Given new evidence from health professionals concerning threats to their careers that follow from public advocacy for patients, in particular the release of a letter by Dr. Lloyd Maybaum containing an explicit threat from his superior in 2008, the Government needs to immediately appoint a commission under the Public Inquiries Act to investigate allegations that health care professionals may have been intimidated or faced the loss of employment or professional certification, or had their character or mental health questioned unfairly in order to prevent them from speaking out publicly about deficiencies in the delivery of health care, and further, that individuals may have received payments from public health authorities in exchange for their silence
