to organ donation. This bill does not force Albertans to become organ donors. If someone is unsure, there is an option of undecided. Additionally, the proposed amendments protect unsure Albertans who may feel uncomfortable choosing undecided. With the proposed amendments in effect, Albertans only stand to gain from this legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: On the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you very much, Mr. Chair. I'd just like to take this time to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill. The beauty of the committee process is that individuals, regardless of their political stripes, can more informally sit together and exchange information. The information that the hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill shared with me was very, very helpful.

He indicated that the primary reason for this amendment was simply to eliminate the potential bottleneck of somebody having to decide how they were going to send out the health cards. The three options were: yes, you can harvest my organs; no, you cannot harvest my organs; or at this point I'm undecided. That caused a bit of multiple-choice confusion, but then the most confusing part, Mr. Chair, was if you didn't check one of the three boxes.

What the Member for Calgary-Nose Hill has pointed out is that this is intended to streamline the process, get the health cards out more quickly. It doesn't necessarily address the punitive aspects, but it deals with the logistical nightmare of deciding who got to have their health cards and at what time. As such, I think it goes a considerable way in improving Bill 201.

Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Chair: On the amendment, the hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am pleased to rise today in Committee of the Whole to speak to the amendment on Bill 201 and on the bill as amended. I'd first like to thank the hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning for bringing forth this legislation. I know that the hon. member has put a lot of work into this bill, and I commend him for that.

Mr. Chairman, the topic of organ donation is an important topic, and the discussion we have had thus far has been very productive. While commenting on the amendment, I will comment on some of the more important amendments that this legislation will make to the Health Insurance Premiums Act. While this legislation does not make a lot of amendments to the Health Insurance Premiums Act, it certainly does make some important ones. As they say, the meat and potatoes of this bill as amended is that it will add section 22.1(1) to the Health Insurance Premiums Act which will state:

A certificate of registration shall include a declaration form concerning organ and tissue donation that specifies the following 3 options:

- (a) yes;
- (b) no;
- (c) undecided.

While other sections of the act are important and no doubt necessary, this is the part that most Albertans are going to hear about, and I think it is worth while for me to explain briefly why I think that this section is significant.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

I'm sure other members will want to comment on this section, so I will keep my comments relatively brief. However, before I can fully discuss section 22.1(1), we need to consider the definition of certificate of registration, which means:

- (a) a certificate of registration issued under this Act, or
- (b) any other document prescribed by the regulations as being a certificate of registration for the purposes of this Act or the Alberta Health Care Insurance Act.

While this section may sound complicated, Mr. Chairman, in the context of this act a certificate of registration essentially means an Alberta health care card.

Mr. Chairman, as discussed in second reading, we currently have the option of signing the back of our health cards if we wish to donate organs upon our death. This bill will change the current situation and give individuals three choices with respect to their wishes for organ donation. Of course, the obvious thing would be for there to be two choices, yes or no. However, I think the choice of undecided is an important one. After all, people should not be compelled to make a decision about organ donations. They may wish to think about the implications and possibly discuss the matter with their family. Having the undecided option allows individuals to opt out of making an explicit decision until they are comfortable with their choice.

Mr. Chairman, another benefit of having such a choice is that by choosing undecided, individuals are effectively leaving the decision to the discretion of their family. After all, it is impossible to know the circumstances of one's death, and an individual may wish to leave the decision up to a loved one. That way, the family can make a decision, taking into consideration the details of the situation. Ultimately, individuals could be aware that their family's wishes may vary depending on circumstances, and therefore they may wish to remain undecided.

Mr. Chairman, as well, some individuals might be genuinely unaware of whether or not they want to donate organs should they die. I am sure a lot of people don't know the exact details of organ donations, and they may have even heard conflicting opinions and concerns about organ donations from various credible sources. What I'm saying is that individuals may wish to find out more about the subject of organ donations before making their decisions, so it is prudent on our behalf to allow them to choose the undecided option.

Mr. Chairman, another important part of this bill is that it would amend section 21 by stating that the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations

- (h) providing for any matter relating to the completion of declaration forms under section 22.1.

The main clause of this section allows for regulations to be made pertaining to any matter relating to the completion of declaration forms. In particular, this section is important because it will be determined in the regulations exactly how the question about organ donation is phrased. The particular wording is very important and can influence an individual's decision; therefore, it is important to be cognizant of this fact and work towards ensuring that the individual's personal desires are respected. So the fact that this bill as amended allows the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations related to the completion of declaration forms is important so that we can maintain respect for Albertans no matter what their decisions may be.

Furthermore, we will need some time to evaluate the current system by which Albertans receive their health care cards in order to ensure that the intended goals of this legislation are being met. As it stands now, individuals who need a card can apply in person or do so by fax or mail. Individuals need to provide proof of residency in Alberta, proof of identity, and proof of legal entitlement to be in Canada. Of course, Mr. Chairman, the logistics and costs of such a system are complicated, so it will take careful planning to ensure that we can adapt the system to reflect the changes proposed in this bill as amended.

Another potential complication, Mr. Chairman, is the fact that one partner may have to make the decision for the entire family when applying for a health care card. Some family members may have different thoughts on organ donation, or as children move into adulthood, they may wish to change their choices.

The extent to which such a system is electronic is also important as this could alleviate some logistical hurdles of having a paper-based system. Mr. Chairman, as the system stands right now, an individual cannot apply for a card electronically, but this might be something we want to look at if individuals wish to declare their wishes regarding organ donations without having to visit a registration centre or applying through the mail. Nonetheless, these concerns can be addressed in regulations, where we will consider the particulars of such a system. As such, I feel as though section 21(h) is an integral part of this bill.

Mr. Chairman, overall I feel the wording of Bill 201 as amended accurately reflects the intent. I look forward to hearing more input from my hon. colleagues here in Committee of the Whole discussion.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

4:50

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment? The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. You know, I bet there isn't anybody in this Legislature who doesn't want more organs to be available to people who are sick and possibly even dying, but sometimes what seems most obvious to us in terms of a law coming forward can actually create the opposite of what we're trying to accomplish. I'm afraid that this is one of those situations. This amendment does not solve the basic problem of this legislation.

As has been discussed earlier, it turns out that it's actually the family. It's the family of the possible organ donor that actually makes the decision in the end, and sometimes those families hesitate. They hesitate. They're afraid that if they say yes, their loved one, who might otherwise somehow survive, is going to be disconnected and have their death caused by the actual moving forward and the ultimate harvesting of the organs. So there are people who, if they had a choice between yes, no, or undecided, might possibly put in no because they are afraid. You know, they might come from a foreign country where life isn't valued as much as it's valued here. They might be very, very uncomfortable and want to just put a no on there. The no is where our problem is with this legislation.

Right now everyone – everyone – in southern Alberta who could possibly donate their organs is donating their organs, okay? What happens is that if they haven't signed the back of their licence, it's a little bit more difficult to get approval from the family. If you have signed it, then it's much easier for the family to give their approval. If we had people who actually, because of fears, quite reasonable fears in their eyes, said no, legally we would not be able to approach that family to get approval. Right now we are getting 100 per cent of the possible organs donated, and with this legislation we would no longer have that option available to us because of those noes. Those noes would essentially stop the process.

Even though I'm sure everyone here wants more organs donated, wants to make sure that all of those people out there whose lives depend upon getting organs get organs, by approving this, then we are in a situation of possibly having fewer organs. So I regretfully say that this amendment is not sufficient. It's not sufficient to deal with those noes, so I suggest that we reject it.

Thank you very much.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak to the amendment?

Seeing none, I will call the question.

[Motion on amendment A1 carried]

The Deputy Chair: We are now speaking on the bill as amended. Any members wish to speak on the bill as amended? The hon. Member for Calgary-Nose Hill. You've got about three minutes.

Dr. Brown: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I do wish to speak very, very briefly regarding the bill. I won't repeat the arguments that I made at second reading, but as I said at that time, I do support the bill. It's one step towards increasing the availability of organ donations.

I think it's important to remember that one's specification of one's wishes with respect to organ donation after death is simply that. They are simply wishes. They are not a legally binding directive in any way, shape, or form. It is an expression of a person's wishes as to what should happen to their body after their decease.

It must be remembered that the final decision with respect to any organ donation is with respect to the next of kin, but it's certainly my hope that making one's wishes known to one's next of kin and to the health providers will encourage more people to make donations.

Those are my remarks.

The Deputy Chair: Pursuant to Standing Order 8(6) the committee will now rise and report progress.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of the Whole has had under consideration certain bills. The committee reports progress on Bill 201. I wish to table copies of all amendments considered by the Committee of the Whole on this date for the official records of the Assembly.

The Acting Speaker: All those members of the Assembly that concur with the report, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed, please say no. So ordered.

Motions Other than Government Motions

Alcohol Warning Labels

502. Mr. Amery moved:

Be it resolved that the Legislative Assembly urge the government to introduce legislation to make warning labels mandatory on all alcohol sold at retail outlets in the province.

[Debate adjourned March 7]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Lesser Slave Lake.

Ms Calahasen: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I would like to rise today and share some thoughts on Motion 502, proposed by the hon. Member for Calgary-East. This motion urges the government to consider legislation whereby alcoholic beverages would have mandatory warning labels. I would like to commend the hon. member for bringing this initiative forward.

Motion 502 intends to raise awareness of the harmful effects alcohol can have on those who consume it negligently. A wide range of health effects can originate from improper alcohol use, and I think we've all seen that and heard and read much information on this issue. Among these health effects are cirrhosis of the liver, as we know, liver cancer, and fetal alcohol syndrome if it's consumed by a pregnant mother.

As has been alluded to before, Mr. Speaker, the establishment of this labelling initiative is not the entire goal of Motion 502. Rather, this motion seeks to be a first step towards raising awareness and, ultimately, preventing the incidence of impaired driving in our province. Motion 502 could have the ability to change attitudes surrounding impaired driving, and I hope that it does if this labelling is done.

Organizations such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, otherwise known as MADD, have been vocal advocacy groups on issues relating to impaired driving. They have outlined recommendations designed to curb impaired driving, one of which includes extending an absolute zero per cent blood alcohol content for all Alberta drivers under the age of 21.

The number of vehicle crash fatalities in Canada that are caused by impaired drivers has seen a modest decrease in recent years. Statistics published by MADD Canada show that in the past 10 years there has been a 7 per cent decrease in impaired driving related deaths. Looking at a four-year trend, a decrease of 4 per cent has been seen. Mr. Speaker, while these stats do show an improvement in this regard, it is still a rather modest one. When comparing Alberta to other Canadian provinces, we still have a lot of work to do. Per capita we have nearly double the number of impaired driving related deaths of British Columbia. Again per capita we see triple the number of impaired driving related deaths than Ontario.

In addition, our province sees some of the most lenient administrative licence suspensions in the country. The duration of Alberta's short-term administrative licence suspensions is just 24 hours for the first, second, and third occurrences whereas provinces like B.C., Ontario, Nova Scotia, P.E.I., and Newfoundland see much more stringent and escalating licence suspensions for each subsequent offence.

Mr. Speaker, it is comparisons such as these that highlight the need for alcohol-related awareness that Motion 502 seeks to bring forward in our province. While impaired driving is undoubtedly a serious issue and alcohol as a whole can be dangerous if used irresponsibly, it is unrealistic to see Motion 502 accomplish an eradication of impaired driving and alcohol abuse on its own. However, I commend the idea and believe it has been brought before us with the best of intentions.

With that I would like to say that I support Motion 502 and again would like to thank the hon. Member for Calgary-East for bringing this initiative before us today. I am looking forward to making sure that this motion passes.

Thank you.

The Acting Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak?

Seeing none, I would ask the hon. Member for Calgary-East to close debate.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased to rise and offer some closing remarks on Motion 502. Before I do that, I'd like to recognize four individuals in the members' gallery, and they are Cathy Gladwin, Shandy Reed, Melissa Visconti, and Crystabel Soza Hernandez, representing the Alberta Centre for Injury Control & Research. Thank you for being here.

Mr. Speaker, the goal of Motion 502 is to help educate the public on the adverse effects of alcohol consumption, especially when consumed in excess or carelessly. Motion 502 urges the government to introduce legislation to make warning labels mandatory on all alcohol sold at retail outlets in the province. Mandating labels on alcohol containers is a concept that has been around for some time now, not just in Alberta but in many jurisdiction across Canada and around the world.

Some of these jurisdictions have taken the idea one step further and passed legislation to this effect. At last count, Mr. Speaker, 17 nations around the world have legislation in place mandating warning labels on alcoholic beverage containers, countries like Argentina, Finland, Taiwan, Brazil, and Portugal, to name a few. The mandated labels in these countries target a wide range of audiences.

In Argentina, for example, consumers are reminded that alcoholic beverages are not for people who are under 18 years of age. They are also reminded that they should drink in moderation. In all jurisdictions health warnings abound. In Finland one label specifically targets pregnant women with messages highlighting the negative effects of alcohol on the fetus. Cautions against driving under the influence are also prominently featured in many jurisdictions. Closer to home, Mr. Speaker, in the United States all liquor products have been carrying warning messages since 1989. Like most jurisdictions, they focus on drunk driving and on alcohol's adverse effects on health.

As has been stated, Mr. Speaker, the establishment of this labelling initiative is not the entire goal of Motion 502. Rather, this motion seeks to be a first step towards raising awareness and ultimately preventing the incidence of impaired driving in our province. Motion 502 could have the ability to change attitudes surrounding impaired driving.

Organizations such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, otherwise known as MADD, have outlined recommendations designed to curb impaired driving. Specific to Alberta MADD suggests four such proposals. One is to make alcohol ignition interlocks mandatory for all impaired driving offenders. What this alcohol ignition interlock would specifically do is prevent a driver from starting his or her vehicle if the device detects alcohol. A second is introducing a mandatory seven-day vehicle impoundment program for suspended drivers. Currently Alberta's is just 24 hours.

Recommendation number three is to introduce a seven- to 14-day administrative licence suspension for alcohol impairment at a .05 per cent blood alcohol level. A fourth recommendation by MADD is to extend an absolute zero per cent blood alcohol content for all Alberta drivers under the age of 21. Provinces like Manitoba, Ontario, and New Brunswick have enacted such limits already. Mr. Speaker, while the third and fourth MADD recommendations may be too harsh or too extreme to endorse at this point, the overall concept of developing such strategies to help curb this issue is still welcome.

Again, I believe the biggest idea behind this labelling initiative is to raise awareness similar to that raised by organizations like MADD. Mr. Speaker, this could inform citizens who are in the highest risk group, like minors and pregnant women, of the harmful effects of even a little alcohol consumption. To those who are already sensible consumers of alcohol, this motion will have little effect on them yet still act as a visual reminder that this product must be enjoyed responsibly.

Mr. Speaker, this government continues to take a leadership role in ensuring that people are educated and protected. I'd like to thank each and every one of my colleagues who participated in this motion debate. I value and respect my colleagues' comments regarding Motion 502, and I urge your support.

Thank you.

[The voice vote indicated that Motion Other than Government Motion 502 lost]

[Several members rose calling for a division. The division bell was rung at 5:07 p.m.]

[Motion Other than Government Motion 502 carried]

The Acting Speaker: Hon. members, pursuant to Standing Order 8(5), which says, "Only one motion other than a Government motion shall be considered on Monday afternoon," I'll call on the hon. Deputy Government House Leader to adjourn.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. When I was appointed Deputy Government House Leader last year, a few people said to me that my measure of success is in getting people out early. In the spirit thereof – and it's 5:20 – I would move that we adjourn until 1:30 tomorrow.

The Acting Speaker: The policy field committee will reconvene tonight at 6:30 for consideration of the main estimates of the Treasury Board. This meeting will be video streamed.

[Motion carried; the Assembly adjourned at 5:20 p.m. to Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Tuesday, March 22, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Let us keep ever mindful of the special and unique opportunity we have to work for our constituents and our province, and in that work let us find strength and wisdom. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As a Calgary MLA I don't often get the opportunity to receive visiting students, so it's with great pleasure today that I introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 81 grade six students from St. Basil Catholic school, located in my constituency of Calgary-North West. Accompanying the students are teachers Anil Dolan, Carolyn Krahn, and Marianne Murray, along with 18 parent chaperones. Although this school has not yet been seated in the members' and public galleries as they will be joining us shortly from 2 to 3 p.m. to observe today's question period, I would still ask that they receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Battle River-Wainwright.

Mr. Griffiths: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to rise today to introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly a group of 41 students that are here from the Battle River-Wainwright constituency. Specifically, they come from Blessed Sacrament school in Wainwright. They are accompanied today by three teachers and helpers: Mrs. Michelle Folk, Mrs. Michelle Nanas, and Mr. Rene Rajotte. These teachers always invite me to come in and do a mock Legislature, and I get to spend a couple of hours with these students because I was a teacher. In nine years the most enjoyable part of this job is when I get to go back into the classroom. I understand groups 1 and 2 are seated behind me in the members' gallery, and group 3 is seated in the public gallery. I would ask them to all rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed an honour and a privilege to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly visitors from the constituency of Edmonton-Decore. There are 24 bright and wonderful students, filled with passion for education, from Northmount elementary school, where they work towards providing a safe, positive learning environment in which students as lifelong learners develop their skills, knowledge, and attitudes to become responsible, caring, and productive citizens. They are joined today by their teacher, Mrs. Krystal Lim. I would ask them now to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed an honour and a privilege to introduce the 45 students and parents from the Percy Baxter school. They are seated in the members' and public galleries. Today was one of those testimonies to the bus driver. We had some whiteouts between Whitecourt and Edmonton, and he got here safely with the students and I'm sure will get safely back to Whitecourt. I'd ask them now to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's an honour for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you individuals who have travelled here from India on a trade mission to explore Alberta and the many opportunities we have to offer. They are Sukhdev Singh, Sikandar Singh, and Harnek Singh, visiting on behalf of the Pearl Group of companies. Their visit was initiated following the Premier's mission to India in November 2010. Joining them today are local prominent members Yash Sharma, editor of Asian Tribune; and Atul Seth, a local accountant. At this time they're all standing. I'd like to ask the Assembly to give them a traditional warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Little Bow.

Mr. McFarland: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me today to introduce to you and to all members of the Assembly a few of the councillors from Vulcan county. They're up for the AAMD and C. We had a luncheon get-together with the guys. As they have their names announced, I'd ask that they please rise. There are Councillor Ian Donovan from the Mossleigh area; Councillor Rick Geschwendt from Champion, whose family just got the 100-year Century farm award last year; Councillor Rod Ruark from north of Vulcan; CAO Leo Ludwig, the new administrator, who is a former classmate of our Member for Edmonton-Manning; and, of course, our new reeve, Dave Schneider, from the Vulcan area. I see that they're standing. Would you please give them a warm welcome? Enjoy the AAMD and C.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure for me to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly today a friend of mine who I haven't met for about 20 years and happened to meet in the cafeteria downstairs today. Walt Wiens drove a coach-load of young people up here from Cochrane today. Walt is a former owner of Braman Furniture in Lethbridge and a friend of mine. As I said, it was a happy circumstance that we met today. I'd like to ask Walt to rise and enjoy the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through you a good friend, a long-time acquaintance, and someone I've spent a lot of time with, Mr. Leo Ludwig, who is now working in the county of Vulcan.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-East.

Mr. Amery: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly two guests from the great constituency of Calgary-East. Mr. Khushroop Gill relocated to Calgary from India approximately nine years ago, and he tells me that Alberta is the best place in the world in which to work, live, and raise a family. Also, we have Mr. Jag Goodoo, who is no stranger to many members of this Assembly. He was a great friend to the late hon. Harry Sohal. Mr. Goodoo in 1994-95 was the first private Albertan to voluntarily donate 5 per cent of his pay to the elimination of the budget deficit. They're both seated in the public gallery. I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's always a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and to all members of this Assembly the awesome Albertans who come to participate and to watch what goes on in this House. I'd like to ask James Cole, the president of the Calgary-Elbow constituency, to rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Whitecourt Health Care Centre X-ray Unit

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Recently it was announced that there will soon be a new X-ray machine at the Whitecourt health care centre. This was welcome news to my constituency. The new equipment will help ensure that residents of Whitecourt-Ste. Anne are able to access the health care and services they need. This new machine will provide consistent and reliable services to patients in the Whitecourt area and will be easier for staff to operate.

Through infrastructure maintenance programs Alberta Health Services maintains over 120 health care sites and approximately 500 buildings throughout the province. Providing new equipment like this X-ray unit is a priority for Alberta Health Services and this government. Alberta Health Services is strategically investing in the health system to support patients and communities like Whitecourt to stay healthy and to manage illness effectively.

I'd like to thank not only the current health minister but his predecessor for all their care and concern for my constituents and for taking the time to visit the health care facilities within Whitecourt-Ste. Anne. Lastly, I'd like to thank all the health care workers not only in Whitecourt-Ste. Anne but throughout the province for their excellent work and caring and dedication.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Seniors' Care

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government brags about how they're taking care of our seniors in this province. They brag about how they're increasing continuing care spaces. They tweet about how they're improving access and opening more assisted living beds. What they don't brag about are the seniors that can't stay in assisted living or don't belong there in the first place.

What do you do with an 86-year-old senior in assisted living who is lashing out at his spouse both verbally and physically because of dementia? What do you do with a senior with incontinence problems? What do you do with a senior who spends hours wandering the hall looking for their home, not realizing that they moved months ago? These are our beloved seniors that have fallen through the cracks.

This government insists that seniors should be in assisted living and not long-term care. Proof is in their action. No additional long-term cares have been built in years. ASL homes charge $20 for a bath, $500 for incontinence management, and $7 to be escorted for their meals. Seniors are being nickelled and dimed so that this government can pinch pennies. If a senior belongs in long-term care, put them in long-term care. The government needs to be clear: assisted living is not long-term care.

What's going on doesn't save money for seniors or government. Hospital beds cost $250,000 per year while long-term care beds cost about $60,000. Our ER and long-term care backlogs could be solved if we built the right beds, giving the seniors the right care at the right time and in the right place. This government needs to educate itself on the difference between assisted living and long-term care. This government needs to be honest to Albertans and do what's right for seniors.

I want to thank the families and health care professionals that do an exceptional job of providing care for all of our seniors. Day in and day out they make sure that our seniors, who have given so much to Alberta, receive the care in return.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathmore-Brooks.

World Water Day

Mr. Doerksen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today is World Water Day. World Water Day was established by the United Nations in 1993 to recognize the importance of fresh water and promote effective water management. The theme or focus this year is Water for Cities or, I would suggest, water for people. The objective of World Water Day 2011 is to focus international attention on the impact of rapid urban population growth, industrialization, and uncertainties caused by variables like climate, people conflicts, and natural disasters on urban water systems. This is the first time in human history that most of the world's population live in cities, 3.3 billion people, and the urban landscape continues to grow.

Mr. Speaker, we are fortunate to live in Alberta, where we have access to some of the safest drinking water in the world. As such, I want to focus on some of the positive and forward-looking initiatives we have in Alberta to manage this important resource responsibly. Advanced water treatment facilities to serve our cities, regional systems to support smaller communities, and Alberta's groundwater mapping projects are important initiatives. Responsible and efficient management of water by industry and agriculture accommodates expanded use of water as Alberta grows. Important and forward-looking land-use planning around Alberta's watersheds will further secure the long-term availability and efficient use of fresh water for people in this province. These ongoing commitments are part of Water for Life, Alberta's strategy to safeguard and manage our water resources today and in the future. It is our commitment to ensure safe, secure drinking water and healthy aquatic ecosystems in our province.

Mr. Speaker, World Water Day serves to remind us of our shared responsibility to protect water resources now and for future generations.

Thank you.

Health Care System Strengths

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, I would like to highlight some more strengths of health care in Alberta. Our province dedicates the highest amount per capita for health of any Canadian province. Alberta pays $4,712 per capita, far exceeding the national average of $3,673. We've been successful in attracting the best and brightest in medical fields by having the best-paid doctors in Canada and among the best-paid nurses.

Alberta has funded top-quality, internationally competitive health research for the last 30 years, bringing leading-edge clinical treatments to Albertans and to others around the world. For example, our hospitals provide advanced organ and tissue transplant procedures. Last year the University of Calgary researchers made the first-ever documented transplant of living cartilage into a shoulder and also made extending the life of donor cartilage tissue possible. Alberta's researchers lead their fields in areas like cardiovascular health, brain development and health, diabetes, biomedical technologies, infectious diseases, and bone and joint health.

Alberta research has improved wait times for health and knee replacements, helped to treat antibiotic infections like the virulent hospital bug Clostridium difficile, allowed scientists to communicate with the brain, and saved heart-damaged babies' lives. Alberta has taken a leadership position in the treatment of diabetes with several advancements in programs, including performing the first insulin-producing islet transplants, greatly reducing patient need for insulin, and programs like the mobile diabetes screening initiative and the Alberta monitoring for health program which assists low-income Albertans with their diabetic supplies.

I could continue, Mr. Speaker, but as you can see, the publicly funded universal health care system in Alberta is strong and innovative and continues to be on track to be the best performing health care system in all of Canada.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Continuing Care for Seniors

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, 2011 marks the first year that baby boomers start turning 65. By 2030 1 out of 5 Albertans will be seniors, and just as our demographics are changing so, too, is our way of doing things. Today seniors are more independent and healthier than previous generations. Albertans have told us their preference is to age in their own homes and in homelike settings in the community.

In November we released our five-year health action plan, and one of the strategies is to provide more choice in continuing care. Mr. Speaker, as part of that plan we are adding 5,300 continuing care spaces over the next five years, but providing more spaces is just one aspect of the strategy. More than 107,000 Albertans receive home-care services, allowing them to remain independent for as long as possible. We are expanding and adjusting home care. In this year's budget we announced an expansion of home-care hours to allow at least 3,000 more people to receive services.

We are increasing support to caregivers. We are developing pilot projects that remove barriers and use technology to help seniors age in their own homes and close to their communities. The emergency to home pilot project in several emergency departments throughout the province links emergency department home-care co-ordinators with seniors in the ED to ensure that those who can return home have the support services they need to do so.

The neighbours helping neighbours initiative partners volunteers with seniors or those with disabilities to help them with everyday tasks and to keep them connected with their communities. We are also launching a project that tests new technologies aimed at providing increased safety for those who live on their own.

Mr. Speaker, we are building a stronger, more integrated province-wide health system that will be sustainable for years to come, a health system that will help deliver quality care to Albertans.

Castle Special Management Area

Mr. Chase: Assault on the Castle. Mr. Speaker, each day of this spring session I have tried and will continue to place on the record the names of the over 1,000 individuals who have contacted my office regarding the devastation being allowed to take place in the Castle-Crown by this government either overtly through clear-cut logging, euphemistically referred to as block cutting, where species-unique old-growth forest is turned into a checkerboard of cuts under the pretense of pine beetle control, or subvertly by having insufficient staff available to arrest the off-road outlaws whose illegally carved trails further scar the landscape throughout large sections of the Castle.

In question period, during budget debates, through tablings, and now as a member's statement on behalf of all outraged Albertans I am calling this government to account. As they were with Bill 29, the Alberta Parks Act, which proposed to take governance out of the Legislature to behind closed ministerial doors, Alberta's citizens are similarly opposed to allowing the SRD minister dictatorial control of their Crown land and, in many cases, their livelihoods.

In addition to the numerous communications I and other government MLAs have received but have yet to table, several newspaper articles have been written about this government's ongoing assault on the Castle and demanding that the area be restored to protective status through the establishment of the Andy Russell I'tai Sah Kòp wilderness park. Among the journalists who have answered the call of the Castle and raised the alarm are Kelly Cryderman of the Herald, Bill Kaufmann of the Sun, Dave Mabell and Gerald Gauthier of the Lethbridge Herald, Rose Sanchez of the Prairie Post, Lorne Fitch, a biologist, in a Pincher Creek Echo article and the Nanton News.

Examples of government's centralization, exploitation, and behind-closed-doors mismanagement are growing daily. As a local physician recently noted: sunshine is the best antiseptic, to which I would add that a large voter turnout would provide the best cure.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Quality Council Review

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, a doctor a day continues to come forward with damning allegations of intimidation, yet this Premier continues to duck and dive and dodge questions in the House. Well, Mr. Premier, you can't hide forever, and you can't rely on your damage control strategy of referring everything to the Health Quality Council as a quick fix, hoping the problem goes away. Albertans see through the government's blatant attempt at PR spin and damage control. Mr. Premier, what are you hiding, and who are you protecting by avoiding the calls for an independent inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, we are going to have an independent inquiry. That is going to be done by the Health Quality Council under some very, very robust terms of reference that they themselves wrote. They'll be conducting their review based on those terms of reference.

Dr. Swann: To restore public confidence is to call an independent public inquiry. The Premier knows this. If you won't, please tell Albertans why restoring public confidence in our health care system is not a priority of yours.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said, the Health Quality Council will conduct a full review. We asked them to conduct a full review of wait times in emergency rooms and also look at cancer surgery. Given their terms of reference, that they wrote, they'll be able to listen to any evidence that comes forward from any individual, any Albertan that might want to bring evidence forward to the Health Quality Council.

Dr. Swann: Well, can the Premier explain how the Health Quality Council is going to subpoena people and records?

Mr. Stelmach: I would think that with the list that the hon. member provided the other day, these physicians – and there may be some, perhaps, nurses and other health care providers – will come forward to the Health Quality Council and deliver their evidence. It will be done in full confidence and in complete impartiality.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care Ethics and Compliance

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the Tories continue to add insult to injury by insisting that health professionals are free to speak and then referring to the code of conduct. What they neglect to mention is that every avenue of raising concerns leads to the same destination: the ethics and compliance officer. This officer happens to be the former legal counsel of Capital health and has had a record of brushing away legitimate concerns of health professionals. Again to the Premier: how can you say that the old culture of intimidation is gone from Alberta Health Services when the same people are still in senior positions calling the shots?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the people that are assigned responsible positions within Alberta Health Services have delivered those services extremely well. They have a huge responsibility. They're trying to resolve a lot of the issues. I know that one of the issues brought forward yesterday was the complaints by two nurses. That is public. It was on the website. There's nothing there to hide. Anybody and any Albertan can look at what is on the website with respect to the complaint from the nurses.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, this Premier continues to insist that there's a comprehensive process when everything eventually ends up in the hands of one person: that ethics and compliance officer who has been there for a decade. How do you explain that, Mr. Premier? How can people have confidence?

Mr. Stelmach: Actually, when a person has been in a position for that period of time, he must be doing a good job and be qualified to do that. You know, I'm sure that the individual in question must have heard many individual cases that have come forward and used best judgment to listen to both sides and make the decision at the end of the day.

Dr. Swann: Given that the closed-door review cannot compel witnesses nor grant immunity to witnesses nor subpoena documents, will the Premier finally allow a public inquiry, or is he waiting to be tipped off on the next damning case of complaint?

Mr. Stelmach: As I said, Mr. Speaker, we'll continue with the Health Quality Council review. The terms of reference are in place, and the review will start. The first report will be in about three months, the secondary report in about six months, and the final report within nine months. We'll know within three months which direction the Health Quality Council is heading.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Provincial Environmental Monitoring Panel

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The 2009 Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act was to take the politics out of appointments to government agencies, boards, and committees. Now I understand why it languishes in legislative purgatory and was never proclaimed, because here we are with another Tory buddy appointed to the water monitoring panel, a buddy that is now being investigated by the RCMP. To the Premier: why did the government feel it was acceptable to overlook the conflict-of-interest issues and appoint a friend to the water monitoring panel in the first place?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the panel that was appointed included a number of experts from a number of various fields. The member in question was appointed because he is the executive director of the Canada School of Energy and Environment and brings expertise to the panel that would have been very beneficial such as having an in-depth knowledge of the kind of research that is going on at the various institutions, academic and otherwise, across the entire country.

Ms Blakeman: Well, he's now on leave from that committee as well.

Back to the Premier. Was it worth it to appoint a friend when it could irreparably damage the credibility of the recommendations of that committee?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, the suggestion that somehow this was an appointment of a friend I think is ludicrous. I've just explained the reason why the appointment was made. Does this member think that the most recent allegations were known to this minister when the appointment was made? It's a ridiculous suggestion to think that the recent allegations came into part of that decision.

Ms Blakeman: Well, Mr. Speaker, if that act had been in place, maybe they would have known.

Back to the Premier. Won't the fact that the panel is mired in controversy and short a member for an undetermined period of time impact the ability of the board to fulfill its mandate?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, this member is suggesting that this board somehow is not going to be able to fulfill its mandate. I would suggest to her that that's simply not true. There are extremely capable people on that board. The co-chairs, Mr. Kvisle and Dr. Tennant: I have the utmost faith that they will be able to work with the rest of the members of that panel and come forward with very, very credible recommendations.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Patient Advocacy by Health Professionals

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Dr. Lloyd Maybaum spoke out for his patients. Good for him. Superboard officials, again using intimidation and bullying, said, and I quote: we want his head on a platter. The minister of health actually, in fairness, had an opportunity to demonstrate leadership and send a strong message that your government does not tolerate this type of behaviour, but the minister did absolutely nothing. Why does this minister continue to support intimidation and bullying of Alberta doctors and nurses by his nonaction?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, nobody in the government supports anything of that kind whatsoever. There's a very clear policy that was signed by a three-way group last June. I will repeat it again. It suggests very strongly that it is doctors' duty and responsibility to advocate on behalf of their patients. There was an open letter to physicians signed by the Alberta Health Services leadership just a couple of weeks back here suggesting exactly the same thing. There's also a change to the medical staff bylaws to ensure that that does not happen again.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given your other failure to take action, based on that response my next question is: how can you say to Alberta doctors and nurses that they should feel free to come forward and speak out based on what you have said in the past?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, because it is in their Hippocratic oath in slightly different words. It's also in the bylaws. It's also in the letters that I've just enunciated.

I think the other thing that's important here is for us to turn this page, to move on and get on with the excellent services that are needed today and tomorrow. Not much we can do about the past, Mr. Speaker, where they continue to live.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that this minister wants the issue to die – I don't, nor do Albertans – my third question is to the Premier. Given the dark cloud of intimidation hanging over the government, through the chair to the Premier: will you take full action now and show leadership before you retire and call a public inquiry for the benefit of Albertans?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of all Albertans again I'll refer to the letter, as I did yesterday, which went out to Dr. Maybaum. It says very clearly: this is not a matter of forcing you to be quiet, but it is a matter of teamwork and leadership. That to me is not some sort of intimidation of a physician that's coming forward and speaking out from his area of expertise.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, if you quoted from a document in your first question, would you kindly table it at the appropriate time?

To the Premier: you quoted from a letter. I don't know if that's been tabled or not, but I would expect it to be.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

2:00 Health Quality Council Review (continued)

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, we know that this Tory government is the most secretive in Canada, and we also know that this culture of secrecy has seeped down into the health care system, intimidating front-line health care professionals from speaking out on behalf of their patients. To clear the air about the role of the Minister of Health and Wellness, will the Premier ask him to testify in public before the so-called hearing of the Health Quality Council?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, last week the Health Quality Council issued very rigorous terms of reference. They will be conducting their inquiry based on those terms of reference. I'm eager for the committee to get going in terms of listening to the evidence that's going to come forward. Once again it's about waiting times in surgery and also with respect to ER, but they've also expanded the terms of reference so that if any physician or health care provider wants to come forward with any ideas or what happened in the past, they're free to do so.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations, the Energy minister, the current Minister of Health and Wellness, and Mr. Gary Mar, PC leadership candidate, were all health ministers during this period of intimidation of health care professionals, will the Premier formally request his colleagues to appear before his so-called public hearing of the Health Quality Council and give testimony in public?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, the Health Quality Council will conduct the hearings, and they will conduct them in the manner that they feel is the best to get the most information out.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, you know, will he ask his colleagues, then, to volunteer, I guess is my given?

Given again that the culture of intimidation took place first when Mr. Gary Mar was the minister of health, will he formally request Mr. Mar appear before the so-called hearing at the Health Quality Council and give public testimony?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I do have the five copies of the appropriate tabling, and I'm going to quote from one of them.

Despite all of our challenges in Alberta, we continue to provide a high standard of medical care and public health services and programs to all Albertans. It is time to reflect on these blessings; we are incredibly fortunate.

And so I respectfully submit that it is time for us all to move forward and to continue to rebuild the excellence that we have previously seen in our public health and other health services in Alberta.

That is from Dr. Ameeta Singh, which is in a letter to the Edmonton Journal.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Emergency Room Wait Times

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, following up to the Premier, the Canadian Institute for Health Information just released a report on wait times for six procedures like heart bypass surgery. While the rest of Canada is making progress, Alberta is the only province that has either made no headway or in some ways is getting worse. To the Premier: why does the Premier continue to claim we have the best performing health system when the facts show that we lag behind the rest of Canada?

Mr. Stelmach: Actually, Mr. Speaker, he's wrong. According to the information I have from the report that came out, the benchmark right across Canada is 99, and we're lower than 99. There is a lot of room for improvement – there's no doubt about it – in all of the areas. But to say that we're the worst in Canada is absolutely ridiculous.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, the new data parallels the lack of progress on lengths of stay and wait times in emergency rooms. When will the Premier heed our call to open mothballed facilities and mobilize additional staffing and relieve pressure on the ERs?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, that's what we've been doing for the last couple of months. There will be 3,200 more cataract surgeries done. There will be more staff hired. In fact, with $2.6 billion in our three-year capital plan a lot of hospitals will be completed later in 2011 and in the beginning of 2012, that will add even more room for the many new Albertans that continue to move here to the province from Ontario, B.C., and other countries.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Premier, will you restore confidence in the system and call a public inquiry now?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the Health Quality Council is prepared to begin its review. Again it was directed to look at cancer wait times, look at emergency room waiting times, but they've also expanded their terms of reference to hear from all Albertans in terms of those that are providing health care to come forward with ideas on how to improve the system, and if there was something that happened in the past, they can very easily bring that to the Health Quality Council. There are physicians that are interested in hearing what others are saying about the health system.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Income Support for Emergency Housing

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. From time to time situations arise where unexpected tragedy strikes Albertans and their homes are destroyed or otherwise uninhabitable, instances such as the evacuation of the Penhorwood condominiums in Fort McMurray or the fire on the weekend at the apartment complex in north Edmonton. My question to the Minister of Employment and Immigration: in situations like this, what does your ministry do?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, in situations like these or, frankly, in any situation where an Albertan finds himself in financial peril, Alberta Works benefits dispensed through this ministry, through the 59 offices that we have throughout the province, provide benefits such as damage deposits, rental arrears, utility arrears, utility payments, or other emergency benefits subject to eligibility. Obviously, as stewards of taxpayers' dollars we make sure that those Albertans who need those benefits, that assistance, will receive it.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister. When people are suddenly displaced, they do need help. What types of situations do the benefits you just mentioned cover?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, this actually gives me an opportunity to extend my gratitude to our staff throughout the entire province. As a matter of fact, during any emergency, no matter when it happens, in the middle of the night, or where it happens, our staff make sure to be there on the site of the emergency to offer immediate assistance and to make Albertans aware of the plethora of benefits that may be available to them. For example, in the condominium situation and our recent fire in Edmonton our staff would be on-site at the time of evacuation, or whatever the peril is, and make themselves available to provide that immediate assistance.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: so what level of benefits are provided to these people that you're talking to on-site?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, that would vary based on the situation. Obviously, every applicant, Albertan, must apply or must exhibit their need to one of our staff. Their eligibility is evaluated based on what their financial situation happens to be. As stewards of public dollars we will always provide assistance to those who truly need it and show that they need it. As I indicated earlier, basic expenses are taken care of by the department for those Albertans who need that help.

Noninstructional Postsecondary Tuition Fees

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, despite this government's earlier promise that the cost of postsecondary tuition fees would be capped at the rate of inflation, the minister of advanced education has allowed professional faculties at both the U of A and the U of C to significantly raise tuition fees. Further, he's allowing a growing list of institutions to charge mandatory noninstructional fees that are little more than end runs around tuition caps. To this minister: since students were previously consulted and then betrayed, where does he stand on tuition fee increases?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to stand and say that we're very pleased and proud that we do consult with our students. We work very closely with them on many of these issues. I can tell this member that they have not been betrayed. We continue to work with our students. It's critically important that they be at the table. There were six market modifiers that were approved last year that will come into effect later this year, that were supported by the student faculties in those areas, and they're there to help bring those schools in line with others similar.

Dr. Taft: Well, to the same minister: first, I'd ask him to table the details of that information; and then, since this minister told this Assembly on March 9 that he's been discussing ways that students could be involved in voting on noninstructional fees, will he confirm that those discussions are going to lead to binding votes?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes. We've had discussions with the students around fees, and there are a number of different kinds of fees that are available through the school. Some of them are directly for sporting events, for those types of things, for use of athletic facilities, and those are between the students and the schools. The fees that seem to be causing the largest amount of angst are those fees which are simply for extra costs of operations, and those do not have support from this department. We believe that the CPI modifier is the appropriate way to handle tuition.

Dr. Taft: Well, there was a glimmer of hope in the minister's comments. I'd like to follow up on them. When he indicated that those mandatory noninstructional fees that do not have a direct tie to any particular service are not supported by his department, will he, then, order colleges and universities and institutions around the province to stop that practice?

2:10

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're reluctant to simply across the board stop that practice. Right now our education system is based on access and quality, and we want to make sure that it's affordable but that the quality remains. We want to work with our institutions and with our students to make sure that we can keep those three pillars here. We don't want to tie the hands of all of our institutions, but we believe the students must be involved in helping to make those decisions, and we will continue to work with the students.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Gravel Extraction Management

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The sand and gravel rush is on in Whitecourt-St. Anne. Many applications for new projects are being made within my constituency. The overall land impacts, water impacts, and dust and noise concerns are causing a problem for my constituents. Counties are not able to respond to the issues being raised by the residents. My questions are all to the Minister of Environment. How is your department ensuring that the environment continues to be protected with the growing number of gravel pits in Alberta, especially within the Lac Ste. Anne county in my constituency?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well, first of all, the initial responsibility for zoning lies at the local level, so the municipality makes a decision whether or not to zone for a gravel pit. Once that's taken place, the applicant must follow a prescribed code of practice that is designed to protect the environment. Larger operations require licences, and in the process of approving those licence applications, there is a great deal of effort on the part of my staff . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, getting a little closer to the situation, given that the Riparia resources application is currently before the department, how will the minister ensure that the residents in the area are properly consulted so that their concerns are fully understood and considered before this application is approved?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, on this particular application I understand that we have received an application along with a secondary application under the Water Act. It's currently undergoing our comprehensive environmental review, like all applications. This is an open and transparent process that requires public notification. I understand that to date six statements of concern have been received, and our staff will take into account these statements of concern plus all of the other environmental issues in their consideration of whether or not to approve the application.

Mr. VanderBurg: Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: how is the minister ensuring that appropriate decision-making now in the absence of a regional plan under the land-use framework is done?

Mr. Renner: Well, Mr. Speaker, every application is evaluated for potential impacts on the environment. Decisions that are made today use an existing process that ensures that we have the ultimate focus on protecting the environment. Once a regional plan comes into place, I would suggest that that will help to further inform the decision-makers about the achievement of locally determined outcomes that balance both development and the environment.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Bow.

Castle Special Management Area

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In freedom to exploit Alberta, private government-sanctioned greed consistently outweighs public good. Who you know in government trumps scientific evidence. Ironically, the greatest threat to sustainability is the minister of the moment. To the Minister of Sustainable Resource Development: given the devastating environmental and economic costs of the 2003 Lost Creek fire, why would you expose the Castle to the heightened threat of tinder-dry clear-cutting this summer?

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, with respect to the region that the hon. member talks about, there has been a program in place to manage the forest land use in that region. Probably better than 50 years of commercial logging operations have been going on there. A lot of the lovely, pristine trees that these folks are looking at today are actually ones that were put in place in reforestation projects 60 years ago.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Again to the Minister of SRD: is it your ministry's master plan to deliberately wipe out naturally diverse old-growth forest in the Castle in order to create more convenient, single-species tree farms for future harvesting? And don't give me the 60-year bit.

Mr. Knight: And don't keep standing over there and pointing at me.

Mr. Speaker, the situation with respect to the Castle is that two-thirds of that area is off limits to logging in the first place. Of the remaining one-third that is available to log, only 1 per cent per year will be logged, and it must be reforested according to Alberta law.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Alberta law is limited. It's a farce.

Does the fact that 85 per cent of southern Albertans recently polled by the Lethbridge College are opposed to this government's clear-cutting of their environmental, recreational, and economic legacy mean nothing to this cut first, measure not government? Who's got your ear, Mr. Minister?

Mr. Knight: Mr. Speaker, who's got my ear is not the gentleman opposite. That was an interesting statement he made about the law in Alberta given that he's a lawmaker.

Mr. Speaker, the University of Lethbridge: we very much work with them with respect to watershed issues in the area and that type of thing. Another thing is that the studies that have been done relative to that issue and to the drainage that comes into the rivers in the area indicate that the rivers are in good-quality condition.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Bow, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Fish Population in the Bow River

Ms DeLong: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Downstream of Calgary the Bow River is one of the top trout fisheries in the whole world. Upstream as the Bow River runs through the constituency of Calgary-Bow: not so many fish. I have been told in the past that the reason there are fewer fish in my area is because the water is so clean that there are too few nutrients for the little bugs to grow, and the fish need these bugs for food. Now, a recent report has . . .

The Speaker: Sorry. The time has gone.
The hon. minister.

Mr. Knight: Well, Mr. Speaker, we had so much interest in that question, and I think I actually have not a bad answer. According to the data that we have, fish populations are not declining in the Bow River within the city limits of Calgary. Current regulations allow limited fish harvest, but the latest information I have, in the creel assessment in 2006, is that the fish quantity and quality within the city limits of Calgary have remained as they have been for a number of years.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: Thank you. A few years ago I reviewed the data regarding nutrient load in the Bow River, and as it comes through Calgary-Bow, aside from flood conditions our water quality was excellent. To the Minister of Environment: has our water quality been improving or declining?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, if the member is referring to that reach of the Bow River immediately upstream of Calgary, I would suggest that it probably has been improving since we've improved the infrastructure that's in place for the management and the treatment of municipal sewer from Canmore and Cochrane.

I also have to point out that we also need to be concerned with the health of the rivers right across the entire province. There are concerns with respect to nutrient quality . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms DeLong: No further supplementals. Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Provincial Environmental Monitoring Panel (continued)

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last week Albertans learned that a member of the oil sands monitoring panel, so touted by the Minister of Environment, is under investigation by the RCMP for criminal lobbying activities. Can the Minister of Environment explain to Albertans why he did not immediately show leadership in completely removing Bruce Carson from the panel now and in the future and, more importantly, why he won't do so now?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the last I heard is that in this country individuals are still innocent until proven guilty. I understand that allegations have been made and that an investigation is under way. Mr. Carson has offered his leave of absence. I have accepted that leave of absence pending the outcome of the investigation. I think it's a perfectly appropriate response.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that Carson's fiancée has a financial stake from which she stands to earn tens of millions of dollars in a water treatment company, a company for which he has been lobbying, and given that this company would have a financial interest in monitoring on the Athabasca River, can the minister explain how he failed to suss out this obvious conflict before appointing Carson to his panel?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, Mr. Carson was appointed to this panel in his capacity as executive director of the Canada School of Energy and Environment. It's not common practice for us to delve into that degree of personal scrutiny prior to making appointments of this nature.

Ms Notley: Well, definitely, the minister doesn't vet for conflict of interest. Given that the minister clearly doesn't vet for criminal records, will this minister admit that the only thing he does look for in his appointees to his sham of a panel is close connections to the Conservative Party?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let me repeat what I said the first time. Allegations have been made. These allegations to date have not been substantiated, and an investigation is under way. At the conclusion of that investigation appropriate action will be taken.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-MacKay.

Labour Protection for Paid Farm Workers

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A trucking company employee is in serious condition in hospital after machinery he was operating hit an overhead power line in Wetaskiwin on Saturday. To the Minister of Employment and Immigration: is occupational health and safety investigating this incident?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, it's unfortunate when any Albertan gets hurt, be it on or off the job. I am not certain of the specifics of the particular accident she is referring to, but as always I extend a welcome to this member to contact my office. As a matter of fact, come in person to my office, tell me which file you're talking about, and I'll have it checked for you right away.

Ms Pastoor: Well, given that this incident probably merits – not probably; it does merit – an OHS investigation, why is it that OHS cannot investigate the deaths of two men who were electrocuted in December when machinery they were transporting from a farm hit an overhead power line?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, it appears the member knew the answer to her first question; she just answered it, so maybe she will not want to meet with me.

The fact is that in any workplace where occupational health and safety applies, every single incident and accident is investigated duly, and the findings of those investigations are shared with my office. Again, if she is making a reference to a specific accident somewhere in Alberta, if she gives more accurate detail of which accident she is talking about, I will take a look into it.

Ms Pastoor: Well, it was a fairly publicized and fairly serious incident that happened last Saturday.

Is the safety of a farm worker worth so much less than the safety of any kind of worker in Alberta? Can the minister explain why Alberta is the only province in Canada – the only province in Canada – where farm employees are not covered in the same way by workplace laws?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, no one's life or health or safety is more important than another person's, obviously. The member knows very well that the Occupational Health and Safety Act does not apply to farms, and for that reason our minister of agriculture has put a program in place that will be assisting our farmers with matters of occupational health and safety on Alberta farms.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-MacKay, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Innovation Voucher Program

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans have heard a lot lately about the importance of innovation in the Alberta economy. Initiatives like the innovation vouchers go a long way to boost innovation among smaller Alberta companies. However, I have been contacted by constituents concerned that this valuable program is being discontinued. My question is to the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. Why is this voucher program no longer accepting applications?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The innovation voucher program was indeed a very popular program. It was launched as a pilot program. It provided 350 companies in 44 communities with $11 million to use towards innovation research. It was an extremely positive pilot. We're now reviewing that so that we can come forward with an even better program in the future, and it will be continuing to run into the future.

Ms Woo-Paw: My question is to the same minister. If the program is so positive and successful, can the minister tell us why we need the review?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It was run as a pilot program. Through the project we have heard some issues around how to access it, some players that couldn't get access, and some of the research places that didn't receive any of the vouchers. Today in Calgary at the Nanotech Showcase I spoke with a gentleman who's developing a Band-Aid that can read your body vitals and your core temperature from a distance. That can be very positive. He received a voucher, but he said that some of the companies weren't available that could do the research, and he's looking forward to the next one.

Ms Woo-Paw: Again a question to the same minister. Would companies have an opportunity to provide input to the review?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's exactly what the review will do over the next couple of months: talk to those people that receive vouchers and some of the research that was provided and see if we can make this program a little easier to access. Sometimes we put programs in, and the paperwork can be onerous. It can be difficult to fill out for some smaller companies and users. We want to make sure that this is streamlined and easy to access for Alberta companies.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill.

Patient Advocacy by Health Professionals (continued)

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, again today this government has said that no investigation is necessary for the top officials who demanded the doctor's head on a platter. This government resembles a centralized autocratic regime. Municipal officials and PC MLAs know that if they criticize the government, they will pay a price even if their concerns are totally valid. This cripples our democratic system. To the minister of health: how can you not see that intimidating our health practitioners cripples our health care system also and that a public inquiry is the only way to clear the air?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I've had an opportunity to read this letter that is being referred to, and nowhere in here do I see anyone using the term "called for the head on a platter." What I see here is someone who at the time was a physician lead, who wrote a letter asking for his colleagues to take up the cause for more mental health capacity. I can assure the member that that is going to happen. I indicated yesterday that there are 33 beds planned for the new south Calgary health campus. Thirteen of them are brand new, additional capacity beds.

Mr. Hinman: Well, there's the problem. They don't follow up. It's in the paper. The quote was there. It's been tabled. A head on the platter isn't intimidating?

Given the explicit declaration in the superboard's original code of conduct that all health workers must fall in line and the repeated corroboration that has been coming out from individuals that have been reprimanded for advocating for the patients, will the minister explain why he uses military discipline to control our 90,000-strong army of health care workers?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Well, Mr. Speaker, I think it's time for even that member in that party to get into the present tense. There is no such muzzling order in effect. What there is is an open policy that is now a duty to disclosure policy, so why they keep raising things from the past and inferring that they're still in place or perhaps never were in place I don't know. The fact is that today it's an open, transparent process that encourages doctors, nurses, and other health providers to speak out. You know what? They're listening, and they're responding appropriately.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, this is a 1970s horror show. Triple D: deny, deny, deny. Given how many times the opposition has pointed this out to him, does the minister still not realize that the Health Quality Council is only capable of investigating health quality concerns, that the multiple allegations of workplace intimidation coming from the top of the health department calls for a public inquiry and a full . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think the Health Quality Council has made it very clear that they have set precedent in this particular case because they have gone out there and designed their own terms of reference, and very soon we're expecting them to tell us who their panel members are going to be. None of us knows who that is. They're going to tell us who their health advisers might be.

I would warn this member to not mislead, miscommunicate, and misappropriate statements.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-North Hill, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Buffalo.

Education Property Tax

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today many Calgarians are wondering why they thought they were getting a cut in property tax only to find out the city of Calgary is moving in on the available tax base. This has many people scratching their heads, from taxpayers to school boards. My question is to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Has the government changed its policy on the collection of revenue via property tax so that municipalities like Calgary can collect more revenue?

Mr. Snelgrove: Well, Mr. Speaker, the answer is no. We determine the amount of money that we're going to collect on behalf of Education, and we assess that equitably across Alberta municipalities. Whatever reason the city of Calgary feels it needs to raise taxes is a complete issue between the residents of the city of Calgary and their city council.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Fawcett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the reduced revenues have caused challenges to the provincial budget and given that Calgary taxpayers are not seeing a break in their property taxes this year, does the minister not think it's prudent to change this particular policy at this time?

2:30

Mr. Snelgrove: No. That was my first answer.

Mr. Speaker, we committed years ago to a tax structure around education that commits only to growth, and that's approximately 2 and a half per cent that we're adding this year. That is not to suggest that the city of Calgary isn't responsible to its own citizens or residents for its tax base. Whether they would assume it's because we didn't charge as much as we could have for education or for whatever reason, they are separate issues.

The Speaker: The hon. member. Third question.

Mr. Fawcett: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My next question is to the Minister of Education. Given that the province is leaving $47 million available in property tax revenue in Calgary and given that the Calgary board of education is facing close to a $50 million shortfall in its budget, is the minister still committed to the policy that the education portion of the property tax is to provide basic support for Alberta's K to 12 education system?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The education property tax provides about 30 per cent of the cost of basic education to the system. It's not the full cost; it's about 30 per cent of it. It's about $602 million from the city of Calgary during the 2011 year of the $1.27 billion in provincial funding.

The reality is that in our education property tax we have increased the amount collected by the growth in assessment, not by the inflation value. I don't think citizens in Calgary would want us to grow our education property tax assessment because the value of their property grew by way of inflation. I think they would expect that we would capture that same tax from the growth in the assessment roll because of new houses and new businesses.

Education Funding

Mr. Hehr: Mr. Speaker, like I indicated yesterday, the Education budget reads like an insurance agreement in that what the large print giveth, the small print taketh away. A 4.7 per cent increase in the top line looks impressive until cuts to school board grants are factored in. To the Minister of Education. School boards have indicated the results of cuts to the rural sustainability initiative and cuts to AISI. Teachers will have to be let go, and this will lead to higher student to teacher ratios in the classroom. Does the minister deny that this is a result of his budget?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, that could well be a result of the budget. There's no question that while the budget was increased by 4.7 per cent, which is an incredible amount of increase to the budget in any department, that's only $258 million – only $258 million – and in order to cover all the costs that are on the table, we needed about $363 million. So we had to find targeted grants in the amount of about $107 million. That is going to have an impact. When 98 per cent of our budget goes through the school boards, it will have an impact. But the other side of this equation is . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Hehr: Given that the rural stabilization grant cuts will force schools like the one in Lougheed to close down and this will force kids to go to school in another jurisdiction, my question is again for the Education minister. How long of a school bus ride to the next community is acceptable to this minister?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, how long of a school bus ride is acceptable is really a question for the local community. In my particular case I wouldn't want a child to have to ride for more than an hour any way, but that's my personal view.

The premise of the question is wrong. The budget is not forcing anybody to close a school. School boards decide the priority for their funding. School boards across the province have in excess of $300 million of operating surplus, and if it's their priority, they can keep the schools open.

Mr. Hehr: The premise of the question is: who is providing the money for our local school boards? Is that you, Mr. Minister? If it is, are you providing them with ample funding?

Mr. Hancock: Well, I don't have that kind of money, Mr. Speaker, but the Alberta taxpayer wants to support education in this province and does support education in this province well, to the tune of $6.2 billion a year. If you add the opted out, it's probably up around $6.4 billion a year. It's an incredible amount of money for a very, very important function; that is, making sure that each and every child has an opportunity for a good education. We do have local school boards, and it's their job to make sure that the education system operates well for their local students.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Manning, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Foreign Qualifications and Credentials

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A newly released report by the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives talks about visible minorities in the workforce, and it says that on the whole they earn less than white Canadians. My first question is to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Why do we encourage immigrants to come to Alberta if they are not going to be successful in the workforce?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, we encourage immigrants to come to Alberta because we know for a fact that we're walking into a perfect storm relative to worker shortages for many years to come. If we want to continue to enjoy the lifestyle that we have right now and the services that are available to us, we will need workers, and many of them will come from outside. But we also work very hard to make sure that the pay and the conditions under which, frankly, all Albertans work are equitable to all.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Sandhu: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second question is also to the same minister. I get questions from many people saying that they are frustrated with the job market, where employers tell them that they don't have Canadian work experience and qualifications. To the minister: what's your ministry doing to help skilled, educated newcomers get their qualifications and experience recognized?

Mr. Lukaszuk: That's a very good question, Mr. Speaker. In conjunction with various governing bodies like colleges and institutes that govern professions, we work on foreign credentials recognition to make sure that every immigrant works to his or her maximum capacity. At the same time, there is great room for improvement on the federal side to make sure that we inform prospective immigrants whether their credentials will or will not be recognized here in Canada upon their arrival.

Mr. Sandhu: My last question is also to the same minister. Does this mean that foreign-trained engineers, doctors, accountants, and other highly skilled professionals can stop working at entry-level jobs unrelated to their professions?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Mr. Speaker, not necessarily in all cases, but provincial programs are put in place that allow foreign-trained professionals like medical doctors to be assessed and when shortcomings are detected, to avail themselves of additional education to one day meet our Canadian standards. At the end of the day – and I'm sure our minister of health would agree – we have to have a balance of recognizing foreign credentials but, at the same time, not jeopardizing the quality of care that Albertans receive in our hospitals. It's a difficult balance to strike, but at the end of the day, again, we will continue to attract immigrants and make sure that they work to the maximum of their ability.

Funding for Police Officers

Mr. MacDonald: Last week a convicted murderer escaped from the federal prison in Drumheller, stole a vehicle, held two women hostage, then had a shootout with police. The Solicitor General has said that he found this four-day rampage concerning and a reason for pushing the federal government on its crime legislation. To the Solicitor General, please. This incident was not about gaps in the law; it was about getting police out to stop serious crime. Why is this minister passing the buck to the federal government?

Mr. Oberle: I'm doing no such thing, Mr. Speaker. The fact of the matter is that the inmate was in federal custody and was under escort of a federal agent. It happened in our province. I have expressed my concern that it happened in our province, and I am seeking a comment from the federal minister on how it happened and how we might be able to avoid such incidents in the future.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Again to the same minister: given that Stats Canada data show that to the end of 2010 Alberta ranked 12th out of 13 provinces and territories for the number of police officers relative to population, why is the Solicitor General looking to federal government laws instead of solving the problem right here on the ground in this province by hiring more police officers?

Mr. Oberle: Well, I might point out, Mr. Speaker, that the member's statistics are wrong. We've had this debate before; we'll probably have it in estimates again. He should be prepared to explain why our crime statistics are going down under our current police force.

Yet again I would point out to him that it was not a police officer that was escorting this prisoner. The fact that the prisoner escaped has absolutely nothing to do with the number of police that we have in the province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Stats Canada information is here, for your interest.

Again to the same minister. Being taken hostage in your own home should be more than just concerning. It strikes at the heart of our cherished belief that we should be safe in our own homes. What is the Solicitor General doing to bring policing to a level that will protect Albertans from being taken hostage in their own home?

Mr. Oberle: Well, that's precisely why that member, Mr. Speaker, wouldn't accomplish anything with his query. The number of police officers in our province has absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with the fact that a criminal escaped. I am deeply concerned that a criminal escaped. I'm going to take it up with the federal minister, the only avenue I have to solve the problem.

The Speaker: Well, 19 members were recognized today. There were 112 questions and responses.

I would like to point out that there has been some creeping in here of preambles on the second or the third questions. That's pretty noticeable today, and that seems to then give rise to a lot of increased volatility and emotion because it tends to be debate and argumentative. We were doing okay Thursday and yesterday, so let's see if tomorrow we can come back and try it again. Okay? This creeping in is really not that healthy.

In a few seconds from now we'll continue with the Routine. We're making good progress today.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to bring notice that under Standing Order 30 we'll request leave to adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the need for a public inquiry, the urgency of debating whether there is a need for a public inquiry given new revelations that have come . . .

The Speaker: I think you had better read into the record your motion. That's the only thing we're talking about.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Sorry, Mr. Speaker.

Pursuant to Standing Order 30 be it resolved that the ordinary business of the Legislative Assembly be adjourned to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, that given new evidence from health professionals concerning threats to their careers that follow from public advocacy for patients, in particular the release of a letter by Dr. Lloyd Maybaum containing an explicit threat from his superior in 2008, the government needs to immediately appoint a commission under the Public Inquiries Act to investigate allegations that health care professionals may have been intimidated or faced the loss of employment or professional certification or had their character or mental health questioned unfairly in order to prevent them from speaking out publicly about deficiencies in the delivery of health care and, further, that individuals may have received payments from public health authorities in exchange for their silence.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. member, it's also appropriate that copies be prepared and available for all members of the House. Table officers have advised me they have not been notified that you will be providing the appropriate number of copies, in this case being 90. You'll have to have them here in a couple of minutes from now.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Bill 16

Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill 16, Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2011.

This bill supports the important work of both the Alberta Utilities Commission, the AUC, and the Energy Resources Conservation Board, the ERCB.

Amendments will update existing legislation to authorize the regulation of extraction of coal through in situ gasification or liquefaction. Further amendments will remove duplication in approval requirements for the use of large amounts of energy for industrial and manufacturing operations and will enable the ERCB to make regulations and to approve amendments to coal permits in line with other industries that the ERCB regulates. Other amendments support the effective functioning of the electricity market in ensuring service quality to utility consumers.

Mr. Speaker, I move first reading of Bill 16 and encourage all members to support its passage. Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill 16 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Government House Leader.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd move that Bill 16 be moved onto the Order Paper under Government Bills and Orders.

[Motion carried]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Blakeman: Sir, can I table on his behalf, please?

The Speaker: Proceed.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Two tablings on behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition, and then I'll ask permission to continue and do my own tablings.

The first is referencing tablings we tried to do yesterday, so this is a letter from the United Nurses of Alberta signed by Karen Craik and Jane Sustrik. They are concerned that there was no serious investigation and that the dismissal of a complaint was completed without even interviewing the complainants, and they feel that this is a very serious problem.

The second is in reference to comments that the Leader of the Official Opposition made today, and that is Wait Times in Canada: A Comparison by Province, 2011, from the Canadian Institute for Health Information. This was released in March of 2011, the appropriate number of copies of that.

May I continue with my own tablings?

The Speaker: Yes.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two additional tablings. One is a tabling to correct a tabling I did before in which I did not include the e-mail header that showed that this was an e-mail. Again, it is from Naomi Fridhandler, who is a U of A medical student who wrote me with her concerns about the potential loss of funding for the Alberta Medical Association's physician and family support program. This is through the negotiations between the Alberta Medical Association and the government. I will table those documents again.

Finally, my second tabling is notification of a rally here at the Legislative Assembly for Saturday, March 26, at 1 p.m., which is people interested in health asking for a public inquiry now. They can contact Friends of Medicare for additional information.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Hon. Government House Leader, when the Premier was speaking today, there were documents to be tabled, as I recall.

Mr. Hancock: Yes, indeed, Mr. Speaker. I table on his behalf the appropriate number of copies of a document entitled Time for a Truce in Health-care Debate. It's a digital version of a copy of a letter published in the Edmonton Journal on March 22 at page A19 in the letters section, final edition, from Dr. Ameeta Singh, and it includes the quote that the Premier referenced.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, as I recall, you quoted from a letter. Kindly table it.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I provide the requisite number of copies. In question period this afternoon, as was indicated earlier, with the minister of health an exchange took place, and the quotation was where Dr. Maybaum said that he was told to keep quiet and that there were people high up in the government who want his head on a platter. I submit them today.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have four sets of tablings today concerning the Castle, the first of which includes the authors and articles I referenced in my member's statement as well as a more recently published article by Trevor Howell and one by Susan Quinlan of the Prairie Post entitled Parks Legislation under Revision, Drawing Concern.

My second set of tablings is an e-mail from Juergen Boden of Oststeinbek, Germany, who is seeking the preservation of the Castle wilderness by stating:

We here at Alouette Verlag – Book and Film Productions – are in strict opposition of your plans to undertake block-cut logging in this unique wilderness place as it is of irreplaceable spiritual, ecological and recreational value for all Canadians and for all visitors from abroad.

My third set, Mr. Speaker, has to do with the following individuals who share Mr. Boden's concerns regarding the Alberta government's exploitation of the Castle. The individuals include Taylor Will, Shawna Edworthy, Leslie Stastook, Sue Sargent, Jenny Ferguson, Alexandra Shriner, Jessica Eustace, Mark Matheson, Nyk Danu, Erica Heuer, Shizu Futa, Chelsea Vignola, Robyn Duncan, Linda Rae, Peter Herrmann, Dana Rothkop, Dr. Emma Griffiths, Sanne van der Ros, Chelsea Boida, Dana Armitage, Laura Dupont, Betty McInnes, Melissa Lawrence, Anita Romaniuk, and Phillip Sorbetti.

2:50

Mr. Speaker, my last set involves Jeremy Kurtz, Debra Yendall, Robert Klei, John Postma, Cecilie Davidson, Harold Funk, David Feeny, Sheila Winder, Paul Falvo, Emma Pike, Mark Essiembre, Jennifer Groot, Sue Maxwell, Sarah Fletcher, Lesley Willows, Carol Zhong, Susan Bull, Mary Gorecki, Bob Stuart, Margaret Kennedy, Dianne Olmstead, Rita MacDonald, Senan Griffin, Walter Mirosh, and Marjorie Larson, all concerned about the Castle.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have the appropriate number of copies and would like to table a program. Immigrant Services Calgary had a wonderful gala, called the immigrants of distinction awards, on the 19th of March, 2011, down in Calgary. I had the honour of attending. The contribution and the recognition of the various immigrants that have come to Alberta recently – and some of them have even been here for quite some time. The contribution that they've made: it's just incredible. I think that the Members of the Legislative Assembly would find it quite intriguing to read.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A couple of tablings. Earlier during questions to me there was a reference to a report, Canada's Colour Coded Labour Market, on the gap between salaries of Caucasian and non-Caucasian immigrants to Canada. I'd like to table copies of that particular report.

Also, a copy of a letter that I issued to the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo in response to his letter, as he tabled, outlining the wide scope of services that our office in Fort McMurray has been and continues to offer not only to all residents in Fort McMurray but particularly to those affected in the condo and also inviting him to stop over in Fort McMurray one day to visit our staff and perhaps express his gratitude for the same.

Request for Emergency Debate

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, please proceed with your Standing Order 30 application, with brief arguments in favour of urgency.

Patient Advocacy by Health Professionals

Mr. Anderson: Yes. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is my first Standing Order 30, so please bear with me. I will try to do my best.

Standing Order 30(1), of course, states:

After the daily routine and before the Orders of the Day, any Member may request leave to move to adjourn the ordinary business of the Assembly to discuss a matter of urgent public importance when written notice has been given to the Speaker at least 2 hours prior to the sitting of the Assembly.

As I understand it, the question here is: is this matter that we are bringing forward here of urgent public importance? Is there public importance, and is it urgent? Or can we discuss this at other times and places in the Legislature during session here?

The reason that we in the Wildrose feel that it is of urgent public importance is – I don't think the public importance part is in dispute. I think, obviously, we're talking about health care. We're talking about a crisis of confidence in the system, with all these different doctors and individuals coming forward and saying that they've been intimidated into not advocating for their patients. That's well documented. I do think that it is important, and we see this with the government's own actions by calling for an Alberta Health Quality Council review. So I don't think public importance is too much of the issue here.

What I do think is the issue and what there may be a debate over is the urgency, especially given that we did have a debate on a different motion, put forth by the Liberal caucus last week, last Monday actually. We also had submitted a notice of Standing Order 30 at that time, too, but you can only debate one in a day. So we debated for about an hour and a half the issue that the Liberals brought forward, and it was a good debate.

Now, aside from the fact that we don't think there was enough time during that debate – but that's not at issue here – the problem is that since that debate took place last Monday, there has been literally an avalanche of new information, new revelation that has come forward that was not known at the time that we had the debate.

For example, last Monday the only thing that we had, really, was the allegations by Dr. McNamee in a somewhat older statement of claim that he had been essentially bullied, intimidated, essentially let go for advocating on behalf of his patients. We had that document. There were some other doctors who were off the record saying a few things, which are very serious allegations, but there was nothing, really, other than that. There wasn't all that much besides that. We also had, of course, at that time, obviously, what happened with the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark last fall as well as what happened to the Leader of the Opposition while he was in Medicine Hat.

We had these kinds of past issues that were dealt with and that we discussed in that emergency debate on Monday, but since then, I would submit, the evidence has compounded greatly, to the point where we have, of course, as has been tabled earlier in this House, the AMA, the Alberta Medical Association, coming forward with two letters. The first, given a few days ago, on the 14th, said that for the first time ever the government had resorted to intimidation tactics to get the AMA to agree to the government agreement.

There was a letter a couple of days later, also from the AMA, that's also been tabled in this Legislature, that specifically noted that there needs to be a clearing of the air and that they fully supported a public inquiry and would co-operate should one be called. That's the AMA, representing doctors and our physicians as a whole. It is, obviously, very problematic if you have, essentially, the body that represents the physicians in Alberta saying that there needs to be a clearing of the air publicly. If we do not clear the air, if we refuse at this point to have a full public inquiry, I think that I could say that the people that we're talking to, the people that I know other opposition parties are talking to, would feel that there is truly a crisis of confidence in the health care system, not just by the public but by the very doctors that work in the system. How can we go forward in that way? That is one of the major things that has changed since last week.

The other thing that I think has created some urgency, Mr. Speaker, between last Monday's debate and where we sit today, eight days later, is the letter, the smoking gun, brought forward by Dr. Lloyd Maybaum. The letter – and that's been tabled in this Legislature as well – clearly threatens his position within Alberta Health Services. It was written by a member of Alberta Health Services who is now a very senior AHS official in the area of mental health and addictions. To have that person still at AHS after writing this letter – now, we don't know who directed that individual to write that letter. We don't have a clue about that.

The thing is, Mr. Speaker, that unless we have a debate today and determine whether or not – we'd have to understand how we're going to get to that information, or else we'll never know, and these intimidation tactics will continue. Clearly, we have to debate whether the Alberta Health Quality Council is the right forum to get at that information or if a full independent public inquiry, with powers of subpoena and the ability to compel evidence, et cetera, is the right vehicle to go forward on this. I won't make arguments on that because that's not what we're debating right here, but we absolutely have to have that debate as we move forward.

The other major and, I think, frankly, scary thing that has come up since last week is, again, the same Dr. Maybaum, who quotes a senior health official in Calgary telling him that there are people high up in the government – it doesn't even say health officials; it just says high up in the government – who want his head on a platter. The Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo just tabled that document a few minutes ago. That's a very threatening and menacing tone. It is very recent. This is around 2008, so it involves the sitting government. It happened during the time that the current administration was elected. It is very important that we get to the bottom of this.

Again, we did not have any of this information prior to last week. Of course, there are others since last week, and I'm only going to go there because . . .

The Speaker: Hon. member, please. I have now given you the liberty of eight minutes to briefly state your case about the urgency. If, in fact, Standing Order 30 was upheld, you would have a maximum of 10 minutes to speak. On the argument for urgency you have spent eight. Is there additional information you have to provide to deal with the question of urgency?

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will wrap up, then. Very quickly, on the issue of urgency there are many doctors that are coming forward not only to us but to other opposition parties as well as having been quoted in numerous reports, saying that they cannot and will not come forward unless there is a full public inquiry. My fear is that if we don't have this debate today and if we don't settle this issue and give them a forum in which they can come forward, we will lose the opportunity that we have right now, right this second, where doctors are finally willing to come forward and talk about this on the record.

If we don't do this today, if we continue to delay, I fear that the intimidation tactics will continue. These doctors, in order to save their careers and to be able to get the operating time that they need, et cetera, will slide back into the shadows and will forever not testify before a full public inquiry. So those are my arguments on urgency, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Can I have some idea as to how many individuals would like to participate in this? The standing orders are very clear:

The Member may briefly state the arguments in favour of the request for leave and the Speaker may allow such debate as he or she considers relevant to the question of urgency of debate and shall then rule on whether or not the request for leave is in order.

So can I get some idea of how many want to participate? No. Sorry. I'll accept two speakers: the Government House Leader and the Opposition House Leader. Briefly, please, on urgency.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was tempted to intervene earlier, but I just got the notice of motion, actually, quite late in the process, which in itself is a departure from the normal process.

Under Standing Order 30(7)(d) "the motion must not revive discussion on a matter that has been discussed in the same session pursuant to this Standing Order." Very clearly, this is on exactly the same topic. In fact, the hon. member in his comments referenced the fact that we had this debate one week earlier, but he didn't have as much information to say at that time. He wants another opportunity on the same discussion so that he can bring forward more information. He might have more information, but it is the same discussion, and it's out of order to have a Standing Order 30 motion that revives discussion on a matter that has been discussed in the same session pursuant to this standing order.

The Speaker will recall that on March 14 – and it's referenced in Hansard issue 12, page 328 – the motion was that new evidence has surfaced, almost the same language, "demonstrating that the government silenced critics of the health care system, thereby contributing to the crisis in Alberta's health care." It's exactly the same language as the hon. member used in supporting the need for another opportunity for him to discuss and for this House to discuss exactly the same issue that was debated on March 14.

Mr. Speaker, the motion is out of order under our standing orders. It's clearly out of order under our standing orders.

The hon. member, as you pointed out, in his rather lengthy short process to suggest urgency goes on to misquote some of the letters that have been tabled in the House – they've been tabled in the House, and they've now been available for people to read for a week; he still can't read them – saying that the AMA in their second letter fully supported a public inquiry. Well, they didn't. It's clear on the surface of it.

The short of it is, Mr. Speaker, that there is a public investigation happening through the Health Quality Council. There is an opportunity for all of the information to come forward to the Health Quality Council. The terms of reference of the Health Quality Council inquiry have been made public. The opportunity is there for any person who's an employee of Alberta Health Services or who otherwise operates in the health system to go before the Health Quality Council. An interim report will be made public in three months, a subsequent report in six months, and a final report in nine months. There will be opportunity to discern this once the information is actually known rather than the allegations that are being brought forward. There's plenty of time to deal with this issue if there is an issue.

The short of it is that we had an emergency debate on this a week ago, and it's not in order to have another one today.

The Speaker: The hon. Opposition House Leader.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, there was a debate a week ago. That's clearly on the record. But equally on the record through tablings and other means of raising the issue is that there have been quite a stack, a litany of new things to consider along with this issue.

I just want to address what appears in 387, where it's asking that there should be no other reasonable opportunity for debate on this particular issue. That contributes to the urgency of having the debate now in that we have had no bill debate come before us in which we could have done this. There's been no government motion in which we could have discussed it although we did manage to have a government motion to discuss interfering in another level of government, so clearly there was time to do that.

But there was no government motion to discuss a public inquiry in health care. There was no private member's bill or motion on the Order Paper. The appropriation bill was for interim supply and was limited in the amount of debate that was allocated for that in that the government had the power to and did in fact call adjournment to the speakers and then brought it back for a vote later. There were not written questions or motions for returns on this issue, and it would take us three weeks to get one through the process in order to have it up. So it's impossible for us to do that now.

A number of questions were raised in question period, but I am very mindful of the number of times the Speaker has reminded us that question period is not to provoke debate and that, therefore, that is an inappropriate place to discuss the complexity of the issue before us.

Having just raised the context of, "Where else could we have discussed this?" there is a debate coming on the ministry of health, but, Mr. Speaker, that is not for some three weeks, almost four weeks from now. Given the speed at which things have changed on this issue, I would have to say that three weeks away is far too long to wait in order to be able to have a serious conversation about the additional allegations that have been brought forward and personal commentary and testimonials that have come forward in the last seven days. Clearly, the urgency of the issue is mounting.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: Thank you very much, hon. member, for the brevity with which you addressed this matter. That's very much appreciated.

I say that, hon. members, because there is a Routine this afternoon. The standing orders suggest that should there be an estimate this afternoon, which there will be, a minimum of three hours must be addressed to that estimate. So if it takes me five minutes now to deal with this, then presumably your estimate will start at 3:15 and it would not curtail itself until at least 6:15, which would then set that the next segment tonight, which has to be 30 minutes thereafter, would not be able to commence until at least 6:45, which means that you would be here till at least 9:45. Time is important, and I value your attendance in the House.

I am prepared to rule on whether the request for leave on this motion to proceed is in order under Standing Order 30(2). The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere did meet the requirements of providing at least two hours' notice to my office by providing the required words to me at 11:23 this morning, March 22, 2011.

As I've indicated many times before in these interventions, the relevant parliamentary authorities on this subject are pages 689 to 696, House of Commons Procedure and Practice, second edition, and Beauchesne's, paragraphs 387 to 390.

Hon. members, last Monday, March 14, 2011, this Assembly adjourned the ordinary business to discuss a matter of urgent public importance under Standing Order 30. The motion from last Monday can be found at Alberta Hansard for that day at page 328, and it read as follows:

Pursuant to Standing Order 30 be it resolved that the ordinary business of the Legislative Assembly be adjourned to discuss a matter of urgent public importance; namely, the new evidence that has surfaced demonstrating that the government silenced critics of the health care system, thereby undermining confidence in public health and contributing to the crisis in Alberta's health care system.

Standing Order 30(7)(d), which has been alluded to, states that one of the applicable conditions for a request under this standing order is that "the motion must not revive discussion on a matter that has been discussed in the same session pursuant to this Standing Order."

I recognize that the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere is trying to cast his request in a different light than the motion by the Member for Edmonton-Centre last week, but in the chair's view it is substantially the same issue and, therefore, out of order.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere as well in his remarks this afternoon basically said that there was need for a decision and a decision made today with respect to the matter, but Standing Order 30(6) clearly states, "An emergency debate does not entail any decision of the Assembly."

The chair refers members who are interested in previous rulings concerning the application of Standing Order 30(7)(d) to Alberta Hansard for July 20, 1989, at page 890, and to November 17, 2005, at pages 1718 to 1719.

Furthermore – and I repeat it again – this motion would seem to entail a decision of the Assembly if it was permitted to proceed, which violates Standing Order 30(6). And there are very applicable words in there, the need "to immediately appoint a commission."

Accordingly, the chair does not find the request for leave in order under the Assembly's rules, and the question will not be put.

Orders of the Day

Committee of Supply

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

The Chair: Hon. members, the chair would like to call the Committee of Supply to order.

Main Estimates 2011-12

Environment

The Chair: Hon. Minister of Environment, please, you have the floor now.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. First of all, I would like to thank my staff for joining me here this afternoon. I'm looking forward to the next three hours: talking about some of the great things that are under way in Environment, clarifying some comments and questions that the members of the House might have, and hopefully cajoling all the members of this committee into recommending the support of my budget when the appropriate time comes.

Just before we get into some brief introductory comments, I would like to take a moment to introduce all the folks that have joined me here this afternoon. To my immediate right is Mr. Jim Ellis, deputy minister. Next to him is Mr. Bob Barraclough, assistant deputy minister of monitoring and science. Bob is the newest ADM, that was appointed to take on our newly created division of monitoring and science. Next to him is Mike Dalrymple, senior financial officer. Next to Mike is Ernie Hui, assistant deputy minister of policy. To my left is Ms Bev Yee, assistant deputy minister for strategy; Mr. Rick Brown, assistant deputy minister responsible for operations; and finally, Mr. Al Sanderson, who's the assistant deputy minister responsible for corporate services.

Also joining us in the members' gallery: Mr. Jeff Kasbrick, my executive assistant; Mr. Josh McGregor, special assistant to the minister for my office; Erin Carrier, acting director of communications; Martin Krezalek, executive director to the deputy minister; and Shelly Little, section head, financial planning and reporting.

Mr. Chairman, I want to just briefly begin things by expressing my confidence that we continue to operate effectively within the allocated budget, maintaining our commitment to protecting the environment that Albertans hold so very dear. Committee members may notice that Environment's overall budget has decreased to $290 million this year, compared to last year's $308 million. I do want to take a few moments to talk about how that came about, and then we can get into it in a little bit more detail a little bit later.

I also want to point out, you may have noticed, that we have reorganized the department. In previous years I expressed frustration that I didn't think that the department was organized to the point where it made strategic sense, and that has been rectified. The budget has been rejigged as best as possible so that we can have true comparables from one year to the next. So where people have been moved around, we took the dollars with them. I think that you will find that for the most part the comparables make sense, and we can deal with those questions throughout. The 2011 budget has been updated to reflect that structure. The new organizational design streamlines our operations and will ultimately improve environmental management across the province.

I also want to point out that water for life no longer has its own line item within the budget. It's included among a number of divisional budgets, but I can assure all members that we remain committed to the strategy, which includes implementing a provincial wetlands policy.

Our priority areas for the 2011 budget: $121 million for climate change, that includes $68 million for the climate change and emissions management fund – that is what we expect to collect this year – and $51 million for projects under the Canada ecotrust for clean air and climate change fund. We have $97 million for ongoing environmental operations programs – that includes compliance, enforcement, regulatory work, and approvals – and $22 million of nonvoted operating amortization of the water infrastructure throughout the province of Alberta. There is $17 million for monitoring, science, and reporting. That's a 21 per cent increase over last year. It will support the development of a world-class environmental monitoring system that is now being developed by an independent monitoring panel, that will be providing their recommendations in June of this year.

The budget also includes $18.9 million for water for life. As I mentioned earlier, it is divided out among a number of different divisions within the budget. Cross ministry there is about $25 million in the government of Alberta budget that can be directly attributed to water for life.

We also have $190 million in Alberta's capital plan to support drinking water and waste water. That is not in my budget – that is in the Transportation budget – but it's a significant part of what we do in Alberta Environment.

I mentioned that we have an overall decrease in our budget this year, $10 million less than last year. Nine and a half million for that is the Bassano dam settlement. So the budget-to-budget drop is actually $18 million. Our budget is $18 million less than it was last year because we had an increase for the Bassano dam settlement that was added into the budget. The reason for that is quite simple: less money was paid than forecast into the climate change and emissions management funds. That's good news. That means that more facilities are improving their operations or purchasing offsets under our CO<sub>2</sub> management program.

We also include in this budget $1.1 million for the Bassano dam for access payment and $9.5 million for discontinuance of claims and litigation by Siksika in the first annual access payment. I need to point out that the Bassano dam is really a crucial piece of Alberta's water management infrastructure. This settlement involves the Alberta government, the federal government, as well as the Eastern irrigation district. It secures water supply for many Albertans and secures the historical wrong that goes all the way back to 1910, when land was taken from the Siksika First Nation for the construction of the dam. All payments are not yet paid and are awaiting federal approval, but we're confident that that will take place.

Our budget protects our core programs, takes action on strategic priorities, and shows that we are being fiscally responsible with Albertans' tax dollars.

With that, Mr. Chairman, I'm more than happy to take questions. I understand it's the practice of this committee that the first period of time is allocated to the Official Opposition. I would be more than willing to engage in a to-and-fro if that's the wish, but I leave that up to the Member for Edmonton-Centre.

The Chair: The next hour is allocated to the Official Opposition, and like the minister said, there will be a dialogue between you two. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. I just want to express my appreciation to the staff members from the Department of Environment that have joined us on the floor and have joined us in the gallery. I know that sometimes this is regarded as not your favourite day. Nonetheless, I understand how hard you work and how dedicated you are to environmental stewardship in this province, and I do appreciate it.

I'd also like to express my appreciation to Avril McCalla, who's joining me on the floor today. She is responsible for approximately half of the portfolio research that we are currently doing in the Official Opposition, so I'm very grateful to have her on the floor with me today, seeing as she has about 11 other ministries to be looking after at exactly the same time.

Cutting right to the chase, as you all know I like to do: tough year for credibility around the government and protection of the environment. What I want to do today is ask a few questions. I'm more than willing, by the way, Mr. Chair, to engage in a back and forth for the 60 minutes' time that we have. What I'd like to do is ask a few general questions about the budget and then talk about monitoring, tailings ponds management and reclamation, water, emergency response, climate change and the climate change emissions management program, alternative energy, including energy conservation and energy efficiency, cumulative effects management. Then I've got some odds and sods if we get there, and if we don't, I'll just pass the list on to you.

Let me try going through that first list of questions. I'm referencing page 142 of the estimates. As we look back and forward at a tendency here, between 2008-09 and this year of '11-12 we saw a fairly significant increase in the total budget for Environment and then a kind of slower but steady decline. I'm wondering, given how important the environment is and our good name internationally, why there hasn't been better support – and this might be a difficult for the minister to answer – for a plateauing of his budget rather than a decrease of his budget given the recession that we were in.

The second question in that series. There was a forecast last year of it looks to us like $227.8 million, but the actual amount was quite a bit less, at $199.7 million. So what money didn't get spent last year, and did that stay the same this year? Did it get replenished, or did it stay at the same of whatever got cut out of the previous year? I'm a little concerned that stuff has been cut quite a bit, and then it's going to stay at that level. That's part of the trouble that we're experiencing in health care right now, so I don't want to see the same trend.

There's also a great deal of fluctuation between the actuals and the budgeted amounts over the last couple of years. I'm wondering: is there a particular reason why this budget is fluctuating consistently over the years?

Now, I've just got one more question in that series. Under section 2 of the estimates, under Policy, the $74.8 million: how exactly is this policy money spent? What do Albertans get for it? How exactly is it broken down? I mean, clearly, we can see some general categories there, but I have no idea what programs are included in that or aren't included in that.

I will let the minister just answer some of those questions very quickly.

Mr. Renner: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I want to begin with some general comments. The member pointed out that our budget has climbed and appears to have dropped. I tried to explain that in my opening comments; I don't think I did a very good job. I want to point out that the reason why there are changes in our budget is because of the magnitude of some of the one-time charges that come into our budget.

I talked about the ecotrust fund. This was an injection of dollars that were federal dollars that basically passed through our budget. We are over time allocating and expending those dollars, and as we run out of that fund, those dollars are no longer reflected in our budget. Those dollars are not used to pay for costs of operating Alberta Environment's budget. We made very, very clear to our staff that we didn't want to compromise our ability to do the work of the department by taking some of these one-time federal dollars and becoming dependent upon them within the department. That would be the reason why it would appear that the dollars are going less, because the amount of funding that's coming out of there is less.

3:30

The other reason, as I explained, was that this year the estimate for the emissions management fund is about $10 million less than it was last year. That, too, is a flow-through fund. Dollars come in; dollars go out. We are estimating that the amount that we collect will be less because we're seeing higher than anticipated take-up on some of our programs that were developed here in Alberta for offset credits. So rather than paying the $15 a tonne into our compliance fund, some of the designated emitters are finding opportunities to buy offsets. It's good news. They're Alberta-based offsets. That was the reason why we put the program in there in the first place. But those dollars, then, don't end up coming through our budget.

Then, finally, I did explain that last year we had included some of the settlement costs for the Bassano dam. They actually went through in supplemental estimates; we just dealt with them a while ago. But they have to be reflected in the reporting for last year. When we report what we expect the forecast is going to be, we include those dollars because we expect that they will be expended in last year's budget. Those were, again, one time. They do not affect our ability to continue to operate the department for our operations side.

The member also talked specifically about the policy side of our department. There are, as you can see outlined on lines 2.1 through to 2.5, five different areas where these dollars are allocated.

Air, land, and waste policy is geared primarily toward policy development, so the kind of things we do there is to provide leadership and policy advice for the development of the air quality management system. That's something that we've been doing on a national basis. Alberta has been taking the lead in developing the air quality management system. We collaborate with the federal government and the provinces to implement that program. It supports the development of air plans that feed into the land-use framework. So although we are not the ministry responsible for Alberta land stewardship, we will be responsible for providing the scientific input for the development of air and water limits and triggers along the way. It supports the development and implementation of the greening government strategy, continues to implement our Too Good To Waste strategy. I won't go on because I've got a lot here.

The other, 2.2, is climate change. Under climate change there is the technology fund, the emissions management fund. The flow-through amount is included in that climate change. It also includes our conservation energy efficiency programs that are reflected in there. The other main one, I think, would be that it also includes Ecotrust, that I talked about a little bit earlier. Again, that's fairly reflective of the discussion that we've been having.

Item 2.3 is clean energy. That's to address the cumulative effects on the oil sands region by developing strategies, management frameworks, and policies to support the lower Athabasca regional plan.

Policy innovation: the work that is currently under way to support Alberta Energy in establishing a single regulator and a systematic common risk and management approach.

Finally, the water policy is for reviewing and renewing the water policy framework for the upstream oil and gas sector in support of enhancing Alberta's regulatory system and preparing our water management policy and systems for water events such floods, droughts, and shortages, including responsive water allocation systems.

So a number of the programs that we've had discussion on that are involving the actual development or application of policy would be included in this division.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much to the minister for those answers, then. I do hear him, that essentially he's saying that there hasn't been a drop in the money that's allocated to the Department of Environment although it looks like it. You've got the Ecotrust money. It's been sitting in that account. It is essentially being drawn down, so every year there is less in it, and therefore your bottom line has less on it. Also, you had those two settlements which would also affect your bottom line, and the emissions management fund, where less is collected.

Now, a couple of quick questions out of that, too. When you say offsets, I'm hearing cap and trade in my head. Is it the same language, or is there a different thing going on here? I'm pretty sure it's the same thing.

The second thing is my observation that $74 million is a lot of money for policy development. I realize he was kind of skipping through his lists, so I would ask if you can provide the list of exactly what gets broken out under each of those votes. He was giving me a kind of quick list, but I would appreciate the thorough list if it can be provided to me through whoever is supposed to get it, and then it comes to me. I guess you table it. I would appreciate that. That's the sort of cleanup from the last one.

Now I'm going to go on. The next is the focus on the oil sands and water monitoring. We've had a lot of panels. We had the Schindler report, which the government initially started to discredit Dr. Schindler about and then quickly met with him to compare science. I think that was the language that was being used. From that, we had the provincial panel, the Water Monitoring Data Review Committee. That was provincial panel 1, and it reported.

Provincial panel 2 was a second panel to determine a new monitoring system in the oil sands, and that's the one that I was talking about in question period today. I don't remember the name of that one. It's the water monitoring something. A Foundation for the Future, Building an Environmental Monitoring System for the Oil Sands: oh, no, that's the federal one. Sorry. This is why this just gets so confusing. So there's the monitoring one that's reporting, from which you've lost two members. That's provincial panel 2. You've got federal panel 1, which was the one set up by the former federal minister, Jim Prentice. It found that essentially there wasn't a clear, equitable measure-to-measure monitoring system in the region.

Then we had wild card panel 1, which is the Royal Society of Canada Expert Panel: Environmental and Health Impacts of Canada's Oil Sands Industry, which had more or less the same sort of response, that current evidence was insufficient, regulatory capacity is weak, Alberta faces major potential liabilities as a result of weak financial security practices, that there are valid concerns with RAMP, the regional aquatics monitoring program, and that the environmental impact assessment process is deficient. They have a long quote in here. They've identified deficiencies in environmental assessment practices compared with international best practice guidance from guidelines promoted by Canadian agencies, international agencies, and industrial associations.

There's a whole list of them there.

Notably, there has generally been inadequate overall risk assessment for technological and natural disasters, assessment of community health impacts (negative and positive), integrated and cumulative ecological impact assessment, and assessment of regional socio-economic impacts.

Then we had provincial panel 3, which was the original aquatics monitoring system, which reported this past January, eight weeks ago or so. So three different panels.

Now I'm going to look under the estimates on page 142 but also the ministry business plans on pages 57 and 58. I think I also reference page 42 of the fiscal plan. This is the one where $17 million was provided in this year, which is an increase of $3 million over the previous year, or the 21 per cent that the minister mentioned. It sounds grander when the minister says it because he says 21 per cent and not so grand when I say it because I say $3 million. This recently appointed Environmental Monitoring Panel will provide the recommendations by June. I'm taking it that this is this water monitoring one.

My question is: why isn't one of the priority initiatives that's listed in the ministry business plan for 2011-14 to develop and implement a science-based monitoring system for the Alberta oil sands? I expected to see that as part of the language that is being put forward, and I expected to see it to back up the ministry's shift in messaging around monitoring. The closest thing that I see is priority initiative 1.2 in the business plan, which is: "contribute to building an integrated information, monitoring, reporting and knowledge system." It's not quite what I expected.

The performance measurement, on the other hand, which appears on page 58, reads: "Water quality" – oh, yeah; this is the one I want to know about – "of six major Alberta rivers at key sites, based on monthly data on four groups of variables . . . which are averaged to provide an overall water quality rating." It is suggested that the last actual, which was for '08-09, saw good to excellent water quality in 6 out of 6 river systems.

My questions. What six rivers are tracked under this performance measurement? Two, how is the water tested? In other words, what is it tested for, and how is it done? Three, I'm interested, if one of the rivers is the Athabasca, in how the results that were being produced from that – I'm going to push on how that could be trusted given that we have heard over and over again in the last couple of months that the information that was being produced by the government panels did not account for certain things that are being accounted for elsewhere.

I'm going to stop talking and let the minister answer those questions for me.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I want to begin by having a brief discussion over the remarks made by the member that suggest that I was attempting to discredit Dr. Schindler and his report. I don't agree with that observation. What I did point out was that there is a disagreement on the interpretation of facts and that I had indicated that our reporting and our monitoring were indicating that we were maintaining a good quality of water in the river, and that really leads into the final remarks.

That's why I asked a panel to have a look at the work, the ongoing science, based on Alberta Environment and our historical data and the science that Drs. Kelly and Schindler did. The conclusion that that panel came to was that, in fact, there is good science in both camps but that the science . . . [A timer sounded]

The Chair: It is indicating the first 20 minutes, so continue on, Minister.

Mr. Renner: . . . was designed perhaps to do different things. They said that the work that Dr. Schindler did indicated that there could be a deposition from snow, which would be airborne deposition, but there were a number of assumptions that had been made to draw the conclusion that the samples that they found in very isolated and small numbers of samples of snow would then equate to a significant impact on the river. They said that they didn't necessarily agree that that conclusion could be made.

They also reaffirmed even what Dr. Schindler had shown, that if there are these airborne depositions that are ending up in the river, they're in very small quantities, so small that the monitoring that goes on does not measure them. That's how we get into this dichotomy where you have, on one hand, someone saying that we have good quality and, on the other hand, someone saying: well, we have evidence to indicate that there is something to be concerned about. That's the reason we are now in the process of reviewing our monitoring system, so that we can understand whether or not at some point in time these very small deposits could be entering our water system or perhaps are entering our water system and, if so, what we need to do. What are the kinds of actions that we would take from a management perspective to deal with it?

The panel also pointed out that it's important that we not only identify and quantify the quality of water but that we have more emphasis in the monitoring and science on determining whether or not that is causing adverse effect on the environment, particularly from an overall biodiversity perspective. That's why we are developing a program right now that is designed to incorporate all the various media: land, water, and air as well as biodiversity. At the end of the day, really, it's the health and relative well-being from a biodiversity perspective that tells us whether or not we are adequately protecting the environment and we have appropriate mechanisms in place.

The member asked which rivers we monitor. The rivers: the North Saskatchewan, South Saskatchewan, Athabasca, Bow, and Old Man. As I indicated, the testing that we have been doing has indicated from all independent kinds of standards that are set for water that our rivers are in that good to excellent category. That is true, but I think there's probably a good chance that when the numbers come out for next year, we will find, particularly in the South Saskatchewan, where we saw a flooding event take place last year, that the turbidity in that river will probably be enhanced. So we may not be able to say next year 6 out of 6. We may find that it maybe will drop to 5 out of 6 because of the amount of sediment that's washed down with these flood events and that the turbidity, then, will take some time to settle down in the river basin. So that's the nature of this performance measure.

Let me say that as we move towards cumulative effects and as we start to put in place much more rigid triggers and limits into the water management system through our Alberta land stewardship – and we'll soon see the numbers that have been arrived at for the lower Athabasca region – these kinds of performance measures will in all likelihood change. They'll become much more specific as to whether or not we are meeting the expectations and we are appropriately taking action as various triggers are reached or approached. I would think that the performance measures, particularly in my department, will become much more meaningful in the future than perhaps they've been in the past.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. Thank you. I missed one of the rivers, but I'll pick it up from the Hansard.

I'm going to stay on the monitoring for a bit longer. The new monitoring system: I'm wondering if it is going to be government run or if the minister is going to put it under RAMP to continue to lead water monitoring in the oil sands area? I would argue that that's a discredited agency now and not a good place to put it, but I'm interested in what's happening with that. The minister may well say: "Well, I'll do whatever the panel that's developing this monitoring is going to tell me," in which case he's got two answers to give me. One, if they tell him it should be government run and, two, if they tell him that it should be under RAMP, is he going to listen to that?

I'm also interested in what the funding structure would look like. The minister has said a number of times that he expects that it will be industry funded. Now, I see $17 million in the budget for monitoring, science, and reporting. So is that the idea, that that amount of money is not including money to actually put this new monitoring system in place? I'm interested in what is under line 5, monitoring, science, and reporting. It's a single line. If I could get the breakdown of exactly what that does fund, and if it's a long list, I'm perfectly happy to get it in writing.

On page 42 of the fiscal plan it looks as though this water panel is going to cost $3 million. That's what it seems to say. I'm quoting here from the section Environmental Monitoring, Science and Reporting.

About $17 million is provided in 2011-12, an increase of $3 million or over 21% . . . The recently appointed environmental monitoring panel will provide recommendations to government by June 2011 on the development.

It looks to me as though this panel is going to cost $3 million, so I'm just looking for confirmation about that. I'm wondering if the costs that are associated with the monitoring panel that was appointed by the minister are included under monitoring, science, and reporting. If not, where is it? It's not being pulled out here, and I'm wondering exactly where it is.

I'm just going to move on now and talk about the health impact study in Fort Chipewyan, in which there was a sort of trifecta of ministries involved: Health, Aboriginal Relations, and Environment. I know that the process is currently stalled because the ministers are waiting for certain things that the First Nations – well, it's back and forth. The First Nations believe certain things are essential, and the ministry involved is waiting to go ahead, and they can't provide certain things. So the ball is bouncing back and forth.

I'm wondering: what is the role that this ministry has played to date in the initiation and follow-through of this health study in Fort Chip? If it goes ahead, will the Minister of Environment have any role, or has the ministry committed any funding? If so, again, where would I find it under the budget lines that appear on page 142? Does the ministry have a commitment to table the results of this health study or, at a minimum, their piece of the results of that health study?

I'll let the minister answer those questions.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Chairman, the breakdown for line 5: I have a page here, and I'll be happy to forward it to the member if she likes, and we won't waste a lot of time.

I want to get to the crux of the discussion, and that is: is this new monitoring panel going to be coming back with recommendations, and when they do, how am I going to be dealing with them? I think that one of the things that I discussed with the panel when I met with them in providing them with a little bit of advice over and above the terms of reference that they already have was to point out to them that at the end of the day we have to have a system that is science based, that will stand the scrutiny of peer review, and that is seen to be credible. I've also pointed out that, whether it's true or not, one of the criticisms of RAMP is that it is too much under the thumb of industry. I won't begin to presume what the recommendation is going to be, but I would suggest that it's pretty clear that we've recognized that if the monitoring system is seen to be controlled by industry, it will fall short on that credibility criteria.

When you ask me, "Is this going to be a government-run organization?" I say that I don't know. I can't begin to predict what the panel is going to tell me. I suspect that at the end of the day it will be a collaboration of some kind. The federal government has been involved. Environment Canada, as you know, is looking at their role, the role that they can play in monitoring. We have a role to play in monitoring. We do some monitoring and will continue to do some monitoring. Then there is also a role for ongoing monitoring, similar to what RAMP has been doing but probably changed.

The bottom line is that it needs to be co-ordinated. You can't have one organization that is responsible for monitoring air and one organization that's responsible for monitoring water and another organization that's doing biodiversity and those organizations never talking to one another. As Dr. Schindler pointed out, sometimes you need to be looking for things on the air side to find out if there are impacts on the water side, and sometimes you need to be looking for indications on the biodiversity side to find out if there are indications in other areas. The emphasis of what they're doing is on designing a system that is co-ordinated among all the various media.

Like I say, I don't want to put words in the panel's collective mouths, but I'm confident that they're very aware of some of the issues that we have been dealing with up to date and the reason we've asked them to come into force.

The $3 million increase in this line item is not there simply to reflect the costs of this panel. The direct costs of the panel will be substantially less than that. We anticipate probably in the vicinity of about $100,000. There is significantly more money in the monitoring budget to beef up some of the monitoring that we as a government do. That may well be part of the implementation of that monitoring report. Again, I can't predict precisely what portion of that $3 million will be used to offset costs that are driven directly by the monitoring panel.

I almost hesitate to do so, but I do want to point out that if you go back two years, you'll find that we took a million dollars out of this budget. So putting $3 million in replaces the $1 million that was pulled out before. That will help us to beef up some of the programs in some areas. We've talked about the fact that in some of our programs we reduced the frequency. I'm not suggesting that everything would be automatically restored to where it was before, but it does give us some additional flexibility in some areas if it's necessary. I think that pretty much reflects the $3 million.

I want to respond to the questions regarding the community health study that was referenced with respect to Fort Chipewyan. We had committed to the community of Fort Chipewyan that we would engage with them to develop a community-based environmental monitoring program. We were never able to come to any kind of an agreement on the terms of reference, what this monitoring program would look like. I'm extremely disappointed that that was the case. We just never could get the community and ourselves eye to eye on where this is going to go. I would suggest that the work that Environment does will be incorporated into the community health study that is driven by Alberta Health.

So Alberta Health will take the lead. The funding for the program is within Alberta Health, but Environment will provide appropriate support as requested. If there is a need for some environmental monitoring to be incorporated into that community health study, then we would provide the expertise and be on the ground to help them set that up in whatever way that they request us to do it.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. Thank you for the information, and I'll look forward to receiving the list that the minister offered.

I'm going to shift slightly, but not very far, to water. The minister had mentioned that the water for life line item was taken out and that the entire budget was redistributed. Actually, one of the questions that I had is: where is water for life? The minister now tells me, "It's everywhere," so if his support staff could be so kind as to give me a breakdown of where it went. We had an estimate of $18.9 million that was allocated to water for life. The minister mentioned it, and do you think I can find the notes I took on that now? Oh, here we go. Water for life, $18.9 million – okay; I was right about the numbers – and a total of $21 million cross ministry. That $18.9 million: can you give me the breakdowns of where it turns up in your line items that appear on page 142? That would be very helpful.

I would be very interested in the minister's opinion or in your analysis of what was achieved in reference to water for life and, therefore, what's expected to be achieved in water for life. What are the improvements? What are the tangible differences that have happened in the program? How has water for life improved water management in the province?

I look at page 42 of the fiscal plan, and it talks about water for life. "In addition to $190 million in capital support, $25 million in operating support will be provided . . . to continue implementation of Alberta's Water for Life strategy." How will the $190 million in capital support be used? How is it distributed? What specific projects are being required for the implementation of water for life? How much of this is coming from the Department of Environment? If it's not coming from Environment, then who is supplying it?

Then I want to also talk to the minister and have more of a discussion on what is happening with a new Water Act or the whole question about the water allocations that exist now, the FITFIR system, first in time, first in right, which for anybody listening at home or reading the Hansard, which I know everyone does, paying attention to every word, essentially said that the people who got there first have the allocation that is there. That allocation is never 100 per cent of the flow, obviously, but it is a certain allocation. The problem is that we now have a lot more people that need water, but only sort of the first group that got there, that first queue, have the licences for those allocations.

I have always felt that we are under a different time and that we need a different system and that the government should move away from the FITFIR system. I'm picking up, I'm sensing that the minister doesn't agree with me, and I'm sure he will put that on the record. I'm most concerned because in the system he talks about with transferring, money gets involved.

I understand that's the second 20 minutes.

The Chair: Hon. member, you have the last 20 minutes. Continue.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. I think we start to tiptoe into some really dangerous territory, and it is a slippery slope. I mean, we can look at what happened in Australia and Chile. As they went to a water market system, essentially, you know, they ended up privatizing their water and then having to buy it back.

There are a couple of good questions that have been brought up to me, and one of them is that what we do with our water affects the rest of the world. If we make certain choices about how we talk about our water or legislate our water, that may well give an opening to other countries to come in and, for example, if they can buy land and get rights to water, allocation to water, transfer of water, they would then be able to do whatever they want with that, and we lose control of it. Then the control goes to another country.

The concept of water being, essentially, a public trust and that the government holds water in trust for the public and is required to protect that is something I would like to see the government move to. My reading of that does not include things like a water market because it moves away from a public trust concept.

Essentially, you want to make sure that everything that's done with water is in the broader public interest and does not make a choice that is primarily in a private interest or primarily benefits a private interest. You know what? We had one of those before us with the Balzac racetrack, which didn't happen in the end, but the shopping mall certainly did. I mean, they were looking for water, and that was a private interest. That's a perfect example of what can happen and did happen here. Now, because of the laws we had in place at the time, they ended up getting their water not from where they thought they would, but they were able to purchase a licence or part of a licence from an irrigation district to carry through with this. But that's the slippery slope that I'm looking out for.

I'd like the minister to talk more about when we're going to see that Water Act. He dances pretty well when I ask that question; he's pretty light on his feet. I think it's important that we have a much clearer sense of when that's coming, just to be fair. I've been the critic for this portfolio now for – this is my third budget. I've been hearing the same answer around that Water Act: it's soon. Three years is a long time to be soon. When is the Water Act coming? Is he going to go with some kind of transfer of licence or transfer of allocation system; in other words, a water market? Is he going to choose a water market as the delivery system for this as we move forward?

Also, is he planning on taking any kinds of steps inside of a Water Act that would be more conscious of how water gets used? We've made some choices where we've done basin-to-basin water transfers in order to keep a settlement of people going or even to allow them to increase their density. The question that I ask when I look at that is: was it appropriate to allow that to continue? We did. We enabled it to continue by transferring the water. Is that a sensible thing for a government to be allowing or encouraging, legislating to happen given that they are holding water in public trust for everyone else? Things like crops that we decide to grow given irrigation – am I making everybody up there crazy?

I think this is the most important discussion, aside from the monitoring issue, that the minister and I can have because I think these two things are at the bottom of what's really going on around environmental stewardship. There are a number of other ones like reclamation and the oil sands and things, but really if you don't have a clean glass of water or you don't have enough water to grow food in a local area – see, this starts to roll onto a lot of things.

I keep talking about recognizing that most Albertans live in urban settings, but that doesn't mean that I don't care about what's happening outside of those. I care very much, especially when we look at food security. A big issue around security is: can we grow enough food close to home that we're not transporting it, you know, thousands of miles in a truck, which is burning gas and contributing to greenhouse gases? It all starts to come around and go around at a certain point.

I'm going to sit down and let the minister try and answer the specific questions that I gave him and try and give me some more information about when the Water Act is coming, what some of the key things are that he's set in place around that, and then whether he has anticipated trying to actually shape and move our water use as part of that act.

The Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Renner: Thanks, Mr. Chairman. The member started her comments by talking about water for life and referencing the fact that the water for life line item is no longer in the budget. I can give you the breakdown on where the funds are. There's about a million dollars in ministry support services; $3 million in clean energy initiatives; $2 million in the approvals section of the budget; water operations, another $2 million; monitoring and reporting, $1 million; water policy, $8.5 million; relationships and partnerships, $1 million; and policy innovation, approximately half a million dollars.

I also want to point out that in '09-10 we prepaid grants to the WPACs, watershed planning and advisory councils, which amounts to about 4 and a half million dollars under the water for life program as well.

The significant portion that I referred to – that is, the water for life budget that is not within the ministry's budget but is, instead, in Transportation – is available on Transportation's website. I have a copy of the website here that shows the approvals up to June of 2010. It's Alberta municipal water/waste-water partnership, regular program, stand-alone systems, projects approved up to June 2010. It's available on the website. If you have trouble finding it, I'll certainly have someone provide you with a little bit more detail.

You asked: what are the results of water for life? Well, water for life is an ongoing strategy. It's not complete as of yet, but it is complete to the point where we feel that it has been integrated into the core business of what we do within the department. That's the reason why it finds itself spread throughout the department, because it really governs the way we do business. To continue to have it as a stand-alone line item no longer makes sense because it doesn't reflect what it is that we do.

I think that there are a couple of areas I could point to as being significant accomplishments of water for life. One is the development of these strong partnerships that are there, particularly in the development of WPACs around the province. We just last week announced the development of yet another WPAC for the Peace River. We've got these local, community-based watershed councils now that are operating on virtually every major water basin throughout the province, helping us to make that kind of awareness at the community level and to also help us to develop appropriate policy for protecting water along the way.

We have seen significant adoption of water conservation initiatives. The water for life partnership says that we should be increasing our water conservation initiatives by 30 per cent by 2015. We've seen significant progress in the irrigation districts, in municipal governments, both rural and urban. The AUMA is actively engaged with us, as is AAMD and C. We've also had a significant amount of success on the conservation side within industry, the oil and gas industry in particular.

The discussion around water allocation. The member asked: when are we going to bring in a Water Act? Well, I want to point out that we have a Water Act. We have a Water Act that is widely acknowledged as one of the best pieces of legislation in the world. I'm told – I wasn't here at the time; I was in this House during part of the time, but I certainly wasn't minister – that the Water Act under which we operate now took from about 1991 to 1999, from the time that the discussions originally began until it was fully implemented.

The discussions around legislation as it affects water, as the member has quite rightly pointed out, are very difficult, very emotional, and one needs to tread lightly and make sure that you get it right. That's the process we're in right now. We're saying that we have excellent legislation. That legislation is serving us well, but there are areas where we have to have a look at whether or not it can serve us better or whether changes to that legislation are necessary for it to serve us better.

One of the things that is in the Water Act, that has been there since 1999, is the separation of water licences from land titles. Previously water licences were attached to land. You don't get access to water unless you acquire the land. In 1999, recognizing that the world had changed then, there was a separation of the water licence from the land. There are instances where licences that are attached to land for various reasons are no longer relevant. The use of the land has changed, so that water licence becomes redundant.

We put in place a process whereby licences could be transferred from one holder to another. This is nothing new. This is nothing that has been introduced recently. What has heightened the attention and the focus on licence transfers of late is the fact that the South Saskatchewan River basin has been closed. Once you have a closed basin, you can no longer come to the government and ask for a new water allocation because there is no more water to allocate. Now we're starting to see more frequent use of the opportunities that are available within the Water Act to transfer licences.

There are many – and I think the member even alluded to those – kinds of speculations that allowing water licences to be transferred somehow creates a commodity for water, commoditizes water, and removes any ability to continue to use water, and I categorically deny that that's the case. It is very, very clear that any licence that is being contemplated for transfer from one user to another has to be able to demonstrate on both sides of the transaction. On the original holder side that holder has to demonstrate how their actions have resulted in reduced need for that water, reduced use of that water. You can't simply transfer surplus water that you've never used. You have to say: we have taken specific action or will take specific action as a result of this transfer and the cash that we have from this transfer to reduce the need for water.

That was the case in the Balzac situation that she talked about. The Western irrigation district said: "We will take money, invest it into our infrastructure. We will replace open irrigation ditches with underground pipes that will reduce the amount of evaporation. We'll beef up our storage capacity so that we better manage the water that's within. At the end of the day we will be able to actually irrigate more acres than we did formerly, using less water." The water that is saved is transferred on the licence transfer.

Conversely, on the other side of the coin, someone who applies to receive one of these licence transfers has to be able to demonstrate that there's reason to believe that they can use that water, that they have a demonstrated use for that water. We cannot and do not allow any transfers to take place for speculative reasons, for example. No one can acquire a licence if they can't demonstrate how they're going to physically receive that water out of a diversion and how they are going to use that water. So the suggestion that somehow someone could acquire a licence and then ship it off, you know, to points unknown is simply not the case.

Now, if someone puts a bottled-water plant together and you have a soft drink manufacturing facility or something, some of that water probably ends up outside of the water basin, but it is of an insignificant amount, and it's done as common practice everywhere, not just in Alberta. But to suggest that someone could actually make wholesale interbasin transfers of water simply because they hold a licence for that water is simply not the case. It is not the case in the Water Act, and it's never been the case in any of the discussion documents that we've been involved in.

Now, the million-dollar question, or maybe it's more than a million-dollar question: when is all of this going to happen? All of this is going to happen when we have an opportunity for the public (a) to engage in the discussion and (b), more importantly, to engage in a way that allows people to participate in that discussion of water from a knowledge base that allows the discussion to be based on fact and not hyperbole.

I get very frustrated with a lot of the noise that is around the discussion of a water allocation policy, whether it be in the social networks or whether it be in newsletters or other places, where people are suggesting that somehow the government has got this nefarious plan to deny Albertans the access to water that they need. Nothing could be further from the truth. Absolutely nothing. Nothing could be further from the truth when it comes to ensuring that we conserve water for the purpose of maintaining healthy aquatic ecosystems. That has to be the underlying premise for any kind of water allocation system that we would move towards.

I can't answer that question. Frankly, I'm disappointed that we have not moved forward yet. Every time we start to get close to having that discussion, the furor whips up again. People get all excited, and no one has really got their minds focused on having a good, intelligent conversation around what we are going to do to accomplish three things: conserve water for the ecosystem, preserve water for recreational and human use, and at the same time facilitate the transfers from existing users to new users that need to have access to that water because we have a growing economy.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I know that my time is almost up. I'm going to ask the pages to deliver a list of extra questions over to the minister. I do want to encourage the minister again to include in amendments to the Water Act, which is the way I should have phrased that – I'm sorry; that is what I'm waiting for – that it be specifically stated that water is owned in trust for each citizen and that citizens would have standing in court if that trust is threatened, for example.

I think that's going to protect us when we start to look at what it tells the rest of the world. If we tell the rest of the world we don't have strong limits on water licensing or markets, then it says that our only tool is regulation of a private interest, which is much weaker than a strong statement about water being subject to a public trust and that the Legislature does not have the power to give up that trust, that the Legislature doesn't have the right to override that because holding that water is in the public trust.

I didn't get anywhere near through most of my questions here, but I appreciate the time that I did get from the minister. Let me just quickly go back and see if there's anything I can pop in in the 30 seconds I've got left here.

Of the $739 million for environmental projects that's listed on page 20 of the fiscal plan, how much is for carbon capture and storage projects? Another way of wording that is: how much of this has already been committed to CCS through the $2 billion? I'm trying to sort out how much you've spent, how much you're going to spend, and how much is still sitting there. I'm wondering if the long-term plans for the fund have changed and if the minister expects to see continuing declines in the fund as companies in Alberta improve their practices.

Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman.

The Chair: Hon. members, the next 20 minutes are reserved for the third party. To the hon. minister and the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, you want to exchange within the 20 minutes?

Mr. Boutilier: Sure.

The Chair: All right. Go ahead, hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you. It's kind of a lot more comfortable over on this side asking questions this afternoon. To the minister and his staff, I welcome you. It seems to be that there are a few more ADMs there from a few years ago.

I want to say first and foremost that I was actually going through your mandate letter. It's signed by the Premier. I'm not sure actually who did write the letter for the Premier, but I do know this. It talks about the fact that to achieve our goals, our priorities for the coming year remain. I have to ask the minister. It says first – and it's not even actually a sentence – "Resourceful," period, "Responsible," period. Is there a missing word in that objective in your mandate letter given to you last year in February? It's not a full sentence. I found it to be somewhat unusual in your mandate letter.

It talks about ensuring Alberta's resources are developed in an environmentally sustainable way, but it starts with just simply one word, “Resourceful,” period, and then the word “Responsible.” Can you give me just a brief elaboration in a minute or so on what that means to you the way it’s written? Maybe it was amended, where there actually is another word or two that’s been added to your mandate letter because, quite simply, “Resourceful,” period, “Responsible,” period, is not good English, I guess. If you want to clarify that, I’ll provide the opportunity to allow you to do that now.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that the reference in the mandate letter probably comes from the government of Alberta’s vision statement, that says that the government of Alberta will work towards staying the course on our long-term goals. Resourceful, responsible means ensuring that energy resources are developed in an environmentally sustainable way.

Mr. Boutilier: Just reading it, if you don’t see the entire government global view of what it is, it kind of appears to be, I guess, basically two words that were extracted from part of a sentence. In my view, to the minister, you may want to perhaps add some meaningful words to that because I think it would give a clearer message of what your ultimate goals are as a ministry. Of course, you don’t write the letter. That’s written by the Premier, who appoints the members to Executive Council. I strongly, just friendly, suggest that it could be articulated in a more efficient manner to capture the imagination of Albertans on what is intended. That was my first observation.

On that, I first of all want to compliment this minister for the fact that as I was looking through, starting off with ministry support, a couple of things I observed. First and foremost was on the issue of environment. I think your ministry support demonstrated, just going by memory, that total ministry support is either 500 or 700. The reason I say that: I’m actually making a reference to Sustainable Resource Development because I have a suggestion in the budget debates today that you may find helpful in terms of how we continue to stretch our dollars further.

Ultimately, under ministry support for your ministry I believe the estimates are about $18.4 million. As I go over to Sustainable Resource Development, which, of course, is another ministry, that you’re not responsible for, I saw the potential for a natural merger because it’s actually, under the ministry support for this ministry, $34.9 million, almost $35 million, yet your ministry support is half of that. You’re at $18.5 million, and Sustainable Resource Development is at $34.9 million.

I look at the categories: minister’s office, cabinet policy, deputy minister’s office, communications, human resources, corporate. They’re the exact same titles, but your ministry only, in fact, cost $18.4 million for this proposed budget. SRD is actually proposing $34 million, almost $35 million. So my first observation is that you’re getting double the value that the sustainable resources ministry is doing unless the comparison is unfair.

My first question would be this. Would you be willing to take over the Ministry of Sustainable Resource Development? As you know, by way of history and as a former Minister of Environment, clearly, in today’s economic times – and I’ve heard this minister in this Assembly talk about continuing to shuttle funds to the front line for things that go on. Would you be willing to do that with your existing ADMs and your DM, to take over Sustainable Resource Development?

By way of history – history is a great teacher – in actual fact a large portion of Sustainable Resource Development, when it was created as a new ministry, really resulted from the Ministry of Environment.

Mr. Renner: Well, I’m hesitant to answer directly the question that the member has posed because I think the member knows very well that it’s a somewhat mischievous question in that it’s not a decision that I would make. That’s a decision that the Premier makes when he or she puts together the composition of his or her cabinet. I guess that given that we have a leadership contest under way, we’ll get a chance to find out this fall what the new leader’s vision will be.

There certainly are some instances where it makes sense for parts of Environment to be included with parts of SRD. When I attend my counterparts’ meetings for the Canadian Council of Ministers of the Environment, there are probably as many different combinations across the country as there are provinces. Some provinces include parks in their Environment ministry. Some provinces include mining in their ministry.

I don’t know that there’s a right or a wrong, but clearly there are advantages and disadvantages to combining various operations within this. I think we do a very good job of dealing with those by having an interdepartmental group that works very closely together, where we have Sustainable Resource Development, Environment, and Energy working very closely together in the areas where there is – I won’t call it duplication because I don’t believe that in most cases it is although we’re working to avoid it when it does happen. We work together and make sure that we do co-ordinate our activities so that one isn’t stepping on the toes of another.

As for the ministry support budget, I won’t presume to speak on behalf of the Minister of SRD. I will point out that a value for dollar – well, I shouldn’t point it out because on that basis I don’t know. We have about 700 employees; they have about 2,000 employees. The corporate support for a department roughly three times the size of ours is likely the main difference in the budget. If you look at line 1.6 in our budget, we have $15 million in corporate support. I don’t know what SRD’s budget looks like, but I suspect that apart from that, it’s about the same.

Mr. Boutilier: Just on that, Mr. Chair, with the fact that your corporate support is $15 million and theirs is almost $30 million, I’m trying to understand what is so different. Corporate support is a pretty broad term. I certainly would allow the minister an opportunity to delve into the $15 million. The question I’ll be asking SRD will be: what’s so different about your corporate support, that costs $30 million to Alberta taxpayers, versus the only $15 million that it costs the Ministry of Environment? Now, in many ways that can be a compliment to your ministry and to your officials in what has been going on, but for some reason SRD corporate support is twice that, $30 million.

Mr. Renner: I think that question should be asked of the Minister of SRD. I can’t speak to another minister’s budget.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, I’d ask you to speak to the $15 million. What value do Albertans get for corporate support in a large sum of money, $15 million, which is actually the largest sum? Where does that $15 million actually go? Also, keeping in mind the umbrella of shuttling funds to the front, where ultimately is the service providing value to Albertans? I guess it’s an opportunity to provide value to Albertans on that $15 million.

Mr. Renner: Well, I don’t have the line-by-line breakdown, but let me just discuss some of the things that are provided under that corporate support item. We have our human resource/people support services, our communications, financial services, strategic business planning, integrated risk management, project management, performance measurement and evaluation, information technology systems and support, our freedom of information and protection of privacy work, legal services, accommodations, and records information. So it is really the backbone of the department, providing all of the support services.

An interesting one is FOIP. The member may be aware that Environment has one of if not the largest FOIP areas in government. The reason for that is that when there is a land transaction, not every time but most times, when a piece of land is transferred from one owner to another, one of the searches that is often done is through Environment to determine whether or not there have been any environmental issues associated with that particular piece of land. I'm not so sure that the FOIP process is the appropriate process. In fact, we have been working very hard to find a less administratively burdensome way of doing it. Nevertheless, we have literally thousands of requests that we deal with that tend to be pretty standard requests, not the kind of request that you would normally think would require a freedom of information request, but they do. That's just one of the examples of the things that we do under corporate services.

Mr. Boutilier: Certainly, communications, that you make reference to, is $1.267 million in a separate column. Under corporate is $15.432 million, and I'd appreciate a breakdown of how that $15.432 million is actually divvied up in terms of connecting to my original question on the value for Albertans, where that is, because communications is in another ministry.

With that, I move on to a couple of important issues. Sadly, if I reflect back on the past year, if we were to ask how we think the year went when it comes to the environment and the perception of the environment – in this House we deal with perceptions, and I think everyone, all members of this Assembly, including the minister and his staff, agree that we want the best and the strongest environment possible in a sustainable manner. In doing so, I might add that every 30 or 40 years, when governments change or when new leaders come about, new things are done. I'm very proud to say that in 1971 there was a new leader called Premier Lougheed. He, in fact, was the first Premier to decide that we should have a ministry of environment.

Many of the members here may not be aware that Alberta was the first province in all of Canada to have a ministry of environment, ahead of Quebec, ahead of the province of Ontario, and also ahead of the federal government. I think it speaks to the values that Albertans place on their environment, which I think is naturally what a leader would do in terms of capturing that in the form of a ministry. Good for Premier Lougheed during those days.

As we go forward, I think it's a fair comment to say that in the perception of specifically my constituency, Fort McMurray and the oil sands, it hasn't been a good year. It hasn't been a good year, so the question is: how do we earn back the respect and confidence of Albertans and the people in my community, where we say, "It's my backyard"? My three-year-old son plays in that backyard and breathes the air there every day. Oftentimes we talk about how proud we are of smelling the oil sands. We do say that it is an important resource that we've been blessed with, well beyond any of our control, but we've been blessed with it.

To the minister: in terms of the dollars he has been allotted in this past year, going forward, are you optimistic that this can be a better year for the Ministry of Environment and, specifically, a better year for my backyard of Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, which I've called home for now almost 35 years?

Certainly, I was pleased to see the minister in Fort McMurray when we had the reclamation of Suncor pond 1, which took almost 40 years. Technology is of course helping us now be able to do that 30 years sooner than what took place before. My question is: are you more hopeful that this year the perception by Albertans and around the world is that we can be viewed as even more environmental in terms of caring for the environment in light of everything that's taken place in the last year? The reason I say that, just to conclude, is that there was a sense where the minister somewhat upset me because I thought he threw the oil sand companies under the bus. I actually, if you can believe this, complimented the Minister of Energy, saying that he was the only one who didn't throw the oil sand companies under the bus. It was in a question period.

To the minister: are you hopeful that we can have a better year, the government and the Ministry of Environment, in terms of the perception that is taking place relative to the oil sands, the reclamation that's going on, the monitoring, and what is so important to my backyard and my three-year-old son? Will we have a better year?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Chairman, I can't begin to predict events that might occur throughout the next year that would perhaps affect the focus on oil sands, but I can tell you that for the areas that I do have control over, I am very optimistic that we are moving in the right direction, and we will in fact, to use the member's words, have a better year.

The lower Athabasca regional plan is absolutely critical in the development of that. I take some umbrage – I guess that is a word that might fit – from this member suggesting that we need to have a better year when his party seems to be doing everything that is within their power to delay or destroy the impetus on Alberta land stewardship legislation, which is the very essence of ensuring that we will, in his words, have a better year. It's all about cumulative effects management. It's about establishing legislation so that we can conserve land, so that we can put plans in place that bring about triggers and limits on air and water emissions that will allow us to once and for all demonstrate to Albertans, demonstrate to the world that we are serious about developing this critical resource in the most appropriate ways.

We are in the later stages of developing a tailings management program. Just this week I made an announcement that I think is really quite monumental when it comes to reclamation, talking about putting the plans in place to initiate emphasis on progressive reclamation, transparency so that Albertans, our customers, can see the work that's under way with respect to reclamation. We had discussions earlier this afternoon about the panel that's now developing a world-class monitoring system not just for the Athabasca region but for all of Alberta, but the target will initially be on the Athabasca region.

Mr. Boutilier: Okay. Thank you. I only have one or two other final questions. You made reference to a political party. It's very clear that we do believe that the bill that you made reference to certainly should be repealed and rescinded. When we have strong environmental licences and acts in place such as the Water Act and others, the fact that they can be usurped by a cabinet based on how they feel – and the cabinet is not like a council or a public meeting – is unfortunate. And it's unfortunate that I'm out of my time.

The Chair: You're right, hon. member.

The next 20 minutes is reserved for the fourth party. Hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, you have 20 minutes of dialogue with the minister.

Ms Notley: Thank you. I think in this particular case what I'm going to do is just do the 10 minutes, I'm afraid, because I found it doesn't really work as well in this setting to do the back and forth when you have such a short period of time. It frustrates me because I have so, so, so many issues to go over here, and it's going to be difficult.

However, I'd like to start by thanking the minister and his staff for being here to provide us with information and, also, his staff for having provided some very detailed information after the last set of estimates in response to our researchers' requests. I do appreciate that. I also appreciate the fact that this minister on a personal level does a very good job of being very sort of moderate and reasoned and measured in his responses. I think that's good because he really is a target in a lot of cases.

Having said that – and I continue to believe that to be the case very much with the minister – overall I have to say that when I started preparing for this and I started reading my estimates notes and the estimates debate from three years ago and then two years ago and then last year and then I started looking over at everything that's been happening and then I started looking at the budget, quite frankly, Mr. Minister, you may not believe this, but I fully believe that your cabinet has essentially thrown you under the bus. Repeatedly you are put in a position where you are being asked to defend an increasingly indefensible environmental record and certainly in this case an environmental budget which is absolutely indefensible at this point. I feel for you because you do it with as much grace as one can in the situation that you are in.

I do believe that what we see here today in terms of the budget for Environment and the record of this ministry over the last year is a clear indication that this government has abandoned this issue as any form of priority. Where do I see that reflected, and where are there some questions that you might be able to answer? Well, obviously, I think there's already been some indication about what the budget reflects overall. Since 2002 in real dollars we've seen compliance and enforcement down by about 13 per cent, but we've seen communications up by about 50 per cent. That's in sort of a real dollar thing.

Even with the discussion about the change in contributions to the climate change emissions fund and the fact that you paid out last year to settle a legal account that was not anticipated, ultimately we still see from last year's budget, not forecast but budget, to this year a $10 million cut in funding for this ministry, that we see primarily existing in the climate change line item. That's after you take into the account the fund issue. So you're still seeing an overall reduction in costs.

Now, how does that work? Well, in the last year we've seen repeated critiques of the quality of work that happens within this ministry. We've seen from the Royal Society of Canada: "The regional cumulative impact on groundwater quantity and quality has not been assessed." Another quote: "[The] regulatory capacity of the Alberta and Canadian Governments does not appear to have kept pace" with the rapid expansion. Another quote: "The Government of Alberta has a government-wide portal on its website to address oil sands, but the current content is largely public relations documents regarding the industry." Another quote:

The ERCB faces difficult public interest determinations on future projects unless these information deficiencies, especially on cumulative impacts, are corrected. Accordingly, the necessary studies need to be completed with highest priority to assure a sound evidence basis for the public interest decisions . . . on project applications.

Meanwhile, they say, there is little tangible progress in current regulatory policy as it relates to cumulative impacts assessment. So that's there.

Then, of course, we've already talked about the Schindler report.

Then, of course, we have the report that your own panel released two or three weeks ago that identified that in many cases your folks were not asking the right questions, were not testing for the right chemicals, and in many cases do not even have the technical capacity to measure a number of the chemicals and toxins that need to be tested for.

So that's the overview, just in terms of monitoring. Yet we see no extra resources going into monitoring, and we have an oil sands panel, that we've talked about in many different forums, which is fundamentally flawed. But even if it weren't fundamentally flawed, there's no money in your budget to raise your gain at all this year, at the same time that the government is estimating and planning for increased industrial activity in the very areas that require your ministry's concerted, increased attention with a much, much higher level of quality. To me it's a clear decision to abandon what you've been told needs to happen.

I'd like to quickly go to 4.2, approvals. I've heard you, when we've talked about issues related to monitoring and compliance and spot checks, a lot of time refer to how, well, the approval process is the process by which we make sure that all the ducks are in order – perhaps a bad turn of phrase – but, nonetheless, that everything is in order and it unfolds properly down the road. But we see a 6 per cent decrease there, and after inflation it's more like a 10 per cent decrease in that line item.

I have a few questions with respect to that. I'm wondering within that line item how much money is spent on consultants as opposed to staff, so third-party consultants. I'm wondering if you could advise me of the breakdown of approvals that are reviewed by consultants versus approvals that are reviewed by direct staff and the percentage of each. Then you can tell me whether or not your ministry has a policy or practice in place with respect to ensuring that those consultants do not have current or adjacent contracts with industry, because that's a definite problem, so I'm wondering if you can provide an answer to that question.

With respect to general enforcement I see that we've had in 2005 roughly about 83 people employed as either investigators or other types of enforcement officers and that in 2010 that number was down to 82, which is fine. It has basically kept pace. There were a couple of vacancies. Again, the question becomes: with all the increased activity over that period of time, how in heaven's name can you maintain the same quality of monitoring enforcement and compliance with those numbers in place?

Cumulative effects. We've had some fabulous conversations about cumulative effects management over the course of the last three years. I remember being so excited when I first heard that stuff being talked about, when I heard about it in the context of the land-use framework and I heard about the critical role that the ministry plays in terms of providing the science to inform that process and to inform each regional plan. But here we are three years later: no movement.

In estimates last year we were promised – I think it was the second or third deadline – that the lower Athabasca land-use framework would be completed by December 2010, and it's not. Again. And it's the one that's furthest ahead. I know that there have been commitments that this would all be completed by 2012, but based on what's happened thus far, I'm just wondering if at some point the minister is prepared to acknowledge that it's not going to get done, that you're grossly behind unless there's a doubling of your budget.

You'd be happy to know – I mean, I've said it publicly in front of the cameras – that as a starting point I could absolutely and completely, with full confidence, double your budget and not think for a second that I was being irresponsible with taxpayers' money because I believe that the disparity between what needs to happen and what is happening is so great, not only quantitatively but qualitatively, that that's what needs to happen. Having said that, the question becomes: are you prepared to acknowledge that the land-use framework and the regional cumulative effects plans are not going to be completed by the spring of 2012? It's very clear that we haven't got one of the nine complete, let alone all of them.

Directive 074. Last year we talked about how only 2 out of 7 companies that had been assessed under that had met compliance. Now we're at 2 out of 9. I am concerned about why that is and, of course, the fact that they intend not to be in compliance at least two years out from now. It's not a question of just right that minute they weren't in compliance; we're planning for at least two years of noncompliance past this year. I'm curious about the reclamation program, why that didn't include tailings.

I'm also wondering – oh, I'm running out of time, and this is so frustrating for me – if you could tell me why there was no inclusion of a third-party review of industry reclamation costs given the clear academic and objective consensus that industry does nothing but underestimate reclamation costs every time that issue has been discussed, yet we have no third-party reclamation process, which is going to undermine economic growth in the future as well and undermine the economic stability of the industries.

Orphan wells fund. Your ministry is responsible for signing off on reclamation: $30 million over the last two years. How many of them have been reclaimed as a result of that investment?

Finally, why was there no . . . [A timer sounded] Sorry.

The Chair: Hon. Minister, you have a maximum of 10 minutes to answer those questions.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I almost feel like starting at the bottom because I'd like to get to those questions first, but I won't. I will try and get through all of the questions.

First of all, I want to thank the member for her kind comments. I think she was genuine in offering them, and I hope that I do bring a reasoned approach to this ministry. At times it is difficult to remain calm, but the fact of the matter is that this is an important position. It is critical that we get it right not only because of the expectations that Albertans have, but this is also a critical building foundation for future generations to continue to have success here in Alberta.

The ministry budget is, I think, not unlike any other ministry budget in government. If we had opportunities to have bigger budgets, we would certainly find all kinds of worthwhile places to spend them. However, we're no different than any other department. We have to work within the overall restraints and constraints that are put in place if we're going to manage the dollars in an appropriate way. Yeah, I wish at times that I would have opportunity to have more budget, but I don't. So I'm a pragmatist when it comes to that, and I say: okay; given the constraints that we're under, how can we make sure that we accomplish everything that we possibly can with the dollars that are available to us?

I do want to point out that the member suggested there is a $10 million cut in our climate change budget. I don't know if she heard earlier, but the reason for that is that we have reassessed the estimate on our CCEMC, the climate change emissions fund, through offsets.

I want to talk about the concerns around money for the monitoring panel report because it's critical that everyone understands that at the end of the day the expectation is that industry is going to continue to pay for the lion's share of costs associated with implementing this report. There will undoubtedly be dollars that will have to be incorporated from Alberta Environment's budget, there may be some dollars, frankly, that will come from SRD's budget, and there will probably also be a certain amount of dollars that come through Environment Canada from a monitoring perspective. But the lion's share of the costs needs to be and will continue to be borne by industry. The issue at hand is: how can we have a system where the lion's share of the costs is borne by industry but industry is not in control nor is industry seen to be in control of how those costs are expended? That's a critical part of the work that the panel has before them.

I think it's also worth noting on the issue of industry involvement that one of the line items in climate change is reflective of the fact that we have these funds that flow through our department from compliance costs associated with CO<sub>2</sub> mitigation.

I was participating a couple of weeks ago, maybe three weeks ago, with a funding announcement that was made by the Climate Change and Emissions Management Corporation, where they were allocating about – I can't remember if it was $20 million or $30 million. They pointed out at that point that to date about a hundred million dollars has been awarded to various organizations for this fund, but the leveraging that takes place as a result of the criteria that's used to determine where these various grants go will result in about $500 million in expenditures. Now, some of those go into commercialization of projects around the province. Some of them go into research projects. So you have to keep in context that not all of the dollars that are being spent as a result of the policies of Alberta Environment are necessarily reflected in Alberta Environment's budget.

You asked how many approvals are reviewed by consultants, and I can honestly say that the answer is zero, none. We do have consultants from time to time that we'll bring in to assist us in the evaluation and development of policy or putting on various kinds of consultations and workshops and the like. There are consultants that industry will engage to put together proposals that come to our department. But at the end of the day there is never an approval granted by our department that is not reviewed and signed off by one of our employees. We do not delegate that authority to nonemployees.

The budget itself in approvals: the member wondered why it had actually gone down, and there is a very simple explanation. It's because within approvals we have some flow throughs as well. It's primarily due to dedicated revenue shortfalls where fewer applications were received for reclamation and remediation certificates, resulting in fewer site audits being conducted. The $1.6 million decrease shown in the estimates is due to reduced dedicated funding required under the reclamation and remediation programs. So these are programs that are flow-through dollars. People come to us, they pay their fee, and we process their application. If there are fewer applications, then the revenue is less.

I'm pleased to report on the enforcement side that in the last five years our complement of staff has actually increased by 10 per cent. We now have environmental protection officers that number in total 85, and that is up seven over the last five years from where we were.

She asked: will the land-use framework ever be completed? Yes. The answer is yes. In fact, I am very encouraged by the work that's under way, particularly on the lower Athabasca. The lower Athabasca is the first out of the chute. The South Saskatchewan River basin is the second out of the chute. Both of those are moving along very well. I encourage the member to continue to stay interested and involved. I want to make it abundantly clear once again that it is the essence of our go-forward ability to continue to do what we do in Environment on cumulative effects, and our whole regulatory approach is enveloped within the land-use framework. We are moving forward, and the member will see very well that that's the case.

Directive 074. She says that many are not in compliance. It is, I think, important to keep our eyes clearly focused on the end result. Directive 074 talks about the need to be in compliance and to implement over a period of time, but at the end of the day there needs to be a plan that says that we will no longer be increasing the amount of tailings that we produce. I'm confident that all of the mining companies will in fact be able to accomplish that by the end of the day. Some of them will not be able to implement as quickly the technology that will get them there, but by the end of the day they will be there.

Then, frankly, the focus has to be on the area that we are now focusing on, that you made reference to, and that's tailings management, to deal with the legacy ponds. Directive 074 only deals with the production of tailings on a go-forward basis, but everyone knows that we've got tailings ponds that are there from the last 20 years of production in that area. So it needs to have a combined approach. Directive 074 ends the increase of tailings, but then we are working very aggressively with industry. Industry, to their credit, is working equally as hard on developing policies that will allow them to deal with the legacies as well as the existing.

The Chair: We now get to the next 20 minutes. Hon. Member for Calgary-Currie, do you wish to exchange for 20 minutes?

Mr. Taylor: Yes, Mr. Chair. If we could go to a back and forth, I would like that very much.

I'm going to start out by seeing if I can get a direct answer to what I thought my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona put forward as a rather direct question, which is about these land-use plans. When are they going to get done? When can we expect the lower Athabasca to be done? When can we expect the other watersheds to be done as well, Minister? Specific dates, please.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Chairman, the Minister of SRD is ultimately responsible for the development of these plans. I cannot give a direct answer to that question because it will depend very much upon a number of factors. The lower Athabasca is the one that we are focusing on now. The intention is to have that one completed this year, let me say that. The South Saskatchewan is at a different stage.

For the lower Athabasca we've already received the report back from the regional advisory committee. That report has been the subject of public consultation, and now it's in the government's court to respond and bring out a document that is the government's response. That's the next step. Then there is further time for further input and consultation on that report. The way that the program is designed to work is that based upon that final round of consultation, the final plan is then put into place.

On the South Saskatchewan the RAC, the regional advisory council, has submitted their report, and it will be subject to that next round of consultation very soon. We just have to ensure that we have the resources to be able to deal with it in a timely manner. But, clearly, the sooner the better as far as I'm concerned because it does give us the opportunity to really get rolling and get moving on cumulative effects.

[Dr. Brown in the chair]

Mr. Taylor: Thank you. Clearly, we're running significantly behind schedule in terms of what the original goals were for having those plans done.

I guess that brings up another question. I'll refer you back, Minister, to your ministry's goal one that environmental outcomes and objectives are established with Albertans, communities, government, and industry. The overarching objective is integrating those efforts, I think, and working together to achieve outcomes that work for all parties. I would argue that the stakeholders are listed in order of priority there. It's Albertans who create the communities, who elect governments to represent them, and upon whom industry depends.

I think the Castle special management area – and I know that we're talking about land that falls under the Ministry of Sustainable Resource Development because I already went through this dance with the Minister of Tourism, Parks and Recreation. But I would argue that her ministry has an interest in the outcome of this discussion as does your ministry. The Castle special management area is, I think, a good example, or maybe a bad example, of this government missing the importance of Albertans and of the community as development of this area is set to go ahead despite protests from the local people there and in spite of the fact that we are slowly getting going with the South Saskatchewan plan.

Priority initiative 1.1 says:

Lead Alberta's transition to an outcomes-focused environmental cumulative effects management system within Alberta's Land-use Framework to address the impacts of development on land, air, water and biodiversity, at a regional and provincial level.

This case relates directly to that priority initiative. It shows the importance of establishing these regional plans that can protect areas of environmental significance – I think this is an area of extreme environmental significance – and perhaps, more importantly, it shows the necessity of having interim planning strategies in the absence of regional plans. What process does your ministry have or does this government have for environmental protection and conservation prior to the establishment of these regional plans?

Mr. Renner: Well, the process that we have is the legislation that I and my staff operate under, and that's the Environmental Protection and Enhancement Act of Alberta, EPEA. That's the bible in our department that is constantly referred to. It is a robust piece of legislation.

I think one of the areas that often gets overlooked is that every approval that is made by our department of any kind is subject to public notice. Then when there are statements of concern that arise out of that public notice, the applicant is required to address those statements of concern. Approval is then made based on both the statements of concern and on our existing environmental policies that are in place under EPEA and other pieces of legislation. Finally, every decision is also subject to appeal. We have an independent appeal board that deals with the most contentious decisions and I think does a very good job of (a) mediating where mediation is possible and (b) making sound and appropriate recommendations to the minister for implementation.

Mr. Taylor: Two follow-up questions, if I may, Minister. What role did your ministry have to play in the block-cutting applications as far as the Castle special management area is concerned? How vigorously have you been in there advocating for protection of that land? It seems that there is significant local concern that the environmental integrity of that area is being forever compromised, and it's doing so because one ministry, SRD, is allowing logging to go ahead in an area that another ministry, Tourism, Parks and Recreation, thinks should be a park, if I understood the minister correctly when we talked about this last week. It has clearly got some environmental significance, so I think, you know, at some point this falls into your lap as well.

Mr. Renner: Well, there are a number of ministries that are involved with this area. I am not going to stand here and contradict the fine work that's done by some of those 2,000 individuals that work in Sustainable Resource Development. I had the conversation with the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

The fact is that forest management is something that needs to take place on an ongoing basis. I don't begin to present myself as an expert, but I do know, having had the opportunity to explore parts of the world down in southwestern Alberta, not necessarily the specific area of the Castle that you're referring to but I have spent days and days and days wandering around in the Crowsnest area, that most of that area at one point in our history was logged. In fact, most of the access roads that everyone uses to recreate in that area are as the result of many years of logging history in that area, so I won't accept that the only way to preserve an area, to manage an area and ensure that we have a healthy environment on a go-forward basis is to prohibit logging in the area. Sometimes it makes sense to have logging in an area because it replaces what used to be resolved by Mother Nature through fires and the like. Let's look at this from the perspective of: what is the best for managing this area?

I heard today in question period that the Minister of SRD indicated that the vast majority of the land in that particular region will not be accessible to logging. It's only a very small proportion of the land that's accessible, and even at that it's a hundred-year program, so 1 per cent annual cut. We can't let this get drawn out of proportion.

Mr. Taylor: Yet it has raised such a stink among the local community. One member of this House has tabled over a thousand e-mails so far, I believe, complaining about the logging. So how does the minister square that circle? Somewhere here either there has been a failure to protect that area or a failure to communicate to the people who live in the area, who live near the area, who recreate in the area, who in some cases depend on the area for their own livelihood, who see the ecotourism value of the area that in fact everything is just hunky-dory. So which failure is it?

Mr. Renner: I'm not going to engage in this discussion any longer because it's not an area that my ministry is responsible for. But I'll give an example for an area that we are responsible for, and that's landfills. There are thousands of people who oppose landfill applications as well. Are you suggesting that we shouldn't have landfills? No, I don't think anyone would suggest that. What we have to do is ensure that when a landfill is developed, it's developed in a way that ensures that there are no adverse impacts on the environment, so we have very rigid and detailed specifications on how landfills are developed.

But at the end of the day, would I like to live next door to a landfill? No, I wouldn't. Nevertheless, I recognize that somebody has to because I'm not nor are Albertans at the point now where they're no longer generating any refuse, and if we don't have a landfill to put it in, it ends up in somebody else's front yard. So there are occasions where decisions need to be made that have much more than local concerns when it comes to these kinds of decisions on developments within the environmental landscape.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. A pretty impassioned defence for something that you weren't going to get involved in any longer. I do hope that while you're applying your stringent regulations around landfills and all the rest, your ministry is doing everything in its power to ensure that we put less into landfills generally, so we don't need so many of them in the future.

I want to move on to another area, page 71 of the fiscal plan. I think it's not a point for argument that Energy and Environment are tightly linked in this province, that they have to be tightly linked in this province. In 2010-11 the gap between expenses in Energy and Environment is expected to be about $49 million, with Energy forecast at $358 million and Environment at $309 million. For 2011-12 it's expected to be a gap of $155 million. By 2013-14 there's a forecasted gap of $538 million, with Energy expenses forecast at $781 million and Environment at $246 million.

It would seem to me that as energy development proceeds apace in this province, environmental protection should as well. So based on these numbers, expenses in Energy are going to overshadow any necessary increases in environmental funding. Why does this gap exist? Why are the departments trending in opposite directions? How can Alberta's environment keep up with Alberta's energy development if adequate funding is not provided?

Mr. Renner: I think, with respect, it is a bit of an apples-to-oranges comparison. The work that Energy does is largely an auditing, tax collection kind of a business. A lot of what Energy does is on royalties, collecting the royalties, and all of the administration that is involved with auditing and ensuring that the appropriate royalties are paid. They also are responsible for land sales and all of the administration around that end of the business.

Energy is not actually directly involved on the environmental side except through the arm that is the ERCB, and the ERCB is funded jointly by industry and by Energy. So there is a growth that takes place there that if you cut through all of the grants that Energy has within their budget, the programs that Energy has within their budget, and similar kinds of nonrelated programs within our budget, I think you'll find that generally speaking the dollars that are specifically involved in Energy have not grown at a pace that would exceed the similar circumstances in Environment.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. Somebody needs to bring out a book called cross-ministerial responsibilities and provincial budgeting for dummies; there's no question about that. I wonder if the minister can tell me, getting back to the industry-funded approach to compliance, which you touched on just a minute ago with the ERCB and you talked about at some length in your exchange with my colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona, for the average Joe out there in the real world is there a place that they can go that easily tallies up how much industry is contributing year in and year out so that we can make an apples-to-apples comparison there, so that we can see that as your budget is shrinking year over year, in fact it's more than being made up by the contributions that industry is making to compliance and to monitoring?

Mr. Renner: No, I don't think there is such a place. That's why when we talk about the need for additional transparency, we talk about the need for having a system in place that is not only credible but seen to be credible. That's an important part of it, and on a go-forward basis that has to be part of the new-look monitoring system that goes in place.

We've also directed the panel to present us with a web-based information portal where the public would have access to that kind of information plus all of the other data that would be gathered through the system.

Mr. Taylor: When can we expect to see that?

Mr. Renner: Well, the report is due back from the panel in June of this year. I'm expecting that to be a fairly high-level report. They will drive down the details, and I would hope that portions of that panel recommendation could be put into force and implemented probably as early as next fiscal year.

Mr. Taylor: Okay. Thank you for that, Minister.

Carbon capture and storage. The capital plan this year includes $70 million in fiscal 2011-12, $518 million over the next three years for carbon capture and storage projects. I'm told that you're working hard on finalizing agreements with the proponents of the four major projects announced in 2009. I was approached by people involved in one of those projects just last week – I won't mention which one – and they expressed some concern that they need to get into a position in the not-too-distant but not immediate future to be able to decide from a company standpoint whether they want to fund the project going forward or not, and they're curious as to when the agreements may be finalized. So I wonder if you can speak to that to some extent and give us some sense of how this is progressing and when these four projects might be expected to get off the ground.

Mr. Renner: I can't speak to the four specific projects in anything other than general terms. The CCS budget is in Energy, not Environment. The responsibility of Environment is through the legislation that we have in place from a climate change perspective. We regulate CO<sub>2</sub> emissions. We will be responsible for regulating the approvals necessary to actually initiate action to get these facilities up and running, but the dollars allocated to the program will be under Energy.

There may be an ancillary role for Environment as we begin to have discussions around how we deal with . . . [A timer sounded] Is that the time? I'll just finish my statement, and then we'll move on.

We also have the carbon offset program, so there are ongoing discussions as to whether or not CO<sub>2</sub> that is injected through some kind of a CCS project would be eligible for recognition under an offset program. There may be a role for us there at some point in the future.

The Acting Chair: The chair will recognize the Member for Edmonton-Centre. Do you wish to share your 20 minutes with the minister?

Ms Blakeman: Of course I can share my time with the minister. I'm going to try and run through my questions on oil sands reclamation, alternative energy and conservation, climate change, and cumulative effects.

Starting with reclamation, under priority initiative 3.3, which is on page 58 of the business plan, it says to "develop and implement the Progressive Reclamation Strategy." My question is: what line item in the estimates reflects the development of the strategy, and where are the costs of the implementation? So two different parts of it, and if you can tell me where those are, that would be great.

Now, in the news release that came out around the March 17 announcement about the new reclamation security strategy, the government claims that transparency and consistency of reporting would be increased. Again, can you tell me how much the increased reporting would cost annually, and where would I find it? Additionally, if you need more staff members around this increased transparency and consistency of reporting, how many new staff members, if any, would be hired to track this rate of reclamation? I do note that you've had no change in FTEs from last year to this year, so I'm wondering if you're losing some somewhere else in order to put that in place.

On the same topic, if you could share with me the costs that are associated with the new website. Congratulations on that. That's a great idea. I think that will be very interesting for people. But I'm interested in what the costs are and, again, where they're reflected in the budget. Don't spend a lot of time on this, but I want to encourage the minister to put as much information on that site as possible.

I'm quite taken with the city of Edmonton's commitment to open data, in which they put all their information that they regularly keep onto their website and allow other people to use it in different ways. They ended up with an excellent bus app that you can get on your phone. Because all of their information about bus routes and stops and the numbers on them were all online, somebody else came along and developed an app out of it. You know, someone else took advantage of that. Now you can go to any bus stop, plug in the number, and find out when the next bus is coming.

I want to encourage you to put as much information up on that site as possible. I know that that runs a little bit counter to this government's kind of tight holding and centralization of information, but I think it'll help you in the long run.

On the same topic around the liabilities, the Pembina Institute has pointed out that there's about $15 billion in liability that is not covered. I'm wondering if the government has any plans to cover that liability before they move on to this new program and deal with new liability that they are creating in ongoing – what's the word everyone uses now? – go-forward oil sands projects and reclamation projects. You've got $15 billion that's sitting there now with a whole bunch of other things; now you're going to have a new program. Are you going to cover that $15 billion, or are you just going to move forward from today?

5:30

This is actually a point that Avril came up with, and it's a really good one. The ministry consistently works under the assumption that the oil industry isn't going anywhere and that it's going to continue to operate at what we know and understand today and that everything will stay on more or less the same track. What is the ministry forecasting for growth in the oil sands, and how long is that concept of today? For anyone reading Hansard, I'm doing air quotes around the word "today." How long is that going to last? I'm thinking there are a lot of very bright people up there with a lot of technology at their disposal. I'm assuming the oil sands should be moving forward technologically, but I don't see what the ministry is doing moving along at the same time. I hope that made sense to you. I'll let the minister respond to that.

Mr. Renner: Okay. The issue of progressive reclamation is part of our policy innovation, line 2.4. That's where it would be developed. Progressive reclamation is an add-on to MFSP, the mine financial security policy. The cost of administering that is still under development. The program itself will have to become implemented over time.

There are two aspects that we have to work on. The first one is to determine: what is the base security deposit that has to be held, particularly if we see new mines come on, both coal mines and, more particularly, oil sands mines? The cost of compliance and audit will be built into our budget over time, but at initial stages there won't be a significant additional cost.

I want to deal with this issue of liability and the reference to the Pembina Institute estimate that there's a $15 billion liability. There's a very basic assumption that comes to that $15 billion, and that assumption is that virtually no reclamation takes place until the very end of life, that you mine the life out for the 20 or 30 or 40 years during the life of the mine and you do virtually nothing. At the end of the mine's life there could be $15 billion in liability.

But that's not the way it works, and it's certainly not the way it works under progressive reclamation, which is what this is all about. It's about doing everything that can be possibly done at earlier stages to leave a minimal amount of reclamation that's done at the end of the mine's life. That's why, as we begin to approach the point where we start to ramp up the reclamation, the amount of reclamation will be dependent upon the amount of work that has already taken place. If a significant amount of work has already taken place, the amount of reclamation would be less.

Thank you for the compliments on the website. I'm very pleased with it, and I think that there continues to be room for improvement. The cost was approximately a million dollars, I'm told, and that was part of the clean energy line item, 2.3.

I think the member's comments with respect to the more transparency the better is something that I fundamentally agree with. We do have issues that we have to constantly wrestle with over whether or not there is privacy, whether the information that we have is private, whether or not, you know, there's intellectual property or there's information that we hold that is not quite ready for the public domain, but I think that we're getting better and better at trying to move that out.

I was on the warpath a while ago because I was very upset that we continue to have all of the FOIP requests that we do given the fact that we had made a conscious effort to put a lot of that information onto a public portal. We actually had some great fanfare about saying: you can now go on our website, you can look at a piece of property, and you can get all of that information that you require with respect to environmental issues on that property. We continued to have all of these FOIP requests, so I said: why is it that we're doing this?

The staff have found out that not only does government take a long time to change its ways, but so does the private sector. Many of the law offices have kind of got it as a bit of a ritual that when you do a land transfer, one of the things you do is put in a FOIP request to the government. They're not completely convinced in their own minds that the amount of information that we put on this public access site is really all of it. "We got the information that you put on your public site, but we're not sure if we believe you or if it's all there. So just to make sure we cover all our bases, we're going to do a FOIP request as well."

That's also the reason why, then, there were reports that Environment had all of these FOIP requests where we responded: there are none. Well, those were the ones. We don't have anything that's not already on that public site. There was some confusion on how that reporting took place.

But I agree that the more transparent we can be the better. We are going to be striving to be as transparent as we possibly can, particularly with respect to oil sands.

The assumption that the member referred to on moving forward with new technology is one that we struggle with. Sometimes there is a hesitancy to give approvals to a company that comes to us with new technology. That's because regulators tend to be fairly risk averse. If your technology that you came to us with doesn't work, who's going to be left holding the bag? Is it you, or is it us? That's why I think that we need to have much more focus on this whole concept of outcomes-based regulation.

If we say to you, "You will have emissions coming out of your stack that are less than so many parts per billion, but we're not going to be prescriptive and tell you how to do it; you figure out how to do it" or "If you want to bring in a new piece of technology that we've never seen before, that's fine; you do it, but know that at the end of the day if it doesn't work, it's not us that are responsible; it's going to be you, and you'll have to fix it," that is the difficulty. Oftentimes we have new technologies that are brought forward to us that, in the opinion of our staff, are not yet proven technologies, and we do have some difficulty in figuring out how to get those into an approval process.

We have something in the industry that's called BATEA, best available technology economically achievable. That's sort of the underlying criteria that we use now. It's known technology that's been used elsewhere. We've never figured out a way for us to actually take the risk and set the standard that others can follow because there is this aversion to taking that risk. What if it doesn't work?

Ms Blakeman: Interesting answer. Thank you very much.

Just two comments picking up on what the minister said. Now, you know, if you say that, well, you don't really know what the cost is yet because you still have a bunch of things to figure out, to that I say: well, how on earth did you come up with the numbers that are in the budget? If you didn't know what the numbers were, you must have guesstimated at something. So I'm not going to accept that comment from the minister that he can't tell me what any given thing cost because he hasn't quite worked it out. You must have put a budget figure in there to come up with the numbers that you've got.

The second thing is around that idea of progressive reclamation. I understand what you're doing, and I don't entirely disagree with you, but you are also putting that plan in. You are not going backwards and picking up all of the old sites that are there. You are going forward on that. You're picking up some old sites, but you're not picking up everything. You're not picking up that liability that's sitting there. So my argument around that is that you haven't picked up the entire liability that's out there for the taxpayer if things go wrong. You are more or less going forward from this day.

Now I'm going to change gears and talk about climate change. Sorry; that's a bit of a head-snapper. The minister has talked about the declines in the fund. Given that the ministry relies on the money from the climate change and emissions management fund and given that the ministry relies on that fund for climate change initiatives, are there plans to increase the $15 levy in order to keep some money in that fund? If it just keeps going down because companies are buying offsets and that's the fund that you're relying on to pay for climate change initiatives, eventually we won't have enough money in there to do that. What's the consideration about that $15 levy?

The larger conversation, which we don't have time to have here, is that that levy at $15 is a joke because at this point I think the figure that's bandied about is 90 bucks a tonne. If you really want to see change in oil and gas – and I'll talk about conventional oil and gas and oil sands; they're two different things – you've got to get that number up to where it makes more economic sense to the companies to do something different than to just pay the levy as part of doing business. But we don't have time for that conversation.

Back to climate change again. If you're not going to increase that levy, then are you considering going from 100,000 tonnes, I think you've got, of greenhouse gas and reducing that to 50,000 tonnes for emitters being required to pay into that fund? That's another way of continuing to get money and at the same time incenting or disincenting the industry enough to change what they're doing. That's certainly a part of the environmental policy that I developed, that we would move that bar down so that it picked up the emitters that are in the 50,000-tonne range.

I also want to ask about line 2.2 of the estimates, climate change. I'm wondering what exactly this is used for. Is that all the tech fund, or is there anything else in there? I haven't heard the minister talk about anything else in any of the other questions others have asked him, so I'm looking for the list of what's covered under that particular line item.

The last bit is alternative energy. I'm wondering – again, this is a long conversation that we don't have time to have – why there is so little spent on clean energy and so little focus on clean energy in your business plan. If we're going to diversify the economy, if we're going to move forward, all those things we're always told, we need to look at more alternative clean energy. I'm just not seeing it, so why?

Under priority initiative 3.2 in the business plan it says that the climate change strategy is going to be updated. I'm wondering what exactly those changes are going to consist of. The minister has referred to the updates or the changes in the climate change strategy as well, and I don't know what that means, so if he can let us know.

On page 19 of the fiscal plan it talks about: over $100 million is allocated to support various environmentally sustainable resource development plans. Could you provide a breakdown or point me to a website where there is a list of who is getting that hundred million dollars and how much each one gets? It turns up on page 19 of your fiscal plan. It's under Energy and Environment.

Over $100 million to support various environmentally-sustainable resource development programs, including incentives for bio-energy product development, environmental monitoring and reporting, land stewardship and water management.

How are they breaking that up? Well, can I ask the minister to ask the President of the Treasury Board how they came up with that hundred million dollars? Specifically, I'd like to know how much is being allocated to the biofuel initiatives. It seems to me that there's a heck of a lot of money going into that sector to the detriment of other alternative energy and conservation sectors.

The last thing I have is cumulative effects management. There was a lot of emphasis on that two years ago, nothing in the budget last year, and now it's back in prime time. What did the government use last year to figure out exactly what the cumulative effects are going to be that he could use this year? I've watched that sort of development, and I think there was a lot of emphasis two years ago. Last year there was almost no discussion in the budget debates about it, and now it's back, you know, with bells and whistles and neon lights. What was the thinking? What's it going to look like to be implemented? What are the enforcement mechanisms that are going to be included in that?

The Acting Chair: Your speaking time has expired.

Ms Blakeman: Could you put me back on the list, please, Mr. Chairman? Thank you.

The Acting Chair: The chair recognizes the hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona. Do you wish to combine your speaking time?

Ms Notley: I will try combining this time and see how that goes. I think I've probably said this on previous occasions: short questions, short answers. If I interrupt, it's not to be combative. It's simply to move on to the next topic or to sort of ask a follow-up question or something like that. Just to sort of make sure that this is clear, I'm assuming that if you don't get to answering those questions on those issues that we have raised, they will be answered in written format and tabled, with all people getting copies of them. Is that correct? I understand that there was some inconsistency amongst the committees. We did get some of that information back subsequently, but I'm just ensuring because I do know that I had some questions that remain outstanding from our last round. I'm assuming that you'll get to those.

I wanted to start quickly. I'll deal with three issues together if I can. The first is with respect to the climate fund. You did speak about the $100 million having been kicked out the door thus far, and you talked about the additional money leveraged there. I'm wondering if you can talk a little bit about the specific performance measures that the ministry or the fund is relying on in terms of ensuring that that money has been invested and created a project that reaches back to certain goals. The greater the specificity the better, of course, because subjective performance measures are not of value. Notwithstanding that industry is putting its own money into it, we are putting, essentially, regulatory money into that as well, so presumably we would have some fairly strong performance measures.

I did want to just start really quickly on the numbers with respect to the orphan wells, the number that have been reclaimed over the course of the last two years. Then in terms of the larger reclamation policy, the mine reclamation policy, we've had some debate on that issue both in the House as well as through the media, but I would like a more specific answer about why the reclamation policy, first of all, does not address issues with respect to initial land disturbance, doesn't look at postreclamation maintenance liability, and does not look at groundwater liability. My understanding is that those things are still not included in the definition of liability that would be covered under the reclamation program. If I'm mistaken, then I'm sure you'll be happy to correct me.

Then the other question with respect to that. The Member for Edmonton-Centre talked about the $15 billion liability, but quite frankly my concern is the liability that Albertans stand to be facing 15, 20 years from now. The most conservative – the most conservative – of estimates around that are, as has been said, $15 billion but also up to $30 billion. Then, of course, we have the experience of Total recently in their application process having put forward their per-hectare reclamation estimates. Of course, if those were perceived to be the more accurate number, we'd actually be looking at more like a $90 billion liability versus $30 billion down the road. My question, of course, is: how is it that we think that $6 billion by 2030 can possibly leave Albertans in a position where their liability is covered?

Linked to that, then, is this whole issue of having third-party verification of the liability estimates provided by industry. As I stated before, there's a long documented history of industry, whether intentionally or unintentionally, underestimating liability. It's not only a question for Alberta taxpayers in ensuring that the liability is properly estimated, but it's also, frankly, a question ultimately for shareholders. We may actually find that, you know, the stock markets and various regulations governing how these companies function in other settings will demand a clear estimation of liability just on behalf of shareholders. But I'm not here to advocate for oil company shareholders. I'm here to advocate for Alberta taxpayers. So I want to know why we're not looking more clearly at a third-party liability verification system because that's not currently included in the reclamation policy. To me that seems to be a tremendous shortcoming.

I'll stop there and then move on to some other issues. That gives you about five minutes unless I interrupt you.

Mr. Renner: Well, thanks for the short question. I'll try and give you an equally short answer. The performance measures for the Climate Change and Emissions Management Corporation are within the corporation. I think it's important to note that if we are going to be managing this as an arm's-length corporation, then we have to be careful that we do not try and exert too much direction over that board.

The Auditor General makes it very clear that if an organization is under the care, control, and custody of the minister, then that corporation needs to be part of the minister's consolidated reporting. That would be very problematic in this case because part of the process for consolidated reporting is that funds must be expended in the same year that they are collected, and it doesn't allow for the kind of flexibility that this corporation has to have when it signs some of these agreements with these proponents that maybe will have funds that will be paid out as various benchmarks are achieved over a period of time.

I can't include in my business plan the performance indicators or the performance measures, but I will refer the member to CCEMC's website. They have one. It's very clear what they use as criteria for establishing value for dollars from their perspective. If you don't find what you're looking for there, then refer back to our office.

The orphan well program is not part of Alberta Environment; it's in Alberta Energy. So I can't give you statistics on the orphan well program.

Ms Notley: But your staff are responsible for inspecting.

Mr. Renner: No, our staff are responsible for issuing reclamation certificates.

Ms Notley: Exactly. So that's why I'm asking you to tell me how many reclamation certificates have been issued.

Mr. Renner: Okay. Forty-four orphan sites received reclamation certificates in '09-10. The Orphan Well Association is estimating reclamation certificates for 40 more sites in '10-11.

The mine financial security policy: much discussion on that and much discussion around liability. I can assure you that in the calculation of liability all of the criteria that would lead to liability will be used in the calculation. This is a program that is designed to put some assurance in place that the taxpayer is not going to be left holding the bag, but it's also a program that is designed to acknowledge that there is value in the asset that's left in the mine at early stages. At early stages the cost of reclamation is far exceeded by the value of the resource that's still left in the ground. We then put a care-and-custody deposit in place. Should the current operator abandon that mine, it would revert to the Crown, and we would be responsible for care and custody until we could find someone else who would take over the mining of that resource and would also therefore take over the financial responsibility for reclamation.

At later stages that same ratio doesn't apply, and that's why we've talked about the need for a 3 to 1 ratio, 3 to 1 asset to liability. At later stages it's either when the 3 to 1 asset to liability is no longer applicable or 15 years left in mine life. That's when it kicks in that they have to start contributing security on an annual basis. That's where the calculation is made for what is the appropriate amount of security, and that is a calculation that will be part of the transparency. The way that the calculation is arrived at will be part of the disclosure and the transparency of the program. It is something that is not simply calculated by industry but is jointly arrived at between industry and government.

You know, the member has suggested that a third party needs to be involved. I would suggest that she's almost answered her own question. A third party is involved because once it gets to be that transparent, then the company's own auditors, our auditors are going to be examining this to ensure that these are appropriate levels that are in place.

I'm not so sure that that third-party verification is not already in place with the Auditor General in Alberta, who will review those, as he already has and pointed out to us that work needs to be done, and we've now done that work. I would suggest to the member that as we become increasingly more transparent, as she's already pointed out, the shareholders will hold the companies accountable through their auditor as well and ensure that there is appropriate disclosure on their financial statements also.

[Mr. Cao in the chair]

Ms Notley: Well, thank you for that answer. I think the problem is that we don't currently have the transparency, and we currently have a plan that's estimating a certain amount of money. There's nothing in the plan that suggests that we're going to change the way we identify what we've already identified as the liability. I mean, we've already made assumptions about liability, and the process for making those assumptions has not been transparently disclosed.

The plan itself includes assumptions about liability right now that are not clearly explained, so that problem continues. You know, you're quite right that the Auditor General started out by identifying that we don't have enough security, but I suspect that if we go back into it, we'll find that we still don't have enough clarity around how the liability is calculated. As I say, I don't know exactly how Total came up with a number that was three times what the assumption is in the ministry's plan for this reclamation, but I do know that they did. This is concerning. I'm not an expert, so I'd like an objective expert. Just the same way we've needed objective experts who are scientists to come in and tell us that our monitoring really hasn't been so great for the last many years, we need that independence for this.

I'd like to go on as well that we still have a problem with the 3 to 1. I'm concerned that we're still short even with your explanation up to now.

I had a quick question just to follow up on the orphan wells. With the $20 million having been added to the fund by the taxpayer last year, for the year '10-11, I'm a little concerned that we haven't seen a significant increase in the number of reclamations through that fund. In fact, we see a slight decrease. Yet we spent $20 million last year. My question is whether people who are issuing those reclamation certificates in your ministry anticipate a big bump this year to account for that fairly significant public investment.

With respect to the land-use framework and cumulative effects my colleague from Calgary-Currie asked the question: well, while we're waiting endlessly for the land-use framework and for the cumulative effects program to be put in place, what are we doing? The minister responded by saying: well, we do what we've always done; we've got our monitoring that we've always had in place there. That's fine except that what we've had over the last 12 months is a lot of third-party assessment and identification that what we've got in place right now is not good enough. We've got an oil sands panel, and we're waiting until June for them to report. Then I suspect they'll come up with some process, and if it looks anything at all like the land-use framework and the cumulative effects management, we could be two or three years down the road before we get any kind of substantive change in how monitoring and approvals and measuring and all that kind of work is done.

My concern continues to be that right now we seem to be really good at carrying on with industrial application reviews and approvals, but we're not so good at moving forward in an effective and fast way to ensure that we're actually measuring the right stuff before we approve development. So I'm asking you to deal with the fact that: are you prepared to acknowledge that there has been some third-party expert assessment that what we're doing right now is not good enough? What do we do while we wait for the process to complete, where we figure out how to make it better? In the meantime we're not stopping development, so what are we doing in the meantime?

I want to ask a final question because I suspect you'll use the rest of the time for answering these questions. With respect to this issue of monitoring you say: oh, it's not a question of just looking at the budget being reduced or staying the same or whatever because always remember that once we come up with our fabulous new model, industry will still be doing the bulk of the monitoring and will still be paying for this. But the problem, which is very clear through RAMP, is that when industry is paying for it, there is no public accountability; there's no transparency. You've identified that. You've totally identified that, and that's good, and I'm glad that some of that work is going to be considered through the work of the oil sands panel.

My question is simply this. Not only does the process of monitoring have to be public in how they spend their money and where they spend their money and what kind of monitoring they use and what kind of measures they use and how often they do it – all of that has to be public – but the results have to be public. If we end up with a monitoring system that is not entirely, entirely transparent, with no regard for any of this proprietary interest crap – and I use that word quite intentionally – that puts a barrier between the public and their ability to assure that their lands and air and water are safe and what's actually going on, then it's not good enough. So my question is: is there a commitment that we will no longer be dealing with the kinds of barriers between public access to information and industry payment of monitoring when you move forward with whatever your new plan is, which I'm sure will be ready to go in June?

Mr. Renner: I didn't think I would get time to respond. Thank you.

Very quickly on orphan wells. Again, it's Energy that has the responsibility. I'm told – because I've asked the same question, quite frankly – that the majority of the wells that were reclaimed under the funding that we injected were some of the worst ones, some of the most expensive ones so that the number of certificates is somewhat reflective of the fact that some of these were very expensive projects to get work done on. So a reminder that that orphan well program is a program that deals with very old sites that were abandoned long ago and the owners can no longer be traced. If we know who did it, they'll be paying themselves.

Let me get to this whole issue of: why do we continue to allow development if we don't have an adequate monitoring system? Every one of the reports that we've seen has indicated that there is room for improvement – and we have said there is room for improvement – but no one has suggested that we are at a point where there is no additional room within some kind of a reasonable regulatory program. When we talk about cumulative effects, cumulative effects is all about putting management triggers in place and putting a system in place where you put limits. For example, we've now got limits in place for the Industrial Heartland, for that area, and the limits are far in excess of what the current development is. They would pose some, I guess, pressure on all of the development. If all of the upgraders that had been contemplated for that part of the world had gone ahead, we would have had to make some very difficult decisions on how we're going to maintain that new development and stay within a current limit.

The same thing applies in the oil sands. We're talking about a regime where the limits that would be put in place to the point where we would have to take some serious action far exceed where we are at now. We're in the process of putting together the land-use framework. We're putting in the monitoring program that will help us to determine where to go in the future, not today or tomorrow.

The Chair: All right. We have the last seven minutes.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much. I'm just going to pick up on some of the things I sort of left on the table. I do want to pick up on the monitoring because I think this is where I fundamentally disagree with the government. I think it is a role of government to perform the monitoring because that is the only agency that can be absolutely impartial because they have no money-making that's on the line for that, no profit margin that's on the line, and can be seen as unbiased. I know it's expensive, but frankly I think that Albertans are willing to pay that price if they know that they're going to get that straight-across monitoring and that it is absolutely reliable because the government did it.

I don't think anybody trusts the stuff that industry does because it's that old thing about the fox looking after the henhouse. It just doesn't make sense to people. So I encourage the minister and I would certainly encourage his colleagues to support additional funds going into his money to cover that monitoring. I know it's a fundamental difference in ideology. I don't expect the minister to spring up and go, "I agree with you, Laurie," and that's the dividing line between us. I think that it's a function of government to do monitoring, not only in his department but everywhere else.

Okay. I had put some questions on the table around oil sands reclamation, some of which he's answered but not all, if your assistants are able to weed my stuff out of what he's answered in answering the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

I'd also talked about alternative energy and why there was so little emphasis and so little money put into it and how that was going to work inside of their climate change strategy. The breakdown of the hundred million, which he said he didn't know and I encouraged him to find out. The biofuels. The cumulative effects management. My last question on that is: can you provide more detail on what the cumulative effects for the lower Athabasca would look like? You started to talk about it, and I have notes somewhere, but if you can give us a bit more detail about exactly what it is you think that's going to be.

You talked a bit about limits, for example. I mean, in looking at what the Lower Athabasca Regional Advisory Council came forward with, they came forward with a recommendation of 80 per cent development, 20 per cent conservation. Is that the kind of limit that you're talking about? I don't think that's particularly going to fly. I know that with the cumulative effects management you're actually talking about, you know, limits of – what are you talking about? Is it like limits of so many particulates in the air and so much stuff in the water? He's nodding his head.

I'm wondering why that cumulative effects context was not in place before those regional advisory councils started to work. It seems to me that you're moving forward at the same time on a couple of different streams instead of having something set it out much more strongly coming from the policy direction.

Why don't you answer that? Thanks very much.

Mr. Renner: I want to deal with the last one first. The reason we haven't been able to implement cumulative effects yet is that the legislation that we have is focused on individual project-by-project regulation. When we give an approval to someone to emit something, whether it be particulates into the air or degree of a municipality to discharge their treated sewer into the river, it's all about that particular approval. We need the land-use framework and the lower Athabasca plan to talk about ambient air qualities and talk about total limits from all sources, not from individual sources. That's what will be in the plan.

There will be in that plan reference to air quality – total air quality, total emissions, total particulates in the air – and that's what we regulate to. It adds another degree of regulation. Not that we're going to forget about the individual approvals – they'll still be there – but we're also going to say that there comes a point where you can't have any more approvals because you're going to exceed the limit. If you're going to have more approvals, then you're going to have to do a better job on the downstream side to prevent those emissions in the first place, and in the absence of that, we can't do more approvals. That's what it's all about. That's literally what it's all about.

That's why it is such earth-breaking legislation. That's why I get so excited about it. I'm sure that you're going to quite enjoy reading the plan when it comes out.

The member talked about alternative energy and biofuel. Again, that's in Energy, not in our department. We have energy efficiency. We did the consumer rebate programs. We did those. But we don't have grants for biofuel. We don't have grants for alternative energy. That is Energy.

Finally, I won't say that I agree with you that government has to do monitoring. What I will agree with you on, though, is that industry cannot be seen to be in control. I don't know who's going to do the monitoring at the end of the day, but I do know that industry cannot be seen to be in control. It may be government that does it. It may be a different organization that does it. But, clearly, if we're going to have the credibility that we need to have, it has to be seen to be managed by an organization that is not accountable to industry.

Ms Blakeman: On the cumulative effects management it sounds to me like you've almost got a FITFIR that will be in place. The first ones that get there, get their emissions to fit into the total amount allowed, but by the time you get to the 10th one, they won't be able to start because everybody else is taking up the allocation. Then how are you going to do this? Go back to the original nine and say, "If you guys cut your emissions, you can let in the 10th guy"? In the world of the free market I can't see that one happening. Do you just stop the development in a given area at the point where they reach, or do you start to move your target around?

Mr. Renner: Eventually there comes a point where you would have to stop development, but in the meantime you have an opportunity to co-ordinate the program. You have capital turnover. New technology becomes available. The later projects usually have much better, newer technology than the older projects. So you have to put in a plan that recognizes capital turnover . . .

The Chair: Hon. minister, sorry. I hesitate to interrupt, but pursuant to Government Motion 5, agreed to on February 23, 2011, the Committee of Supply shall now rise and report progress.

The chair would advise the officials to leave the Chamber so that we can continue on.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

Dr. Brown: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply has had under consideration resolutions for the Department of Environment relating to the 2011-12 government estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, reports progress, and requests leave to sit again.

The Deputy Speaker: Those in concurrence with the report, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Deputy Speaker: Opposed, please say no. So ordered.

It's now past 6 o'clock, so the chair shall now declare that this Assembly stands adjourned until 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

We also have a field policy committee starting at 6:50 p.m.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6:18 p.m. to Wednesday at 1:30 p.m.]

STANDING AND SPECIAL COMMITTEES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Standing Committee on the Alberta Heritage Savings Trust Fund

Chair: Ms Tarchuk

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Wednesday, March 23, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. We give thanks for the bounty of our province, our land, our resources, and our people. We pledge ourselves to act as good stewards on behalf of all Albertans. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert.

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly 53 grade 6 students from l'école Father Jan school in St. Albert. These students are accompanied by their teachers, Julie Maisonneuve and Corinne Chan, and their parent helpers, Bruce Hoyt and Michelle Guest. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly 26 students from one of my favourite schools in the Edmonton-Calder constituency, and that's Kensington school, one that I can virtually see from my house. With us today, in addition to the 26 students, are teachers Ms Keri Haskell and Miss Rebecca Yu. Of course, no mention of this particular class would be complete without mentioning my buddy Aziz. I'd ask them all to now rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-Ste. Anne.

Mr. VanderBurg: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a great privilege and an honour to introduce 80 guests that we have here today from Percy Baxter school. That's three classrooms that have travelled 200 kilometres to visit us today. I'd ask them to please rise and receive the warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me to rise today and introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly nine members of CAUS, the Council of Alberta University Students. I had the privilege to spend a little bit of time with the students last night and to hear some of their issues and concerns. This is a bright group of students and very strong advocates for education in our province. I'd like them to stand as I introduce them, and then we'll give them the warm welcome. They are Hardave Birk, Keith McLaughlin, Nick Dehoda, Lauren Webber, Taz Kassam, Aden Murphy, Zack Moline, Andrew Williams, and, last but not least, Duncan Wojtaszek.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Aboriginal Relations.

Mr. Webber: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think that this is appropriate. Although the hon. minister just introduced my daughter, I just want to introduce her once again. I feel like I have to. Not only is she the U of C Students' Union president; she is beautiful, and she has also just been awarded the 2011 student with distinction at the U of C along with her being the 2011 graduating class valedictorian. So I am quite proud of my daughter.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Barlow Trail Underpass

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Next month when Barlow Trail at 48th Avenue N.E. closes so that a new runway and international terminal can be built at the airport, a whole new set of transportation issues will be faced by residents of northeast Calgary as well as all Calgarians.

It is estimated that the cost of the proposed underpass will be $295 million. Of that figure, it is reported that Calgary will contribute $25 million, and the balance, $270 million, will come from other government sources. It appears, Mr. Speaker, that the bulk of that funding will come from this government through MSI funding. This government is producing results for the residents of northeast Calgary. Airport passengers also help pay for the runway and terminal improvements through a $22 airport improvement fee per passenger charged by the authority.

The city of Calgary and the province are willing to do their part. It is the airport authority that needs to step up to the plate and make a significant contribution to this project, which benefits all Calgarians. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the airport authority and the city of Calgary have many differing opinions on issues such as compensation for the land. Media reports indicate that the airport authority wants $24.6 million for the land for the underpass. That is land that sits largely below the runway. That doesn't make any sense to me. In addition, the authority wants to oblige the city to build interchanges and road improvements among many other matters.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage the authority to consider the overall impact of the closure of Barlow Trail and the need for an underpass for all Calgarians and, indeed, all Albertans. As elected representatives we all try to do the right thing and move forward on initiatives that are in the best public interest. I encourage the airport authority to do the same thing.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Health Services Financial Reporting

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. In order for any government to retain the trust and confidence of citizens, it must keep accurate records of its spending. Each expense must be carefully accounted for so that taxpayers know their money is being used to benefit the public. Many Albertans are wondering if the government used taxpayers' money to silence doctors concerned by Progressive Conservative mismanagement of public health care. That's why it's more important than ever to ensure that public money isn't being used for nefarious purposes.

When hundreds of millions of dollars are hidden in mysterious and vague categories such as other expenses, taxpayers have a right to wonder exactly why the details of these expenses have been hidden. The books of the Capital health region, for example, show $300 million in undisclosed expenses over seven years. I asked this government if any of that money was used to fund any of the settlements, lawsuits, or legal fees against doctors who spoke out about government mismanagement of health care. Naturally, these questions have been dodged.

Last year Alberta Health Services hid another $42 million under the “other fees” category. What was that money used for? The government won’t say. Why were severance payments and out-of-court settlements hidden somewhere in government books rather than identified according to good, transparent accounting practices? The government won’t say.

Alberta taxpayers are proud of their public health care system. They want it to be there when they need it, and they want to be sure that they’re getting good value for every penny of tax money that funds the system. I’m sure most Albertans would be outraged if they were to discover that any of the tax money was being used to silence doctors who were only trying to do their jobs. It’s time for this government to come clean and provide truly open and transparent accounting for each and every dollar of funding that goes through and towards public health care.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Whitecourt-St. Anne.

Healthy Food Choices

Mr. VanderBurg: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today thousands of Albertans will buy their meals from one of Alberta’s restaurants, bars, cafés, or delis. Just last week the hon. Minister of Health and Wellness pointed out that the food service industry in Alberta is a $600 million a month business. Almost a quarter of Alberta’s youth are reported to be obese, Mr. Speaker. More than half of Alberta’s adults are overweight or obese. Albertans love to eat out, but how can we help families and health-conscious citizens make healthy choices when eating out?

The Heart and Stroke Foundation’s Health Check Alberta restaurant program is one answer to that problem, sir. The program uses the familiar Health Check symbol that appears on thousands of food products on store shelves and puts it next to menu items in participating restaurants that have been determined as healthy choices. Registered dietitians decide which foods get the Health Check symbol based on criteria set out by the Canada food guide. In addition to the logo the amount of calories, saturated fat, trans fat, sodium, and fibre are listed for each approved menu item. Already the Health Check symbol appears on menus of larger chain restaurants like Boston Pizza, Swiss Chalet, Pizza Hut, Second Cup, and the White Spot.

Mr. Speaker, I was happy to see two Alberta-based restaurants, SAGE Savouries and Husky House, join the program last Friday, and I hope that we see more restaurants join in the future. Ultimately, I hope that healthy meal options become something that Albertans ask for when they go to their favourite eatery. Putting the familiar Health Check symbol on menus across Alberta will go a long way in helping families make healthy choices when eating out. It will contribute to the overall health of Albertans and will help the sustainability of our health system in the future.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Lorraine Farmer
Mary Phillippo

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It’s a great pleasure and honour for me to rise today to recognize two ladies who were hospitalized recently and had nothing but positive comments about the treatment they received in our health care system.

The first is a brave and courageous Albertan, Lorraine Farmer. Lorraine was diagnosed with breast cancer in April of 2006. The treatment at the time resulted in an almost five-year cancer-free life. Unfortunately, the cancer returned as a walnut-sized tumour on the brain, and Lorraine was diagnosed and taken to hospital on March 4, 2011. She had surgery on March 6 and went home on March 9, 2011. Lorraine is a fighter, and she checked herself out of the hospital early and went home to convalesce. From her original diagnosis Lorraine complimented the professionalism and dedication of the doctors and nurses at High River and the Foot-hills hospital. Her entry and exit from the hospital was a very smooth transition. Lorraine believes that a positive attitude coupled with the best health care treatment in Canada contribute to her ongoing recovery. She commented: we are blessed in Alberta to be living in a province that places such a high emphasis on quality health care for our citizens.

The second one. I received an e-mail from, Mary Phillippo, a recent arrival from Nova Scotia. She says that

I have nothing but positive words to say about the Alberta Healthcare system. A few months ago I had to schedule a mammogram and ultrasound. To my surprise my appointment was scheduled for the very next week. Typically, a person could wait up to two to three months for this same procedure in Nova Scotia, which is where I’m from. I applaud the Alberta government for addressing the medical needs of Albertans.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Health Care System Strengths

Mr. Benito: Mr. Speaker, we hear that Albertans receive exceptional care in our health care system across the province every day, and that’s because we have talented and dedicated health professionals who are committed to delivering the best possible care right here in Alberta.

You know what, Mr. Speaker? Health professionals across Canada have recognized that Alberta is a great place to practise medicine. The proof is in the numbers. This province has had the highest percentage increase of physicians out of all the other provinces at 22.5 per cent from 2004 to 2008.

The government has also committed to funding 367 seats in the University of Alberta and University of Calgary faculties of medicine, a 62 per cent increase from 2005. Residency positions have also increased nearly 50 per cent in about the same time period, Mr. Speaker.

It’s not just physicians we are investing in; it is many of the front-line health workers such as nurses. Alberta Health Services has committed to hiring at least 70 per cent of our nursing graduates. About 1,000 more registered nurse graduates will have jobs when they are finished their programs. One of those graduates is my daughter, Mr. Speaker. The three-year collective agreement that Alberta Health Services signed with the United Nurses of Alberta last year will ensure that our nurses remain among the best paid in the country so that we can keep them close to home.

Mr. Speaker, we hear time and time again about the great care Albertans experience in our health care facilities. It is because these men and women love what they do . . . [Mr. Benito’s speaking time expired]

The Speaker: Thank you.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Integrated Ambulance Services in Airdrie

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Last year Airdrie had one of the most effective and efficient integrated ambulance and fire services in the country. It was a prized, life-saving jewel of our city. And then came the Alberta superboard. When determined by this government that AHS would manage provincial ambulance services, I was promised by the current Minister of Energy that this would not mean Airdrie would lose its integrated service. In fact, he said Airdrie would benefit from the province picking up the cost.

Well, it turned out that wasn't true. AHS, led by a reprehensible bureaucrat named Darren Sandbeck, would not enter into a contract with Airdrie unless it complied with a litany of expensive upgrades that made keeping the service financially impossible. As a member of the government I begged the now Energy minister to intervene. He responded by paying a former PC cabinet buddy to unsuccessfully mediate the dispute.

After leaving the PCs, I pleaded with the current health minister to intervene, as did the mayor, over and over again. We even had him down to city council to personally brief him on the situation. Nothing changed. After endless head-nodding, we were assured it would be dealt with. Nothing was done. So we lost our integrated service, and in came the white knights at AHS to run our ambulances.

Last night I received a call informing me that AHS is now reporting a 33 per cent increase in Airdrie response times since the takeover. This means that someone suffering a heart attack will wait almost three minutes longer for life-saving treatment than they did prior to the takeover, increasing the risk of premature death.

The centralized superboard experiment has been a complete failure, and I have no doubt that this government will receive this verdict from voters at the next election. But let me assure those involved with this Airdrie ambulance debacle that if we lose one person in my community to premature death because of this incompetence, I will personally ensure that those responsible are held accountable to the full extent of the law. On behalf of my constituents I demand that the health minister order AHS to get those ambulance response times back to where they were prior to his superboard's incompetent takeover. Failure to do so will have very serious consequences.

Speaker's Ruling Referring to Nonmembers

The Speaker: Hon. members, the chair does not intervene in members' statements, but, hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, did I hear you name a person who is from outside of this House and use an adjective, I guess, in this case: reprehensible?

Mr. Anderson: Absolutely, sir. And I stand by that comment.

The Speaker: Fine. I just want to caution all members that it violates the rules of the House when we refer to people who cannot defend themselves in this House. The hon. member might choose to wish to deal with this issue outside of the House rather than inside of the House. [interjections] Okay. [interjections]

Airdrie-Chestermere, would you just cool it, please? If you want to violate the rules in a member's statement – I provided my statement in here, have dealt with it in here. You can deal with it outside of the House now on your own.

We're going to continue with the Routine.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Bill Pr. 2

Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is my pleasure to be able to rise and have leave to introduce Bill Pr. 2, the Galt Scholarship Fund Transfer Act.

The Galt School of Nursing Alumnae Society of Alberta has presented a petition requesting that the terms of the trust be modified and that the trust fund be transferred to the University of Lethbridge and that the Galt scholarship fund be continued under this act.

Mr. Speaker, this is some nurses from the Galt school of nursing who over a number of years have been putting money aside for scholarships. The scholarships now going to that particular group have been decreasing, and they in their generosity are going to turn over a substantial amount of money to the University of Lethbridge for nursing scholarships.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 2 read a first time]

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Patient Advocacy by Health Professionals

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2000 Capital health region recruited top thoracic surgeon Dr. Tim Winton from the University of Toronto. Dr. Winton took over as director of thoracic surgery after Dr. Ciaran McNamee was pushed out of his job for speaking out for more patient resources. In turn, Dr. Winton is no longer the director of thoracic surgery and is now listed as a university course co-ordinator. To the Premier: can the Premier advise if Dr. Winton was pushed out of his position as head of thoracic surgery in circumstances similar to Dr. McNamee?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, if any physician, including those that were named by the member across, feels that in some way they have been hampered in what they brought forward to the board or bullied in some way and weren't able to carry out their duties, feel free, if they feel that way, to bring the evidence before the Health Quality Council.

Dr. Swann: Mr. Speaker, will the Premier take the necessary steps to grant immunity to Dr. Winton so that he can explain his position without fear of retribution?

Mr. Stelmach: One thing we know for sure is that anybody who appears before the Health Quality Council will have the protection of the Alberta Evidence Act, and anything that they bring forward to the Health Quality Council will be kept in strict confidence.

Dr. Swann: To the Premier: we'll never know the truth about why Dr. Winton left his position without an independent judicial inquiry, so will the Premier finally concede that it's time to call an independent judge-led public inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: As I've said countless times, the Health Quality Council is prepared to hear from all physicians and even nurses and anybody in our health care system that feels in some way that they've been bullied. They can bring that to the Health Quality Council. It'll be held confidential. No one else will know in terms of what evidence they have brought to the Health Quality Council, and that is the best place for that.

The Speaker: Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Wait Times for Cancer Care

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. A recent medical journal article from The Lancet reports that the five-year survival rate for lung cancer in Alberta is only 15.1 per cent, the lowest of all provinces in the country. In response to the study a prominent thoracic surgeon from Harvard said, and I quote: this is irrefutable evidence by an impartial third party that Albertans suffer with cancer care. End quote. To the Premier: how can the Premier deny the connection between the country's worst lung cancer survival rates and the dismissal of these two prominent lung surgeons in Edmonton?

Mr. Stelmach: If the hon. member believes that that is the reason, then those two physicians that he named should appear before the Health Quality Council, and if it is true, what he said, then they should do it immediately.

Dr. Swann: Well, would the Premier agree with the assessment of Dr. Ciaran McNamee that the third-party review here shows irrefutable evidence that Albertans suffer with inadequate cancer care?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as we've heard in this House, many Albertans have had excellent cancer care. There are others, in terms of waiting times, that I know we've heard can be improved. That's the purpose of the Health Quality Council, to see how we can further decrease waiting times in emergency rooms, improve cancer care in the province. We've come a long way, but there is always room for more improvement.

Dr. Swann: Given that the Premier has asked for evidence of unnecessary deaths and we are presenting it, will he finally acknowledge that there is enough evidence supporting the allegations from the Member for Edmonton-Meadowlark to call for a full judicial inquiry?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, as I said, these physicians that were named can go immediately to the Health Quality Council and present their evidence. That is the council that will hear the evidence and will make recommendations to the government. That report will be public. The first report will be released in three months, then in six months, and the full final report will be done in nine months.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. These Tories talk a great deal about, quote, helping doctors advocate for their patients and turning the page. End quote. While it's nice to see their tacit admission that there was a culture of fear and intimidation in the past, there has actually been no improvement to the process by which doctors can speak up. As seen in the Alberta Health Services safe disclosure policy, every route for raising concerns ends up in the hands of their ethics and compliance officer. To the Premier: does the Premier see any problem with Alberta Health Services' reporting measures being entirely internal, with no outside oversight?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm glad this member mentioned this because yesterday he gave out such an inaccuracy so as to almost mislead people here. The compliance officer who looks after these kinds of issues was an employee of the health system up until 1997, and then she left until 2008, so she was not there in the way this member suggested. But they do have a compliance and ethics officer who is doing a very good job looking into these matters. Any matters that come up that belong over at the Health Quality Council review will find their way over there.

Dr. Swann: Given that Dr. Maybaum was told that, quote, there were people high up in government who wanted his head on a platter, end quote, how would the ethics and compliance officer and the Alberta Health Services Board be able to do anything about intimidation directly from the government?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, we've made it very clear that we're encouraging doctors to speak out in this way, and I'm glad they're taking that opportunity. Now we're encouraging them to also take those issues to the independent review. I might add: an independent review that just named five very prominent people to its health advisory council, including the former Deputy Prime Minister of Canada, including two highly respected doctors, including a cancer specialist from Calgary, and including a former Chief Justice of this province.

The Speaker: The hon. leader.

Dr. Swann: Yes. Thank you. We're not talking about who's on the committee; we're talking about what their mandate is.

Given that Alberta Health Services' internal reporting has no external oversight, given that the Health Quality Council review is behind closed doors, will the Premier now allow a public inquiry to uncover the truth about intimidation of health professionals?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, I want to make sure that any physicians that feel that they were intimidated in some way with fear of reprisal, whether it happened 15 years ago or it happened five days ago, take it to the Health Quality Council.

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre do you want to lead a chorus? You keep singing a word.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Critical Electricity Transmission Infrastructure

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. For the last month we've been focused on what is likely the biggest ethical scandal in this province's history, the intimidation of health care professionals. But as this government ducks and denies while this issue burns, it's full steam ahead on what's surely the biggest financial scandal in Alberta's history, Bill 50 and the $16 billion overbuild of our electrical system. To the Premier: given that this will surely tarnish your legacy, will you do the honourable thing and call for an independent needs assessment before sticking Albertans with a tab that will take them decades to pay?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there was an independent review. The review began back in 2001. Over 300 meetings were held. Many Albertans presented evidence in terms of the need for transmission into the province of Alberta. We haven't seen any improvement for the last 30 years. In that 30 years our population has doubled. As a result, the system is strained, and we have to improve the transmission system.

Mr. Hinman: Mr. Speaker, it's 2011, not 2001. Things have changed.

Given that the government nullified the real purpose of the AUC when they passed Bill 50 in order to eliminate the most important step, a needs assessment, will the Premier do the honourable thing and repeal Bill 50 and let the AUC decide just what size of power lines we actually need before it's too late?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, there is an authority that listened to Albertans and determined need. In fact, even during the recession they were out .1 per cent in their projections. We're seeing energy consumption, electricity, grow by 3 per cent a year. The first build-out will be about $4 billion, depending on what the tenders will be. Roughly speaking, that's $1 for every $1 billion invested in the infrastructure.

Mr. Hinman: Completely out of touch and misunderstanding the situation.

Given that multiple studies and business groups like IPCCAA are telling you that monstrous overbuild will drive up electrical prices so much that Alberta will lose businesses and jobs and that voters are outraged about having to pay jacked up power prices for decades, why are you so stubbornly clinging to this untended backroom deal? It's just wrong, Premier. It's wrong.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, here are the facts. In British Columbia B.C. Hydro is looking at increasing their electricity rates 30 per cent over the next three years and 52 per cent by 2015. That group over there is advocating us building more natural gas electricity generation. Sounds great at $4 gas. But I can tell you that $4 gas and today's coal-priced electricity are about the same. As gas increases to $6, I wonder if they're going to stand up and defend Albertans for . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Health Care System

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much. Mr. Speaker, the health minister wishes the opposition would forget about the past and just look to the future. But, you know, those who do not learn from the mistakes of the past are condemned to repeat the mistakes again and again. This could be this government's motto. I want to ask the Premier: will he admit the PC government's responsibility for the health care mess we find ourselves in, including the culture of intimidation, and if not, tell us who is responsible? Is it doctors? Is it . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, once again, if there is any fear, if any physician feels that there has been some intimidation, then the door is open to appear before the Health Quality Council. Today we heard very eminent members from Alberta appointed as advisory members, a lot of experience in the law. It's not very often you have a former Deputy Prime Minister appointed to a committee or the former Chief Justice of Alberta appointed to a committee. That is simply outstanding.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, given that there's a whole string of former health ministers still sitting over there on that side plus Gary Mar, who's seeking the PC leadership, who collectively bear responsibility for the culture of intimidation that we're now seeing, will the Premier please say whether or not this government accepts responsibility for the mess that the health care system is now in? If not, who is it?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as we heard in the House from many of our members, our system is not in a mess. It is better funded than others in the province. We've attracted more doctors to this province than any province in Canada. We remain committed to train 2,000 more nurses by 2012, and we will meet that goal plus over 300 new physician positions in the province of Alberta. Compared to other provinces, we've taken a leadership role, and we're committed to meeting those goals.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, given that all of the indications are that the health care system is actually getting worse – waiting times are getting worse in a number of areas – and given the collective responsibility of this government for the culture of intimidation that we've seen, will he ask the former ministers of health, including Gary Mar, the leadership candidate, to appear before the Health Quality Council and give their account of what went wrong?

Mr. Stelmach: I guess he missed some of the latest interviews out there. Anybody that was asked by the media in terms of former ministers, anybody in government said: sure; if the Health Quality Council calls us, we'll be glad to give any sort of evidence that they wish.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Health Quality Council Review

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I've been going over the terms of reference for the Health Quality Council's review. You know, maybe it's just because I can't get last week's charge that the council has engaged in junk science out of my mind, but I'm finding discrepancies. For instance, there's a promise to look into the possibility that the safety and quality of care of 250 cancer patients was seriously compromised by a delay in surgery "as alleged in a document tabled in the Alberta Legislature on February 28, 2011." Assembly documents and records show no such tabling.

The Speaker: Okay. We need a question.

Mr. Taylor: To the Premier. Given the Health Quality Council's terms of reference refer to a nonexistent document, how can a skeptical public . . .

The Speaker: If you want to respond, hon. Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: I'm not quite sure what the hon. member is driving at, but as I said before, the Health Quality Council will listen to anyone who comes forward with evidence and ideas and maybe gives some history in terms of how we did operate in the past, how we can improve in the future in terms of new funding, getting better value for their dollars. All of that is on the table.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the Premier: given that the council's terms of reference limit the review to the years 2003 to 2006, when the period in question begins with Dr. McNamee's patients in 1999, how is the Health Quality Council going to adequately investigate these allegations in any depth?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the items referred to were those that had been tabled in this Assembly, and the tablings covered two essential areas. One of them was the impact of wait times on emergency care, and the other, which I think was a single document, was wait times with respect to cancer care. So based on what was tabled, that's part of what I assume governed the terms of reference that were developed independently by the HQCA.

Mr. Taylor: Well, Mr. Speaker, those documents certainly weren't tabled on the 28th of February 2011. Again to the Premier: given that the Health Quality Council is unable to even determine where it needs to look, will the Premier commission an independent, fully independent, judge-led inquiry into these allegations?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the Health Quality Council has very rigorous and robust terms of reference, and they can go back as far as they want. They can listen to any evidence that they want. They can call anybody to deliver the evidence. As I said, if some of these issues go back 15 years, come forward. If you've got some issue five days ago, come forward. They're there to listen.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Occupational Health and Safety

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Flint Energy Services has announced recently that they're looking for about an additional thousand people for their mod yard, so it looks like we're once again on the verge of the economy heating up. Considerable economic growth means more jobs, more work, and more money in the jeans of Albertans, which, obviously, is pretty good news. My questions are to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. What are you doing to ensure that the rate and volume of work increases and the workplace safety remains uncompromised?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, the importance of occupational health and safety and keeping our job sites does not fluctuate with economic activity. Our workers, our employers, and the government of Alberta are fully committed to making sure that no matter how busy or how slow our economy may happen to be, we will enforce safe workplaces in this province.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Okay. Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that we recognize that it is in fact a shared responsibility, what specifically is occupational health and safety doing to prepare for the increased activity?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, as many Albertans may know, over the last year or so we have developed a 15-point plan on enforcing occupational health and safety, somewhat shifting the balance from education to enforcement. We have hired some 52 per cent more officers over this and the next fiscal budget, so definitely there has been a great deal of attention both on policy and on enforcement of occupational health and safety.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My final question. As much as I endorse the emphasis on northern Alberta, it's undeniable that the cost of living in Fort McMurray is extremely high, so specifically, Minister, what's being done to help the OH and S officers that are living there?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Well, Mr. Speaker, as we realize, a great percentage of this economic boom that's definitely on the horizon will happen in northern Alberta. We have now divided enforcement of occupational health and safety into three zones, the Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo area being one of them. We have also dedicated officers to that particular region. Not only will they become more acquainted with the industry, but they will develop better relationships with workers and employers, so their efficacy in enforcing occupational health and safety will be much improved.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Mackay.

Calgary Board of Education

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday we learned that the Calgary board of education is facing a $61.7 million budget shortfall and is looking to cut 172 support staff in addition to over a hundred more teachers. The Learning Commission's reduced class size initiative has become a rapidly fading memory. To the Premier: why did the province create tax room for municipalities by lowering the education property tax rate but won't return to school boards the autonomy to collect and locally determine how best to use their educational portion of the property tax?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, what the province did with respect to the education property tax is what we promised to do 10 years ago and have been doing consistently ever since. We've maintained the assessment for education property tax, increasing it by the amount of real growth in assessment but not increasing it by the amount of inflationary growth. So we've increased it annually from the amount that it was frozen at 10 years ago. We are capturing that across the province. As it applies to assessment bases in each individual municipality, it provides for some differences.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the Minister of Education: will the minister cover the Calgary board of education's budget shortfall this year given that the province helped to close a similar funding gap last year?

2:10

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, the difference between this year and last year is that last year I informed boards at the time of the budget they could expect the government to fulfill the commitment to the 2.92 per cent increase because it hadn't been known at the time of the budget that that was the amount, and we actually did that. The fact the boards went through a budgeting process, ignoring that advice, was not in accordance with the advice that I had given them. This year we put the 4.4 per cent increase to operating grants into the budget, but in fact there was not enough increase in the budget to cover all the issues that needed to be covered; therefore, I had to cut back on certain targeted grants.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Support staff, AISI, special needs: all gone. Given that the process of constantly underfunding school boards and then inconsistently bailing them out is counterproductive, hugely disruptive, and creates ongoing uncertainty for students, parents, and teachers alike, is your real plan this year to force all school boards to drain what, if anything, remains of their surpluses?

Mr. Hancock: No, Mr. Speaker, that's not the plan. But it wouldn't be a bad idea for school boards first to look at their accumulated operating surpluses. After all, that is money that was granted to school boards to fund today's education with today's dollars. I know the school boards have saved money for various purposes, but when they have money in an operating surplus account, and when we have a tough fiscal budget like we have this year, it is a very good year to look at your operating surpluses before you look at cutting staff.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-MacKay, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Special-needs Education Funding

Ms Woo-Paw: Mr. Speaker, on June 11 last year the ministers of Education, Health and Wellness, and Children and Youth Services announced the Setting the Direction Framework: Government of Alberta Response. I was able to attend that event. Since I have heard from principals, teachers, parents, and community members that support and services are difficult to access, that schools have limited capacity to provide appropriate programming, and children and youth with some of the most challenging issues are compromised, my questions are to the ministers of Education and Children and Youth Services. To the Minister of Education: what progress is your ministry making in implementing . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Progress has been slow, but it's very important that it be done thoroughly because we're talking about a real culture shift in the way that we do this. First and foremost, we've worked internally within government, bringing together primarily the three departments of Health, Children and Youth Services, and Education but also other departments involved, to make sure that we align our approach within government. Secondly, we've now set up the inclusive education provincial advisory committee, that was part of the process. That will bring stakeholder groups together to provide oversight and advice on the implementation.

Ms Woo-Paw: To the Minister of Children and Youth Services. People in the system are telling me that one of the barriers to improving support for these children is around the lack of communication from Children's Services. Has the ministry identified this as a barrier? If so, what is the plan and current status for addressing the issue?

Mrs. Fritz: Well, Mr. Speaker, as a result of the success in school initiative for our children and youth in care, we have developed a new protocol, and that protocol ensures, as the minister had indicated earlier, that our educators, our caregivers, our caseworkers work together on behalf of our children and youth in need. The good news that we have about this and what's important that you know is that our children and youth are directly involved in developing their educational plans and that ensures their voices are heard.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Woo-Paw: Thank you. Back to the Minister of Education: what is your ministry doing to broaden community engagement and inform Albertans about its work so that we can engage sectors to work together to meet these children's needs?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Hancock: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. That's a very important question. I wanted to add to my earlier answer that while we're putting in place the oversight and the co-ordination, the project team is actually engaging in a number of pilot projects with divisions across the province and implementing on the ground. That's part of the story, to share that work with others across the province, to let people know what projects are on, to have them go to the website and see what's going on with it, and to send out communications to the people who are involved, the 7,000 Albertans that were involved in the consultation in the first place, to let them know that progress is happening.

Health Services Financial Reporting

Mr. MacDonald: Over a seven-year period between 2003 and 2009 Capital health listed under other expenses in their annual reports over $300 million. I asked questions to the minister of health on this two weeks ago, and I'm disappointed, Mr. Speaker. I have yet to receive an answer. My first question is to the minister of health. What efforts has the minister made in the last two weeks to provide a detailed list of all those expenditures that went out under other expenses?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the first effort I made was to appeal to this member to put this question to the proper process, which he knows very well. There is a thing called Motions for Returns, and there is a thing where he knows very well that he's allowed to put a question forward through his own group, that he chairs.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order.

Mr. Zwozdesky: But the point here is that the Auditor General has indicated that the predecessor organizations to AHS had their own individualized accounting systems. That resulted in some classifications of their own unique findings. That's the answer.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, yes, I did raise a point of order.

Again to the same minister: why did the government allow Capital health to hide $300 million in expenses when other regions were required and did on a voluntary basis list all their expenses? What is this government hiding?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I hope the hon. member will read what he just said because I'm sure he didn't mean it.

Nobody has hidden anything. The fact is that the Auditor General has audited all of these findings. Let me just quote to you what the Auditor General said in the October 2010 report that he issued: "The predecessor organizations had different policies and processes for their financial operations. AHS staff identified some of these areas, such as capital assets and financial instruments, and made conforming changes." There you have it.

Mr. MacDonald: Again, Mr. Speaker, to the same minister: will the minister list for the interest of taxpayers the complete details of the $300 million that Capital health spent between 2003 and 2009 and conveniently hid in the Other column of their annual report? List it.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, again I say that that is a very offensive allegation. Nobody hid anything. The monies are all there. They were properly accounted for. The Auditor General himself signed off on it. If there are more details, he's got Written Questions and Motions for Returns, and he also has the Public Accounts Committee through which he can ask those detailed questions.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake, followed by the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Aids to Daily Living Program

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I know that our government has a number of programs that provide support to Albertans with disabilities and to seniors. My constituents are asking me about the assistance the government provides for other necessities. My questions are to the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports. It appears that the budget for the AADL program has increased. Does this increase translate to more support for the average Albertan?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the AADL program helps approximately 85,000 Albertans to obtain health-related supports such as hearing aids, medical and surgical supports, wheelchairs and mobility aids, and respiratory equipment. The budget is $124 million. It's an increase of $5 million over last year, and most of this money goes to the caseload growth that we will see in AADL. These health-related benefits assist people who have a long-term disability, a terminal illness, or a chronic illness to receive the supports that they need to maintain their independence.

Mrs. Leskiw: To the same minister. My senior constituents want to stay in their homes longer. Is there anything in her department budget this year that supports this?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, our ministry's budget this year included increases to maintain programs and services that help seniors in their home. Programs like the Alberta seniors' benefit, the education property tax assistance program, and special-needs assistance for seniors help them to remain as independent as possible. Funding for these and other seniors' programs has increased this year in my budget by $15 million.

Mrs. Leskiw: My final question to the same minister: does her department's 2011 budget provide any additional benefits for dental and optical needs for my seniors?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the total budget for Seniors and Community Supports is $425 million. That does include an increase to the seniors' optical and dental program to assist those that are coming into the program. As you know, there are 2,000 more seniors in Alberta each month, but more than 209,000 low- and moderate-income seniors are eligible for this assistance for dental supports and for prescription eyeglasses. I'm proud to say that Alberta is one of the very few provinces that has this sort of program for our seniors.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-McCall.

Minister of Health and Wellness

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, on this beautiful spring day. When asked if he would resign from cabinet and announce a bid for the PC leadership, the health minister said that there was too much going on his portfolio to announce. Indeed, there's lots going on in health care. So far, though, the health minister has utterly failed to do anything about any of these issues. He won't dismantle the failed superboard, he won't discipline health officials for threatening doctors and nurses, and he won't call a public inquiry. To the minister of health . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

2:20

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think the record will show very clearly that I as minister of health with the support of the Premier and all of these colleagues have done a great deal to improve health outcomes in this province. I think the record will also show that we have demonstrated that in a number of ways: for example, the first province ever – ever – to have a five-year funding commitment; the first province ever to have a five-year health action plan; the first province ever to have a suite of 50 performance measures to help hold the system accountable.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that nonresponse – and there is a difference. Given the fact the minister of health said, "I'm going to take a walk in the snow," there's a difference between taking a walk in the snow and a head in the snow. To the minister: will he resign and get on with what he's really doing today in seeking the leadership?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Oh boy. I can see where this would-be leader is going with his own party. That's very, very clear. I think your own leader is probably a little bit nervous about your aspirations, hon. member, not to be outdone by Airdrie-Chestermere, of course. I think I'll just leave it there for now, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Boutilier: Mr. Speaker, given the nonresponse and given the fact the minister clearly has his eye on other things than health care, will he do the right thing for the benefit of all Albertans and officially resign his post so he can officially run for the PC leadership, like others are doing, and not collect the cabinet salary?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I've indicated very clearly that I am focused and riveted on health care. We have a great health care system. My job is to make it better, and I'm getting good help doing that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie.

Penhorwood Apartment Evacuations

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Shoddy construction practices have consequences. The residents of Fort McMurray's Penhorwood condos were not only forced out of their homes in the middle of the night and given 15 minutes to collect their belongings, but many are now homeless. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Homeless evacuees are now relying on Children's Services for support. Would the minister agree that having some building regulations beats providing emergency housing?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we are in constant touch with the municipality of Fort McMurray. I want to indicate that they've established a task force, and they are dealing with individuals there. Those individuals that have had some issues in terms of finding additional accommodations or financial support, if they require help, are being helped through the offices of the Ministry of Employment and Immigration. So they are being looked after.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The help is not coming fast enough.

To the minister again. Forty per cent of those Penhorwood residents bought these condos confident that this province has standards and that the standards are enforced. What would the minister advise these owners about losing their homes and their savings?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we recognize that there are 52 condo unit owners. Those individuals are being given similar assistance as renters. There is a legal action that has commenced, and this is in the courts. I would suspect that the courts will make those decisions as to who might be liable in this case for additional support.

Mr. Kang: You know, that's very good help, Mr. Speaker. Condo owners suffer while they go through a legal process.

To the minister again. Municipal Affairs is responsible not only for building standards but also for emergency management. So how is the minister assisting the municipality in helping the victims in this emergency?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the Safety Codes Council is responsible for accrediting municipalities, corporations, and agencies that sell permits and carry out work under those particular permits. The municipality is at liberty to choose those individuals that will do the inspections on their behalf. They indicate to me that they've got a better reach and they can do more inspections. They're closer to development issues, and they are closer to residents. So the municipalities themselves are managing the inspection process.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Protection against Discrimination

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. This government prides itself on promoting equality, fairness, and an atmosphere where people of all backgrounds feel welcome, safe, and respected. Unfortunately, not every visible minority in our province experiences such an environment. My questions are to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. What measures does your ministry have in place to ensure that the rights of minority are protected and will continue to be fully protected?

The Speaker: Minister, your estimates are up in about 35 minutes from now, so stay away from budgetary answers. Just deal with policy, please.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, we have the Alberta human rights act, that protects minorities against discrimination for employment, for accommodation, for government services. We have the human rights, citizenship and multiculturalism fund that funds organizations who help educate organizations and different community groups as well as employers on their rights and their rights to one another. Mr. Speaker, this is something the government can't do by itself. We need partnerships like CMARD, the Coalition of Municipalities against Racism and Discrimination.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: in what ways do programs specifically educate youth on the harmful effects of racism and discrimination?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, a program was developed by the Alberta Somali Community Centre and supported by our department, the Alberta Culture and Community Spirit's human rights branch. This involves 10 to 15 individuals from the Somali community receiving training and leadership development and monitoring skills that support community involvement, civic participation, and academic excellence. In essence, they're being taught to be leaders. They're going to go back into their community and help those other individuals become better participating citizens and feel more inclusive in their communities.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My final question to the same minister: what concrete measures has your ministry taken at reducing discrimination and encouraging a diverse and inclusive society?

Mr. Blackett: Well, it's always hard to quantify that, but I know from the performance measures that we looked at a year ago, 89 per cent of the people of Alberta say that they feel that they are protected against discrimination. That's something that we all have to work on, Mr. Speaker. That's something we all have to be vigilant on, not just government. Those are individual Albertans, those are the private sector, those are our organizations that we support, and all of us in this House. We have to be vigilant on that.

Speaker's Ruling Anticipation

The Speaker: Hon. members, one of our traditions is that we don't really ask questions of a minister if his department estimates are coming up that particular day, and in this case they are. That was very close to the edge. I feel rather uncomfortable about that, so I will intervene in the future.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for St. Albert.

Provincial Environmental Monitoring Panel

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. The Environment minister insists that the appointment to the water panel of a self-described best friend of the Prime Minister was based on expertise, not political connections, but it is difficult to find confirmation that this individual had specific expertise on water beyond his part in helping to create the Canada School of Energy and Environment and his subsequent appointment as head of that school. To the minister: can the minister point to any actual working expertise in water matters of this person?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, the representatives that are on that panel bring a number of different skills and assets to the panel. We have scientific expertise; we have people that have a business background that have been involved with the business side. In this particular case, as I've indicated, in his capacity as executive director of the Canada School of Energy and Environment, Mr. Carson brings to the committee his knowledge and expertise with working . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Ms Blakeman: He has no direct water experience.

Back to the same minister. If there was a background search done prior to this person's appointment to the water panel, then how is the minister unaware of both a criminal record for fraud and a professional disbarment?

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, let me once again remind this member that the purpose of this panel is not water. This is to be bringing forward a world-class monitoring system that will bring all media together: water, air, land, and biodiversity. Each member of the panel is expected to bring various forms of expertise to bring all of this together.

Ms Blakeman: Back to the same minister: why hasn't this government proclaimed the Alberta Public Agencies Governance Act as this act would likely have excluded this same panel member from ever being appointed in the first place? He has no expertise in these areas.

Mr. Renner: Mr. Speaker, I beg to differ. I believe that the people that are on this panel were brought into the panel for different expertise in different areas. Some have a scientific background, some have a business background, and some have a background in being able to liaise and bring forward complementary research in other areas. So I disagree with the premise that the member brings forward.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for St. Albert, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Grants and Bursaries for Postsecondary Education

Mr. Allred: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. With the cap on tuition fee increases at Alberta's postsecondary educational institutions several institutions are getting around the cap by imposing noninstructional fees for such ridiculous things as snow removal and registration services. To the minister of advanced education: what plans do you have to limit the imposition of non-instructional fees by postsecondary educational institutions?

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Advanced Education and Technology.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to thank this member and others in the House for meeting with members of CAUS this week and hearing some of their concerns. This is one of the concerns that the students have brought forward, maybe their most important concern, that some schools are looking at opportunities to go around the tuition fee cap by imposing other fees. We believe that this is a very serious issue. We're going to continue to work with the students and look for a solution to this.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister: given that student debt has increased dramatically in the past few years, how are students expected to manage their growing debt?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The good news is that student debt last year for graduating students averaged about $16,000 per student for government debt. This can be an amount that's difficult to manage, but we do have programs in place for remittance. Loans are offered at prime rate of interest for students. There's a six-month period after they graduate before they have to start paying. For students that are in really difficult positions, we have a RAP program, which allows them to negotiate a better payment schedule to allow them to be successful.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Allred: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Following that, to the same minister: will the minister be reinstating grants and bursaries once the economy picks up?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As you know, last year we did reduce the number of grants and bursaries and put that funding towards loans, which would allow us to increase the number of student loans. That number has increased to almost 58,000 students, or 30 per cent of our student body, receiving loans last year. We do believe that bursaries and grants are important to the system, and we would like to continue to look at ways to increase scholarships, grants, and bursaries.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East, followed by the hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Residential Building Code

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's often been said that during boom times builders will pretty much hire anybody who can swing a hammer. Consequently, many people believe that as the economy ramps up, residential construction quality tends to diminish. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs: given the oil patch's propensity to draw away those who might otherwise consider working in the construction trades, particularly during boom times, can the minister guarantee that new residential construction is always being done by properly trained tradespeople?

The Speaker: Normally questions that have the word "guarantee" are ruled out, but proceed.

Mr. Goudreau: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. We continue to work with industry, and I guess there are a number of different ministers that are working with that particular industry to ensure that individuals are qualified. There's the minister of advanced education, who is responsible for some of the trades that come through. We are responsible through the building codes to make sure that certain things are met. There are a number of individuals that do work with industry and trade to ensure that the construction . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you. Apparently, it's not really that successful.

Given that a key recommendation of the ministry's April 2008 Building Envelope Survey was that the government should enhance consumer protection and recourse relative to the building code, why is it that Albertans are still having to cope with inadequate protection? I think Fort McMurray is a huge example.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we continue to take steps to improve both residential and industrial construction. We are working on an approach that includes enforcement, education, consumer protection, and recourse to deal with concerns about buildings and building envelopes.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you for that, Mr. Minister. What other changes is the minister contemplating that would better protect Albertans from shoddy construction practices but also address the unique challenge of anticipated overheated-construction employee shortages?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we recognize that buildings are often the single biggest investment that most Albertans make. We want to make sure that they are built to the standards that Albertans expect and deserve. As I indicated in my previous answer, we will continue to take the steps that are needed to improve construction practices.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Women in Postsecondary Education

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Lately we've been hearing about the underrepresentation of women in our workplaces and in positions of power. We've been hearing about inequities and barriers that continue to hold many women back. As a mother of four daughters my questions today are for the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology. Postsecondary education can open so many doors. Can the minister tell us: are women also underrepresented on Alberta's campuses?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am happy to stand and answer the member on this. Right now in our institutions 6 out of every 10, 60 per cent, of all certificates, diplomas, or degrees are granted to women. They are having a significant impact. In the fields of engineering, medicine, and science we have more women registered than men in these programs, so it's a great step forward.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Again to the same minister. I'm glad to hear that. Can you also tell me: are women making the same progress when it comes to pursuing apprenticeships and careers in the trades?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to say that we are having some impact on women in the trades. Right now almost 10 per cent of our tradespeople that are in apprenticeship are women; however, it's not as much as we would like. The numbers have grown. In 2005 there were 3,900 women. Now we have 5,600 women registered in apprenticeship training.

Mrs. McQueen: Finally, to the same minister. You've got some good news there, but you've got a whole lot of work to do on that. What is your ministry doing to increase the number of women in Alberta's trades?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. It is true that there is a long way to go to make sure that our young women are aware of the great opportunities in trades. There are wonderful jobs. We have a program available called women building futures, and this gives women a chance to try the trades, to understand what's involved in the trades. It does help people to select what they would like to do. We'd like to continue to work with our young women and create opportunities in the trades.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Municipal Funding

Mr. Prins: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Municipalities are responsible for providing core services for their citizens, and the province provides them with many levels of support. My question to the Minister of Municipal Affairs: to this point in 2011 how much MSI funding have municipalities received?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, since 2007 MSI has provided $2.2 billion in long-term funding to help municipalities meet the demands of growth and sustainability. Again, those numbers constantly increase. The allocations are based on a formula developed in consultation with over 450 municipal representatives.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you again. Some municipalities claim that they are receiving less MSI this year than last. What are the criteria for funding each municipality?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, first, each municipality receives the base funding of $120,000 per year except for summer villages, which receive $60,000. Also, there's $15 million per year in sustainable investment funding, and that's divided between municipalities with populations below 10,000 and limited local assessment. The vast majority of the funding, 48 per cent, is allocated on a population base, 48 per cent on the education tax requisition, and another 4 per cent on kilometres of local roads. So it's meant to address the needs of all municipalities.

2:40

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you again. My last question to the same minister: do MSI amounts in all municipalities increase at the same rate?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, decreases or increases are due to annual changes in the municipality's proportion of population, education tax requisition, or kilometres of road compared to the provincial total.

In addition, some communities may see changes in their assessment base, again in relationship to the provincial average, which could in turn reduce the sustainable investment funding that they receive. This sustainable investment provides additional support for those with a low property tax base in relation to their population. This funding is then redirected among those municipalities that are eligible for sustainable investment funding.

The Speaker: Hon. members, 19 members were recognized today, with 114 questions and responses.

In a few seconds now we will continue with the Routine. We are at the Introduction of Bills stage.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Bill Pr. 3

Auburn Bay Residents Association Tax Exemption Act

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill Pr. 3, the Auburn Bay Residents Association Tax Exemption Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 3 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Bill Pr. 4
Cranston Residents Association
Tax Exemption Act

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill Pr. 4, the Cranston Residents Association Tax Exemption Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 4 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Bill Pr. 5
New Brighton Residents Association
Tax Exemption Act

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill Pr. 5, the New Brighton Residents Association Tax Exemption Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 5 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Bill Pr. 6
Tuscany Residents Association
Tax Exemption Act

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill being Bill Pr. 6, the Tuscany Residents Association Tax Exemption Act.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 6 read a first time]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Lougheed.

Bill Pr. 7
Hull Child and Family Services
Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Rodney: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce a bill, that being the Hull Child and Family Services Amendment Act, 2011.

Thank you.

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 7 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to table with you for the Assembly the requisite number of copies of the following two reports. First, the 2009 annual report from the College of Physicians & Surgeons of Alberta, titled Good Medical Practice: It's What We're All About.

Secondly, the 2010 annual report from the College of Registered Psychiatric Nurses of Alberta, which I will add, Mr. Speaker, is their 60th anniversary report. Congratulations to all of you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As of today I will have tabled approximately one-fifth of the concerned Castle correspondence that I have received. If the session continues to June, as proposed, I might finish. The names of the concerned Castle individuals today are as follows: Mary Jane Phillips, Jennifer McGowan, Karen Leask, Clayton Baumung, Craig Murray, Cindy Cox, Franziska Nonnenmann, Crystal Van Lare, C. Cummings, Christine McLaughlin, Brice Peressini, Jeremy Nathan Marks, Darlene Varaleau, Jessica Warner, Jane Keast, Joshua Cornfield, Agata Bedynski, Roger Short, Marilyn Harris, Diane Poloczek, Jannie Mills, Caitlin Beresford, Linda Gearing, John Dale, and Marian Veasey.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have tablings today, and I want to put them all in a package. The first is a letter that I received – and I appreciated receiving it – on January 21, 2011, from the Minister of Employment and Immigration. It outlines the number of occupational injuries and diseases in Alberta, the stop-work orders that have been issued, and a number of other very interesting facts.

I also have included in this tabling some fine research done by the Alberta Liberal caucus researchers regarding the percentage of occupational health and safety inspections resulting from this order from 2002 to 2009. The handwriting on there is mine. It was done outside, and it was a very cold day when I did it, so that will explain that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Currie.

Mr. Taylor: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure today to table the requisite copies of two letters, the first from a constituent of mine by the name of Victoria Morgan writing to express her concerns regarding some proposed changes to the education act in relation to lowering the required age for grade 1.

The second is from another constituent of mine, Allison Humphreys, writing to express her concerns regarding the impact of the recent provincial budget for the Calgary board of education's 2011-2012 funding.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings today. One is from Myrna McDonald, a constituent. She has been waiting for a response from the minister of health for a while now. Essentially, I'm not going to read a fraction of the letter, but I've promised her that I would mention this: it has been five months since I wrote to the Premier and the health minister, and I asked for an apology, if not an assurance, that women and men are treated with the respect they deserve in a hospital and not have to share a full bathroom and room with both genders. This is humiliating, to be standing in a glass shower and using the toilet and have someone of the opposite gender walk in on you. Patients are suffering enough after surgeries and should not have to put up with such indignities and stress for weeks thereafter. I would table this and ask that the health minister have someone in his office please contact this individual and speak to her concern.

The Speaker: This is tablings now.

Mr. Anderson: The second tabling is regarding my member's statement that I made earlier today. I mentioned in it an Alberta Health Services report that was presented to the city of Airdrie showing that response times since the takeover of the Airdrie integrated service by Alberta Health Services in Airdrie have increased by 33 per cent, or about three minutes, for serious situations.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

2:50

The Speaker: The hon. deputy Leader of the Official Opposition.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have two tablings to do today on behalf of the Leader of the Official Opposition. The first is a document from Alberta Health Services listed as policy EC-01, established on January 14, 2009. It's titled Safe Disclosure, and it falls under ethical conduct under the Alberta Health Services Board. The leader referred to that in his question today.

The second tabling is from The Lancet, which is an article entitled Cancer Survival in Australia, Canada, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and the UK, 1995-2007 (the International Cancer Benchmarking Partnership): An Analysis of Population-based Cancer Registry Data. He referred to data from this report, which is peer reviewed, I'll make a note of. The leader had referred to statistics here which showed that Alberta has the lowest survival rate for lung cancer in Canada.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We have a point of order that was raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar. Let's be very succinct, okay? I think I understand what has happened here.

Hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, proceed with your point of order.

Point of Order Clarification

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise on this point of order under 23(h) and (i), "makes allegations against another Member" and "imputes false or unavowed motives to another Member," and also (l), "introduces any matter in debate that offends the practices and precedents of the Assembly."

Certainly, in question period earlier today the minister of health suggested that, well, these are matters that could be dealt with at Public Accounts. The minister of health knows full well – he has been there as a minister. If he hasn't had an opportunity to attend, certainly, there has been correspondence from the Public Accounts Committee to the minister's office regarding how the process works. The minister was also a member of this Alberta Liberal caucus in the late '90s, and he sat on the Public Accounts Committee, so he should know the rules.

The rules are this, Mr. Speaker. It's quite explicit. We are only dealing at Public Accounts with the previous year's financial statements, in this case 2009-10. The questions I asked earlier in question period dealt with the period between 2003 and 2009 and, specifically, the amounts that were spent at Capital health and then put under the other expenses column without an explanation. Now, the Government Accountability Act, I would note, gives the minister complete responsibility for his department.

I would like to note in this House that as chair of the Public Accounts Committee I no longer have the right to set the schedule for the meetings; that's done by the committee. That was one thing that was made quite plain to me by the government majority on that committee.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the hon. minister to withdraw the reference that this issue could be dealt with at Public Accounts. It cannot. The rules of this House are quite clear. They're quite plain about that. I'm disappointed that the minister didn't remember that during question period. So I would with all respect ask him to withdraw that suggestion that these questions should be directed to Public Accounts because certainly they cannot, and he of all members, with his past experience on this side of the House with the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and his many years as a government minister, should know that.

Thank you.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there may be a difference of opinion here, obviously, which we'll await your ruling on. However, the simple fact, as this member obviously knows, is that matters of financial recording are accounted for through a system called Public Accounts. Now, whether that was for the immediate previous year as has just been alluded to or not – it's sometimes difficult to understand exactly which year this member is asking about because he has gone back as far as six, seven, eight, nine, 10, 12, 15 years. Nonetheless, I accept the clarification that he has given.

What I would ask is that this hon. member remember that Written Questions and Motions for Returns are adequately described as places where detailed questions that would require instant recall over a period of many years could better be placed. If he'd be willing to do that in the future with his questions, I'd be willing to withdraw the point that I made earlier.

The Speaker: Hon. members, there always is a difficulty with, I guess, when a question is asked and the time frames related to it. We without any doubt have a situation called Written Questions and Motions for Returns. Traditionally, if you look at all of the questions in the Order Paper, the requests for information can go back two years, four years, six years, eight years, 10 years.

Whether or not a minister has that kind of finite information in front of him when he answers a question in the House is quite questionable, I would think. Some ministers may have a photographic memory and be able to carry all of this in their minds, but I suspect the norm is that very few of us in life actually have a photographic memory beyond what's happened in the last year or two as opposed to X number of years.

Secondly, what was really stated in the Blues – and I listened very attentively to the question; I do to all members. The minister of health:

Mr. Speaker, the first effort I made was to appeal to this member to put this question to the proper process, which he knows very well. There is a thing called Motions for Returns . . .

Okay.

. . . and there is a thing where he knows very well that he's allowed to put a question forward through his own group that he chairs.

I actually thought that was what the point of order was going to be, but it didn't actually come up that way.

There is a tradition that goes back – and it's certainly followed in most committees but not all committees – that, in essence, the chair does not ask questions. The chair does administrative things. However, there always has been a provision that if the chair of a committee chooses to want to ask a question, he simply leaves the chair, asks the deputy chair of the committee to serve in that capacity, and then he can ask questions. I do not believe this has been the tradition of the Public Accounts Committee. I read the minutes, but I don't follow that, specifically.

If, in fact, the point of order was going to be that "I can't raise a question," I think that the hon. minister of health would probably not necessarily know that because why would any minister, if they appear before Public Accounts once a year, actually know that? So we certainly had a point of clarification.

I don't believe this is a point of order. It's one of those little things that can cause some real, real frustration if one member raising a question says, "Well, I know I can't ask a question at that committee," and somebody says, "Well, why don't you use your job at your committee to ask the question?" Yeah, okay. We're going in two different directions in here. So I hope there's a bit of a clarification.

Members might want to take a look at House of Commons Procedure and Practice, page 504. They might also want to look at sections on pages 1031 and 1039 with respect to this. It's certainly not often the case where the chair would leave and the deputy chair would come in. I certainly indicate that for the Members' Services Committee for the years that I've been on that committee, which is almost 30 some-odd years, that's never been the procedure that we've followed in that committee.

3:00 Committee of Supply

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Deputy Chair: I'd like to call the Committee of Supply to order.

Main Estimates 2011-12

Culture and Community Spirit

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, do you wish to open this?

Mr. Blackett: Yes, Mr. Chair. My officials will be in momentarily.

Good afternoon. I'm pleased to be here today with key ministry staff to review the 2011-12 Alberta Culture and Community Spirit estimates. I will be joined by my deputy minister, Lois Hawkins; Assistant Deputy Minister Tom Thackeray; Senior Financial Officer Pam Arnston; the acting director of planning and performance measurement, Brad Babiak; the director of lottery funding programs, Carl Royan; and the communications director, Parker Hogan.

Through one-on-one meetings of our regional dialogues Albertans from the arts, cultural, heritage, not-for-profit, voluntary, and diversity sectors have shared ideas on how we can best achieve our shared goals to give every Albertan the opportunity to express their cultural identity through improved access and increased capacity, every opportunity possible to develop as artists and performers, and to explore and experience our rich and varied history from people to paleontology, give them new opportunities for creative, innovative ideas to take shape on the stage or the screen, in print, or in digital format and the encouragement to be involved in their communities.

This year's budget reflects the realities of the economic climate that we are living in today. We must be prudent to ensure that our recovery and our growth are sustainable. In this budget we are holding a responsible line on spending while looking for opportunities to make strategic investments that will build on the strengths of Alberta and Albertans. We see these opportunities as we see the strengths of our cultural industries and our arts and heritage communities and our not-for-profit and voluntary sectors. This work enhances the quality of life for all Albertans and pays dividends and even greater economic, cultural, and social returns.

For 2011-12 the total budget for Culture and Community Spirit is $225 million. Within this budget we are able to maintain the same level of operational funding as we had last year at $174 million. It is important to note that while Budget 2011 shows a net reduction of $35 million in my ministry's funding, this is related to capital funding, not the operating budget. As we complete the 2010-11 fiscal year, we've also completed $35 million in capital funds commitments for major projects like the Go Community Centre and Citadel Theatre renovations in Edmonton and Canada's sports hall of fame in Calgary.

We are projecting expenditures of $58 million in support of the arts and cultural industry sector. Of this, $30 million will support artists, arts organizations, book and magazine publishing, and the sound recording industry through the Alberta Foundation for the Arts and direct department funding.

In film and television throughout the realm of digital media Alberta's star is on the rise. During my recent tour to Los Angeles with Alberta producers, directors, and union and guild representatives my message was that Alberta is home to some of the best talent in performance, technical production, and locations in North America. I'm pleased to say that most studio heads echoed those sentiments.

With this budget we are committing nearly $21 million in support to our creative and multimedia industries. Included in this total is a $2 million increase in base funding for the Alberta multimedia development fund, bringing the value of the fund to a total of $18.3 million.

The stories of Alberta will continue to be told for the benefit of the audience and the teller alike. The stories of our past and present will come to life for visitors to provincial heritage sites and museums, and young Albertans will continue to have access to programming that meets curriculum standards through direct visits and distance learning via video conferencing or web-based conferences.

Within Budget 2011 $47 million is assigned for heritage programming, including support for the Royal Alberta Museum, the Royal Tyrrell Museum, the Provincial Archives, and our provincial museums and historic sites across Alberta. This also includes $8.2 million for the Alberta Historical Resources Foundation and for the preservation and maintenance of historic sites held privately or by municipalities. This investment will ensure that all Albertans have the opportunity to experience the culture and the ever-growing legacy of the land and its people.

Alberta's not-for-profit and voluntary sectors play a vital role in providing community-based services. Many of these services support the most vulnerable Albertans. The value of these services is estimated at $9 billion of gross domestic product annually. This is an amazing rate of return on the investments we have made in supporting our not-for-profit and voluntary agencies and organizations, and we will continue to make these wise investments.

In Budget 2011 $105 million is being designated for community and voluntary support. This includes $38 million for the community facility enhancement program and $25.25 million for the equally successful community initiatives program. Budget 2011 provides $16 million for the community spirit program donation grant, which encourages more individual donations to not-for-profit organizations and registered Alberta charities. These dollars will help grow the already impressive contributions of our not-for-profit, voluntary, and community groups and the positive impact their work has on the lives of Albertans. The positive impact and energy of our voluntary sector will be felt and seen in Edmonton on June 14 and 15 as program staff, board members, and volunteers gather for Vitalize 2011.

Alberta's cultural policy, the Spirit of Alberta, is built upon the idea of inclusion. The Spirit of Alberta provides the opportunity for all Albertans to express their cultural identity, to do so freely, to take pride in and to share in the richness of their ancestry, to live in a tolerant environment free of discrimination. This is the right of all Albertans.

Budget 2011 provides $5.2 million to the Alberta Human Rights Commission. With this support we continue to ensure that the human rights of all Albertans are protected and work to resolve the differences that arise through a streamlined and effective dispute resolution process. Our continued investment of $2 million in the human rights education and multiculturalism fund will support efforts to build healthier, more tolerant communities.

At a time when there remains much global uncertainty, Albertans can be optimistic about the present and the future. As a government we have worked hard to strategically manage all of our resources. We have looked for new ways to increase efficiency internally so that we are able to maintain funding levels to program areas.

Our investments in information technology infrastructure have improved communications with stakeholders. With more people using Internet-based services for information, we need to have the systems in place for effective and efficient delivery of that information. With those systems in place we are better able to promote and deliver our programs and services and help build capacity and understanding.

The resources provided in this budget will allow us to continue to achieve the goals set out in the Spirit of Alberta. We cannot lose the momentum that we have created in the past three years to develop, foster, and showcase our culture and community spirit. Working together, we have already achieved a great many successes.

My ministry continues to work closely with our stakeholders and all Albertans so that we may achieve so much more in the future, remembering the four key pillars: striving for greater access for all Albertans to arts and culture; maintaining capacity in all our communities for arts, culture, and recreation; focusing on excellence; and providing sustainable support for our cultural industries.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. May I welcome and thank the staff of the minister who are on the floor here today to aid him.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, do you wish to go back and forth, as has been the practice?

Ms Blakeman: Yeah. Sure.

The Deputy Chair: Okay. Thank you.

Ms Blakeman: I know it's not always your happiest day to be here, and I appreciate it. Some of you, I'm sure, enjoy it, but others not so much. I'm sure the minister appreciates it, and I appreciate it. If we have additional staff in the gallery, my welcome to them as well.

Thank you to the minister for the overview. I did my best to take notes. I'm afraid I got a bit lost at a certain point, so I may not have taken down every fact and figure that he gave. If I ask for a statistic he's given, please forgive me.

I do note and agree that there appears to be a whopping big decrease in the budget this year. But as we set out – and I was quite specific about setting it out last year – there was some $30 million included in the budget last year, which actually made the cuts look not so bad, which were specifically capital improvements, and it was flow-through money from the federal government. Of course, this year that money is not there, so it looks like the budget dropped by a lot of money, and it, in fact, was not that bad. When you take out that 30 million six hundred and something dollars, you've got fairly stable funding in most areas, and I will ask specifically when I see an area where there's been a significant drop.

I will point out to anyone listening or following this at home that the funding for this department goes a long, long way. What looks like a large percentage is actually a pretty small amount of money here. You know, you can have 21 per cent representing only a million dollars or something. It sounds like a big percentage, but it's actually quite a small amount of money. The groups that are funded through this department stretch that money further than anyone could believe possible. Keep in mind that I think we all get very, very good value for our money out of this particular department.

Just a couple of observations. The ministry support services are up what looks to be about 25 per cent from the 2010-11 budget, and I'll come back to that a couple of times. Corporate initiatives: I remember us talking about that last year. Again, it's up 65 per cent. Neither of those, I think, are particularly direct support to artists or art organizations. It's administrative money. I will come back later and question that.

The creative and multimedia industries, as the minister noted, are up $2 million, which represents some 8 per cent, bringing that fund to $8 million.

The administration for the Alberta Foundation for the Arts appears to have gone up by 41 per cent, again not reflective of money being delivered straight to the artists.

I'll come back to the Wild Rose Foundation because it appears to have gone up 91 per cent from last year's budget. Now, there's no additional funding from government here, so it seems like a really optimistic projection.

Community and voluntary support services is down, but again that is reflective of that federal capital money.

Under heritage historic sites and other museums it's down by 8 per cent, which is going to hurt them a lot. The Alberta Historical Resources Foundation is also down. Some organizations out there are going to be trying to squeeze more money out of – what's that phrase? You can't get blood from a stone. That's it. You can't get more money out of this.

In specifically looking at the estimates on page 82, line 1, ministry support services, it looks as though a lot of the program areas did take cuts and last year even looked like they were underspent. I'm wondering why there was such significant overspending in ministry support services and why this budget has been increased for 2011-12. It was higher than budgeted, and then there's an additional increase. Again, we're not talking billions of dollars here. Nonetheless, it is an increase that I'm asking about.

Under the corporate initiatives, which is line 1.7 of the voted expenses by program, appearing on page 82 of the budget – most of my questions are around that page 82 – I'm wondering what these corporate initiatives are. I asked specifically last year, and it wasn't incredibly clear, so again the explanation for the 65 per cent overage. It was budgeted for $2.9 million, and it was forecast for the end of the year at $4.3 million, and next year it's at $4.8 million, which again is a fairly substantial increase. Could I get an explanation for why it was overspent? Again, what is anticipated being spent under that corporate initiatives sector? If it's funding certain projects, I'd like to know which ones, please.

Under equipment purchases, again that's under corporate initiatives: what are the equipment purchases that have happened here, and, I guess, why do they have a priority now? If some programs are taking operational programming hits and are able to deliver less, I'm wondering why the minister felt it was important to continue the funding of the capital?

I think I'll let you answer that section because it's kind of a complete section, and then we'll continue. Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Blackett: Well, thank you, Mr. Chair. The reason for the increases with respect to corporate initiatives is that Service Alberta no longer provides the funding for a lot of the initiatives with respect to IT, whether it's management – we were stuck as a department going through a conversion to a different program, a different network. To be able to fund the finalization of that integration, we had to take that out of our own dollars, so those were significant dollars that we needed to do it. We couldn't stay in no-man's-land.

We identified IT as one of our key cost-effective measures to create access for all Albertans. We've got all of our historic sites and interpretative centres. We're now trying to focus more on distance learning, like we do so well at Head-Smashed-In Buffalo Jump and at the Royal Tyrrell Museum. We're encouraging other sites, like the Frank Slide Interpretive Centre and the Oil Sands Discovery Centre, to utilize that web-based kind of connectivity. It means that people in other remote locations across the province can have access to that kind of information as well.

In terms of the equipment, the equipment was used to purchase the GATE system, our new computer system, which would give online application access and reporting and updates with respect to our community investment programs through lottery, so our CFEP program, our CIP, our community spirit donor program. It will eventually include our AFA and our Alberta multimedia development fund. We had to expend money in the previous year to make sure that we developed the system, and we worked with a supplier to be able to do that. This year we had to have the actual physical equipment, so that's why it's in the budget.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. I would expect, then, that the money in that area would decrease in the year following, seeing as all of that has been paid for.

I also have to make the observation that, unfortunately, I've been here long enough that I saw the creation of Service Alberta, and there was money transferred from departments to create Service Alberta to pay for all of that admin. I'll have to put it on the record that I'm a little ticked if Service Alberta is punting stuff back to departments without returning the money. I'll put that one on the record because, as far as I'm concerned, that's not a square deal. Each department certainly funded it to begin with.

I'm going to move down now and look at cultural industries, which is up slightly, very slightly, 2.5 per cent from last year's budget, but we've got to take this in context of what happened the year before that. It's down still $10 million from the previous year, '09-10, so none of these ones have recovered to where they were. They took a huge hit, and they're getting a little bit back in a lot of cases in this budget.

Under cultural industries can the minister provide a breakdown of where the funding is going, in particular how much is going to film and television? Now, he'd mentioned the $18 million. There may be an opportunity there to explain a bit more about that, or perhaps it's still just the $18 million.

3:20

Now, I noticed that in the business plan on page 42 two of the three priority initiatives are relating to the AFA application process.

- 1.1 Refine the Alberta Foundation for the Arts' application processes to improve efficiency, transparency and accessibility...

- 1.2 Increase the use of peer assessment... to foster artistic excellence, promote organizational health and ensure transparency.

I'm wondering where the funding to support those initiatives turns up in this budget. What line item is it under? I'm wondering if there are funds being taken from artistic support programming to support the implementation of those two priority goals. That's one series under cultural industries.

I'm going to keep moving and look at the funding for the Alberta Foundation for the Arts. Now, I actually can't quite tell if this funding went up or down because depending on where you look at it, you get slightly different numbers: somewhere between $26 million and change and $27 million and change. But the administration is budgeted at the same level as the 2010-11 forecast, and that's 41 per cent up and 49 per cent up from the previous year. So again I'm seeing administration costs go up a lot, but direct delivery of grants to artists and arts organizations is either stable, a little bit up, or a little bit down. I'm wondering why administration has had to increase by almost half as much again twice, coming into the '10-11 year and then the '11-12 year that we're talking about here.

I'm also looking to confirm that the administration numbers are coming under vote 2.4. It's saying, "Assistance to the Alberta Foundation for the Arts," but I know from those numbers that actually is the Foundation for the Arts. So if there could be clarification, please, around how that actually breaks down.

Now, one of the issues that came up last year was the timing. At the time of the debates I raised it with the minister because in response to a number of questions where I was looking for particular details, the minister's response was: "Well, we're deciding that. We're working on it. We'll figure that out in May, June. We're having consultations." This puzzled me because the way I was taught to do a budget, you had to know what the numbers were to actually project the budget, and this seemed to be more: "Well, we'll put this number in here, and then we'll kind of figure out what we're going to do."

The results of this were – and he did appear to consult the groups in May, June, but I was hearing from groups over the summer that they still had not received their cheques and, in some cases, weren't too clear on exactly how much money they were going to get. That became very problematic because they had been warned the previous summer that, yes, there might be terrible cuts coming but not to worry: "Don't do anything because maybe there won't be cuts." So they didn't quite make the moves because they weren't too sure, and they were instructed by department staff to, you know, not do anything drastic, to wait. But then they waited and waited and waited, and they waited past the budget. They waited past May, June, and some of them into, as I say, the summer to find out exactly what their budget was. For a couple of them this was really difficult because by the time they found out they'd had a 15 or 16 or, in one case, a 19 per cent cut, they were already well into their year.

I'm wondering what the minister is doing to improve the certainty of the grant amounts that are going to both artists and through the grant programs and whether there is a process for both indicating the amounts and delivering the grants faster?

I'll give you an opportunity to answer those.

Mr. Blackett: I think the first question was: out of item 2.3 how much was for the multimedia development fund? In this budget I believe it's $18.3 million, and that's an increase from $16.5 million in the last fiscal year. We thought that was important to be able to do that because there is going to be an increase in the number of productions that we're going to have in Alberta in this coming year, and we wanted to be able to support that.

With respect to item 2.4 you had mentioned the increase in funding for other initiatives, and you wondered if that was administrative in nature and if they were coming out of program funding. The thing is they are all coming out of it. That is coming out of administration. There is no increased administrative expenditures to be incurred by our department for those initiatives, and that will come out of the existing dollars, which I believe is under program support, item 2.1, $748,000.

Now, under administration, the AFA, you will have a line on page 94. If you look at page 94, the expense there is $1.278 million. I stand corrected. The $748,000 I said was for administrative grants; the $1.2 million is actually administration of all the other different programs.

In response to the performance measures . . .

Ms Blakeman: Priority initiatives.

Mr. Blackett: Those priority initiatives and the funding of those, I think we have addressed that. That will come out of those other administrative dollars.

You had made a reference to cuts that were made, that organizations felt that they didn't know what was going to happen after the budget last year, and they didn't find out until July. From what I can remember, our AFA grants to those organizations always came out about that same time frame. I'm told that this year we will be giving the groups an advance while the board reviews their allocation for the groups. So they will find out, they will get an advance, and that, I imagine, would occur after April 1, and then they will receive the balance of their funding in July. Since we have no further reductions in funding for this coming fiscal year, I think most of those groups should feel fairly confident that they will receive the amount that they received last year.

I think that answers all of the questions.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. That's very useful. Yes, for some time the department gave advances and then followed up with the exact amount that was owing further on. I don't know whether we got away from that, but boy there was a lot of uncertainty and stress in the community last year because of that.

Okay. We need to clear this up. I think this is all connected, but I have raised in question period a couple of times and in the media and other places an issue with respect to artists who were receiving monies through grant programs that were associated with, generally, a specific location. Initially through the community series grant, I think it was, any group that was associated or performing in a building that was owned by a municipality was told that they would not be eligible to apply for that grant anymore, which was in their minds the same as a cut. That got turned around, and they were told that wouldn't be implemented but that they would have to form themselves into a not-for-profit so that they could apply to get the same money they had before, but it couldn't be coming and be associated with a municipally owned building.

Then there was the program that was the artists in the school program, I think. I may not have the right name there. Sorry. So any school that received funding to bring in artistic groups that would work with the kids over an extended period of time, artists in residence programs, that kind of thing – it wasn't a performance; it was a working artistic experience for the kids – people were told that that was being cut, that they actually had their last grant and that there would be no more money coming in this grant period. Both the Member for St. Albert and myself asked the question: why is there discrimination to this group of artists based on the fact that they're doing a project in a school? That's discrimination based on where they're doing it. The minister said that he hadn't okayed that, and that was turned around or withdrawn.

The last groups out there that are still being discriminated against are groups that are performing their work and whose affiliation is with the location of a university. That one the minister has not turned around. I have asked him questions in question period on that. For example, the difference between Mile Zero Dance and Orchestis: one is a dance group that's affiliated with the University of Alberta. They have been told that that's it, that they've already had their last grant; they had it last summer, and it's over. The U of A mixed chorus, the organ recital group, any arts groups that are somehow situated or associated with the universities have been told: game over; no more money flowing through there. Assistance for the book publishers as well: game over.

Again I question why there is discrimination based on place. I'm going to connect the dots here. I think this has to do with the minister's desire to have other ministries take over funding for groups that he believes are more affiliated with that location than with the arts specifically, but I'll let him tell me if I'm right there.

I'm looking for consistency here. If we've managed to recognize that it's inappropriate to discriminate against artists and arts groups that are affiliated with municipal buildings and artists that are affiliated with educational institutions, why do we insist on continuing the discrimination based on an association with universities and colleges? I would like an explanation on that because I don't think it's fair. I think if we're a cultural ministry and we're trying to support artists – artists work all over the place. I can tell you that when I was a working artist, most of my rent money came from doing things that were artistic and certainly used all of my training. But I was delivering stuff in the police service; I was working for the hospitals. I was all over the place, and that paid a lot of rent money. So saying that where you're doing it somehow makes you ineligible for artistic grants I think is inappropriate, but I'll let the minister put the explanation on the record.

I'm also wondering how we're going to get the communication on that, if it's going to be carried through, so that it's far enough ahead that people are able to plan for that.

Following up on the minister's statements that playgrounds should be paid for by the Department of Education and things, can the minister tell us if any ministers did respond to his encouragement and take up the gauntlet, take up the torch to fund the initiatives that were previously funded by Culture and Community Spirit? I'd be very interested to see if that happened because I suspect the answer is no. Further to that, does the minister still believe that this is a viable approach to funding initiatives that fall between the cracks? If it hasn't worked so far, does the minister have any other ideas about how to convince these other ministers to take on the responsibility for funding what he views as cultural and/or community-based funding through their departments?

The other examples that he made were Environment creating water groups that were then registered as not-for-profits that then applied for funding through CIP or CFEP. He felt that they should be funded through Environment. This is all coming to mind because I've reread the Hansard from last year's debate, and that was one of the examples that he raised.

I guess what I'm seeing here is a bit of ministry turf wars, and the casualties are the artists, which, I would argue, should not be the casualties in this war. To cut them off and then hope that some other minister is going to pick them up I don't think is the way to build our capacity for artists and the access to artists and to community-based programs in this province. But I'll let the minister talk about that.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

I might note that we're in our second 20-minute section.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much.

Mr. Blackett: All right. That's fine.

There's a lot to go over there. But let's be perfectly clear. We haven't wavered at all from our commitment to focus on artists and providing support. This artists in residence program was something brought forward by our department, as I said here in the House. There are people in my department that can have their own ideas. There are people in the Alberta Foundation for the Arts that can have their own ideas. But I can tell you the buck stops with me. I never signed off on any document. I never asked anybody to look at cutting any of those programs, and there is no cut to the artists in residence program. There was never any intention by this minister to cut the artists in residence program, and it will not be cut as long as I am minister.

The performance for universities and colleges: that money has not been cut. I don't know why you insist on going out and creating angst and anxiety amongst all of our artists by coming up with these things that are false. Other people in our department may have proposed them, but that was never my intention; again, never something I signed off on. We have to support our artists. Where are they going to learn if they have to when they're in school, when they're in college, when they're in university? That's a foundation, a building block, and that's how we get to excellence. We have to support them from when they're young children through our K to 12 education and beyond and to the point where they can be whoever they want to be.

As far as the book publishers: they aren't turfed. They're not under the Alberta Foundation for the Arts; they're under cultural industries. For the last two years the Alberta Foundation for the Arts board has asked that they not be included under the Alberta Foundation for the Arts. They are still part of our department. Book publishing and magazine publishing and songwriting or sound recording are all under cultural industries, under that line.

In terms of uptake of initiatives the Minister of Education has said that it is appropriate that new playgrounds for schools be built by his department. That is a great step forward. I would love for a lot of other people to be able to go and take that leap of faith, but the Minister of Education has stepped forward with that.

I also believe strongly that things belong where they belong. That's why horse racing is no longer in my department. That's why bingo is no longer in my department. And that's why major fairs and exhibitions have been transitioned out of Culture and Community Spirit to Agriculture and Rural Development. It's because that's where they're better aligned. That allows that minister to be able to utilize his resources for multiple different areas for the collective good of the agricultural industry and the rural community.

I don't think we've been consistent in that, and I will continue to work towards making sure that the dollars that are allocated to my department are spent with the stakeholders that we're entrusted with, and those are our arts and cultural groups, our heritage groups, and our not-for-profit and volunteer and community organizations. As you know, hon. member, if you've been here for a long period of time, it is not always possible to get what you want.

I was going to also mention that as far as the funding for those students in the universities and the colleges there's a jury process going on right now, as we speak, for the selection of those grants. Just to look at support of excellence, if you look at the front page story today in the Edmonton Journal, Ben Wheelwright and Quinn Ritco-Dooley are students out of Victoria school for the arts and are auditioning for the National Theatre School. I know you're proud of that.

I remember when I was down in Montreal at that institution during Journées de la culture as part of Canada Culture Days, I looked up on the wall, and 25 per cent of those donors were from Alberta. That's something to be proud of, and I think we both agree on that.

Ms Blakeman: We do, indeed, although I'll just make a brief pitch for my alma mater, seeing as the two best performing arts schools in Canada continue to be the National Theatre School in Montreal and the University of Alberta department of drama here in Edmonton, which consistently produces the finest actors, directors, playwrights, and masters of design in the country. When we are proud of people like that – most of the kids from here audition in both places, and it depends how far away from home they want to get. Generally speaking, our kids get into both places, and then they have the choice. I chose to go here, to the University of Alberta. National would have been fun, too, but my French was appalling. Okay.

I'm glad to hear from the minister that there are no cuts to programs based on where the art takes place. I will find the e-mails and provide them to the minister, but I actually quoted it in my notes here. There was one that actually said: "As of April 1, 2011, the AFA will discontinue the Artists and Education program . . . No new grant stream will be put in place to replace [it] or the old Educational Touring grant programs." That's pretty definitive. If that's the one that got out there that hadn't been approved by the minister, great, glad to hear it.

The other group I was talking about are not necessarily students at the university. It's any grant, artistic program, or arts agency or organization support program that is getting money, and they're affiliated with the university, not necessarily students. The printing was part of it because they have a printing press at the university, and they did do specific runs of books out of there. They are not lumped in with cultural industries because they're very specific to the kind of work that they do there. So a slight misunderstanding from the minister there. I'm very glad to hear that none of those programs are disappearing. I'm sure the others will be, too.

Let's talk about the Premier's Council on Arts and Culture. Now, the department reported in '09-10 that the cultural policy had been championed by the Premier's Council on Arts and Culture. It is an agency of the department, and its members are appointed and report to the minister. Its mandate in its terms of reference is to champion the cultural policy and that the chair of the council regularly communicates with the minister to share insights of the council with him. That seems to be all that's required of them.

Last year when I asked about this, I was told with some asperity by the minister that they had exceeded their requirement for meetings and had actually met four times instead of two as was required, but I'm still not understanding what it is exactly that the minister sees as the council's role in championing and developing the arts. Perhaps he could give me some examples of what the outcomes are. Have they produced any documents, anything on paper that anybody could look at, or was there a business plan, or have there been recommendations, for example? That's what you get from the seniors' council or what used to be the women's council; you get recommendations. It just seems like this council exists, but I can't find what they do, and there's nothing on paper. Perhaps the minister just wishes them to meet and to share insights with him. I'll be interested in what that is.

On to the cuts. I did point out that a number of groups took cuts of around 15 per cent. What I was interested in seeing is that the two departments that took the hardest hit and were also amongst the smallest departments last year were Service Alberta and Culture. The minister talks about: well, we all had to tighten our belts, and we all have to pull our weight, and we all have to contribute to this. But I'm curious as to why the minister thinks that his ministry was one of the two that was particularly singled out, especially since it's not a lot of money. They didn't exactly balance the budget on the backs of, you know, a couple of million bucks that they took out of Culture and Community Spirit.

I'm wondering, in addition to why he thinks it happened, what has been done? I kept asking this question last year, and there wasn't much pickup on it. What has been done to measure the impact of the cuts and to assist in the recovery of the organizations and artists this year, next year, and beyond? They've all had a huge cut, and now they're stabilized but much down from where they were. How do we know how they are? When we talk about capacity and excellence and organizational health, what is the department's administration doing to put that into effect?

In addition, around the budget cuts the minister said that he, and I quote: fervently believed that there was 10 to 15 per cent waste in the ministry either through inefficiency or bloated programs. That appears in Hansard on page CS-261. Was the minister able to locate this inefficiency or bloat? Where was it? I'm assuming he didn't find 10 to 15 per cent of it, but you never know. Maybe he did, and it went somewhere else.

Those are a set of questions on the council on the arts and specifically on the cuts. Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Blackett: All right. Well, I've got some documents that I would like to distribute if I'm allowed to do that.

First of all, the first question was on the Premier's Council on Arts and Culture. I have a slide deck here that I think the hon. member would like to see. I would, if I may, have those distributed.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, perhaps you could table those. I think that might be better.

Mr. Blackett: Okay. I can certainly do that.

The first question was about the Premier's council. The Premier's council advises the minister of policy changes. One of the challenges they have is that we've been moving pretty fast in our department. We've had three different series of dialogues across Alberta. We started out in December of 2009 through January of 2010. We had another session that was in September-October of 2010. We were in places like Fort McMurray, Grande Prairie, Red Deer, Edmonton, Calgary, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Cold Lake, and I know there's another one that I'm missing. We sat down and had meetings with arts organizations and not-for-profit organizations.

For this particular relevance we'll talk about the not-for-profit organizations, and I will table our copies of the dialogue sessions, which went online a couple of days ago. They are responses to the initial dialogue sessions that we had a year ago, some of the things that we were working to improve upon and then having feedback from that, and going back on the second one, what we've heard, what people have submitted online, and what they've heard in person from those different areas.

I thought it was important that I have my government officials, people from my department, getting out to these different areas to actually experience and hear first-hand what's going on from these individuals. Too often in Edmonton we create our policies in a vacuum, and we forget that Alberta is very diverse. People in Lethbridge are not the same as people in Fort McMurray, and they're not the same in Grande Prairie as they are in Hinton. We have to recognize that. We have to make sure that our programs suit all of those. The Premier's advisory council was part and parcel of those dialogues and passing on information, but a lot of the information they gave was information that we had received from the individuals through those different dialogues.

I do meet with the chair every couple of months. We talk about a multitude of different things. One of those things that they encouraged a lot was to start telling our story in a more effective manner.

Here in this slide presentation, you know, it shows just an example of things that we have done in the last three years: the Montrose Cultural Centre in Grande Prairie; the Olds College Fine Arts & Multi Media Centre in Olds; the new Telus World of Science, which will open in Calgary this October; the Southern Alberta Art Gallery, which opened last September; the new Canadian sports hall of fame, that we're going to open in July of this year; the new Mount Royal Conservatory – the shovel is about to go in the ground – the Nina Haggerty centre for the performing arts here in Edmonton; the Go centre; the beautiful Art Gallery of Alberta; the Rosebud Theatre expansions; La Cité francophone; Athabasca Regional Multiplex; the Medicine Hat clay district national historic site; the Edmonton humane society; upgrades to the Citadel Theatre; the Jubilee auditoriums, two of the top 100 performing theatre venues in the world, which ranked last year 40 and 46, and only Massey Hall ranked in the top 100 in Canada; the old Bailey Theatre, 101 years old, which we refurbished when we opened this year; and the Canmore Opera House, to name just a few.

I tell you; when I gave that presentation to the Minister of Canadian Heritage and Official Languages, he was shocked because, you know, there is no other province in Canada that has one of those programs, one of those buildings going on. That's our cultural policy coming to life. That builds access, that builds the capacity, that fosters the excellence, and that certainly supports our cultural industries.

Now, you want to measure the impact. Well, there is that, but our dialogue sessions – again, it is talking to people directly and having them tell us exactly what that is. Yes, I understand that 16 per cent is a lot of money to a lot of organizations, but we also have increased funding to AFA in the last six years by 55 per cent – 55 per cent – and the amount that we had to reduce is smaller than most of the provinces that are bordering on either side of us.

Yes, my budget – I think wholeheartedly that we spend a dollar more effectively than any other department in government, and you'll get a greater bang for the buck. We have $9 billion of GDP that we create for the not-for-profits, and we create $4.54 billion of gross domestic product out of creative industries.

Lastly, locating inefficiency. We've done a fantastic job. We've been doing that for the last three years, and there will be dollars that we will have found this year. I did promise arts organizations that if we found dollars, they would receive some of those dollars back. The end of the month is about a week away, so stay tuned.

Ms Blakeman: Great. Well, I am really interested in hearing where the inefficiency and bloat was and how much money you're able to redistribute as a result of that.

I know that it's good political spin for the minister to keep saying that there was a 55 per cent increase in the funding for the AFA, but I lived through that. Between 1989 and 2005 there was, for all intents and purposes, no increase, not even cost of living. As I ran a theatre company or tried to work in theatre companies and they tried to go out and buy set pieces or tap shoes or whatever else, they were trying to buy it at 2001 prices using 1989 dollars. So we more than earned that 55 per cent. That was not an increase. You could clearly look at that as cost of living. Everybody else got it. Transportation got it. Municipalities got it. Everybody else got it; we didn't get it. I know he needs to say that in order to repair some things, but I'm sorry; you get no standing ovation from me on that one.

What we had was a coming up to – I think it should have been even more than it was, but we were all very appreciative of the money we got, and there has been a decrease from that. It's affecting all of us because now we're trying to deal in 2011 dollars to buy things, to buy paper, to buy, you know, art paper, acid-free paper, and all the rest of that, so it really makes a difference to us.

I'll just climb down off my high horse and get on with it. Okay. Under cultural policy the government's cultural policy highlights four keystones of – and you mentioned it – access, capacity, excellence, and fostering cultural industries. I'd like to talk about access. I'm wondering how the minister or the department staff expect to improve access when, in fact, groups are able to offer less programming. I'm just going to highlight the Alberta Craft Council, that did a stunning exhibit as a way of driving home their point recently in which there was nothing on the walls. There was nothing displayed – there was no sculpture – because they wanted to show the exhibition with the empty walls, highlighting the effects of the cuts in programming.

Somebody is going to jump up here and say: we didn't cut it. Yes, but not increasing it, even cost of living, is in effect a cut, and there were cuts. They were in the tens of thousands range here. That matters. So how is that keystone of access going to be achieved in this year? How is the keystone of capacity going to be achieved?

I note specifically that from 2009 to 2011 the department spent nearly $12 million on cultural policy initiatives, and that's coming out of their annual report on page 49. The policy itself was announced as completed in 2008. During the same period the Alberta Foundation for the Arts spent a little more than $10 million on grants to individual artists, which is less than the amount that was spent on the work for the policy. If you want to put it another way, it's about one-quarter of what the AFA provided in grants to the arts organizations. Can the minister explain the balance here between the amount of money that was spent on policy initiatives with respect to capacity and the amount that was actually spent on developing capacity through grants to the arts? I'm curious about that.

The business plan also includes as a priority initiative developing a strategic plan and policy objectives to address the future direction of creative industries in Alberta. That's in the business plan, page 42, initiative 1.3. We've heard a lot about how there have been plans and consultation and blueprints, and community spirit policy has all been developed, so I'm a little curious about why there is a business plan that includes a priority to develop a plan. Maybe you could explain that. How can we expect to see the strategic plan and the explicit policy objectives from that?

I'm going to go forward now to cultural policy integration. The ministry's most recent annual report states that "aspects of the policy have been successfully integrated into the work of government." That appears on page 12 of the minister's annual report. I'm finding that a bit vague as a statement of results. Could the minister detail what success means in this context and how I could expect to see the cultural policy integrated into the work of government in this year that we're looking at?

The minister often said last year that, well, you know, we're doing the train in Vancouver, and we're giving $6 million to support the Alberta artists that performed in the square. I'm wondering if that's what he's including as successfully integrating the cultural policy into the work of government or if there's something else that's happening that I'm not aware of. How do I see this integration in the rest of government? Is it something tangible, or has everybody just agreed that it's a good idea?

Last year the minister said that the budget cuts were made with an eye to "increasing the competitiveness of our cultural industries in the future." That is in Hansard on page CS-260. I guess I'm looking to see how the minister can explain how cuts were supposed to increase competitiveness. Since the future is now, could he give us an example of the results of this strategy? How did cutting cultural industries result in them being more competitive, or is there a cultural industry that's doing demonstrably better than it was as a result of these cuts? Exactly what was happening?

The last piece of this is the cultural sector labour force. Now, last year I had talked to the minister about the 2004 labour market review for cultural workers. I asked about how we were getting on with the next one. In fact, in 2010 the federal Cultural Human Resources Council published an additional cultural human resource study, and it's some of the GDP numbers that he has been using.

We were not involved in the 2004 project, and I'm wondering if he can tell us who took the lead for Alberta in the 2010 project. What I was hearing was that since we identified no one, nobody got sent to participate in that particular survey. I'm wondering if we were able to participate in it. Once again, it's the federal government's Cultural Human Resources Council publishing a cultural human resource study. It came out in 2010. As a result, were we able to get any cultural workforce information that is usable in Alberta, and has that helped with the minister's competitiveness strategy? Maybe I could put it that way. I'm thinking we didn't get in on this one and that they don't have numbers for us, but maybe I'm wrong, and I'm happy to have the minister tell me that. So I'll let him answer that sort of series of questions.

Mr. Blackett: Sure. The first one was on access and how. You mentioned the Alberta Craft Council. You know, one of the things we have a great opportunity for here is to take leadership and tell Albertans first and tell the rest of the world what great cultural institutions we have, what great artists we have, and how we'd like to work together to foster that excellence.

Now, the Alberta Craft Council. That was fantastic. They had a display, and they sent out postcards. By the way, the postcard? That was I Love Alberta Art. That's something we promoted out of our department. It's nice of them to take that and take the negative because you know what? Why would they want to tell the good story? Why would they want to take the time to say: "You know what? This is what we do for Alberta artists. This is what they represent. You should support us. You should come and buy more product because this is fantastic. Our artists are not getting paid enough, and we need your support to come and do that." But, no. And I would have been happy to help them with that.

In terms of access most of our departments, in terms of the problems they've had – what we've had to focus on in the last two years is trying to do more with less, to become more efficient in our operations. There is waste all around the board, and I'll get to some of that in a moment because you brought that up with another question.

Our council's integration in government. One of the things that we've had very successfully is Alberta Arts Days. We started that in 2008, and in 2009, with help from the Premier's council and the AFA, we were able to get the Minister of Education to go out and encourage all the K to 12 schools in the province to participate. I think we had over 80 of those participate. We had the Minister of Municipal Affairs send a letter out to all the libraries across Alberta asking them to participate. We had 142 libraries participate. Last year, in 2010, we did the exact same thing, and we increased that. We want every year to be more inclusive with Albertans, and this is encouraged by our Premier's advisory council. Culture has to be larger. Arts is a subset of that. You've got to take people in their communities, the multicultural aspect, and make every one of those 3.7 million people feel welcome. We did that.

We also partnered with the not-for-profit community last year. The Edmonton Federation of Community Leagues was fantastic. That 151-member or 152-member organization had their own functions. We hope to do that again here in Calgary, and we will continue to work through other departments and other organizations and municipalities. I'd like to say that the city of Grande Prairie put forward a motion, and they declared that they would put $5,000 towards their Arts Day program for 2011.

In terms of cuts for competitiveness I didn't say that cuts will make us competitive. Cuts force us to be competitive. I know that many of those organizations run lean and mean, but that's what we have to do.

In terms of our Alberta Film Advisory Council we focused on two things that we need to do to get the industry back up and employing as many people as possible, having as many productions here and generating as many dollars in Alberta as possible. We had to look at innovation. We had to look at what new technology we can be a leader in, that we can participate in, and that we can grow and have a niche market that is second to none in North America. We thought that was HD and 3-D technology.

Then we looked at competitiveness, and that was a wide range of things. We had to look at our incentives. When we went to L.A., we found out that our incentives weren't the problem, that we had other little niggling issues. There was the lack of a master agreement between unions and guilds and our producers. They are working hard to be able to do that. We weren't working as a partnership. We weren't working as government and unions and guilds and producers and our film commissioners and our postsecondary facilities. We needed to do more of that.

We needed to be more efficient in the way that we utilized the money that was in the Alberta multimedia development fund. There are projects that we had there. There are genres that we probably should be funding. We don't fund sports. We don't fund news. We don't fund reality television. Some others reportedly were given money with the belief that they're actually going to be seen. That was the premise on which they would receive money, and some of those didn't happen.

We are all working together to make sure that in the year 2011 we're going to actually have those union and guild memberships working. We paid out almost $20 million last year and $34 million the year before, and there are still people that are sitting and not working. We need to work at efficiencies. It's a balance of indigenous work and service work and all the different genres. We have to make sure that we're making that money work for us and that it give us the best bang for the buck. I'm happy to say that the industry is working together to make that happen today.

Our federal human resource council and who led that: I had a meeting with Minister Moore just last week. We didn't get in on that one in 2010, but I talked to him after the FPT. We said that we need to share a lot more resources amongst the provinces and with the federal government. We've asked for a couple of different things from them and the Canadian Tourism Commission. We want to get more information as to the economic impact for film, television, and digital, not just on the direct. Look at New Zealand, for instance, with The Hobbit. They say that that's a billion or billion and a half dollars. It's not just what's spent on salaries. It's not just what's spent in the hotels. It's not just what's spent on costumes. How many people are coming to New Zealand now because they saw that movie? We know that Brits love to go to countries that they see in movies.

They hadn't had a lot of definite information on that, so we're working together with them on that. He has said that when that information comes forward, he will certainly share that with us. I will give Minister Moore credit because he was the one that made me realize what the percentage of our gross domestic product is in relation to other industries. For Canada it's, like, $46 billion. That's twice what agriculture is for the country. In Alberta we're a little bit more the flip side on that. We've got to get past where we think that this is an expenditure. This is an investment.

We spend $20 million or $30 million, and what we're going to get out of it is a multitude of benefits. I'll give you one. We got $13 million of economic benefit. It cost us $2 million, but we also got notoriety throughout Hollywood for our crews, our location, and our professionalism. That will leverage other projects, not just for Warner Bros. but for Disney and HBO and the like.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. I've asked to go back on the list so I can complete my questions. Actually, the minister did say that cuts were going to make the cultural industries more competitive. It is on page 260, and I can read it back to . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, the time has passed.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Chair.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, are you going to combine your 10 minutes each?

4:10

Mr. Anderson: Back and forth if we could. That would be great.

Thank you. It's always good to see the smiling face of the minister there. He's very passionate about his area, about his ministry, and that's much appreciated.

I also want to thank the government for sponsoring and supporting the Airdrie air show. It's a great part of our community. It's a new event that we're putting on. This is the second version of it; we did one two years ago as well. It was just phenomenal. We had thousands and thousands and thousands of people show up, so I do appreciate the support from this minister on that issue.

I do want to talk about the CIP and CFEP programs, and I have talked to this minister in private about it as well, so he knows generally where I'm coming from on this issue. First of all, I can only say from my own experience, and I know the minister can only go from his own experience, too. When I was a member of the Progressive Conservative caucus, how it worked, in my experience, with regard to CFEP and CIP monies and grants was as follows.

There were two types. I had the opportunity to sit on both the Calgary caucus and the rural caucus. I'm going to start with how things were done in my own constituency, specifically in rural Alberta, and then I'll move to Calgary. There was a certain specific amount of money that was allocated for each constituency in rural Alberta. I forget the exact amount. It's probably changed since I last checked, but it was several hundred thousand dollars for both CFEP and for CIP.

Now, how it worked in my two years there – you brought this up.

Ms Blakeman: I did.

Mr. Anderson: You brought this up. I remember that, hon. member. The first time it had ever been mentioned in the Legislature, I almost . . .

Ms Blakeman: I nailed you.

Mr. Anderson: You did. Well, for telling the truth.

What happened at that time – well, I won't go into that. Essentially, somebody would come in from lotteries or from the program and would sit down with us and say: "This is how much money you have in your budget every two years" – I think that it's over two years that they spread it; it might be three years – "and here's how much money you have that you need to spend in your CIP and CFEP budget that you have left for your constituency." Then they would go through the list of programs that were being applied for, and they would go by the city of Airdrie or by Chestermere or the Airdrie Pro Rodeo or whatever. They go through these different applications, and they would say exactly where we were in this application process. Then they would ask: "Mr. Anderson, would you like to support this project, and if so, for how much?"

Every single month, essentially, when applications came in, we would be asked by the individual – community liaison officer was, I believe, the title – whether we supported the project and to what dollar amount. Never in my two years, the entire time I was in government, did anyone say no when I said that I supported the project and I said the dollar amount that I supported it for. Not once in that two years, not a single time, was the actual grant that went out unequal to what I had specifically supported, to the dollar. Never once was there a problem with it, which was fine. That was fine.

People would come in to see me. They would say: we need to build a new playground. My assistant and I had so many playgrounds going up in the area that we said: "Okay. For each playground it's going to be $30,000. That's how much we can budget, $30,000 per playground." This is probably shocking to you, hon. member. Anyway, that's what occurred.

I have documentation here – and I'll table it tomorrow in the Legislature – correspondence between myself and my assistant and the community liaison officer talking about these things, talking about this back-and-forth, about how much money I would support it for, what project I supported, et cetera.

Ms Blakeman: Is that happening now?

Mr. Anderson: Well, incredibly, it's not. Incredibly, since I've become a member of an opposition caucus, I don't get that, Mr. Chair. I don't get that same heads-up. I'm not asked for my opinion. I have been back and forth with the minister on this issue, and we're talking about, you know, ways that he can maybe give us more of a heads-up when projects have kind of been approved so that we know beforehand what has been approved, and I appreciate that. That's better than what I was getting before. But it's just so categorically 180 different from what it was when I was a member of the Progressive Conservative caucus.

I don't mind that we do it this way. I actually think the MLA should have a role in weeding through the malarkey that's out there. I don't like the idea of someone from a constituency coming forward and applying and then, you know, some civil servant in Edmonton, who has no clue what the needs of the local community are, making a decision. I certainly don't disagree that the MLA should have a role, but what I do disagree with is whether that role that the MLA has should be based on whether they're in the government or not.

Since I've been in government and since the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek has been in government, we have not whatsoever in any way, shape, or form been consulted. We can write a letter to the minister, and we can say that we hear that this application from a constituent is coming forward and that we support it in principle, whatever, but the same consultation, the back-and-forth process that existed when I was in the government, absolutely and categorically does not exist today. That's unacceptable. That's just absolutely not right.

Ms Blakeman: Did you get to hand out the cheque?

Mr. Anderson: Yeah, we got to hand out the cheques. I mean, I was glad to see the Airdrie air show supported. I got no heads-up on the cheque announcement, but that's just, you know, another matter.

I would as an MLA in rural Alberta from an opposition party like the ability to have a say in a project or at least be able to express my support or lack of support for an application knowing that I know the needs of my community a whole lot better than somebody in your office, just like, hon. minister, you know the needs of your community better than any other MLA in this Chamber. So that's the first thing.

As a member of the Calgary caucus it was a little bit different. Now, my funds were not put into the Calgary caucus, but I did attend the meetings where they were divvied out. Essentially, we would go through project by project. People would come to Calgary caucus, give their presentation, and then we would go around the room and essentially talk about which projects we supported and for what dollar amounts, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera. The Calgary MLAs would pool their money, and then they would divvy it out according to whatever they discussed. So that's how it's done in Calgary caucus. That's how it worked.

Now, I don't know if things have changed since then, hon. minister, but if they haven't changed, if it's still that way, I as a rural MLA would like the ability to participate in the decision-making process or at least participate and have in advance the opportunity to express support or lack of support for the projects in my community to the dollar amount, just like I was when I was a PC member. I think that's a fair request. I'll let you respond to that.

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Chairman, I'd love to respond to that. First of all, let's be perfectly clear. No MLA is responsible for administration of the dollars in their constituency no matter what. The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo said to me in a letter, which I would be glad to table tomorrow: I am the one responsible for handing out grants in my area; I will take care of that; you nor the Premier nor anybody else in your government needs to come there; I will take care of that. That is wrong, absolutely wrong.

I'll tell you what the policy is today because I met with the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. First of all, prior to that, I said to him: "Let's be clear. Of all the opposition-held ridings in the province, there is a disproportionate amount of money that goes to them. Higher than the average of any other constituency goes to Edmonton-Centre, Calgary-Buffalo, Calgary-Mountain View, Edmonton-Gold Bar, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera."

We divvy out the money on an average per constituency. There is no constituency that actually gets exactly the money because in some constituencies we don't have as many applications as we have money allocated to them. Sometimes we take that extra money, and we try to divvy it around to programs that we think have good benefit. But we always look from the CLO standpoint. Is the application viable? Do they have the matching funds that are required? Do they have community support? A lot of times that community support comes in the form of the MLA.

Now, what we have today, I can tell you, are reports that go out to MLAs once a month which will tell you what projects are being put forward in your constituency. That goes out to our opposition MLAs. It says: ABC organization has applied for a grant. If they want to, they can write a letter of support on that grant, and we will take that under advisement. Actually, there have been several in some of those ridings that I've already mentioned that they supported, and we did award them a grant based on that. So I think it's fairly equitable.

But when you are a government member, it's not the same as being an opposition member, and when the minister is out there presenting something, he's going to take his government colleagues. That happens. I'm not denying anybody else from it. If the hon. member is suggesting that I should be notifying all of them, that's fine. But today I can categorically say that those CLOs do not give that information out to the members. I give that information out to the Members of the Legislative Assembly, to my government members and to the members opposite. If they want something approved or they want help, like the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona had with a previous application, I would be more than happy to sit down and talk about that. We certainly helped with that project, and that organization did receive funding. We'll continue to do that. We're as transparent as we possibly can be.

My father came from a background of working with Revenue Canada and the Auditor General, and he told me that the very first thing you do is you go talk to the Auditor General and the Ethics Commissioner. You make sure that you've got all your ducks in a row and that things aren't offside. Anything that is offside with the Auditor General is offside with me. We made sure that we streamline some of those things. Some of my colleagues maybe didn't like that, but that is the responsibility that we have to the taxpayers of Alberta. We think we've been fairly fair, and we will continue to do so. I'm very proud of those programs.

Mr. Anderson: As I said, I completely agree with the minister that the program is a good program. It's not about the amount of money. I'm not for one second saying that Airdrie has been short-changed under the CIP and CFEP programs. I get the same amount in our community as every other rural community, for example. That's not in dispute here.

What I have a problem with is that as an opposition MLA – you know, Albertans voted for me, and Albertans voted for you. We all got people to vote for us, and that's why we're in the Legislature today. The issue, though, is that as an MLA I think that regardless of what party you're from, you should receive a notification when you're going to give out government money because we're the local representative in our constituency. We're not saying that this cheque comes from MLA Rob Anderson or anything like that.

Some Hon. Members: Names. Names.

Mr. Anderson: Sorry. Names, names. I agree.

I'm not saying that that should be the case. All I'm saying is that we should have an ability to at least be there to represent our constituents, so a notification. My first question is: will the minister undertake to at least notify opposition MLAs of events prior to cheques being distributed so that we can at least attend and be present?

The second question is kind of attached to that. Before an application for something is approved, can we at least be asked for our opinion on it, just give an opinion? You don't have to follow the opinion, you know. Okay. This playground is coming down. The application is for $80,000. Can I at least say, "Yes, that is very much needed; I support this project" or "No, those guys were in for money three years ago, and I think they're just milking you" or whatever? Can we at least respond to it and give our honest opinion of whether the project is supportable? So notification prior to the cheques, and if we could have some input into things prior to the approval, that would be fantastic.

I'll give you an example of this prior approval. Again, I will table these tomorrow. This is an excellent opportunity for this minister, who's obviously passionate about his ministry and has done a lot of good things in his ministry, to really, you know, change the way that business has been done on the CFEP/CIP programs, show a lot of ingenuity and transparency, and make these decisions more nonpartisan and transparent. I think it would be a great opportunity for him to do so.

One of these things. There was a message from a Cheryl Dalwood, the community liaison officer. I just want to stress that this person is doing her job. Clearly, she's doing nothing wrong because she's following directions. This is to my assistant, Donna. In the e-mail she says, "Just wondering if Rob has had an opportunity to review this funding request yet?" This is for the CIP application for the Olympic torch relay community celebration. "Drumheller, Red Deer South and Red Deer North have committed to support their part of the event. Please let me know as soon as possible."

She had asked a couple of times, and for some reason my assistant and myself hadn't gotten back to her, so she was following up again the second time saying: we really need to know whether you as the MLA support your part of the funding for this so that we can go ahead with this project. I think this is great. I think this is the way it should be. It needs to be transparent. MLAs need to be responsible for what projects they support and what they don't support and why they support and why they don't support. People need to know that. Our voters need to know that.

As I said in my article, if you remember, Member for Edmonton-Centre, that's part of the transparency that should exist, that we should be accountable for the support or nonsupport of things that we do so that people can judge for themselves. You know, it's just like anything else. Transparency will make us all stronger MLAs, will make us more accountable.

Would you be willing to do those two things, Mr. Minister, notification and asking for input prior to approval?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, two things. On the first one I'm open to the idea of looking at notifying opposition members of things that have been made. I will look at that.

On the second one let's be perfectly clear. No government member now is asked for a yes or a no from my department or myself. I'm not going to extend that opportunity to the opposition because that doesn't happen right now. We provide a report that will tell you which one of those applications is currently being considered. You have a chance to write a letter of support or pick up the phone and call our office if you'd like, and you can put that on the record and notify your people in your constituency, write a letter to your local newspaper, just like anybody else here can. But we will not be asking anyone yes or no. Those members here know they can provide letters of support if they would like to. They get those reports, and we move forward.

In terms of notification I don't think that's something that's unreasonable to ask for, but on the second one the answer would have to be no.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Mr. Anderson: Yeah. Just to clarify quickly, I agree. I don't want to be asked yes or no, but can we at least just get a heads-up before the approval to ask for input? Just input. I know from these documents and I know from my own experience that there's no doubt that I have been asked yes or no personally, but maybe that has changed. Maybe you've changed that in your department. I don't know. I haven't been there for a year and a half. Can we at least get a notification prior to approval to at least have the ability to give some input into the project? Just any input. I'm not saying that you have to follow it. It's not a yes-or-no question. It's just that if we could get that opportunity to have input into a project prior to final approval of that project, I think it would be a great, transparent thing.

The Deputy Chair: The time has elapsed on this one.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona, please.

4:30

Ms Notley: Thank you. I think I'll try going back and forth. We'll see how that works. I have a number of issues that I need to cover off.

I'd like to start with just a fairly open-ended kind of question. Of course, I haven't gotten any of these one-on-one consultations that have been described, but on behalf of some people in my constituency I know the minister is aware of the efforts by the Varscona Theatre to acquire funding. They've made some, obviously, very good arguments. They've succeeded in getting a fairly significant commitment from the city, and there appears to be a fair amount of productive conversation with the federal government, but they seem to be running up against a brick wall with the provincial government.

This is a theatre that, you know, is one of the busiest theatres in the country, that has about 350 performances a year, that has over 35,000 people go through its doors every year, and that offers a range of programming to kids and to youth and to adults. So it's a key community and cultural centre in our city, and they have some very, very serious capital problems with respect to the state of the building right now.

I understand that in the past they got some CFEP funding to do some work around the assessment of their needs, and that's great. But, as you may well know, I think the assessment concluded that there was about $4 million or $5 million that was needed. So my question is pretty open-ended, really, to the minister: where would you suggest that these folks go and look to get some support provincially for the amount of dollars that they need? Do you believe that refurbishing the Varscona Theatre is a project that is worth pursuing?

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, hon. member, for that question. The Varscona Theatre is a wonderful facility. I have a soft spot for it because I got to perform with Die-Nasty there a couple of summers ago. We had a discussion. We had a presentation by them. I think it was somewhere in 2009. I haven't heard from them in quite some time, so I'm not familiar with the city coming forward. It's probably time to reconnect with them to see where they're at in their process.

We have the community facility enhancement fund right now, a program that we could utilize, but there's a limited amount of money in there. It's $35 million trying to spread across the province, so that's tough. When we had the major community facilities program is when we talked to them. It was just the tail end of that. We thought we'd be able to utilize that, but we haven't had that happen.

I'd be happy to sit down with them. We can provide some funding through CFEP. It may be in excess of the $125,000 that's there, but it will not be in the millions of dollars because we just don't have it. But I'd love to sit down with them and see where they're at. If the city supports them and the federal government supports them, the province of Alberta is usually someone who can be counted on. I'll talk to some of my colleagues in the Edmonton area and see what we can do to help them with that. I'd love to have that discussion.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Ms Notley: Thank you. Well, I think a good starting point would be for them to have an opportunity to make a presentation to the capital region caucus, which I understand is not something that they've been successful at doing yet. So that would be a good start.

I'd like to talk about another issue that you're very familiar with as it relates not just to my constituency, but it's through my constituency that I brought it forward to you. As I'm sure you're not surprised, I am quite – well, disappointed is probably an understatement. Just to recap the history on this in terms of your understanding of where I'm coming from, as you know, there was the decision that CIP funds would not be made available to municipal bodies, and that was something that was discussed in the last round of estimates.

Then, lo and behold, arts and culture projects that were orchestrated through the Old Strathcona Business Association, which is a business revitalization zone – suddenly they were told that they would not be eligible for these funds, which seemed like a bit of an oddity because, of course, they are not actually municipal bodies. We got correspondence about that. We met with you. Two different leaders of two different business revitalization zones met with you along with me, and at that time you assured us that it didn't make sense, that you understood that it didn't make sense, that it was sort of a gross expansion of that policy to that group, that it didn't make good public policy sense, and that you would have it fixed.

Based on that – and this is the thing that's really concerning – I know of at least one business revitalization zone organization that went ahead and invested money and time and volunteer efforts to move forward on projects that they believed they were eligible to apply for funding on. Then just a mere three weeks ago they got yet another letter telling them that, no, after all, they're not actually eligible. My first problem, of course, is with the fact that this organization acted on the assurances that they received in person from the minister several months ago, to their detriment. So that is the first issue here.

The second issue here is again the public policy implications of this. Business revitalization zones don't get money, specifically, any more or less from municipalities than any other community group, nonprofit society, or anything else. The municipalities merely act as a collector for them. What they do is they collect funds that businesses voluntarily agree to provide, and that's all they do. They are simply a flow-through mechanism. There could be a variety of different flow-through mechanisms, but at some point in the past it was determined that the municipality was the most appropriate flow-through mechanism.

In the past this minister has talked about the need to leverage – this is one of your favourite concepts these days – dollars from other communities. So if government money goes into something and you can get corporate sponsorship or community sponsorship to add onto it, then one taxpayer dollar turns into four ultimate dollars for the project. Now, these business revitalization zones are built-in dollar leveraging mechanisms because small business – you know, people think: “Oh, yeah. The NDP don't like small business.” But I actually like small business, and these BRZs are exactly the reason why. They give right back to their community because they live and die on the health of their community, the community we all live in. So they make an effort to give back to their community, and that's what the purpose of these BRZs is.

They've put in their own money. In the particular projects that the Old Strathcona Business Association has been ineligible to get funding for, the businesses have put in additional resources above and beyond the regular levy that they contribute, which is funneled to them by the municipality. So they put in extra work on these particular projects, and they're being penalized. Here's a community organization that is actually being penalized for the fact that they have set up a systemic regular process of ensuring that there's other money there that can leverage the public money. It seems to go absolutely counter to good sense to exclude them from eligibility for the CIP.

So I'd like the minister, first of all, to comment on the investment that was made, to their detriment, on the basis of the assurances that we received from the minister in that meeting in October or November. I'd also like the minister to comment on how it is that this makes any kind of sense based on your own desire to add community money to taxpayer money when building community initiatives. Of course, as you know, the initiatives in this case are all about building the local music industry, which is squarely within the terms and the objectives and the mandate of your ministry.

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member did meet with me, and I met with a representative of the business revitalization zone. I was told at that time that they were not-for-profit organizations. We had talked about whether they were a part of the municipality, and we were told they were not-for-profit organizations.

We spent an inordinate amount of time in my department trying to find out through Municipal Affairs and through the different municipalities exactly how they're constituted. Funny enough, there is not one municipality that has the same type of governance, the same type of rules. They don't disclose. You have to dig very, very deeply within the municipalities – and I'm not making this up – very, very deeply to find the information as to if they get funding, how the funding flows through. Not everybody works like the city of Edmonton. We're talking about a policy that would be – if I say that that's for that BRZ, then the next BRZ says that that's a precedent.

It was hard to get that information. They are governed by the municipality. Their governance is by the municipality. And you can shake your head. I can tell you that I've got the paperwork, and we've done it to prove it. They cannot operate without direct permission of the municipality for a specific purpose and are then funded by the tax levy. As you mentioned, if incorporated as a not-for-profit, then they would be eligible. But for a lot of them it's the legality, and it's the paperwork. My department couldn't find any consistency or anybody that could provide the information to make that. I said to you that it makes no sense. If you're clearly a not-for-profit and we can demonstrate that, then it should be straightforward, and they'd be eligible. There's no guarantee they would get funding. But from what I could see and everything that's been put forward to me, that's not clearly there.

Ms Notley: Well, I would sure have appreciated it, Mr. Minister, if your department had called up the Old Strathcona Business Association while they were in the process of not getting this information and maybe asked it from them because they would have gotten that information. They would have found out that they're audited to higher standards than 90 per cent of the organizations you currently fund right now. And you would have maybe just given them notice that they ought not to invest all the money that they were investing on the basis of your word. So right there, I mean, that's the first problem.

The second thing is: I don't know how the other BRZs work, but the ones that you met with told you what they told you, and I know that their bylaws, their auditing, their financials are completely transparent, and not once did anybody in your ministry contact them and ask for this information. So I find this really hard to buy, quite frankly.

Mr. Blackett: I'm not sure if anybody in my department contacted them, but I'm telling you one thing: one rule for the BRZ that you have given me does not transfer to everyone. We're not going to give one and not be able to give to others because there are inconsistent rules and regulations on how they all operate. That is my responsibility, to make sure that's there. Until I'm satisfied that that can be done – understand that the rules with respect to municipalities having access to government grants are made by the Department of Municipal Affairs, and the reason for that was that most of these organizations are eligible for MSI funding, which those not-for-profit organizations that I have to deal with, most that come through our department aren't. If we can get assurances that they are a not-for-profit – I went back and forth with my department in several different meetings, and I'm told that that is not there.

Ms Notley: They're not eligible for MSI. Just to be clear, these organizations don't get a single cent from the municipality any more or less than any other community organization, and they're not eligible for MSIs, so that's not a legitimate rationale.

Moreover, you should have told them. You should have told them. They went out on a limb. They invested time. They invested money. Your folks met with each other – and every time they go off and meet with each other they get confused – but they didn't actually sit down and talk to the people that they were providing the inaccurate information about. It's perfectly possible to come up with a set of standards for all the BRZs and say: okay, the BRZs will not be exempted providing they meet these standards of auditing or whatever. But there was no thought put into that. There was no consultation. There was no discussion with them. Meanwhile, they went off and invested all of this money.

So it's not an indication of a good track record of managing an issue on the part of your staff. I don't have a lot of time left, but I do think that we'll go on about this in a different forum because I think the record that we've got thus far is really not something that anyone in your office should be particularly proud of.

I'd like to go very quickly to the issue briefly raised by the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. Now, he seemed prepared to accept that it was reasonable that you would just maybe in the future give us notice of cheques being presented in our ridings. I have to say that, I mean, in response to the questions that I asked last year, we got a list of the 25 or so cheque presentation events that occurred, the 40 Conservative MLAs who were invited to them, and it's very clear that no opposition MLAs were invited to them. It was indicated that there were press releases on the ministry website that announced these events every time they happened, so it's clear that ministry resources are going to help organize these events, but no opposition MLAs are being invited.

Does the minister not understand how the average taxpayer would look at that expenditure of communications resources and event-organizing resources and see that opposition MLAs are being excluded, government MLAs are being included, and taxpayer dollars, not PC Party dollars but taxpayer dollars, are going to do that and not believe that it creates an overall picture of a certain amount of corruption? Do you not see how the average taxpayer would be quite offended by that expenditure of their taxpayer dollars?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't see why the average taxpayer would be offended because no money is expended on communications for those. The events are usually organized by the organizations themselves, the primary reason being that it is for their benefit to have the fact that they have a program that's being given funding or a building that's being given funding to – that's matching funds. They still have to find dollars from the corporate community or individual donors, and we help do that, just like we did this weekend with the Calgary Immigrant Educational Society. We did it with the Community Kitchen, and we did it with Cubs, that deal with poverty. A lot of people don't know those organizations exist.

So what did we bring? We brought a backdrop, we brought a big cheque, and we showed up. I don't know what communications dollars that required other than a press release that went out, and we generate press releases every other day. There was no huge expenditure. There was no huge highfalutin promotional material or mechanism or development for this. We just went out and handed out a cheque because we are the government of Alberta. We are representatives of the government of Alberta, so we go and present a cheque that the government of Alberta gave them. That's it.

Ms Notley: That's exactly right. You are the government of Alberta. You are the government of Alberta using government of Alberta funds, and you are only inviting Progressive Conservative MLAs to it, and that's where it goes wrong. That's where it's dirty. It's dirty, dirty, dirty. And just to be clear, you have $525,000 in your communications budget this year, so money does go on it.

I used to work in a minister's office. I know how much work goes into organizing these events. I know that the staff have to call to make sure that, you know, the podium is there and the people there that have been invited and that the backdrop is there. Work goes into organizing those things. Don't try to pretend it doesn't. It's taxpayers' dollars that do it. They're there to promote Conservative MLAs, and you're using taxpayers' dollars to do it, and they should be offended.

I want to quickly go to human rights. The workload at the Human Rights Commission is continuing to go up. We've had a 25 per cent increase in ongoing open files. Over the last two years we've got the number of complaints going up. We've got all that stuff. In the last two rounds of estimates you indicated that there would be new intake officers hired, and then last year you said you meant to, but it never happened. Now this year we've got the same budget line item with no increases. So my question to you is: is it acceptable to you that the wait times go up between 10 and 20 per cent every year under your watch, that the number of unresolved cases over the course of the year goes up every year under your watch? Is that acceptable? Or when exactly are we going to see some improvements with respect to the functioning of the Human Rights Commission?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, first of all, the Human Rights Commission and the numbers: they go up and down each year. Last year they were higher, the year before they were less, and the year before they were higher. What has happened, though, is that when we changed the Alberta human rights act, one of the provisions we put in there is that the Human Rights Commission would not see a case unless it's seen in another forum.

The Deputy Chair: The twenty minutes has elapsed.

The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

4:50

Ms Blakeman: Thanks very much, Mr. Chairman. I'm pleased to have an opportunity to complete, I hope, my questions.

I'm just going to go back and pick up where I left off, which was around the cultural workers. Part of the point that I was trying to make there – and the minister acknowledges that we did not get in on the 2010 federal survey of cultural workers. But part of the reason why – and this is what I was talking about last year – is that there is no designated organization in Alberta that is representative of cultural workers that has the stamp of approval or the recognition from the government that they will listen to the group. Therefore, we can't send anyone.

We keep getting asked by the feds: "Who are you sending? Is it PACE? Is it the Edmonton Arts Council?" which isn't appropriate, "Is it the Calgary cultural development authority?" which again is not appropriate because it's municipally based. And CPAA is gone now. But there needs to be an organization in which the government recognizes that if they designate workers to go from that organization, the feds will pay for it. They'll pay to fly people to the meetings. But without the understanding or the signed memorandum of agreement or whatever that the government is going to listen to them when they come back from the meeting, we can't send anybody. So that needs to be resolved, whoever is responsible for that.

This is indicative of how long I've been elected that I just take it as kind of normal that the government MLAs get to be in on this whole cheque thing. I appreciate the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere bringing it up. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Minister, that we in the opposition do not get a list in advance in which we can choose to write a letter of support, in which there is a list of applications. We don't. What we get is a listing after the fact, and sometimes way after the fact, that says: you should be thrilled because in Edmonton-Centre all of these people got grants.

I actually go through that list, and I'm sure someone in your department reported back to you that I was asking about a couple of cases because there were groups that got money that aren't from my constituency. The answer back was: "Yes, that's true. They're located, you know, on 170th Street, but they were doing an event in Victoria park, which is in your constituency, which is why they got funded.” I do look at that list, but I don’t get it in advance ever, so I have no opportunity to write those letters of support. So I would appreciate it if the minister could address that as he is slowly unraveling the partisanship of these grants.

This is not a government pot of money. The money that we approve as this Legislative Assembly is approved by the Legislative Assembly to go forward. It’s not government. It’s not caucus funds. It’s not party funds. It’s funds from the Legislative Assembly, and the members of the government are cabinet. So if you want to have a cabinet member go out and represent the government, the big G government, to hand out a cheque, fair enough, but to have the big cartoon cheques – I’ll tell you, at one point they had the big cartoon cheques, and members actually wrote their names on them, actually wrote their names as though they cut the cheque. This is a political exercise. As the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona said, this is intended to make a distinction based on money or the belief that a group will get money only if they support a government member. That’s the point of it. [interjection] Yeah, it is. That’s why it’s been there for so long.

[Mr. Lund in the chair]

So let’s unravel this. Let’s take the partisanship out of it because the closer we get to an election, the worse the government members, including backbenchers, look on this one. Interestingly, grant amounts often go up closer to an election. People are going to start calling you on this one, so the faster you can unpartisanish it, the better. Included in that would be that notification in advance so that we can give you information or write letters of support. It would be very polite, when you come into my constituency to hand out a cheque, if you let me know in advance. When I go to your constituencies, I let you know I’m there. It’s a courtesy. And you’re using it for political reasons. You know, that’s why you’ve got the big cartoon cheque. I mean, you’re trying to get your photo in the paper. That’s the point. But it would be very courteous if you would let the local members know so they could attend, and I would appreciate that as well.

I want to talk about the Varscona Theatre as well. The city of Edmonton has been waiting and holding onto their grant money. I think they’ve ponied up $2 million. I think the feds are in for $2 million. Everybody is waiting on the province. Now, I gather you’ve just ironed that out as I sat here and listened, that the minister will be open to or will pave the way for the Varscona Theatre consortium to approach the appropriate caucus or caucus policy committee or however you guys organize that stuff to do this. But I just want to point out to the minister that money was found to support Vertigo Theatre in Calgary, money was found to support the Grand theatre in Calgary, and in Edmonton we lost the Kaasa. Part of the reason why the Varscona has so much activity in it is because it is one of the only theatres. Very soon Catalyst is going to lose its space, and that will be, you know, next to Theatre Network, one of our only. It’s not considered a medium-sized theatre, by the way. It’s 175 seats, so it’s an F scale, I think.

There is a distinct lack of equality between the two cities. The minister will be quick to say: well, that was then and this is now, and times are tough and friends are few. Well, the funding at the time that Vertigo got it was not so great. That was a tough time as well. I really think that the government needs to step up on this one. They’ve been asking for a long time. They’ve been fund raising for a long time. It’s very important to the theatre community in Edmonton, and I would appreciate it if we could get that matching money and make it roll forward. So thank you for allowing me to put that on the record.

Now, let me go back. The other thing you were talking about was the film industry, and you talked a lot about what the minister believes he’s been able to effect as changes. There was a change in the grant structure, and the existing scheme was changed slightly. The minister has talked about how this is much better, but I’d like to know if contracts have been signed because one of the things in this industry is that there’s a lot of talk. My goodness, they’re good at talking. I’d like to know if we’ve actually got signed contracts for some of the projects he’s been talking about to go forward. Do we know if we’ve been able to woo any projects away from B.C. or New Mexico or Saskatchewan? That would be a lovely feather in the minister’s cap. Have we got any signed contracts there?

Here’s something I heard about this morning. There are a couple of projects that have just started shooting in, let me say, south of Red Deer because I’m not exactly sure if they’re in Calgary or just outside of Calgary. The rate they’re paying is half of scale, and on another shoot they’re paying minimum wage. You know, these are trained professionals with years and years and years of experience. I would be very upset to hear that the government was co-operating with a film company that was coming in and taking advantage of our workers because there’s so little work out there that they are taking jobs at minimum wage.

I don’t think that’s what the minister is trying to do here. I don’t think it reflects well on us in allowing a company to come in and basically undercut our workers and to pay them far below what they’re worth. If you can possibly look into that and make sure that we haven’t funded them, and if we have, use that big stick. That’s what it’s for.

The second thing I have is that he mentioned the tourism spinoff on having films shot in Alberta. Very true. But one of the things that is a distinction on that is: it is what it is. Fort Macleod was Fort Macleod in Brokeback Mountain. That’s partly why people go there. They didn’t pretend that it was someplace else. I don’t think they ever specified, actually, where they were shooting that. I’m getting a little tired of having film companies come in and then pretend that we’re Toronto or London or somewhere else. It’s much more helpful for us tourism dollars wise if they come in and say: “Yeah, it’s Edmonton” or “Yeah, it’s Red Deer” or “It’s outside of Balzac” or whatever.

I’m wondering if out of all that money you’ve devoted to policy development there are ways of using some of that to encourage or to put it in as part of the incentive sign-off with the contracts that it . . . [A timer sounded] Oh. Ten minutes because we’re splitting it. Sorry. Thank you. We agreed that we would both do it.

The Acting Chair: Back and forth?

Ms Blakeman: Back and forth. Yeah.

I’ll let you answer some of those questions, and we’ll keep going. Thanks.

5:00

Mr. Blackett: Okay. Thank you. A single voice for the arts: one of the things we found in the dialogue session was exactly that. You’ve got sports organizations and you’ve got other organizations where they’ve got regional bodies that flow into a provincial body, and then you have a collective voice. We don’t have that yet, and we need one that will be able to speak for the sector as a whole and do exactly what you’re talking about. That’s something that we have on our list to go forward to try to create, and hopefully we can do that in time for the next meeting. We will work with that. I hadn’t had that brought to me, so I didn’t know about that, but now that it’s on my radar, we’ll definitely look at that.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

Your other point, though, about cheque presentations and this and that and the other thing. We had sent out letters – I signed them in January – that went out to every opposition MLA that said everything in the quarter that was coming up for review. I sent out every single one of them, and they will go out every quarter. We make decisions by quarter now as opposed to letting everything wait till the end of the year. We sent out a letter, and I will go trace those letters and present a copy tomorrow. I sent one out to every opposition member, and I will continue to do so.

We have the records. After decisions are made, we put them on our website. We very much believe in transparency. There's nothing untoward there. Your point is well taken about the fact that a grant is based on where the event took place as opposed to where the location of the actual organization is, which makes no sense to me, so I will look into that and make sure we rectify that one.

In terms of film and taking advantage of workers, I had an excellent meeting with the head of AMPIA and Mr. Damian Petti on Friday and when we were in L.A. and subsequent conversations after that. We want our workers to be employed. We want them to be well paid. We want them to make a living so they can actually stay here. Whether they rent a place or they own a place, they should be able to do that like anybody else does. I would never advocate anybody going and taking advantage of our talent and paying them minimum wage. I can't even believe that you can get away with that. So I would love to have more information. If somebody can provide those examples to me, we'll certainly take a look at those. I think that answers that.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thanks. I found it, and in fact we were issued a list on December 20, 2010, of applications that were being considered for CFEP and CIP grants from the 1st of October 2010 to December 31, 2010. I'm not sure how that's in advance. That would have given me 10 days left in the quarter, and everything else had already passed. So the minister may well be signing this in September, but I didn't see it in my office until December 20 for a quarter that went from the 1st of October to the end of December, okay? You can understand the frustration on this side as a result of that. Thank you for allowing me that clarification.

Now, let me keep moving on here. The cultural community and volunteer support services. I'm very interested in what is in the other initiatives because although this minister probably doesn't – well, okay. Here's a little historical vignette. There are a couple of people on your side that I know will have been around long enough to know what this was. This amount of money: at one time I got the minister to admit that there was no application form for other initiatives, there was no deadline for other initiatives, and the decision was exclusively by the minister. There was no appeal process. It was essentially a slush fund.

I'm wondering what exactly is in other initiatives this year. It has been cut by quite a bit. The actual for '09-10 was $10.1 million. It was budgeted for $6.5 million, but it actually looks like $10.6 million was spent in the '10-11 year, and – whoa – a massive cut to $4.1 million, so it's losing about 6 and a half million dollars out of other initiatives. Now, I know that's going to go up and down with how much money is extra there. But if he could please tell me what he spent it on this year and what is the list of initiatives he's expecting to spend it on. He did give me a list last year. Where can we find the final reports of what was funded through other initiatives last year so we know what those are?

The Wild Rose Foundation. I'm a little quizzical about this because – this is in the estimates on page 98 – it appears to have a very high amount of money with sort of no backup for it. I'm wondering if you can explain that because it has no form of revenue, particularly, so where is the investment supposed to come from? It's actually up 325 per cent from '09-10, so exactly where's that going to come from? I would appreciate if I could get that comment. That's terrific. Thank you.

Further to what's happening in the NGO volunteer-based sector, I was going through the newsletter from the Calgary Chamber of Voluntary Organizations. This goes back to that capacity issue that I keep raising. If you look on page 3 of their newsletter, they show a graph that shows that the change in government policies or priorities was 58 per cent of the factors impacting voluntary organizations, so a huge effect on those organizations.

As well, we're still struggling in the voluntary charitable sector with the difference in salaries between what the comparable position is that's paid through the government if they were on the government payroll as a social worker versus being a social worker with foster parents or something like that. In this one it's a newspaper article of a woman who works for the Bow Cliff Seniors' centre. Yeah. "We just can't magically get it done on these salaries with this expectation of professionalism" because she keeps getting people wooed away, so that continues to be a factor for us in this area.

I'm moving on to heritage now. There was a cut in heritage. What action has the ministry taken to ensure that the ministry sites don't degrade to the point where we're in the same position that we are currently with infrastructure, where there has had to be a huge influx of money to make up for what wasn't put in there on a regular maintenance basis? What is the minister doing there to help under heritage?

Finally, the Royal Alberta Museum. What the heck is going on there? Who is it that's asking for two sites? If it was a politician, they would have jumped in front of every camera there was, and nobody has ever jumped in front of a camera saying: I'm the one that's pushing for a second site. So who's pushing for this? This doesn't make sense. We've got a perfectly good site. We own it. There was a good plan. They redid it. There was a second good plan. Now that one seems to have been punted for some reason. Now we're talking about two plans. I'd like a detailed breakdown of how much money the province is going to put in this year, next year, and year 3; how much money the feds are putting in this year, next year, and year 3. Where did this come from that we are going to build a second site here, and what is the justification for that? What's the business case for it?

I've never seen anything that backs this up. It's just a bunch of rumour that I've asked and asked about. It was denied, denied, denied, and then the minister said: "Oh, yeah. Definitely. That's where we're going to go." So let's hear about that. Let's hear about it, Minister. Go for it.

Mr. Blackett: Great questions. First of all, other initiatives. Now, it's quite interesting that you would mention that we're reducing our fund that you refer to as a slush fund. I don't think of it as a slush fund. Other initiatives program is set there for those programs, those organizations who can't get money through the regular process. Now, that includes that this year we will have the Canadian country music awards. We will have the Western Canadian Music Awards. The Canadian country music awards are going to be in Edmonton for three consecutive years, so we've committed to that. The Two Hills Community Centre, the Edmonton Triathlon Academy; $3 million to the Art Gallery of Alberta, somewhat of a worthy cause . . .

The Deputy Chair: Hon. minister, the 20 minutes has elapsed.

The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere. Are you going to share the time back and forth?

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Thanks. Back and forth, please. All right.

I've been listening intently, very interesting information. I want to go back to the issue. I want to get something done today, and I appreciate very much the minister agreeing to give some prior notification to opposition MLAs to cheque presentations. I do think that that's a good step in the right direction, and I look forward to receiving my first update in that regard.

The second portion that I wanted to get to – we got cut off when we were going back and forth on it. When I say that we should get the opportunity to give some input into a project before its final approval, I wanted to make sure that the minister understood that I wasn't asking as an MLA for a unilateral yes or no authority on whether or not a project is approved. That's not what I'm asking at all.

There's a sheet – and, again, I'll table all these documents tomorrow. Anybody on that side of the House will recognize these sheets. What it does is that it goes through all of the different projects that are in the queue, essentially, and it shows their project status. It will give the name of the applicant, the date the application was received, and its application number. It will give the project's status. In other words, on some of them there's a cheque that's been given out – this is July 22, 2008 – and it gives the grant request, the approved amount, and whether the funds have been paid out or not. It goes through that. It goes through each individual one.

The project status is included: cheque given out, in the minister's office, under tech review, review 1, evaluation. It has these different kinds of project statuses that it's at. Then at the very end here there's a summary status of project application. It will say: this is how much is in process, and these are the total amount of funds that have been paid out and declined. Then there's a rolling total. There's a three-year total. This is how much you have left in your three years because it's over three years. Then this is how much you have left this year, so in this case it's $416,000. That's the document.

When I would get this, what would happen is that I would look at the projects. The community liaison officer would call me or call my assistant every month and say: "Okay. We need to go through it. This one is under tech review, and this one is under evaluation" et cetera. They would say: "We've done everything that we need to do on our side. Now we're just waiting for your comments."

That's what Cheryl Dalwood, the civil servant, was talking about in this e-mail I have here.

Just wondering if Rob has had an opportunity to review this funding request yet? Drumheller, Red Deer South and Red Deer North have committed to support their part of the event. Please let me know as soon as possible.

There are others. I've got two or three others here like that.

In the previous e-mail it says:

Hi Donna.

That's my assistant.

Would you please forward this information to Rob for his consideration of CIP funding? The total CIP grant request for the Airdrie-Chestermere constituency [in this case] is $26,500.

The CIP application is being coordinated by The City of Red Deer with each community organizing their own respective celebration. The City of Red Deer will ensure that allocated grant resources are dispersed appropriately and that required follow up reporting is completed on behalf of all communities.

Then it shows exactly the CIP grant request for each community: Red Deer, $37,500; Airdrie, $13,500; Chestermere, $13,000; Drumheller, $11,000. Then it says how the funds are going to be used. Essentially, they were saying: look; the members for Drumheller-Stettler, Red Deer-South, Red Deer-North have committed to supporting this project, so we're just waiting to see what you say about the project.

Again, I have to say, whether this was going on without your knowledge or not, Minister, that there was not a time that I didn't support a project on a specific dollar amount that was not accepted by the CIP, CFEP grant programs. I will swear an affidavit oath to that effect. That is absolutely true.

So we have this situation here, and all I would like to see, in addition to the notifications, is just to have this document, that I'll table tomorrow, that's sent out to government MLAs sent out to us so that we can see that: "Okay. This one here is still under review. This would be a good time. I'm going to call them up." It even has a contact person for the grant, so you can call them and say: "What's this grant all about? Is it something we need? What's the deal? What's it for?" It allows us to do our homework to see if we want to support the grant or not.

If we could even just get this or whatever you're sending now to your individual government MLAs, I think, certainly, that would be a very good step in the right direction, as you already have taken with allowing for notification, if indeed you follow up with that. This would be, I think, a way that we could move forward. I know that I would and our caucus would be completely happy with that. We think that would be a fair arrangement.

If we need to talk about the grant programs – I know the Liberals and others have talked about different ways to do it. You could have a community organization or something like that, and that's fine. Maybe we can have that debate in the future, but for the purposes of right now under the current system that we have, could we have the same document that's sent to government MLAs sent to opposition MLAs?

Mr. Blackett: Well, I can answer that quite quickly. On January 17 we sent out a letter to all opposition MLAs with a report, and that went out to all government MLAs. It was all of those applications that came forward in the last quarter of 2010 and the first quarter of 2011 that decisions will be made on, so decisions that are going to be made now before the end of this month. That letter went out on the 17th of January.

There will be another letter that will go out in the first month of the next quarter – so it will go out in April – which will be all the applications that we've received for the first quarter of 2011, where decisions will be made by approximately June of 2011. That's the consistent approach that we will continue on with. I will be happy to table those letters that we sent on the 17th of January. We will continue to do that because we believe in being open and transparent and consistent.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Thank you. I appreciate that. The letter that I think the minister is referring to, the one that got sent to myself, is this one, and I'll table that as well. It does have part of the information that the government MLAs get. It has the application number, the date that it's received – that's consistent with what was handed out before – the name of the applicant, the contact person, and the project status, so under evaluation. Absolutely.

Now, the only thing it doesn't include – and this is what would be helpful so that we could see what was available – is that on the one that was sent out to MLAs it has a summary status of project application. It will tell you at the bottom how many total funds have been paid out to this constituency. In this case it's $115,000 at this point. That allows you, of course, to deduce how much is left in the minister's budget for this constituency.

This is very useful because if you have, you know, four schools or something that you know are going to bring forward playground applications, for grants to help with building a playground, you can put a letter together and say: "You know what, Mr. Minister? This is what I would recommend. There are these two schools that are upcoming. I would recommend that maybe we should make sure everyone is treated the same and that they each get $30,000 or $40,000 or whatever, the same amount, et cetera." Or you could say, "Given that there's only about $50,000 left in the budget and we have two people applying for the grants, could I suggest that we be equal and do $25,000 and $25,000?" It just helps us to make a proper recommendation, a well-thought-out recommendation as MLAs.

The other thing that this is missing besides the total funds paid out is the grant request amount. I don't know, for example – on here it does not say how much the grant was for. It just has the contact person, the project status – these are all good things to have – but it doesn't have what the actual amount of the grant was. So could those two things be included in these quarterly letters that you send out?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, when we first talked about it, what you had asked for, we had given you. You don't need to know what the dollar amounts are. You know the program, and every opposition member knows how it works. You prioritize which ones you think are important, that you want to support. If you see three playgrounds, say: please don't allocate all the money.

Give us a list of priorities. I mean, we can certainly do that. We don't have to get into the minutiae of how we're going to allocate dollars.

Mr. Anderson: All right. Well, I guess that's one way of looking at it. I guess the other way of looking at it is that if I have a – let's say that in Chestermere, for example, the Chestermere yacht club got a grant last year. Didn't know anything about it. It was just given out to them, the Chestermere yacht club. That's fine. It was quite a substantial grant.

There were some other grants that were being applied for at the time, and if I had seen the size of the grant, I maybe would have said: "You know what? Why is this so large?" Maybe I should call them and say: is this a priority for the constituency, or are there some playgrounds or some equipment or some event, maybe the pro rodeo or whatever, that would be more important? In other words, if you have the Chestermere yacht club asking for money and I say that I support the project, then what am I supporting? Am I supporting something for 50 bucks, a hundred bucks, a thousand bucks, $10,000, $150,000? I don't know. How can I know to support it or not, you know, or if there are any red flags that I should be looking at?

The only thing missing on this sheet that is on the government one is just the application request amount. If it's a hundred thousand dollars, $90,000, it would be literally just another column on the sheet. Then the opposition MLAs would get the same as the government MLAs, and it's all good. Is that possible, Minister?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to repeat myself. As I said to the hon. member, we have that report that you have, so you'll have an idea of what's coming forward in your constituency. My office has always been open. It's been open to any opposition member who wants to come and discuss a particular application. I have no evidence from anyone that says that that's been incorrect. So if you have a particular instance, come and see me.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Fair enough. Well, can I get this commitment, then, Minister: in addition to getting these quarterly reports, which you're sending in the current form, can I at least have a commitment from you that my assistant or our constituency assistants can call your ministry any time during operating hours and get the amount of the application request from them just by asking them verbally? And can they get the amount of money remaining in the pot for the specific constituency of Airdrie-Chestermere? If they're not going to get it on this, can they at least call in and ask that question as any government member would be able to do and get an answer to that? Is that a fair compromise?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Chairman, the answer to that is an unequivocal no. We have gone and we have given him information. There you go. We're not going to spend time in our department with staff that are doing an important job, trying to go back and forth because of opposition queries and get into the minutiae of it. You support an application, or you don't support an application. That's the most information that we've ever given an opposition member. If that's not good enough, that's not good enough.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. Well, I guess what would not waste the time of staff, Mr. Minister, is if you just put the number in like you do for the government MLAs. If you just put that in the document, that would save your ministry's office all the time and effort. There would be no need for my assistant to call and ask because it would be right there, just like it is for every government MLA. I guess I would ask: why is it appropriate, Mr. Minister, for a government MLA to call in and get that information on demand, but I as an opposition MLA cannot call in and get that information? How do you justify that inconsistency, that double standard?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, first of all, opposition MLAs can call in and get that information. Secondly, if the hon. member wants to get the same privileges as a government MLA, he should have thought about that before he left our caucus and walked across the floor.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. That's an interesting response.

Clearly, what the minister did say is that I can call at any time. Is that right? Can I or my staff call anytime to ask for that information? Is that what I heard? You seemed to say that I could. Is that not the case? My staff can call and get that answer. Is that right?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Chairman, he may be a lawyer, and I'm not a lawyer, but I'm not being fooled. Let's be perfectly clear. I said that if you've got a specific instance and a question about a particular project that you need support on, call me, and I will help you with that discussion. I'm not going to provide all of the particulars and financial information because you don't need it.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Chair, that's fine. I will take you up on that offer, Mr. Minister; I promise you.

Why do the government members need the information but I as an opposition member do not need that information? Why? What's the reason?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Chairman, the process is that applications are submitted, and the CLO looks for those and makes sure that they meet the criteria that I outlined before: that the project is viable, that the matching funds are there and they're actually accounted for, and that there's community support. For government members the importance of the money towards them doesn't matter either. [interjection] No. You're talking about a process that may have been in place at whatever time you're referring to. I'm telling you that there's a different operation method today, and we stand by that.

Mr. Anderson: Okay. All right. Well, we'll continue to call. I think that any Albertan looking at this objectively would say that it would be fair for an opposition member to make the same request as a government member with regard to getting information from the minister in this regard, that it would only be fair that that be respected.

You said earlier, though, real quickly, that I should have thought about whether I wanted to have access to that information or not before I crossed the floor. Should my constituency be feeling that way, too? Is my constituency going to be punished in any way because I decided to cross the floor, Mr. Minister? That seemed to be what you were indicating there.

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Chairman, I said that if you wanted the privileges of a government member, then you'd have to be in the government to get those privileges.

Airdrie-Chestermere nor any other riding has ever been punished for having an opposition MLA. As I stated earlier, opposition-held ridings get a disproportionately higher amount of money in their ridings than anyone else does. I dare you to show me where Airdrie-Chestermere has been adversely affected by anything that we have done. The mayor, Peter Brown, and the people that I met with on Saturday were very, very happy and very, very appreciative of the fact that the government of Alberta was still there to support them whether they had a government member or not.

We'll continue to do the great work for Albertans and provide the programs that are there for all Albertans, irrespective of who they voted for, because that's the right thing to do.

Mr. Anderson: I appreciate that. I'm glad that the folks in Airdrie-Chestermere won't be penalized. That's definitely a good thing. If it wasn't that way, it would certainly have the taint of corruption, wouldn't it? I would just say that I'd like to put on the record one final time that even though the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre and myself are members of an opposition party, we still represent the people that voted for us, and we still fight for them on a daily basis. Having the information available to us is important in order to do that.

5:30

The Deputy Chair: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much. Well, this certainly became an interesting discussion this afternoon. All kinds of information on the record that we weren't able to get on the record before.

I'd just like to pick up where I was and continue now. I think the minister probably still has a list of questions he hasn't answered, so let me add to his list. We were talking about the RAM; that's right. I'm also interested in and I'm sure the minister has noted my questions on the hub in Calgary. Is there any money from this budget that is going toward that Calgary media hub? I remember that last year there was a sum of $10 million, and then when I questioned him in the budget debate, it was less than that. I'm just wondering if there is any money in this budget, and if there is, how much is it, and which vote number does it appear under that is going toward that Calgary Creative Hub? The Calgary media Creative Hub or some variation on that theme is what it's called.

I'm also wondering. I mean, it's a pretty big deal. How come it's not in the ministry plan? Or is it in the three-year plan? This isn't a three-year budget projection particularly, but if it is part of a three-year plan, could he lay that out for us? And what exactly is the government's role going to be in this? It's always been a bit of a sticky wicket, this one, because the Edmonton film studio was privately funded entirely and has since been bought by a different group and is being operated differently. It's a large outlay of money to actually build one of these, and it's been a struggle.

Over the years – I don't know – there's probably been four or five of these Calgary studios that I've heard were going to be built, and it's always an extraordinary amount of money, which usually is enough to stop it, and eventually it all trickles away. Then four or five years later you get another version of it. So I'm hopeful that this one is successful, but if I could get a bit more detail about what the government's involvement in it is and what the money is and where the money is, that would be terrific.

Okay. Go ahead and answer those questions.

Mr. Blackett: First of all, I think other initiatives, we're getting through that. We will be more than happy to send you a list of all of those. And very similar to the list that we talked about last time, it's the Canadian Theatre Festival Society, the Magnetic North conference for part of the Calgary 2012 bid, the Olympic tribute gala at Commonwealth Stadium, the Atlas Coal Mine Historical Society, the Glenbow Museum, the Alberta Sports Hall of Fame, Alberta Creative Hub, to which last year we gave $1.2 million. We will gladly give you a copy of those.

Your next point was about the Wild Rose Foundation and where that money came from. We have an $8 million endowment for that, and the $325,000 would be interest on that on an annual basis. We use that money towards the Vitalize conference, and then the ministry tops up the difference. I think this past year it was about 700 and some thousand dollars that we spent on Vitalize, so $325,000 or thereabouts would have come out of this endowment fund interest, and then we would top up the rest of it.

In terms of the voluntary sector – I'm trying to remember because we've gone back and forth. The salary levels: that's always been a problem, the wage gap for the people that are in the sector versus any other industry or any other sector, especially oil and gas when you're in Calgary, the professional sector here in Edmonton versus government workers. We have a human resources strategy process that we're going through right now to try to deal with some of that and come up with some concrete measures because, again, that's something that's repeatedly brought up in the dialogue sessions. In the 30-some years I've been involved in the sector that's continued to be a problem.

We talked about the heritage sites. We have $2.3 million in capital toward the heritage sites. We will continue to do what we can toward making sure that they're up to date, but we do not have a large outlay at this particular time for any large capital-intensive projects. Under voted capital investment by program, page 84, it says $2 million there, and if you look under capital investment by program, page 89, under heritage, it's $2.330 million. The other $2 million is a voted amount.

Now, with respect to RAM, we have $50 million budgeted for this coming year, this fiscal period, $70 million for '12-13, and $60 million for '13-14 for a total of $180 million. You mentioned about the two-museum concept. That's something that was mentioned back – I remember the Premier mentioning it – in December 2009. The original design for the very large building at the Glenora site totally encompassed Government House. It was not respectful of it. That Government House is an icon, a heritage piece, and we had this huge monstrosity just completely overshadowing that. We looked at doing it all in one or looking at two different sites because the costs were comparable.

We've moved forward. Right now we're focused on finishing the Acheson site because when we start construction and we have to close the museum for a period of time, we've got to have a place to be able to put all our artifacts. That will be the Acheson site, and hopefully that will be completed this fall. We need that in order to be able to move to the next step.

Lastly, the Creative Hub. Yeah, it's a great deal of money, but it's something that we need. This spring we've got Heartland coming for its fifth season, and working out of warehouse space is inadequate. We have Hell on Wheels, a production for AMC, the American network, through Nomadic Pictures here. That's going to start filming, I think, next month. Then, we have the Sam Steele movie for CBC by Knight productions along with Nancy Laing. That's going to be filming here, starting sometime in May. So we need this kind of space.

It's Calgary Economic Development that actually will manage going forward. It's a not-for-profit entity that we've set up. We put $1.2 million toward that last year, and that was to come up with a governance structure, come up with a not-for-profit organization that the money would flow through from all levels of government. That was also for hiring a consulting firm. Lawson Projects, which is a combination architectural firm, engineering firm, and real estate expertise, went and looked at the site that we had looked at and chose, Canada Olympic Park, to see if that was the best site and looked at all the other prospective ones. It was close proximity to the mountains on the way out to Banff and only 20 minutes from downtown Calgary.

They have come up with a business plan. They had the different levels of government take a look at it to make sure that it was feasible. That's the federal government and the city of Calgary. It also asked 60 representatives from the industry whether they would participate and to which level they would participate in the new Creative Hub if it was established. Overwhelmingly they said that they would, to the point where 45,000 square feet of office space has already been spoken for. We don't have any money in this particular budget for that, so I would have to go through the process of asking Treasury Board for those dollars, and we haven't had a chance to do that. But that's a number one capital priority after the Royal Alberta Museum in my department.

Ms Blakeman: And the Varscona?

Mr. Blackett: The Varscona will be third.

Ms Blakeman: Seriously? The Varscona Theatre would come after this Creative Hub when it's been in line longer?

Mr. Blackett: Yeah. I'll be glad to tell you why.

Ms Blakeman: Well, I'd respectfully disagree with the minister. I think the Varscona has been waiting longer, and there's leveraged money that's waiting for it. I don't know how long the feds and the city are going to hang onto their money, waiting for the province to come in on that one. So we could be chucking some money there. I would urge you to fund that one faster rather than slower.

Just a couple of questions that have come out of what the minister just said. He gave me the money that was going into the RAM: $50 million this year, $70 million next year, and $60 million in '13-14. Could he please give me what the federal money is for that, or is the federal money part of the money you just gave me? If it is, break it out. If it's not, could you tell me how much it is, please?

I'd also like to see the business plan for the RAM. If you have enough information to be able to give me the reasoning you just gave me, there must be a business plan somewhere. So can I get that business plan, please?

I'd also like to see the business plan that was submitted to the feds and the city of Calgary on the hub project. I'd like to know how much the contract was for that went to the Lawson Projects. I'm sorry; I may not have that name exactly right. I've got Lawson, but I'm not sure if I got the second bit exactly correct. Sorry about that.

The Acheson site for the RAM: my understanding is that it will be a storage facility, not a visitation facility. So for how long is it expected that Albertans and tourists coming from out of province, out of the city I suppose, would not have access to the exhibits? Why was the choice made to do that so that it was not accessible rather than putting it into another exhibition space where it was accessible? Let me just give you a quick example of that. We had the Edmonton Art Gallery that relocated for the period of three years, I guess, that it took to build the new Art Gallery of Alberta. The concept is understood here. It's been done before. I'm just wondering why the choice was made by the department to essentially shut down the museum and store it as compared to keeping some part of it going. I can see his staff nodding, so there's obviously an answer there.

The historic sites: Turner Valley gas plant, Bitumount, and Greenhill mine. Can I get an update on that, please? One, I want an update on the status of those sites. Two, are there contracts in place between the departments of Health, Environment, and Culture? Turner Valley gas plant for sure has had a boatload of problems with pollution, essentially whether it was safe for people to go there, and various environmental studies were done. There were questions about whether they were done appropriately, whether they were done at the right time of year, whether they were done when the water was high or low, and how it affected the wells in the nearby area. I'm just wondering where we're at with that.

I think Dingman 1 was just shut down. I can see somebody moving over there, so they know what I'm talking about. I'd like to know what is happening with the restoration of that. Who is the lead out of the three departments? Where does the buck stop? What are the timelines for achieving nirvana or whatever the acceptable state is? As well, are there any outstanding studies or remediation that needs to happen there?

The minister answered my question about long-term plans to ensure ongoing maintenance of historic sites in that there is money that covers the regular maintenance of those. Thank you for doing that.

Okay. We're coming down the home stretch, guys. [interjection] You've been sitting there; I've been standing.

The last category is human rights. My colleague from Edmonton-Strathcona raised a couple of points around that. Once again, I see that the total program budget has gone down, but the administration costs have gone up as a percentage of the total budget. The budget for assistance to human rights in 2011-12 is slightly up, but it's still 8 per cent below the figure for '09-10, which was the first cut. That appears in the estimates on page 91.

The minister spoke last year about the "changing multicultural complexities in places like Edmonton and Calgary". That appears in Hansard for the Committee on Community Services, I think, on page CS-260. I notice that in Calgary last week we had another racially motivated demonstration there. Hate crimes are reported as up in all Canadian cities in all of the major categories, so that would be race, religion, and sexual orientation. I'd like to hear the minister's commentary on that because we do have less money in that fund to operate around educational opportunities than we did before.

When I looked on the website – and thank you for putting stuff on the website now. Open data is a great thing. It just takes a whole bunch of a load off you people from having to go and scrounge for information for people like me. The number of complaint files that were opened in '09-10 is up quite a bit from previous years. It's 803 compared to 799 – well, that's not that much; that's four – compared to 680. But then when we look at open files, as of March 31 it goes from 810 to 941 to 1,000 open cases. Yikes. Now, the minister put a lot of time and effort into this department in the last year. What kind of results can he boast to me about how great it's going?

The last point I have to make is a bit of an odd one, but I find it very odd that when I phone people in the minister's department, I get a polite but firm, edging towards curt response from whomever I've called looking for pretty mundane information – if it was politically tricky, I would phone the minister because you know how much I like holding him to the hot seat – and I'm always told by the staff: "I'm sorry. Opposition members are told to phone the minister's office or to write a letter in order to get that information."

You and I just had the oddest go-around, where I quickly phoned and asked for some statistics on something, the total AFA grants that were given out over a nine-year period or something. It was quick. At that point it was not on the website, or I would have gotten it myself. I phoned the department. No, I had to write a letter to the minister's office in order to get that information. I got a kind of snarky letter back from the minister saying: "Well, now, really, it's on the website. You should have gone and gotten it from there, but here's the information that you're looking for." I thought: why do I have to phone the minister's office to get authority? It's very clear that that happens because I'm an opposition member.

Now, we've had a lot of discussion today about the different treatment between opposition members and government members. At a certain point this starts to creep into the area of privilege. I'm interested why there is a policy out there, a hangover perhaps from before the minister's days, that opposition members can't just phone his department and get flat-out information, that we have to write a letter, not phone but write a letter, to the minister himself in order to get the information, and some six weeks later it'll turn around and come back out to me. I mean, in this day and age of instant turnaround on this kind of thing this is ridiculous. I'm interested in what the reasoning is.

The Deputy Chair: Any other members wish to speak? The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Ms Blakeman: Well, thank you so much, Mr. Chairman. Perhaps I'll allow this time to the minister to answer my questions.

Thank you.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. minister.

Mr. Blackett: Well, thank you. First of all, in terms of having access to the collection for RAM, we don't know that. There is no business plan that exists right now. We do this in conjunction with the Minister of Infrastructure. A lot of that work will be done by them in terms of drawings and those types of things. Of course, they share them with us.

How long? We haven't determined how long the museum would have to be shut, so we don't know how long people would not have access to that collection. I should point out that the Acheson site was there for other museums and their collections as well as RAM.

Turner Valley and Bitumount: I've been to them several times. Great places. In good times we thought we were going to be able to move ahead with the interpretative centre to coincide with the hundredth anniversary of the Turner Valley gas plant, but that's not possible right now. We have done all the remediation so that the paths there are walkable. The site is acceptable. We continue to monitor that site through the Ministry of Environment, and they measure that water quality on an ongoing basis. Yes, it's made the papers many times, but the levels are natural and, I'm told, acceptable. When we have the financial wherewithal, hopefully together with industry we will be able to do something in terms of providing a proper interpretive centre there.

In terms of human rights our budget didn't go down. I mean, we upped it a year ago, and we have kept that consistent. I think it's $5.2 million this year. The actual last year was $4.887 million, so it's a slight increase. Part of what we were doing is that we had to get more people in there. We had to have legal representatives for both the chief commissioner and for the director. We now have a full-time commissioner to help with the backlog of cases, and we have some additional part-time commissioners.

One of the problems that I was just starting to talk about to the Member for Edmonton-Strathcona before the buzzer went is that because of our ruling now that says that the Human Rights Commission, which has always been a dumping ground for every complaint – 30,000 inquiries come into it. Two thousand actually have any merit, and we get about a thousand cases or fewer that actually go forward. So they are held. If it has to be looked at in another area or another forum – for instance, occupational health and safety – they've got to go through that process before they can come back to the Human Rights Commission. But that file is left as open because it's not resolved. We just have to find a different mechanism of actually showing that.

We do have fewer cases, but because of that rule – and we've moved some cases that are actually in other areas being resolved before they come back – it looks like there are actually more. We'll continue to reduce those cases. Blair Mason and Philippe Rabot are committed to doing so, and we've put the resources there to be able to do that.

The human rights educational fund: there was no reduction in that. It remains the same, and that's important. We have, I think, the actual last year of $2.175 million, and this year it's going to be $2.017 million. That's a slight reduction, I guess, of a hundred and some-odd thousand dollars. But we continue to use that because it's very valuable in what we do in terms of trying to combat racism, making people more aware, especially employers, of their responsibility.

We are a province where immigration is becoming an increasing factor. We're becoming more diversified, as I had mentioned. One of the things you'll see going forward in our department is that we are realigning some of our programs to make sure that we are able to address the needs of new immigrants, natives and Métis off-reservation, and youth who aren't at risk. We're trying to do some mitigation as opposed to dealing with the problems after the fact, in conjunction with some other departments.

Also, I should say that in June we're happy to be able to host CASHRA, which is the Canadian Association of Statutory Human Rights Agencies.

We're very proud of the steps we've made forward. There's much more to do, but I think we're moving well in the right direction.

The last one was with respect to opposition members. I ask that no members contact my staff directly, other than through my office. It's conflicting the information that comes out. It may be wrong. We had a letter that went out to someone that says that we're cutting a program. We're not cutting any program. I'd like to have a consistent message, and I don't want to get people all excited about something that need not be.

My letter to you: I was told that it was on the website. If it wasn't there, I apologize for that. We shouldn't take that long. I'll make sure we respond in our office a lot quicker than that.

So please do that through our office, and we'll make sure that we get back to you in a timely fashion.

The Deputy Chair: The hon. member.

Ms Blakeman: Thank you. If it's consistent, I have no problem with it.

Just to close off, then, if the ministry has no business plan for what they're doing with RAM, how do you know what you're doing? I mean, surely you have a plan for this. You have dates and timelines and contracts, and you are working with another department. There has to be something on paper. I can FOIP you if you really want, but that's going to make some of your staff grimace. Why don't you just tell me what planning documents you have that allow you to move forward going: this is what happens next, and this is what happens then, and this is what happens then? Where are the documents about what you're doing with the Royal Alberta Museum?

Mr. Blackett: Well, we have some plans, as I said. It's not a business plan per se. They're with the Ministry of Infrastructure. Our schedule, timelines, and contracts: we don't have those in place because everything has kept on changing, what we looked at and what I thought was going to happen in 2008. I mean, we had money that got moved out. Part of our capital plan got moved out because of the economic circumstances. It was pushed out of, I think, fiscal year '09-10, and then it got moved out into this year, that $50 million. We don't have any contracts. We have no building permits or any of those things that have gone forward yet. Once that decision has been made, we'll make that clear. You can certainly ask through us, and we will provide the information that we have, but there is no business plan. You can do that through both us and the Ministry of Infrastructure.

The Deputy Chair: Hon. member, there are two more minutes left.

Ms Blakeman: Two minutes. I have a whole two minutes left.

I'm just following up on your question about the Turner Valley plant. You were talking about the pathway. I'm sure that someone sent you a note because at one point there was a memo out there that said: pregnant women and young children should not go off the pathway. I'm presuming that the pathways have been certified – what was the language they were using? Oh, he's saying yes. Okay. Whatever it is, walkable or accessible to people.

Mr. Blackett: It was remediated to a different level. There are different grades. I can't remember what they are. But the pathway is different out there.

Ms Blakeman: Okay. I think that one's going to be a no-win no matter how it works out because I think that to make it nontoxic, we're going to destroy it. Maybe you could make a really good film about it, and that might be a way of getting around the problem of people being able to not access the site very well.

Thank you very much for your patience and everyone else's patience in the room today. I really appreciate it. Have a good evening.

6:00

The Deputy Chair: Hon. members, pursuant to Government Motion 5, agreed to on February 23, 2011, the Committee of Supply shall now rise and report.

We'll give a few seconds to have the staff leave.

[Mr. Mitzel in the chair]

The Acting Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Hays.

Mr. Johnston: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Committee of Supply has had under consideration resolutions for the Department of Culture and Community Spirit relating to the 2011-12 government estimates for the general revenue fund and lottery fund for the fiscal year ending March 31, 2012, reports progress, and requests leave to sit again.

The Acting Speaker: All those members of the Assembly in favour of the report, please say aye.

Hon. Members: Aye.

The Acting Speaker: Opposed, please say no. So ordered.

Hon. members, it is 6 o'clock. This House stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 1:30.

The policy field committee will convene tonight, in 30 minutes, for consideration of the main estimates for Transportation. This meeting will be video streamed.

[The Assembly adjourned at 6:02 p.m. to Thursday at 1:30 p.m.]

Legislative Assembly of Alberta

1:30 p.m.

Thursday, March 24, 2011

[The Speaker in the chair]

Prayers

The Speaker: Good afternoon.

Let us pray. Let us be ever mindful of our responsibilities as elected officials. Give us the wisdom to serve for the common good of all Albertans, and help us to carry out our duties with respect and courtesy for all of our colleagues in this Assembly. Amen.

Please be seated.

Introduction of Guests

Mrs. Leskiw: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to introduce to you and through you 29 wonderful young ladies, members of the Girl Guides of Canada Alberta Council and 4-H, who are celebrating the 40th session of the Alberta girls' parliament, being held from March 23 to 27, 2011, here in Edmonton. I'm also told by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder that this Girl Guide House, as you know, is located in the wonderful constituency of Edmonton-Calder. This unique program is modelled on the Alberta Legislature with delegates from all over the province. This year girls from Ontario and British Columbia are joining in the session. They are accompanied by adviser Melanie Reichle; Cindy Fendall, activities co-ordinator; Shannon Hoffman, registrar; Faye Greenslade, facility co-ordinator; Claire Dubreuil, staff member and parliamentarian; Shannon Robertson; and Caitlin Lyster. They are seated in the members' gallery this afternoon. I would ask them all to rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Education.

Mr. Hancock: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to introduce to you and through you to Members of the Legislative Assembly on behalf of my colleague from Edmonton-Rutherford students visiting Alberta from Japan. The students are visiting as part of the D.S. MacKenzie school's 30th anniversary of exchange with Fushimi junior high school in Hokkaido, Japan. This past Monday my colleague for Edmonton-Rutherford had the opportunity to attend an assembly at D.S. MacKenzie and bring greetings from the province of Alberta.

To our friends from Japan: our hearts and our prayers are with you, your families, and your countrypeople as your country recovers from one of the most devastating earthquakes and tsunamis ever recorded. We are so happy that you are safe here with us and that you were able to be here.

Each year we continue to grow our cultural and educational exchanges to learn more about our friends from around the world, particularly Japan. Mr. Speaker, they are seated in the members' gallery today. I'd ask Lin Hayama, Minami Suzuki, Nina Masuyama, Takuma Osada, Takumi Odawara, Yuta Iida, and their accompanying students Shelby Hadden, Kyra Heidinger, Keely Green, and teacher James Hamilton to rise and receive the warm traditional welcome of this Assembly. Konichiwa. [Standing ovation]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Livingstone-Macleod.

Mr. Berger: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me pleasure to introduce to you and through you today on behalf of the Member for Cardston-Taber-Warner 15 students from the Glenwood school as well as three group leaders and teachers: Kelly Thomas, D.J. Scott, and Kathy Thomas. I think they're in the gallery behind me. I hope they are. If they would now please rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Strathcona.

Mr. Quest: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It gives me great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of this Assembly a group of students from the Fultonvale elementary school in Strathcona constituency. They are accompanied by their teacher, Ms Cindy Jackson, and parent helpers Carmen Toma, Ruth LaFlèche, and Roswitha Latta. They're seated in the public gallery, where I can't quite see them behind me here. I'd like to ask them to rise and receive the warm welcome of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-McClung.

Mr. Xiao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to introduce to you and through to the members of this House a group of 11 grade 6 students from Talmud Torah school. They're here with their teachers, Mrs. Lindsey Todd and Ms Tania Nichiporik. I would like to ask them to rise and receive the traditional welcome of this House.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Housing and Urban Affairs.

Mr. Denis: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise today with pleasure to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Assembly a long-time veteran of this building – her name is Elif Algam – who is sitting in the gallery opposite. Over the last year Elif has had the opportunity to work in my office, serving a maternity leave, and unfortunately she has decided, actually, that she's going to leave the building over the next week. I want to say that it's a pleasure for me to introduce her but at the same time very bittersweet because Elif is hard working, she's loyal, and above all else she has become a friend to me. She will be missed in my office. Wherever she does end up in the rest of her life, I can tell you that the people there will be very, very lucky. Elif, you're really going to be missed in my office. Please stand up and let us give you a warm welcome.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Mr. Goudreau: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's also my pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly six individuals from the department of official languages at the Edmonton Garrison. It's always a great pleasure to welcome people from the garrison to the Assembly here. The department provides second-language training in English and French to the military community. With us today are Isabelle Paradis, Martine Boily, David Tremblay, Pierre-Luc Otis-Monat, and Karine Stratford, and they are accompanied by their teacher, Deborah Stasiuk. They are in the public gallery, and I would ask them to stand and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Athabasca-Redwater.

Mr. Johnson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a pleasure to rise and introduce to you and through you to members of this Assembly four very special people seated in Speaker's gallery: Fred, Elsie, Trevor, and Roxanne Martin. They are very important and active members of our community of Athabasca and good friends of mine. Fred is a former justice of the peace. Elsie is former president of the hockey mothers, and Roxanne is past president of Canadian Parents for French. All three are current curling club executives. Finally, Trevor is a past president of the Athabasca chamber of commerce and the Kinsmen, just to name a few. I'd like to ask them to please rise and receive the traditional warm welcome of this Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Our day is not long enough today to properly acknowledge the significant role and extensive accomplishments of my special guests that are here. It is my honour to introduce to you and through you to the members of this Assembly an amazing group of individuals representing organizations including the Centre for Autism Services Alberta, the Autism Society of Edmonton, the Autism Research Centre at the Glenrose rehabilitation hospital, and Children's Autism Services of Edmonton as well as parents, grandparents, and family members, all lifelong advocates for their loved one who lives with autism spectrum disorder. In addition to that we have two very special young guests. We have Nicholas Steblyk and Aidan Guerra. They're seated in the public gallery, and I would ask all of my guests to now rise and receive the traditional warm greeting of the Assembly.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Mr. Mason: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all Members of the Legislative Assembly members of the Edmonton Somaliland Community Centre. The centre's goal is to help the Somali community in Edmonton to fully participate in Canadian society. It's a resource and referral centre providing settlement, youth, employment, and family services. It offers workshops such as legal rights, citizenship classes, parenting skills, and crime prevention. I would now like to welcome the members of the Edmonton Somaliland Community Centre, who are seated in the public gallery. I would ask that they rise as I read their names to receive the traditional warm welcome of the Assembly: President Sahra Hashi, executive director Kahye Dubow, Kin Hussein, Kali Muhidin, Asmara Mohamed, Huria Mohamed, Liban Muhidin, Habiba Abdulle, and Sagal Yusuf. Join me in giving them a warm welcome.

1:40

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to introduce to you and through you to all members of the Legislature five members of the light efficient communities coalition. The coalition is an organization of academics, professionals, technical and artistic individuals influencing governments to improve how we use exterior lighting in our communities. The group assists in the creation of lighting policies leading to efficient energy use while improving community health, safety, and living environments. I would now like to welcome the members of the coalition, who are seated in the public gallery, to the Legislature. I would ask that they rise as I read their names: Rod E. McConnell, Sherrilyn Jahrig, Dr. Doug Hube, Don Darnell, and Bruce McCurdy. I'd like it if everyone could join me in welcoming them.

The Speaker: Are there others? The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's a great pleasure to introduce to you and through you to the House our new researcher in the Alberta Liberal caucus, Kyle Olsen. Kyle has been involved in politics in the province for many years and most recently returned to Alberta from Ontario and a consulting firm. He is a former student at the University of Calgary, graduate of the University of Calgary, and president of the Alberta Young Liberals. Let's give him a warm welcome to the Legislature.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Calder.

Autism Spectrum Disorder

Mr. Elniski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We're joined today by people from several autism groups who deal every day with the reality of the disorder known as autism spectrum disorder. April 2 is World Autism Awareness Day.

The hon. Mike Lake, Member of Parliament for Edmonton-Mill Woods-Beaumont, speaks with authority when he says, "It is important that Canadians realize both the challenges faced by families dealing with autism and the incredible uniqueness and creativity of individuals diagnosed with this mysterious disorder." Mike's oldest son is afflicted with this spectrum disorder.

This disorder manifests itself in many ways and is, like any disease or injury of the brain, a very difficult reality to deal with. As both caregivers and the disabled individual age, it becomes difficult if not impossible sometimes to maintain consistent quality of life and caring. Without the love and support of those around them, the life of an autistic person often becomes one of isolation, the afflicted trapped in their world, the caregiver bound there as well. There is little respite from this simply due to the nature of the disorder.

The fact, Mr. Speaker, is this. The things we can't ever forget to forget about can make a world of difference to someone with autism, like the consequence of a decision to ban incandescent light bulbs in the United States, for example. We know that often an autistic person cannot be in a room lit by fluorescent bulbs. This limits their ability to be in so many public places and their chances to do so many things.

Mr. Speaker, Alberta leads this country in the clinical work on the disorder, yet the continuum of care and research is far from complete. I am very proud to say that the leading-edge work is done at the Glenrose hospital in my constituency of Edmonton-Calder. This is a lifeline to the families as they treat, manage, and plan for the futures of their loved ones, who struggle daily with this disability. Parents, families, and friends do very little and ask for not much in return save for recognition of the growing number of children and eventually adults who will be faced with countless challenges brought on by this disorder. These parents are advocating for their children.

Please, members, give them the gift of your time when they call to see you.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Safe Water

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Former United Nations Secretary-General Kofi Annan has said: "access to safe water is a fundamental human need and, therefore, a basic human right. Contaminated water jeopardizes both the physical and social health of all people. It is an affront to human dignity." Yet in Canada our governments have not recognized water as a human right. This has enabled governments to sell off water in bulk, to create water markets, and to sell licences to the highest bidder.

This is disheartening because we know that we're facing major issues in terms of safe water throughout our own province. In the north the people downstream from Fort McMurray are concerned about the safety of their water because the fish are becoming deformed, and corporations have admitted to dumping raw sewage in the river. In central Alberta farmers have written us and the government to express their concerns about flammable tap water. We know that human beings can live, however difficult, without money, but no human can live without safe drinking water. After three days without water there are grave health implications, and after five days almost all will certainly die.

Maude Barlow, the national chairperson for the Council of Canadians, has asserted that we are facing a crisis of global proportions as far as water is concerned. Nearly 2 billion people are living without access to clean water, and a lack of clean water is the number one killer of children world-wide.

Water is becoming more precious and valuable as the years go on. What we need is a government that will make the difficult decisions and that will put the health and well-being of Alberta families and ecosystems first. We need a government that is willing to engage in long-term planning to ensure that we have enough of our natural resources preserved and protected for future generations. Instead, we have a government that is set on selling our most precious natural resources, even those that are necessary for life, to the highest bidder.

Benjamin Franklin said that "when the well's dry, we know the worth of water." I urge my colleagues on both sides of this House to act before that day is upon us.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Bonnyville-Cold Lake.

Health Care System Capital Plan

Mrs. Leskiw: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to highlight the major capital investments this government is making in Alberta's health care system. As a part of our work to build the best-performing publicly funded health system in Canada, our government is investing $2.5 billion over the next three years through our health capital plan.

Phase 1, announced in July 2010, was valued at $1.2 billion over three years, including 22 facility projects in 15 small and medium-sized communities, to aid in the planning, design, and construction of the projects. The $1.2 billion also supports province-wide facility maintenance and technology and equipment purchases. Phase 2, announced in December, provided $1.3 billion over three years for projects in Edmonton and Calgary.

Mr. Speaker, cancer treatment capacity in these two cities will expand significantly as a result of a new $208 million cancer infrastructure plan. This investment will support integrated and comprehensive cancer care and help meet the demands of a growing and aging population.

As part of our government's three-year health capital plan we have committed $209 million for maintenance projects through the infrastructure maintenance program and an additional $75 million for technology and equipment. This program provides funding to Alberta Health Services each year to cover the cost of repairs, upgrades, maintenance, and building systems costs.

My constituency is receiving some of this funding for things such as medical equipment, sterilization upgrades, a loading dock, and much more, all vital to providing the quality of care that my constituents and all Albertans expect.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Petroleum and Natural Gas Lease Licence Revenue

Mrs. McQueen: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. There continue to be indications that the recent royalty curve adjustments, with emphasis on new technologies, are solidifying Alberta's competitive position, and Albertans are reaping the benefits. The province held its final mineral rights sale yesterday, March 23, for the 2010-11 fiscal year. I am pleased to report the province had yet another strong sale, bringing in nearly $200 million for the province. This sale is just another example of the renewed confidence in Alberta's energy sector. This means new opportunities for industry, and it means new jobs for Albertans.

Approximately $1 in investment equals $9 in economic stimulus, and we're talking about multimillion-dollar investments. For each rig it is estimated that 135 jobs are created directly and indirectly. This past year has seen many records set when it comes to the sale of mineral rights.

A new average price per hectare, $2,185, which is the best measure for a sale, was established with the July 7, 2010, sale. Of course, members will recall that this sale also set a record. It was the second-highest sale ever recorded and brought in over $450 million, nearly half a billion dollars, for the province of Alberta. This came about during a calendar year which saw the province collect over $2.3 billion in sales for the first time.

Yesterday, March 23, saw yet another record set. A licence located south of Fox Creek sold for over $96.5 million. This parcel brought in the highest ever bonus for a petroleum and natural gas or oil sands parcel. The previous highest bonus was for an oil sands parcel that netted just under $80 million in 2006. For the fiscal year we achieved the highest petroleum and natural gas lease and licence revenue ever, over $2.5 billion.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Oral Question Period

The Speaker: First Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Wait Times for Cancer Care

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. While this Premier continues to hide behind the Health Quality Council of Alberta, Albertans are dying from lung cancer unnecessarily. The five-year survival rate for lung cancer in Alberta is the lowest in the country, at 15.1 per cent. To the Premier: given that these troubling figures provide clear evidence that lung cancer treatment in Alberta lags behind other provinces, can the Premier explain why Albertans with lung cancer are more likely to die in Alberta?

Mr. Stelmach: Yesterday the hon. member quoted something from The Lancet, I believe. You know, once again, we see the Liberal leader playing politics with health, and it is quite troubling because the individual is also a public health doctor. To take something, that has already been in the media yesterday, by Dr. Tony Fields, who called the comments from yesterday a big leap to make, where our cancer survival rates are much better than in the U.K., Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, and this fellow brings that kind of unreal information. . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Dr. Swann: I thought, Mr. Speaker, that the Premier was proud of our position relative to the rest of Canada. He suddenly shifted to international comparisons. Very interesting.

Is the Premier, then, saying that there's no connection between Alberta having Canada's lowest survival rates and this government's decision to dismiss two prominent lung surgeons? Are you saying that there's no connection, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Zwozdesky: You want to talk about Canadian statistics? We can talk about Canadian statistics, too. Let's talk about the fact that in Alberta the death rate for women with colorectal cancer is the lowest in all of Canada. We can stand here and I can tell you that the death rate for men with lung cancer is the second lowest in all of Canada. These are numbers, Mr. Speaker. We should be focused on improving early detection, more screening, and better health outcomes, and that's what we're doing on this side of the House.

Dr. Swann: Given that this is the potential evidence linking unnecessarily high death rates from cancer to the actions of this government to stifle physicians, will the Premier finally name an independent judicial inquiry with the power to subpoena witnesses and compel testimony under oath, and if not, why not?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's just unbelievable. First they ask for the Health Quality Council to become involved. We get the Health Quality Council involved. They ask for an independent review. We give them an independent review. Nothing is ever good enough for them. They ask for a judicial inquiry. We have a former Chief Justice on this advisory panel, and now that's not good enough. What will ever satisfy the opposition's quest for this wild goose chase? I don't know.

The Speaker: By my reckoning, there are approximately 125 young people in the Assembly today.

Second Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This government has known for over a decade that resources for lung cancer surgery were inadequate, and it chose to do nothing. Instead of listening to years of concerns from top surgeons, Capital health ordered them to stop speaking out and then bound them to silence. One of those doctors, Dr. McNamee, now at Harvard, is again raising concerns about low lung cancer survival rates in Alberta, saying: irrefutable evidence by an impartial third party review; Albertans suffer when it comes to cancer care. Does the Premier dispute internationally recognized evidence that Albertans are suffering with inadequate cancer care?

Mr. Stelmach: Well, given the statistics that the minister just quoted, I believe we're doing very well in many areas of cancer treatment. Can we improve across the broad spectrum? Certainly. But to pick one particular area and not talk about the rest is not fair to the thousands of people that deliver health care in this province.

Dr. Swann: This government failed to act on the concerns of expert surgeons. Given that Alberta's lung cancer survival rates are the worst in Canada, will the Premier admit now that the government's continued mismanagement of health care is hurting Albertans?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the important thing to keep in mind here is that at the time these allegations refer to, which is approximately 10 years ago, the wait time for access to lung surgery in Alberta was about 60 days. That's in that doctor's statement alone. Today it's 27 days. It's been cut in half. We're making vast improvements in this important area.

Dr. Swann: Well, thank you to the minister for acknowledging that their firing of two lung surgeons did contribute to the problems a decade ago. Thank you for that.

What is the Premier hiding, and what are you protecting by not calling a public inquiry? What are you hiding, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, nobody is hiding anything. I'm not going to be following this member's suggestions of stampeding to some sort of a judicial inquiry. Back where I come from, there's a saying: "Chekaj! Chekaj!" Whoa; let the Health Quality Council do their work.

The Speaker: Third Official Opposition main question. The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Whether it's compromised care, wait times, a culture of intimidation, or the lowest cancer survival rates in the country, evidence of Tory mismanagement of health care in this province emerges daily. The Premier hides behind government spokesmen, ignores the concerns of doctors, nurses, and a respected international medical journal. This is a scandal that may well have cost many people their lives in this province, and this government is engineering a cover-up. To the Premier: given that the Health Quality Council of Alberta can neither subpoena witnesses nor . . .

The Speaker: The hon. the Premier.

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, talk about a culture of fear and intimidation. Members in this Assembly have been using the protection of immunity to question the integrity of men and women involved in providing health care in Alberta on a daily basis, individuals that have no way to defend themselves, and using inappropriately the traditional immunity of the House. If they do not withdraw the names of the individuals they mentioned, especially yesterday from the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, I think that is a total abuse of the traditional performance of this House.

Dr. Swann: Will this Premier admit that his government's greatest concern is doing whatever it can to protect its cabinet ministers, top officials, and friends from avoiding taking the witness stand? That's your greatest concern, not the health of Albertans.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'll tell you what we're doing. We're protecting Albertans' health, and we're protecting them against accusations like this. We're protecting them from accusations such as were levelled yesterday by the Wildrose Alliance against innocent bureaucrats, as he called them. To call someone a reprehensible bureaucrat is absolutely shameful.

Dr. Swann: Why is this Premier more concerned about covering up the truth about lung cancer death than he is about getting to the bottom of a scandal with a full inquiry that can subpoena evidence and question witnesses on the witness stand? Why the cover-up, Mr. Premier?

Mr. Stelmach: Mr. Speaker, I'm not about to question the capabilities of Dr. Cowell or Dr. Tyrrell, certainly not the capabilities of Dr. Lakhani or Dr. Sutcliffe. Nor am I going to question the two individuals that have been appointed to the advisory panel, former Deputy Prime Minister and law professor Anne McLellan or a former retired Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench. If that party wants to question their capabilities, say so in the House.

Integrated Ambulance Services in Airdrie

Mr. Anderson: Well, I had some questions, but I'm going to change them now.

Mr. Premier, yesterday I brought evidence to this House that showed a 33 per cent increase in ambulance response times in my constituency since your vaunted Alberta health superboard took over ambulance services from the city of Airdrie. A 33 per cent increase: that's over three minutes for people suffering a heart attack in my community that they are now going to have to wait to have an ambulance come and see them. This whole process was overseen by an individual, a high-ranking official named Darren Sandbeck . . .

The Speaker: I'm afraid we haven't time for the question. [interjection] No, no. Please sit down. Please.

I don't know who this question is going to.

2:00

Mr. Stelmach: I don't know what the question is, during whatever the member said, but we want him to keep in mind that there has been an 80 per cent increase in the population in the area. Over a period of time there has been an increase in the population in Airdrie. The minister is doing whatever he can with all of the municipal jurisdictions in Alberta to provide ambulance service. We have covered the cost as the government of Alberta and support . . .

The Speaker: Okay. I'm going to recognize the hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere with his second question.

Mr. Anderson: Given that the transfer occurred three months ago, not 25 years ago, which is the time frame you're referring to, how do you explain a 33 per cent increase in the response times for my community between the time Alberta's health superboard took over ambulance services for the city of Airdrie and the integrated service and what it was doing before?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that the people . . . [interjections] Did you want to recognize Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo?

The Speaker: No. I'm going to recognize you, but I'm going to look at two of my little buddies over there.

I'm going to recognize the Minister of Health and Wellness for a response.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I can assure you that the EMS individuals and the firefighters and the fire and rescue team in Airdrie are the top professionals available. That's for sure. The fact is that there were two different locations out of which EMS used to be provided. I believe the current situation is that it is being provided out of one, and now Alberta Health Services is looking for a second site to add. But the number . . .

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Given that there is now a 33 per cent stronger likelihood that people in my community are going to die when they have a serious heart attack and they have to wait three more minutes for an ambulance service – and you were in that city council chamber, Minister, when we explained this to you prior to this decision being made. We begged you – we begged you – to not make that decision, yet you didn't listen. Will you take . . .

The Speaker: That's a long enough background. Minister, proceed if you wish.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's true. I met with the city council, and the city council had made an arrangement with Alberta Health Services. The takeover has occurred. If these services are as the member says, perhaps not quite where they should be, I'm confident that Alberta Health Services will look at that, and they will make whatever corrections and additions are necessary. It's as simple as that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Highlands-Norwood.

Cataract Surgery Wait Times

Mr. Mason: Thanks very much, Mr. Speaker. Well, Alberta has among its other failings the worst waiting times for cataract surgery in Canada. According to Alberta Health Services numbers wait times in the province averaged 38.6 weeks, putting us in last place in the country. My question is to the minister of health. How can the minister justify this deplorable state of affairs other than to admit that Albertans simply can't trust this PC government with our health care system?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, it's not a question quite the way this member is intending it, I'm sure. The fact is that there are a number of people who go to ophthalmologists in this province who sometimes are put onto what you might call a reservation wait list but not on a wait list as in: it's urgent, and you must have it right away. That's an important distinction to make.

Mr. Mason: Mr. Speaker, they don't call him the Velvet Fog for nothing.

Given that people wait 62 weeks for surgery in Calgary compared to 39 weeks in Edmonton, or one and a half times longer, and given that nearly all surgeries in Calgary are done in private, for-profit clinics in contrast to the surgeries done in Edmonton, will this minister admit that this PC government's failed experiment with publicly funded, privately delivered health care has simply made a bad situation even worse?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, there's no failed experiment of any nature whatsoever. The fact is that we have about 30 outstanding ophthalmologists in Calgary who perform a wide variety of surgical procedures for the eye. In fact, they're probably providing about 11,000 or 12,000. We've just ramped it up province-wide by another 3,200. You know what? If they vote for our budget, they'll see another ramp-up again because that's the service people want.

Mr. Mason: Given that this minister just seems to be chasing crises with dollars instead of planning forward for the health care system, will he do the right thing and support a full public inquiry into the health care system of this province?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the fact is that we're doing well over 30,000 cataracts, just cataracts alone, in our province. We're spending millions of dollars to provide that outstanding service for Albertans. Yes, there are some wait lists; yes, there are some reservation lists. The point here is that the ophthalmologists are doing an outstanding job of lowering those wait times because that's one of our five-year health action plan objectives, and we will accomplish it.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar, followed by the hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Health Services Financial Reporting

Mr. MacDonald: Thank you. Former Auditor General Fred Dunn stated in 2006 about Capital health's shoddy bookkeeping, and I quote: auditing should not be a hide-and-seek exercise, whereby management hides the truth and auditors seek to get adjustments made in order that the financial statements reflect reality. End of quote. To the minister of health. The other budget line for 2005 was $29 million for Capital health. What is hidden in this $29 million line item? Is it settlements to silence doctors? Is it the legal fee . . .

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, you know, 2005. I mean, you might as well ask the hon. member what he had for lunch on that day. Who knows? If there's some allegation he wants to make, then please bring it forward as a written question, as a motion for a return, or some other way, where that level of detail going back six years can be properly explained once and for all. Please do that, hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Shame on this minister. Again to this minister: why did this government allow Capital health to pick its own auditor?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, the regional health authorities, just like with AHS, were entities unto themselves. They had their own administration, they had their own bookkeeping, they had their own CEOs, they had their own vice-presidents, and so on. They ran their own show, and Alberta Health Services still does. They're a self-standing entity, not unlike a corporation.

Mr. MacDonald: I find it curious, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. minister can remember that from 2002-03, but he can't find the $29 million from 2005-06.

Again to the minister: why did Capital health not provide its audit and finance committee with complete and accurate financial information in 2005-06?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I would submit they did, and I'll bet you the Auditor General would agree.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Ethane Incentive

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday this government announced an expansion to the incremental ethane extraction program. As I understand it, the program is a royalty credit program, where credits are provided to petrochemical companies consuming incremental ethane for value-added upgrading in Alberta such as ethylene, polyethylene, and other derivatives. My question today is for the Minister of Energy. Why does the government believe it is necessary to provide financial incentives to support the production of ethane in Alberta?

Mr. Liepert: Well, Mr. Speaker, the feedstock supplies for the petrochemical industry have been on a decline for some time with the decline in production of natural gas. But there are some 7,500 Albertans who work in the petrochemical industry. It's a very important industry in the province. In 2006 the incremental ethane policy was brought into place, and what we announced yesterday was the expansion of this program so that it will now include off-gases from the oil sands . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what are the environmental benefits of this program?

Mr. Liepert: Well, one of the situations you have with the oil sands is that an awful lot of these off-gases are simply burned as fuel, and they have a high carbon footprint, Mr. Speaker. So what we are attempting to do is capture those off-gases, process them for value-added, and use natural gas as the fuel supply. We anticipate that annually the gas emissions could be reduced by as much as 1 million tonnes.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Prins: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, my constituency of Lacombe-Ponoka is home to some of the bigger petrochemical plants in the world at Joffre and Prentiss. I would like to ask the minister: what are the benefits to these plants and other Albertans?

Mr. Liepert: Mr. Speaker, the member is exactly right. As I said in my first answer, some 7,500 Albertans are employed in the petrochemical industry, but we have been experiencing feedstock shortages. I had the opportunity to meet with the owners of the NOVA plant, which is now the United Arab Emirates, and they clearly indicated they're prepared to put additional investment into that plant for expansion if they could get some assurance that the feedstock supplies would be there. I think yesterday's decision will provide that assurance.

Education Funding

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, in 2003 this government accepted the Learning Commission's recommendations to fund optional full-day kindergarten and half-day junior kindergarten but never did. This government abandoned the commission's reduced class size initiatives, froze special-needs funding for the past three years, eliminated enhanced ESL funding, halved innovation support, and now the minister is pressuring boards into bankruptcy by suggesting they drain what little remains of their surpluses. To the minister: why is your government holding our children's education hostage?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, that is absurd. The budget for school boards across this province has gone up 63 per cent over the last 10 years, and the enrolment has gone up 3 per cent. The improvements in education have been phenomenal, and the fact is that this province year after year after year under a PC government has among the best results in the world.

Mr. Chase: Mr. Speaker, if step 1, based on the minister's comments yesterday regarding draining school board surpluses, is to bankrupt boards, is step 2 to further centralize or eliminate local educational authority entirely?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, over the past three years we've talked about Inspiring Education, and day after day I've said that one of the most important things we have in the education system is locally elected boards involving local communities in the education of local students. So I don't know where this hon. member has been, but what we're doing is asking boards in a time of fiscal restraint to take a look at their operating reserves and their other things, to take a look at what they're doing and making sure that everything they do adds value to students and student learning.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Given that last year's provincial funding shortfall forced the Calgary board of education to eliminate 277 full-time positions and as a result of this year's $61.7 million government shortfall an equivalent number of support staff and teachers will disappear, are our children not worthy of sustainable, predictable government funding?

Mr. Hancock: Sustainable and predictable funding? We're talking about a $61 million shortfall in the Calgary board. That would be a 7 per cent increase in their budget. Nobody ever promised anybody a 7 per cent increase in their budget. We have a 4.7 per cent increase in the education budget this year, and that's very good. But it's a tough budget for Education because we need a little bit more than that in order to balance things. So we had to cut back some targeted grants. The school board should be looking at their operating reserves. They've got $34 million in operating reserves, and to come cap in hand and ask for a 7 per cent year over year budget is absurd.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Ellerslie, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre.

Federal Budget

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Tuesday's federal budget is provoking a great deal of reaction across the country, from those who support it to those who don't like it and think it should trigger an election. The Alberta government's reaction seems to be somewhat in between: wishy-washy. My questions are to the Minister of Finance and Enterprise. Is this budget good or bad for Albertans, Mr. Minister? In clear words.

Mr. Snelgrove: Well, I guess until I watched the news I thought it was kind of a boring, mundane budget. But from the reaction of the opposition parties, apparently it wasn't.

Mr. Speaker, the reality in government is that we have to deal with real numbers, with real people, with real issues. Opposition parties have an opportunity to pull numbers and issues out of the air. The federal government matched many of our priorities: caring for vulnerable Canadians, trying to pay down their debt, keeping an eye on our economic recovery, making sure that we keep Canadians working. Is it good for Canada in that we're reducing our debt? Yes.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. My next question to the same minister: given the federal budget again ignores Alberta's demand for fair treatment under the Canada health transfer, how can this government support this budget?

Mr. Snelgrove: Mr. Speaker, there are many, many issues that we need to deal with the federal government on. While it is troubling from the health transfer point of view – because we look at health in Canada as a national concern. We believe people with cancer or heart issues across this country should be dealt with fairly. We will continue to lobby the government. We would ask Albertans to contact their MPs to ensure fair treatment under the Canada health transfer, and that's why that's maybe the most troubling. Other than that, we have had a good relationship with the federal government.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Bhardwaj: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Final question to the same minister: what is the impact on our resource sector of the tax measures in this budget?

Mr. Snelgrove: I can't tell you what the impact on the sector might be. They have made changes to some of the rules surrounding transfer of income from different industries within some of their partnerships. It has changed the way they're able to write off some of the expenses with regard to some of our mining.

Mr. Speaker, I would far rather sit down with this government than a coalition of opportunist Liberals, separatists, and socialists.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Centre, followed by the hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Protection against Discrimination

Ms Blakeman: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta human rights act prohibits discrimination against individuals on the grounds of physical or mental disability, but this law is outdated in that it allows discrimination based on future disability by permitting organizations to coerce individuals into providing their genetic information, and then it allows those same organizations to reject those individuals for employment or insurance. To the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit: will the minister support UNESCO's position that no one shall be subject to discrimination based on genetic characteristics?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, we had a fulsome and vigorous debate here two years ago on the Alberta human rights act, and we looked at all different types of protected grounds. We did not at the time think of that as a sufficient basis to put into the act, and we stand by that today. If there is a belief that somebody has been discriminated against, they can take that to the Human Rights Commission and let the commission determine it.

Ms Blakeman: Well, no, sir, they can't. If they feel they've been discriminated against because of genetic information, it's not a prohibited grounds of discrimination, so they can't take it to the commission. Where else would the minister suggest they take it, then?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, if it's not available under the Human Rights Commission, then I'm sorry. I'm not sure what opportunity they have. Maybe the courts is another avenue they should be looking at.

Ms Blakeman: I don't think you're making Albertans feel any more protected.

Back to the same minister: given these concerns will the minister request his colleague the minister responsible for the Personal Information Protection Act to specifically prohibit the use of genetic information by organizations to make decisions on employment and insurance?

Mr. Blackett: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of all the information in the allegations the hon. member is making. If the hon. member would like to submit that information to me in writing, I will give it some due consideration.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

New School Construction

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My constituents are concerned that despite all the money that this province has invested in capital projects, school space in communities such as Beaumont is not sufficient to meet the needs of growing communities, forcing the local school board in Beaumont to reconfigure grades in various facilities to the dissatisfaction of parents. To the Minister of Education: why do school projects lag so far behind the need when population growth should be predictable? What are you doing to ensure that communities growing like Beaumont get the schools they need?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is a reality that we face. The province has been growing rapidly, and we have to try hard to keep up and, in fact, get ahead of the demand in areas like schools. We have some hot spots in the province. Nonetheless, we have completed about 110 projects over the last two years, and there are more projects happening. We are working with school boards, and we have one of the best demographic modelling tools available, so we have a very good predictive process relative to where we need schools. We're working with the school boards on dealing with their issues.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the Minister of Infrastructure. Mr. Minister, what are you doing to get new schools built in these growing communities, like Beaumont, where there is exceptional need?

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Minister of Education said, we are continuing to work with school boards. We have met with school boards, and we have done a detailed analysis of whether, you know, a school board needs modernizations or renovations or additions. Most importantly, we're looking at innovative and creative ways to deliver these schools, whether it be bundling or alternative financing. We need to ensure that the schools are provided on a cost-effective . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank you to the minister. Again to the Minister of Infrastructure. You say that you are working on a plan. When can my constituents and the people in these other fast-growing areas actually see some concrete results? How soon will you get this done?

2:20

Mr. Danyluk: Well, Mr. Speaker, our Premier has committed that these schools will be delivered, and it is a priority of this government. It will happen, and it will happen soon.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Strathcona.

Health Quality Council Review

Ms Notley: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Albertans won't be fooled by cheap imitations of public hearings. Yesterday the health minister announced a council to advise a council, and notwithstanding the elevated reputations of the council members in comparison to the council they're advising, it still looks like cynical window dressing to Albertans. To the minister: will he admit that his council squared still can't subpoena witnesses and still can't protect them if they come forward?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I think the advisory panel members are held in very high esteem by members of this House and by Albertans. Dr. Zaheer Lakhani, the Hon. Anne McLellan, Mr. Art Price, Dr. Sutcliffe, the hon. Allan Wachowich, former Chief Justice: I'm sure they can handle whatever task is put in front of them, and I'm sure they will make the appropriate recommendations on how that review is to proceed.

Ms Notley: Well, Mr. Speaker, given that Albertans deserve to watch, hear, and read about any investigation into whether our doctors were intimidated while it happens and given that the Health Quality Council probe will still take place behind closed doors, safely tucked away from the public's pre-election eye, will the minister admit that his advisory group will do nothing to fix this fundamental flaw?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, let's be very clear. This is not my advisory group. This is an advisory panel selected, chosen, identified, and otherwise put in place by the Health Quality Council of Alberta. The important thing for Albertans to know – and I would hope the hon. members pay attention to this – is that the final report will be made public in its entirety.

Ms Notley: Mr. Speaker, given that the Health Quality Council regulation makes no provision for an advisory group to the council such that it's clear the government pulled this advisory council out of a hat under increasing public pressure, why won't the minister admit that this was a shameful and ineffective ploy to lend credibility to a probe that has none?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, that's what's so unfortunate when opposition members who have nothing whatsoever to contribute sometimes feel obliged to share it with everybody.

The fact is that in the news release that was issued by the Health Quality Council, they specifically said:

A team of health professionals and system review experts who have no known association with the specific matters under review will be appointed to the quality assurance committee.

A panel of experts will be appointed to assist and advise the Council in this review.

A quote from their press release.

The Speaker: And we will have a tabling of such documents, please. [interjection] It has been tabled? Okay. Fine. Thank you, then.

The hon. Member for Calgary-McCall, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fort.

Spring Flooding

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. New flooding in the Medicine Hat area appears likely in the coming days or weeks. My questions are to the Minister of Municipal Affairs. Since this and many other parts of the province are prone to flooding, what permanent and needed solutions is the government considering to mitigate flooding rather than simply dealing with the costly damages on an ad hoc basis after the fact?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, that's an excellent question. We just wrapped up the convention with the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties, and certainly flooding was on everybody's mind, especially following last year's flooding. This was re-emphasized again by some of the localized flooding that we're presently experiencing in southern Alberta.

Mr. Speaker, just last week I announced a million dollars in funding for temporary flood-mitigation efforts in both Medicine Hat and Cypress county, and it's an expectation . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Kang: To the minister again: if the province contracts out disaster recovery services again this year, will the same company be used, or will there be an open tender process?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, again, the contract, the RFP, was for more than one year, so we will be using the same company again this coming year. It's a contract that we have there to provide us with so many days and so many hours of work over a period of a number of years for a particular amount of money.

Mr. Speaker, there's maybe a little bit of insinuation that they weren't doing a proper job, and we've concluded satisfactorily about 98 per cent of the files. There are still a couple of complex files that we need to . . .

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Kang: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. That company hasn't been doing a great job. Some flood victims are still waiting for their cheques.

To the minister again: has the minister explored the feasibility of creating a dedicated disaster recovery fund instead of relying on emergency funds to cover flood claims?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, I continue to work with my counterparts across Canada, our provincial ministers and the federal ministers, to look at a very formalized mitigation fund. We know that under the DRP process we've got access to dollars through our Treasury Board, and we've been able to respond to the necessary costs that we incur as we move along.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fort, followed by the hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. A recent press release from the Calgary board of education states an estimated $61.7 million shortfall for the coming school year. Young teachers and those involved with education are finding it more and more difficult to secure a job. My question is to the hon. Minister of Education. What explanation can you give to those in the education field who are either looking for work or presently worrying about losing their job?

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, there's no question, as we've said time and again in this House, that this is a difficult budget for Education this year. We have a significant increase of 4.7 per cent, but it's not going to go far enough to cover all of the costs, so we had to actually look at some of the targeted grants to see whether they were still performing their purpose and eliminate those ones where we felt they could be eliminated in order to participate with the government in a fiscally responsible budget and to keep the deficit as low as possible. That's what we needed to do. Unfortunately, that's going to provide challenges this year on some fronts, but we're asking school boards to try and manage that process.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Cao: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same hon. minister. What is the government's policy on school board reserve funds, particularly when the fund is used up?

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, we do expect that school boards will keep a modest operating surplus of around 2 per cent, which would assist them with ongoing expenses and shortfalls from time to time and managing things. We have significantly more than that across the province in reserves. We know the school boards have saved for a purpose, but we're in a tough fiscal time, and what we're asking school boards to do with their budgeting is to look at those areas, to look at everything that they do to determine: does it add value, does it help students, does it help maintain the class sizes?

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Cao: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My second supplementary is to the same hon. minister. Given the fact that many Albertans put as much priority on education as on health care, would you explore the idea of our government creating a policy on sustainable, predictable, and longer term funding for education similar to Alberta's five-year funding for health care?

Mr. Hancock: That's something that has been discussed over the course of the last year and probably longer than that. One of the things that I would point out, as I mentioned earlier in the House, is that over the last 10 years there's been a 63 per cent increase in the operating funding for boards in the province in the school education budget and only a 3 per cent increase in student population. Now, we have an increasing population. I don't think people would really want to be limited to what they might get on a long-term funding basis when we do have challenges and opportunities that we need to deal with on an ongoing basis. But we do have three-year business plans, and there's no reason why school boards cannot plan in accordance with those three-year business plans.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Fish Creek, followed by the hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills.

Alberta Children's Hospital

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Children's hospital in Calgary is the jewel of the city. Sick children travel across the prairies to receive world-class treatment. Mismanagement in Calgary has overloaded the Foothills hospital and led to adults having lab work done at the Children's hospital. Not only are they being seen, but they are being prioritized ahead of the sick children because it's easier for the administrators. To the health minister: Are you aware that adults are now being treated before children at the Children's hospital?

Mr. Zwozdesky: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not. But if there's a story there that needs to be looked into, if there's some help needed, I can assure you that somebody will look into it and provide the help needed.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mrs. Forsyth: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Given that the lab at the Alberta Children's hospital is equipped to test sick children, will the minister here and now promise to investigate this situation and make sure that children come first and that adults will wait as per their own policy?

2:30

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I will ensure that someone from Alberta Health Services looks into that as quickly as possible.

Mrs. Forsyth: Well, that's a good thing.

Given that Alberta Children's hospital is first and foremost for sick children and not to be used as an overflow for crowded hospitals elsewhere, will the minister again commit to having all children treated before adults at the Alberta Children's hospital?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Mr. Speaker, I'm sure they have protocols there that they're doing their best to follow. Perhaps there are some issues with certain peak periods, where others need more urgent care than not regardless of their age, but whatever the situation is, I have already committed to this member that someone from AHS will look into this and will follow through on that.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Olds-Didsbury-Three Hills, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

PDD Transition Funding

Mr. Marz: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Minors who are disabled, some from birth, and are receiving supports from government still have to apply for the assured income for the severely handicapped, or AISH, program when they turn 18. They and their parents wonder why they have to go through this process instead of it happening automatically. To the Minister of Seniors and Community Supports: why is this transition process not more seamless?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, this member asks a very good question. I, too, have had constituents ask me this question, as I'm sure other MLAs have been asked. That's why we've been working so hard across five ministries, including Children and Youth Services, to develop Alberta Supports. That initiative will provide a more seamless transition between programs as people age or as their circumstances change.

Mr. Marz: What exactly is the minister doing to make this process more streamlined in the future?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, the vision of Alberta Supports is to deliver social-based programs to Albertans in need with easier access and better transitions. Twenty-five families with kids between the ages of 16 and 19 have agreed to participate in a pilot project in central Alberta to test the ways that we can simplify and streamline transitions between programs. Case co-ordinators will help these families to move from one program to another without another application.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Mr. Marz: Thanks, Mr. Speaker. To the same minister: what will the minister do with the results from this test project? What happens next?

Mrs. Jablonski: Mr. Speaker, we'll take the findings from this pilot project in Red Deer to other places and other client groups in the province. We believe that this pilot project will help Alberta Supports to achieve some very important goals: better client service, smooth transitions from one program to another, and better ways of doing business.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview, followed by the hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods.

Exemption from Municipal Zoning

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, I've repeatedly asked the Minister of Advanced Education and Technology to justify the remarkable privilege granted to three Alberta universities; namely, their complete exemption from any municipal zoning regulations. The minister has never offered a justification, which suggests there isn't one. One more time to the minister: what justification can he give for granting this privilege to a few select universities when no other institutions, businesses, or citizens receive it?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to stand and answer that question. There is not a total exemption for any facility in the province of Alberta. Even on those campuses such as the University of Alberta or the University of Calgary or Lethbridge, if there is any commercial activity or any commercial development happening on that campus, it must go through all the processes within the municipality for approval.

Dr. Taft: Mr. Speaker, this minister needs to study both the legislation and the regulations.

Given that, what does the minister and his department do to hold universities to account when they violate the few planning and development requirements they face under the Post-secondary Learning Act?

Mr. Weadick: Mr. Speaker, at this time I'm unaware of any times where any of our universities have violated those planning rules around our municipal planning within the province.

Dr. Taft: Well, that raises this question, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister or his department ever look at what the universities are doing to check if perhaps they are violating their long-range development plans? Has anybody ever looked?

The Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We work very closely with our universities. We know that they do work with the municipalities, with the neighbourhoods, and with our department. All of their long-term plans are approved by us when they go forward, but where there are commercial properties, those have to go through the appropriate municipal processes.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Mill Woods, followed by the hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Community Facility Enhancement Program

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The community facility enhancement program assists communities with construction and the development of community public-use facilities. It's a wonderful program. In fact, I recently awarded a cheque for $125,000 in civic funding to the Ghana Friendship Association. However, other groups in my constituency have longed for a community centre to call their own, but they've found it difficult to raise the necessary funds to help build them. My first question is to the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit. How, specifically, are the grant requests for community facility enhancement program funding processed?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, the first thing I'd like to do is clarify with the hon. member that he didn't award the cheque to that community association. He presented the cheque on behalf of the government of Alberta. I'd just make that clear.

We process applications in this way. An individual organization can put an application in to the community liaison officer or online through our system. That application is looked at based on viability, on the fact that there are matching funds approved, and that there's community support.

The Speaker: The hon. member, please.

Mr. Benito: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My first supplemental is to the same minister. What, specifically, are the requirements a group must meet to receive a community facility enhancement program grant?

Mr. Blackett: Well, Mr. Speaker, first of all, they have to be a registered not-for-profit with the government of Alberta under the Societies Act. They have to meet the matching fund requirement. They have to meet the viability dictate that's there, and we have to make sure that there is community support. That includes letters of support from MLAs, municipalities, and others.

Mr. Benito: To the same minister: are there other alternative sources of funding to help those in the Mill Woods community build public-use community facilities?

Mr. Blackett: Well, yes, Mr. Speaker. It's an excellent program, but it's a matching program, so there are other sources. That would be from other levels of government. That would be from the private sector or individual donations. That is an excellent question. That deserves an award.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lethbridge-East.

Municipal Sustainability

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties wrapped up their spring convention this week. They had some prepared questions to ask the minister, so I thought that I would ask a few as a follow-up. To the Minister of Municipal Affairs. The AAMD and C has worked closely with this ministry in drafting the proposed municipal sustainability strategy. What were the results of the consultation process, and is there a public report?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, we have resubmitted the report back to the individual municipalities, and we've asked them to provide input back to us on the sustainability report. That report is public. All the municipalities should have a copy of that report, and the report should be online. We are asking municipalities to provide responses. Then we're going to analyze those responses and carry on with the report.

The Speaker: The hon. member.

Ms Pastoor: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think part of your answer was to my next question as well. How will the rural municipalities through the AAMD and C be engaged in the next steps of creating the municipal sustainability strategy, and why did it have to go back? Where were the stopping points?

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, you know, the report was done by individual municipalities, the AAMD and C, the AUMA, and the members of summer villages as well as individuals from the municipal administrators. There were a number of groups that got together and actually formulated the report. It was sent back to us. We had a few questions and wanted their response to that particular report. That report was sent back with a deadline to respond to me, just to see with individual municipalities if that report hit the mark with them. We're waiting for their response.

Ms Pastoor: When can the municipalities expect the promised five-year review of the Municipal Government Act to actually begin, and what will the consultation process look like? I think it's something that is very timely and must be done.

Mr. Goudreau: Mr. Speaker, the MGA, the Municipal Government Act, hasn't been reviewed for quite a number of years. It's a very, very detailed act. The act is split up into three different sections. It's our intent to do the review as per individual sections within the Municipal Government Act, and I would suspect that the review would start rather soon here. It will probably take a period of four to six years to fully complete, with necessary legislation coming into the Legislature as required and adaptations accordingly.

The Speaker: Hon. members, that concludes Oral Question Period for today. Nineteen members were recognized. There were 114 questions and responses. Needless to say, it's Thursday just before a break, so there were three phases to the question period. Questions 1 to 5: oh, excitement, energy, enthusiasm, rambunctiousness. Then it sort of settled down a bit with questions 6 to about 12, and then it slowed even further from questions 13 to about 18. All in all, it's like a flow, I guess, of a contest or a match. Nobody had to be named despite the fact that a couple of the boys want to be. I know who they are, but it didn't happen.

Let's take 15 or 20 seconds, and then we'll come back to the Routine.

Members' Statements

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Decore.

High School Flexibility Enhancement Project

Mrs. Sarich: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise today to speak about the high school flexibility enhancement project, that has the potential to change the face of Alberta high school education. This project encourages collaboration between schools, school jurisdictions, and the government to change the current programming structure of high schools so that the time the students put into their studies is better reflected by the credits they earn.

Currently in its second year this project involves 16 high schools from across the province, including Archbishop O'Leary Catholic high school in the constituency of Edmonton-Decore. Also, Mr. Speaker, my son is attending this particular high school in grade 11. Along with his classmates he is experiencing this project first-hand.

Mr. Speaker, each participating high school is exploring alternatives to high school program delivery by removing the current 24 hours of face-to-face instruction per course credit requirement. The project will work to encourage students to take ownership of their education and take an active role in shaping the way they learn through the directing of their own learning and personalizing their learning environment.

The goals of this initiative, Mr. Speaker, are to support students' learning, to improve high school completion rates, and also, more importantly, to enhance student achievement and success. This is just one example of how Alberta's education system is transforming one classroom at a time. Programs like this one are particularly important to our province as we plan for the future of Alberta and the sustainability of our economy.

Mr. Speaker, thank you very much.

The Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Official Opposition.

Health Care System

Dr. Swann: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In growing numbers health care professionals, doctors, and nurses on the front lines of patient care are courageously stepping forward to tell their stories of government mismanagement and intimidation within our public health care system. The stories are shocking, the allegations stunning, with grave implications for this Progressive Conservative government.

Over the course of the past several months I have repeatedly raised a wide range of health care issues, including growing wait times in the emergency room, burned-out health care professionals, problems associated with centralizing health care administration, cost overruns, and, most importantly, poor outcomes for patients, including avoidable suffering and premature death.

Alberta Liberals brought these issues forward: the evidence of government mismanagement and malfeasance, including 322 cases of grave emergency room problems at one hospital alone, allegations of over 200 premature deaths across the system, allegations from respected, highly placed health care professionals who were silenced by government when attempting to advocate for more resources for patient care, with a growing sense that this government brands any health care professionals who criticize them as mentally unstable.

This government has created an atmosphere of fear, intimidation, and distrust, that is unworthy of a modern liberal democracy. The Lancet review of Alberta's lung cancer rates and lung cancer survival is merely the latest evidence to show this government's incompetence. That this government still refuses to hold a public inquiry into mismanagement and intimidation of health workers is evidence as well, evidence the government has something to hide, evidence of its moral cowardice and ethical bankruptcy. Without truth there is no progress. The government must stop hiding behind the Health Quality Council review and allow a full public inquiry into the allegations of government mismanagement and intimidation in public administration. Step out of the shadows and face the cold light of the truth.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Banff-Cochrane.

Glenbow Ranch Provincial Park

Ms Tarchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In 2006 the government of Alberta approved an acquisition of over 3,200 acres of ranchland near Calgary from the Harvie family. A significant $40 million was invested in what would become Alberta's newest provincial park, the Glenbow Ranch provincial park.

When this park officially opens later this year, it will join an existing network of municipal and provincial protected areas making a substantial natural corridor between Calgary and Cochrane. It will be one of Canada's largest urban parks and will protect this spectacular and increasingly threatened landscape along the north shoreline of the Bow River. It will also provide a unique opportunity to celebrate and showcase Alberta's rich ranching history.

Mr. Speaker, to ensure that the park's natural and historic resources will be preserved and that visitors will have a great experience, much work has been done on public consultation, environmental and historical assessments, engineering and access stations, and building more than 25 kilometres of pathways, washrooms, viewpoints, kiosks, and picnic tables.

I'd like to congratulate Tourism, Parks and Recreation and the Glenbow Ranch Park Foundation for their efforts and accomplishments to date as they prepare for this important opening. Constituents and Albertans look forward to exploring this park, and I for one am very proud of what I am sure will prove to be a wonderful, lasting legacy.

Thank you.

Notices of Motions

The Speaker: The hon. Deputy Government House Leader.

Mr. Renner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise pursuant to Standing Order 34(3.1) to advise the House that on Monday, April 11, 2011, written questions 3, 4, and 5 will be accepted; written questions 8 and 13 will be dealt with.

Also on Monday, April 11, 2011, motions for returns 6, 7, and 8 will be dealt with.

Introduction of Bills

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Leduc-Beaumont-Devon.

Bill Pr. 1

Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Amendment Act, 2011

Mr. Rogers: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I request leave to introduce Bill Pr. 1, the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties Amendment Act, 2011.

This act brings the act that authorizes the organization of the AAMD and C up to date. It was originally passed in 1923 and amended in 1971. It needs to be brought up to date, Mr. Speaker, as it currently names the original directors from 1923 and does not reflect the current realities, including how directors are elected. At the recently concluded convention of the AAMD and C yesterday members passed new bylaws that support this amendment.

I would encourage all hon. members to support Pr. 1.

Thank you

[Motion carried; Bill Pr. 1 read a first time]

Tabling Returns and Reports

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health and Wellness.

Mr. Zwozdesky: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It's my pleasure to rise and table the appropriate number of copies of the following reports: the 2009-10 annual report from the Alberta Health Facilities Review Committee, the 2009-2010 annual report from the College of Alberta Dental Assistants, and the 2009-2010 annual report from Alberta Health Services.

I'd also like to table a copy of a document I referred to during question period. These are the Canadian cancer statistics, Mr. Speaker, 2010, which show that Alberta has the lowest death rate or the second-lowest death rate in a number of areas related to cancer for men and women.

The Speaker: The hon. Minister of Culture and Community Spirit.

Mr. Blackett: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to table the appropriate number of copies of five packages of documents in response to questions raised by the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere in yesterday's Culture and Community Spirit main estimates. This documentation provides evidence of government openness and transparency with all nongovernment MLAs with respect to community enhancement grant programs.

2:50

The first tabling includes my letters of April 20, 2009, to various organizations, informing them of their successful grant applications whereby the Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo was copied on the correspondence and returned the copies with a handwritten note requesting to have all five cheques sent to his MLA office, noting that he would be working with media and volunteers to maximize exposure and that my department need not be involved.

The second tabling includes a letter of November 4, 2010, from the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere accompanied by my response of November 18, 2010, indicating that I agreed to look at options to address his request to receive future updates on pending community investment grant applications in his constituency.

The third tabling includes my letters of December 20, 2010, to all nongovernment MLAs following through on this request, which provides each of them a report of pending community enhancement grant applications in their constituency.

The fourth tabling includes a copy of my letters of January 19, 2011, and the applicable quarterly reports, addressed to each nongovernment MLA.

The last tabling, Mr. Speaker, includes a copy of a January 12, 2011, letter from the Member for Airdrie-Chestermere accompanied by my response of January 31, 2011, advising the member that I agreed to continue to provide him with quarterly intake reports about the community facility enhancement program and the community initiatives program, once again demonstrating consistent communication on these matters with my nongovernment counterparts.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Hon. Minister of Health and Wellness, do you have another tabling as well?

Mr. Zwozdesky: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Thank you. Just to be sure, I want to table the news release from the Health Quality Council of Alberta dated March 17, which I quoted from on page 3 today.

I also want to table the news release from the Health Quality Council of Alberta dated March 23, in which the advisory panel members are named along with their backgrounds and biographies.

Finally, I'd like to table a copy of the Health Quality Council of Alberta document received today, Mr. Speaker, in which they are making a correction to item 2 of their terms of reference wherein they're talking about:

To determine whether the quality of care and the safety of a group of 250 cancer patients on a surgical wait list of 1,200 were seriously compromised due to delayed access to surgery as alleged in a question raised in the Alberta Legislature on February 28, 2011.

Earlier they had referred to that as a tabling. The tabling, I believe, was made after that particular date, so this clarifies that it was actually an allegation raised in a question.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Yes. Thanks, Mr. Speaker. I will be tabling the appropriate number of copies of a letter I received from a group of third-year students at the Faculty of Nursing at the University of Alberta. It's signed by a total of 63 of them. They raise questions around the value, a value they support, of initiatives for newly graduated nurses to assist them in training for more specialized care, and they are concerned that in recent years this initiative for new nurses has not been in place.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I have five tablings today, and all of them are related to my questions earlier in question period. The first is a letter that I received from Capital health on June 6. I believe it is 2007. It is in regard to an access to information request that I had regarding the performance and the potential dismissal of Alberta's Auditor General. That's my first tabling.

The second tabling I have is a letter dated October 25, 2006, from Capital health to Mr. Fred Dunn, Auditor General, province of Alberta, and it is signed by the chair of Capital health, Neil Wilkinson. This letter is in regard to the reappointment of the Auditor and the auditing firm.

The third letter that I have is dated November 15, 2005. It's again from Capital health to Mr. Dunn, and it's signed by Neil Wilkinson, chair of Capital health. It notes that the board recommends to the Auditor General that KPMG be reappointed for an additional one-year term for the audit process.

My fourth tabling is from the Capital health authority board meeting minutes of June 26, 2002, and it notes under the process for auditors appointments that the Regional Health Authorities Act is responsible for the requirement that the board appoint its own auditor.

My last tabling is an interesting document that we received at the office of the Official Opposition. It is a series of e-mails to clear up the fact that Capital health for some reason, after we initiated this FOIP request, wanted my own personal health records.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Varsity.

Mr. Chase: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm tabling e-mails from the following individuals, who are seeking the preservation of the Castle wilderness: Lindy Clubb, Ronald Lovequist, Livianna Tosutti, Jacqueline Wakefield, Amy Fedrigo, Jose Costa, Daniel Rice, Tara Muir, Lynne Tyler, Daniel Murphy, Lynn McIntyre, Lou Probst, Greg Shaw, Carla Wong, Carly Armstrong, Chris McDonald, Terry Astbury, Rob Clement, Maren Hovi, Mark Carter, Elizabeth Cowan, Anne Curtis, Allan Briesmaster, Michael Street, and Anne Ellis.

Mr. Speaker, if I may at the appropriate time call upon the Government House Leader to provide the . . .

The Speaker: We're not there yet in the Routine. We may not get there if we don't get through the rest of the Routine.

Mr. Chase: Thank you. Yes, well, here we go.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Calgary-Glenmore.

Mr. Hinman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's a privilege to stand and to table the requisite number of copies. I went to the Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers' awards last night, the RCE awards. They do a phenomenal job of industry's commitment to continuous improvement in environmental health and safety and social performances. We need to recognize the great work that's going on here in the province, and there were many companies last night that were recognized for their efforts in these areas.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere.

Mr. Anderson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to table the requisite number of copies of a series – I decided to do them all in one – of e-mails and documents and correspondence between myself and the Minister of Culture and Community Spirit as well as several community liaison officers from his ministry outlining what is clear from the documents, as you can see: asking for me to approve or to show my support or nonsupport for different projects in my community and for what dollar amounts.

I would also like to commend very much the hon. minister for yesterday agreeing to give us a heads-up on cheque presentations on a go-forward. It was very stand-up of him.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Tablings to the Clerk

The Acting Clerk: I wish to advise the Assembly that the following documents were deposited with the office of the Clerk. On behalf of the hon. Mr. Snelgrove, Minister of Finance and Enterprise, pursuant to the Government Accountability Act the Measuring Up progress report on the government of Alberta business plan annual report 2009-2010, consolidated financial statements of the government of Alberta annual report 2009-2010; on behalf of the hon. Mr. Webber, Minister of Aboriginal Relations, pursuant to the Metis Settlements Act the Metis Settlements Appeal Tribunal 2010 annual report.

Projected Government Business

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Edmonton-Riverview.

Dr. Taft: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the Government House Leader share his wisdom with all the members of the Assembly and in a few seconds tell us what we'll be doing next week?

Thank you.

The Speaker: Well, actually, it should April 11, is my understanding.

Mr. Hancock: Well, Mr. Speaker, I'd be pleased to share my wisdom. How long do we have?

With respect to projected government business April 11, 2011, of course, is a Monday and, therefore, private members' business.

Tuesday, April 12, 2011, in the afternoon we anticipate being in Committee of Supply for the estimates of the Premier and Executive Council, as is disclosed in the schedule on the Order Paper.

In addition, on the Wednesday the 13th in the afternoon, as the Order Paper discloses already, we'll be in Committee of Supply on Health and Wellness. It should be a fun afternoon.

On Thursday, April 14, in the afternoon we would anticipate doing second reading on Bill 6, Rules of Court Statutes Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 7, Corrections Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 8, Missing Persons Act; time permitting, Committee of the Whole on Bill 1, Asia Advisory Council Act; Bill 4, Securities Amendment Act, 2011; Bill 5, Notice to the Attorney General Act; and as per the Order Paper.

3:00

The Speaker: Hon. Member for Airdrie-Chestermere, you are on the record of rising on a point of order. I take it that that's not the fact.

Mr. Anderson: I'm sorry. I thought that hon. House leader was intentionally misleading the House when he said that it would take a while to express his wisdom, that it would take a long time. Sorry, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: It was an attempt at frivolity, is that correct?

Mr. Anderson: Yes.

The Speaker: Okay.

Orders of the Day

Government Bills and Orders Second Reading

Bill 16

Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2011

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Drayton Valley-Calmar.

Mrs. McQueen: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'd like to move second reading of Bill 16, Energy Statutes Amendment Act, 2011, and adjourn debate.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 11

Livestock Industry Diversification Amendment Act, 2011

[Adjourned debate March 10: Mr. Prins]

The Speaker: The hon. Member for Lacombe-Ponoka.

Mr. Prins: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm pleased to rise today to comment again on Bill 11, the Livestock Industry Diversification Amendment Act, 2011. I want to reiterate the purpose of Bill 11, which is to move cervid farming and its regulations from the Wildlife Act under Sustainable Resource Development and LIDA under ARD to LIDA alone under ARD. This will clean up some overlapping legislation and clarify some important issues for cervid farmers within Alberta, especially the ownership of their animals. It will reduce the administrative burden and possibly enable the industry to open new markets.

[The Deputy Speaker in the chair]

The elk and deer farming industry has been around for many decades, in fact probably for 30 or 40 years. In the early days the industry existed under the regulations within the Wildlife Act. Then in the early '90s, about 20 years ago, the Livestock Industry Diversification Act was created to recognize that the farming of elk and deer is a legitimate and valued industry in Alberta, with many farm families that make their living raising elk and deer. Today it is a mature industry that has great potential and needs to be regulated under Agriculture and Rural Development, where it actually belongs.

Bill 11 is supported by both ministries, the Sustainable Resource Development ministry and Agriculture and Rural Development, and it is supported by the elk and deer industry itself, which has been consulted many, many times to deal with these amendments.

Bill 11 was introduced a few days ago, Mr. Speaker, and it was soon realized that there was a perceived inconsistency in some of the bill. I received a number of calls and e-mails with comments from constituents and stakeholders that pointed out that there could be a loophole that may allow for hunt farms. This is clearly not the intent of Bill 11 as everyone can see in section 18.01(1), where the bill says "a person shall not hunt . . . a diversified livestock animal." Period. That's the end of the sentence. Then part of section 10.1(1) says "the Minister may issue a permit authorizing a prescribed activity." Now, these two statements have caused concern for some stakeholders even though they deal with completely different issues.

Mr. Speaker, I want to indicate today that the government will be introducing amendments to Bill 11 to make it perfectly clear what Bill 11 says about the ban on hunting cervids on farms. I'm mentioning it today so that all members of this Assembly and all members of the public may be absolutely sure of the intent of Bill 11. The amendments will be introduced in committee, and I look forward to the debate in committee.

Mr. Speaker, I also move to adjourn debate on Bill 11.

[Motion to adjourn debate carried]

Bill 1

Asia Advisory Council Act

[Adjourned debate March 3: Mr. Hancock]

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister of advanced education on the bill.

Mr. Weadick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. It's indeed a pleasure for me to rise today in support of Bill 1, the Asia Advisory Council Act, because, quite simply, Bill 1 is the next logical step for our province as the hon. Premier's vision for Alberta's prosperity becomes reality. The hon. Premier has made it very, very clear from the start that his vision for Alberta includes a strong and prosperous economy that is globally competitive.

Mr. Speaker, he has clearly outlined how the ministry of Advanced Education and Technology can help make that vision come true. It's all there in black and white in the mandates that he has given the ministry over many, many years. He has laid out a clear path to ensure Alberta's global competitiveness by enhancing our province's postsecondary system and our research and innovation system. Each mandate has been a building block in the hon. Premier's vision for our province so we can strengthen Alberta's competitiveness and innovation world-wide, so we can enhance the knowledge-based economy of Alberta, and so Alberta can become a preferred destination for turning ideas into products and services that can benefit people not just here in Alberta but around the world and especially in key jurisdictions like China and India and other rapidly growing Asian markets.

One of the first mandates to our ministry from the hon. Premier supported the creation of Campus Alberta. He knew that increasing the access, the affordability, and the quality of Alberta's postsecondary education system would benefit everyone. It was what we need to have a strong system and help to build Alberta's economy so that we can achieve our full potential because, Mr. Speaker, these two are inextricably linked. To be successful, our economy needs well-trained graduates. The better trained and prepared Alberta graduates are, the better off Alberta's companies are going to be in a global marketplace. The more successful our companies are, the more taxes are generated, the more our businesses give back to schools that educate their personnel. It's a wonderful, positive, self-perpetuating cycle, and it directly contributes to the government of Alberta's international strategy.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, Bill 1 looks to expand existing economic, research, educational, and cultural opportunities between Alberta and Asia. Certainly, our ministry's international education framework will contribute to that goal. The framework provides direction on a number of issues and opportunities relating to international students, from developing global strategic alliances to making sure students everywhere know about Alberta and our institutions and know that we are leaders in learning, in research, and in innovation. It presents a road map for future planning and recognizes the importance of international education to Alberta's future economic and social success. International education, the exchange of people and ideas, is Alberta's window on the world and the world's doorway to Alberta. In a global economy where knowledge has become the new wealth, Campus Alberta is the heart of what Bill 1 envisions.

Mr. Speaker, another initiative within our ministry that directly supports the goals of Bill 1 is the result of another mandate of our hon. Premier, our technology commercialization action plan, Bringing Technology to Market. This helps Alberta entrepreneurs get more of their ideas off the research bench and into consumers' hands by providing a range of tools and assistance to Alberta innovators like Alberta innovation vouchers and the growing list of product development centres around the province.

We are growing our knowledge-based economy and encouraging the development of Alberta's technology-based and value-added industry sectors. The assistance is helping companies move down the commercialization pathway to become more prepared to partner with foreign partners and export their products and services into new markets. This will create new wealth and job opportunities and create longer term economic stability by reducing our reliance on any particular industry.

What particularly excites me about the plan, Mr. Speaker, is that with Alberta's knack for being innovative, we can turn issues like climate change, energy security, water conservation, and food safety into unique innovations and new opportunities, opportunities to help improve people's lives.

Mr. Speaker, just as the hon. Premier saw a stronger postsecondary education system being a part of Alberta's global success, he knew the same kind of alignment needed to take place within Alberta's publicly funded research and innovation system. That's how another of his mandates resulted in the creation of Alberta Innovates. Alberta Innovates aligns all elements of our innovation system, from universities to business incubators, as we focus on areas that we are good at. These include biotechnology, energy and the environment, health research, platform technologies such as nanotechnology and information and communications technology, and technology commercialization, all of which are represented by our new Alberta Innovates corporations.

Mr. Speaker, people around the world marvel at the fact that we've been able to align complex systems like Alberta Innovates and Campus Alberta and get all the players together. It's important to note that these initiatives undertaken by our ministry – Campus Alberta, Bringing Technology to Market, and Alberta Innovates – don't exist in isolation. Each works in collaboration with the next, building alignment amongst our postsecondary institutions, our research organizations, our innovation support services, our businesses, and our entrepreneurs.

It's all about working together. That's what we must do if we want to build Alberta's knowledge-based economy and see Alberta succeed on a global stage. It's an honour for me to help take this vision to its next logical step, and I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that our ministry is ready to go. We've got many agreements with Asian partners already in place, agreements that are exploring opportunities for educational partnerships and sharing technology and knowledge.

We're seeking new partners as well. Alberta already has sister relationships with Korea, Japan, and China – specifically, Gangwon, Hokkaido, and Heilongjiang – and it's important to point out that our ministry has broadened Alberta's relationship with these countries and areas beyond cultural and educational ties to include important science and technology linkages and partnerships.

In fact, Alberta's work on China projects with International Science and Technology Partnerships Canada, known as ISTP Canada, in areas like dairy genetics and petroleum technology is being used as a model for broader international collaboration between our ministry and ISTP Canada in China, India, Israel, Brazil, and many other developing countries.

In addition, just last month we co-hosted the first Environmental Technology Forum for Sustainable Water Resource Development with our partners in Harbin, China. Together our scientists and policy-makers gathered to explore ideas, to share information, and to examine how we can work together to protect our precious water resources and treat waste water through sustainable water resource technology. There's also our declaration, signed just a couple of weeks ago, that will see us co-operate with China, India, and Israel on nanotechnology research that will help us deal with the water issues that we all face.

Mr. Speaker, our ministry has many memoranda of understanding, or MOUs, with our valued partners in Asia, each of them as promising as the next. Alberta was one of the first provinces to have an MOU with China's central government Ministry on Science and Technology. We also have MOUs with the Heilongjiang Science and Technology Department, the Innovation and Technology Commission of Hong Kong, the Shanghai Municipal Science and Technology Commission, the China Cancer Research Institute, the Zhejiang Science and Technology Department, and the Standards, Productivity and Innovation Board, or SPRING Singapore, just to name a few of those relationships.

Our ministry has also been instrumental in helping to develop MOUs between Alberta's TRILabs and Hong Kong Applied Science and Technology Research Institute, NINT, or the National Institute for Nanotechnology, and Japan's Nanosystem Research Institute; and Athabasca University and SIM Global Education in Singapore.

Campus Alberta has already led the way as it has forged relationships with Asia. The University of Alberta has more than 30 agreements with Chinese universities as well as a number of agreements with institutes in India. Similarly, the University of Calgary has 26 agreements with Chinese universities. There's also the very promising agreement with India, which is bringing 50 top students from India this coming May to do research aligned with Alberta Innovates' priorities, including biosciences, renewable energies, and information and communications technology. And that's just for starters, Mr. Speaker.

We anticipate that our relationship with the mathematics of information technology and complex systems, Globalink, a MITACS program, will continue to help connect the best and brightest minds from India's prestigious technology institutes with Canada's business leaders, professors, and students through three four-month research and industry placements right here in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I could go into detail on the successful results of each of these agreements, but I would need a great deal more time than I have here today. What this all boils down to is that our ministry stands at the ready to support the proposed Asia advisory council in its mandate. Campus Alberta, Bringing Technology to Market, and Alberta Innovates, each a stepping stone mandated by the Premier, are already strengthening the collaboration between Albertans, business, industry, and government to benefit international relations and to support the important work of the council. That's why I'll be voting in favour of Bill 1, the Asia Advisory Council Act, and I encourage all hon. members to do the same. I can't wait to see where we go from here.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes of comment or questions.

Mr. Anderson: I just wanted to ask the hon. member opposite. There are just so many different committees that government has out there and councils and people on fact-finding missions, et cetera. Why on earth do we need a piece of legislation allowing us to or mandating that we form a committee? You know, we talk about cutting regulation and unnecessary laws and so forth. Why would we do that? Why wouldn't the Premier just make an announcement saying: I'm forming a council to look at this? Why a piece of legislation? It makes no sense.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm very happy to respond to that. We as a government and the Premier believe that this new relationship, this developing relationship is too important for just an announcement. This is Bill 1. This sets it out as the most important thing that we're going to try to do in the upcoming number of years. We're focusing our energy on the Asian marketplace. We're looking at the opportunity for pipelines to the west coast, where we can start to move our goods into another marketplace.

We notice that our trading partner to the south is still struggling, and we need to expand our marketplaces around the world for our energy, for our education, for our technology. Working in the nanotechnology area, we're seeing incredible opportunities and in our forestry sector for some of our forestry products. Mr. Speaker, there are very unique opportunities in bio research. Some of the work through Genome Alberta, Genome Canada, and the prion institute is world-class research that will help all of us. Often the research we're doing into animal health is starting to translate into human health, and we have researchers around the world beginning to connect together to make that research happen.

Mr. Speaker, a very, very important part of what we're focused on is connecting with Asia and ensuring that that's central to the future of Alberta's economy.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Thank you very much. To the hon. minister of advanced education, as I sit in here on a Thursday afternoon, as we get ready to be able to drive to our constituencies, I have to tell you this. This is absolutely beyond belief. Essentially, it's like the government of Alberta finally today realized Asia is out there. They've decided finally that not only is Asia out there; it has billions of people, where there are markets. Why is it that this bill is really in front of us today when in actual fact the natural partnerships have developed over the last 10 years? What has the government been doing? Has it been sleeping? I mean, it's as if this government just today with this bill, the flagship bill, determined that now Asia is important. That makes no sense to me in light of the excellent work with business and others and universities that has been going on in Asia for the last 10 years.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. minister.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. The member is absolutely right. This relationship has been developing between our universities and between our governments for many, many years. Just last year we met with education leaders from China, the first time we've had people of that high rank here in Canada. The relationship is growing and developing. This isn't a brand new idea. This is the focal point, where we have said: we believe that with all of these great relationships, with these new research opportunities, we want to take our focus to the next level and really focus to be able to drive investment in Alberta from Asia.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Spruce Grove-Sturgeon-St. Albert.

Mr. Horner: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do know that the hon. member has been involved with a number of the institutions over, well, a considerable amount of time now and now in his capacity as the minister. I would ask the hon. member: during the discussions that he's had with the presidents of the institutions across Alberta – I do know that he has visited every one of those institutions in the province – how important is it to the institutions themselves, from a student perspective, to have that connection and that relationship and now having legislation that actually puts it out there for the world to see? Perhaps he could expand on the difference between the different sectors in Campus Alberta and what it means to have international students at the different levels.

The Deputy Speaker: You have 10 seconds.

Mr. Weadick: Well, thank you, Mr. Speaker. Developing our international students is indeed a very, very important part of what we're doing. We're seeing an increase in the number of students, especially from Asia.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo on the bill.

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Indeed, it's a pleasure to rise, as much as on a Thursday afternoon, and to talk about a flagship bill, put forward by the Premier, pertaining to another committee, called the Asia advisory council.

I describe it this way: not only are the inmates running the asylum; they've now handed over the keys. This is beyond my belief, and in fact this member is going to send to the Premier's office a globe. It's clear to me there must not be a globe in the Premier's office. To awaken today with a flagship Bill 1 talking about the importance of Asia when the rest of Alberta has already figured that out about 10 years ago, it basically demonstrates that the government is about 10 years behind where Albertans and Alberta universities and Alberta businesses are, who are forging ahead with incredible partnerships with the Asian community.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I am at a loss. I have never in my years read a bill that makes up three or four pages, right? I mean, I probably could have saved the government a lot of time by sending them a globe, and they at least would have found out where Asia is. Not only that, but also as a former minister of international relations did the government of Alberta know that we have 10 offices? Can you name what the 10 offices are that are going on in Asia right today, that have been going on for years? I'm sure the Minister of International and Intergovernmental Relations knows that, but the question is: it's clear the Premier doesn't know that. This bill does nothing other than basically say: "Let's form another committee. Let's form another unnecessary bureaucracy."

Again, the gap will widen between what Albertans and good, hard-working Alberta businesses and universities and students are doing – they know what is going on in Asia. I must admit that calling this Bill 1 is beyond belief. I say that because of the fact that Albertans have moved on. They have used their energy over the last 10 to 15 years in what they have been doing, in forging those important relationships with the good folks in Asia. Yet here we are today with a government 10 years later finally announcing an advisory council act.

Did you know, as it says in the preamble: "Whereas competitiveness is core to the Government of Alberta's plan to position Alberta." Well, the positioning should have been taking place 10 years ago. Here they are 10 years later positioning. And did you know that in Asia markets such as China, Japan, Korea, and India are Alberta's second-largest export market? Is that just new to the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud? He appears to be surprised by that. He is the Minister of Education, but he is surprised today. I will go to Staples and buy him a globe, and I'll even put a pin on there where Asia is so that he can determine for the future rather than wasting the time of this House with a flagship called Bill 1.

In fact, if he wants, he can take my international business course. It's business 479. It starts in May. If you want to, you may learn a thing or two rather than wasting the House's time with this.

To the hon. minister of employment: clearly, Mr. Speaker, I am going to send them all a globe. In fact, maybe I'll send them inflatable globes, you know, so they can put a pin in it and let it deflate, like what this government is doing right now in terms of ideas.

Ideas? This is absolutely pathetic. I have never witnessed a pathetic Bill 1. When I sat on that side, at least we saw a side that didn't form another committee and another bureaucracy and another layer of red tape. Thanks very much. This is admission that you can't even come up with your own ideas over there, which is, in my belief, absolutely showing that the winds of change are blowing. In this next election Bill 1 is going to be based on ideas. You know what? The two clues they have over there: they lost one, and they're looking for the other.

Mr. Speaker, I have to say on Bill 1: let's form another committee. Well, I can save you all a lot of time. Just enrol in my business class 479, okay? I'll teach you a thing or two. You know what? I'll even make sure the member over there can sit in the front desk. [interjection] Well, I don't know if he has the prerequisite, but we may allow him to come in. "Hey, Albertans, did you know? Asia is out there. Did you know? It's an important market. Let's make it Bill 1." Fifteen years later. Wow. That is beyond belief. It is truly beyond belief.

Now, I know the Member for Sherwood Park, the minister, does have an aptitude of understanding pertaining to missions. I know she spent $16,000 in terms of value on a mission to Asia between November 1 and 15. I do know that there was also a mission to India, and that only cost Alberta taxpayers $87,070.39. Can you believe that? Another mission to Asia and then a mission to China and Japan. Wow. That is incredible. Let's form a committee. I'm surprised you didn't form the committee first, before all of these trade missions, that, by the way, ended up spending hundreds of thousands of dollars. That's when we were not in session. The question Albertans are going to be asking is: is this good value for our dollar?

I would like to know – I was wondering – if the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud would like a big globe or a small globe because I know that when he spoke about wisdom, a big globe would assume the potential of greater wisdom. I'll make it a small globe so that we can expand your horizon so that you can truly get a first-hand look at Asia. Even though the rest of Alberta figured this out about 15 years ago, it's good to see that Alberta is catching up with the businesses and universities and colleges, where we forged these partnerships over the past many, many years.

I'm disappointed by Bill 1. I'm disappointed because it really is perhaps one of the most pathetic flagship bills for a Premier who's leaving. Now, I guess one of the things on this bill is that since he is leaving – sometimes it's called a lame duck. Believe me, we know a lot about dead ducks up in Fort McMurray. But be it a lame duck or be it a dead duck, I want to let you know that I certainly hope there's not going to be 1 cent of Alberta taxpayer dollars spent by this Premier, before he leaves office in September.

ber, for travelling Europe because the bottom line is that there's going to be a new leader.

Consequently, I'm sure the government is going to ensure that not one single cent is going to be spent on Asia by this Premier and that they will wait for the new leader to come in. Can anyone over there assure me of that? Relative to the fact that now that they've discovered where Asia is, would they assure us that the Premier will not spend a cent of Alberta taxpayer dollars going to Asia just as his swan song before he leaves office? We'll be watching closely, and we'll be in fact having a clock on how much it's costing Albertans if, in fact, someone is going there.

The members on that side can go ahead with: yes, sir, yes, sir, three bags full. But at the end of the day, thank you to the government for catching up with the rest of Alberta 15 years later. Not only are you not down the road and around the corner; you're not even on the same block. It's clear to me that by forming this committee, if you can believe – I always thought the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster was never a big fan of red tape, of bureaucracy. I always thought that, and actually it's what I liked about the member. Then all of a sudden, the first bill: let's form a committee. If you form a committee, that's just a fancy way of saying: we don't have any new ideas ourselves.

Well, let me tell you that this party does have new ideas when it comes to Bill 1 and Asia. Not only that, we believe that it's an important link. More than that, we don't believe in a committee. We believe in actually rolling up our sleeves and embracing the tremendous opportunities as opposed to a piece of legislation called Bill 1, a flagship, that represents absolutely nothing.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say today that, really, this bill on a Thursday afternoon, Bill 1 – I can honestly say to you that this is truly, in my judgment, wasting the House's time because this is not a bill. They have formulated over 50 committees on that side without a bill, but this one is going to be a bill that they're going to legislate because it's so important. Well, really, when we examine that, it actually sends conflicting messages, and it builds on the uncertainty that this government has created in Asian markets because of that uncertainty.

I'm glad to see that they know where Asia is today, 15 years after Albertans discovered that. Did they know that 60 per cent of the population of the world actually comes from Asia? Did they know that? Well, I see the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud looking, and I see that he's not so sure. Is that a yes or a no, that he's aware that 60 per cent of the population comes from Asia? Is he aware of that or not? Is that a yes or a no? I'm watching closely to see if he will signify.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, on the bill. Through the chair on the bill.

Mr. Boutilier: I'm glad to see that he even recognizes – he looks a bit surprised, but he recognizes that 60 per cent of the world population is actually in Asia. That's good, to get up to speed with others. That is so important. I'm glad to see that he's been listening. You could learn a lot in my international business class. Okay? In fact, you all could learn a lot over there, Mr. Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. member, I have said to you three times to speak to the chair about the bill, please.

Mr. Boutilier: Well, Mr. Speaker, they seem to be trying to interrupt me, but I'll just talk over them because they're not very good listeners; I know that.

That being the case, my constituency, they may not be aware, is the oil sands capital of the world. As the oil sands capital of the world – everyone in Asia knows that northern Asia represents almost 40 per cent of Alberta's non-U.S. exports. Did you know that China is Alberta's second-largest trading partner? Well, let's form a committee, Mr. Speaker, so that we can find out. What would this government do if they didn't have a committee?

The bottom line, Mr. Speaker, is that China, as we know, is the second-largest consumer of oil in the world. I can say that as we go forward under a Wildrose government, clearly, under Bill 1 it is going to be – I can hear the laughs from the opposition-in-waiting. It's really quite amazing. I can say, as I talk to my constituents on a daily basis, that it's so important.

Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, I can only say to you that from the people we're talking to, they have recognized that they're looking for a party under Bill 1 who knows where Asia is, and they don't have to legislate it. They know that – you know what? – they don't need another committee. Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs, I can only tell you this. Guess what? We'll send him a globe, too, because he doesn't know where Asia is.

Mr. Anderson: Call a point of order on that. That can't be true.

Mr. Boutilier: Yeah. Does somebody want to call a point of order on the fact of me accusing you of not knowing where Asia is? I'm not sure.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say, getting back to the legislation for a moment: let it be remembered that in the last session this Premier's flagship bill was the Competitiveness Act. What did that bill do? It set up a council to advise the Premier on competition.

It seems like every time the Premier doesn't know something, he has a bill written and a council set up to advise him. Well, Albertans are smarter than that, so consequently, I think that, clearly, this is an unnecessary piece of legislation. This is an unnecessary step of bureaucracy, another level of bureaucracy where you have unelected officials advising an elected official who is the head of Executive Council. I think, as I said in my opening remarks, that not only does it demonstrate that the inmates are running the asylum; now they've turned over the keys. They clearly have lost their address with Albertans when it comes to where they should be going.

So I'll not only send them a globe; I'll send them a map of Asia as well so that they can easily determine. I can only hope that whoever their next leader is, if you're going to forge relationships, make sure it's not with a lame duck Premier. Make sure it's with another Premier after the leadership. I want to be assured that not one single red cent under Bill 1 will be spent on a Premier going over and travelling as a swan song as Premier. I mean, that will be a total waste of dollars.

Mr. Speaker, as I conclude, let me say that as we go forward, I think it's so important that we eliminate the bureaucracy, eliminate committee work. You don't need to legislate a committee to advise you on competitiveness in Asia. You could actually come forward.

In this next election this bill will come back to haunt them. Do you know why? Because it's going to be about ideas, and ideas are like a newborn child. You've got to feed it. You've got to protect it. You've got to nurture it. But you have to have, first of all, a child, and you have to have an idea in order to feed, nurture, and protect. Clearly, this Bill 1, forming another committee – you know, it's been rumoured by most Albertans and most Alberta constituencies feel that if they don't know what they're doing, they just form another committee, another committee that can collect dust, another committee that can just simply say: oh, well, we're getting a committee review. It's no different than what we've just witnessed in health care.

The Deputy Speaker: Standing Order 29(2)(a) allows for five minutes for comments or questions. The hon. Member for Edmonton-Gold Bar.

Mr. MacDonald: Yes. Thank you very much. I must say to the hon. Member for Fort McMurray-Wood Buffalo that I enjoyed your remarks on this bill, but I have a series of questions. The first one would be: you imply throughout your remarks that government members are totally in the dark regarding Asia. I'm wondering: the globes that you have promised to deliver, are you planning on having them illuminated?

Mr. Boutilier: That is perhaps one of the most articulate and intelligent questions, and I thank the member.

Mr. Snelgrove: Of the last 20 minutes it was.

Mr. Boutilier: Oh, the Member for Vermilion-Lloydminster has awakened. I must admit the fact that we met so many Asians with our sold-out event in Lloydminster just a few nights ago. It was so nice, Mr. Speaker. It was so nice. I want to let you know there were a few globes going around there, and it could have saved the government a lot of time.

To the hon. member I just want to say this: a very good question. I must say that this member has demonstrated the frugality of looking at every single cent. He has demonstrated that on health care and other areas. I'm sure, like everyone on this side of the House, that we do not want one single cent spent by the Premier for a swan song to go all over Asia as kind of like his legacy. That is what is pathetic, so we're going to get a running cost of what it's costing Albertans, Mr. Speaker.

It's an important point that the member has asked, and that is this: would I give them globes that are illuminated? We've heard the saying: the lights are on, but nobody is home. I definitely think we'll put some lights on the globe as well. Since their new discovery of Asia, 15 years behind when Albertans found out where Asia was, the markets that our businesses and universities and colleges have developed – I want to say to the hon. member today that he is absolutely correct. The globes need to be illuminated for the members.

By the way, I didn't promise the globes to every member because that would be too costly. What I will do is that I'll give them specifically to those who are interested in enrolling in my class. I see three heads nodding now. The Member for Edmonton-Castle Downs certainly will be getting a globe, as will the Member for Edmonton-Whitemud. Is there anyone else over there, Mr. Speaker, who would like to get a globe? Put up your hand now. I only see two now.

3:40

The Deputy Speaker: The hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration.

Mr. Lukaszuk: Just on the topic, I just wanted to find out... [interjections]

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. members, hold it. Do you have a point of order?

Mr. Lukaszuk: No. I just want to ask a question.

Mr. Boutilier: We'll get your question later on. Back to the member, the very good question that he asked – that's like: down, boy, down. It is really good that not only will we have a globe for him and the other; we'll make sure there's a bright shining light inside of it.

Mr. Hancock: Point of order.

The Deputy Chair: Point of order. The hon. Government House Leader.

Point of Order

Question-and-comment Period

Mr. Hancock: Mr. Speaker, Standing Order 29 provides that if there are a number of people who want to ask questions, it's not an opportunity for another five-minute speech after one question. If there's only one question, then that's what is shared, but surely the Speaker would want to look around the House and see if there are other questions.

The Deputy Speaker: From my perspective as the chair here, I would say: please shorten your answers. The question is whether the globe is illuminated or not. Yes or no, I think, is preferred, and then continue with the next member.

Debate Continued

Mr. Boutilier: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The lights will be on, and they will be illuminated for the member for Edmonton-Castle Downs and Edmonton-Whitemud. The light will burn brightly, so we can shine light on how they don't know where Asia is.

The Deputy Speaker: Hon. Minister of Employment and Immigration, you have a question?

Mr. Lukaszuk: Thank you. Well, the member clearly indicates that he's teaching a course at the University of Alberta, and he's inviting all of us to enrol in it. He spends a lot of time here at the Legislature. I'm just wondering: how does he manage to teach at the University of Alberta full-time and be here and still tell us that he's going back to Fort McMurray? How does that work?

Mr. Boutilier: Well, see, Mr. Speaker, this is the problem with this government. On the question, the reason is that it's not full-time.

The Deputy Speaker: I think we should have comments and questions relating to the bill. You can answer, and then we will carry on with the bill.

Mr. Boutilier: Let me speak very slowly. Mr. Speaker, clearly. Okay. I want to say this. Because of the close connection to the people of Alberta such as at universities and colleges and as the former international minister, one thing for sure – you notice how they say full-time. You see, it's really important to be able to deal with the demands of your constituency but at the same time be measured and be well balanced. Clearly, Mr. Speaker, this member doesn't know what that means. That's why we're able to do that and do a variety of roles and responsibilities in such an efficient manner. We use our time efficiently.

The Deputy Speaker: Well, I think before we go on, I just want to remind the member, like the hon. Government House Leader has correctly said, that the five minutes for comments and questions are about the bill. And be concise so that other members can participate.

The hon. Member for Calgary-Montrose.

Mr. Bhullar: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. It is indeed a pleasure to rise and speak to Bill 1, the Asia Advisory Council Act. This particular piece of legislation is incredibly important, although some may not understand the fact that when conducting business with Asian nations, sometimes gestures of friendship are incredibly important. When you introduce a piece of legislation that says, "We value the friendship and the relationship that we have with you, we value our cultural ties, our educational ties, our trade ties, our business ties, and we value the ties between Alberta families within Asia and Canada," when you make these gestures, it gives you the ability to show the people of the great Asian nations that you are absolutely willing and able to put them at the helm, at the front of your foreign agenda, and that's what we're doing. That's what we're doing.

There's absolutely no doubt that Alberta companies, many of them, and Alberta postsecondary institutions have forged wonderful relationships with many institutions in Asia. There's no doubt. We have done phenomenal work. Now, Mr. Speaker, is the time to as a government bring forth that work and to form new collective visions that will take us to the next level.

Mr. Speaker, nobody in this House can deny the fact that Asian nations are growing at rates that, quite frankly, I don't think North America will grow at, whether you look at population or even economic growth. Alberta is perhaps the only jurisdiction in North America that can compete with the sort of economic growth that's taking place in nations like India and China.

Mr. Speaker, with an abundance of growth taking place in Asia, with a rising middle class and a hunger to succeed come great challenges for those nations. One of those challenges is obviously energy. In meeting with Indian officials, they tell us that perhaps upwards of 80 per cent of their natural gas is imported. Now, they would love nothing more than to have the ability to import liquefied natural gas from nations like Canada. Engaging in these discussions – these are long-term discussions, and they require a series of small steps and some bold actions that will ensure that Albertans have new markets, that Alberta energy, our oil and our gas, will have profound new markets to service the growing middle class in countries like India and China.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this conversation is not just around oil and gas. Nations like India have a hunger to achieve world-class education. So when many postsecondary institutions from around the globe go to India, they pursue the same jurisdictions and the same institutions as fellow North American institutions work with. What we're saying by making this council is that we have to have a very thorough knowledge of those markets. I will give you an example of this. Average individuals looking to pursue educational ties in India think Bangalore immediately and Gujarat. Those are phenomenal states doing wonderful work with respect to education. But what they fail to understand is that there is an abundance of other states where there are populations that are very hungry to get education and quality education, so states like Haryana and Punjab may not be on their radar.
